Anonymous Communications

The Herald has previously expressed its attitude toward anonymous communications, but at the risk of boring some of our readers with repetitions, we will do so again, inasmuch as there are evidently some who are not yet aware that this newspaper has no time or space for communications which bear no signature.

We realize that grievances may exist that call for public denunciation and that aggrieved persons might be in danger of losing their jobs or possibly some of their friends, if they burst into print with proper philippic. However, if the offense warrants the outburst, it should surely warrant the danger of retaliation involved.

Furthermore, it should be fully apparent to everyone that this newspaper could write letters to itself all day long exploiting every subject under the sun, denouncing everyone in town, signing the letters "P. D. Q." and "X. Y. Z.", and that if it made a practice of printing anonymous communications, they would be no better or carry no more weight than if they were written right here in this office.

It is only when a man's name is signed to a letter that it is worth anything. Presenting an anonymous communication for printing is like presenting an unsigned check at the bank. Any other anonymous publication is equally as unreliable. No statement is any better than the man who makes it. If you do not know who is the author of the statement, you cannot possibly tell how much credence should be placed in it.

In our experience with matters of this kind, we have found this to be pretty generally the case: when a man will not sign the articles he writes, either they contain statements which are not true and which he cannot sustain if questioned, or else he is himself a coward. More often than not, it is both.

It is also generally true that anonymous communications are devoted largely to the most lavish outbursts of vitriolic vituperation usually directed at someone against whom a personal grudge exists. They remind us of a fido dog barking at the moon, and we suggest that instead of burdening us with their publication that they be taken out in the woods and read to some giant cypress in a dismal swamp.

Broadcast The Games

Despite efforts to stimulate attendance at football games, colleges and universities are finding that the heretofore enormous crowds are failing to materialize. The price of admission, in many instances, has been cut apparently without effect and the cessation of radio broadcast reports of the games have not attained their contemplated purpose of dragging people away from the fireside where they used to listen to exciting accounts over the ether.

Some have suggested that interest in football is taking a slump like everything else, but a more reasonable explanation we feel can be found in the economic situation of most fans. While prices of admission have been cut, this is only a small item in the expense of attending a football game. A good portion of the crowd at football games ordinarily comes from distances far away, and the cost of transportation, plus food, and incidentals runs up a bill at the end of the day which makes the admission price a trivial matter.

It is very doubtful if the fact of the times alone has contributed greatly in the average consideration of whether or not to attend a game, but it is practically a certainty that the aggregate expense is the big thing that is causing the fall in attendance. Further, the idea that anyone would prefer to sit at home and hear the report of a game to being right on the scene of action, provided it wouldn't cause bankruptcy, is ridiculous.

This being true it seems like an unnecessary penalty to deprive those who can't afford to travel a long distance to see a game, of the fun, if greatly diminished, of hearing an account about it over the radio. It appears to us to be eminently unfair to the alumni, who have in the past supported their teams with all loyalty, to penalize them now because they haven't the funds to go to Jacksonville, or Tampa, or Gainesville to see their alma mater play football.

U. S. AND BRITAIN AND FRANCE ARE IN FOCAL POINT

Three Nations Looked To For Solution Of World Difficulties

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The world's attention was turned today to the common task of meeting current political and economic disturbances in a united front by distinguished speakers before the American Bar Association here recently.

The Marquis of Reading, former Lord Chief Justice of England, looked to the coming economic conference as the world's only hope for the immediate future. Referring to disturbances in the Far East, he insisted that not armed sanctions but the enforcing power of world public opinion could preserve the peace.

He said the representative British attitude on world cooperation, was based upon intangible alliances composed of common ideals and traditions. He stressed the unity of American and British lawyers under the same legal fundamentals, and gave this as a key to Anglo-American understanding.

M. Paul Reynaud, former French minister of justice, presented an argument for cooperation through definite machinery and organization. In a succession of citations from American leaders of both parties before, during, and since the World War, he defended France's case for peace based on armed organization.

In Theodore Roosevelt's words, he insisted that "Each nation must keep well prepared to defend itself until the establishment of some form of international police power."

"French peasants did not invent the expression, 'suffrage' first," said M. Reynaud, "they believe in it."

