

The Truth Of The Matter

Webster defines a fact as "an event, occurrence, quality, or relation, manifestly real," and the truth as "conformity to fact or reality; exact accordance with that which is, or has been, or shall be," and one gets the idea that fact and truth are much the same thing. In a larger sense, however, there is a difference which we believe is too often ignored. The truth of a matter may often dispute the fact. One recalls that the mother of Charles Lamb, the famous poet, was murdered by her daughter. The fact was the daughter seized a knife and stabbed her mother through the heart. The truth of the matter was that the girl loved her mother very much, but, suddenly taken by a fit of temporary insanity which manifests itself by intense hatred against those ordinarily loved the most, the girl struck her mother in the heart with the knife.

The fact is that a certain man is only four feet tall, but the truth is that he was in a train wreck and had both legs cut off just above the knee. The fact is that a certain set of scales showed the roast beef weighed four pounds, but the truth is that the scales had been tampered with and the customer had been short-weighted. The fact is that a certain corporation is so heavily bonded that the stockholders are receiving no dividends, but the truth is that the stockholders also own the bonds and are receiving interest on their money.

A few weeks ago when it was disclosed that the government proposed to borrow ten billion dollars during the current six months period, it was pointed out in newspaper articles that this sum is almost twice all the "money" in circulation in the whole United States. The fact is that it is nearly twice all the currency in use in this country, but the truth is that currency is only a small percentage of our total supply of "money."

Money in this country includes not only silver, nickel, and copper; not only nickels, dimes and pennies, not only Federal Reserve notes, national bank notes, and so forth, all of which constitute the currency of the country, which amounts to $3,355,000,000, but also all the bank checks which are used throughout the country and which are issued against the deposits of all the state and national banks in the country.

These bank checks, generally speaking, are just as good "money" as government paper money, silver, or a year ago, as gold itself. They will buy just as much groceries, clothes, or furniture, anywhere that a man's credit is good, as will any other kind of money. This so-called "bank check money" is created largely by the loans and discounts of the nation's banks and altogether amounts to about $45,000,000,000.

When the government borrows ten billion dollars in ten billion paper dollars, the matter is transacted merely by a series of bookkeeping entries, and the purchase of government bonds is more likely to be made out of banking credits than ordinary currency.

In other words, the truth is that the ten billion dollars which the government is now borrowing is not really twice all the money there is in the United States but actually is somewhere between one-fourth and one-fifth.

Our Flexible Constitution

We are having a New Deal in constitutional law in this country. The Supreme Court of the United States has upheld the conviction of a Rochester, New York, grocer. His crime was that he violated a state law prohibiting the sale of milk for less than 9 cents a quart. The grocer did not actually sell the milk for less than 9 cents a quart, but he gave away a loaf of bread in order to induce people to buy two quarts for 18 cents.

By the narrow margin of 5 to 4 the Supreme Court decided that this was in violation of the state milk law and that the state had the right to make such laws which tell a person how much, or how little, he may sell his property for. Justice Roberts, who wrote the majority opinion, said that "the power to promote the general welfare is inherent in government." "The owners' rights may be subordinated to the needs of others" and, "The Constitution does not guarantee the unrestricted privilege to engage in a business or to conduct it as one pleases."

SANFORD FORUM

Editor, Sanford Herald. Dear Sir: Through your columns I wish to again offer for the consideration of celery growers and shippers a solution of our celery problem, applicable to this or any other year when we know that we have an injurious surplus of celery. Appoint a committee representing all of the celery growers and shippers and have them put a tax of ten cents a crate a half of celery to be shipped for the rest of the season, this tax to be paid by check at the freight-depot at the rate of $15.00 per car per car shipped. This is approximately $175,000.00 (1500 cars of celery at $115.00 per car).

Only Way To Hire More Workers Is To Make New Markets (Continued From Page One) lies, then industry will seek out these communities. Industry will follow people to the smaller towns and many of our problems will be solved. "For when people become self-sustaining, they will soon start to accumulate a surplus. This surplus, in turn, will create new markets. As far as the Ford Motor Company is concerned, we made the mistake at first made by all industries and centralized our production. But having seen the error in this method, we are now sending men out into the country and contracting for many of our finished and raw materials which go into the manufacture of automobiles from small decentralized industries scattered over the country."

Returning to the text of Mr. Hoover's speech, which he said he listened to over the radio and read in the newspapers, Mr. Ford said: "I noticed that he left out transportation and injected banking into his survey of the situation. That is putting the cart before the horse. The three principal arts are agriculture, industry and transportation. Of recent years, men have tried to make money an art. Money has been overplayed as a factor in recovery. During the past few years, thousands of persons thought they could live off of money needed to make more money and create wealth by the manipulation of finance. They can't do it. They must get back to actual and useful production."

