Class Has Mixed Ideas On Girl-Guys Slumber Party

DEAR ABBY: I teach sixth grade at Lockwood Elementary School in Bothell, Wash. The students are between 11 and 13

We had a very interesting discussion concerning a letter in your column signed VIRGINIA DAD Dad's 12-year-old son wanted to have a slumber party and invite six of his neighborhood friends. One of the friends just happened to be a girl, but since she was considered "one of the guys" the boy thought she should be invited without any concern for her sex. Dad said that even though the party would be well-chaperoned by him and his wife, he didn't think the girl should be invited to spend the night with six guys. Abby, your answer read:

"Dear Dad: Even though the gal is considered 'one of the guys,' underneath it all, she's still a gal. I would not invite

I asked the class what they thought of your answer, Enclosed are their letters. I hope you enjoy them. Sincerely, MICHAEL NELSON I think your opinion is wrong on not letting that girl go to the slumber party. If you are 12 years old, you are not going to do anything. I'm 12 and I've gone to a girl's house and nothing big happened. JIM WALKER

DEAR ABBY: About your answer to the parents of the 12year-old boy who wanted to have a girl at his slumber party: I think that the father is a paranoid person and is just expecting something to happen. I am 11, and think it would be perfectly all right to invite the girl, no questions asked. DEAR ABBY: I think you made a wrong decision about the slumber party. (No offense, Abby.) If the girl is considered "one of the gang," she should be invited. The parents would be there, and if anything did get out of hand, the girl would either be asked to leave or they would give her one more chance.. DEAR ABBY: About that 12-year-old boy having a slumber party and inviting a 12-year-old girl to sleep over with six boy:

Looking like a scene in Walt Disney World's Tomorrowland, the space shuttle Columbia is poised on Kennedy Space Center's launch Pad A awaiting Friday morning's maiden flight scheduled for 6:50 a.m. The stubby-winged shuttle is America's first reusable space vehicle.

Young, the veteran spaceflight commander, and Crippen, a test pilot making his first space flight, were awakened at 2 a.m. as they will be Friday. After breakfast, they got a briefing on the smooth countdown operations and then drove out to the oceanside launch pad.

The shuttle, now standing alone on the firing pad, was bathed in bright light as it stood virtually ready to set out on its maiden test flight, a 36-orbit, 541/2 hour mission. The countdown was in a long "hold" at the time, giving the launch crew time to go home and get some rest. Yardley said some work was actually ahead of schedule. Other preparations for the crucial flight, more than 21/2 years behind its original schedule, also appeared to be going well. "We're in great shape," said

Haig Warns Soviets Against Intimidation Of Poland

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Secretary of State Alexander Haig accused the Soviet Union today of intimidating Poland and said it could seriously damage East-West relations.

Haig, in Spain for talks following a Middle East tour his aides said resulted in a cease-fire in Lebanon, issued a

Without naming Poland, Haig said, "current intimidation of a sovereign country participating in the security conference could have serious consequences on the progress of this conference and East-West relations in general."

Spanish officials said during the subsequent meeting between Haig and his Spanish counterpart, Jose Perez-Llorca, the defense treaty giving the United States four military bases in Spain was discussed. Spanish officials said the treaty, drawn up in 1976, will probably be renewed for one year in September before renegotiation. Spain reportedly wants much more than the current $120 million in arms credits per year to help modernize its air force.

Haig came to Spain at a time the country was reported still seething over his remark in February that a failed military coup to overturn the nation's young democracy was Madrid's "internal matter."

Hanging Pending In Bahamas

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — Convicted killer Gregory Alfred Johnson has been scheduled to become the first person to die in the gallows of Her Majesty's Fox Hill Prison since three men were hanged last year.

The Ministry of Home Affairs said Wednesday the Committee on the Royal Prerogative of Mercy has rejected Johnson's appeal and he will be executed April 28 for knifing Erwin Edgecombe to death during a fight in a Nassau movie theater March 16, 1979.

Stoning For Adultery?

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) - The Pakistan government has filed an appeal against a recent court decision banning death by stoning for those who commit adultery. The appeal, filed Wednesday with the Islamic bench of the Pakistan Supreme Court, challenges a March lower court ruling that said, "stoning by death for adultery was repugnant to the injunctions of Islam."

President Mohammad Zia ulHaq proclaimed the severe penalty in 1979 in his drive to rewrite the national legal code according to what he said was Islamic law. Other penalties installed in the 1979 program were public logging and amputation of hands for drinking and robbery.

