CHAPTER 22
THE NEXT afternoon Lacey took Jimmy to the park. He was delighted to see his friend again, and at his first opportunity broke away to tell the sandbox crowd about his new dog.

Lacey walked slowly, over his shoulder, along the path around the blue bush—and sat down quietly beside the man staked like a board against a bench.

"Chad," she said softly, stopped, and started again. "I wanted to see you, to talk to you about—about—"

Her voice faded, and died. All the rest of her resolution faded, and she was left alone with her hunger for this man's touch, his word, his understanding—and with her fear that he would misunderstand the reason why she had sought him out.

"Chad . . . ?"

"Yes, darling?"

The endearment almost threw her, but she recovered. "I read an article about Dr. Wilkins-Smith."

"So did fifty thousand other people. About a tenth of them will write me letters, or phone."

"What will you say to them?"

"Nothing, mostly," he said, smiling at her. Then the smile widened, and warmed. "But if you're troubled . . ."

"I am. I mean, I thought I knew about the clinic, but so many things that he brought out—"

He shrugged. "You don't think I should let Wilkins-Smith call the dance, do you?"

"No—not if he's wrong."

Chad tipped his head back, stared up at the twiddling leaves for a minute. "Let's see. He suggested that forty-five minutes was a very short time in which to make a complete check-up."

"Was he right?"

"Oh, yes. He was dead right."

Lacey stiffened to shocked attention.

"You can't test for cancer and T. H. in that short time," he went on, quietly.

"But, Chad . . ."

"It goes this way, dear," said the young doctor gently. "The clinic's purpose is screening. Screening for symptoms of sickness. We want to discover disease in their early stages, so that people will not become ill—bedridden, that is—for years, or die prematurely. For the work we're doing forty-five minutes is plenty long enough to detect many symptoms of trouble."

"Your ideal," she said softly.

"to help as many people as possible—or rather to persuade them to help themselves."

"I get paid for the job I'm doing," said Chad bluntly.

"Chad," she ventured after a minute's thought, "why don't you practice?"

"I know it!"

"No, because if you did, why would you be so anxious to help those same people?"

"Oh, that's science. The work I do for these clinics can be resolved to statistics and predictions. I'm interested in that sort of mental exercise."

He turned on the bench to look earnestly into her face. "The one thing I don't like about the work, the results, I'm interested in that sort of mental exercise."

"What about Mother's party?" she asked abruptly. "Are you coming to that?"

"Must I?" he asked respectfully.

"You see—Mother's doing it for a purpose. It's to be a test for the Women's Club . . ."

She went on to explain, briefly and clearly, that her mother was moving the battle into enemy territory by inviting the members to meet Dr. Mays.

"Will I meet this Wilkins-Smith?"

"No. Just those he has indoctrinated."

He sighed mightily. "Tell me what to do," he said gloomily.

So Lacey told him, and on the day of her mother's tea, Chad arrived, handsomely boyish in a well-cut suit of blue-gray sharkskin, a white shirt and fresh tie. His shoes were polished to a gleam.

He was so successful a Non that Mrs. Castleberry, the Club President, made uttering at—tempt to keep him close to her, to guide his progress across the terrace.

He made a complete job of it, but it was no feat to be merely kind or condescending.

Lacey was pleased with him. When the party was about over, and nearly everyone had told him how nice it was to meet you, Dr. Mays, she came to him, with love shy in her eyes, and pride glowing in her heart. "You were wonderful, Chad. So sweet—especially to the tiresome ones. I loved you for it."

"Don't praise me," he said. "I did it because I wanted to. I was the same way in school. I found it much more interesting to fall in love with a cross-eyed girl than a pretty one."

The words struck her with the heavy clamor of a copper gong. He winked and drew back, her hands going up to her throat in an automatic gesture of warding off further hurt. Chad stood watching her, his eyes dark.

"Did you . . . ?" she asked softly. "Did you try to hurt me, Chad?"

"You shouldn't have been hurt. I was just telling the truth."

Lacey stood very still, stem, straight and clean. "Do you always tell that kind of—truth?" she asked, gently firm.

"Well, why not?" He watched her as alertly as a child would watch an unknown animal. "Better, isn't it, than telling a lie, better than pretending right now that I was being big-hearted or noble? Honestly it's always better. The whole universe—" his arm swept up, outward and around to include the terrace, the shadowy street, the world beyond "is much better if sham doesn't exist in anything."

Lacey turned and walked toward the house.

"Must I?" he asked after her. "No," she said over her shoulder, and almost indifferently.

Chad looked honestly puzzled. After a minute he went swiftly down the terraced lawn to the highway, swiftly along its shoulder. That time he'd tried to explain—and still he'd hurt her. Didn't she know that it was phobias at which Chad tilted his lance? These days a man with a lance had a tough enough time wielding it, he shouldn't have to explain about it. Not to someone who loved him, he thought stubbornly.

If she did love him. He must ask Lacey about that, some time. (To Be Continued)

New Floor Styling Features Polished Oak

Always a favorite with homeowners, polished oak floors are the center of attraction in many of the most tastefully decorated new homes these days. Leading designers are advocating the display of oak's matchless natural beauty, set off with rich area rugs. The plan boasts practical as well as aesthetic values inasmuch as floors of oak are easy to keep shining. In the average home they remain gleaming when cleaned and waxed only two or three times a year. Occasional polishing between waxings helps them look their gleaming best. Extra-apple wax has preservative, rather than soap-and-water scrubbing, are recommended for cleaning. Daily sweeping with an antiretard dust mop further "guarantees" oak's sparkle.

East-West Disarmament Talks Resume Monday

House Committee OK's Bill To Hike Postal Rates Starting July 1

Musical Program Given At Kiwanis Ladies' Night

Entertainment highlighted the Sanford Kiwanis Club's Ladies' Night program last night at the Shrine Club Building.

Ed Lane, chairman of the club's social events committee, introduced Harry Weir, administrator of the Seminole Memorial Hospital, and Mrs. Elizabeth Mathieu, both singing a trio of melodies which received tremendous ovations.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House Post Office Committee today approved the administration's bill to raise the cost of mailing a first class letter from three to four cents and to hike other postal rates, effective July 1.

Air mail letters would be raised to seven cents, post cards to three cents.

