Water violators beware Enforcement of district watering rules stepped up

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - The water police may be checking your home soon. The St. Johns River Water Management

District will step up enforcement of district watering rules during the next few weeks. Residential violators face $50 fines of the midday prohibition against lawn sprinkling and other forms of irrigation. Businesses face up to $250 fines.

The "10-to-4" allows lawn sprinkling and other types of irrigations daily, except between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Car-washing is allowed anytime. Hand-held watering methods are allowed anytime.

The 10-to-4 rule has been in effect since July 23, 1991 when the district dropped the confusing three-day-a-week watering restrictions. Watering restrictions have been in effect in Seminole County and throughout most of the 19-county almost continuously since August 1989 in an effort to conserve water as a drought continued.

Although rainfall has increased during the past few months, Florida won't enter its "wet" season of the year for another month or so and district water managers fear the temptation to violate the 10-month-old 10-to-4 rule is growing.

Lee said all types of irrigators, residential, business, golf courses, and agricultural will be checked. Although the district will send out fourand five-person teams to conduct the checks, individual district employees are also authorized to issue citations. Checks will be made both weekdays and weekends.

CROP Walk 200 come together to help hungry in world

KELLEY MITCHELL Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Nearly 200 men. women and children gathered at Centennial Park, on the corner of Fourth Street and Park Avenue, to walk for the hungry worldwide.

In Central Florida walkers came together at Church Street Station, Windermere and Sanford. The First Presbyterian Church of Sanford organized the Second Annual Sanford Walk for the Hungry - the CROP Walk here locally.

"Approximately 500 sponsor sheets were distributed to area churches throughout Sanford and Lake Mary." according to Bonnie Schumacher, a member of First Presbyterian and organizer of the event. "We've got 176 walkers here, but we are expecting some of the sponsor sheets will be returned with donations even without someone walking here today."

Most of the money raised through the walk-a-thon will be donated to the Church World Service, a worldwide hunger and disaster relief organization. But 25 percent of the total amount collected will stay here, with donations going to the Sanford Christian Sharing Center and the Rescue Outreach Mission, on 13th Street.

During registration, participants were given a squeeze bottle to carry with them on their walk. They chose a one or five mile trek, beginning and ending at the park, through the scenic streets of Sanford. As they made their way along the course, the bottles were refilled with refreshments at rest stops strategically placed along the trail.

schools as 'not bad'

By VICILI DeCORD Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Though the state Office of the Auditor General's annual look at the school district showed some flaws in the Semino County school district's financial reporting and record-keeping, the overall picture is not bad.

Auditor General Charles Lester. who signed the report that looked at the fiscal year which ended on June 30, would not comment on the report. "I would prefer the report speak for itself," he said.

According to the report, the di trict has "established and implemented procedures which gener-ally provide for internal control of District operations." There were some minor problems, however.

The district did not have properly prepared reconciliations between "capital outlay expenditures re-corded in the general ledger and additions posted to the subsidiary property records for furniture, fixtures, equipment and motor vehicles," the report stated.

The district, in the written re-sponse prepared by acting Supt. Richard Wells, said that the problems were being corrected.

DUNEDIN, Fia. - The state is considering an offer from a Jacksonville insurance company to temporarily reinstate homeowner policies to some residents of this sinkhole-plagued city.

The company suggests insuring about 60 customers in the north, east and west portions of the city - areas where sinkholes are not prevalent. The policies were slated to be dropped, Dowdell said.

Justice joins Medicare claims suit

Largest insurance company accused

Associated Press

The U.S. Justice Department has joined a lawsuit against Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Florida, supporting a whistleblower's claim that the company mishandled tens of thousands of Medicare claims.

And at the same time, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services is wrapping up an 18-month investigation based on similar allegations and may send its information to a federal grand jury.

The civil suit against Florida's largest insurance company was filed in 1991 by Theresa Burr, who worked for the company in Jacksonville from 1980 to 1989. It says that during that time the company erased tens of thousands of claims, overcharged the government and knowingly chose an inadequate computer system.

Delayed payments or non-payments have been blamed for people losing their homes and their credit ratings and for forcing some small medical supply companies out of business.

Ms. Burr said she was gratified that the Justice Department had decided to join her Case

"It has changed my entire thought pattern of life because I could have given up a long time ago, but I just can't," she told The Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel. "It makes me feel they believe the allegations are justified, that they are willing to get in and try to fix it."

The Jacksonville office where she worked handles all of the claims filed by Medicare patients in Florida.

A spokesman for the insurer said the lawsult was in the hands of company attorneys.

"At this time, we do not think it is appropriate to comment on the lawsuit. However, we do believe that the allegations of wrongdoing are without merit," said Patrick McCabe, an employee in the company's Jacksonville office.

Meanwhile, Jim Cottos, Health and Human Services regional inspector general for investigations, said his agency was near the end of its separate investigation and expects to have information ready for a grand jury within 30 to 45 days.

"I'm not going to say anything specific because this is an ongoing investigation," Cottos said. "But I think if we had not found any evidence, we wouldn't still be investigating."

Conflict of interest? Reed's appointment raises questions

AT KALLESTAD AP News Analysis

TALLAHASSEE - If you wonder why public .confidence in government has dipped to historical and dangerous depths, consider the action taken last week by Florida's Board of Regents.

