The application calls for rebuilding the facility for use as a bank with drive-in facilities. 20 customer parking spaces, and six employee parking spaces. The property is on 1.135 acres of

Discrimination concerns raised

TALLAHASSEE, Fig. (AP) — A lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union and a black lawmaker have raised concerns with the way Gov. Lawton Chiles wants Florida to handle discrimination on the job, in housing and education.

The governor's proposal is still in draft version, but the primary idea of the plan seemed to worry both Rep. Willie Logan, an Opa-Locka Democrat who chairs the Legislature's black caucus, and Charles Carres, a Tallahassee attorney for the ACLU.

Under the system outlined by Chiles earlier this month, the Human Relations Commission would sort through discrimination cases and decide which ones have enough merit to be fought in court.

Indian chief endorses FSU nickname

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) - The chairman of the Seminole Tribe of Florida has endorsed Florida State University's use of the nickname "Seminoles," the university said.

"The word 'Seminole.' means 'untamed," Chief James E. Billie wrote in a letter to the school's alumni association Tuesday. "Nothing can hold them back. We are proud to be Seminoles, and we are proud of the Florida State University Seminoles. We are all winners."

He added, "I have often thought that a lot of people would like to be considered an 'Indian' or a 'Native American.' If they are not by birth, then they choose to utilize an American tribe or namesake that is indicative of their toughness."

In his letter, the tribal chief began, "I am Florida, I am Seminole and I am Unconquered," underlining the initial letters in Florida, Seminoles and Unconquered to spell out

"I am proud of all those who are, by birth or by choosing, a Seminole," he wrote.

Government waits to reorganize

By JACKIE MALLIPAX Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Lawmakers made It clear they think government reorganization should wait until their regular 60-day session in January, reserving a special weeklong session next month for budget-

"It's going to take longer than seven days to do this — that's what we're trying to tell you here today," Rep. Everest Kelly, D-Tavares, told Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay.

Kelly was echoing the comments of several other lawmakers at a Tuesday meeting of a special House reorganization committee.

The Legislature is set to convene a special session Dec. 10 in order to balance Piorida's $29 billion budget to meet a $622 million tax shortfall. Gov. Lawton Chiles also wants them to approve a number of substantial reorganization plans. Last week, Chiles unveiled a plan to revamp the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. The next day he and the Cabinet endorsed a plan to abolish two state agencies and substantially reshuffle responsibilities among others.

Also in the wings are plans to improve the state's career service system and fine-tune the process by which the state decides how much money it will raise and how it will spend it.

"The problem that the people of Florida have today is a government-operations kind of problem." MacKay said. "What we have called is a government-operations kind of special session." If lawmakers wait until the regular nession next year, the proposals will only get caught up with all the other issues that will be pending. MacKay said. One high-profile issue next year will be the redrawing of Florida's political boundaries in the wake of last year's census. Rep. James King, R-Jacksonville, ash MacKey whether any of the millions of dollars expected to be saved through the reorganization would be available to offset the immediate shortfall.

State may be owed millions over lottery

Accordated Press

TALLAHASSEE - The company that operates most of Florida's lottery games may owe the state millions of dollars for lost profits from computer failures during the past two years, lottery documents show.

The lottery hasn't collected damages from the company. Control Data Corp. of Min-neapolis, for more than 37 hours of computer failures since November 1989, though negotia-tions have been under way for months, according to lottery documents.

Under the company's contract with the lottery, more than $15 million could be assessed. The Tanipa Tribune reported today.

But since the computerized lottery games began in 1988 the damages have been charged at a significantly lower rate. Under one other estimate lottery officials made, the total amount of damages would top $1 million.

The damages are intended to ensure that Control Data doesn't allow the 7,500 terminals used for the Lotto, Cash 3. Play 4 and Fantasy 5 games to be out of service for long periods. The damages also allow the state to recoup profits that would have gone to help fund education.

George Haynic, a top deputy to Lottery Secretary Marcia Mann. said the lottery is receiving help from the Attorney General's office in its dispute with Control Date about the charges.

Longwood to hold art festival

By MCK PPEPAU Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD - One of the largest art festivals in Seminole County is coming up next weekend. It's the 1991 Longwood Arts and Craft Festival.

The two day event is sponsored by the Central Florida Society for Historic Preservation. On the weekend before Thanksgiving, for the past 14 years, the city has closed Warren and Church streets, near the City Hall, and turned the entire area into a Festival Chairman John Bistline com-mented, "We had an estimated turnout last year of at least 20,000 people, and maybe more. The festival grows larger each year.

As an example of the popularity of the annual Longwood festival, Bistline reported,

'We planned for 375 booths, and they were sold out some time ago." He added, "Even with the self-out, we have over 200 people on the waiting hot for booths, which will be contacted for next year's event."

