America's teacher of the year

WASHINGTON — A formerly illiterate high school dropout from Detroit was in for a presidential tribute today as America's teacher of the year.

Thomas A. Fleming, 59, who now teaches history, government and geography at a juvenile detention center in Ann Arbor, Mich., was to receive a crystal apple from President Bush in ceremonies at the White House.

"It's miraculous to come as far as I've come," said Fleming, who in 1960 still couldn't read and write as a 17-year-old running with a tough crowd in inner-city Detroit.

Today, Fleming has a master's degree in special education and has spent 20 years at his job in the one-room schoolhouse at the Washtenaw County juvenile detention center.

His students, who are from 12 to 16 years of age, spend anywhere from a week to several months at the facility while their cases wind their way through juvenile court. In one year, he and two co-workers see over 200 students.

Hawaii's blue about Elvis stamp

HONOLULU — Hawaii's blue over a shortage of ballots for the Elvis Presley postage stamp.

"There just aren't enough of them to go around," said Felice Cook, spokeswoman for the U.S. Postal Service. "What we did ... was go ahead and print up another 10,000 of our own."

The state's 10,000 official ballots were given out before noon Monday, the first day of voting. Fans nationwide are choosing between two likenesses: fresh-faced Memphis rocker or bespangled Las Vegas star.

Five million ballots — showing each choice — were distributed to post offices across the country.

Hawaii's homemade ballots lack the pictures, but voters can peruse the Elvis options on a poster, said clerk James Aarons.

"At least, I think the poster is still there — somebody may have taken it by now," he said. Postal clerk Marilyn Masuda helped fans by pre-addressing post cards and marking them with "A or B (circle one)."

"I'm typing as fast as I can," she said. Voting ends April 24, and the results are expected this summer. The 29-cent stamp, part of a series featuring giants of American music, is due out next year.

Presley, who died in 1977 at age 42, had a movie and hit record called "Blue Hawaii."

SANFORD — A rosy but cautious picture was painted regarding economic improvements in Sanford today. Dr. David F. Scott, Jr., addressed the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Bankers Committee this morning.

Davis, executive director of the Dr. Phillips Institute for the Study of American Business Activity, addressed the future of both the national and local economy. "We're on the verge of doing something extra here in Central Florida," he predicted.

To back his belief, he referred to recent increases in taxable sales, hotel reservations and airline accommodations in the tri-county area of Seminole, Orange and Osceola.

He cautioned however, "The big need now is for people to be able to borrow money from the banks, and be willing to take a risk at developing new business and industry." He admitted, "With the current banking situations in the nation, this has not been easy."

He added, "The economic problems in our nation are not the fault of our President or the Supreme Court. But consider the leadership of the banking industry."

While he did not specifically place blame on the industry, he observed, "Keep in mind, the Federal Reserve System, which governs all of the economic flow of the nation, is a select group, with not one member being elected by the people."

City favors new garbage rules; residents yet to have their say

LONGWOOD — A contract extension with IWS refuse company passed on first reading last night. Public input is expected to decide the vote on the second reading.

A new contract proposed for Longwood refuse collections would return to two, the number of weekly household trash collections. Pickups have recently been one each for household garbage, recyclables and yard trash.

The Longwood City Commission heard from a number of citizens last night, as well as officials from Industrial Waste Services. The citizens expressed both support and objections to the new contract. It would increase the monthly charge by 89 cents.

Earlier in the meeting, Marvin Meltzer had objected to the contract. "You decided to have a survey regarding the garbage issue," he commented, "and we told you we weren't satisfied with it," Meltzer added. "In that survey, 488 people said they were dissatisfied. What do we need to do to get our voices heard?"

Meltzer strongly suggested the matter be put out for bidding rather than accept the proposal from IWS. "It's time the Commission started to look into your own thoughts," he said. "You owe it to the citizens of Longwood. Let them be heard."

Nadine Tolos took the other side however. "I wasn't completely satisfied with IWS when they first started taking care of Longwood," she said, "but now they know all the routes, they don't speed, and they watch out for the children."

She added, "Last Christmas and New Years when two pickups were cut, were the only times we really had problems. Other than that, there haven't been many others, and I'm happy with the way things are."

Tolos suggested, "Let's get this 2-1-1 pickup

Exclusive Sanford-area development seeks environmental exclusion

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Developers of the exclusive Lake Forest development west of Sanford are asking the state to "Give us a break" from environmental requirements.

Lake Forest developers Orlando Lake Forest Joint Venture have been led to request an additional dredge and fill permit from the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation as the result of new wetlands found on the site. In an application currently under review by state agencies, the developers have asked to be excused from additional wetlands replacement requirements.

In return for destroying or altering about 100 acres of wetlands on the 529-acre Lake Forest site west of Interstate 4, Orlando Orlando Lake Forest has agreed to several "mitigation" plans.

The developers have already decided 1,250 acres of wetlands south of the confluence of the Wekiva and Little Wekiva Rivers to the St. Johns River Water Management Agency, placed a protection easement on an adjacent 700 acres, protected about 44 acres of Lake Forest wetlands and created a 14-acre wetlands around the man-made lake in the development.

The new wetlands were discovered after the Central Florida Wetlands Society filed a complaint against FDER last year charging the agency is too lax in protecting area wetlands. The complaint was filed after a special FDER wetlands team visited Lake Forest in August 1991 and found a connection to Smith Canal which meant 121 acres of wetlands in Lake Forest were within the regulatory jurisdiction of the state.

The state had claimed no previous jurisdiction over the heavily-wooded site because no connections had been discovered. The water district

UF working to develop cancer center

GAINESVILLE — The University of Florida will be working over the next three years to develop a Comprehensive Cancer Center.

Planning for the major center for cancer patients, research and education will begin June 1, supported by a $525,000 grant from the National Cancer Institute, U.S. Sen. Connie Mack said Monday.

The NCI grant will enable cancer specialists at the UF Health Science Center, its College of Medicine and affiliated hospitals and clinics, and cancer researchers from other UF colleges to create a campus-wide program.

About 200 scientists and health-care professionals already are involved in cancer-related research and patient-care activities on the campus.

Environmentalists protest incinerator

FORT LAUDERDALE — About two dozen environmental activists blocked the entrance to a south Broward County garbage incinerator to call attention to mercury poisoning and urge a moratorium on any new facilities.

Twelve people were arrested Monday, most on charges of trespassing after warning. Attorney Mark Gordon was arrested on charges of obstruction of justice and simple battery on an officer.

For about three hours, protesters chained themselves together and hoisted a wooden sign reading "Save The Glades, Ban The Burn" at the main gate to the Wheelabrator Technologies Inc. plant near Davie.

A plant spokesman acknowledged some mercury is being released from the smokestacks, but much less than the protesters claim.

Woman sentenced in torture slaying

MIAMI — A woman who pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in the torture slaying of "Baby Lollipops" was sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Olivia Gonzalez, 27, had made a plea bargain with prosecutors and testified against her former lover, Ana Cardona, about the 1990 death of Cardona's 3-year-old son, Lazaro Figueroa.

"It's the court's opinion that you received a better deal from the state than you probably deserved," Circuit Judge David L. Tobin told Ms. Gonzalez at Monday's hearing.

Last week, Tobin sentenced Ms. Cardona to death in Florida's electric chair after she was convicted of first-degree murder in the child's slaying.

Man sentenced in wife's strangling

WEST PALM BEACH — A Boca Raton man who confessed to police that he strangled his wife "until she was blue" was sentenced to 22 years in prison for her death.

Michael Moringo, a 33-year-old landscaper, said during a videotaped confession to police that crack cocaine caused him to snap and kill his wife, Brenda, last August.

He said he put her body in a closet and then sat down to smoke the drug.

"At first, I thought about all kinds of creative things to do, hide her and all that," Moringo said on the confession tape. "But then I got straight and I thought, 'I've got two kids. They don't need a dad like that.'"

