THURSDAY, AUGUST 16. BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY: THE WEAKNESS OF WICKEDNESS—Fret not thyself because of evil men...

THE WEAKNESS OF WICKEDNESS—Fret not thyself because of evil men, neither be thou envious at the wicked; for there shall be no reward to the evil man; the candle of the wicked shall be put out.—Prov. 24:19, 20. PRAYER—O Thou Who art absolute goodness, we rejoice that right is might and will prevail!

TO AN OLD GARDNER: Your wares in life are crimson hollyhocks, Madonna lilies—swaying in the wind. You are a friend of pansies and wild phlox, and lovelier friends than these are hard to find.

It must be a bit embarrassing to Dr. Straton to be informed that liquor is being sold at his hotel.

We see by the papers that Fairless Doughbanks is among those endorsing a well known brand of cigarettes.

Headline in the New York Herald-Tribune says "Faints at $413 Fine For Traffic Violations." As if that isn't enough to faint about.

"Did the storm," the Sanford Herald asks, "run the Tribune's Gulf Stream back home?" It couldn't have been the storm, Roland, that sent us back to this particular port. Any port in a storm—Gulf Stream.

New York has developed a fondness for avocados, a fact that reminds us that there is a crop whose production in this state should be increased as rapidly as possible. Imagine the income that could be obtained from fifty trees when the pears sell at fifteen to thirty cents apiece.

Several of the state newspapers, following the example of the Tampa Tribune, are conducting straw votes on the presidential election. And after all is said and done they don't mean a thing one way or another. They do, however, furnish a subject for some interesting news stories.

An airplane catapulted from the decks of an ocean liner, four hundred and fifty miles at sea, arrived in New York in four hours, delivering European mail twenty-four hours ahead of regular schedule. Despite the fact that this is an unusual record, it excites only passing interest because in this age of great progress we are amused only by the most extraordinary achievements.

The state hotel inspection division having the "bedbug situation" well in hand, now turns its attention to the bottle openers. Will we have inspectors to feel the pockets of hotel guests to see whether they are carrying bottles into their rooms to mutilate the furniture and plaster? Or will the inspectors be so convenient call to furnish the necessary corkcraw?

Florida is receiving a lot of publicity these days but it happens to be not of the choicest kind. The hurricane, which hit the state several days ago and wended its way on up the eastern coast, has been referred to as the Florida storm in every state along the Atlantic seaboard. It is manifestly unfair to the Sunshine State to call the disturbance a Florida storm when, as a matter of fact, the storm originated in the West Indies.

Go Get 'Em Gators

For the purpose of acquainting alumni of Florida University with its new football coach and of arousing enthusiasm in the activities of the university there was held yesterday a meeting in the Valdez Grill. Present were Charlie Bachman, the new grid mentor; Everett Von, athletic director; Ralph Stoutamire, secretary of the alumni association; Frank S. Wright, director of publicity, and alumni and friends of the University.

Entering one of the most critical years in its comparatively short but illustrious history, Florida, with a new president at its helm and with a new football coach guiding the destinies of the "Fighting Gators," has done well to dispatch emissaries in an effort to bring the University closer to those who on another day bade farewell to their alma mater. And we believe everyone, who was present at the meeting yesterday and heard the reminiscences of old alumni and the professed aspirations for a greater future by newcomers to the fold, were moved to have a warmer feeling for the school from which it might seem but a year and day they graduated.

In assuming the duties of head coach of Florida, Charlie Bachman, handicapped as all new coaches are in taking over the reigns of a team trained by the methods of another system, will need the unstinted support of all alumni and Floridians who wish to see the state university among the leaders. Too much cannot be expected at once, and if the Gators seem to be slow in getting under way patience will be the quality which will do more for bringing success than anything else.

However with an abundance of excellent green material under the guidance of the former Notre Dame star we predict that before the close of the season opponents of the University will view their approaching games with a feeling of misgiving. To Bachman and his assistants we wish the greatest possible success.

Blackmer, The Elusive

Henry M. Blackmer, American oil magnate and missing Teapot Dome witness, who has been residing for several years in France to keep from appearing in the celebrated oil trials, is in the limelight again. Wanted in Colorado to answer a charge of perjury in connection with the filing of income statements, the widely sought Blackmer several days ago almost walked into a well-laid trap to kidnap him and bring him back to the United States to face trial and answer numerous other accusations.

The recalcitrant millionaire, so the story goes, was invited to take tea aboard a friend's yacht which flew the American flag. Accepting the invitation without any suspicion of what was about to take place, Blackmer started out for the party. Arriving at the pier, the oil man was stepping into a launch that was to take him to the yacht, when one of the two burly detectives who are his constant companions, pulled him back. Had it not been for the sleuth's forethought, Blackmer in all probability would today be speeding toward America.