"For this reason, it is important that no one hinders the back-to-land movement. Big cities are a mistake when they are so organized that half of the people are out of work with nothing to fall back on when their jobs disappear. People dependent upon cities are in a dangerous position, people who have learned to be self-sustaining by working the land never fear business depressions. The bulk of the people should be in villages instead of jammed into cities. I don't believe man was ever intended to live the highly competitive and artificial existence forced on to them in a big city. "Cities have their uses, however. Don't think I would advocate abolishing them. I have come to the point in my thinking where I grant every institution a purpose for its existence. It would not exist without reason. Young men gain experience and education in cities and if the young man carries this knowledge back to the country, he will be able to appreciate real living on a more genuine basis. In other words, people must learn to adopt a simpler scale of living."

Looking fondly through his office door at three brand new cars parked in the yard, Mr. Ford said: "The automobile industry never looked better than it does today. We developed a new and better car during the depression—against millions of dollars to do it. Now we are to do business. Other forward looking industries employed their capital the same way, experimenting during the depression in order to have a better product when things returned to normal. The depression was just a state of mind. It is over for everyone who has changed their state of mind."

ILLINOIS PEACHES KILLED CENTRALIA, Ill., Mar. 7.—(AP)—Southern Illinois peaches will be few this year, the Illinois Fruit Growers' Exchange said Monday. The sub-zero temperatures that have prevailed in the peach belt have killed virtually all of the peach crop except in two counties.

Daytona Beach Will License Auto Driver. DAYTONA BEACH, Mar. 7.—(AP)—Every operator of a motor vehicle in Daytona Beach must pay a license fee of one dollar a year to the city as the result of an ordinance passed Monday night by the municipal council. City commissioners said they expected to raise $5000 annually from the licenses to be devoted to recreation and publicity. The only persons exempted under the license rule are children under 14 who will not be permitted to drive at all and tourists here for 30 days or less.

New Rumors Of Revolt Alarm Cuban Leaders. HAVANA, Mar. 7.—(AP)—Machine guns were placed hastily atop the palace roof today and the guard was redoubled as new rumors of revolt flew. Part of the army and communists, the rumors said, planned to join followers of former President Grau San Martin in an attack on the palace. Soldiers and police guards were redoubled throughout the city. Automobiles loaded with sailors and soldiers moved through the streets and autoists and pedestrians were searched. Seven men were arrested during the night and charged with conspiring against the government of President Carlos Menéndez. The cabinet, which sat up most of Monday night, spent last night in a session in which stringent measures to meet the growing unrest were approved.

Legality Of Federal Housing Body Upheld. WASHINGTON, Mar. 7.—(AP)—The legality of the federal housing corporation was upheld yesterday by Attorney General Cummings, who ruled the corporation could acquire and convey title to real estate and that its acquisitions were not subject to review by the comptroller general. Cummings' opinion was given to Secretary Ickes, president of the corporation, and constituted another step in the controversy between the interior secretary and J. R. McCarl, the comptroller general, who has asserted his right to exercise a measure of control on the housing corporation's activities.

Austrians Asked Not To Espouse Nazism. VIENNA, Mar. 7.—(AP)—Emil Fer, Heimwehr leader and vice chancellor, appealed to Austrian workers last night not to throw themselves "into the arms of Nazism." He predicted that Socialism would soon disappear in the entire world and described political leaders of all colors "who at present are trying to stir up new unrest and make a profit out of the political situation" as "hyenas of the political battlefield." Offering to overlook "the past of those who were misled" in recent Socialist activities, he said he believed and fought in a mainly way, although duty forced him to break their resistance. Men who were misled in the past, he said, will not be held fast; we will send them weapons against in Vienna yesterday and say evidence that Socialist resistance to the government had not yet been completely crushed.

DRATH TERMED SUICIDE. HAINBRIDGE, Ga., Mar. 7.—Morris Grollman, 35, was found dead yesterday in the local business establishment with which he was connected. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of death by suicide, after reading a note addressed by Mr. Grollman to his wife. The widow and two children survive, also his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grollman, two brothers and two sisters.

Romantic Musical Film Opens At Milane Today

After almost half a year of production, "The Cat and the Fiddle" comes to the screen of the Milane Theatre starting today as one of the most pretentious offerings of the Metro Goldwyn-Mayer studio for the current show season.

Ramon Novarro and Jeanette MacDonald are the co-stars. Each is not only a romantic favorite, but an accomplished singer. They are teamed for the first time in this production, but their success has been so instantaneous and outstanding that M-G-M is now reported to be seeking a new vehicle in which they may appear together.

Although there is a wealth of music throughout the play, it is not, strictly speaking, a musical picture. It is instead a story with music. Each of the numbers sung by the co-stars and members of the supporting cast has a definite place in the story and advances or adds to the interest of the drama being enacted.

The cast includes, besides the stars, Frank Morgan, Charles Butterworth, Jean Harsholt, Vivienne Segal, Frank Conroy, Henry Arputta, Adreana D'Ambricourt and Joseph Cawthorn. The picture was directed by William K. Howard.

Thomas said the resignation would become effective with the selection of Mullen's successor and that he expected to call a meeting Mar. 17 for that purpose.