Navy to teach values to recruits

Associated Press

PENSACOLA — The Navy plans to use un-traditional methods to teach sailors traditional values once left to family, school and church.

Rap-sessions, role-playing and group discussions are some of the methods being considered in an effort to get the message across. Facilitators rather than lecturers will do the teaching.

The training is a reaction to highly publicized cases of sexual harassment, violence and racism in the ranks.

"The military's just a microcosm of the civilian sector," said Cmdr. Berry Black, education management chaplain for the Navy-wide command. "We've got teen-age pregnancies. We've got gang violence."

The aim is to reinforce honesty, honor, responsibility, competence, teamwork, loyalty, concern for people, patriotism and courage, said Capt. Chuck Kicker, director of training.

"Core values establish an environment in which people can work to their maximum potential, free of bigotry and harassment, with a healthy sense of mutual respect for those around them," said Vice Adm. Jack Fetterman, chief of naval education and training.

Fetterman's command, based at Pensacola Naval Air Station, has spent months surveying values taught in the Navy, and deciding how to improve and expand those efforts, the Pensacola News Journal reported Monday.

The need for value training is readily apparent at the Navy boot camp in San Diego, Black said.

"A lot of the fellows come straight from Los Angeles and they were members of the Crips, members of the various gangs and their values certainly had to be worked on," he said.

Retired judge to oversee redistricting

By CURT ANDERSON Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A federal court chose a retired federal judge with a civil rights background to oversee its congressional and legislative redistricting effort as state lawmakers remained at impasse on the maps.

C. Clyde Atkins, 77, was given the task Monday of recommending a redistricting plan by May 15 while Florida legislators went into their fourth month of formal discussions on the matter without agreement on new boundaries.

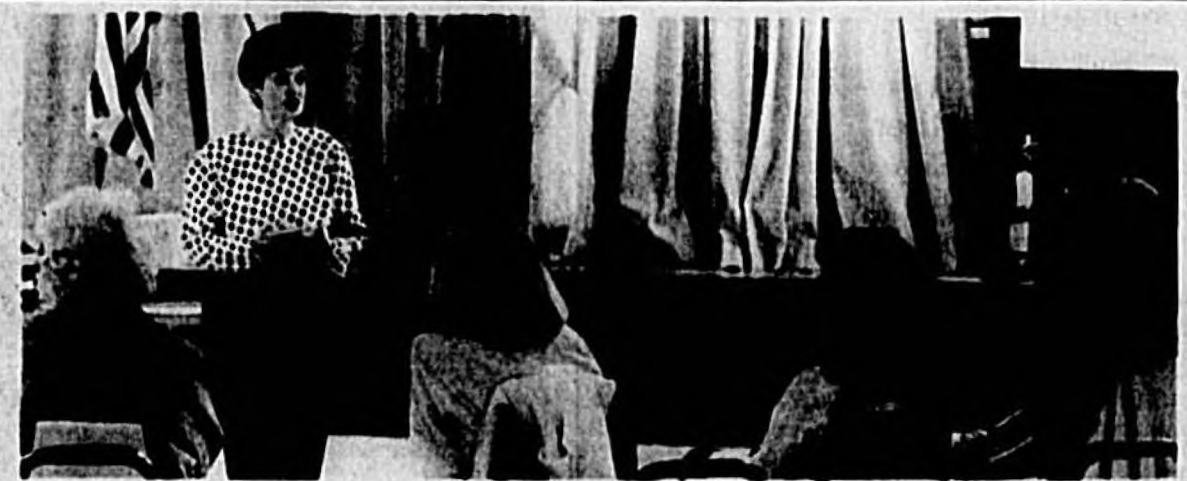

He was named by a panel of three federal judges, who ruled on a Republican suit last month to adopt a plan for the 160 legislative districts by May 29. Any legislative proposals must be submitted by April 17.

The appointment was immediately praised by Democrats and Republicans.

"You couldn't make a better decision," said state Rep. Daryl Jones, a Miami Democrat who clerked for another federal judge and is an associate of Atkins' clerks. "He'll do a very fair job. He'll be totally unbiased about this."

During his years on the bench, Atkins built a record praised by civil rights leaders in 1989 the

Southern Bell workers claim customer records destroyed

Associated Press

MIAMI — Former Southern Bell employees are accusing Southern Bell of purposely destroying records of overcharges and shortchanging customers on wire-maintenance plan refunds.

The accusations against the phone company were made by former Southern Bell employees in sworn statements that are part of a pending class-action lawsuit in federal court in Miami.

The suit against Southern Bell was filed by four Dade County residents in 1989. The company already has admitted that 34,000 customers were wrongly charged for a plan where customers are not billed for repairs if something goes wrong with wiring inside the home. Refunds totalling $700,000 were made.

Former Bell employees, however, contend they participated in 1990 and 1991 in a project to eliminate records of the overcharges or failed to give maintenance-plan customers the refunds they were supposed to get, the newspaper said.

"I've come to the conclusion that not everybody received the refund money that was due them," Jerome Hoffman, an assistant attorney general involved in the probe, told The Miami Herald for a story in Monday editions.

Sex change

Sheriff's mechanic by day: 'I just want to be a woman'

Associated Press

TAMPA — During the day, Timothy Wisler is just another grease-stained mechanic.

But when he goes home, he wears dresses and high heels, takes hormone injections and makes plans to one day have a sex-change operation.

"I just want to be a woman," said the 38-year-old Hillsborough County sheriff's office fleet mechanic. "Ten years from now I don't want to be a man at work and a woman at home. I'm a woman. Period."

To his surprise, most of his co-workers and the deputies who bring their cars in to be fixed treat him well. "You go into work, get a slap on the back and do your job."

Wisler said one of his worst fears was overcome two years ago when he decided to share his secret with his 17-year-old son Danny.

"I was scared to death. I figured he say, 'You're crazy, Dad,' and just leave. He didn't," said Wisler. "We don't even talk about it anymore. That's just the way it is."

"I go home, take a shower and put on a dress. We go to the store or wherever, and he's with me. It's nothing to us anymore."

His son still calls him Dad. One day, he said, his son will call him Tina. "But behind closed doors, if he wants to call me Dad, that's between us. I am still his father."

Nancy J. Simons, his Clearwater psychologist for the past two years, said Wisler has endured an internal struggle and she supports his decision to go public.

"He is a woman trapped in a man's body," Ms. Simons said. "He feels like he's living a lie. He continues to put on a facade of being a man when he really feels like a woman."

Weekly hormone injections have given him breasts, smoothed and fattened his face. Electrolysis has erased most of his beard, and a perm has thickened his long hair, which he sometimes ties in a ponytail.

Two months ago he began taking steps to make the transformation more apparent.

Wisler began wearing perfume to work, then graduated to lip gloss, nail polish and earrings. It had to be gradual. With the electrolysis not completed, nail polish and a 5 o'clock shadow didn't mix, he said.

Today, Wisler wears gloves at work to protect his long nails. "I don't want grease marks under my nails."

In a year or two, Wisler wants to go to Belgium, where doctors will remove his male sex organs and create those of a female. The surgery will cost $4,000, which he, not his county insurance, will cover.

Fact-filled election hotline open to voters

By BILL BERSTROM Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — An election hotline designed to let voters base their choices on substance rather than sound bites opened Monday in Florida.

The Center for National Independence in Politics, which counts former presidents Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter as honorary co-founders, wants people to treat candidates as hired help, director Richard Kimball said.

"These elections are their applications for employment," Kimball told a news conference.

But he said promotional technology floods voters with slick television spots and negative attacks, reduces complicated issues to one-line solutions, and hides candidates' real qualifications.

"Operation Vote Smart," a giant computer data bank people can reach by telephone, will give voters a defense against campaign fluff, Kimball said.

Callers can get biographical information on candidates, their voting records and sources of money, and evaluations by more than 50 special interest groups with competing points of view.

The non-partisan center, which doesn't endorse or lobby for any cause, started taking calls from Florida on Monday.

Florida voters can reach the center at 1-800-786-6885 or 1-900-786-6885.