They signed off on a deal for Chancellor Charles Reed that doesn't smell right to's lot of people. Reed, a popular and hard-working public official, is paid $165,000 a year to run Fiorida's nine public universities.

Now he has accepted a lucrative directorship with Florida Progress Corp., the parent company of the utility that is paid millions each year for providing power to those name universities.

A battery of attorneys for Florida Progress and the re-gents studied any possible conflict of interest. They found none. In fact, it is such a good deal, everyone ought to do it, the Regents concluded.

"I think the exchange of information, the crossfertilization that occurs ... is tremendously important." suid Regent Jon Moyle, who argued that these rela-tionships are beneficial "to the public, the state university system and to others in the private sector.

Moyle would probably get a lot of agreement on the fertilizer part

And the board wouldn't listen to a concerned citizen, Eugene Danaher of Taliahasece, explain why he disagreed with their decision to provide carte blanche to these troubling relationships. Danaher, in fact, feels the regents are ignoring the state's code of ethics for public officials. Secretary of State Jim Smith, a lifetime politician frustrated by the public's distrust of his profession, is also disturbed. "in public service, that's one of the things you just have to give up." said Smith. "I just don't think you can mix the two.

"There has to be real clear lines of definition," said Smith, adding that conflict is always a companion. "Those decisions are too difficult for mortals to make."

The most surprising thing about these recent developments is that Reed himself hasn't dropped anchor on the whole deal. Or maybe he's beginning to think about life after public service.

"My integrity has never been questioned before," Reed said Friday. "I call 'em the way I see them. I'll continue to do that. I've always done that.

"I'm not going to get myself into position to have any conflicts," he said.

One thing is certain. Reed is far too smart to believe he's being paid $31,500 to alt on the Florida Progress board because he's a good guy. Smith, meanwhile, is beginning to get his ducks in order for a possible guberna-torial candidacy in 1994.

All they have to do is take a cruise on a floating cesino.

Over the past decade, gambling has grown into a significant business aboard the 47 cruise ships that dock at the Port of Miami. Port Everglades and the Port of Palm Beach.

Hacker hits water computer

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — No damage was done by a hacker's ramble through a water management computer system, but officials have taken steps to avoid a similar adventure in the future.

No floodgates were opened during the electronic intrusion on Jan. 20, but water managers are taking the incident seriously.

"We lost just about a day's use of that system," said John Lynch, the South Florida Water Management District's director of information services. "We've increased our security."

After purging the system and making sure the intruder left no viruses, the district set up a caller identification system.

Police investigating the break-in wrote in court records that the "unauthorized individual could have caused flooding. resulting in personal damage and possible injury to both humans and animals."

"Once you get in, it's just a matter of being smart enough and opening the right doors," Lynch said.

The illicit entry came at 8:02 a.m. on Martin Luther King Day, while most district employees were off. The hacker wormed his way into a program that controls floodgates and valves for canals, waterways and Lake Okeechobee.

District officials discovered the break-in and asked the Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office to investigate. Under Florida law, it is illegal to alter computer data or programs, or even to gain entry to a computer system without authorization.

Water managers say they may yet ask prosecutors to file charges against the hacker. Investigators have told district officials the individual was a teen-ager, but did not otherwise identify him.

"We will pursue this and be very firm with it," said Cathy Anciade, public information of-ficer for the district. "We intend to be very diligent guarding access to our water system."

On May 8, detectives searched a Jupiter home and seized thousands of dollars' worth of computers, motients, tilaks and other equipment.

Detectives couldn't say if a phone in the home was used in the January break-in, but did say that someone used that Sanford Herald, Sanlord, Florida - Monday, May 18, 1982 - 84

Death penalty sought in case of body found in rented plane

WAYCROSS, Ga. (AP) - The prosecution will seek the death penalty for Farmington lawyer Michael Glean, who was found guilty of murder in the death of a woman whose body was found in his rented airplane.

Glean, 53, was convicted Sunday of malice murder in the December 1990 strangulation of Kimberly Wallace, 28. The jury deliberated a little less than four hours Saturday and Sunday.

Glean's attorney. Bruce Harvey, said his client will appeal.

Prosecutors said Sunday they want the death penalty.

The sentencing hearing was to begin today. Glean was the first of four men charged in the case to be tried. The victim's estranged husband, Cobb County chiropractor Jack Wallace, is expected to be tried next, followed by Jeremiah Lee and Frederick Spean.

Harvey on Sunday urged

Judge Joe Newton not to allow death penalty arguments. He cited legal precedents that death penalty cases must be particularly helnous, and reminded the judge that doctors had testified Mrs. Wallace was in a drugged state near coma when she was strangled.

"The death in this case was neither vile nor atrocious," he said. This was a "normal murder in that regard. It does not constitute torture or unnecessary or wanton affliction of pain.

Glean's daughters and Mrs. Wallace's family embraced tearfully after the verdict. "We certainly bear them no ill will." said Lila Jones, the wife of Mrs. Wallace's father, Maxie. "We've all suffered in this."

We are naturally disappointed and surprised that the jury took what was clearly a circumstantial case and bootstrapped it into a conviction," Harvey said.

The district attorney declined comment.

Glean, who was Jack Wallace's attorney, contended during the trial that he knew nothing about the slaying. His attorneys called only three defense witnesses, two of whom placed him at a wake Dec. 13, 1990, the day Mrs. Wallace disappeared.