The French spokesman warmly welcomed America's latest pledge in the movement for organized peace expressed in Mr. Henry L. Stimson's definition last August that consultation between signatories is absolutely implicit in the Pact of Paris.

Democracy and peace, said M. Reynaud, face together a serious test. This means, he said, "that our common work is not finished. The spirit demagogues, America, Great Britain and France have a common duty to perform. They have to prove that the regime of liberty is able to meet any economic disturbance today in the same way as they met yesterday that greater trouble, the World War."

The world needs to remember Benjamin Franklin's injunction, the French orator pointed out: "Hang together or we hang separately." But until world organization is strong enough, he insisted that France must look to its own self-defense and prevent invasion.

Finally, M. Reynaud called on "the men of our profession to take the lead in the fight—democracy and peace."

Royal Wedding In Germany Attracts Interest Of World

COBURG, Germany, Oct. 21.—Princess Sibylla, of Sax-Coburg-Gotha, who is famed hereabouts for her Democratic manner and her queenly dignity, yesterday became the wife of Prince Gustaf Adolf Oscar, eldest son of the crown prince of Sweden.

The wedding day saw a procession of nature heralded by the superstitious townfolk as an indication that happiness was in store for the royal couple.

Some day may rule Sweden, the simple civil ceremony was performed in the ancient Coburg castle before a glittering array of nobility and townspeople.

All day it had rained, but when Sibylla and Gustaf emerged from the historic castle at the conclusion of the ceremony to greet the cheers of the multitude, the sun broke through the clouds.

The bridegroom, attired in an ordinary suit, reviewed a Reichswehr company, and then with his bride and a group of friends, drove to St. Maria Church, for a rehearsal of the religious ceremony to be held today.

All the streets of Coburg were decorated. In compliance with the desire of the Swedish court, flags and emblems of Adolf Hitler's National Socialist party were removed from public display places, and in their stead were hoisted the colors of Sax-Coburg-Gotha.

It had been reported, however, that the bridegroom, who performed the ceremony, was a member of the party.

Students—twelve per cent of the entire university body at Princeton University, other percentages at other colleges—were during the past college year, according to the first annual report of the National Student Reliance Association, the largest of all.

GARDEN NOTES By MARY FLORENCE SCOTT

By keeping in mind a few simple rules you can soon learn to arrange cut flowers so that they are more pleasing and with a little practice the results will be beautiful, even distasteful combinations of colors.

Each planting, each room, each musical composition, in fact, each product of art or industry, has its point of interest, the focal point around which all other things radiate, to which surrounding features glow up, that portion of your arrangement to which the eye is naturally drawn, upon which it rests. Each container and composition flower should be selected primarily to enhance the beauty and value of this cluster of flowers known as your point of interest.

To eliminate restless spots which will detract from your point of interest and the loveliness of your bouquet, it is best to mass the same or similar colors together, grading down masses from light tints high in the arrangement to deeper tones for low notes. This makes for balance, stability, and rhythm in color. Remember not to spot your color arrangement promiscuously. Mass it if possible from the tints and lighter flowers high on one side, checking down to dark colors that are low in value on the opposite side.

There now remains the basic principle that makes every arrangement different from the other and that is its distinction and personality. Distinction has been described as an indefinable something that elevates a flower arrangement above the usual, that something that makes it sing in a breath taking, beautiful way, a pastel harmony in soft, delicate tones or a strong crashing symphony of brilliant color. The form and color of flowers used, their relation to the container, the rhythm of the arrangement, are all a part of the quality called distinction, which makes a perfection of flower arrangement.

Do not try to crowd too much of anything into one bowl. Remember the keynote of beauty is simplicity. Always in all flower gatherings, have plenty of green, but let it be the green of their own foliage if possible. Each flower has its particular kind, and how can we question such perfect taste?

Plans Announced For Big Meeting Of Veteran Body

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 21.—(AP)—Plans were announced here yesterday for a meeting of department and post-officers and members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States from North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Florida, Alabama and Georgia, in Atlanta on Oct. 30.

The announcement, made through the office of W. Walter Jones, Jr., adjutant and quartermaster of Georgia, said it would be one of the South's "biggest and most important" gatherings of veterans of all American wars. The meeting is to be held at the Piedmont Hotel here.