Gardner criticizes news media

By GUYT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The Senate's budget committee chairman contends that Florida's news media used a double standard on free trips taken by legislators in the 1980s.

Sen. Winston "Bud" Gardner, D-Titusville — who represents much of Seminole County — said some newspapers during the 1980s fully supported — or at least did not criticize — certain all-expense-paid junkets.

"I didn't say it made it right or anything else," Gardner said at a news conference Monday. "It was the accepted norm that they be taken."

Gardner is one of the 24 current and former lawmakers who pleaded no contest last year to misdemeanor charges of failing to disclose free trips taken courtesy of lobbyists. Gardner is the only one, however, who also appealed to challenge whether a trip had to be disclosed.

Last week, the investigative files of State Attorney Willie

Meggs were made public, prompting another round of stories detailing the lavish, fun-filled trips lawmakers took to exotic locales with lobbyists who seek to influence them.

At his news conference, Gardner distributed copies of news stories that appeared in February 1987 promoting a "legislative appreciation weekend" in Brevard County featuring deep-sea fishing, golf, a cookout and a seafood festival. Editorials locally heaped praise on lawmakers for their interest in Brevard County.

That support, Gardner contended, "at least contributed to the attitude that they (the trips) were not unethical but rather accepted and even encouraged as the norm."

Other well-publicized trips included the annual legislative weekend at Walt Disney World and at least one to Immokalee courtesy of U.S. Sugar Corp. All of these were usually disclosed by lawmakers.

The trips funded by other special-interest lobbyists were, in principle, no different, Gardner said. The difference is that they are viewed in a bad light by newspaper editorial boards, he argued.

"They are absolutely no different," Gardner said. "They were accepted as the norm."

Gardner said he did report any trip "when I was provided financial information from the host." He was charged with not reporting three trips — one to the Bahamas to fish, one to Georgia to hunt and a third to a college football game.

The Legislature changed state law after Meggs' investigation to prohibit acceptance of gifts worth more than $100 and require disclosure of those over $25. Before 1991, the law required reporting of gifts over $100, but Gardner disputes whether trips were actually gifts.

Cops' vote on union moved to April 23

SANFORD — A vote for Sanford police officers to decide whether to form a union has been tentatively rescheduled for April 23.

A previously-set April 2 date passed without a vote last week. Dorothy Green, hearing officer for the Sanford Public Employees Relations Commission said the city and two unions vying for representation rights failed to reach an agreement on the election until March 23, which was too close to the April 2 date to formally notify all the parties about the election.

Green said the city's PERC authorized the election April 2. The parties have tentatively agreed on the April 23 date, said Green. She said there are no obstacles to that date.

Sanford police have sought a union for over a year. Officers cited promotion favoritism and poor treatment among the leading reasons for the union drive. Although officers sought to organize under the Fraternal Order of Police, the Police Benevolent Association has requested to be considered on the ballot.

Law reform

Vice President Dan Quayle provoked fury within the ranks of the American Bar Association when he asserted that America suffers from a glut of lawyers, a plethora of lawsuits and excessive damage awards in liability cases. He backed up his criticism with a worthwhile agenda for civil justice reform.

Now the bar association has struck back with its own blueprint for improving the civil justice system. Not surprisingly, the ABA's proposals differ markedly from those offered by the vice president.

Quayle identified five areas requiring major reforms: discovery, punitive damages, legal fees, expert evidence and voluntary dispute resolution. The White House Council on Competitiveness, which Quayle chairs, developed 50 specific recommendations addressing problems in each area.

Among other suggestions, the panel proposed expediting the discovery process, which is the pretrial investigation of the facts of a case. Discovery now consumes 80 percent of the time and cost of the average lawsuit. The council wants to reduce this burden by requiring litigants to disclose "basic, core" information.

The council also wants to permit punitive damages only in cases of "egregious conduct" and only in amounts equal to a plaintiff's actual damages; to adopt a modified "English Rule," whereby losing litigants would pay the winner's legal fees; to require that testimony from expert witnesses be based on "widely accepted" theories; and to provide plaintiffs with an alternative to going to court, such as mediation or arbitration.

The ABA essentially dismissed these proposals. "The council agenda is too narrow and in its current form will have no real impact on justice in America," the lawyers' association said in its own 180-page report.

The ABA claims its blueprint for improving civil justice is "a bold departure" from the proposals offered by Quayle. Yet the lawyers are hardly bold about discovery, for instance. "The ABA supports the concept of limiting discovery, but opposes rigid limits," according to the report.

The organization is similarly timid about establishing reasonable limits on the amounts of punitive damage awards. Over the last 15 years, the number of million-dollar liability judgments has nearly doubled. This is due largely to the increasing willingness of juries to impose large punitive damages. Nevertheless, the ABA "opposes a ceiling on punitive damages."

As to proposed reforms concerning expert evidence and the "loser pays" rule for attorneys' fees, the ABA has not adopted a policy. Because the lawyers have not decided where they stand on these two major issues, the ABA's blueprint ignores them.

The bar association does not believe that discovery or punitive damages or expert evidence or attorneys' fees are the most important issues of civil justice reform. The most important, the ABA asserts, is "access to justice." To improve access, particularly for lower-income Americans, the ABA suggests a substantial increase in funding for the federal Legal Services Corporation. It also urges improvement of federal and state tax treatment of prepaid legal-services plans.

Of course, if these two proposals were adopted, it would mean that even more lawsuits would be filed in federal and state courts. Thus it's hard to comprehend how this would help the already overburdened civil justice system.

In contrast to the ABA's agenda, Quayle's proposals would do much to reduce costs and delays in the system, while preserving the right of citizens to seek legal redress. Lawmakers cannot continue to ignore the deterioration of America's civil justice system. Fundamental reforms of the sort put forth by Quayle are needed now.

Whom would Perot hurt the most?

Let's stick with the subject of H. Ross Perot and the likely effect of his candidacy on this year's presidential race.

As I recently pointed out, if Perot gets on the ballot in enough states to matter (which is likely, though not certain), and then stays the course and carries out his threat to spend a hundred million of his own dollars on the campaign (roughly what Bush and Clinton will spend combined), he can unquestionably have a major effect on the outcome.

That is far from saying, however, that he can win. Such a result is almost inconceivable, and fortunately so. As soon as his campaign gets seriously under way, just for one thing, the media will start going over his life history with a ferocity that will amaze Mr. Perot. By November, it's safe to say, his halo will be in considerable disarray.

Then too, he will be forced to take stands on all the issues of the day, including the really tough ones, and that thudding sound will be one big voting bloc after another jumping off his bandwagon. He can write off the anti-abortion bloc and the anti-gun control voters just for starters, having already offended both.

I said his election, though happily unlikely, would be unfortunate, because Perot, assuming office without a party of his own in control of Congress, would quickly discover that there is remarkably little he can do without the consent of lifelong politicians who care nothing at all about his wishes, let alone his best interests. The result would be a four-year disaster.

Nevertheless, Perot's candidacy would be bound to affect the campaign, and quite possibly its outcome. George Wallace in 1968 got 13 percent of the votes, and John Anderson in 1980 got 6 percent. Let's compromise and say Perot gets 10 percent. Whom would those voters otherwise have supported — Bush or Clinton (assuming it's Clinton)?

I suppose that in the beginning most of them would tend to be drawn from Bush. After all, Perot is a businessman, and apparently a good one; he would be bound to appeal, at least at first glance, to other businessmen and those friendly to business interests — people who lean toward the Republican Party.

In addition, Perot is identified with quasi-military bravura and derring-do — witness his successful rescue of two of his employees from one of the Ayatollah Khomeini's prisons, and his selection of Admiral James Stockdale (a longtime prisoner in Vietnam, a Medal of Honor winner and a true American hero) as his at least temporary vice presidential running-mate. That should appeal to a great many no-nonsense, pro-military types — mostly Republicans, again.