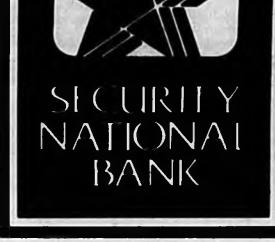

The next day, however, Glean was arrested when his plane landed at Waycross-Ware County airport without lights and suspicious police discovered Mrs. Wallace's body.

Prosecutors argued that Glean arranged for Mrs. Wallace to meet her husband alone in Cobb County on Dec. 13, and that Glean planned to dump the body in the Okefenokee Swamp.

Glean's attorneys contended all the blame should lie with Wallace.

EDITORIALS The war

There's a wide measure of agreement in the two assessments recently released of the performance of U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf War, both in what went right and what needs to be improved.

The Defense Department, in its official report to Congress, and the House Armed Services Committee, in its own evaluation, give much credit for success to the training and readiness of the All-Volunteer Force.

As the House report notes, the men and women who fought in the Gulf were "better educated, more motivated and more capable" than any force in the nation's history. Trained realistically in peacetime, they adapted quickly to desert conditions, even units deployed late to the theater fought as effectively as those that had used the five-month buildup before the war to hone tactics in Saudi Arabia.

Their combat effectiveness owed much to leadership from a newly unified chain of command. As both Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and the House report noted, Congress' 1986 reorganization of the military command, which increased the authority of the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and gave the theater joint commander in chief real power to control the services and logistics for Desert Storm, provided invaluable in the Gulf. Because of that, all the services were fighting the same war under a unified command.

Both reports also document the importance of air power and the battle advantage conferred by high-tech weaponry and equipment. Although initial estimates of the accuracy and reliability of weapons such as the Tomahawk cruise missile, the F-117-A Stealth fighter and the Patriot missile have been somewhat downgraded, those weapons enabled U.S. air power to destory targets with an efficiency and precision unprecedented in the history of warfare, and with little loss of aircraft or pilots.

But if Information Age weaponry conferred power on the battlefield, it also exposed U.S. weaknesses in logistics, intelligence and communications.

Its causes ignored, violence recurs

When South Central Los Angeles imploded recently, a statement Dr. Dominic Capeci had made to me in early March rang in my ears.

I was interviewing him about his newly released book on the Detroit race riot of 1943. "Riots are going to come again." he told me. "I hate to be the prophet of doom, but as long as you have tension, as long as you have people believing that their grievances are not legitimately being dealt with, you're going to have these kinds of explosions."

Capeci, a professor of history at Southwest Missouri State University, has studied racial violence for 25 years and written three books and many articles on the subject. He and Dr. Martha Wilkerson, an SMSU sociology professor. had just spent four and half years researching and writing about the 1943 Detroit riot, filing Freedom of Information requests to gain access to never-before-used police records and arrest tickets. The book that came from their research, 'Layered Violence: The Detroit Race Rioters of 1943," was published in late 1991.

The conditions that precipitated the 1943 violence were much the same as the conditions that led to riots before it and after it: Blacks moved north with expectations of better jobs and better lives. But once they got there, they found abominable housing, a lack of educational opportunities and recreational facilities, and Jim Crow. Whites saw blacks as encroaching on the jobs and other privilegen that had been exclusively theirs.

Yet despite the similarities between the '43 riot and those that preceded it, polley makers then didn't bother to look into the rioters' motivation. Nor did they do so during the Detroit race riot of 1967, when information about the '43 riot was so much more accessible.

Previous looks at the '43 riot concluded that black rioters were simply young hoodlums. And that very few white rioters were involved. Those who were were characterized as low-class and uneducated -- "hillbillies," some reports called them. The conclusions are much like the images we've seen over and over again on TV this time: Video of the worst incidents of looting and crime played repeatedly, with little time or energy devoted to frustrated residents who became involved in the riot to a much lesser extent, and even less time devoted to analysis of their feelings and participation.

Capeci's and Wilkerson's findings, after a painstaking look at the profiles of those arrested in '43, were at odds with earlier conclusions. The authors found that both races had been heavily involved, rioters were older than previously thought, and most black rioters had jobs and scrious stakes in society. They were people with something valuable to lose by participating.

When I interviewed Capeci and Wilkerson before the Los Angeles rioting, I listened to them with the interest of anyone who's read an intriguing book. When I called Capeci after the Los Angeles violence, I listened with the intensity of someone who no longer has the luxury of just being interested.

JACK ANDERSON Iconoclast trying to get things done

WASHINGTON - Rep. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, D-Colo., remembers the time a constituent called him to complain that her garbage hadn't been picked up on time. "I told her. 'This isn't the sanitation department, why didn't you call them?' She said. 'Oh, I didn't think I was going to have to go

The speed of armored forces was limited by a shortage of heavy and all-terrain trucks. The amount of information that needed to be moved overwhelmed military communications systems, forcing commanders to rely on Saudi telephones; messages between services were hampered by incompatible communications equipment.

Air strikes were hampered by slowness in assessing damage. A combination of longerrange lethal weapons and inadequate battlefield communications produced casualties by friendly fire. Rebalancing the military so that communications and logistics match the sophiatication of weapons and doctrine is an important task for the future.