Most of the displays will feature arts and crafts, with the two skills combined into one competition to be judged and announced during the event. In addition, food booths will be manned by the Longwood - Lake Mary Lions Club, Christ Episcopal Church, and the Longwood Womens Club.

According to Bistline, "The profits from this event will go to help support the Bradlee McIntyre House." The house, built in 1885, is in need of continuous restoration. "Insurance, repainting and repairs are continuous costs," Bistline said.

The event is scheduled from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 23 and 24. There is no charge for admission.

NASA says Atlantis may fly Sunday

By MARCIA DUM AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL - Space shuttle Atlantis could lift off as early as Sunday if all goes well with repairs to a rocket needed to boost a military spy satellite into an orbit high above Earth.

NASA says. NASA canceled Tuesday night's launch attempt after a navigation unit in the satellite rocket malfunctioned. Workers were about to start fueling the spaceship when the countdown was halted, nine hours before

The space agency said it hopes to replace the navigation unit with a spare in time for a 6:31 p.m. EST liftoff on Sunday.

The delay could last much longer is Atlantis is not off the ground by midweek. Budget-conscious NASA do-sn't want to have to pay the launch team hundreds of thousands of dollars in holiday pay for working over the Thanksgiving weekend, said William Lenoir, head of NASA's spaceflight program.

During the 10-day flight. Atlantis' six astronauts will deliver a $300 million satellite designed to warn of missile attacks and nuclear explosions.

After being released 224 miles above Earth, the satellite is to be propelled by the rocket into a 22,300-mile-high orbit.

A gyroscope and accelerometer in the rocket's guidance unit - one of five such sets - malfunctioned during testing Tuesday. Although just three pairs of instruments are needed for flight, NASA wants all to be working.

The $50 million booster rocket is made by Boeing Defense and Space Group near Seattle. Repairs to another such booster's navigation unit were also needed before a 1989 shuttle launch. said Hal DiRamio, a Boeing system manager.

The rocket has been used for nearly a decade to boost military and communications satellites and planetary probes.

Angry voters

There doesn't seem to be much doubt about the Nov. 5 message, particularly the message from Pennsylvania, where Democrat Harris Wofford pulled one of the more stunning upsets in recent political history.

It comes from profound anger among voters—about the economy, about the political establishment and about the inability and unwillingness of that establishment to respond. The country is hurting and government had better start paying attention.

The returns in the Pennsylvania Senate election have to be regarded as tribute to Wofford personally, an attractive candidate who seized on legitimate issues — and particularly on the need for an effective system of health insurance - to turn what had been a 44-point deficit just weeks before the election into a 10-point victory. All that despite the dirty campaign waged in the closing days by his Republican opponent, former U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh.

But the big loser was the administration itself, which had seemed far more concerned about foreign affairs than about the deterioration of life and the erosion of hope in America. President Bush, sensing the mood, had already canceled one foreign trip and says he understands.

"They're hurting out there," he said. "They're concerned about their livelihood."

It still sounded as if he were talking about the natives of some other continent, but something seemed to be getting through.

To its credit, the angry electorate also seemed to understand that there were ways of throwing the rascals out without turning the system upside down. In the state of Washington, the closely watched proposal to impose term limits on members of Congress went down 54 percent to 46 percent, in part because many voters seemed to understand the clout that House Speaker Tom Foley's incumbency gave the state.

At the same time, the voters of New Jersey, angry at the taxes enacted by Democrats 18 months ago and mobilized by a group of relentless radio talk shows, returned a veto-proof anti-tax Republican Legislature. That may not solve the state's problems - on the contrary, it probably will make them worse - but it leaves no doubt that angry voters can change a legislature without term

The next word has to come from the president, who said one of the messages here was not to raise taxes, and from Democrats who have yet to find the courage of their old convictions.

There are sharp contradictions in the voters' messages - between the demands for things like health care and rejection of taxes even for existing services. But there is plenty of opportunity for revising taxes - and spending - to make them more equitable and efficient, without raising them.

That was the core of what Harris Wolford had to say. And people are listening.

Duke McGovern's grandson?

If you just keep in mind that up is down, and down is up, for both Democrats and Republicans, you will understand what is going on in the presidential election campaign.

Consider the Democrats. It is likely that their solid victories over David Duke in Louisiana and Richard Thornburgh in Pennsylvania will reduce whatever chances they had to win. Yes, reduce.

For Democratis, good news is bad news.

For a generation, being liberal has meant never having to say you're sorry, and never saying sorry led to elitism and defeat.