On the other hand, much of what little we know about Perot's opinions — his pro-choice and pro-gun control positions, for example — tilts sharply in the other direction, and would be likely to appeal to voters that Gov. Clinton will badly need.

My guess, therefore (and I freely admit it's only a guess), is that Perot will start out by pulling more heavily from potential Bush supporters, but lose most of these relatively sensible people in the course of the campaign and wind up keeping Clinton busy trying to hang on to various Democratic voters eager to get hooked on a new brand of snake oil.

By November, his halo will be in disarray.

Flat tax: Old wine, new bottle

WASHINGTON — Jerry Brown's flat tax plan is nothing new. Plans like it have been debated, and usually quickly rejected, for more than two decades. Moreover, Brown's version is even less likely to succeed than past proposals.

Simply put, a "gross tax," or flat tax as it has become known, applies the same tax rate to all taxpayers regardless of income level. It taxes almost all income, from whatever source, while allowing few, if any, deductions.

For years, a "Gross Income Tax" (GIT) plan was pushed in a one-man crusade by retired Texas businessman Jim Jones. For a decade, Jones worked the halls of Congress, insisting that his idea would return fairness and simplicity to the tax system.

The key to his GIT plan, said Jones, was that the tax rate could be kept very low — between 2 percent and 4 percent — because the tax base would be vastly broadened by eliminating deductions. (Remember that, in the 1970s, at the time Jones' plan was being debated, everyone believed the rich were actually paying little or no taxes because a high percentage of their income could be sheltered using myriad loopholes in the tax system.)

The plan never received a serious hearing because all the special interests that depended upon tax-deductible revenue — everything from the housing industry to organized medicine to churches and charities, to state and local governments dependent upon low-interest bond income — instantly opposed it.

Additionally, figures coming from the Internal Revenue Service showed that, despite the public perception, the wealthy were not able to shelter anywhere near all their income, and that under the plan the tax bases would not be increased all that much. The result would be that the government would go broke on a 2 percent to 4 percent tax rate.

When the supply-side economists rushed to Washington with the new Reagan administration, the flat-tax idea was born again. Various conservatives pushed flat-tax measures, including Sen. Jesse Helms R-N.C. (at a 10 percent tax rate), Rep. Phil Crane R-Ill. (at 14 percent) and Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind. (a three-level plan at zero, 18 percent and 25 percent, depending upon income).

But the most comprehensive flat-tax plan was advanced by two Hoover Institute economists, Robert Hall and Alvin Rabushka. Their somewhat complex plan had a list of items that would be non-taxable as income — including Social Security income, government bond income, public assistance income and capital gains on certain investments. It left deductible things like home mortgage interest, large medical expenses in any year, child care and the like.

To pay for the income that would be lost from allowing these exceptions and deductions, Hall-Rabushka set their tax rate at a higher 19 percent.

The proposal got a long look in Congress. According to the best estimates of the Joint Committee on Taxation, under the Hall-Rabushka plan taxes on people earning between $20,000 and $30,000 annually would increase 9.3 percent a year, while taxes on those earning in excess of $100,000 annually would decrease by 23.1 percent.

(A study done for Newspaper Enterprise Association by a Houston tax attorney based on actual returns he was filing for 10 clients with incomes ranging from $500,000 to over $8 million showed decreases of between 28 percent to almost 60 percent.)

In the end, over a three-year period, Congress decided to go a different route. In several tax bills, most noticeably the 1986 Tax Reform Act, Congress lowered the highest tax rate, but also sharply reduced or eliminated most of the loopholes and deductions that allowed the rich to shelter a high percentage of their incomes.

Today, with fewer deductions allowed, there is less rationale for a flat tax than there was a decade ago. Jerry Brown asserts that those earning over $100,000 annually would actually pay more under a system eliminating deductions. This assumes that the rich are still somehow able to hide large percentages of their incomes from taxation. The IRS and most tax accountants today disagree. The IRS says the rich are now paying an average rate 22.2 percent, after figuring what percentage of their incomes are being sheltered or taxed at preferential rates. Obviously, a 13 percent rate would be a windfall for them.

Citizens For Tax Justice, a labor-backed think tank that has fought the flat tax idea for a decade, says the Brown plan would cost the Treasury almost $200 billion annually in lost revenue.

Several experts agree that, for the Brown plan to work as it has been set forth, the tax rate would have to be set at close to 20 percent, not 13 percent, and this would result in a huge tax increase for low-income and middle-class taxpayers.

Plans like it have been debated for more than two decades.

Clinton too slick for own good?

With a frequency that disheartens even his diehards, a most unsettling thing occurs after Bill Clinton is asked simple, direct questions: Slick happens.

It happens as if by involuntary reflex, both when Clinton seems desperate for a discreet dodge and when there seems to be no need to do-a-do.

Voters have become convinced that Clinton is compulsively slick. And that — not his positions on policies — is what has caused him to be such an on-again/off-again front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Time and again, Clinton has sabotaged his own reputation, not by misdeeds, but by failing to answer questions clearly, crisply, compactly — and mainly, candidly. So it is that a majority of voters are telling pollsters they have doubts about Clinton's honesty. That is damage Clinton has the power to control.

Remember the lingering unpleasant aftertaste of Clinton's responses on questions that had nothing to do with solving our problems:

Marital Life — Did Clinton have even one sexual encounter with Jennifer de la Sony? (Jees, Bill, don't deny "an affair" but then get coy. Just say no. Or yes. Or tell us it's Hillary's business, and yours — but none of ours. But if you keep people guessing, they'll keep guessing.)

Marital Life — Did Clinton dodge the Vietnam draft? (Face it, Bill, you can't make all hawks and doves love you always; so just tell it like it was: As a youth, you opposed the Vietnam War policy and initially side-stepped the draft by saying you'd join the ROTC; later you confessed you never intended to go the ROTC route; so you put yourself into the draft pool, as the war was winding down.)

Sportin' Life — Why did Clinton golf at a club that has only white members? (Don't say you did it because it was the only place you had time to play that day. Did you think we'd never discover you played there a half-dozen or more times a year over a half-dozen or more years?)

High Life — Did you ever use drugs? (When the media asked their silly moldy-olde, you decided to fess up — but you couldn't resist an absurd burlesque: "...when I was in England, I experimented with marijuana a time or two and I didn't like it — and didn't inhale it — and never tried it again.")

"Didn't inhale it" — does that makes any difference to anyone? After all, it made no difference to the Far Righteous that Clarence Thomas tried pot as a student (as did Al Gore and Bruce Babbitt). Even inquiring minds did not want to know whether they'd toked it or faked it.

Of course, Clinton had been asked this before. In 1989, he told a home-state newspaper: "In Arkansas, ever since I've been an adult, I haven't." Voters back home understood: he was saying that in college he may have acted like a college student.

Why does a very smart politico become so transparently slick? I have a theory: A Southern politician who is more liberal than his constituents learns to tailor his words to fit his body politic — if he wants to survive. Up close, he sees it as survival. Step back and it just looks slick.

Either way, it has made Clinton what he is today. And now he has a new dilemma: He's conditioned a national press corps into a Pavlovian response; when reporters hear his voice ring out on an embarrassing question, they have an involuntary reflex to insert into their stories one phrase: "Slick Willie."

Time and again, Clinton has sabotaged his own reputation.

Seminole

was founded in 1960, more than 1,000 students have met the rigorous standards set by the national organization. The students are selected by a committee of faculty members at the school using the National Honor Society criteria.

The members were selected by the committee for their high standards of scholarship, service, leadership and character.

According to Anna McCarthy, the faculty advisory to the Seminole High School chapter, the students are those who are considered most likely to be successful in academic and community endeavors in the future.

"National Honor Society members are expected to continue their exemplary contributions to the school and community," she said.

The National Honor Society ranks as one of the oldest and most prestigious national organizations for high school students. There are chapters at three-quarters of the high schools in the country.

More than 200 million students have been inducted into the national organization since its inception in 1921.

The organization, through its sponsor, the National Association of Secondary School Principals, offers a variety of scholarships to its members.