According to press dispatches, the yacht was owned by enemies of the oil king and was ready to set sail the minute Blackmer was on board. Those who plotted the abduction had planned to head the ship straight for the open sea and once outside of the three-mile limit, they were to arrest the fugitive and place him aboard an American liner bound for New York. In six days he would have been languishing in an American cell, the victim of a deep-seated conspiracy. But the scheme didn't work and today Blackmer is in seclusion somewhere in France as free from apprehension as he has been since he first put foot on foreign soil several years ago.

No doubt the oil man is breathing deep sighs of relief because of the frustrated plot. His close call should form an interesting chapter in the law dodging tactics that he has been forced to adopt. For that matter the episode possesses all the elements that go to make up a movie thriller, but we doubt that Blackmer got as much fun out of the drama as a cinema hero does in outwitting the dark-eyed villain. Realism, the oil king would probably contend, is one thing while acting is something entirely different.

TWO IMPORTANT AMENDMENTS FORT MYERS TROPICAL NEWS

By constitutional amendments to be voted on at the coming general election, the people of Florida will, we hope, put an end to the perennial evil of special local legislation. Two amendments have been framed which seem well designed to rid the state of a system under which each member of the legislature is virtually a little czar as far as his own constituency is concerned, and under which there have been notorious abuses of the lawmaking power.

The first of the two amendments under discussion provides for the classification of Florida municipalities and the adoption by the legislature of a "uniform system of county and municipal government." Cities and towns will no longer be incorporated under special laws which are changed at each session to suit the whim of the authorities of the moment or of the representative. There is probably not a citizen in Fort Myers who could tell off-hand how many charters and charter amendments Fort Myers has had. The number of charter enactments which have successfully modified our municipal government would probably coincide with the number of sessions of the legislature which have been held since the incorporation of the city.

The other amendment is a very emphatic and clear prohibition of special and local legislation without prior notice to the persons affected. Advertising of such legislation in advance of its passage is required at present, but the constitutional provision as it stands is violated persistently and with impunity. Under the amendment, proof of prior publication must be affixed to the supposed bill and must be entered upon the journals of the two houses. Publication need not be made only if the proposed law provides for a referendum.

If these two amendments are approved, as we earnestly hope they will be, the people of the state will be saved a vast deal of unwise, dangerous, selfish or merely ally legislation. Local law will be established and taxpayers will be protected from impositions.

JURY SERVICE UNPOPULAR DAYTONA BEACH NEWS JOURNAL

The president of the American Bar association seeks to explain the wave of crime of violence. He is quoted as saying that the "apathy and indifference of our best citizens" toward their duty as citizens to serve on juries is one of the principal causes of the increase in crimes of violence in the United States in the last few years. "Those best qualified to serve as jurors seek to avoid service because they dislike to leave their business," he says. His statement is identical with that made to the Rotary club here by Judge J. C. H. Koonce.

It is a fact that business and professional men and the more intelligent and cultured classes of women in many cases contrive to evade jury service, but whether this shirking of a duty of citizenship has any relation to the crime and more action and abstract legality and more concrete justice, not to go great.

every citizen should consider jury service a privilege, but somehow all sermons on jury service seem to lack sincerity. They seem to say "you should, but I don't blame you for trying to get out of it."

Perhaps judges, lawyers and court procedure are partly responsible for the unpopularity of jury service. The successful and influential citizen suffers considerable financial loss and wastes many hours of his valuable time in his opinion. It is any wonder he protests when the time of judges, lawyers, witnesses and jurors is wasted in cases that should never have come into court, or in trials that should be completed in a few hours but are prolonged for days? Probably if there were a quickening of the law and its processes, less form and more action and abstract legality and more concrete justice, not to go great.

A PROSPERITY RESERVE ST. PETERSBURG TIMES

Back in 1921 at President Harding's unemployment conference Owen D. Young recommended creation of a "prosperity reserve" to be used in time of unemployment and business depression. Congress had done nothing but talk about it in several years that have elapsed. The Jones bill, which embodied the principle, was all but killed by the present congress in its last session. It will come up again at the short session next winter.

Under the Jones bill congress would set aside $75,000,000 for rural post roads, $50,000,000 for river and harbor improvements, $10,000,000 for flood control and $15,000,000 for public buildings. This money would be available whenever the president finds that the nation's construction operations have fallen 10 per cent below normal.

The theory, as expressed by Mr. Young in 1921, is: "Holding back public works and private construction for periods of depression not only gives employment to large numbers of workers when it is most needed, but creates a demand for raw materials for construction, which in turn stimulates other industries to offer employment."

If the people want a prosperity reserve created, their first step should be the election of a Democratic president and congress.

