County Looking For Break On Inmate's Medical Bills

By Sarah Neuz
Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County is faced with paying the $14,000 medical bill of an inmate hospitalized for a gunshot wound.

Seeking a possible break on the expenditure, however, county commissioners Tuesday tabled a decision on the payment of medical expenses for Neal Wellon, who is currently incarcerated at the Seminole County Correctional Facility, until their Jan. 7 meeting.

Wellon was injured on Oct. 11 and hospitalized for 22 days at Florida Hospital in Altamonte Springs. He is unemployed and has no health insurance, County Attorney Nikki Clayton said. Under Florida law, the medical care, treatment, hospitalization and transportation is paid by the county in which the person was arrested, Ms. Clayton said.

The commission will consider approving an expenditure of $13,955 from the county's general fund to cover Wellon's hospital stay.

County Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff said prisoners should be taken to hospitals which have an indigent care agreement with Seminole County. Florida Hospital has no such agreement with Seminole County, but Ms. Clayton said Wellon was taken there because of the critical nature of his injury. However, the sheriff said he was taken there by mistake, instead of to the Sanford hospital, because it was the closest hospital from where the injury occurred.

Wellon was shot in the leg by a Seminole County sheriff's deputy while allegedly robbing the Quality Inn at State Road 434 and Interstate 4 near Longwood. During the incident he exchanged gunfire with Sheriff's Deputy Sgt. John Thorpe. Wellon is scheduled to appear in court Jan. 8 on a variety of charges stemming from the incident, including attempted first degree murder, attempted felony murder, burglary with assault, attempted robbery, shooting in a building and possession of a firearm. Bond was set at $20,000.

Ms. Clayton said the county is obligated to pay the bill under Florida Law, however, County

Short Freeze Spares Citrus

United Press International

The mercury dipped to 26 degrees in Sanford and 10 degrees in the Florida Panhandle today as a cold front swept over the state, but low temperatures didn't last long enough to damage this year's citrus crop.

The coldest temperature in the state was 10 degrees at Crestview, Tallahassee recorded a 13, breaking the record of 14 for the day set two years ago.

The mercury dropped to 20 at Jacksonville, 26 at Orlando and 33 at Fort Myers. In south Florida it reached 35 at Fort Lauderdale and 49 at Miami. The warmest spot in the state was Key West with a low reading of 55.

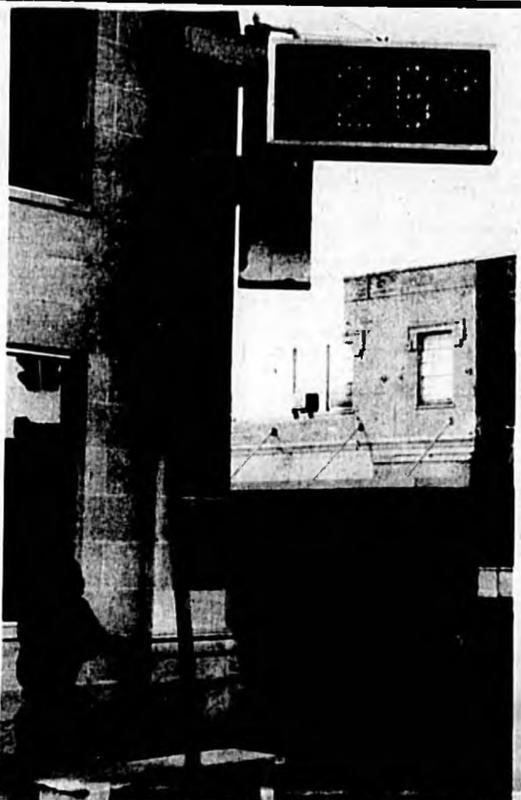

Citrus growers said temperatures below freezing were common, but reported no damage.

"It was very borderline and a little bit scary. We are not aware of having any crop damage," said Ernie Neff, a spokesman for Florida Citrus Mutual. "The temperatures got into mid or high 20s but not for any long enough durations to do us any crop damage. There was no tree damage either."

Temperatures must remain at 28 degrees or lower for four hours or more in order for there to be extensive damage to the fruit. The forecast for Friday called for warmer temperatures.

Freezes on Christmas morning, 1983, and last January were devastating to the state's citrus crop, estimated at $2.4 billion.

The Christmas freeze two years ago hit crops ranging from pasture grasses in the Panhandle to vegetables in southern Florida. Agricultural losses were reported in 66 of 67 counties.

Last January's freeze destroyed more than 200,000 acres of citrus, most of it in Central Florida. Damage from the two earlier freezes was estimated at more than $1 billion to the state's agricultural interests.

Citrus growers in Florida also have lost 17 million plants, destroyed in the last year and a half in efforts to eradicate citrus canker disease, a contagious bacteria. Plants suspected of having the disease must be destroyed or it will spread further.

Forecasters said cloudy skies kept temperatures above freezing in south Florida, protecting the area's lucrative produce industry.

The wind made it feel colder in the Miami and Fort Lauderdale areas, however, keeping grumbling tourists indoors and away from the beaches.

Forecasters said it would be mostly sunny and cold today, except partly cloudy along the southwest coast this morning and in the keys. Highs were expected to range from the mid 40s in north to the mid 50s in the south, with 60s in the Florida Keys.

Sanford, Seminole Swap Accusations

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer
(First of two parts)

Sanford has accused Seminole County of violating the Government in the Sunshine Act while negotiating its Yankee Lake land purchase and will hire two attorneys to press the matter and form the backbone for any appellate actions that may be required in the city's effort to obtain the property by condemnation.

Defense attorneys, however, have launched a counterattack. They have charged Sanford commissioners with violating the city charter when they met on Nov. 8 to sanction the condemnation proceeding.

Assistant State Attorney Ralph Erickson said today his office would prosecute the cross accusations if the Yankee Lake attorneys were to substantiate their charges and file a complaint. He said because attorneys for both sides are still involved in the "discovery phase" of the litigation, "it's too early to tell whether we'll become involved. We have not received the findings of their investigations."

The Yankee Lake attorneys' strategic maneuvering began

Monday morning in Melbourne at a case management conference before Seminole-Brevard Circuit Judge Tom Waddell and concluded later that evening at Sanford city hall, when attorney Ken McIntosh recommended the city commission hire the two legal reinforcements.

"The employment of these two people is very necessary as rapidly as possible," McIntosh said, and the city commission unanimously agreed. City Manager Frank Faison was directed to retain the attorneys after the Christmas holiday. Information regarding financial considerations for the attorneys was still unavailable today.

During Monday's case management conference, Seminole County officially entered the suit and Waddell set Feb. 3 for an evidentiary hearing on the defense challenge to Sanford's condemnation meeting, defense attorney Mack Cleveland said.

The city's challenge of county purchase practices will be spearheaded by Thomas Julin, of the law firm Steel, Hector and Davis of Miami. Describing Julin as "an expert in the realm of Sunshine (laws)," McIntosh said the attorney "will assist our direct attack of actions Seminole County took when negotiating and contracting for the purchase of Yankee Lake."

The city attorneys are questioning whether the county acted clandestinely, and thus illegally, during its efforts to obtain Yankee Lake.

Depending on how long it takes the city to complete its research, a motion will be filed against the county either before or after the Feb. 3 hearing. City Attorney William Colbert said today.

Although the city is "optimistic and positive" it will win the condemnation suit, McIntosh recommended that attorney Marcia Lippincott of Orlando be retained "to monitor and ensure all rights of appeal for the city of Sanford."

Acting on another request from McIntosh, Sanford will designate one city hall employee full-time to compile any additional documentation the city wishes to offer the court. At the case management conference, Waddell gave Colbert a Jan. 15 cut-off date to submit further data to bolster his case.

Heart-Lung Transplant Patient Dies

TAMPA (UPI) — The recipient of the first heart-lung transplant in the southeastern United States has died, said a spokeswoman for the Tampa General Hospital.

The rare operation was performed by a team of University of South Florida College of Medicine and Tampa General Hospital physicians, said Lori Ann Haubenstock, a hospital spokeswoman.

The recipient of the transplant Tuesday was a 25-year-old Tampa Bay area woman. The spokeswoman said that at the family's request the woman's name was still being withheld.

Earlier Wednesday, the unidentified patient had been awake and alert but was listed in critical condition.

The surgery itself took about five hours and since it is a high-risk procedure, anyone who undergoes it is expected to remain in critical condition for several days, she said.

It is believed it was the first such operation in the southeastern United States. Several heart-lung transplants have been performed elsewhere in the nation.

At the request of the donor and recipient families no further information can be provided, she said.