There's a danger in drawing too many lessons from the Gulf war. U.S. and allied forces faced an outgunned and outmanned force - the House report estimates there may have been only 183,000 Iraqi troops in Kuwait when the ground war started, not the 547,000 initially estimated - and had the luxury of time to train in the theater.

The United States may not be as fortunate next time. But there's no fortunate next time. But there's no doubting that the elements of success in the Persian Gulf - a well-trained force, high-tech weapons, a strong, unified command - will be a source of strength in any future combat.

HODDING CARTER Beware learning wrong lesson

Two profoundly different instincts are com-peting for supremacy a few weeks after the Los Angeles riots. One is inclined to compromise and cooperation, with a stress on shared responsibilities rather than apportioned blame. That one was expressed at a White House meeting last week between congressional Democrats and the president.

The other has two faces. One is that of the partisan, eager to point the accusatory finger at someone else. The other is that of the resigned realist, speaking more in sorrow than in anger, who admits the problem but has given up on solutions. They don't work, they're too expensive or there's too little consensus, goes the word from this quarter.

The first instinct is obviously the one to follow. The latter two are part of the problem. We've been learning the wrong leasons from bad history for almost two decades now, and it's time to unlearn them in a hurry.

"You can't solve problems by throwing money at them." We all know that old saw. It's wrong, or at least its implications are wrong. Well-funded programs have not failed. Badly-thought-out or incomplete programs have. The War on Poverty was not exactly a big ticket item, costing less than $2 billion a year at its height, and its most expensive single people-program, Head Start, is said by Republican and Democrats alike to have been a success. So was, and is, the Job Corps

But the War on Poverty got confused with other agendas, aimed at less precise goals like "empowerment" and "community involvement." goals that might have made sense but were too heavy a political load to sustain. What political cross fire didn't mangle, the Vietnam War terminated. Despite its known triumphs, we never had a chance to find out whether the War on Poverty could succeed on its own terms, since the government surrendered early, at a cost markedly less than that of the 100-hour war in the Persian Gulf.

But we have "thrown money" at other social problems that money largely relieved. Poverty was once a certain accompaniment of old age. No more, thanks in significant part to government programs. A host of diseases, like polio, TB, malaria and smallpox, were once epidemic, until government threw money at them.

No, that old dog won't hunt. If you target the money with intelligence and persistence, money can cure a lot. If it were not so, why are so many of us in such avid pursuit of the buck? Why is the defense budget even now one at which the government "throws money."

"There's no consensus." To which a logical reply is "build it and they will come." Leadership is just that, leadership. Consensus does not form naturally, rising to the top like cream on fresh milk. Passivity guarantees failure. You have to provide ideas, publicize them, react to the public reaction, adapt and then implement them. Times of crisis, even transient crisis, are also times of opportunity.

Attention is focused. Take advantage of it. "We can't afford 'it." This ever-popular chestnut does not require identification of "it." It is just something that is assumed to be understood. We can't afford domestic tranquility? We can't afford justice? We can't afford a society that works passably well for all of its people? While the budget deficit and the $3 trillion-plus national debt are real impediments, the current budget allocations are not sacrosanci. Neither is the tax code. The integrity and domestic tranquility of the nation are.

Partisanship is what party politics are all about. There's nothing inherently evil about it. But if politics should stop at the water's edge.

at least when the nation is imperiled by foreign enemies, also it should be given a rest when the nation is imperiled by domestic upheaval. The blame is thick enough to go around, so let's all stipulate that the Democrats and Republicans are blameworthy. We can work out the accounting at the polls.

We've been

learning the wrong lessons

In the meantime, let's knock off the posturing, the Mickey Mouse of a press secretary blaming the Great Society, or Democrate on the hustings blaming Ronald Reagan. The truth is that there has been a collective turning away from our internal disintegration. There have been voices crying in the wilderness unheeded, and they should be given their due, but our generation of vipers has bipartian lineage. Divided government has been a built-in excuse for past failure; it must not be allowed to be a barrier to present

As for the first instinct, it contains the seeds of potential danger. Cooperation and bipartisanship must not be a smokescreen for inadequacy. "Doing something" could be worse than doing nothing if it is no more than a palliative, designed to calm fears and mask symptoms while leaving the cancer untouched. It would be worse than doing nothing because it could effectively preclude further action until the next disaster.

permission not to wear a coat and tie) and includes his choice of transportation (a Jeep amid BMWs and limos).

Other things are less visible. His life story reads like something out of a Horatio Alger novel. "I came from a very rough home. My dad was an alcoholic and my mother was tubercular. I was living in an orphanage and on the streets," he explains.

He wasn't coddled during childhood, and his wont is not to coddle special interests, or even constituents he thinks get out of line. "They (interest groups) want absolute subservience to their cause and I'm just not like that. If they want a puppet, they can go buy one," Campbell told our associate Melinda Maas recently. Though Campbell is far from a puppet, his political ambitions have recently expanded. He is currently campaigning for the Senate seat being vacated by the retiring Tim Wirth, who. Senate observers point to as the prototype of the media-age politician.

Campbell's direct style may offend some, but he offers no apologies. On voter anger, Campbell believes too much time is spent worrying about inconsequential matters while more important issues like health care and the deficit are put aside year after year. He cites the people who called his office wanting him to pase a bill requiring people to be kinder to chickens, or the man who wanted him to change the national anthem to a song his brother wrote. One time, when a constituent was giving him a particularly hard time about his taxpayer-supported salary, Campbell struck back. "I looked up and found out just before that happened that two cents of a taxpayer's money goes toward congressional salaries. So I threw the two cents at him and told him to shut up."