All other postage rates would be raised 462 million dollars for the year starting July 1.

The measure won approval by a "decisive majority" and with virtually no change, Chairman Tom Murray (D-Tenn.) announced.

The committee completed action on the bill today by voting to raise rates for newspapers and magazines. These would bring in 33 million dollars annually by the time the last of the series of boosts is in effect.

Persons.

"The wage increases are necessary to keep the pay of Southern Bell people in line with wage levels prevailing in the communications field," said.

"It is the policy of the company to keep our people's wages in favorable comparison with those of other employees. Extensive surveys showed that there had been upward movement in the southeastern states."

Overall space is 3,500 square feet, he said. The construction got underway Monday with John Burton IV as the architect and Robertson Construction Company as general contractor.

Stassen To Be In London

WASHINGTON (AP)—Disarmament adviser Harold E. Stassen said after a White House conference today that he plans to be in London next Monday for resumption of the East-West disarmament talks.

Stassen conferred for about two hours with President Eisenhower and the National Security Council on a new disarmament plan to be placed before the London conference.

All Stassen would say about the meeting was that he "never discusses conferences with the President of the National Security Council."

White House press secretary James C. Hagerty said Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who does not see eye-to-eye with Stassen on disarmament policy, sat in on today's discussions for about twenty minutes.

Word Reaching Washington Indicates That New Soviet Leaders Will Be Willing To Agree To Some Disarmament Inspection Plan

Post-Stalin Attitude

Word reaching Washington indicates that the new Soviet leaders began to face up to the horrors of nuclear warfare soon after Stalin died.

Soviet Defense Minister Georgi Zhukov, a World War II comrade in arms of Eisenhower, is understood to have spearheaded debate on the issue.

One possible U. S. move certain to be considered at today's Security Council meeting is a proposal to set aside an aerial ground inspection zone in the Siberian-Alaskan-Northern Canadian area.

This would be regarded as an experimental area to determine whether a framework for a greater East-West disarmament accord could be developed later.

Problems Still Pressing

Experts said there are several tough problems still to be worked out before any agreement is reached with Russia.

Last Of Circuit Riders In Sanford

An old-fashioned circuit rider, probably the last in the country, is in Sanford for a visit.

Rev. Henry Mills rode in on his horse as he completed another lap of his trip that will take him from Waycross, Ga., down one side of the Florida peninsula, then to Cuba, and back up the other side.

The youthful looking preacher revealed yesterday that he was ordained in the Congregational Methodist Church in 1932 while a ranch hand in the Texas Panhandle.

The Bible says "go into the hedges, highways and streets" said Rev. Mills, when he was asked why he had taken up the ministry as a circuit rider.

Rev. Mills says that the purpose of his mission as a circuit rider is to meet the great masses of people who are in trouble and unchurched. "I have been able, in a small way," he said, "to help these people who come from delinquent and broken homes."

Bible in his hand, wearing high heeled boots, and a broad-brimmed western sombrero, Rev. Mills is a picture of the old western days. However, he says "I am trying to escape from the minds of youngsters that all cowboys are killers."

The circuit riding preacher says that he has traveled on horseback through nine states—Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, part of Old Mexico, Tennessee, Oklahoma and part of Florida.

Asked how long he spent in each community, Rev. Mills said "I spend enough time to get people to thinking, and the average person has the ability to think who they are set right." He said, "some of the people I contact are referred to church and others to various organizations."

"I have a message of truth and a heart of sincerity," said Rev. Mills, "and I am doing this because I have the love of God in my heart to the extent that I want to help someone less fortunate than I."

Rev. Mills revealed that his home is in Waycross, Ga. where he and his family have made their home for three years. "I have a wife and seven children," he said, "five boys and two daughters. I don't stay on the road all of the time," said the circuit rider.

"It is when the weather permits." Then Rev. Mills said "I am a regular Texas Cowboy whose father was a circuit rider and grandfather a chaplain in the civil war."

"I never know how long I am going to stay in one place," he said. "If the door opens, then I stay where I can do some good."

Asked about the message he carries to the people he meets, Rev. Mills said that he is stressing that something must be done because conditions existing now can't continue. "We're living too fast and too loose," he said, and added "A drastic thing is going to happen."

"I'm not talking about going back to the horse and buggy days," the horseback riding preacher said, "but we must become interested in the souls of men."

The cause of such unrest, he was asked—"It is the failure first of the home—we don't have the discipline—children don't feel secure—and the home has become just a place to sleep."

"That's the danger from within," he said. "Now, we're threatened from without and Florida will be the first to be hit. When people hear the scream of the hydrogen bomb they won't have the courage to withstand the pressure."

Rev. Mills said that "We're a ship without a captain to guide us. We need to bring that principle back that there is a God and there's something beyond."

He said "I am interested in the forgotten man."

Haven't had one solitary phone call, or one tiny bit of information to write about. Haven't even got our card party to write about, as we won't be playing until Friday this week. Hate to keep it up, but this is YOUR column, and without some cooperation, it can't be written.

The branch of the Florida State Bank, aboard the Naval Air Station, has only been open since April 28, but already the number of depositors is enormous! Over 200 new accounts have been opened, and more coming in all the time. Leading the herd with the most new accounts is VAH-31 (Another first???) VAH-11 is in the number two spot. The banking facility at the Air Station is under the management of Mr. M. P. Crandall, ably assisted by Mrs. Claire Kendall as teller. While talking to Mr. Crandall discovered a fact that might be of interest to those of you who already do business with the Florida State Bank. If you thought, as I did, that it would be necessary to transfer your account from one place to the other, this is not so!

I think Mr. Crandall put it in the simplest and clearest way when he said to think of it as a "fourth drive-in-window." And that's exactly what it is! If you have an account downtown, and happen to have need of a banking service, you can do your business at the base bank as well. This will be a blessing to the wives who have to "do battle" with their husbands to get the family car for such errands. Now she can let him do it!!!