The new inductees at Seminole High School for this year are: Elena Battista, Chris Black, Kristine Bradt, John Burch, Gretchen Charron, Patrick Colbert, Joshua Coulter, Scott Fergersin, Todd Hensley, Kara Hickson and Thomas Holland.

Rates

cember, the amount of "tipping fees" collected by the county were projected to be $6.3 million during the 1990-1991 fiscal year. But what the county actually received was less than $5.8 million. The lowered revenues didn't cause the county problems, but Newkirk said the county is studying the need for a rate increase should the trend continue.

"We can't continue to operate at a deficit," said Newkirk. "It still costs the same to operate the landfill."

And indications that trend is continuing. During the year between July 1, 1990 and June 30, 1991, an average 24,000 tons per month was buried at the county dump, about a 2,000 tons per month decrease from the previous year. But that decrease can be largely attributed to the 2,400 tons of garbage recycled by residents and businesses.

But for the first nine months of the current July 1991 to June 1992 state reporting period, an average of only 19,347 tons per month have been taken to the county dump. Although recycling has increased to an estimated 3,207 tons per month for residences and businesses, there is still an overall decrease in total waste production either being dumped or recycled.

Newkirk said there is a "hidden" factor of household composting and mulching that may account for much of the "missing" garbage — people are simply keeping more waste at home and using it again.

Newkirk said people are also becoming more discriminatory with their purchases and buying fewer products that come packaged in multiple layers of paper, plastic and other materials.

And finally, Newkirk said residents may simply be buying less because they can't afford to buy more. Less garbage is being produced because less products are being bought, she said.

Exclusion

and Army Corps of Engineers did have jurisdiction and accepted the mitigation plan as compensation for the wetlands destruction in return for issuing construction permits.

Portions of the FDER-defined wetlands lie outside the wetlands defined by the water district and Army Corps of Engineers. In other areas, they overlap. The Orlando Lake Forest application indicates a Lake Forest street have severed about eight acres of the "new" wetlands from other portions.

The new dredge and fill permit is under review by the water district, which assumed dredge and fill permitting responsibilities for FDER several years ago. Pat Frost, manager of the Orlando district office, said his permit staff is awaiting additional information from Orlando Lake Forest engineers before concluding their review.

Frost declined to say whether previously-approved mitigation plans would be acceptable for damages to the newly-identified wetlands.

Judge

judge forced integration in Dade County, where 42 all-black schools remained.

The state Senate on Monday continued to flounder in its effort to solve a deadlock over drawing new districts for the 160 seats in the Legislature. Democrats accused the GOP of deliberate delay to ensure the matter is settled by the federal court.

"I know when I'm hitting a stone wall," said Sen. Pat Thomas, D-Quincy.

The GOP, meanwhile, contended the Democrats were trying to quickly pass a plan so it could be forwarded to the Florida Supreme Court, which numbers five Democratic appointees among its seven justices. The state constitution requires the high court to review the new districts.

"This is unbelievable. Everybody thinks they've got the sneaky deal," said Minority Leader Ader Crenshaw, R-Jacksonville.

To cap off the day of partisan bickering, Senate President

Gwen Margolis said she'd ask Gov. Lawton Chiles to dissolve the $40,000-a-day redistricting special session if no agreement is reached in a day or two.

"If they're not willing to work, it doesn't make much sense to hang around," said Margolis, D-North Miami Beach.

The Senate has been mired in a 20-20 deadlock for weeks on redistricting as two Democrats — Sens. Larry Hummer of South Miami and Vince Bruner of Fort Walton Beach — joined the 18 Republicans to defeat plans drawn by Democratic leaders.

The Senate Reapportionment Committee did manage to approve a Democratic map for the upper chamber on a 17-12 vote, readying it for a floor vote today. But senators refused to accept a House-passed map for the House, defeating it on a 17-11 vote.

Earlier Monday, the Senate defeated on a 24-16 vote a motion to adjourn the special session for good, which would have thrown the legislative plan into the lap of the Supreme Court. The court must draw the House and Senate maps if the two chambers remain stalemated.

Crenshaw rejected the Democrats' claim they were stalling, contending there was ample time last week for committee work but a planned Thursday meeting was canceled.

"I really think you ought not to use these words about delay when there's plenty of blame to go around," he told Margolis.

Democrats believe if the Legislature can pass a plan that is accepted by the state Supreme Court, it might prevail before the three-judge federal panel. Republicans would prefer the judges draw all the maps, including those for the 23 congressional districts.

The House is in recess after passing its version of the maps Saturday at 3:30 a.m. Speaker T.K. Wetherell, D-Daytona Beach, said he would reconvene the House if and when the Senate produces something.

All of us wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to Sanford and to our customers for allowing us the privilege of serving you during the last four years and hopefully for many years to come.

We would like to dedicate this space to Jerry and Jill's daughter, Amy, 18, who was killed 10 months ago by a 36 year old female drunk driver. Yes, it really happens to ordinary people, born-again Christians, who pray daily. It happens, not because God wasn't listening, but because a woman chose to attend a Memorial Day party; she chose to drink enough alcohol to give her a .20 blood alcohol level; she chose to get behind the wheel of a 4,000 pound weapon; she chose to pull the trigger by putting the keys in the ignition. She drove down the wrong side of Highway 17-92 for over three miles before meeting and demolishing the small white Toyota in which Amy was a passenger, an innocent passenger, whose life was ended by a 36 year old female drunk driver. The drunk driver will be sentenced on April 10th and rightly so. Amy has already been sentenced. The drunk driver kills and Amy dies. Where is the sense in all of this. There is none - NONE.

Everyone knows what the outcome of driving after drinking is and yet it is done everyday. Every person at that Memorial Day party could have made the choice to take that woman's keys, but every person chose to say nothing. Amy is dead.

With the Easter Holiday approaching & Memorial Day just 2 months away, please remember Amy. Please remember that if you mix alcohol with driving a car that you could wake up tomorrow morning and realize that you have just killed a completely innocent person. Please, please don't do it. It really does happen. The family and friends of Amy Kristyn ("Baby-Girl") Congwer know only too well. It really, really happens. Please think before you drink.

Wouldn't it be nice to come home to a house that is Neat-N-Tidy.

Bill and Joan Gardner with two of the Alpine Air Purification models.

Alpine Is The Solution To Indoor Air Pollution

Government agencies rate indoor air pollution as the nation's biggest problem. Carbon Monoxide, benzene, dust mites, bacteria, allergens, trichloroethylene, sulphur dioxide, carbon tetrachloride, chloroform, pollens, dust, hydrocarbons, formaldehyde, ammonia, mold spores. Because of recent energy concerns, the buildings we live and work in are more tightly constructed. The buildings don't "breathe", there is little or no air exchange, indoor air is re-circulated, indoor air pollution is trapped indoors. This causes a phenomenon called "Sick Building Syndrome", where members of a family or business continuously re-infect each other with colds, the flu, etc.

Joan and Bill Gardner have found the solution to indoor air pollution. These Winter Springs residents discovered Alpine Air Purification Systems and have been independent distributors for the company since November 1991.

The Alpine system is not an air filtering system, or a deodorizing system. It is a system that purifies the air in much the same way as a thunderstorm. Think about how fresh the air is after a storm. This is because the lightning produces activated oxygen and negative ions. Together, they clean and purify the air nature's way.

What does this mean for the Alpine system user? It means that airborne particles are eliminated before they get to you. Users have found it lessens the frequency of allergy attacks in children. Personal testimonies document fewer headaches, less fatigue and a general feeling of well-being about themselves and their environment. Odors are eliminated without the use of sprays or powders, especially pet and smoke odors.

Joan uses the unit in her home and states that her children haven't missed any time from school, due to illness, since she got the unit.

