Fern Park Body A Mystery As County Tests Continue

Seminole County deputies and medical examiners continued At press time today, Garay and other pathologists were still their work today trying to identify a badly decomposed body at work, with the identity of the woman or the cause of her found in Fern Park Wednesday afternoon.

Authorities this morning only knew they have the body of a teen-aged white female wearing a blue pull-over top and jeans. The body had been lying for several weeks concealed in some bushes behind the Fern Park Kmart, off a path between U.S. Highway 17-92 and the St. Johns Village Apartments. Overnight, Cambodia was transformed from a peaceful paradise of smiling people to the arena of the most vicious fighting witnessed in the Indonhina war.

The fighting and destruction surpassed anything the Americans had unleashed on North Vietnam. It turned one of the most fertile rice growing and exporting nations in Asia into

The war produced no heroes. Its shadowy victors were men who five years earlier had been no more than a rag-tag band of $,000 guerrillas, ignored by their enemies and despised even by their friends, the Vietnamese. Until Shanouk's overthrow, Hanoi had kept the Khmer e under tight waps so as not to irk the prince, whose secret acquiescence was needed for the Viet Cong's use of supply trails and sanctuaries inside Combodia. The American "incursion" into Cambodia on April 30, 1970, gave Hanoi an excuse to unleash the Khmer Rouge. The U.S. combing and Sihanouk's seal of approval swelled their ranks Lon Nol's corrupt army of young men was no match for them. No amount of U.S. aid could turn the tide. On April 12, 1975, U.S. Embassy personnel and highranking Cambodian government officials left the falling capital by helicopter. Those left behind comforted each other with the oftheard assurance: "Khrner do not kill Khrner."

There was cautious jubilation in the streets of Phnom Penh s the first communist troops poured into the capital. Bedsheets were draped out of windows as welcoming bancers and haggard citizens descended onto the sidewalks to wave and cheer their new, scowling overlords. Their relief in "peace at last" was short-lived.

Hours after their arrival, the Khmer Rouge were brutally erding people out of the cities and into the countryside. Hospitals were emptied of the sick and dying at gunpoint. Those who argued were shot. Those too old or weak for the trek ere left to die by the roadside. The reign of terror had begun.

The mysterious Khmer Rouge leadership made no secret of is intentions. All remnants of Western contamination must be wiped out. Rice self-sufficiency must be restored through a eturn to an agricultural base.

In 44 months of Khmer Rouge rule under Pol Pot, at least 1 pillion people died in Cambodia. According to the best inelligence estimates available, some 300,000 people were xecuted for disloyalty to the state or for minor infractions of he rules. The rest died from the effects of slave labor and darvation rations. On Christmas Day, 1978, Vietnam invaded Cambodia and, in quick march across the nation, routed Pol Pot and the Khmer Rouge from Phnom Penh on Jan. 7, 1979. This time there was not even cautious jubilation in the treets of the capital. Phnom Penh was empty. The Vietnamese, however, were welcomed. A profound ense of relief spread across the country at the news of Pol ot's ouster. People began returning to their homes and Illages, Buddhist monks donned their saffron robes. But once again the relief soon gave way to disilusionment and hatred, this time for the Vietnamese whose army brought the specter of starvation to Cambodia. Fleeing the Vietnamese army, the Khmer Rouge had unded up tens of thousands of peasants. Thousands more andoned their plows in terror as the Vietnamese swept past. cefields became battlefields. The winter harvest was never reaped, the summer crop ver planted. The Vietnamese presence totally disrupted the ation's already fragile distribution system. It was six months before the Vietnamese allowed the first ternational aid team into Cambodia for an inspection visit. It as 10 months after their capture of the capital before the flow aid was allowed to begin.

It was 12 months before the Vietnamese carried out any ge scale distribution of that food aid to the starving Cambodians in the countryside. In fact, the first real food distribution was carried out on Jan. 7, 1980, to mark the first niversary of the installation of their client government under Khmer Rouge defector Heng Samrin. In that first year of Vietnamese occupation, international gencies estimate that another 500,000 Cambodians died of current situation is "irreversible" and should be accepted. The Cambodians, however, have their own dream of peace - the peace and well-being they lost 10 years ago with the overthrow of Sihanouk.

A recent poll in refugee camps along Thailand's eastern frontier showed that 85 percent of all Cambodians believe the only solution to their problems is the return of Sihanouk. "People won't go back if Pol Pot is there," said Chiu Changher, 35, a former textile worker currently at the Mairut refugee camp in Southern Thailand. "Heng Sarmrin and the Vietnamese are no better. All the people are afraid of them. We will only go back to Cambodia if there was Sihanouk. For us, Sihanouk was the last happy time."

