

World's Military Budgets Co-Ordinated Defense Program

WASHINGTON, May 22.—(AP)—A committee of an industrial-military board to seek recommendations for the nation's vast rearmament effort was proposed by two Democratic senators yesterday in a bill introduced in the Senate. The bill would create a defense fund and special legislation.

The special legislation, providing for the creation of a new defense fund, and certain provisions for the defense fund, would be introduced by the Senate committee for formal action tomorrow. Committee members have already indicated informally that they would recommend its passage.

At the same time tomorrow the full Senate appropriations committee will consider the $1,274,000,000 army supply bill, which is a substantial increase over the $1,100,000,000 authorized last year. This measure, carrying the army's share of the extraordinary $1,100,000,000 defense fund asked by President Roosevelt, is expected to pass the Senate by Thursday.

The appointment of industrial-military representatives and army and navy officials to a board charged with co-ordinating the production of war equipment was advocated by Senator Connally, Democratic, Texas. Both the measure of the Senate for arm reduction and financial expansion and the measure for arm reduction and financial expansion.

George Connally said that he favors a tremendous expansion and an immense technical effort in carrying out the extraordinary defense program.

Military Budgets Of All Nations Near 40 Billions

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
WASHINGTON, May 22.—

Take the military defense budgets of the nations of the world from 1932 through 1940, and add 'em together. Call that the thermometer of defense materials.

Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the war industries board of World War days, conferred with President Roosevelt yesterday. He said afterward that there was no discussion of reviving this board.

While co-ordination of the defense program was being discussed by the Democratic senators, representatives of more than 40 leading manufacturers of airplanes and engines headed for Washington to discuss with government officials Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion that the country's war plane production be increased to 10,000 planes a year.

They will meet today with officials of the army, navy, treasury and other government departments. Well-informed persons said that means to hasten completion of planes which Britain and France have ordered would figure prominently in the conference. The feasibility of turning over to the Allies new planes manufactured for the army probably would be considered also, it was predicted.

A movement was under way in the House, meanwhile, to confer upon the President the power to suspend operation of the Walsh-Healey government contracts act with respect to contracts for construction of warships.

of the world's military budgets, the 1940 figure was $38,000,000,000. That was the highest ever. Unfortunately you can only make estimates there, for the Nazis publish no budget. But estimates of various nations who have observed military activities in Germany at first hand in the last year or so, and many other estimates, figure that at least 60 percent of the national income of the German people is going to arm the country. They estimated that at $12,000,000,000 a year for billings.

No wonder they're making the Allies look slow and cumbersome. For the people in the Allied countries aren't spending near that much—yet. The "London Economist" estimates that British war expenditures for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1946, at $7,122,000,000, and the French military spending is carried on the official national budget at $4,000,000,000—only a little over twice as well over 40 billion of dollars. Germany is the biggest spender. Unfortunately you can only make estimates there, for the Nazis publish no budget. But estimates of various nations who have observed military activities in Germany at first hand in the last year or so, and many other estimates, figure that at least 60 percent of the national income of the German people is going to arm the country. $12,000,000,000, all told. And they're "over" spending at that rate since last September, while Germany has been spending at the 15 billion dollar level at least three years.

Then there's that old bear, Russia. She confuses the world that she's spending $11,400,000,000 this year, almost as much as the Allies.

All of which means that war not only costs $100, but the fellow who spends the most seems to get the most advantage. Lastways, Germany and Russia are the only victors so far.

The Allies are going to have to sink a lot more money and manpower into war machinery if the headlines from Europe mean anything.

Art Objects Are Removed In Secrecy

Priceless Paintings, Other Works, Are Spirited Away From Brussels Museum

PARIS, May 24.—(AP)—Thirty truckloads of art treasures, including paintings by Rubens, Rembrandt and Van Dyck, are being spirited away from Brussels during the German invasion.

The priceless treasures were taken from the Brussels museum, and placed in trucks which set out for France over the bombed, refugee-tangled roads of Belgium.

They departed before the fall of the Belgian capital.

Loss Of Boulogne Is Admitted By English; Masses Of Infantry Hurled On Germans

Hitler's Legions Win More Ground

Paris Reports Say Mechanized Forces Lack Fuel Supplies

Allied artillery raked advancing German armored columns with a devastating cross-fire in the battle of Flanders today as other Nazi legions struck at the "gates of Calais"—only 23 miles from Dover, England—and captured the strategic French seaport of Boulogne.

With mastery of the channel at stake, the Allies hurled masses of infantry against the German salient at the bottleneck between Cambrai and the River Somme.

It was the first time that the two branches of service in which the Allies claim superiority, the infantry and artillery, were thrown into a full-scale battle.

The German's capture of Boulogne was admitted in London. The sweeping Nazi move to the sea, preliminary to the so-called invasion of England, was gained in two days' fighting.