Doctors at the hospital previously had conducted three heart transplants, but this was the first involving both the heart and a lung.

Haubenstock said details for a news conference explaining the procedures used in the operation were being worked out. She said she did not know when the news conference would be scheduled.

7 Die On State Roads

Holiday Traffic Toll Less Than Half Predicted

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — At least seven people died during the Christmas holidays in traffic accidents, far less than the 15 fatalities the Florida Highway Patrol had predicted would occur during the 30-hour holiday.

According to the FHP, there were no traffic fatalities in Seminole County during the holiday period.

A Holiday, Fla. man died around 10:30 p.m. Wednesday when he attempted to cross U.S. highway 19 south of Tarpon Springs. Hollis Laverne Howard, 77, was apparently crossing to seek help for his stalled vehicle when he was struck by a car, knocking him down. A pickup truck struck him and dragged him 50 feet, a FHP spokeswoman said.

Investigators ruled the 10:25 p.m. Christmas Day death of Eric J. Werth, 19, of West Palm Beach alcohol-related. Werth attempted to pass while traveling east on Okachobee Road near West Palm Beach when he lost control, jumped a median and slammed into a vehicle in the westbound lane. The driver of the other vehicle suffered only minor injuries.

Three people were killed Christmas Eve in Bradenton. The three deaths occurred in two accidents within 20 minutes of each other.

Jeffrey Allan Gillis, 22, died in a head-on collision in Yulee at 5:51 a.m. Wednesday.

Pedestrian Clara Paradella, 48, of Miramar, was struck around 4:50 a.m. in an alcohol-related traffic accident, police said.

Robert L. Roman, 31, and Donnie Lee Myers, 13, both of Bradenton, were killed Christmas Eve in a four-car smashup on U.S. 41 at 7:53 p.m.

Then at 8:09 p.m., Robert L. McIntosh, 43, of Palmetto was killed when his car smashed into a palm tree in a shopping mall parking lot.

Christmas 'Magic' Moves Americans

By United Press International

Americans moved by the "magic" of Christmas spent the holiday performing acts of good will that ranged from rescuing oil-soaked sea birds on Pacific beaches to feeding needy families free dinners of turkey, and even Chinese food.

Lisa Paul, 23, of Minneapolis, passed up a traditional holiday supper for liquids, continuing a three-week hunger strike in support of a Russian friend seeking permission to leave the Soviet Union for medical treatment.

The spirit of giving was played out across the country in acts of charity whose beneficiaries were as varied as the recipients.

"It's magic. That's what Christmas is," said Roy Elliott, a manufacturing manager who dressed up as Santa Claus and passed out holiday gifts to 180 mentally disabled adults in Marshfield, Mass.

Sanford To Seek $3 Million Loan For Paving, Firehouse

Some 210 sections of Sanford roadway will be resurfaced if the city gets a $3 million Florida League of Cities loan.

The larger sections slated for repaving by the Engineering and Planning Department include: Park Avenue, from Seminole Boulevard to 25th Street; 3rd Street, from Sanford to Persimmon Avenues; West 13th Street, from U.S. Highway 17-92 to Dixie Way; 1st Street, from Mellonville to Sanford Avenues; Plumosa Drive, from Locust to Sanford Avenues; and Oak Avenue, from 13th to 25th Streets.

Four smaller city roads are scheduled for complete repaving. These are: Community Way, Revona Court and Margaret and Arcadia Roads.

Mayor Bettye Smith has asked for and received assurance that the city's brick roadways will not be paved over with cement during the project.

The city began efforts Monday to cut itself in for $3,058,000 of the billions of dollars available through the league of cities municipal loan program. The low interest, 10 year loan was recommended by City Manager Frank Faison and Planning and Engineering Director Bill Simmons during last week's commission workshop.

On Monday, Faison was directed by commissioners to begin preparing an application for the funding, which would be used to build a new firehouse and repave 733,465 square yards of Sanford roadways. Once Faison has completed the application, he will submit it to the city commission for final approval.

According to Simmons $500,000 of the loan would go for building a firehouse in the city's western quadrant in 1987. The larger portion, $2,588,000, would be utilized during the next five years for a comprehensive road repaving project, he said.

Traditionally, the city has used cigarette tax revenues to finance fire department projects

Cold Clue In Eggnog Popularity

DENVER (UPI) — Coloradans consume more eggnog than residents of any other state, the U.S. Department of Agriculture says.

The agency said the holiday concoction of milk, cream, sugar and spices, egg yolks and artificial flavorings is most popular in western Colorado, where the average eggnog lover buys 28 ounces in a year.

Representatives of the eggnog industry were at a loss to explain the drink's popularity in Colorado, but Bill Struble, sales manager for Meadow Gold Dairy Division in Englewood, had some ideas.

He said November's extremely cold weather may have boosted sales this year — a plausible explanation in light of sunny Georgia's last-place ranking in average eggnog consumption at 1.3 ounces a year.

Holiday Spirit Catches City Commission

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

Sanford city commissioners doled out a few Yuletide gifts to staff Monday when they approved a tax break for employee medical coverage and revamped city vacation policies.

The commission also accepted an offer from the community block grant citizens advisory committee to help administer $850,000 in Housing and Urban Development funds for which the city has applied.

If received, the funding will be used to revitalize homes in Sanford and the advisory committee will make efforts to ensure the money is used to its fullest potential. The committee will monitor the grant's distribution to residents and contractors and then conduct frequent progress reviews once the restorative efforts begin.

The city should know within 60 days whether it will receive the grant.

City employees who wish to include their dependants in one of the city's comprehensive medical plans can now agree to reduce his compensation and have such amounts contributed as Employer Contributions made to the plan on the employee's behalf. The sums, thus not recorded as income, are not subject to Federal Income Tax. The result is a income tax reduction for the employee.

The savings, according to City Manager Frank Faison, involves both full- and part-time employees and applies to all three of the city's medical plans. The commission has also amended, from six months to 90 days, the employment period for staff eligibility for life insurance coverage. Without charge to the employee, the city will provide $5,000 in life insurance after this period.

Also, regarding vacation time, city staffers can now break up their days off to allow three day weekends and not have holidays counted against them during their leaves. Prior to the amendment, vacations had to be taken in either one or two week blocks and holidays falling during these periods were counted as part of employees' annual leave.

Departmental schedules and workloads will be reviewed prior to approval of each request for staggered vacation days, Faison said.

The city also amended its employee disciplinary guidelines on Monday night. Causes for dismissal, demotion or suspension now include: "The employee is responsible for an intentional act or course of conduct violating duties or obligations of his or her position."

The amendment replaces a disciplinary clause that could be applied to staffers on the grounds that they were "incompetent or inefficient in the performance of duties."

According to Faison, the new rule "supports the state's worker compensation definition of misconduct" and will give the city a stronger defense when addressing disciplinary problems.

IRS Mails Tax Forms Today With Apology For Last Year's Snafu

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Waiting until the end of the Christmas mailing rush, the Internal Revenue Service today began mailing 87 million income tax forms for 1985 along with an unusual apology from the government.

The tax packages, stacked in post offices for weeks, carry an annual message from IRS commissioner Roscoe Egger Jr. and his apology for last year's computer snafu that caused refund delays for millions of Americans.

Millions of refund checks were delayed last year because the IRS switched to a new computer system. In addition, the General Accounting Office opened an investigation of charges IRS clerks at the Philadelphia regional office had thrown away some forms.

Talcum Not 'Always Walcum'

BOSTON (UPI) — Baby powder is unsafe for infants and may even cause death if inhaled by children with tracheotomy tubes, two doctors said today in a letter urging parents to stop using the popular product.

"There's no reason to use it at all," said Dr. William H. Cotton. "It just makes babies smell good for a while but can present a problem for any infant."

Representatives of Johnson & Johnson, the nation's largest manufacturer of baby powder, disagreed, saying the "product is safe when used as it is intended." Company spokesman Robert Kniffin also said "studies show Johnson's baby powder is useful to adsorb moisture and reduce friction."

Missing Propeller Found

CONCORD, Calif. (UPI) — Investigators today still did not know why a light plane piloted by a veteran flyer crashed into a crowded shopping mall, saying the discovery of the craft's missing propeller had failed to reveal the cause.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: Winds of more than 70 mph whipped up blinding clouds of snow today in the Rockies and Plains, shutting down highways, while temperatures in the bitterly cold East fell to record single-digit levels as far south as South Carolina. On Christmas Day, the valleys of the West began their third week under a blanket of dense fog. Travelers advisories were posted today in the central valleys and northern coast of California and in northwestern Nevada.