I've thought, concentrated, and raked every corner of my brain, (poor resources though they are,)

Conning The News

By VIRGINIA CONN

Ruth Murphy of V.A.H.S. had a coffee for Millie Thomas Friday morning at her home in Winter Park. The V.A.H.S. luncheon was held last Wednesday at Spencer's. Margie Hoop and Marilyn Bailey were the hostesses. The luncheon was especially delicious, creamed corn and spaghetti, lettuce salad and yellow variations graced the long table. Several new girls were introduced. These were Pat Dea, Dolores Lacharow, Elizabeth Boyd, Elizabeth Dodge. Others attending were Hara Russell, President, Oeter Holm, Ethel Fitzsimmons, and her mother, Mrs. Syler, South (Lynn) Mann, Ruth Tully, Sue Kenney, Betty McCarren, Jane Ross, Maige Martin, Della McAlister, Berta Conn, Elizabeth Dodge, Jackie Austin, and K. H. Boyd.

Just reporting into V.A.H.S. at 10:30 a.m. and Mrs. Henry Osborne. Her name is Millie, they have three girls and are living in Lynn. Mrs. Jane Tate had a fair-weather coffee Wednesday morning for Joyce Baker, Joyce and Bob are leaving the end of this month for Washington, D. C. Included were Jean Dole, Jean Tegloff, Betty McCarren, Margie Hill, Hara Russell, Priscilla Osterholm, Barbara Jacobson, Sandra Dransom, Maige Martin, Berta Conn, Jane Adams, Ruth Tully, Elyse Williams, Betty Lanier, Sana Blackwood, Mable Dinaud, and Margie Hoop.

Sorry to have eliminated the names of John and Dottie King the other day when referring to the H.A.U. party at the Country Club. Of course they were there. In fact that's where I got much of my information.

The marriage market is going poorly. Evidently I have obligated Jackie Crawford into finding husbands for fussy girls. Not only do they expect too much of their physical appearance, but they also want a generous bank account. Roy Mann knows more about that than this reporter. All the men I know are either poor or awfully close.

A serious forenoon being off on four this afternoon was Forrest Stovell, Tom Blackburn, Bill Stinson and Jim Parker. As for me, it was too hot to play and far more pleasant to just appear for the luncheon and listen to the other girls complain about the heat. The last golf luncheon of the year was held today at the Maxwell Country Club.

Herlong Report

The House has struck down the administration's billion dollar soil bank program by refusing to fund it after this year. The Senate may restore the plan by voting money. But the soil bank is a demonstrated failure and the quicker it is ended, the better off the American farmer and the farm economy will be.

Let me say at the beginning, this program ignores all except the crops and provides an artificial and uneconomic stimulus for conversion of lands into non-basic crops which are themselves in surplus and without support payments or governmental help.

I voted against the soil bank last year. I thought at the very outset that it was not a solution to the farm problem. Just giving millions to farmers for producing crops isn't the answer.

There has been evidence of many abuses of the program. It has been wasteful. The all-land has been created, the workers and many communities have been depressed by it. People who hitherto worked the land have been thrown out of work. Hard hit have been the suppliers of fertilizers, seeds and machinery. The purchasing power in farm areas has dropped.

For example, suppose in Florida our citrus lands were under the program which they are not. If the growers were paid to cut down their trees, packing houses, fertilizer factories, crate mills, machinery manufacturers as well as all the thousands of employees of these industries would suffer. Local banks and merchants would feel soil is not the answer to the agricultural surplus. It is not in keeping with the American way of life.

In Florida, when we found we had a surplus of oranges and other citrus products, our research people went to work. The result was frozen concentrate and

Traveling Season Nearing

By DOC QUINN

United Press Staff Correspondent NEW YORK — The word has reached here that the island horrors are resuscitating war-famed Henderson Field on Guadalcanal and the equally celebrated Munda airstrip on New Guinea.

The romantic names of these two exotic isles are a reminder that the travel season is nearly upon us. Millions will be on the move.

As a public service at this time, here are some excerpts from "Quinn's handy baggage hints," a briefcase size compendium in which I have obligated travel writer scribbles of some far-away spots which have sauntered before his eyes for years.

Note: Some of these places were visited under unseemly conditions induced by World War II. There may have been changes.

Gradlecan. Charming tropical hell-type paradise not too far below equator to escape its influence. Always seems to be steamed up about something. Tourists are advised to take along their own air. The local air often seems to be all steam and no oxygen. Northern coast affords magnificent view of coasted rapidly, half-sunk ship hulks. No fishing whatsoever is needed except a full length muskrat net for both day and night snar.

Canned Meats Grace Breakfast

Canned meats go associated with luncheon and dinner menus provide variety and heartiness at breakfast too. For example, ever-popular corned beef hash may be topped with baked or poached eggs. Pork sausage, canned in link, bulk and patty styles, makes a fine team with plain or blueberry pancakes. And scrambled eggs are the better for an addition of spicy deviled ham.

The 12-ounce loaf of luncheon meat, and the 12-ounce packs of beef, veal and chopped ham may be sliced and pan-browned for breakfast intake.

Baked Hash 'n' Eggs
1 can (1 pound) corned beef hash
4 eggs
Salt
Pepper
Divide corned beef hash into 4 individual baking dishes. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 20 minutes. Make a depression in hash for eggs. Break an egg into each dish. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Continue baking until eggs are set, about 12 minutes. YIELD: 4 servings.

Deviled Ham
1 dozen eggs
1/2 cup milk
2 small cans (2 1/2 ounces each) deviled ham
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon Tabasco
4 tablespoons (1/2 stick) butter
Paprika
Break eggs into large mixing bowl. Add milk, deviled ham, salt and Tabasco; beat with rotary beater until foamy. Melt butter in shallow dish or large skillet; pour in egg mixture. Cook over medium heat, stirring from bottom and sides as eggs become firm. Continue until eggs are thick and creamy. To serve, sprinkle with paprika. YIELD: 4 servings.

Remedy For Our Growing Traffic Problem Must Start At 'Roots'

The best and most effective safety lesson is "a good example." Thousands upon thousands of editorials, speeches, messages, news items and other methods of bringing the traffic safety lesson to the motoring public have been written.

Sometimes they are effective and get points across that otherwise would have gone unheeded.

However, every good message is torn completely apart and discarded when one bad example is seen along our streets, roads and highways—especially when public officials and government employees are seen casting all safety regulations to the wind.

Whatever kind of license plate a car may bear, whatever insignia the vehicle may carry, whoever the driver of the car or vehicle might be does not give the vehicle the right-of-way or provide special privileges to the driver or car.