Admiral Robert E. Coates, of Washington, D. C., commander-in-chief, and other national officers are to attend the meeting. Department commanders who are to attend were listed as including D. F. E. Atman, Memphis, Tenn.; Charles Boone, Orlando, Fla.; W. K. Barnett, Savannah, Ga.; and James P. Mikel, Greenville, N. C.

The primary purpose of the conference, the announcement said, is to outline in detail, and secure the support of Southern posts, to the organization's "definite 1933 program" for providing relief for disabled and destitute veterans, and widows and orphans of deceased veterans, for fostering and developing among veterans increased interest and greater zeal in public affairs, for co-ordinated effort in combating the insidious propaganda being disseminated against the veterans by entirely selfish interests and for widespread extension of the V. F. W. until it has units in each county of every state.

The Atlanta meeting is one of several similar conferences to be held in various parts of the country.

NITRATE AGENCIES ANNOUNCES an old friend with a new middle name GENUINE HUMBOLDT GUANO THIS year, Nitrate Agencies Company brings you the same high grade South American Bird Guano... Nature's Finest Fertilizer... as in the past. An old friend with a new middle name. GENUINE Humboldt Guano. For 70 years, the Nitrate Agencies Company and its affiliates have imported into the United States tremendous quantities of a Bird Guano produced on the small, rainless islands lying in the Humboldt Current, which parallels for thousands of miles, the Pacific Coast of South America. Because this Bird Guano has definite characteristics which readily distinguished it as being different from any guano produced outside of the Humboldt Current, and came from a group of islands directly off the coast of Peru, it has been known as Peruvian Guano. But during recent years the annual production of Bird Guano on the islands lying south of the Peruvian group has greatly increased, providing a new source of supply of the same material, the same bedding, good-for-crops Guano... fish converted into Nature's Finest Fertilizer by the same lab-saving Guano Birds of the Humboldt Current. In keeping with its long established policy of making this wonderful, natural organic fertilizer available to Florida growers at lower prices each year, Nitrate Agencies has arranged to obtain its supply from this new source. Our own inspectors on these islands report it the finest we have ever offered... and at the lowest price in history. NITRATE AGENCIES COMPANY 1601-1607 LYNN BUILDING JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA

Last Word In Gridiron Films Here Saturday

Last year Universal made a football picture. It was a classic. It was called "The Spirit of Notre Dame," and it set a new standard for moving pictures combining a popular form of athletic event. It held a trail.

This year Carl Laemmle, Jr., decided that he would produce a football picture which in every way would exceed "The Spirit of Notre Dame." Back in the summer he started planning for this picture which is to play at the Milano Theatre on Saturday. Its title is "The All American."

Carl Laemmle, Jr., determined that he would do something which had never been done by anyone else before. He would assemble and present a team made up of the All America selections of the All America Board of Football. No team of All America players had ever been assembled in one place before. No such team had ever played a football game. But that is exactly what happens in "The All American." Not only that. This team of 1931 All America stars plays against a team whose backfield is made up of Albie Booth, Red Cagle, Frank Carideo and Ernie Nevers. All in all, there are twenty-eight men who have been named All America by this board of last resort, composed of coaches Warner, Alexander, Harper and Christy Walsh. Of course, one of these All American players had to be excluded from the team to let the movie have its place. This movie stars John Darrow, but the hero and featured player of the production is Richard Arlen, who played so well last year in "Touchdown." After seeing him perform in "The All American," Hollywood is about to classify him as a football player. If Arlen is what he will prove to play any more football pictures, or that is the only thing that Hollywood casting directors will ever put him in. Universal borrowed him from Paramount for this most exciting role.

Tax Collections Drop Presaging Greater Deficit

(Continued From Page One) due from stock sales and transfers while increased taxes on gasoline, electrical energy, automobiles, brewer's wort, malt, and grape concentrates, checks, and most of the other new excise taxes did their part in counterbalancing the sharp drop in income taxes.

The new tax collections in September showed that stock market activities in that month and August had brought in a total of $6,594,571 in tax on sales and transfers as compared with $2,021,705 the previous month. The tax on stock and bond issues changed little, amounting to $1,520,366 as compared with $1,509,445 the previous month.