Wind gusts that blew in from Canada howled through the Dakotas and Minnesota reaching a velocity of 72 mph today in Redig, S.D. Wind-chill temperatures plunged to 50 below in the Great Lakes and ranged from zero to 30 below along the Atlantic Coast. Freeze warnings extended into central Florida, with a hard freeze warning in effect for northern Florida. In the South, the mercury fell to 10 degrees in Knoxville, Tenn., and 25 degrees in Jacksonville, Fla. A reading of 5 degrees today at the Greenville-Spartanburg, S.C. broke the record for the day and the month. Despite the freezing temperatures in the South, Doug Bournique, director of Florida's Indian River Citrus League, said he saw little threat to crops. "I don't want to sound blasé about it, but we're not that concerned with the cold temperatures," he said. "We haven't gone running around screaming wolf." Atlanta recorded a trace of snow Wednesday — only the seventh time since weather records began that snow has fallen in that city on Christmas Day. Los Angeles, meanwhile, reported a high of 82, short of the record 85, but high enough to send 140,000 people to the beaches to celebrate Christmas on the sand. Along the shores of the Great Lakes, up to 15 inches of snow belted western New York and a foot of snow fell in Erie, Pa., police said. Erie authorities said blowing snow closed some exit ramps on highways, but no major roads.

LAX IN CHILD SUPPORT

A Sanford man was rreated on a contempt charge ordered by a judge for allegedly being at least $791 behind in child support payments since January.

He was arrested around 10:30 a.m. Monday and then was released by the judge who had a 1:30 p.m. appointment with the man.

When the deputy arrived, he entered the unlocked home and immediately smelled carbon monoxide. He went to the garage and found the man unconscious in the idling car. The deputy removed the man, and put him on a well-ventilated kitchen floor. He called rescue personnel who transported the man to Winter Park Memorial Hospital where he was listed in fair condition.

DRUGS CONFISCATED

A Seminole County deputy confiscated a bag of drugs after he overheard a conversation between an injured man and a friend.

The deputy, there to assist the firemen, said the man was very insistent that the bag be removed. The deputy also reported the man smelled of marijuana.

Suspect Held In Double Murder

TALLAHASSEE. (UPI) — State and local police have arrested the former brother-in-law of one of the victims in the Halloween murders of a Leon County man and a prominent legislator's sister. John Wesley Peavy, 39, of Havana, Fla., was held without bond in the deaths of Robert L. Harrison, his former brother-in-law, and Mary Lee Driggers, sister of House Rules chairman Herb Morgan, D-Tallahassee. Harrison, 40, and Driggers, 39, were shot several times through a living room window of Harrison's double-wide mobile home near the Georgia line as they ate take-out fried chicken in the kitchen. A friend discovered the bodies on Nov. 2. Leon County Sheriff Eddie Boone and state law enforcement agent Mickey Watson said

Peavy was arrested Monday after he went voluntarily to the sheriff's office for questioning. They said he had been a suspect since early November. They said his motive was the resentment he felt toward Harrison for divorcing his sister several years ago. They said he felt the divorce caused his sister's family financial hardship. Heavy rains during the 48 hours between the shootings and the discovery of the bodies washed out footprints and tire tracks, but police found at least a dozen 9-mm shell casings on the scene, the Tallahassee Democrat reported. The newspaper said police linked Peavy to the crime through a comparison of the shells at the murder scene and others found at a site where Peavy routinely fired off paractice rounds.

Baby Bells Want To Grow Strong

Nynex publishes management software and runs an international consulting group. Ameritech makes computer work stations and gear to send video images over phone lines. U.S. West owns a financial services company, and Pacific Telesis runs a computer retail chain. All have something in common: Behind those faceless high-tech names are telephone companies yearning to be something bolder and flashier. Ambition, normally commendable, in this case could be costly to telephone customers; let Congress beware.

Not content with the pace of their diversification out of plain old telephone service, the Baby Bells — the seven regional telephone operating companies created in the 1984 breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. — are now pounding on doors in Congress and at the Federal Communications Commission, urging a speedup. In particular, they want Congress to modify the court judgment governing the breakup of AT&T to relax provisions prohibiting them from manufacturing phone equipment and providing long-distance service.

That change, however, would strike at the central logic of the breakup of AT&T — to prevent the local phone company, a natural monopoly, from using its monopoly to gain an advantage in competitive areas of telecommunications service. The old AT&T used its monopoly over local phone service to hobble competitors like MCI in the long-distance market, and it funneled its equipment orders to its own Western Electric Co. in preference over outside rivals. In both cases, consumers paid the price, in higher rates and restricted choice. Thus, the thrust of the breakup: Put the competitive activities — long-distance and equipment manufacture — into the new AT&T, and relegate local service to seven regional monopolies, the Baby Bells, which were prohibited from entering most competitive services.

The Baby Bells chafe under that logic, but it continues to make sense. If Congress answers the Baby Bells' call to unchain them, it will risk recreating seven little Ma Bells, with all the potential for anti-competitive and anti-consumer abuse. Moreover, because the new businesses the Baby Bells are seeking to enter are intensely competitive and not directly related to what they know best, there is a good chance they could stumble, exposing phone customers to the losses.

In theory, state and federal regulators ought to be able to prevent local phone companies from using the revenues from their local monopolies to cross-subsidize other activities. In practice, though, most state regulators can't, or won't — like Ma Bell before them, the Baby Bells are powerful enterprises, with annual sales ranging from $7.8 billion to $10.5 billion. The Baby Bells' high-tech names and regional character may make them more appealing, but Congress should not forget what they remain — monopoly providers of a vital service, which still need to be controlled in the public interest.

Ignorance Of Affirmative Action Abounds

It's lesson time. Let's play true and false. Here are the statements:

— "Jews oppose affirmative action."
— "American businessmen vigorously resent government efforts to impose equal opportunity in the work place."

— "Federal law requires that unqualified blacks and women receive first priority for jobs and education over better qualified white men."
— "Most politicians in this conservative era want affirmative action squashed."

If you answered true to all of the above, you're a soul brother to Edwin Meese; you've passed a litmus test that guarantees admission to the inner circle of the Reagan administration; and you don't like to be confused by the facts.

Most Americans, unfortunately, believe that affirmative action, which has been supported by every president from Franklin Roosevelt to Jimmy Carter (regardless of party or political ideology) puts white men at a competitive disadvantage with minorities and women; sets rigid quotas in hiring that discriminate against white men; strangles commerce and industry through unwieldy regulations; and is the principal reason why two traditional allies, blacks and Jews, are now poles apart.

Of course, all of these assertions are false. There's little conflict between blacks and Jews over affirmative action. On the contrary, almost every National Jewish organization — including the American Jewish Committee, the American Jewish Congress, Hadassah, the Jewish Labor Committee, the National Council of Jewish Women, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations, and the United Synagogue of America — oppose Meese's attempts to gut President Lyndon Johnson's 1965 executive order establishing affirmative action as we know it today.

At an Oct. 21 meeting of the Executive Committee of the Domestic Task Force of the National Jewish Community Relations Council, only two national groups — the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the Jewish War Veterans — voted against opposing the Meese plan.

Franklin Roosevelt was first in a long line of presidents who supported strong equal employment requirements. The affirmative-action clause was initiated by President Kennedy, strengthened by Johnson and retained by each president who followed.

Goals and timetables — not quotas, which are prohibited under Johnson's '65 order — were incorporated in the Department of Labor regulations in 1970 by President Nixon and his secretary of labor, George Shultz. They have remained essentially untouched since then.

Now Meese wants to erase affirmative action by prohibiting employers from counting how many workers of each race or sex they have. Sixty-seven senators, including 22 Republicans, have asked Reagan not to retreat on affirmative action.

Most telling, Reagan's own Department of Labor rejects the Meese interpretation. A Labor memorandum released in late November said "goals" are not "a simple euphemism for quotas," as Meese insists.

Here's another statement. True or false?

Edwin Meese has a negative reaction to affirmative action.

Now you can move to the front of the class.

EDWARD J. WALSH

Cowardice Replaced Courage

In early autumn, Republican Senators Phil Gramm of Texas and Warren Rudman of New Hampshire, and Democrat Ernest Hollings of South Carolina teamed up to produce an ironclad means of ending the nation's crisis of chronic deficit spending. The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings bill, known also as the Balanced Budget and Deficit Control Act of 1985, proposed to eliminate the government's red ink by 1990.

The senators' bill required that the budget be balanced in five years by limiting the federal budget deficit in fiscal year 1986 to no more than $172 billion, to be reduced by increments of $36 billion in succeeding years. Should the Congress fail to cut spending to meet the targets, the President would be required to "sequester" funds in equivalent percentages from discretionary spending in both domestic and defense programs, and in the regular indexed increases in the automatic entitlement programs, including Social Security.