Many cars bear a license plate with an "X" shown before its number—these are readily identified as vehicles operated by city or county governments. Others bear "FHP" designating that car as a Florida Highway Patrol vehicle. Many others carry special insignia.

The only time there is special privilege granted is when red lights are flashing and sirens are wailing. It is then that an emergency exists—a life is at stake and speed is a necessity. Speed only—not recklessness.

Last night at approximately 10 o'clock a Florida Highway Patrol car, properly marked and designated by its special color, ran a red light at a prominent intersection in Sanford. There were no red lights flashing, no siren blaring. Yet a life was endangered when it sped in front of a car already entering the intersection. Seconds later the patrol car was sauntering back to the prominent boulevard without a passenger which was at first riding in the front seat.

There was a bad example! Others would like to follow suit—and many probably do—giving as a reason "I saw him doing it so why can't I."

Garbage trucks block traffic along busy streets—police cruisers double park when available parking places are nearby. Taxicabs are allowed to stop midway of the street to take on or discharge passengers. Law enforcement officers hide in intersections, behind billboards and hedges in complete non-compliance with laws and ordinances.

These are just a few of the examples

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower on warning against further deep cuts in his foreign aid program:
"Refusal to give adequate support for the crucial mutual security programs could hardly be more ill-advised or ill-timed. In this kind of gamble, American lives are just as much in the balance as American dollars."

VERACRUZ, Mexico — The Dairymen Association on its assertion that stores are selling 10-15 percent more milk a day more than is being produced:
"We don't want to accuse anyone of watering the milk, but we think the situation merits investigation."

HOLLYWOOD — Singer Dorothy Dandridge on settlement of her two million dollar libel suit against Confidential Magazine:
"It is my hope that this will give more people the courage to fight back against such scandal publications."

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — Deposed French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau, when asked whether he believed Israel should send a ship through the Suez Canal:
"That is a question I cannot answer because it is no longer on my agenda. The next government should answer that question."

WASHINGTON — A Citizens for Eisenhower man on the thinking of the off-beat political organization:
"We are not going to be against anybody — against any Republican, that is . . ."

MASTIC BEACH, N. Y. — Little Benny Hooper on his first lung-fall of fresh air after being removed from an oxygen tent:

QUESTION AND ANSWER
Q: For the past three years, I have had a swelling on my chest about the size of an egg, and swollen ankles. Am also interested in knowing what is meant by the term a "strained heart muscle."
A: Answer: The swelling on your chest might be due to a fatty tumor, cyst or tumor of some other variety.
Swollen ankles may come from chronic kidney disease, heart disease or some circulatory disturbance. A careful examination by your physician is needed to determine the cause of these conditions.

Helpful Rules
I'd like to pass these rules on to you:
1—Always associate drinking with solid food.
2—Adopt good eating habits. Excess drink may rob a person of his desire for food.

3—Don't spend more time on cocktails than on the dinner course.
4—Be certain meals are on time, so there is no danger of drinking while waiting.
5—Don't drink when physically tired in order to "get a lift." Instead, eat something sweet to provide a quick source of energy.
6—Have a proper reason for taking a drink. To overcome nervousness, worry, or to forget something are not good reasons. It's not always quite this simple, of course, but these six rules may go a long way in helping prevent development of another alcoholic.

that are being set daily for motorists to follow as "good drivers".

Yet, day after day, safety messages continue to pound out the dangers of disobeying ordinances and laws.

The best safety message is a "good example".

This isn't an attempt to put our public servants "on the spot", but merely an attempt to call to their attention the many violations carelessly done and without sound thinking.

Sometimes these infractions occur because those who make them believe they are "immune" to a reprimand or even the same charge that would be brought against just an "ordinary" citizen. Such is not the case for a violation is a violation, regardless of the one at fault, public official, law enforcement officer, or holder of a special insignia.

A remedy for our multiplying traffic violations must begin at the "grass roots" and there is no better time to start than right now while accidents, injuries, deaths and property damage is at an alltime high.

Unpleasant Sign

There may soon be a new requirement before building permits are issued. Not only are business houses more and more trying to provide parking space for their employees and customers, in some states new structures must arrange for such facilities before permission is granted to erect them, just as we have in our own city code. Now comes the hint of a new possibility.

In Formosa, the seat of Nationalist China, dance halls must provide air raid shelters large enough to accommodate both employees and patrons. If international tension grows, that may become a requirement in our city building codes.

It is one of the less pleasant signs of the times.

Get Polio Shot Today!

Some diseases, once an effective vaccine has been found, are easy to conquer. Take smallpox for instance. If a large part of the country's population is vaccinated, the "chain of infection" is broken and the virus fades out. The same is true for diphtheria.

But polio vaccinations work differently. It sets up antibodies in the bloodstream that prevent the polio virus from attacking and destroying the nerve centers. A person thus protected against paralysis, however, can still harbor the polio virus in his system and can still transmit it to someone else—his family, his neighbors, the people with whom he works. Everybody, in short, regardless of vaccination, is a potential "carrier".

That's what Dr. Jonas Salk meant when he warned: "Your neighbor's vaccination won't protect you."

If you want protection against paralytic polio, you must get it yourself. Even if every other person in your town were vaccinated and you were not, you would still be in the category designated as "susceptible to paralytic polio."

Problem With Allies Continues

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — One of the gayest and in the long view, most thoughtful morsels of news to emerge from Europe this spring concerns plans for a new kind of tour. This one would be organized "for hopeful American spinners."

According to the dispatch from London, a busy travel guide from New York named Betty Murray has been cruising Europe drawing up a list of eligible bachelors—including movie stars and a couple dozen Italian, Austrian, and Scandinavian noblemen—to whom a plenitude of American ladies would be introduced on a tour next year.

The hopeful ladies presumably would be on their own after the introductions and, as Miss Murray says, "I think it will all work out all right, it ought to be a real ball." (The trip also would include sightseeing.)

The Japanese case has assumed serious proportions. It is likely to strengthen the demand of the Japanese government for a radical revision of the mutual security treaty which defines the status of American troops stationed on Japanese territory.

In the Formosa incident, the question of jurisdiction does not arise. American court martials have full jurisdiction over all American soldiers stationed on the Nationalist stronghold island of Formosa.