In the 1980s, the liberal megaphone wing of the Democratic Party said, "law 'n' order' is a code word for racism," and that America suffers from "an approximate of newer" in the 1970s, as from "an arrogance of power." In the 1970s, as the Cold War moved into higher gear, liberals (including 1972 Democratic candidate George McGovern) called for massive American military cuts. Domestically, they said, "busing isn't a real

In the 1980s in Nicaragua, they comforted communists and compromised contras. They said, "Jesse Jackson is the conscience of the party." They said "Willie Horton" was demagoguery, not noticing that Hortoniam also showed a criminal justice system gone berserk.

In the 1990s, they opposed the Kuwait war even as the world and the U.S. public endorsed action. And this time, it was quotas that were not a real

That's now doubtful. Liberal Democrats, who still control the megaphone, feel liberated. The recovery from the recession has stuttered. Bush's popularity has sunk to mortal realms. Sen. Harris Wolford best Thornburgh, raising health care as a nice Democratic issue. And Gov.

Edwin Edwards beat Duke.

So liberals are thinking their yummiest thought — that they can be both vindicated and victorious. They will be neither because, transcribe they will be neither because, transcribe they will be neither because. celike, they will Bush-bash without retroactive-

He talked about crime, welfare and quotas legitimate social issues. He said Democrats don't understand such things. Liberals promptly proved his point by saying these weren't real issues, just "code words for race." They are both.

At a recent Democratic candidate show-and-tell, Sen. Paul Tsongas summed up liberal opinion this way: "David Duke is the son of George Bush."

Trouble for local governments

WASHINGTON - When President Bush recently visited his summer home in Kennebunkport, Me., he lamented the devastation an Atlantic storm had wreaked on his property and his neighbors. Had he returned four days later, he could have heard of the terrible damage wrought by the unrelenting recession which has struck the state he knows so well. "I see it every day," said one Mainer, "in the faces of friends and neighbors, whether it is the fear of a businessman who has never faced unemployment before, the millworker resigned to the fate suffered by co-workers or the hope-leasness of those who continue their fruitless search for a job." This was not Bush's least-loved Mainer. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell. speaking to some partisan Democratic crowd. It was Maine's Republican governor and loyal Bush supporter, John R. (Jock) McKernan Jr., explaining on Nov. 6 why he was proposing drastic cutbacks in government services-the layoff of one-fifth of state employees, a $50 million cut in aid to localities, elimination of the general masistance welfare program and abolition of 35 state agencies, including the Office of Volunteerism that coordinates Maine's version of Bush's favorite "Thousand Points of Light" program.

All this in a desperate effort to close a budget shortfall that has emerged just since July.

when McKernan furloughed all state employees for half the month in order to force through what he then hoped would be a solution.

The only consolation the governor could offer his beleaguered constituents is that similarly painful scenes are being enacted across the country from New England to California.

He is right. The most underreported story of this autumn is that state and local governments are running out of money, as the recession saps their revenues and drives up the mandated costs of social programs.

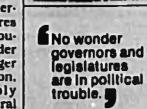

In California, the shortfall in the current budget looks like $2 billion to $3 billion. Gov. Pete Wilson (R), another Bush ally, has allowed about 30,000 jobs in state agencies to go unfilled and is trying to impose a 5 percent pay cut on those who remain. With welfare rolls up 12 percent, Wilson is talking about imposing a three-year waiting period before immigrants to California can collect any medical or income assistance. Again, this comes just months after the governor and legislature filled a $14 billion budget gap by a painful combination of tax hikes and service cuts.

Raymond Scheppach, executive director of the National Governors Association, says that almost one-third of the states are reworking budgets "they put to bed only a few months ago." At a recent briefing, Scheppach offered a succinct summary of what this recession has done to state efforts to meet balanced-budget

"In 1989-90," he said, "when growth began to slow, governors tried to maintain services. So they raised taxes about $10 billion. Then, because the economy didn't respond, they had to cut $7 billion from their planned 1991 spending.

"Now, they have gone back and raised another $15 billion-the highest amount ever in a single year. Together, that represents a negative swing of $32 billion in tax hikes and service cuts in a two-year period, in total state budgets of $264 billion.' No wonder governors and legislatures are in political trouble. And no wonder they turn in anger toward Washington, where incredibly enough, the federal government this year

The future for state and local officials could be worse, because the money they spend is increasingly going to the very people that middle-class taxpayers are loath to support-

Pork barrel leads to pricey defense

WASHINGTON - The national defense stockpile includes a cache of jewel bearings that would last 84 years in peace time. Most of them will never be used. Many are aircady. obsolete and a substantial portion of the stockpile cost the government more than it should have.

Yet the only plant in the United States that makes jewel bearings keeps churning them out, and the Pentagon keeps buying them, despite a recommendation from Defense Department auditors to shut down the plant and save $1.4 million a year.