Gramm-Rudman-Hollings was approved by the Senate on October 9 by a more than decisive margin of 75-24. Both fiscal conservatives and free-spending liberals voted for it. The lesson that something had to be done to end runaway spending appeared to have been learned.

No one, not even Gramm, Rudman, or Hollings considered the bill a work of parliamentary art. It reduced consideration of the nation's budget to a formula that presumes that the political skills of our elected representatives on budgetary matters endanger, rather than protect the nation's treasure.

In its original version, Gramm-Rudman-Hollings would have accomplished a mission of critical importance: reining in the spendthrift federal government, which has given the country four consecutive years of triple-digit billions of red ink, and all the attendant and potential perils of an artificially high dollar, inflated interest rates, and the constant danger of a re-inflated money supply.

President Reagan can avoid gutting the defense budget by proposing and forcing through Congress enough budget reductions to avoid the automatic cutting. Already, the Office of Management and Budget has prepared a list of $50 billion in reductions in discretionary programs, certain to drive Congress into a frenzy.

Once again, Washington will stage a bloody fight over the nation's budget, and the nation's economic stability. The people, it is to be hoped, will be watching.

Youth Cooperation In Space Needed

By Jack Anderson
And Joseph Spear

WASHINGTON — President Reagan brought a pair of binoculars with him to Geneva last month, hoping he and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev could view Halley's comet together.

The opportunity never arose for star gazing, but the president spoke to Gorbachev about closer ties between America's Young Astronauts and Russia's Young Cosmonauts.

The peaceful conquest of space can begin now, Reagan suggested, by bringing together our future space explorers. They will inherit the 21st century, which should be a fabulous age of exploration, with distant planets within reach. The president's hope is that Soviet and American youngsters should lead the world into a new era of discovery, achievement and prosperity.

Reagan established the Young Astronaut program as a catalyst to prepare America's youth for the 21st century, to train them in the technologies of tomorrow. Whether they become astronauts or accountants, scientists or poets, they will need to understand the computers, lasers and robots that will soon become everyday equipment.

One of the Young Astronaut Council's first moves, with the president's blessing, was to establish contact with the Young Cosmonauts. "Our Young Astronauts want to be friends with your Young Cosmonauts," the council proposed. "They would like to exchange visits, to learn from one another, to share dreams..."

Back came a letter from the Young Cosmonauts, signed by Sergey Trofimenko and Nikolay Kubyshekin. "We are for cooperation in space," the letter declared. "We would like space to remain forever peaceful so that children could lift up their eyes to the heavens without fear."

As the next step, President Reagan proposed at the Geneva summit meeting that Young Astronauts and Young Cosmonauts exchange visits. The Young Astronauts have also been encouraged to write letters to Young Cosmonauts in an attempt to open a dialogue by mail.

The president, meanwhile, has founded Young Astronauts International in response to requests from around the world to participate in the program. Inquiries have been received from 52 foreign countries, and Young Astronaut chapters already have been formed in 16 countries.

Footnote: The president has encouraged elementary and secondary schools to form Young Astronaut chapters and participate in the studies that will lead to the exploration and settlement of other worlds. The idea is to make schoolwork less forbidding by dramatizing that it is the key to the universe beyond.

A presidential letter to 75,000 schools has already brought more than 53,000 responses. Although the program has been operational less than a year, hundreds of thousands of Young Astronauts have already signed up. Children between the ages of 8 and 16 can become Young Astronauts by writing to the Young Astronaut Council, 1211 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20036.

Telephone Pictures For Deaf

By Gayle Young
UPI Science Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Alexander Graham Bell's first words into his new telephone were "Watson, come here quickly" — not quite as creative as those given during a demonstration of a possible new telephone system for the deaf.

"You have a choice — do you prefer a duck or a fish?" the blurry televised image of a woman asked in sign language.

While the sentence may not be as practical as Bell's, the technology could be useful to the hundreds of thousands of deaf people who have viewed the telephone not as mankind's greatest invention but as a source of frustration and alienation, said George Sperling, a professor of psychology at New York University.

Sperling has spent five years researching the technology needed to transmit a televised picture over the public telephone network.

Televised phone systems, where users can simultaneously see televised pictures of each other, were invented decades ago, Sperling said. But they needed 300 times the capacity of a single telephone line to operate.

Abandoning the telephone television approach, researchers have since created computerized systems that allow the deaf to write back and forth to each other over standard telephone line using video display terminals.

But Sperling, with a grant from the National Science Foundation, continued to search for a system that would allow the deaf to talk to each other using American Sign Language, their native language.

The problem was in the telephone lines, which have a limited capacity to transmit television signals, called band widths. An average television has 4 million band widths while most telephone lines can not transmit more than 3,000 band widths, said Sperling.

Rather than pursue a high-technology answer, Sperling turned to low-tech. He asked: how primitive an image could deaf people look at and understand what was being said?

The answer was, very primitive. Sperling has devised a television signal that needs only 2,800 band widths. The image, projected on a screen the size of a portable personal stereo, is blurry to most. But exhaustive studies with deaf subjects show the televised images have an 85 percent intelligibility rate.

"That's about the same as a verbal telephone conversation with static in the background," he said.

JEFFREY HART

Spenders Must Stop

We now have a law that appears to impose a formula for eliminating the federal deficit by the year 1991. The Gramm-Rudman Bill should be called the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Bill, since it also has the sponsorship of the Democratic senator from South Carolina — and these are three of the very best senators in the United States Congress.

The law is a monstrosity, but the fact that we need it is a measure of how bad our situation is. Congress has a spine made of marmalade.

The essence of Gramm-Rudman remains from its original form. At the beginning of each fiscal year, the Office of Management and Budget and also the Congressional Budget Office are supposed to estimate the federal deficit for the forthcoming year. If the estimates are higher than the goals specified in the bill, then automatic spending cuts go into effect, with Social Security and interest payments on the debt both exempt.

That is the essence of the bill, though there have been some modifications. In the event of a recession, for example, a two-thirds vote of the Congress can set the whole thing aside and prime the pump with Keynesian spending. Presumably the president, as commander-in-chief, could declare a national emergency and spend money on defense in defiance of Gramm-Rudman.

But, modifications aside, Gramm-Rudman in its essence is a monstrosity. Anyone who believes that the OMB and the CBO can accurately forecast deficits probably also believes in the tooth fairy. The bill is also almost self-evidently unconstitutional. It a) surrenders the Constitution's provision that Congress has the responsibility for federal spending, and b) removes from the president discretionary powers that the Supreme Court may well insist are inherent in his office.

Having said all that, however, the sad truth has to be admitted. We need Gramm-Rudman. The simple reason we need it is that the Congress cannot stop buying cheese.

Of course "buying cheese" is a metaphor. The passage of Gramm-Rudman indicates a general awareness in Congress that federal expenditures are out of control, with annual deficits in the $200 billion range, and that Congress as an institution cannot muster the will to do anything serious about it. A major deficiency of Gramm-Rudman is that the draconian, across-the-board cuts that it mandates do not distinguish among wise and unwise cuts. Precisely that sort of distinction is what Congress is supposed to do, but, on the record, cannot.

And why should the federal government be subsidizing school lunches? At the very least, eligibility for that program should require a parental statement of inability to pack a sandwich for the kid.

Of course it is absurd that Social Security should be exempt from the Gramm-Rudman cuts. This Depression era measure is obsolescent today, when many people have their own retirement plans. Why not tax Social Security at 100 percent for people with an individual retirement income of more than $50,000? Because Ronald Reagan made a campaign promise not to touch Social Security, that's why.

And so we have Gramm-Rudman. The precise analogy would be to a man who recognizes that he is a cocaine addict, and cannot muster the will power to chuck it, and so he turns himself into a clinic to go cold turkey.

World's 1st Pregnancy Using 'Frozen' Human Egg

ADELAIDE, Australia (UPI) — A medical team has claimed the world's first pregnancy using a human egg frozen and then thawed before in-vitro fertilization.

The Flinders Medical Center team said recently. It was probably the most significant breakthrough since the first IVF birth in 1960.

The head of the center's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, Prof. Warren Jones, said the breakthrough would make IVF programs cheaper and more convenient for patients.

A spokesman for the center said the new method of freezing the human egg and then thawing would also remove the legal and ethical problems that surround the freezing of human embryos which would no longer be necessary in IVF programs.