But unless the sergeant now on trial is convicted, and given a severe sentence, the Nationalist government is expected to ask for an agreement, similar to that reached with Japan, for jurisdiction over soldiers charged with offenses against Chinese civilians.

Last Jan. 30, Sgt. William B. Reynolds, charged with manslaughter, has been returned against him.

The situation has been complicated because the American command in Japan agreed to surrender Girard. But Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson overruled this decision and ordered that Girard be kept in Army custody.

Administration Dispute Reported
Tokyo dispatches report that there is a dispute between Wilson and the State Department, which wants Girard surrendered.

In Formosa, the wife of M. Sgt. Robert G. Reynolds, of Colona, Md., saw a Chinese man staring through a bathroom window at her home while she took a shower. Reynolds ran outside with a pistol and killed the peeping tom. He was about to attack him.

Reynolds is on trial by court martial, charged with manslaughter.

The issue of court jurisdiction over American soldiers stationed in foreign countries has arisen previously in several countries.

The agreement with Japan is similar to that covering American soldiers stationed in European countries which are members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. But the Japanese incident has become serious.

Just before the notorious criminal, Jonathan Wild, was hanged at Tyburn, he remarked wryly, "Gentlemen, this will not only be a lesson to me, but it probably will cure my deafness."

The hopeful ladies presumably would be on their own after the introductions and, as Miss Murray says, "I think it will all work out all right, it ought to be a real ball." (The trip also would include sightseeing.)

Sample Suggestions
This is the kind of imagination we need in a day of jaded tourism. It also opens up a whole new world of possible sponsored trips, and herewith, for your choice, is a selected and screened list of possibilities:

Tour for Floating Bachelors — The planes would leave secretly and with no announced destination; if any woman were encountered in any of the foreign ports of call, the plane would take off within one hour.

Tour for Meeting Interesting Wine on Their Home Grounds — This would be an increasingly meandering trip: it would start out in southern Europe, head north, and maybe even wander around in circles. Then it would zigzag through the Middle East and Orient, not forgetting to be introduced to sake in Japan, and end in California.

Tour to Stop Smoking On — Signs inside the plane would say, "Danger, gasoline tanks in cabin—no smoking on peril of being blown to bits." No one would be allowed to leave the plane at any time. Dancing girls at airports could be viewed through cabin windows.

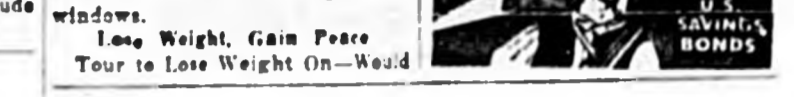

Loss Weight, Gain Peace
Tour to Lose Weight On—Would begin with everybody on bicycles, headed west; on reaching Rocky Mountain region, everybody would change to horseback; three standard meals a day would be heretack.

Tour for Some Peace and Quiet — Anyone for the space satellite? Get your tickets now.

Tour to Save Money On This would envision sitting in your backyard for two weeks reading through a pile of travel folders and from time to time sipping from bottles of tap water taken from hotels in various foreign climes.

Love-America Tour, for people in Europe who hate America — They would be taken to the nearest mint here and allowed to earn the money.

The best grass for an attractive lawn in the northern Great Plains area is bluegrass.

Garden Gate

By LAURA CHITTENDEN (HEMEROCALLIS CIRCLE) SANFORD GARDEN CLUB

If there should be heavy rains during the month of June, the plant food leaches out of the light, sandy soils very quickly. Feed lawns with ammonium sulphate and fertilizer all palms, trees, vines, and shrubs. Newly planted lawns can be fed with light applications of soluble plant food in between give the lawns plenty of water.

Rare tropical plants may be set out now if they have been in containers. Continue air layering so that the new plants will be well established by fall.

Give camellias and azaleas their last feeding before hot weather sets in. Use one of the special acid fertilizers. If the soil is very light and sandy, it is a good idea to test its pH, using one of the home kits which garden stores sell. If the soil tests alkaline or neutral, correct with alum or sulphur.

To control scale insects on azaleas, camellias, gardenias, and pyracantha use sprays of summer oils or malathion. Use lindane or malathion to control other insects. Mulching helps in keeping root-knot nematode damage in sandy garden soils to a minimum during hot dry weather. A thick mulch around shrubs keeps rootlets growing near the surface cooler and protects tender rootlets growing near the surface.

If plants were cut back earlier in the season, there will be much new growth which should be trimmed back. To encourage branching and desired shape pinch out shrub plantings.

There will be late bloom of ageratum, portulaca, zinnia, cosmos, gallardia, and morning glory if seeds are planted this month.

Sport Parade

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK UP—Herb Score is fighting for his life today and, in defense of sports, you have to hope that the Italian fireballer wins and the Italian fireballer loses.

There is a tremendous difference here. In one case, that of Score, he narrowly escaped a fatal injury which comes under the heading of an occupational hazard he faced alone. In the Italian road race, the race driving Marquis de Portago did but took 11 spectators with him.

The difference is that a man should be entitled to his destiny as long as it doesn't affect the innocent bystander. Baseball is a game played on a policed area. Score took a line drive in the face and, conceivably, could suffer the loss of the sight of one eye. This is a rare case. Yes, it must be admitted, that potential is covered in an annual salary estimated at $18,000 to $20,000.

Not Unsympathetic
Don't think that this is an unsympathetic outlook. It is merely the recognition, despite a feeling for his pain, that Score had to be prepared for such an eventuality. The Marquis de Portago, too, thought often of the hazards of driving a race car. Had he gone alone you would fight it off with a dull ache. But the tragedy of it was those he took along the reason the road races which can't be properly controlled from a spectator standpoint should be banned.

But don't say that auto racing as a whole should be banned. In the United States they are operated on a safety-first standard. At Indianapolis, let's say, death is not too frequent a visitor. But usually it is among the competitors and you can't stop men from racing.

They say that boxing is a brutal sport and some contend it should be outlawed. True, a dozen men were killed in boxing bouts last year. But boxing or fighting is a primeval instinct. Controlled properly it is no more dangerous than most.

How About Hockey?
Some 20,000 people were killed in falls last year. But should we stop trying to scale the heights? The goalie in a hockey game faces a fatal thrust from a puck in every game and injuries are so frequent, and so disregarded, that the men of the rink glory in being the "toughest men in sports." The little men who go from rags to riches as jockeys despite their lack of stature face death each moment they thunder down the track. But why should anyone legislate them out of business?