Relief workers at camps holding 160,000 Cambodians inside Thailand say the Cambodians avidly follow radio reports of Sihanouk's world travels in search of support. "There is still some bitterness against Sihanouk for his past support for Pol Pot," said one worker at the sprawling Khao I Dang center. "But if Sihanouk walked into this camp today, there wouldn't be a man, woman or child who didn't go down on their knees to him. If Sihanouk came today and told these people 'Follow me, we're going home,' they would get up and

Except in France, Sihanouk has found little support for his efforts to save Cambodia. The Americans have told him to stay out of politics and c o n c e n t r a t e on the "humanitarian issues involved." A New Cry For Weapns

CBS newsman Dan Rather and his camera crew have brought extraordinary television material back from their surreptitious visit with rebel forces inside Afghanistan. Viewers of "60 Minutes" recently could admire the determination of the rag-tag fighters, but could also see that they have very little in the way of weapons with which to do their fighting.

All the rebels can hope to do is wage guerrilla warfare from their mountain strongholds against the 70,000 Russian troops now occupying their country. While accurate military information from inside Afghanistan is hard to come by, there are persistent reports that the tribesmen are able to strike painful blows against the invaders. Recently Radio Pakistan reported that the rebels had shot down a helicopter, killing two Soviet generals and three Afghan officers loyal to the Soviet-backed regime in Kabul.

The rebel warriors encountered by Rather were making a plea for help. They are not asking for military aid on the grand scale, but the kind of light weapons and ammunition they can use effectively in a war of resistance. The U.S. government has been officially silent about delivery of weapons to the rebels since national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski made his famous trip to the Khyber Pass in February. Rather could find no evidence that the rebel forces are getting any American aid directly or

The Carter administration's response to the thus err in forecasting election returns during Soviet invasion has been limited to diplomatic the initial months of the campaign. pressure on Moscow, an attempt to revive military aid to Pakistan, a beefing up of security planning for the Persian Gulf and a deployment of naval forces to the Indian Ocean. It appears to leave out the people who are facing the Russians head-on — the Moslem tribesmen trying to defend their villages against "infidels" from the north armed with tanks, artillery and helicopters, and possibly using nerve gas.

How much American hesitation is necessary? Since Day 1 of their invasion the Russians have been asserting on Moscow Radio that the Afghan rebels are being armed by the United States. they think this is true, or if they want the world to think this is true, we don't have much to lose by making it true. If the Afghans have the courage to keep fighting, they should have a chance to fight with something better than machine guns left over from World War I.

The Silly Season

The nation's capital is deadly during the heat of summer and sloppy during the chill of winter, but in the spring it's a lovely place to protest.

Among the early arrivals this year is the assemblage of activists rallying to the call of Ralph Nader to spend April 17 castigating "big business." These "Americans Concerned about Corporate Power" envision the event as the does not lie in inaccurate or inadequate beginning of a 10-year campaign to expose the reporting because the results of all the sins of 10 corporate giants — as yet unidentified — primaries have been promptly full and in bending the law.

But Nader, who has made a career out of being a malcontent, and his five dozen assorted associates probably will have little to say about jobs for a work force of almost 100 million Americans. They will be reluctant to speak of the business record of support for educational in-stitutions, of leadership in charitable causes, of aid to cultural endeavors or of being a good neighbor to the communities where business maintains

House Works To Control Parole For Violent Crime

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) - Two House committees want to send a message to violent criminals - get caught and you'll

The Corrections, Probation and Parole Committee Wedness day approved on an 8-1 vote a compromise bill that would eliminate parole for nine violent crimes ranging from sexual battery to murder. Persons convicted of other crimes could be paroled only after serving one-third of their terms. The compromise measure (CS-HB 1290), hammered out by Corrections Chairman Arnett Girardeau and Criminal Justice Chairman Robert Crawford, revises a Criminal Justice Committee version that would have abolished parole entirely. The substitute bill, which now goes to the Appropriations Committee, provides for the abolishment of parole effective Jan. 1, 1963, for the nine major crimes and would create a

Supreme Court in developing sentencing guidelines for all Crawford, D-Winter Haven, said the bill's message to criminals would be, "There will not be parole for people who commit violent crimes."

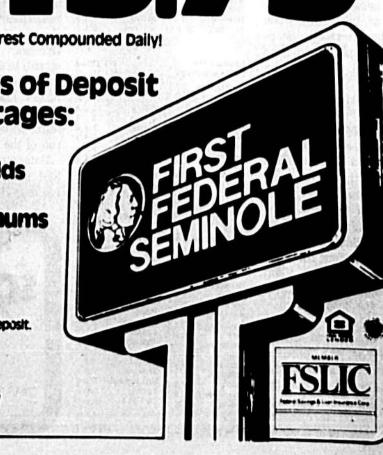

In other legislative action: - The House retreated from a proposal that a citizen making an ethics complaint against a public official pay the official's legal expenses if the charge was unproven and approved a substitute amendment to an Ethics Commission bill (HB 1117) saying the citizen would have to pay those expenses only if he acted in "bad faith." - The House Governmental Operations Committee passed a

The Apopka Blue Darters took advantage of some late inning walks and Seminole High miscues Wednesday afternoon to post a come from behind 18-10 win over Sanford in Five Star Conference baseball action.