While doctors and scientists had been able to freeze and thaw human sperm and embryos for some time, they had encountered difficulties carrying out a similar procedure on human eggs because eggs are only single-cell and more susceptible to damage, the spokesman said.

The Queen Elizabeth Hospital in Adelaide announced last month it had successfully frozen and thawed human eggs, claiming it was the first in the world to do so.

The scientist responsible for the breakthrough, Dr. Christopher Chen, said 80 percent of human eggs survived the freezing process and 85 percent of them fertilized and divided normally.

"This survival rate was almost double that of frozen embryos," Chen said.

The world's first frozen embryo baby, a girl named Zoe Leyland, was born at the Queen Victoria Medical Center, Melbourne, March 28, 1984.

The IVF procedure involves surgically removing eggs from a woman, fertilizing them in a glass dish and implanting the resulting embryos in the women's uterus.

The "freeze-thaw" program was pioneered by Prof. Carl Wood at the Queen Victoria Medical Center.

"Spare" eggs from the IVF program are stored in liquid nitrogen at a temperature of minus 200 degrees centigrade.

They are then defrosted and reimplanted in the patient when needed.

Two frozen embryos "orphaned" when their wealthy American parents were killed in a plane crash in 1983, are still frozen in the Queen Victoria Medical Center awaiting a government decision on what to do with the eggs.

Australian doctors have been pioneers in the IVF program and more than 200 babies have been delivered in Australia including two sets of triplets using the IVF method.

WORLD IN BRIEF

West African Border Clash Leaves At Least 14 Dead

PARIS (UPI) — At least 14 people — 10 soldiers and four civilians — were killed in border clashes involving troops from two of the world's poorest nations, Burkina Faso and its west African neighbor, Mali.

Burkina Faso's national radio accused Mali of a "barbarous Christmas day attack" that left at least four civilians dead and 11 others wounded in three border towns. The report also said 10 Malian soldiers died in the fighting.

Mali later confirmed the reports saying a "vast offensive" had been launched. Both nations have quarreled over their common border and were about to begin a new round of peace talks when the fighting broke out, radio reports said.

Mali and Burkina Faso — formerly known as Upper Volta — straddle the African drought zone on the southern fringes of the Sahara desert and have been classified by the United Nations among the world's 20 hungriest countries.

Lebanon's Militias Reach Accord

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Lebanon's three most powerful Moslem and Christian militias agreed on how to end 10 years of civil war, and "barring surprises" the accord could be signed before the end of the year, state-owned Beirut radio said today.

One of the Christian negotiators, who declined to be identified, confirmed the report. "We face no more problems," he said.

The breakthrough, after weeks of bickering and procrastination, came in a crucial round of talks in Damascus Wednesday between representatives of the Christian Lebanese Forces and militias belonging to the Moslem Shite Amal and the Druze Progressive Socialist Party, Beirut radio said.

The three delegations returned to Beirut for separate meetings with their leaders today.

Earth Tremors Cause Panic

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI) — An earth tremor sent thousands of villagers fleeing their homes in panic today near the slopes of Mount Etna, which erupted Christmas Day, killing one man and injuring 14 others.

Europe's most active volcano began spewing red-hot smoke and lava shortly 3 a.m. Wednesday, triggering a series of earthquakes that demolished a hotel but subsided later in the day.

Just 24 hours after the first rumblings on the volcano slopes, another sharp earth tremor at 3:35 a.m. shook the village of Zafferana. The jolt sent thousands of people running from their homes in the dark, but no injuries were reported, scientists said.

Nearly 200 volunteers spent Christmas providing first aid for oil-covered sea birds in Port Angeles, Wash., and searching beaches for others that may have been injured by a massive spill from a grounded tanker.

An emergency center set up at Port Angeles High School took in more than 1,000 birds for cleaning, blow-drying and force-feeding, organizers said.

In Commerce City, Colo., the owner of the Happy China restaurant, Benjamin Cheng, served 2,500 eggrolls and pounds of sweet-and-sour pork to needy families, with the help of the mayor and two city councilmen.

"There was one woman with six children who said she was just short of cash," said Mayor Harold Kille. "And there were many senior citizens who weren't necessarily needy, but sometimes the need is loneliness."

More traditional turkey dinners were dished up at other shelters.

"A lot of them remember past Christmases when they were surrounded by families and friends," Ralph Hughes, the director of Boston's Pine Street Inn said of the 600 people packing his shelter.

Actor Daniel Travanti of television's "Hill Street Blues" joined volunteers at the Union Rescue Mission in Los Angeles to serve Christmas dinners to several thousand Skid Row inhabitants.

A homeless woman seeking shelter from the cold in New York was found dead inside the Grand Central Terminal, an unwrapped Christmas gift by her side.

...County

Administrator Ken Hooper said the county will look into the possibility that the payment can be reduced or reimbursed through its indigent care or insurance program.

The county has an agreement with Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford to handle indigent patients referred to the hospital, with the county paying a portion of the treatment for these patients, Ms. Clayton said.

Seminole County Sheriff John Polk said his department will make a greater effort to take injured suspects to Central Florida Regional Hospital.

He said it is the responsibility of the hospital to collect from the insurance company if the person has insurance and, if not, to collect payment from the patient. As a last resort, Polk said, the county pays the medical expenses from its general fund if the person is injured during an arrest.

"It is not right for the hospital to be stuck with the bill," he said.

The city's research and documentation regarding its wastewater management program are included in Waddell's order, although depositions the city wishes to take are not, Colbert said.

Defense attorneys are still collecting the testimony of city representatives and Colbert will begin taking his own depositions once they have concluded. Colbert said he expects to serve county administrators and commissioners with subpoenas early next month and will submit their depositions upon completion.

McIntosh described his recommendations as enabling Sanford to develop a "three pronged attack" against defense attorneys. He told commissioners the legal reinforcements are sufficient for the time being, although he added, "I don't want to limit the tip of my pitchfork. When these are exhausted I will not hesitate to come back to you and request another prong."

McIntosh, of the city's law firm, Stenstrom, McIntosh, Julian, Colbert and Whigham, is somewhat of a reinforcement himself. His first meeting with commissioners was during a special meeting last week, when he announced he would be assisting Colbert, the city's designated attorney, in preparing strategies for the suit.

The city attorneys face still competition from the array of legal expertise amassed by the defense. According to one of these attorneys, Sanford's attempt to obtain Yankee Lake will be derailed if he and his colleagues can successfully argue that Sanford commissioners violated city charters when they met on Nov. 8 to authorize a condemnation action against the property. Waddell has set four hours on Feb. 3 for the defense to present its challenge and for both sides to argue their positions regarding the condemnation meeting, defense attorney Cleveland said.

If Waddell rules in favor of the defense, the city may be enlisting the aid of Ms. Lippincott sooner than it expected. A judgement against the plaintiffs would render the city commission's resolution to institute condemnation proceedings "ineffective," Cleveland said. "They would have to start all over again."

Cleveland and attorneys Jim Spoonhour and Harris Turner are representing former Yankee Lake owner Jeno Paulucci and his agent, Nicholas Pope, against the city's attempt to obtain Yankee Lake for its wastewater management program. The three defense attorneys were joined at Tuesday's case management conference by County Attorney Nikki Clayton, County Administrator Ken Hooper and Ross Stanton and Howard Marsec, attorneys hired by the county to protect its purchase of the property. For Sanford, Colbert and McIntosh were in attendance.

After Monday's city commission meeting, Colbert acknowledged the defense effort to invalidate Sanford's suit, although he said the city is "quite certain" it adhered to its charter when bringing the action.

He also said he had yet to see the defense "file a formal motion on it (the challenge) yet."

and gasoline tax accruals for roadwork. However, to obtain the loan, these revenues would be put up as collateral, Faison said.

According to Simmons, the road project especially stands to gain from the arrangement because the city only receives approximately $400,000 in gas tax revenues each year. These funds, he said, can only go so far toward annual road projects and by posting them as collateral, the city can receive a $2,558,000 lump sum to conduct a continuous repaving project.

Through the funding, "We can catch up and stabilize our repaving efforts," Faison said.

Simmons concurred with Faison and detailed specific advantages of the loan. He said the city would be able to obtain a "cost effective" single road repaving contract from a large company, rather than awarding multiple, more costly, contracts to smaller companies.

The loan would also enable the city to purchase higher quality and longer lasting repaving materials, Simmons said.

TENNIS
ANYONE?

Questions & Answers

Tennis is a complex game and has some very confusing rules and regulations. For many players, even those that have been playing for many years, situations arise that they simply do not have an answer for. From time to time I like to pass along some of the questions that I am asked and the answers to these questions.