Almost 500 people died in ship sinkings last year. But where would we have been without Eric the Red, the dauntless pilgrim and others of their ilk? So while I'll back anybody who hopes they kill the murderous Mille Miglia, I've got to go for sports where a guy faces his fate alone.

DOING WELL BY NAME - By Alan Maver

DICK SISLER, BOSTON RED SOX NURSER, WHO'S DREAMING WILL BE BY THE HALL OF FAME NAME.

THE SON OF THE IMMORTAL GEORGE SISLER IS ONLY IN HIS 2ND SEASON BUT HE ALREADY SHOWS HE CAN BEAT THE BEST WHO'S LOST NONE AGAINST YANKEES AND INDIANS LAST YEAR; HIS FIRST THREE YEARS WERE AGAINST THE SAME TWO.

A large crowd is expected to be on hand tomorrow afternoon when the kickoff whistle blows at 4:30 and the Sanford Seminoles bring their two week spring football training to a close with a grudge battle between the Orange and the White.

Both teams are well balanced and have new timber mixed with the seasoned and all candidates for next year's edition of the Sanford Seminoles are to participate in the big game of the spring season.

With the two teams rated as a toss-up, its anybody's ball game and everybody is happy with the win except the members of the losing team. Coach Dave Laude has said that even the eight grade candidates, who will be freshmen next year, will participate in the battle royal.

The stamina and desire of the players will be on watchful display as they battle the breath-taking weather as well as their aggressive team mates in the battle to be waged behind Seminole High School on the practice fields.

The hot may sun will be a grueling task-master for the candidates as they hope for that one play that will attract attention to their brand of football and give them an inside track for next year's team.

"We're looking for consistency and aggressiveness," Laude said. "We want to field a team next year that will be solid and will be able to go all the way when the chips are down. We have some fine material and we're going to work hard with the boys trying to bring it out."

Coach Bud Leyer, who has been teaming with Dick Silvers on the Orange team, had the same praise for his charges. "It's hard to get the boys to give everything they've got in practices that are hot and suffocating," he said. "But we expect top notch performances tomorrow afternoon."

The early hope that the newly appointed head football coach, Jim Pigot, would be on hand for the classic tilt tomorrow afternoon still had a question mark for the fulfillment as no word came in that Pigot could definitely be on hand to witness the game.

Pigot arose part of last weekend with administrators and athletic personnel from Seminole High School, going over basic plays and executions of them and some of the training requirements of the team members. It was hoped that he could be on hand to get a working concept of the material with which he will work next year.

Pigot is scheduled to come in Sanford with his family in mid-June and it is anticipated that he will call the prospective members of the football team together for summer workouts to give himself ample time to build a strategy for the coming season.

Kickoff time is 4:30 p. m. tomorrow afternoon behind Seminole High School.

Semi-Pros To Fight For Top Spot Tonite

The Sanford Semi-Pros have just one big hurdle ahead of them tonight before they make their season debut in Memorial Stadium Sunday afternoon at 2:30 against Ovidio in a Central Florida League clash.

The fight for the top spot in the League is on tonight as the Sanford Semi-Pros travel to Orlando Tinker Field for a 730 clash with undefeated Pinecastle.

Andy Bracken, yet to yield his first hit of the season, is scheduled to go on the mound for Sanford in a clash that should highlight this week's action for the lead in the Central Florida League.

Working behind the plate is Dave Laude, Seminole High school baseball mentor. Gene Yost, who bats cleanup with consistency and power is scheduled to handle third sack and Jim Krider is expected to handle the pivot at first base.

The highly touted Sanford team, fielded through the efforts of W. C. "Red" Hires, will have its season test of strength just three days before the Sanford fans arrive.

Big League Homer Production Is Down This Year

NEW YORK UP—The softball nobody throws... a new "dead ball" in play... or perhaps the hitters are tired... whatever the reason, big league pitchers have cut down sharply on homer production this year.

A United Press survey of the first 225 games played this season and last reveals an overall 18.7 per cent decrease. The drop is 21 per cent in the National League and 13.2 in the American with only four of the 16 teams showing a rise in production from 1956.

The Kansas City Athletics show the biggest rise, 34.7 per cent, followed by the Baltimore Orioles' 30.7, the Chicago White Sox' 28.6 and the New York Giants' 11.1.

The Cincinnati Redlegs, Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs have suffered the biggest drops in the NL, while the Washington Senators, Detroit Tigers, Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees show the sharpest decreases in the AL.

CHAPTER 23
CHAD MAYS sat deep into his desk chair. He rubbed his fingertips up the back of his neck, pursed his lips and chuckled. As if pleased.

"You know what that is?" asked the man in the seersucker suit.

Chad glanced up at him. "Sure. I've been served, processed, summoned—er—er—subpoenaed—and—and—" His eyes were suddenly garnets, hard and glittery. "And arrested!" He folded the paper, slapped it upon the desk blotter. "Get out!" he told the man.

Hazel Barr laughed at the speed of the deputy's departure. Chad glanced at her, and whirled his chair about to stare out of the window.

"Can I—can I help, Doctor?" she asked demurely.

Chad closed one eye. "If you'd put your mind to it, you could figure what the suit is about. One of our patients, of course," he aided indifferently. "They claim we made a false diagnosis, assuring the patient she had nothing serious to worry about when actually she has a pre-cancerous skin ailment. This, according to our friend at the County Hospital——who naturally is behind the charge—has caused the woman great shock and agony of mind!"

Miss Barr's red lips pouted, her etched brows drew together. "But that would be Dr. Wilkins-Smith?" Hazel asked Chad, light beginning to dawn.

Chad grinned. "She sent herself, she chose to go to County Hospital. Who else went there, the Superintendent himself saw her. With the results we now know," he added complacently.

"Stella's had this skin thing, off and on for years," he explained to Helen. "Helen to dozens of doctors. I knew about it after a certain Medical Board meeting."

John sighed. "Go on and tell it," he said feebly.

"Well—Stella's short report went to County, and Wilkins-Smith saw her. He told her—and that he could cure it."

"He did, eh? And he called it pre-epithelioma?"

