A Knocker's Prayer

Even progressive towns have their knockers. There are in every community, both big and little, those persons who are in a way the "knockers" — the ones who opposed improvement or with every advanced step that is for the betterment of the home town.

But despite the fact that the knockers usually take advantage of every opportunity they have to hold their town back, and recognizing the fact that even boosters sometimes fail to keep continually pulling and pushing ahead, Florida towns and cities are steadily making progress in working out of their difficulties and are beginning to show signs of healthy, progressive development.

At one state, Florida was relatively free from knockers. Its citizens as a rule are united in their efforts to build and to construct and are inclined to have little use for obstructionists who are continually finding fault or are trying to block every worthwhile movement. And as the various sections continue to grow, and prosperity returns, we believe that such knockers as today exist will gradually disappear, or will be converted to a wealth of optimism and hopefulness, or will move to seek new fields where their pessimism receives greater encouragement.

Have you ever heard the prayer of the knockers? What produces it here from the Orlando Reporter-Star, which published it a few years ago:

"Lord, please don't let us be knockers. We've been knockers for thirty years and during that time I have fought every public improvement. I've knocked everything and everybody. I have done all I could to keep this town from growing and never have spoken a good word for it. I've knocked hard and often. I've put ashes on the children, I've never made the policeman make the boys stop playing ball on my vacant lot. Whenever I saw any one prospering or enjoying himself, I have started a reform to kill the success, to spoil the fun. I do not want to live in a town where there is no room for me. I do not want to live by law, rules and ordinances. I do not want to pay taxes. Indeed, I will do all I can to keep this town from growing. This Lord, will it pain me, Lord, to see that in spite of my longings this town is beginning to grow. This Lord, will be more than I can bear. It will cost me money in higher taxes, though all I have ever made has been made right here in this town. Then, too, more and more people will come to live here if this town continues to grow, which would cause me to lose some of my business. I ask, therefore, to keep this town at a standstill, that I may continue to be of some importance. Amen."

Strong Newspapers Needed

Just what constitutes a good newspaper is of course a matter which is apt to vary as often as there are people on earth. Some individuals prefer a newspaper which prints the news; others prefer one which prints a news column but is editorially independent; others want it to be either neutral or to yield readily to their own dictates. Roy Howard's announcement in taking over The New York World, it seems to us, expresses all that a modern newspaper should be, and indicates a need, greater than ever before, in the history of our country, for strong independent journalism.

"It is obvious that the need of independent editorial utterance and effort was never greater than the days of E. W. Scripps and Joseph Pulitzer. Still, it is to be hoped that the world ahead of the Scripps-Pulitzer publications, will not be dominated by the same forces which have brought about the decline of our social structure as boldly today as at any time in our history. In the time of Scripps and Pulitzer, the elder, the journalistic task was directed chiefly to domestic questions. Today our nation has lost the tradition of India. China directly affected the welfare of every American citizen. The next decade promises to tell the story of peace or war. In it will unfold events which will determine whether worldwide chaos or worldwide economic improvement shall be the outcome of mass production and the machine age.

"Today sees a multiplication also of domestic problems with which journalism must cope. The challenge to our social structure of the rich and the well-to-do, the organization of labor, the welfare of every American citizen. The next decade promises to tell the story of peace or war. In it will unfold events which will determine whether worldwide chaos or worldwide economic improvement shall be the outcome of mass production and the machine age.

"We realize that no newspaper of character and force can be pleasing to all people and all factions. Frequently a newspaper can be judged quite safely by its enemies, and by its friends. It will depend on it that The World, will be a newspaper Polynesian — no town could. We will be independent in all political matters without being neutral. We will try to keep our policies on the editorial page and out of the news columns.

"We will seek to be as fair in our news columns to those with whom we disagree as to those with whom we are in accord. We will not recognize as news stories from foreign countries, the health, happiness, education and progress of the average citizen.

"We will eschew the difficult role of being tolerant with the intolerant. We will remember that there is no such thing as journalistic infallibility. Above all, we will cherish as a pearl of great price a thing which we believe to be our most precious sense of humor."

DAILY NEWS AFTER SERVICE

SANFORD HERALD

In a good many ways a newspaper depends upon finding its place in which it is published. First of all, it is remarkable to what extent the newspaper is the great outside influence in the community. The newspaper, like the verification or refutation of any rumor, while arriving at gathering news in distant parts of the country, the public would live in the ignorance of what is taking place of moment among the nations. People get along much better if they did, their lives would be restricted, for unquestionably the telephone, telegraph and radio news, bring daily telegrams, city and county officials, communications, interviews with distinguished visitors, boosting individuals, public meetings, etc., will daily news dwells in "print-up Ullis," for the whole world circulates among its people.

Another line along which a daily newspaper serves a community is as a means of intercommunication among the people. Church notices, amateur literary meetings, city and county officials, the Ladies' Council of the First Christian Church, will be glad to receive the services of what is taking place in the community. The Daughters of Wesley Chapel, will have their regular monthly meeting at 7:30 o'clock on Monday evening at the church.

The Friends of Mrs. Vivian Speer, will hold their annual and Lenten services at 3 o'clock at the church with Mrs. Roland Franklin as hostess.

Monthly meetings of the Woman's Misionary Society of the First Methodist Church will be held at 7:30 o'clock at the church with Mrs. Anna Bell Dyson as hostess.

Adjoining the community agents were the profusion of calamities, epidemics and other sudden disasters, late hour, a sudden change in the weather, etc.

The Daughters of Wesley Chapel, will have their regular monthly meeting at 7:30 o'clock on Monday evening at the church.