Question: If I am standing out of bounds and the ball hits me on the foot or leg, before it bounces, is it my point or my opponent's?

Answer: You lose the point. Even if you are near the fence in back of the baseline, if the ball touches you before it hits the court, it's your opponent's point. This is one good reason to never catch the ball and call "out" — your opponent could take the point if he wishes.

Question: A ball was lying in the right service box on my side. My opponent served a second ball and hit the one in my court. He said it was his point. I said we must play two. Who was right?

Answer: I'm afraid your opponent was correct. If you choose to leave the ball alone and not move it, it became part of the court. His point. Always remove balls that are on your side of the net and in your court not only because your opponent might hit it but also because of the safety factor involved.

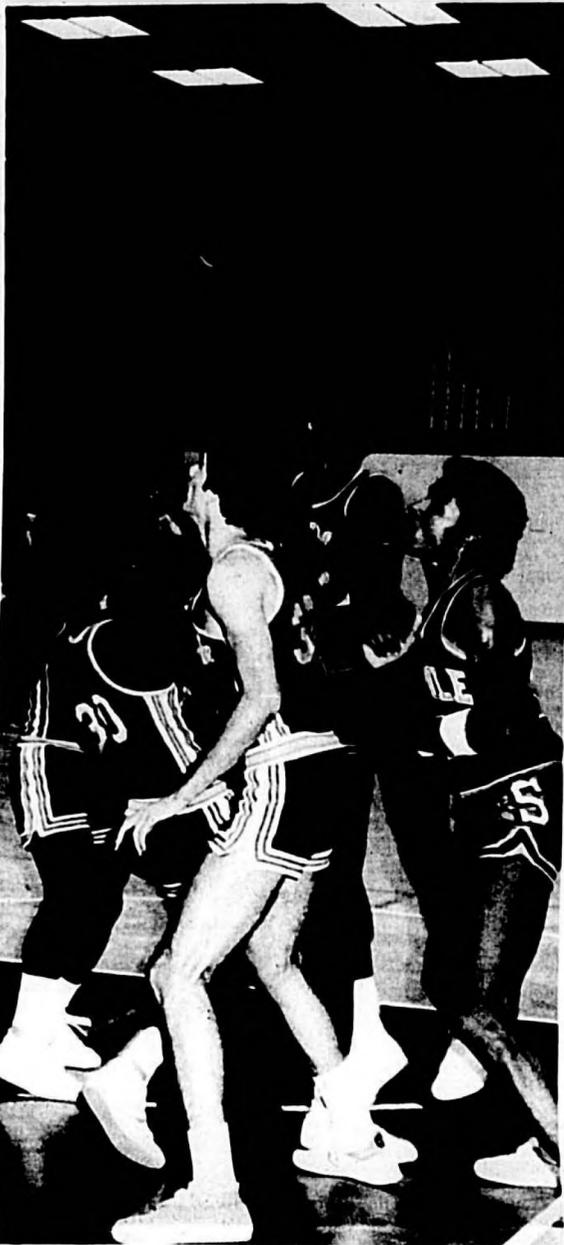

Question: In a recent single match the score was 15-30. I served this point from the deuce side. (Of course at 15-30 I know that I should have served from the ad side.) We played the point out and then discovered our mistake. What do we do? Play the point over? Play the rest of the game from the wrong side? What?

Answer: This happens a lot and not only to those new to the game. Even though you served from the wrong side the point still stands. If you won the point and the score is now 30-30 you simply serve from the deuce side again. Even though that would make you serve from the same side on two straight points you must get back to serving from the correct side as soon as possible.

Question: I was at the net and my opponent hit a ball very hard and right at me. I managed to move out of the way in time but the ball hit my wrist (very near my racket) and went back over the net for a winner. I was elated but my opponent said it was his point because I did not hit the ball with my racket. Whose point?

Answer: The point is his — I've seen balls hit people in the chest, head, arms and elsewhere and go back across the net, but if the ball does not hit the racket it is not a proper hit and therefore the point belongs to your opponent.

FSU Announcement Due On Ticket Sale, Williams

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

An announcement is expected today on the status of Isaac Williams, Florida State's defensive tackle who was reportedly involved in the Hassan Jones' ticket-selling scandal of several weeks ago.

Williams, a first-team all-state offensive guard for Seminole High School in 1981, has been a starter for the Seminole's defense since his sophomore season. He is now a senior.

Jones, a standout wide receiver, was declared ineligible when it was discovered that he sold 12 tickets to the Florida-Florida State game on Nov. 30 for $1,200 or $100 apiece.

Williams reportedly assigned four of the tickets to Jones and may have received some of the money.

There is nothing wrong with the first act since Williams gave the tickets to Jones and assigned them to be used by his relatives. Tickets may be given or sold to students or relatives but no one else.

"Technically, Isaac did not break any rules by giving the tickets to Jones because he wrote on the envelope that the tickets were for Jones' relatives." David Whitley, a sports writer for the Tallahassee Democrat, said.

If, however, Williams received any part of the money, that would violate NCAA rules and he could be declared ineligible for his last college game, Monday's Gator Bowl showdown with Oklahoma State.

Williams said he has no comment on the situation.

The situation, nevertheless, runs much deeper than the selling of tickets, according to Jones. The other tickets were assigned to him by John Eaford, a sophomore from Miami, who gave him four tickets. Anthony Johnson, a freshman from Jacksonville, and Thomas Harp, a junior from Winter Garden, each gave Jones two tickets. All acknowledged on the envelope that the tickets were for Jones' relatives except Harp. He did have anything written on the envelope.

Eaford, the only one commenting, said he gave the tickets to Jones and never "intended to receive money for them or expect to receive money."

Players commonly swap tickets for different games, depending on locale and interest.

Jones, nevertheless, maintains he was set up for the deal by "a Gator Booster." Whitley said it's a possibility that Jones could be telling the truth, which he backs up with the following facts.

Whitley said Hootie Ingram, FSU's athletic director, received a phone call prior to the game in which the caller said the selling of tickets was going to happen. Ingram later received a call which said it had happened. Whitley said Ingram believed the anonymous caller was the same, each time. After the second call, the investigation was launched.

Jones said the tickets were sold to Robin Fisher, a former Florida football player, who works for developer Fred Sutton from Melbourne. Sutton is one of the Gators' major boosters. Whitley said Sutton has been investigated by the NCAA for improprieties when Charley Pelf was Florida's coach.

"Why would Sutton need two tickets from Jones?" Whitley said. "As big of a booster as he is, he could probably get all he wants from Florida on the 50-yard line."

Sutton and Fisher both said the deal was not a setup.

Buckeyes Face New-Look Cougars

ORLANDO (UPI) — Ohio State will be facing a quicker and more physical Brigham Young team in the Citrus Bowl Saturday than it did in a 47-17 victory over the Cougars in the 1982 Holiday Bowl. BYU has grown up.

"This defense is as good as any we've had," said Cougars coach Lavell Edwards, "mainly because we're stronger up front, and quick — for us — with good and experienced linebackers."

"It wasn't necessarily the result of that game," said Edwards, "we just knew if we were going to get into that echelon... We've always tried to improve that area in speed."

Edwards said speed has always been a problem for the Cougars, and claims it manifests itself more on defense than offense.

"We've had problems in the

secondary at times because of a lack of speed," he said. "Now we've got better speed, better quickness and consequently we've got a better defense."

"We're much bigger, but we're quicker. It's not just big. Quicker is the key. Big quickness becomes a real joy."

Edwards expects Ohio State, which lost its final two regular-season games and will take an 8-3 record into the Citrus Bowl meeting, to be similar to the 1982 model of the Buckeyes.

"They've got the same type of a football team," said Edwards, "big, very strong, with some speed. We're impressed with that young wide receiver they have, (Cris) Carter."

"Of course, their running backs are great with (Keith) Byars and (John) Woodruff and others. Their quarterbacking has been very good. It's a typical Ohio State team."

Brigham Young, a Mormon school, will not play or even practice Sundays, and Ohio State held a snappy two-hour workout at the Orlando Stadium practice field used by the Orlando Renegades of the USFL.

"Run, get moving and stay mentally sharp," is the way Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce described his team's Sunday practice. "You can't hit any."

Saturday's game will be Ohio State's first appearance at Orlando and in the Citrus Bowl. Bruce coached the University of Tampa to victory over Kent State in 1972 when the game was known as the Tangerine Bowl.

Lady Patriots Rely On 'Ice' To Handle Pressure

When Cindy Frank was dealt her first head coaching assignment, she didn't exactly have a stacked deck to work with. Frank has shuffled things around a bit since taking over, but she's always had one ace, or rather "ice," to help her out of jams.