This is "buy American" gone awry.
One of the goals of he defense stockpi is to have enough domestic sources of arms and equipment to wage a war without having to buy from foreign sources. That sometimes means the Pentagon prope up costly manufacturing plants and stockpiles material that will be out of date before it can ever be used. Since 1952, the William Langer Jewel Bearing Plant in Rolla, N.D., has served its country by producing bearings for use in everything from watches to gyroscopes. The prices were from five to 25 times higher than foreign suppliers charged for the same bearings bought in large lots. according to a Pentagon audit. But that was the price the Pentagon figured it had to pay for remaining self-sufficient in a crisis. Last year, auditors for the Defense Department inspector general found out that Langer wasn't all American. Since its inception, the plant has had to rely on foreign sources for some of its raw materials, defeating the purpose of having a completely domestic source of jewel bearings. Add to that the fact that jewel bearings are giving way to more modern digital systems. and there is a strong case to end the Pentagon's long relationship with Langer.

That could put 140 people, many of them American Indians, out of work, and the North Dakota congressional delegation tan't about to let that happen without a fight. Langer is heavily dependent on Uncle Sam as a customer. The plant has seen its sales to commercial clients drop off, but has continued to make bearings at more or less the same rate to maintain the various skills in the plant and feed the government stockpile, just in case.

The 1990 audit by the inspector general found that to cover the costs of this overproduction, the plant sold its bearings for many times the rate that foreign companies were charging for the same merchandise. Langer gives the Pentagon a 25 percent discount, but that still doesn't beat foreign

The auditors said if the Pentagon bought bearings in large lots from foreign suppliers. it could save $1.4 million annually. And more money could be saved if the Pentagon cut its appetite for bearings that it may never need. According to the auditors, the government is grossly overstocked. Some of the supplies were used during the Persian Gulf War, but there is still no shortage.

The case for keeping Langer affoat is almost indefensible, but not in North Dakota, where members of Congress have raised a stink about the auditors' recommendation. That stink reached the Pentagon. Our associate Dean Boyd has obtained an internal Pentagon memo written in March by an assistant defense secretary disputing all of the findings of the audit. In addition to any political pressure the Pentagon might be feeling, the military brass is firmly sold on the concept of an emergency stockpile that relies on domestic suppliers. The decision was to send the auditors back to the drawing board for another time-consuming study of Langer.

This is "buy American' gone awry.

Private money to reshape schools

TALLAHASSEE - The state and two private companies will work together to try to get some of the millions of dollars of grants offered by U.S. businesses trying to find a better way to teach children.

"This consortium, if you will, puts the state of Florida on the leading edge of educational reform in the United States," said Bob Dickhaus, a vice president with Johnson Controls World Services, a management services company whose clients have included NASA, IBM and AT&T.

The money is being put up by New American Schools Development Corp., a non-profit group funded by U.S. businesses who organized after national educational goals were passed last

"They're looking for bold, dramatic innovation and are willing to back that up with dollars - about $200 million over a five-year period," Education Commissioner Betty Castor

Castor announced a "collaborative relationship" with Education Alternatives Inc., which runs a public elementary school in Miami Beach, and Johnson.

"In their plan, the school or school district continues to be governed by a publicly elected school board, but it functions more like a public utilities board. setting overall policy and leaving implementation to the management team," Castor said.

David Bennett, president of Education Alternatives, said strong regulation by the government and management by private, for-profit businesses would result in more classroom teachers, fewer administrators and other non-classroom employees.

He also said there would be more textbooks, more computers, more programs, more choice in schools, a bigger community role and more involvement from parents and businesses.

The safeguard would be a greater emphasis on holding schools responsible and performance-based contracts worked out between the elected officials overseeing schools and the companies, Bennett said.

Dickhaus said his company could save schools between 10 percent and 20 percent of the money now spent on noneducational management such as building management, energy conservation, custodial work. food services, transportation and grounds keeping.

Most of that money would be directed to classrooms, he said. Bennett said his company would save money on the educational front, in part by using children's literature instead of more expensive texts and in part by paying "associate teachers" less.

Grant proposals must be ready by next February, Castor said. adding that the first step would be to find schools and school districts interested in finding partners and coming up with plans.

Each day for six months, Shirley Carter started work the same way — with a phone call to a fourth-grader in a poor San Diego neighborhood to make sure he got to school.

She'd let the phone ring until he woke up and answered. Then he'd get himself dressed and trudge off to school, his mother never awaking from the previous night's drinking.

"One morning something came up and I couldn't call, recalls Carter, a modern-day truant officer whose job and obsession is to keep troubled kids in school. "But he had gotten so used to me calling him. he got up anyway and came on

In neighborhoods scared by poverty, violence and neglect, just getting children to school is a victory. But once at school, these children are put at a further disadvantage by a system that produces an impoverished learning environment that matches the poor conditions at home.