The Alpine 150 covers up to 1500 square feet with activated oxygen. Prices on the systems start at $225. But they are not just designed for home use. Bowling alleys, retirement centers and hospitals have started using the Alpine system. One business using the system decided to do so after their employees complained of high smoke levels and stale air in the employee cafeteria. The cafeteria covered 5000 square feet. The plant engineer decided the Alpine Air Purification system was not only the most economical solution, but the only one that could clean the air instead of simply moving the same stale air around with fans. They now highly recommend the system with complete satisfaction.

The Gardners have owned and operated a ServiceMaster franchise for north Seminole county for the past five years. ServiceMaster does professional cleaning and restoration for residential and commercial buildings. Their services include flood, fire and vandalism clean-up. The Gardners have found the Alpine system very helpful in eliminating odors on their biggest jobs.

If you would like to experience the difference of the Alpine Air Purification System, give Joan and Bill a call at 699-8200 or 699-0072. They take VISA and MasterCard and payment plans are available.

Administration asks for overturn of Roe vs. Wade

By JAMES ROWLEY
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is again asking the Supreme Court to overturn its landmark ruling legalizing abortion — this time in a case about a Pennsylvania law that imposes a 24-hour waiting period and requires a husband be notified.

Reiterating a position it has taken in previous cases, the Justice Department said Monday that the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision was wrongly decided and should be set aside.

The friend-of-the-court brief by Solicitor General Kenneth W. Starr asked the court to consider overruling Roe vs. Wade in reviewing the Pennsylvania law, which requires a woman seeking an abortion to wait 24 hours and for married women to notify their husbands before having the abortion.

Even if it doesn't specifically overturn the 1973 precedent, the Justice Department said the high court should make clear that women do not have a fundamental right to obtain an abortion under the Constitution.

The department contended that states can restrict abortions because "the protection of human life — in or out of the womb — is certainly the most compelling interest that a state can advance."

Starr said that if the court takes a narrower approach than overturning Roe vs. Wade it can uphold the Pennsylvania law as advancing a "legitimate state interest."

"The state's interest in prenatal life is a wholly legitimate and entirely adequate basis for restricting the right to abortion derived in Roe," he said.

The brief was filed one day after an estimated 500,000 protesters marched in Washington in the biggest demonstration ever held by abortion rights activists.

The Pennsylvania law requiring doctors to advise women of the alternatives to abortions before a 24-hour waiting period advances "a legitimate interest in ensuring that a woman's decision to have an abortion is an informed one," the brief said.

"The informed consent and waiting period requirements ensure that a woman knows the relevant facts and can reflect on them before making a final decision," it said.

The provision requiring a married woman to notify her husband of plans to abort "can help protect the life of a fetus, the integrity of the family unit and the husband's interests in procreation within marriage and the potential life of his unborn child," the brief added.

The Supreme Court will hear arguments on the Pennsylvania law on April 23. Starr is scheduled to present the administration's views then.

Abortion rights organizations appealed a ruling by the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last year that upheld most provisions of the Pennsylvania law, including one that requires teen-age girls to get permission of a parent or a judge before having an abortion.

The 3rd Circuit, however, struck down the spousal notification provision, saying it imposed an "undue burden" on a woman's right to an abortion.

The Justice Department said the application of the "undue burden" test was inappropriate in light of the high court's 1989 decision that upheld a Missouri law restricting abortion.

New Yorkers question Clinton's integrity

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

NEW YORK — Voters in New York, Kansas and Wisconsin deliver their verdicts today on whether Bill Clinton's march to the nomination continues apace or stumbles over questions about his integrity.

The Republican side held far less drama: President Bush is picking up 100 New York delegates by default but faced challenger Patrick Buchanan in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Kansas — and was the big favorite everywhere.

Minnesota Democrats held a preferential vote but awarded no convention delegates.

New York was the key in a topsy-turvy Democratic race that has seen Arkansas Gov.

Clinton repeatedly slowed by controversy.

The candidates concentrated intently on New York, and Clinton and lone challenger Jerry Brown got down-and-dirty in a city known for pointed-elbow politics.

Clinton focused his fire on Brown's flat-tax proposal, saying it would punish the poor, increase the deficit and endanger Social Security. Brown called Clinton a "prince of sleaze" and distributed flyers questioning his rival's commitment to civil rights and Israel.

It was in New York that Clinton finally heard the questions that compelled him to acknowledge that he had tried marijuana in college and did, after all, receive a draft notice in 1969 before promising to join an ROTC program in Arkansas. His carefully worded answers prompted new questions about Clinton's integrity.

Clinton hoped a New York victory would give him a psychological lock on the Democratic presidential nomination.

But with a volatile electorate and nagging doubts about Clinton reflected in poll after poll, few were willing to write off Brown's chances of scoring the big-state upset that would cement the former California governor as a serious challenger and damage Clinton.

"We're going to do very well and it is going to shock the party establishment in Washington," Brown predicted in an election-eve interview. "We're asking New York to give this cause a boost — keep it moving forward so we can reform a decrepit system."

A wild card in New York was former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas, who suspended his campaign three weeks ago but was still on the ballot. He has encouraged New York supporters who want him back in the fray, and late polls showed Tsongas' support creeping into the mid-teens and beginning to draw from Clinton as well as Brown.

Tsongas said he would announce Wednesday whether he would revive his bid. Aides said only a Clinton loss in New York would make that a possibility.

In all, the day offered 382 Democratic delegates, 244 of them from New York. A big day would push Clinton well past halfway to winning a return trip to New York in July to be crowned the nominee.

What can we expect of our politicians?

By JILL LAWRENCE
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Anything they say can be used against them, so politicians often say as little as possible.

But the latest mini-revelations from Bill Clinton — he did smoke marijuana, he did receive a draft notice — illustrate the risks of cleaving to narrow definitions of truth and being forced to come cleaner later.

Any modern presidential campaign plays out against the backdrop of Vietnam, Watergate and the Iran-Contra affair, all of which prompted various administrations to evade, suppress, mislead and even lie.

Some wonder why Clinton pursues a minimal disclosure policy in light of these lessons. As one Democratic activist put it, "Nixon didn't get tagged for Watergate. He got tagged for the coverup."

But some analysts say Clinton's sins of omission, though potentially damaging to how he is perceived, are typical and even mild by historical standards.

Franklin Roosevelt, Lyndon Johnson and Ronald Reagan did not merely withhold information, but actually manufactured certain aspects of their personal histories, said Erwin Hargrove, a presidential specialist at Vanderbilt University.

"These people are developing a persona and they want to give you a self-image that's flattering," Hargrove said in an interview Monday. "I don't think that should be a disqualification. It goes with being a highly ambitious politician."

A widely accepted fudge is enhancing one's military record. "Johnson did it and so did Reagan," said Susanne Garment, author of a book on political mistrust. "That's a great tradition in American politics."

Another thriving tradition involves forgetting unpleasant things. The New Republic cited what appears to be a recent instance: Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said on a Tuesday last month that he told President Bush the previous weekend about his overdrawn checks at the House bank. The same Tuesday, asked about Cheney's checks, Bush replied, "I haven't heard a word about that."

One time-honored tradition seems to be waning: saying different things to different people. In the age of C-SPAN, CNN and instant data retrieval banks, it's getting harder to do that.

Government-watchers say it's not necessarily a plus.

"In a democracy, if we get anything done at all, it's from building coalitions," Garment said. "A leader has to be able to say different things to different people. When you make that impossible, you make it harder for all of us to agree with each other."

Clinton, the Arkansas governor and front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination, often is criticized for trying too hard to please: for shading his positions so skillfully that people in the same audience can get opposite impressions of where he stands.

Hargrove thinks it's a consummate trait in a leader who wants to get anything done. "Roosevelt slipped all over the issues. Nobody knew where he was coming from," he said. "But he lived in a heroic time and he was able to present himself as a hero. People saw the lion and they didn't always see the fox."

Foxes are out of favor at the moment among voters who say they want the truth and nothing but the truth. But Hargrove said they've rarely appreciated that approach in the past.

"People are suspicious of wheeler-dealers," he said. "On the other hand, people like Jimmy Carter who refuse to wheel and deal become unpopular because they're ineffective."