Senior guard Sherry "Ice" Asplen has helped make Frank's transition from an assistant at Lake Mary High to the head coaching job at Lake Brantley become a smooth one.

Going into the Christmas break, the Lady Patriots have compiled a record of 6-2 and Asplen leads the team in four of five statistical categories. And, just as valuable to the team as her stats, is Asplen's leadership qualities.

"She took over the leadership role from day one," Frank said of Asplen. "Any time there's a problem, I can always count on Sherry."

With eight games under her belt this season, Asplen has already compiled some impressive statistics. "Ice" currently ranks third in Seminole County in scoring with a 16.1 average, fourth in steals at 4.0, seventh in assists at 2.8 and first in free throw shooting at 74 percent.

"I was looking forward to the leadership role," Asplen said. "Everybody's learning. I'm learning from the other players and they're learning from me. A lot of the time, I teach them just by being silent."

"When I was an underclassman I looked up to the seniors, watched them, and tried to do what they did. Hopefully, I'm doing that for the young players now."

Chris Fister
SPORTS WRITER

Along with being team leader, another new role Asplen has taken on this season is rebounding. As point guard a year ago, she wasn't counted on to hit the boards but, with only one experienced player inside, Frank needed Asplen underneath. And Asplen has responded with a 5.8

rebounding average which ranks second on the team and 15th in the county.

"She's never been asked to rebound before," Frank said. "It's something I was wondering about, but, before I even said anything about it, she said she would like to contribute underneath. She has a good sense of being in the right place for rebounds."

While Asplen has certainly made Frank's job more enjoyable, the Frank connection, Debbie Frank is the assistant, has had a good affect on Asplen and the Lady Patriots.

"We love having her coach," Asplen said of Frank. "From the first day it's been perfect. It's good having her and her sister (Debbie) there. They're on our level and know their stuff."

"And they set a real good example. It's neat having the sisters coaching together and the parents (Joyce and Elder Frank) are great."

While the Frank family is together at Brantley, the Asplen's have also been a big part of Brantley athletics. Sherry's older brother, Brennan, a 1984 graduate, was a standout switch-hitting player on the baseball team. Her twin sister, Debbie, is scorekeeper for the softball squads. Younger sister Susan, a sophomore, is on the varsity squad with Sherry this season.

"It would be nice if she (Susan) could kind of follow in my footsteps," Sherry said. "She wants my number (11) next year, that's kind of neat." Asplen said she can't wait for the second half of the season to start up and is looking for the Lady Patriots to be right in the thick of things in the Seminole Athletic Conference and the district.

"I think we're definitely in the running in the district," Asplen said. "We've got as good a shot as anybody. We'll be right in it if we can cut down on our turnovers."

Asplen said she hasn't decided where she will go to college but right now she is looking at Wake Forest among others. Former University of Central Florida coach Joe Sanchez is now at Wake Forest and Asplen caught his eye last season when she was most valuable player in the UCF basketball camp directed by Sanchez.

"I'm not positive on anything yet," Asplen said. "I'm looking at Wake Forest but would like to stay in state if I could. I'm leaving my options open right now."

Frank, who said Asplen is probably the best outside shooter in the county this season, believes she can play college ball at any level.

"There's no doubt she'll play college ball somewhere," Frank said. "She's the best pure shooter I've seen this year. Kim Forsyth is a stronger kid but all around Sherry makes up for it in a lot of ways."

Asplen said she would also like to carry the "Ice" nickname into college. She got the moniker when, after an outstanding shooting performance as a freshman on the varsity squad, then coach Renny Betris said, "She's only a freshman but she was as cool as ice out there tonight."

"Ice" plays the second half of the season as well or better as she did the first half, the Lady Patriots will be cooling off plenty of opponents the next few months.

Couple's Wish For Christmas Cash Wins Favor From Reader

DEAR ABBY: "Can't Decide" was annoyed with her newlywed daughter for requesting cash instead of a Christmas gift. The newlyweds admitted that they were in debt and could use the money to pay off some of their obligations. The mother thought the young couple was "nervy." You agreed, and advised the mother to give them a gift of her choice, plus some advice on the importance of living within their means.

Abby, being in debt is pretty normal these days for newlyweds. I think the young couple showed good judgment and maturity to request a practical gift rather than a useless dust collector.

The mother should be proud of her daughter's wisdom and integrity. (I can't imagine where she got it.) And you, Abby, should be ashamed of yourself.

SANDY PASQUANTONIO, FOXBORO, MASS.

DEAR SANDY: Your letter was one of the many complaints that hit my desk.

All right, Mother, ignore my original advice and give the newlyweds a gift of cash even though it's not your idea of a proper Christmas present. And come St. Valentine's Day, be a sweetheart and recommend they seek help from the nearest consumer credit counseling service so they can learn how to budget their money and stay debt-free.

DEAR ABBY: Re the item from "Upset in Elk River, Minn." and her "problem" with the principal removing the bathroom compartment doors. I say she has no beef!

Women have insisted on equality for so long that it is amusing to see their reactions when they get a real dose of it. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander!

I say, "More power to the principal!"

FED UP WITH "LIBBERS" IN S.A.

DEAR FED UP: Since when is removing the option of privacy in a women's restroom a "dose of equality"?

Women's rights is about equal pay for equal work and equal opportunity, and you, sir, should get your mind out of the bathroom.

DEAR ABBY: I need help with a

problem. My 16-year-old daughter refuses to eat. She is losing weight! She is 5 feet tall and I don't think she weighs more than 80 pounds. She claims I am nagging too much, and we always end up in a fight.

Is her diet a "teen-age fad" that I am making too much over? She says she eats out, but I can see by the way her pants sag that she is lying.

Am I right to be concerned?
NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Yes! Your daughter is "anorexic"—she perceives herself as being "too fat," so she's starving herself. She needs to see a doctor who will probably recommend an eating disorder clinic or a psychiatrist. Don't delay.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I've lost my mind, but I have fallen in love with a voice I have heard quite frequently on the telephone. She is a telephone operator for a place with which I do business. I'm a normal (unmarried) male.

I know absolutely nothing about her, but we have had a few laughs and short conversations that had nothing to do with business. (I told her I was fascinated by her voice. She laughed and said I had a nice voice, too. Period.)

Do you think I'd be crazy to ask her to meet me for a cocktail or coffee or something?

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: You'd be crazy not to. Go ahead and ask her. You have nothing to lose but your illusions.

DEAR ABBY: You stated in a recent column that a stepmother is the wife of one's father by a subsequent marriage, and a stepfather is the husband of one's mother by a subsequent marriage.

Abby, I may be wrong on this, but I always believed that as long as one's mother or father was living, there is no actual "stepparent"—they are introduced as "my father's wife, Mary," or "my mother's husband, John."

MRS. R., CLEARWATER, FLA.

DEAR MRS. R.: When a parent marries again, regardless of whether the original mate is living or not, the new mate is a stepparent to the children.

For help with a stepfamily problem, and the locations of the chapters near you, write to: The Stepfamily Association of America Inc., 28 Allegheny Ave., Baltimore, Md. 21204. Please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about sex, drugs and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

New Medication May Help With Depression

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am 74 years old. I am taking 25 mg. of Sinequan each night for depression. It helps me eat and sleep better, but it has done nothing for my depression. I cry as much as ever. Should I continue to take this medicine?

reasons for this are not completely understood. Continue to enjoy your talent as you effortlessly paddle around those of us who sink like stones — and continue to buoy up your family with your sense of humor and enjoyment of the water.

DEAR READER — Some patients respond more satisfactorily to some antidepressants than to others. The doctor who prescribed Sinequan for you is the best judge of whether this drug is the most effective for you. If a change in medication is indicated, there are many available compounds that could be substituted. It sounds to me as though an alteration in your treatment is in order.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Please explain night sweats. Do these occur only in older people and do they warrant seeing my doctor?

DEAR READER — Although

any normal person may perspire at night, depending on environmental temperature and humidity, true night sweats may indicate infection or disease. Doctors are ordinarily suspicious if the patient experiences repeated drenching night sweats on cool nights.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
What could be simpler than to say that when you play the card you are known to have, your opponent may decide not to play for the card you are not known to have. If you say that fast 10 times, I'm sure your tongue as well as your brain will get twisted, so let's look at today's deal to see how it applies.

Next came a low spade to the jack. Happily for South, that won the trick. Declarer now cashed the spade ace, on which a sleepy East contributed the 10. On the play of the third spade, even the lowliest novice would now rise with the king, swallowing the queen and making dummy's spade nine the game-going trick.

Broadway's Swan Song?