Since school districts are financed primarily at the local level with property taxes, spending on schools can vary greatly between districts, even within the same district. The math is simple. Rich districts, with large tax bases, have ample money to spend on schools. Poor districts do not.

But the disparity in finances is not the only adversity that these children must overcome. Valuable teaching time must be spent addressing needs even more basic than an education: decent meals, clean clothes, a pair of shoes, a responsible spending between affluent and rural children.

Widening the gap even further is the inability of parents to pay for extras - like air conditioning - from their own pockets, the high cost of transporting kids in poor rural districts and the lingering effects of violence in and around the schools.

The economic disparities have fueled lawsuits in at least 20 states charging fundamental unfairness in educational opportunity because of the way school districts are financed. Others already have dealt with the problem.

Some experts suggest shifting away from local property taxes to broader sources such as state income taxes, or a more equal state redistribution of local property taxes.

Even so, the national education policy that's evolving in Washington - with its new goals and push for national standards - tends to overlook the disparities that make school districts inherently unable to be equal. In the federal government's deficit-dominated atmosphere, money or increased federal aid to close the gap are seldom mentioned.

"Nationally, the view is everyone should be educated." said Richard G. Salmon, a Virginia Tech professor who is an expert on public school flnances. "President Bush implies an itinerant teacher who made all education should be high quality, but when you look at different states, you see educastates.

Congress tries to salvage legislation

WASHINGTON — Congress is trying to salvage legislation pumping billions of dollars into protecting bank and savings institution depositors now that President Bush's bankingoverhaul proposals are all but dead.

It's clear ... that this legislation will not become law," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said Tuesday, shortly before senators finished — with little progress — a fourth day of debate.

The Senate bill would replenish the Federal Deposit

Insurance Corp. and sweep away 64-year-old legal barriers to full interstate banking.

But, with more than 40 amendments pending against the bill, many senators said they doubted Congress was capable of doing anything more than shoring up the FDIC with $70 billion in new taxpayer-backed borrowing authority and enacting some non-controversial changes in banking regulation.

Cranston makes final defense

WASHINGTON - Sen. Alan Cranston, under an ethics investigation for two years, is making one final defense against a committee's finding that he behaved improperly in his ties to former savings and loan owner Charles H. Keating Jr.

The California Democrat, now serving his 23rd year, said Tuesday night he "will be on the Senate floor" today to defend himself against an Ethica Committee rebuke that one Senate source called a "severe action."

The committee voted in closed session Tuesday night to rebuke Cranston, but the specifics of its report were not made public immediately.

Democrate lose abortien-related issue

WASHINGTON - Frustrated once again by President Bush's veto pen, congressional Democrats are confronting the reality that they can't achieve an override majority on an abortion-

The House voted 276-156 on Tuesday to overturn Bush's veto of a bill that would have lifted his ban on federally funded abortion counseling, but the count fell 12 votes of the two-thirds majority needed.

The defeat was a special setback for House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., who had raised expectations by saying he was optimistic that Bush would suffer his first veto override. The president's string of successful vetoes was extended to 24.

"We don't have two-thirds," said a dispirited Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., an abortion-rights advocate. "You've got to have two-thirds on everything. He (Bush) will sink any bill, no matter how big it is."

Release of more hostages imminent

WIESBADEN, Germany - Freed U.S. hostage Thomas Sutherland today was completing medical tests and debriefings before his journey home, while the U.N. chief announced an apparent breakthrough in arrangements for release of the remaining captives.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Tuesday in New York that for the first time, release of the remaining Western hostages in Lebanon would not be linked to Israel's detention of Arabs in south Lebanon or missing Israeli

"The key is that there are two different questions. They are not really interrelated." he told reporters.

With the linkage removed, he said, releases of more Western hostages are imminent. At least six Westerners are missing and believed held in Lebanon, including three Americans.

'Voluntary separation incentive' offered

WASHINGTON - Congress is giving the Pentagon a new tool for trimming its rosters: big bonus payments to military personnel who agree to quit the service early.

Officially it's called a "voluntary separation incentive." It's a way of showing the door, but nicely, to thousands of service members who otherwise would stay, so the Defense Department can meet its goals for shrinking the armed forces by one-fifth.

The plan is included, with other pay and benefit improvements, in the 1992 defense authorization bill that is expected to gain final congressional passage this week and be signed by President Bush. The House passed the legislation Monday.

The incentive plan will be offered to military members with more than six years of service on active duty but less than the 20 years needed to qualify for retirement.