Seminole took a 10-6 lead into the seventh inning on the hitting of Alton Davis, Juan Dealba, Walt Law and Glenn Davis smacked a three-run triple while Dealba, Law and Stambaugh rapped out two hits each for the Tribe to help build the four run cushion.

Apopka used a pair of errors and walks combined with two Blue Darter base hits in their half of the seventh to knot the score and send the contest into extra innings. Seminole failed to score in the eighth and as Tribe coach Bobby Lundquist win it, "They came out and knocked the ball all over the park." The Darters amassed eight runs in the top of the eighth and then blanked the Seminoles in the bottom of the inning for the victory. The loss snapped an eight game winning streak for the Tribe and left its current record at 9-18.

"Good defense sure helped our winning streak and we just didn't get it tonight," said Lundquist of Apopka's big comeback. "We should have been out of the last two innings one-two-three, but we didn't get the plays and it cost us." A's Keough Handcuffs Mariners

For all his efforts in three seasons as a major leaguer, Matt Keough has picked up an unfair reputation and a fierce determination to restore some pride to the family

Keough, who lost his first 14 decisions last season with Oakland before finishing with a dismal 2-17 record, picked up his second victory of the infant season Wednesday night by stopping the Seattle Mariners on six hits in a 6-1 victory

"I knew I was a better pitcher than my record," said Keough, who decided to take his future into his own hands after last season's nightmare. Keough decided to pitch winter ball, something he had never done before. "They suggested I should quit on my slider," said the 24yearold right-hander, son of former major-league outfielder Marty Keough.

In his first start this year against the Minnesota Twins, Keough pitched a four-hitter in a 1-0 victory. He had the Mariners shut out through seven innings Wednesday before a double by Julio Cruz and a single by Bruce Bochte Keough struck out five Mariners and walked two while Jim Beattle, who started for Seattle, was reached for eight hits and all six runs in 4 2-3 innings. The A's sent 11 batters to the plate in the fifth inning and scored all their runs on six hits and two walks. Rob Picciolo's single drove in the first run and Dave Revering hit a two-run triple later in the rally for the deciding blow.

Elsewhere in the AL, Toronto routed Milwaukee 11-2, Baltimore edged Kansas City 2-1, New York downed Chicago 6-0, Texas nipped Cleveland 8-7, Boston got by Detroit 10-9 and California shaded Minnesota 2-1 in 10 innings.

Rich Dauer's run-scoring single in the seventh inning provided the winning run and Mike Flanagan displayed last season's Cy Young Award form by tossing a seven-hitter, giving Baltimore a narrow victory over Kansas City.

Veteran Tommy John tossed a two-hitter to register his 37th career shutout and lead New York over Chicago, which saw a four-game winning streak snapped. John, 1-0, allowed only a one-out single by Alan Bannister in the first inning and an infield single by Wayne Nordhagen in the fifth.

Richie Zisk belted a three-run homer with two out in the ninth inning to help Texas overcome an early seven-run deficit and hand Cleveland its fourth straight loss.

Tony Perez went 4-for-4 and drove in four runs with a tworun homer and a double and Steve Renko pitched five innings of one-hit relief as Boston handed Detroit its fifth

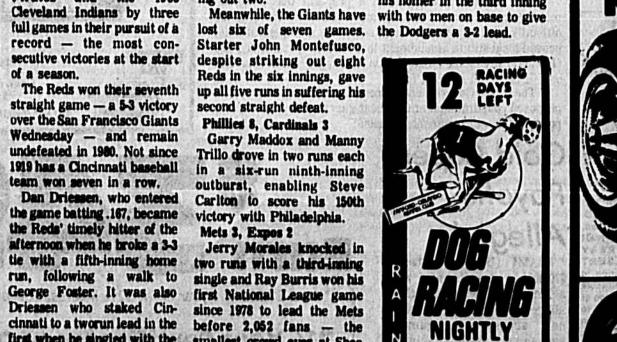

Don Baylor hit a sacrifice fly to drive in Al Cowens with one out in the 10th inning. Cowens led off with a single against Minnesota reliever Mike Marshall and Carney Lansford sacrificed him to second. Dan Ford singled Cowens to third before Baylor's fly ball.

400 Students To Attend Program

Health Seminar To Give Career Data

The allied health occupations are predicted to be one of the leading employment areas of the decade. As part of its continuing health education programs, the Orange County Medical Society Auxiliary, in cooperation with Seminole Community College, will sponsor its second annual Health Careers Seminar Monday

The seminar is organized to provide comprehensive health career information to area high school and junior college students. The day-long seminar will be held at Seminole Community College.