Smith robbed

APOPKA — Robbers held Miami Dolphins running back Sammie Smith at gunpoint and stole money he and six other players raised to help his hometown community.

Smith, 24, said he hit one robber during the incident Saturday night, knocked over another and then ran away. He said the thieves stole his Mercedes Benz convertible and $3,000 in cash.

Lake County deputies found the $100,000 car Sunday night on State Road 44. The car had been in an accident, but no one was inside, according to the Orange County sheriff's report of Smith's complaint.

Smith grew up in Zellwood, about three miles north of Apopka in Central Florida.

AROUND THE NATION

Duke does it again

MINNEAPOLIS — History didn't come easy for Duke. Nevertheless, history it made, energized at last by its star, Christian Laettner.

It became the first team in 19 years to repeat as NCAA champions Monday with a 71-51 victory over Michigan's Fab Five freshmen, the youngest team to ever vie for the title.

Laettner, who personally lifted the Blue Devils to two of their five straight Final Four appearances with buzzer-beaters, rebounded from his worst half of the year to lead a closing 23-6 Duke charge.

After missing six of eight shots and making a season-high seven turnovers in the first half, Laettner finished with 19 points and seven rebounds.

Duke's defensive pressure, meanwhile, limited Michigan to only 20 second-half points on 29 percent shooting — nine for 31. It was the Wolverines' lowest point total in eight years.

Bausch and Lomb Tennis

AMELIA ISLAND — Unseeded Silkie Meir advanced Monday in the opening round of the $350,000 Bausch and Lomb Tennis Championships at Amelia Island Plantation with a 7-6, (7-0), 6-0 victory over Bettina Fulco-Villela.

She faces top-seeded Steffi Graf in a battle of Germans on Tuesday night. Graf is trying to avenge her loss to Gabriella Sabatini in last year's final. The two-time Meir and Graf met was in 1988 in the Luffhansa Cup. Graf came away with a 6-2, 6-1 victory.

Sabatini, the No. 2 seed, faces Lynda Harvey-Wild. Harvey-Wild scored a 1-6, 6-1, 7-6 (10-8) victory over Rosalyn Fairbank-Nideffer.

Harvey-Wild and Sabatini met twice in 1991, at the Australian Open where Sabatini came away with a 6-3, 6-1 victory and in the Family Circle Cup where she won 6-0, 6-0.

The victory raised the Dodgers' record to 3-2 and moved the winners into sole possession of second place in the National Division, 1½-games behind the division leading, and undefeated, Korg U.S.A. Expos.

The loss dropped the Orioles to 1-4, 3½-games behind the American Division leading K-n-D Trailer Hitch Red Sox.

Both teams will be in action again Saturday as the Orioles take on the D.A.V. (Disabled American Veterans) Royals at 8 a.m. and the Dodgers will play the Cattle Ranch Cardinals at 2 p.m.

Raines confident White Sox can win West

By JOE MOONHL
AP Sports Writer

SARASOTA — Sanford's Tim Raines is convinced the Chicago White Sox can win their division and he plans to be a big factor.

"We can win the championship if we go out and play the game the way we can," said Raines, who is starting his second season in the American League.

A lifetime .301 hitter in the National League before being traded from Montreal for outfielder Ivan Calderon and pitcher Barry Jones, Raines slipped to .268 last year.

"I guess I'm a .300 hitter in the National League and a .268 hitter in the American League," said Raines, who hit .375 this spring.

Except for his average, Raines gave the White Sox everything they wanted. He stole 51 bases and scored 102 runs.

One problem, he said, was playing with sore hamstrings for two months. Another was the difference in the leagues.

"There is a difference in the two leagues," Raines said, who makes his offseason home in Heathrow. "The pitchers pitch differently. I faced guys I had never faced before. It's different seeing guys the first time after having faced guys in the other league for 10 years.

"I came from a fastball type league to a breaking ball type league. I'm a fastball hitter and I had to adjust. I definitely think the pitchers had the advantage. With a year under my belt, I hope I can hit .300 again."

Raines laughed when reminded that he and Steve Sax, acquired in a trade from the New York Yankees, would be batting 1-2 in the lineup. That's the way they finished in 1986 for the National League batting title. Raines batted .334 and Sax, then with the Los Angeles Dodgers, hit .332.

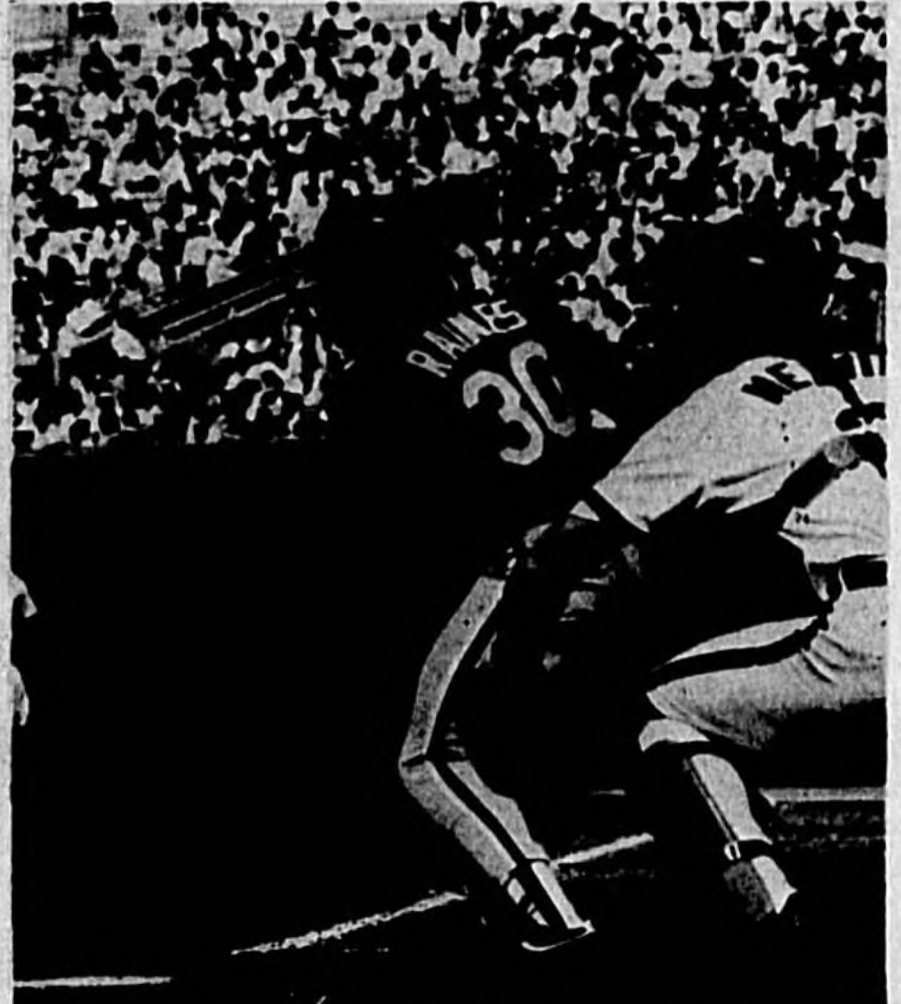

"Sax hitting behind me will help me and I'll help him," Raines said. "And we'll both help the hitters behind us like Robin Ventura and Frank Thomas."

They'll certainly add speed up front. Raines has stolen 50 or more bases eight times in his career, and Sax, who once stole 56, has stolen 40 or more six times.

"If I stay healthy, I look to be running more this year," Raines said. "A lot of people didn't realize last year that for more than two months I was playing on strained hamstrings. They thought I had lost a step. There were times I couldn't stretch my legs but I continued to play."

Why?
"Because Frank Thomas had a bad shoulder and he was the DH and I felt I still had to play to help the club," Raines said. "I thought I could play through the injuries. This year it's going to be different. It's not going to make any difference in the league or the pitchers. If I stay healthy, the numbers will be there."