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "A Chorus Line," the longest-running show in Broadway history, may be the last great stage musical to become a movie for decades to come.

Earlier this month, the glossy musical played its 4,290th performance at the Shubert Theater, surpassing "Grease" as the most enduring show in the Big Apple.

"A Chorus Line," which opened July 25, 1975, is also the most profitable in history with a net of more than $40 million and some $300 million raked in from abroad.

Now the Michael Bennett-Joseph Papp production has been made into the best musical movie to come out of Hollywood in years with Michael Douglas playing the taskmaster choreographer under the direction of Richard Attenborough.

The question asked in Hollywood, and Broadway as well, is whether "A Chorus Line" will be the last of its kind.

In its long and colorful history Broadway has never been worse off financially or creatively. There are fewer theaters, producers, backers and shows than ever. Production costs are astronomical, ticket prices high and prospects ominously low.

Fate of the Broadway theater is the subject in part of a new book, "Notes on Broadway" by composers Joel Hirschhorn and Al Kasha who interviewed 24 major celebrities associated with the theater, among them Leonard Bernstein, Cy Coleman, Marvin Hamlisch, Jerry Herman, Sammy Cahn, Tim Rice and Julie Styne.

Kasha and Hirschhorn wrote the words and music for "Seven Brides For Seven Brothers," "Copperfield" and others. They are concerned with the low estate of the legitimate theater in general and musicals in particular.

"Everyone we spoke to is worried about the future of theater," Kasha said. "It is an endangered species. Not only are there fewer theaters, the size of audiences is shrinking. This generation of Americans was weaned on 'Star Wars' and rock and roll. So they are looking for something spectacular every time they go to the theater."

Hirschhorn said, "Bernstein believes rock is just a name for music of the '40s, only with an electronic sound. He sees rock as the real threat to the theater. He calls it a technological nightmare. Bernstein says Broadway is falling because real music is gone."

"On the other hand, Carole Bayer Sager believes rock will be the salvation of theaters. Tim Rice agrees. They think the future of the musical theater will be shows like 'Jesus Christ Superstar' or 'Hair.' Today's 40-year-old doesn't want to pay $50 to listen to old-fashioned Broadway show tunes. They want the music they were raised on — rock. It's their music."

Ostensibly, each generation responds best to its own musical taste. A parallel may be drawn for the older generation, which rejected the frilly strains of Gilbert and Sullivan for the music of "Oklahoma" and "My Fair Lady."

But music itself is only a small facet of Broadway's problems. The shrinking number of theaters is of concern to everyone. Fifty years ago there were several theaters on every block (perhaps 45 in all) in that fictional midtown Manhattan area known as Broadway.

As recently as 1980 there were 28 theaters for plays and musicals. Now there are only 17.

Stephen Schwartz, whose credits include "Pippin" and "Godspell," says Broadway will eventually showase plays and musicals that are mounted out of town.

"Broadway won't originate anything new because it is so expensive in every way," Hirschhorn said. "Producers have to pay actors for participating in a workshop just to develop a show. It can cost as much as $100,000."

Kasha added, "Producers got past the unions by doing shows in the workshop area like 'Dream Girls' and 'A Chorus Line.' Now the unions have come down on them. So there will be fewer workshops out of which shows are generated."

"That means no tryout time to discover if the show will work for an audience," Hirschhorn said. "So new plays will be started in Los Angeles, Boston, Philadelphia and other cities where unions don't kill you. Any place but New York."

"That means New York will be just a stopping-off place for a traveling show with limited engagements of three months or so."

Most observers agree that unions are a major contributor to Broadway's malaise.

Kasha and Hirschhorn say the average cost of a Broadway musical is more than $3 million. "La Cage Aux Folles" came in for a whopping $5 million. "Cats" cost $4 million and "Grind," which survived only a couple of weeks, $3 million.

Susan L. Schulman, a longtime Broadway press agent forced out of business by the shoring of theaters and shows, blames unions for many of the biggest problems.

"Broadway has never been worse off than it is now," said Schulman, after 19 years of promoting such shows as "Applause," "Dancin'" and "Sly Fox."

"Economics have ruined it," she said. "Unions have a strong hold on what a show costs, so fewer people are willing to raise the $2 million to $3 million to put on a musical. Even straight plays can't make it."

"I handled 'Requiem for a Heavyweight' earlier this year. It cost $800,000 with two name stars, George Segal and John Lithgow. We had something to sell. After opening day the bottom line was that if we stayed open three weeks it would cost $750,000 for advertising and costs of running the show."

"If we'd sold out every night for three weeks we couldn't make that kind of money. So we closed after four performances."

"How do the unions hurt? Stagehand jobs are passed from father to son. They featherbed with double jobs, two men working at one job. If you have a house carpenter, you also have to hire a show carpenter. Same for electricians."

"If you hang a marquee, even without lights, the electricians demand you hire one or two members on overtime even if they don't do anything."

"The most flagrant abuse is the Musicians Union Local 802. They have 'walkers,' musicians who only walk in and pick up their checks. Each theater was assigned a specific number of musicians years ago, whether a producer needed them or not. If your show requires only 16 musicians and the house is assigned 28, you have to hire an additional 12 who never play a note."

A spokesman for Emanuel Azenberg, who produces all of playwright Neil Simon's comedies, said, "Union contracts have made it almost impossible to put on a show. The costs are so high there isn't room anymore for a small, good play that isn't a big splash or tap-dancing."

"Simon is the exception and his are all comedies. The feeling I get is every show that opens has to be a smash hit or a bomb."

Azenberg's man says unions are not altogether to blame for Broadway's difficulties. He singles out the lack of creative talent.

"In simplistic terms, it is difficult for a writer to make a living in the theater," he said. "Most young talent is lured to TV or films where they make lots of money. If a play flops, the writer comes away with nothing or accepts reduced royalties to keep the play going. The income from a weekly TV show is enormous by comparison."

Moviemaker Allan Carr, who produced the current smash hit, the musical version of "La Cage Aux Folles," sees a dearth of composers as a leading cause of Broadway's headaches.

"Where are the Cole Porters, George Gershwins, Rogers and Harts, Julie Styne, Oscar Hammersteins and Lerner and Loewes today?" Carr asks.

"Stephen Sondheim and Marvin Hamlisch do some work, but maybe they aren't to everyone's tastes. The talented composers must be writing for M-TV."

"Composers don't want to take the time and expense of mounting a show and then close in one night. Young musical talent isn't focused on Broadway. Thank God Andrew Lloyd Weber is sending stuff from England like 'Evita,' 'Cats' and 'The Starlight Express.'"

"England has two nationally subsidized theater programs, the National Theater and the Royal Shakespeare, which makes shows less expensive to mount."

"It cost me $5 million to put on 'La Cage Aux Folles.' Back in 1958 it only cost $400,000 to stage 'My Fair Lady.' It's too big a gamble to produce a musical today unless you're sure the quality of the show is first rate."

"Good plays are harder to find than musicals, except for Simon. Serious plays don't work on Broadway, only regionally. You might ask, too, where are the Arthur Millers and Tennessee Williames these days?"

Actors, especially stars, are often responsible for the disappearance of serious plays, according to Kasha and Hirschhorn.

"Dustin Hoffman in 'Death of a Salesman,' said he would only do the play for three or four months," Kasha said. "That doesn't give backers time to get their money out. Producers have a tough time getting stars to stay in a play long enough to go into profit."

"Shirley MacLaine turns down anything longer than six months. Backers need a year to get their money back."

Exorbitant ticket prices are another bone of contention along the rialto, according to Hirschhorn who said, "The average ticket price is $40 to $50, so a musical had better be an event. The average play ticket is $25, which is a lot of money when a movie costs only $6 and TV is for free."

Yet another element of Broadway's dilemma is the power of a single critic, the New York Times' Frank Rich, who can close a show with a negative review.

Said Kasha, "This has become a one-paper town so far as reviews are concerned. He's a good critic, but one man shouldn't have that much power."

"The other critical voters in the papers and on TV are not taken seriously enough to overcome Rich."

Carr said, "I think the critics are generally

Castro Quits Smoking

RIO DE JANEIRO. Brazil (UPI) — Fidel Castro, who is almost as well known for his fat Havana cigars as his Cuban revolutionary rhetoric, has quit smoking.

"I haven't lit up a cigar for several months now," the Cuban leader said in an interview on Brazilian television. "I reached the conclusion long ago that the one last sacrifice I must make for (Cuban) public health is to stop smoking. I haven't really missed it that much."

The 59-year-old leader said he started smoking at age 14.

The cigars may be gone, but Castro said the rest of his image would remain.