"I try to reason with them sometimes, but they can get pushy. If you want to pass a law to make people kinder to chickens. I just flat tell them, run yourself and you pass the -----law," Campbell said.

As the only Native American member of Congress, he's comfortable as a minority. While large portions of Congress is made up mainly of lawyers and career politicians, Campbell is a jewelry maker and rancher by profession. He mays that he only agreed to run for office after his neighbors asked him to.

His office on Capitol Hill, decorated in Western style with handcarved wooden furniture and an Indian head garment estimated to be worth $50,000, is a far cry from his roots. At age 12 he took his first job, and soon dropped out of high school to join the Air Force during the Korean War. After the war. Campbell went back for his general equivalency diploma and later attended college in California. But it wasn't until last year that Campbell finally went back to receive his high school diploma

Campbell anys his rough beginning is a big reason why he now considers his family to be the most important aspect of his life.

Youngsters save two chicks from predators to raise themselves

By SARABECCA ROSI

Herald correspondent

There is a pond on Country Club Road in Lake Mary that has some ducks, Mallards, I believe.

When I first saw them there were two males and three females many months ago. However, that third female always seemed to be picked on. Now, I don't really know if ducks are monogamous or not, but it certainly appeared that these waterfowl are and that the extra female was not wanted. Eventually, I didn't see her around.

The other two duck couples seemed to get along quite well. Then I started to notice that there was another female missing. I was worried about her, but was hoping that maybe she was away sitting on eggs. Well...the end of April, lo and behold, the proud mama was in the pond with her six little ducklings. I was thrilled. One of the ducklings was all yellow while the others were a brown mixture.

Zeke and Princess cuddle in the corner of their new home.

The next day one duckling was missing. I was concerned but I didn't want to let myself believe the worst.

The following day there were only four ducklings and I was sure predators were at fault. Later that same day there were only three.

Then, the children whose property where the pond is located, Adam Gordon, age 13. and Whitney Gordon, 9, attempted to rescue the remaining three.

They were only able to rescue two, the little yellow one and the brown and yellow mix. The mama seemed to be protecting her other little brown duckling herself. The children told me they had been able to catch the last one but the mama duck seemed so upset they gave it back and are hoping she can keep it alive.

The children are trying to see if they can raise the two ducklings. They have them in a container with a light to keep the temperature about 90 degrees. There is water and food and a dry bottom. They hold them and pet them several times a day and have given them names. The yellow duckling is Zeke and the brown one with a bit of yellow is Princess.

Because of budget cuts for 1992-93, so far the staffing allocations indicate the loss of the elementary curriculum specialist, one 12 month custodian and 1.5 instructional essistante.

Kindergarten registration was held on April 23 and was one of the most successful ever! Eighty seven kindergarten students were registered.

During spring break, Christine Watkins, an alternative education teacher, was selected as one of 60 teachers nationwide to be recognized in "The Disney Channel Salutes the American Teacher in 1992." The Diancy film crew will be on campus on May 22 to film Mrs. Watkins and her students. Congratulations Mrs. Watkins.

Magic 'win' excites fans

ORLANDO - Within minutes after the Orlando Magic won the NBA draft lottery Sunday, telephones in the box office began ringing and coach Matt Guokas gave in to the temptation to envision a lineup including Shaquille O'Neal.

'I hadn't looked at any tape or thought a lot about it because I didn't want to get my hopes up for any one player," said Guokas, who watched the drawing on television in a sports bar and leaped to his feet in triumph when he learned the Magic will have the No. 1 pick.

"Every team in the league, despite the recent trend set with point guards, would like to have a quality center. Obviously, Shaquille O'Neal has the potential to be that."

Closing out the season

And that's just what they did, beating the Hungry Howie Cubs 12-2 in the regularly scheduled game and 25-13 to complete at game suspended by darkness back on April 16th.

After Saturday's results, the Cardinals and Pirates are both 11-1. forcing the teams to complete a game today that was suspended by darkness back on April 8th.

The score was tied 6-6 and the Pirates had runners on first and third with two out in the bottom of the fifth inning when the game was stopped.

The game will pick up from that point this evening at 5:45 p.m. at the Stadium.

The winner of today's mini-game will then move onto the City Championship, which is scheduled to start Tuesday at 5:30 p.m. The second game of the best-of-three series is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. Thursday, with the third game, if necessary, being played Saturday morning at 9:30 a.m.

He lived up to his No. 1 world ranking Sunday by overpowering Spain's Carlos Costa, the year's clay court sensation, 7-6 (7-3), 6-0, 6-4 to win the Italian Open. The victory established Courier, a former resident of Sanford, as the clear favorite to defend his title at the French Open, a Grand Slam tournament beginning May 25. Courier is the first American to win the Italian Open since Jimmy Arias in 1963. And he did it in convincing style against an oppo-nent playing in his fourth clay-court final of the year.

Birmingham scorches Orlando

AROUND THE REGION

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. - Running back Elroy Harris rushed for 77 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Birmingham Fire to a 24-23 World League win over the Orlando Thunder Sunday.

