Book Bares 'Bay Of Pigs' Error

NEW YORK (UPI) — The late President Kennedy, to the day of his death, felt the CIA and his military advisers led him into making the worst mistake of his career — the Bay of Pigs disaster, according to a close Kennedy side.

While publicly and private was aghast at the enormity of his error and bitter at having been badly misled by his advisers.

Kennedy's aide, Theodore C. Sorensen, revealed the late President's personal reaction in an article published in Look magazine. The article is the fifrst installment of a series based on Sorensen's forthcoming book "Kennedy" to be published in October.

cet of a federal government bureau's operation is the national school lunch program which provides a palatable, nourishing diet at minimum cost for 17 million school

Now in its 19th year, the program is embraced by 70,000 public and private schools. Even with costs figured at the wholesale level, more than $1 billion in foods moved through school lunchrooms during 1962-63, according to the Department of Agriculture, which administers the program.

Aside from the obvious—health-program, almost 80 per cent of the food flowing through school lunch-rooms is purchased in areas of con-sumption, thereby providing a firm contributing to local employment. One other factor is notable and this was the basic goal of the federal setup: Children eat better. Surveys have established that the per capita consumption of foods and milk is higher than in those schools operating a lunch service outside the federal program. It must be gratifying to those who conceived the idea, and to those Aside from the obvious—healthier children through a nutritious diet—other benefits accrue and, in the day-to-day routine, these sometimes are overlooked. The program, for instance, has tremendous impact on local economies. Despite the