Chad looked pleased. "After a purely ocular examination?"

"At the clinic," he explained. "I did a full histology—a microscopic examination of tissue. But the only record of that fact happens to be in my wallet, for safekeeping."

"The clinic is being sued! No matter how strong our case may seem to be, that's no laughing matter. I want to know what you'll do now, Chad," John said emphatically.

Chad ate his ice cream.

"Have you talked to a lawyer? The clinic has one, you know, for you mean to work through him?"

"Look, John," Chad said patiently. "I know much more about these rat-runs than a clean-toed fellow of your sort could ever learn or guess."

"Oh, quit bragging!" cried John testily, especially for him. "Just keep in mind, will you, please, what your contract says you're here to do for us? This may not be your fight at all."

"Even if my name were not on that process, I'd make it my fight."

"Can you win it?"

"Sure."

"All right, then. But don't drag me any further along your dubious ways. I'll take your word that you know about such things, and do your part openly when and if the time comes."

"I know. In fact I know a good deal. Except for one thing," Chad divined under the table to retrieve the newspaper. "I don't know how they got that long report out of our files! But I sure as Christmas mean to find out," he added grimly. "I'm just glad I had the foresight not to put the histology report in it. That would have made Wilkins-Smith more cautious."

America, Steel-Growing Together

America and steel — growing together.

On Thursday, May 23, U. S. Post Offices across the nation will begin selling a commemorative postage stamp which honors the 100th anniversary of the steel industry in America. The new three-cent issue will go on sale at 20,000 post offices following the first day sale at the New York City's General Post Office on Wednesday, May 22.

As the design for the new stamp, Post Office Department officials have selected an eagle with outspread wings to represent America and a pouring ladle, long the symbol of the steel industry.

Across the upper quarter of the blue stamp are the words "America and Steel Growing Together." The selection of that phrase is particularly appropriate. For since the invention of the revolutionary pneumatic steelmaking process by William Kelly and Henry Bessemer a century ago, the growth of America and that of the steel industry have paralleled one another.

The year 1857 was one of opportunity for a new industry. Our country's population was 30,000,000 and soaring with each decade. Manufacturing and construction were booming so fast that tools and small machines were at a premium.

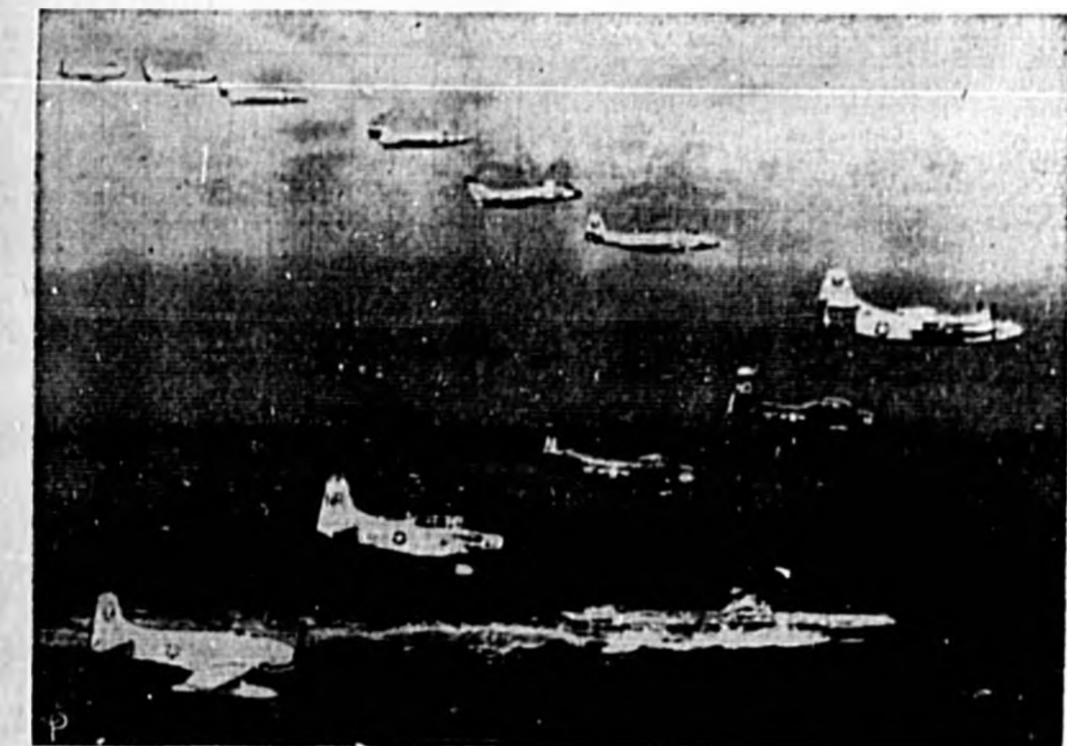

The growing network of railroads had just under 4,000 miles of track built out of brittle iron rails. Then, with steel suddenly abundant and cheap, new industries came into being—industries which, were to transform almost every aspect of American life.

Through the years that followed the Kelly-Bessemer invention the steel industry became a major contributor to our nation's growth in 1870 American steel industry production was less than a third of England's. Two decades later, America became the world's greatest steel producer — a status never relinquished.

A succession of industrial achievements such as the open hearth and electric furnace processes, the continuous rolling mill and the electrolytic tinning line have meant increased and more efficient steel production. The result has been an ever widening range of commodities which have constantly increased our living standards.

Today with our nation experiencing its greatest industrial boom, more and more steel is needed and the steel industry is meeting the challenge. Now engaged in the greatest peacetime expansion program in its history, the steel industry is looking forward to its continued participation in America's growth.

NEW YORK — Carmen Sanchez, 17, sat in the crowded waiting room of Bronx Magistrate's Court Tuesday waiting for her case to be called. A court clerk noticed her complexion and called Magistrate Samuel J. Ohringer. Ohringer immediately postponed her case and sent her to the hospital—the girl had chicken pox.

That Extra Pat Of Butter Can Add Up To Pounds

By HERMAN H. BUNDSTEIN, M.D.

A PAT of butter is a pretty good thing. But eat too many of them and you are apt to develop into a pretty big thing.

Butter is a good food. It's tasty and a normal amount under ordinary circumstances won't hurt or do any harm. In fact, your body needs a certain amount of fat.