The victory keeps the Fire (6-2-1) in the hunt for a playoff spot. They need a victory over the Ohio Glory next Sunday to secure at least a wild card berth.

Phillip Doyle hit a 22-yard field goal for a 24-17 Fire lead with 5:40 left. On the Thunder's next possession. Scott Mitchell threw a threeyard touchdown pass to Grantis Bell with 1:55 left to cap a nine-play, 80-yard drive and cut the margin to 24-23. The Thunder, 7-2, elected to go with a two-point conversion, but Mitchell's pass fell incomplete.

Cavaliers eliminate Celtics

RICHFIELD, Ohio - Brad Daugherty scored 16 first-quarter points and the Cleveland Cavaliers never let up as they beat the Boston Celtics 122-104 Sunday and advanced to the Eastern Conference finals for only the second time in franchise history.

Cleveland, eliminated from the playoffs by Boston twice before, bounced back from the worst playoff loss in team history, a 122-91 beating Friday night at the Boston Garden.

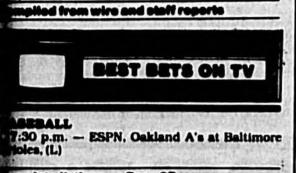

The Cavaliers outplayed Boston in every phase, outrebounding the Celtics 45-31, outshooting them 59 percent to 50 percent, and handing out 42 assists to Boston's 20.

Jordan, Bulls trounce Knicks

CHICAGO - The Chicago Bulls stayed alive in heir bid to repeat as NBA champs Sunday when Michael Jordan gave a repeat performance. Jordan, six-time NBA scoring champion and pareer average leader in the playoffs, scored 42 points in Chicago's 110-81 victory over New ork that gave the Bulls the Eastern Conference mifinal series 4-3. They will play Cleveland in he conference finals starting Tuesday night at hicago Stadium.

Supposedly worn out by the Knicks' physical ctics throughout the series, Jordan spent most Game 7 wearing out the nets, especially in the half when he scored 29 points, more than of the Bulls' total.

Breaks of the game

Depending on what side of Fort Mellon Park's Roy Holer Field you were standing on Saturday morning, Chaz Lytle of the Korg U.S.A. Expos (No. 7, sliding) was either tagged out on this at-tempted steal of second baseby K-n-D Trailer Red Sox second baseman Nicholas Ireland (above) or was safe when the ball came loose (left) upon contact. According to the only opinion that really counted - the umpire's-Lytle was out. Despite the setback, Lytle and the Expos allied in the bottom of the sixth to beat the Red Sox 7-6 and claim the Sanford Recreation Depart-ment's Little Major Baseball City Championship.

him," Costa said. "He is a very complete player, very strong. Jim is extremely concentrated on every point. He has no ups and downs." On a blistering day when temper-atures at the Foro Italico were in the 90s, fitness proved the key factor. Costs folded after the tight first set, needing a dose of mineral salts at one stage to keep him going.

"I had a physical and psychological letdown." the 24-year-old Spaniard said. "I was feeling extremely tired."

Courier, meanwhile, seemed to get stronger as the match progreated.

"The bottom line is I'm feeling physically fit," he said. "I'm going to be right there on every point."

Courier withstood Costa's best shot in the first set, which lasted 70 minutes. Costa had six break points in two games, but Courier saved them all - often with big first serves. In the tiebreaker, Courier dictated all the points and forced Costa into errors.

Courier breezed through the second set in 32 minutes, losing only eight points in the process. While the Spaniard was fighting fatigue, Courler was hammering his groundstrokes with precision from corner to corner.

Youth baseball again brings out the worst in fans

What is it about blue that makes us see red?

Sometimes it seems like whoever's wearing the uniform of an umpire or some other athletic arbiter automatically becomes a human spittoon for all the verbal trash that spills from the mouths of fans.

I understand that on Saturday morning at Fort Mellon Park. we had another incident of family and friends forgetting that the main thrust of youth baseball is to provide a safe and controlled environment for children to play baseball, not for adults to vicariously experience their diamond fantasics.

Supposedly, things got so out of hand during and after the Sanford Little Major Baseball City Championship game that an umpire was physically threatened for making a tough but accurate and correct call. At the risk of insulting anyone.

I'm not going to bore you again with what frustratingly has become an annual "the game is for the kids" column. Frankly, I'm tired of writing it because the people who believe that don't need to be told while those at the other end of the spectrum can't be told anything.

If this sounds bitter, it's because it's meant to be. To allow yourself to get so riled up that you'd yell things at another human being that are normally reserved for such moments as flattening your thumb with a hammer crosses over into the ridiculous.

is that what you want your children to learn? To scream and complain when a call goes against you? Is that what we're about?

There's no room for that in any organized league at any level, regardless of the situation, how much is at stake or how bad the ball, if for no other reason than it doesn't change anything.

About five years ago. in the sixth game of the World Series between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Kansas City Royals, a Royal runner was called safe when replays should clearly that he was out. While the Cardinals and their fans carried on about the blown call. it didn't change it. And you could argue that the energy spent by the Cardinals arguing that call put them in an emotional hole going into the seventh game.

A similar situation came up in the high school state baseball tournaments at Baseball City last week. After a baserunner was called safe on a close play on a pickoff attempt at first base, a spectator groused that while the runner was definitely out, the umpire called him safe.