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Raines, along with Seminole Community College graduate Bobby Thigpen, and the rest of the White Sox will open the regular season tonight.

Tim Raines (No. 30, above) feels he will have a big year in his second American League campaign and is ready to help the White Sox to win the American Western Division title as they open their season tonight.

Death of spouse or divorce painful

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, you had a letter in your column written by "Myra" — a woman whose husband had died of cancer three years ago, at the age of 39. I've been wanting to write to you about this for a long time, but I never had the guts.

My husband died of cancer three years ago — he was 35. I also encountered people who compared death with divorce. I had one person tell me that I was "lucky" because my love had just died — but her love was "murdered" when her husband found somebody else. I was devastated! I didn't feel "lucky."

I've had to deal with people who think I am a rich widow because I've started to redecorate the house so there wouldn't be so many memories to haunt me. They didn't see it as a way of coping with my loss — they saw "the rich widow" out having a wonderful time with the insurance money.

I could write a book. Maybe one day I will, but I think I've said enough. Thank you, Abby, for letting me have my say.

I DON'T FEEL LUCKY!
DEAR DON'T FEEL LUCKY: Myra's letter inspired a bale of mail from widows and divorcees. None felt "lucky." Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is in re-

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

sponse to the woman who lost her 39-year-old husband to cancer, and didn't know what to make of the remark, "It has to be much easier losing your husband through death than losing a mate by divorce."

Not only is divorce the death of a dream (that was too short-lived, or didn't work out, it is also the death of an intimate relationship, the death of a family and the death of financial support.

Few outsiders allow a divorcee time to grieve. Nobody attends the "funeral," nobody takes up a collection to see her through the rough spots, and there is no available life insurance.

When one is a widow (or widower), there are no fights over child custody, living quarters or possessions acquired during the life of the marriage — and friends and relatives on both sides are still glad to see you. They invite you to weddings, graduations, baptisms, etc. Your memories of a wonderful marriage are yours forever, to be treasured for a lifetime.

FAMILY COUNSELOR
IN ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR ABBY: After going through a very painful divorce, I confess, at times I thought how much less painful it would have been if my husband had died.

A death brings the bereaved widow support from both her family and community.

With a divorce, people whisper behind your back about what "really happened" — and what you must have done to drive him away. A widow's children will not go to school and hear classmates say, "My parents said they saw your father out dancing last night with a pretty young girl." (Children can be so very cruel.)

As a divorcee, my self-esteem hit an all-time low because of the way a divorcee is perceived.

Whoever thought up that expression "gay divorce" must have been dreaming. A widow gets sympathy and understanding. A divorcee gets speculation and gossip.

ANOTHER DIVORCEE

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from "A Compulsive Gambler," who stated that he/she now lives in Okinawa, Japan.

Abby, Okinawa is not in Japan. It is an island that is part of the Ryukyu chain of islands in the Pacific. Just thought you'd like to know.

NELSON T. HALL, VAUXHALL, N.J.

DEAR NELSON T. HALL: According to The Information Please Almanac, after Japan surrendered to the United States on Sept. 2, 1945, the Pacific Islands, including Okinawa, remained under U.S. occupation.

However, following Japan's Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's visit to Washington, D.C., in 1969 during the Nixon administration, the United States agreed to return Okinawa and the other Ryukyu Islands to Japan in 1972.

The U.S. Postal Service in Los Angeles says that "to reach someone in Okinawa, the correct address is Okinawa, Japan."

Try a change in diet to treat hiatal hernia

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've heard of a mesh surgeons put into a stomach for hernias. I suffer from a hiatal hernia and wonder if this might be the answer for me.

DEAR READER: Hernias are merely abnormal openings through which normal tissue protrudes.

When surgeons repair hernias, they are usually able to sew up the openings to correct the defect. However, if a hernia is too large to over-sew (or if it has been weakened by previous attempts at closure), the surgeon will ordinarily use a piece of mesh, resembling a window screen, to strengthen the surgical repair. This is standard procedure and serves to ensure that the hernia will stay fixed.

For technical reasons, mesh is not appropriate for treating hiatal hernias, a condition caused by a weakness in the diaphragm that allows stomach acid to backwash into the esophagus. These special hernias are best treated medically with dietary modifications, antacids and medicine to reduce the formation of stomach acid.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have what appears to be a kidney infection with painful urination. What causes this and what is the proper remedy?

DEAR READER: Frequent, painful urination -- with or without blood in the urine (hematuria) -- often reflects infection in the urinary tract: the kidneys, the bladder or the urethra (tube leading from the bladder).

When diagnosing a urinary infection, doctors customarily obtain a urine culture and sensitivity (C and S). After a specimen is obtained (with a catheter or a sterile technique), it is checked in the laboratory for bacteria, which are subsequently identified by type and species. The urine C and S not only isolates bacteria in the urine, it also enables the lab technician to test the germs against a panel of antibiotics, to discover which one would most efficiently eradicate the infection. Treatment is then tailored to the specific bacterial culprit.

If you have painful urination, you need a urine C and S -- and, after the infection has appeared to clear, another C and S to make sure the antibiotics got it all.

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Are you a successful player in club duplicates, but it seems that you never win a major event? If so, Englishmen Terence Reese and David Bird have written the book for you, "Bridge -- Tricks of the Trade" (Gollancz, $16.50, 212-866-5860) covers declarer-play and defense positions that you might not have seen before, but which often crop up at the table. The prose is characteristic of Reese: lucid, caustic and kept to a bare minimum.

Today's hand comes from the chapter on communication. Cover the East-West cards. How would you play in either six spades or seven spades on the lead of a trump?

exactly three trumps. After four cue-bids, South bid the perfect contract.

Six spades is easy to make if you ruff two hearts in the dummy, using diamond ruffs both to return to hand for the second ruff and to draw trumps.

To make seven spades, you must discard the club seven on the fifth diamond. To accomplish this, you must find the heart finesse working, the diamonds 4-3 and the spades 2-2. Also you must take that heart finesse at trick two. When the finesse wins, play a diamond to dummy's ace, ruff a diamond and lead a spade to dummy's jack, which draws the trumps. Ruff another diamond, cross to the heart king and ruff a third diamond. Trump the heart five in the dummy, discard the club seven on the established diamond 10 and claim.

YOUR BIRTHDAY

April 8, 1992

The year ahead could be an exciting one for you; you're likely to be more adventurous and enterprising than usual. However, be careful you don't let your boldness exceed your sound judgment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Guard against the inclination today to anticipate negative results in your endeavors. A defeatist attitude will impede you before you even get started.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you get involved in something with friends that requires a cash outlay from each participant today, be very careful. Make sure the levy is equal for everyone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your spending patterns will be strongly influenced today by the people with whom you keep company. If you want to save money, avoid friends who are high rollers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The weakest and least effective tool you could use today is the intimidation of subordinates in order to get them to do your bidding. Rather, try something positive which you already know works.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If someone you're closely associated with has done something recently that you found offensive, don't stew about it in silence. Bring the issue out in the open and resolve it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you get involved in something with friends that requires a cash outlay from each participant today, be very careful. Make sure the levy is equal for everyone.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll be aware, both in your heart and in your mind, of what needs doing today, yet you might devote only a portion of your efforts to doing it. Consequently, your rewards will be nominal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If co-workers aren't producing up to your expectations today, don't get down on them. The reason could be traced to the example you've been setting recently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

This is not a particularly good day for you to take gambles, but if you think you must, bet on yourself and your abilities and not on unknowns, over which you have no control.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There is a strong possibility you might not exercise the necessary resolve required today to overcome tough problems. The flesh must be as willing as the spirit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually, you're a rather well-organized individual, but this may not be the case today. Your workroom could be cluttered with nondescript pieces of things you start but don't finish.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you expect too much of those who are only casual acquaintances today, you could be disappointed. Don't confuse them with loyal friends whose mettle has been tested.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If there is friction in your household today, don't try to shift the blame on others. It could be your car that is stirring the waters.