But just one extra pat of butter a day can play havoc with your weight problem. The average pat of butter contains approximately 88 calories.

Metabolic Requirements

A single pound of body weight equals about 3,500 calories. That means just one pat of butter a day above your metabolic requirements could add some eight pounds to your waistline during the course of a year.

Too many sweets will do the same thing. A piece of pie, for example, contains an average of around 250 calories. Just one extra piece of pie per week might add three pounds of body weight in a single year.

Eating Between Meals

You don't have to embark upon any starvation diet to cut down on your caloric intake. Just eliminating between-meal nibbling probably will accomplish a lot.

A person who is really obese probably eats the equivalent of one extra dinner per day. So cutting down just a little on your regular meals also will help quite a bit.

It might be a good idea, too, to avoid foods cooked in fat and to eliminate oily salad dressings from your diet if you are overweight.

Why Diet?

Why should you want to keep your weight down if you feel healthy despite a few extra pounds?

I have repeatedly pointed out the perils of the obese. They are more likely to develop heart trouble, kidney trouble and disease of the blood vessels, to name just a few hazards.

If you are fat, your heart has to work harder to keep you going. Take breathing, for instance.

Even while resting, a very obese person will breathe three times per minute more than a person of average weight. With work or exercise, the difference is even greater. You can see how this might tax the heart.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A. D. B. What causes psoriasis and is there a cure for it?

Answer: Its cause is not known, but it is thought that psoriasis may be due to some disorder in the metabolism of nitrogen.

C-For-E Has Two Objectives

United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON — The politically off-beat organization known as Citizens — for — Eisenhower has money in the bank and plans to spend a lot of it in next year's congressional campaign.

C-for-E was set up in 1952 with two objectives. It reached both. They were (1) to raise money from sources which regular Republican organizations could not tap and (2) to rally voters who might not respond to regular Republican campaign efforts.

The events of 1952 will prove, of course, whether C-for-E campaigning is on the professional or the amateur beam. On the amateur beam, the organization might use its funds in an effort to defeat some of the congressional Republicans who have been opposing the President.

Won't Be So

The United Press informed that Citizens — for — Eisenhower would not be so engaged in 1954. Three notable Republican senators who often have given Eisenhower the back of their hands will be up for reelection next year. They are Sen. John W. Bricker (Ohio), William E. Jenner (Ind.) and George W. Malone (Nev.). These men are conservatives who spurn new party labels such as the modern Republicans with which the President seeks to re-christen his party.

As of now, however, it is not likely that Citizens-for-Eisenhower money and efforts will be used against these senators or against any Republican candidates. The organization's purpose, instead, is to devote its funds and efforts solely to the election of Republicans more closely associated with the White House program.

It will be an all-out, big money effort, from which candidates such as Bricker or Jenner, for example, would benefit indirectly. For every dollar contributed by C-for-E to the election of an Eisenhower Republican candidate would free regular party funds to help any or all other Republican candidates.

Political Dollars Short

There is a political short in the effect that money may not be everything, but it comes ahead of whatever may be in second place. Regular Republican and Democratic organizations are having trouble now raising funds. Republican regional meetings reflect that. Several Republican state chairmen reported last weekend in Cincinnati that they were having difficulty getting up the money. They attributed this in considerable part to grass roots dissatisfaction with the Eisenhower Budget.

C-for-E has $200,000 banked in New York City for 1954 and 150 sub-organizations throughout the United States. The combined resources of the parent and subsidiary organization is about one million dollars with more to be raised.

That money, professionally administered, will be a campaign factor next year.

Jewel Party Cake

A glamorous dessert for especially festive occasions, this Jewel Party Cake is a colorful and flavormore medley of strawberry, black raspberry and grape-flavored gelatin cubes captured in a delicate cherry bavarian. For the base, a new and shorter method of preparation is used to combine the cherry-flavored gelatin with evaporated milk. It may surprise you but its elegance belies its simplicity.

Jewel Party Cake

1 package strawberry-flavored gelatin
1 package grape-flavored gelatin
1 package black raspberry-flavored gelatin
2 cups hot water
1 1/2 cups cold water
1 package cherry-flavored gelatin

1 cup hot water
1 can (13 oz.) evaporated milk
1/2 teaspoon almond extract
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup packaged graham cracker crumbs
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted

Prepare the first three packages of gelatin separately, using 1 cup hot water and 1/2 cup cold water for each. Pour into separate 5x8-inch pans and chill until firm.

Dissolve cherry gelatin in hot water. Gradually add evaporated milk. Stir until well blended. Add extract and lemon juice. Chill until thickened. Place bowl firmly in ice and water and whip until mixture is fluffy and thick.

Mix graham cracker crumbs with melted butter. Press smoothly over bottom of a 9-inch spring-form pan.

Cut the firm strawberry, grape and black raspberry gelatin into 1/2-inch cubes. Fold into whipped gelatin mixture, then pour into pan. Chill 8 hours in refrigerator. Before serving remove sides of pan only. Frost sides of dessert with 1/2 cup cream, whipped and sweetened, if desired. Serves 12 to 15 servings.

Senate Reapportionment Plans Rejected Today By Amendments Group

Top News In Brief

WASHINGTON — Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland, unopposed by a solid majority among congressmen, today rejected a Senate plan to reapportion the House as in the present Constitution.

WASHINGTON — The administration today to try to complete work on a new disarmament proposal calling for "small slice" arms cut that would include missiles, ships, tanks and planes capable of carrying atomic weapons. The tentative plan, as disclosed Thursday, provides that weapons taken out of action would be delivered to an international depot where they would be held under careful inspection.

Two Sanford Men On Nominee List Of Advisory Group

LAKELAND — Only two new persons were nominated to membership on the citrus shippers advisory committee, which has control over grade and size regulations under the federal marketing agreement, in balloting Thursday.

Shippers met here and nominated Dan Richardson of Vero Beach and John Arko of Orlando as new members. They were the only new faces included as the shippers picked eight members and eight alternates.

However, Fred Johnson and Harry Gumprecht, both of Tampa, exchanged positions as member and alternate because of a rule forbidding a person to serve as a member for more than three years. Under the latest setup, Gumprecht is the member and Johnson the alternate.