World democracies offer help to Soviets

MOSCOW - The world's richest democracies are offering to help the Soviet Union make the painful and difficult switch to a market economy with a plan to lend $1 billion and defer more than $6 billion in interest payments.

Soviet officials and representatives of the Group of Seven nations - the United States, Canada, Japan, Germany. England. Italy and France — expected to reach final agreement on the plan today.

The visiting finance officials planned to meet today with Soviet President Mikhall S. Gorbachev before starting their third day of talks with republic leaders.

Appliances may be cancer risky

LOS ANGELES - Doctors found childhood leukemia may be linked to power lines, black-and-white televisions and hair dryers, and they say the study also casts suspicion on electric blankets, video games and other appliances.

The five-year, $1.7 million study was sponsored by the electric utility industry and conducted by Drs. Stephanie London. John Peters and others at the University of Southern California. It was published this month in the American Journal of Epidemiology.

The researchers called it the most comprehensive study yet on the possible but unproven health risks of electromagnetic fields, or EMFs - invisible force fields generated by power lines, appliances and everything electrical.

components of electromagnetic fields. Suspicion about possible cancer risks has focused primarily on magnetic fields.

"The current study adds some support to the hypothesis that electromagnetic fields increase childhood leukemia risk, but it doesn't resolve the controversy," said Peters, USC occupational health director.

The researchers compared 232 Los Angeles County children who got leukemia by age 11 and 232 who did not, and adjusted the results to account for other factors that might raise the risk of cancer.

The study's main conclusions, released in February, found that children who live close to high-voltage power lines may have twice the normal 1-in-20,000 chance of getting

Children who regularly watched black-and-white TV were 11/2 times more likely to have leukemia as kids who didn't watch. Those who used hair dryers were 2.8 times more likely to have the cancer as

Would-be Shriner alleges painful initiation rites

By PAULA PARRIEM Associated Press Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. - Michael G. Vaughan says he went to the Shrine temple to learn the secrets of the universe. What he learned, he says, is that the Shrine's initiation rites involve electric shocks and the humiliation of having one's underwear filled with strawberries and whipped cream.

Now his lawsuit against the fraternity has become cloaked in nearly as much secrecy as the rites themselves.

A judge has ordered all participants in the lawsuit not to divulge details of the case. The case file has been sealed. And only those directly involved with the lawsuit know when and where to meet for the trial Dec.

The lawsuit was filed last year by Vaughan, a 44-year-old brick mason who claims he was knocked unconscious and suffered other injuries during initiation rites in 1989 at the Oleika Shrine Temple in Lexington. He seeks an unspecified amount for medical bills, lost income and punitive damages.

Before District Judge George Barker issued a gag order last summer, Vaughan said in interviews that he wanted to become a Shriner because the group promised spiritual and emotional fulfillment

The Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine has about 725,000 members in the United States, Canada and Mexico. The group is renowned for its philanthropy: Its charitable foundation runs 19 orthopedie and three burn hospitals where needy children are treated free of charge.

But Shriners also are famous for their love of fun. Temples hold circuses and football games, and Shriners driving miniature cars and boats and wearing Arabian costumes. turbans and fezzes are familiar sights at parades across America.

"I assumed that the Shrine, as the word would imply, was like (God's) highest secret order. where a great secret would be learned once you got in." Vaughan said.

So, in 1989, he and about three dozen other initiates stood before an audience of Shriners and began a series of tests, which included walking on an electrified mat, sitting on an electrified bench and getting a jolt of electricity to their bare buttocks, the lawsuit says.

Turkeys suffer heart attacks?

By KELLY P. KISSEL Associated Press Writer

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. - It's not easy being a turkey. First there's the chopping block which is busier than ever this time of year - and then there's that big risk of heart attack.

Gobblers are being hooked up to heart monitors and getting turkey EKGs in an effort by scientists at Pennsylvania State University to learn why about 843,000 of the birds die annually of heart attacks.

The electrocardiograms are similar to the ones given to people but don't include the treadmill tests that humans are put through. In the case of the turkeys, their problem appears not to be the fear of winding up on someone's Thanksgiving table, but a condition called round heart syndrome. The affliction can be as deadly to the turkey grower's business as it is to the turkey. 'The incidence of round heart syndrome can be devastating to a producer, and because it increases the cost of production, it can increase the price for consumers," said poultry scientist Andrew G. Yersin.

Longwood honors a committee

Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD - The Longwood City Commission honored an out-going five member board Monday night. The Code Enforcement Review Commission has now concluded the work assigned to it early this year.

Certificates of Appreciation were awarded to Bob Davis. Barry Revels, Michael Kramer. Mary Huttner, and Don Delaney.
The committee was appointed to undertake a strenuous examination of Longwood's various codes and their methods of enforcement. The goal was to seek areas where improvements might be made that would be beneficial to the City, and make appropriate recommendations.