I don't know about you, but the only definites in my life have to do with my religion and the rising and the setting of the sun.

The point is - and there is one. trust me - is that fans, especially those in the youth athletic arena, are honor-bound to practice the same principles of sportsmanship that the players are being taught. It's not just a good idea, not an ideal, but your responsibility.

If you're not up to it, stay home. That way, you're not frustrated, the kids don't get agitated and the experience isn't ruined for everyone clac.

As Costa lapaed into careless errors, the capacity crowd of 10,000 whiatled in derision. He picked up his game a bit in the third act, even breaking Courier twice. When he broke for 2-2, Costa threw up his arms in mock triumph.

But Courier quickly broke back and went on to serve out the match at love, hitting an ace and a service winner on the last two points.

Courier became only the second American ever to win both the French and Italian Open titles. Budge Paddy won in Paris in 1950 and Rome in 1954. Courier said he feels in ideal shape going into the French.

"My performance here, the way I'm hitting the ball, moving and feeling physically, is perfect," he said. "I'm very three runs, six RBI), Badger (home run, two runs, three RBI) and Jackson and Wildermuth (one single, three runs and one RBI cach). Also hitting were Barnes and

He said Costa will be among the top contenders.

Time to prune, pinch poinsettias

Poinsettias will become leggy and produce few flowers if they are not pruned and pinched properly during the growing season. The pruning should begin now and continue throughout the summer. At this time of year, poinsettias like most other plants are growing rapidly. A more compact plant can be obtained at flowering time - rather than one with a few long, unbranched canea - If the plants are pruned several times during the growing season. The new growth should be cut back when the shoots are 10 to 12 inches long. Cut the shoots back, leaving four leaves on each shoot. This operation should be repeated every time the new growth reaches 10 to 12 inches. Do not cut shoots back after September 10th. This type of pruning schedule will produce a nice compact plant with many flowers. Pruning after September 10th may interfere with flowering, since poinsettias set their flower buds in the first weeks of October.

Frequently poinsettias do not bloom the following year after they are placed out in the landscape. This is easily explained. Poinsettias are sensitive to day length with electric lights. This usually happens when plants are exposed to street lights or lights around the house, such as a porch light. Poinsettias are so sensitive to day length that light from a window or door is often enough to delay or prevent flowering, therefore, poinsettias should be placed in an area of the garden that does not receive light during the night.

Poinsettias should be fertilized about three times each year spring, summer, and fall. The first application when new growth begins, the second in June, and the last in late October of early November. The last application promotes larger bracts (flowers) with intense color and also aids in root growth during winter. Occasionally, a fourth application may be necessary in midsummer if the June application is followed by extremely heavy rains. Use 6-6-6, 8-5-8, or similar complete fertilizer at the rate of one quarter cup per plant at each feeding. Distribute the fertilizer evenly around the base of the plant, avoiding the stem, and lightly cultivate it into the soil. Then give the plant a light watering. A teaspoon of epsom salt applied along with the fertilizer may be beneficial, since epsom salt supplies magnesium and a lack of magnesium can cause the leaves to yellow.

Poinsettias have few disease or insect problems but are sensitive to wet feet - no, don't overwater or plant them in poorly drained locations. Poor drainage and too much water can cause root rot and death of the plant. Poinsettias are easily maintained and can add much enjoyment to your winter garden. HAPPY PRUNING! OR SHOULD IT BE 'MERRY CHRISTMAS!"

All Seminole County Cooperative Extension Service programs are open to all regardless of race, color, sex, or national origin.

Juniors honor moms

By DORIS DIETRICH Herald Columniat

The Junior Woman's Club of Sanford Inc. can take a big bow. Those energetic juniors, as they are called by the senior club. hosted a Mother's Day luncheon May 9 at the clubhouse for their children, their mothers, members of the Juniorettes and members of the senior club.

According to Debbie Whitehead, overall chairman, about 82 showed up for the delightful luncheon which was prepared by the juniors. The tables groaned under the weight of the appetizing and delicious cuisine complete with one long table filled with a variety of tempting desserts.

The clubhouse was festively decorated in pastel-colored balloons. Each table setting featured a pink net sachet of match the pink tablecloths. "This is just wonderful," a guest ribbons (created by Debbie) to extolled followed by a round of affirmative echoes. One guest even tensed that the juniors should make this an annual event. And according to Debbie, the juniors are taking this suggestion seriously.

Debbie's committee included:

I thought maybe someone from the American Cancer Society could help, but I was told to hurry up and have it done, and worry about the rest later.

DEAR WOMAN: Death is not better than surgery! The American Cancer Society CAN help you. Many women live through this kind of ordeal and emerge with flying colors, and you can. too. You may be a candidate for more limited surgery than the

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 25 years walked out and left me with two teen-agers to raise. He said he was in love with a woman he works with. I wondered why he worked all those long hours and never had time for his family. He told me he wanted to be president of the company he worked for, which employed about 25,000. I was very naive. I believed him. Now I know that the real reason was that he was having an affair with his secretary.

the trying time was one of your columns. The response about the man who has a lady for a wife and will pick up some tramp described my situation perfectly.

Please reprint that story to help some other woman whose marriage has ended due to adultery. Thanks for your help. ALADY

DEAR LADY: If the item has helped you regain your perspective after your trauma, I am gratified. Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Why will a married man pick up a tramp and treat her like a lady, then turn around and treat his wife (who is a lady) like a tramp?