The can expect no relief in this direction from the party in power for it has stubbornly refused to concede the existence of unemployment and depression. Judging from its platform, the Republican party is too much concerned with past prosperity to think of present and future prosperity. Perhaps the present and preceding administrations would have taken the practical step toward permanent prosperity had it favored some special interest instead of the workers and taxpayers.

SLAVES TO FASHION ASHEVILLE TIMES

Has a man a right to dress for comfort in hot weather? Has he the courage to do it? If so, what should be his costume? These questions have been discussed with the greatest clarity and kindness in the columns of The New York Times by women who, perceiving the sufferings of the so-called lord of creation under the blazing rays of a July sun, desire to give him relief.

Even since the oil, soot and grease of the industrial age stripped from men the laces and ribbons with which they were wont to adorn their masculinity, it has been the proud boast of the pseudo superior being that he had neither the time nor the desire to make himself ridiculous by bowing down to the dictates of fashion and the requirements of style. This, says he, is fine stuff for the women. Let every man advertise his wealth by hanging on his wife the fabrics and jewels that ornament her person and proclaim his generosity. But let it also be noted that he always goes in for simplicity and comfort.

Never was a more pathetic piece of self-delusion practiced. Never was a more brazen fable put in circulation. In the matter of dress, man is an abject, spineless and blushing slave. Are trousers to be cut larger this fall? Then he must have his larger. Are hats to be higher in the crown? Then, not for any price will he be seen in low-crowned headgear. And so set is he in his worship of custom that generations come and go without his inventing a new garment or adopting a new costume.

Thus it naturally follows that when the New York women suggest cooler costumes for their brethren, the brave sons of men take to the tall timbers of negation. A sister proposes that they discard coats, collars and ties and wear their shirts with the neckbands turned in, like some of the college boys. Another suggests washable short pants, light shirts and a shirt. From all other dress reforms, they shrink in horror. Slaves to fashion, they must wear coats when they go to work, and a wing-chair in a quick transition while their wives keep cool in costumes that are something less than manly. O Lords of Creation! O victims of style and consciousness!

HOW DO YOU BUY?

When you enter a store to buy anything, how do you ask for it? Do you call for the articles by name, or do you generalize—a can of tomato soup; a bag of flour; an aluminum kettle; so many square yards of linoleum; a meat grinder?

It is much better and far more satisfactory to specify the articles you want by name, for merchandise that is good enough to be sold by name is almost always better in quality, and usually no higher in price, than goods of uncertain lineage and less certain quality.

The advertising columns of this newspaper carry advertised names that are familiar to millions of people. Soap, flour, sugar, cereals, kitchen ware, rugs, linoleum, automobiles, etc. They represent those articles that stand for the best in their respective classes of merchandise—quality all through.

Advertising keeps these names before you constantly. Advertising is a constant reminder that the articles you want are the same articles that you see advertised day after day—that justify their being by the service they render. And advertising brings you news—of inventions, discoveries, improvements that keep you up to date.

Tell the sales-clerk what you want by its advertised name. You'll get it—and your money will purchase full value. It pays to read advertising and remember advertised names.

Milane Theater Offers Double Bill With 'Soft Living,' 'Heart Trouble'

"Soft Living," a Fox Films comedy-drama which comes to the Milane Theatre today, is another triumph for Madge Bellamy.

Miss Bellamy again proves that she is one of the screen's leading comedienne. Her effective characterization of the young secretary who thinks she is after money instead of love is one of her best performances in many months.

Johnny Mack Brown, cast as the wealthy lumber magnate from the country, does particularly well as the un sophisticated boy who believes that love will always find a way. In a series of romantic and exciting adventures he finally wins the love of the wise little city girl and also her humble pardon for her unattractive behavior.

Mary Duncan, Joyce Compton and Henry Kalke complete the principals in the cast, James Tilling directing.

Harry Langdon is the one screen comedian who can truthfully be called the "ace" of all screen comics. His claim to this distinction lies in his characterization.

Bewildered, whimsical Harry, whose drooping, sad face and twitching lips, have created volcanic upheavals of laughter, is never imitated nor does he imitate. His screen characterization is the culmination of ideas and characters which he first introduced upon the speaking stage.

Recently he was cited by the writer of a well-known column, as one of the two greatest screen comics—the other being Harold Lloyd. Langdon never attempts to fool the patrons of the screen, rather he likes to surprise them, for any attempt to fool the public might be taken by the majority as "wise cracking."

His latest picture for First National, "Heart Trouble," showing today at the Milane Theatre reveals a most unique plot saturated with human humor and presenting a novel condition which grew out of the recent war.

Harry is supported by Doris Dawson, Lionel Belmore, Madge Hunt, Mark Hamilton, Nelson McDowell and a score of other screen notables.