According to City Administrator Don Terry, "The Codes Enforcement Review Committee has accomplished a very important mission, responding to some of the questions raised regarding many issues."

The City Commission has already accepted the findings of the committee, and will be reviewing their reports as well as discussing the various recommendations during future meetings and workshops.

The certificates of appreciation, along with City recognition of the Longwood Police Department were among the first official acts of newly elected Longwood Mayor Adrienne

The recognition proclamation honored the Longwood Police Department for "their hard work and dedication to the annual Halloween Carnival, which has become an outstanding, well constructed holiday event giving the children and adults of the Community a great deal of enjoyment."

Police Chief Greg Manning accepted the award on behalf of his department. Manning said, "While we've had many people attend our previous carnivals, this year, we had the largest turnout ever of actual Longwood residents."

The carnival featured a haunted house for Halloween. The proceeds, after expenses estimated $1,200, which will be placed back into the general fund, and used to finance future functions of a similar nature.

Man credited with nabbing bank robbers

Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH - A Daytona Beach man is being credited with helping to capture a bank robbery suspect one day and then two more suspects in a bank holdup the following day.

Jack Emerson, a 45-year-old gas station owner, helped lead to the arrest of a suspected bank robber at a Barnett Bank on Monday, police said.

Then on Tuesday, Emerson was a customer at another Barnett branch, when it was robbed shortly after 10 a.m.

The robber entered the bank and handed a note to a teller demanding cash and stating he was armed. Emerson rushed out and chased the suspect and a man driving the get-away car until they were cornered and then captured by police.

"I really couldn't believe it." Emerson sald later Tuesday. "Because of what happened yesterday. I jokingly said to my daughter this morning: 'If I'm not back in 15 minutes, I'll be out chasing bank robbers."

But the story became even more bizarre when late Tuesday night Emerson himself became the victim of a robbery. A lone gunman entered his Daytona Amoco gas station and after threatening a female clerk with a semi-automatic pistol, stole nearly $420 from the register. Police have no suspects.

"I can't believe today," said Emerson, who was home trying to relax after his unusually active day when he got the call about the robbery.

It all began Monday afternoon, when Emerson was a customer at one branch of a Barnett Bank when it was robbed by a suspect later identified as Mark A. Frink.

Emerson and another witness. William Schermer, saw the direciton the robber ran and their help led to the arrest of Frink.

Lake Mary, Lyman sweep quarters in hoop jamboree

By BILL KERNS Herald Correspondent

SANFORD - If pre-season action proves anything, it's the value of experience. The six Seminole County public High Schools competed in the annual girls basketball jamboree Tuesday night in front of over 200 fans at Scininole's Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnashim, and none showed more than brief glimpses of their potential-This was a good learning experience," said Oviedolicad coach John Thomas, who voiced similar thoughts as other coaches. "We got an idea of what we need to concentrate on.

After Michelle Kumpf nailed a bucket 25 seconds later to give the Raiders a four-point advantage, the teams spent the next nine minutes trading baskets. Lake Howell graduate Elizabeth Mills scored consecutive baskets 90 seconds apart to help the Raiders open a little breathing room around the 10-minute mark.

The Raiders opened their largest margin of the game when Monique Hayes converted a pair of free throws and Brandy Friedemann netted her fifth field goal of the game to give SCC a 49-41 lead with 4:30 left in the game.

But that would be the last time the Raiders would score in the contest. Fortunately for them, the Hawks could only came up with a pair of baskets themselves (one a three-pointer) to cut the lead to three points. There were no points scored in the game's final 1:20.

Substituting butters

9. How do you substitute whipped butter for regular butter in recipes?

A. Whipped butter is regular butter whipped for easier spreading. Whipping increases the volume of butter by increasing the amount of air it contains. When using whipped butter in place of regular butter in recipes, use 1/2 to 1/2 more than the recipe calls for if the measurement is by volume. If the measurement is by weight. use the specified amount.

9. I had planned to serve hot apple cider as the appetizer, but I have noticed that apple juice is much cheaper in the store. What is the difference between the two products?

A. In the grocery store today. "apple juice," "apple cider," and "sweet cider," all refer to the same product. When you buy any of these in the store, you are really buying pasteurized apple juice. This apple drink may be slightly cloudy because some of the pulp is still in it, or it may be treated so that it becomes clear and sparkling. Since the apple juice and apple cider that you find in the store are all the same product, check their prices. You may find that you're paying more for one of the products.