DEAR MINNIE: A man picks up a tramp because he wants a female companion who is no better than he is. In her company, he doesn't feel inferior. He rewards her by treating her like a lady.

He treats his wife (who is a lady) like a tramp because he feels that by degrading her, he will bring her down to his level. This makes him feel guilty, so to get even with his wife for making him feel guilty, he keeps right on punishing her.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of people who make a habit of recycling gifts? Someone gives Grandma some odd gift for Christmas, for example, a pair of lawn flamingos or a clay sheep that grows alfalfa sprouts. Then the next Christmas, Grandma rewraps it and sends it to Aunt Helen.

Grandma does this constantly. I could understand it if she were unable to buy something new, but she is very well off. I am very hurt to receive these obviously recycled gifts from Grandma every year. Am I being overly sensitive? EURT

DEAR HURT: I see nothing wrong with recycling gifts that are (a) in mint conditon and (b) useful. But those who make a practice of sending secondhand white elephants on gift-giving occasions are just plain cheap. You are not overly sensitive. Shame on Grandma.

Accident victim graduates

BOWDON, N.D. - John Thompson, whose arms were reattached after a farm accident, grasped his diploma between his wrists at his high school graduation.

Thompson, 18, received a standing ovation after singing "One Moment in Time" at Sunday's tearful ceremony, attended by 400 people.

He dedicated the song to his nine classmates. saying, "I'll never be able to repay you guys." He received hugs in return.

The teen-ager's arms were torn off by a piece of farm machinery Jan., 11. He staggered 400 feet to his house, used his mouth to open doors and punched a telephone call for help with a pencil clenched in his teeth.

Hinckley fan free on ball

UNIVERSITY PARK, Texas - A man who had a knife and held a sign reading "Give Hinckley another chance" outside a hall where President Bush was about to give a commencement speech has been freed on $10,000 ball.

Jack Conrow, 20, of Dallas, was arrested Saturday at Southern Methodist University and charged with possessing the knife and with failing to identify himself to officers. He was released Sunday.

Pollution may cause defect

HOUSTON - State and federal health officials are looking into whether there is a link between pollution from Mexican factories and the births along of the border during the past 21/2 years of at least 72 bables without brains.

The Centers for Disease Control and Texas Department of Health are investigating the high rate of the fatal birth defect, called anencephaly, Dennis Perrotta, the department's director for epidemiology, said last week.

Thirty cases of anencephaly in Texas have been documented in as many months; at least 42 cases have been identified in Matamoros, Mexico, during the same period.

Health officials said the defect usually occurs at a rate of about 10 per 10,000 births in the United States. In Brownsville, the rate reached 30.16 in 1990.

Gas prices up

LOS ANGELES - Gasoline prices at the pump rose an average of 41/2 cents per gallon in the past three weeks, according to a nationwide survey.

Industry analyst Trilby Lundberg on Sunday attributed the increase to greater summer travel and wholesale price increases brought on by stricter summer smog regulations.

The Lundberg Survey of 13,000 stations found that the average retail price of gasoline Friday, including all grades and taxes, was $1.2534 per gallon, up 4.56 cents from April 24.

SEATTLE - A fungue in Washington state has seized the title of world's largest living thing from one in Michigan, scientists say.

Armillaria ostoyae, which feeds on pine trees in Washington's forests, covers about 1,500 acres and might be even bigger if the state and a timber company hadn't been trying to cradicate the stumps it cats, two scientists said. As it is, the fungue is nearly 40 times blager than armillaria bulbosa, the 38-acre Michigan creature that was acclaimed Earth's largest living thing when acientiata announced its discovery last month. The scientists who measured the Washington fungue said they doubt it is the last word in large. "I would suggest there are still bigger ones to find." Terry

Shaw, a forest pathologist with the U.S. Forest Service, said Saturday. He said one candidate was near LaPine. Ore.

Monster fungi like those in Michigan and Washington state are visible at the surface only in the decaying wood and tiny mushrooms they produce. They are identified as part of a single living thing through their genes.

Shaw and Ken Russell, a forest pathologist at the state Department of Natural Resources, have studied the Washington fungus. in the foothills of Mount Adams, 150 miles southeast of Seattle, for two decades.

How to care for a lung disease patient derstand either.

COPD (chronic obstructive. pulmonary disease) is emphysema, a potentially serious pulmonary allment marked by trapping of stale air in the lungs. Consequently, these patients are intolerant to exercise and usually experience progressive breathlessness because they can't absorb enough oxygen. In its terminal stages, COPD causes severe disability.

The ailment is treated with special breathing exercises, antiblotics, drugs to assist respiration and supplemental oxygen. For obvious reasons, COPD patients need rest -- and they certainly become dependent on their caregivers for the necessities of living.

Thus, I see no reason to ban you from the house -- unless you are a smoker. If you are handicapped yourself because of some disease or the effects of age. you'll need to get some help at home. But you certainly don't have to move out.

Ask the doctor to clarify his position. I believe that with assistance and medical supervision, you and your wife should be able to continue your present living arrangements. Also, you might consider seeing a pulmonologist. Such a lung specialist will be able to give you additional suggestions. DEAR DR. GOTT: About a