The gasoline tax returned $11,954,875 the previous month while the three percent tax on electrical energy added $2,039,800 to the total as compared with $967,412 in August. Brewers' wort, malt and grape concentrates returned $2,217,217 while checks returned $2,793,136 as compared with $3,264,251 and automobiles and motorcycles brought in $978,388 as compared with $866,655.

For three months of the fiscal year comprising the first quarter the government's total tax collections from old and new levies amounted to $358,108,065 as compared with $455,111,328 in the same period last year.

Ritchie Scores President For Delayed Action

(Continued From Page One) action been taken by our government, would have imperiled the Republic and the whole hope of recovery. It has affected business, industry, employment and agriculture alike. Again, he stated that the storm struck us in November, 1929.

"And what was the 'strong action' President Hoover took to weather this 'most terrific shock,' the worst of which he so persistently and repeatedly declared was over? Did he take prompt steps to avert the disaster which he says was imminent? Did he have the foresight to accurately gauge its effects?"

"Apparently not, because no real remedial measures were undertaken until the late summer of 1931. Instead of putting the government's house in order and warning the country, the President issued optimistic statements assuring us that everything was all right, actually reduced taxes when he knew or should have known that the treasury was facing a deficit, and despite the control his party had in Congress he made not the slightest attempt to economize."

"The first real step Mr. Hoover took was the organization of the National Credit Association in the summer of 1931, and this was followed by the creation of the R. F. C. and the other remedial measures passed by the present Congress, including the ratification of the moratorium on war debts. Everyone of these measures received the support necessary to pass from the Democrats in Congress."

"My own opinion is that the one section of Road 4-A in Dade county.

All bids for construction of a new bridge across the St. Lucie River on Road 4 at Stuart were rejected. New bids will be asked soon.

Delegations from all parts of the state deluged the commission with requests for construction and maintenance of road and bridge work. In a few instances, the road agreed to meet the requests where emergency conditions were recognized, but in most instances the commission said "Revenues of the road department have failed to meet anticipated figures, and even those received have been drastically distributed by transfers to other state departments."

George B. Hills, of Jacksonville, member of the commission, told one delegation the department's 1932 revenues were 25 percent under expectations.

Smoot-Hawley tariff bill has had more to do with the depression than any other single factor. President Hoover disagrees with this and waves the subject aside in his Cleveland speech by saying the bill was passed and nine months after the storm broke."

ANTI-BONUS BODY OF VETS MERGES ITS ACTIVITIES

Joins With National Economy League To Oppose Payments

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—A group of veterans who have been working to oppose the movement for immediate payment of the bonus, organized as the Veterans Committee for Reducing the Cost of Peace, have merged their activities with the National Economy League, which is campaigning for the same objective, and issued an invitation to similar bodies throughout the United States to register their opposition at the headquarters here.

Characterizing the National Economy League, which is headed by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Mr. Archibald B. Roosevelt, as the most effective channel through which opposition to the bonus can function, the announcement says that the determination to merge the two groups was taken by unanimous action of the veterans committee. Mr. Knowlton Durham, formerly of the veterans committee, will direct the veterans division, the announcement adds.

Simultaneously, Brig.-Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, chairman of the veterans committee and a veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, expressed the opi-

on that the action of the American Legion in demanding the bonus misrepresented the rank and file of World War veterans, who, he said, do not "really want to become objects of charity."

General Andrews' views were expressed in a statement made public with the announcement of the merger.

"When the veterans scorned the bonus when it was first suggested, they were running true to form, and those who are demanding immediate payment have been educated to a point of view that is no part of the American soldier by war or in peace," the statement said, continuing:

"I most certainly do not believe in the bonus in any form. I believe the government should provide generous insurance for men who are disabled in war and for dependents who lose bread winners. That is all. Anything further than that attacks the manhood of the country.

"You cannot accept a gratuity without some loss of self-respect. You cannot have self-confidence without self-respect. No one will dispute that. Self-confidence is the core of American manhood or any other manhood. This fact is basic in all modern military training. By persuading the World War veterans to accept a bonus, politicians attacked directly the greatest thing that military service has brought to them—self confidence and self respect."

The fact that the action of the American Legion was not representative of widespread sentiment in that organization was shown by the number of men who are leav-