At roadside stands, however, apple juice and apple cider may be different. At roadside stands they often sell "country cider" that may be produced in a farm mill setting. Country cider is a cloudy, unpasteurized form of apple juice that needs refrigeration. It may or may not be allowed to ferment to varying

Smokeout clears the way for smokers hoping to quit

LINDA S. HAASE, ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR OF COMMUNICATIONS ERICAN CANCER SOCI. ILLINOIS DIVISION

DEAR READERS: Tomorrow. Nov. 21, 1991, will mark the 15th Annual Great American Smokeout, a one-day campaign to encourage smokers to quit smoking for 24 hours, just to prove they can do it.

Last year, 19 million smokers tried to quit for the day. This represents 38 pecent of the nation's 50 million smokers. Breast cancer used to be the biggest killer for women. But the No. 1 cause of cancer death among women and men today is lung cancer. Tobacco claims one life every 23 seconds. An estimated 143,000 will die of lung cancer in 1991.

And now, a word about smoking-related diseases - emphysema, chronic bronchitis and heart disease: This year an estimated 434,000 will die from one of these. This total exceeds the number of U.S. battle deaths in World War II - nine times as many people who die in automobile accidents every year.

A congressional study has the adverse effects of smoking have reached a new high of $100 billion a year in increased medical bills and lost productivity.

cannot be measured. What about "secondhand" smoke? Is it damaging to nonsmokers to be in the presence of those of you who are smoking? Yes! One non-smoker dies of secondhand smoke for every eight smokers. And studies reveal that the children of smokers are more prone to lung problems and allergies than are children of non-smokers.

For years I have begged my young readers. "If you smoke. quit now. If you don't smoke. don't start!" Yet an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 kids light up for the first time every day. Why? Peer pressure, no doubt. Cigarette companies sell $1 billion of cigarettes to children each year. Quitting "cold turkey" is the hardest way to quit, but my readers tell me it's the most effective, and in the long run, the reported that health costs from , easiest. Those who need help to break their habit: Call your local chapter of the American Cancer Society or call (800) 227-2345 for Love, Abby information.

72-year-old male with high blood which I take Procardia daily. The book "Worst Pills, Best Pills" indicates people with aortic stenosis should not use this medication. What are your thoughts? should check this out with your doctor.

Aortic stenosis is a common affliction of the elderly (and some young people, too). It is marked by varying degrees of blockage of the aortic valve, which fails to open completely with each heartbeat. Mild aortic stenosis requires no treatment; more severe forms lead to heart weakness and overwork. necessitating surgical replace-ment of the affected valve.

Procardia (nifedipine) is an excellent drug for hypertension. It is widely prescribed and, in general, is safe. The manufacturer discourages the use of Procardia in patients with severe aortic stenosis because the drug may, in some instances, provoke heart failure (as well as other side effects). Nonetheless, it is appropriate therapy for high blood pressure in a patient with mild/moderate aortic stenosis. You should ask your doctor about this because, all things being equal, the drug is probably safe for you to use. I have prescribed it for several hypertensives with mild aortic stenosis; no patients have had difficulty.

Your comments about Procardia prompt me to make a statement about consumeroriented books, such as "Worst Pills, Best Pills." I encourage patients (and readers) to obtain whatever information they can about the drugs they are taking. An educated patient is a good patient. Ideally, such informa-tion should be supplied by the prescribing physician. But, as you all know, this doesn't always happen.

Consumer references can be valuable, but they must not be taken too literally. Every medi-

Alliances you form in the year ahead for purposes other than business should work fortunately for you. They could produce benefits money can't buy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Partnerships could be rather testy for you today. You might find an individual you're closely allied with to be far less cooperative than usual. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. 21) A self-imposed urgency to get things done today could cause you unnecessary complications. Relax: it won't hurt to leave the less significant for a later date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Guard against the inclination to blow things out of proportion today in your dealings with friends. Taking offense too easily could cause a serious rift.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's very important today that you share rewards fairly with those who help you achieve your objectives, be they material or intangible. If you don't, you may be sorry.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't put yourself in a position today that will enable another to manipulate you. This is a strong possibility — if you're not

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you are tired, don't get into complicated business negotiations today. Your thinking won't be at its sharpest, so wait until you're fresh and rested before entering the fray.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's best to be in total agreement with your mate today before making an important decision. If either party is unhappy with the arrangement, this issue could fester for a long time.

Delegating a critical task to others today might not be a good policy. You're likely to be either dissatisfied with the results or the way they went about obtaining them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If there is someone you've been bending over backward trying to please in the hope that this individual will like you, it's time to stop spinning your wheels. This person may not be worth the effort.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Both your temper and your image could be extremely fragile today. so be doubly careful how you react in public to negative developments.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you are going to kid others today, be prepared to be kidded in return. Don't let it be said that you can dish it out with the best of them but can't take it.