Lebanon Fighting Subsides

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Fighting between Syrian troops and Christian Phalangists subsided today in Beirut and Zahle under the 18th-truce of the 9-day-old conflict and he United States stepped up diplomatic efforts to end the actional warfare.

The toll in the fighting, which erupted April 1, stand at 220 dead and 550 wounded in the worst outbreak of hostilities since the 1975-1976 civil war in Lebanon. That war took an estimated 60,000 lives.

Red Cross ambulances waited for daybreak today to enter the besieged city of Zahle and evacute the casualties of a Syrian artillery, rocket and tank assault Wednesday on the Phalangist-held city. The city has been without electricity since the start of the fighting and is suffering acute shortages of food and medicine.

11-Year-Old Changes Story

Oviedo Man Faces Life Imprisonment For Rape

Herald Staff Writer

A 42-year-old Oviedo man faces life imprisonment after being convicted Wednesday of raping an 11-year-old girl. A 12-member Circuit Court Jury deliberated for more than four hours before returning its guilty verdict against Bobby Wayne Webb of 8 East Mead Drive. Sitting at the defense table, Webb wept openly when the verdict was read.

Judge Joseph Davis Jr. deferred sentencing pending completion of an investigation into Webb's background. The outcome of the two-day trial was thrown very much in doubt when the young victim took the witness stand and said the rape never occurred. The child's mother, who originally told investigators that she had walked into Webb's living room while the rape was in progress, also changed her story in court. Asked point blank by Assistant State Attorney Don Marblestone if Webb sexually assaulted her, the little girl fell silent for several moments, looked down at her feet, and stammered,

The youngster's mother said what she saw wasn't a rape at all. Webb "was just hugging and comforting" the child, she

However, under a new court procedure, Marblestone was able to introduce testimony from both the child and her mother given before a Seminole County grand jury in September in which they swore that on May 1, 1980, Webb did rape the child. In other court action, two persons pleaded guilty to separate charges. Sentencing was deferred pending background in-

- Anne Marie Lucas, 49, assaulting a police officer. The charge stemmed from a January 18 incident in which Lucas kicked a Sanford patrolman who was trying to get her to leave a local restaurant. The management had asked Lucas to leave after she began clearing tables, stating that she didn't think the waitresses were doing it fast enough.

- Mollie Poffenberger, 47, Longwood, obtaining merchandise with a worthless check. Poffenberger was accused of passing a $26 bad check to J.C. Penney's in May 1979. DOG TRACK TRIAL BEGINS

Will Seminole Greyhound Park of Casselberry be able to begin its racing season May 4 as planned? That question may be answered following a two-day, non-jury civil trial which began this morning. Circuit Court Judge Kenneth Leffler will be asked to decide whether the 1980 law which allowed conversion of the track from horse to dog racing The plaintiffs in the case - the Sanford-Orlando and

General Omar Bradley: Hero Dead At 88

NEW YORK (UPI) - Gen. Omar Nelson Bradley, the last of America's five-star generals and a World War II hero so loved by his troops they called him the "GI's General," died Wednesday night of cardiac arrest. He was 88.

Twenty minutes later, doctors pronounced him dead of cardiac arrest. An Army spokesman said burial for the general, who was retired but still officially on active duty, will be at Arlington National Cemetery.

In Washington, Army Secretary John Marsh Jr. mourned Bradley's death as "a loss not only for this nation but for all freedom-loving people of the world." "He takes his place in history as a great patriot, a peerless military leader and an individual dedicated to the cause of peace in the world," Marsh said.

Anti-Inspection Proposal Passes House Subcommittee

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) - A House transportation subcommittee has approved by one vote a proposal to get the state out of the motor vehicle safety

The measure (HB 101), a key provision of Gov. Bob Graham's transportation program, now goes before the full committee. Approved by a 5-4 vote, the bill would save most Florida motorists a $3 annual fee and hours of waiting on inspection lines. Counties, however, would have the option of continuing their own inspection programs. Opponents of the 13-year-old program said the in-spections have had no proven effect in cutting down the number of highway accidents but others claim the inspections have saved lives.

The program has more than paid its way for the state, generating an extra $1.25 million in revenues annually, but many counties are losing money on it.

Restoring Our Economic Health

American industry has lost a great deal of its competitiveness. The deterioration in industiral efficiency is seen in the dramatic decline in business productivity. From 1950 through 1969. the growth in output per hour averaged over 3 percent annually. In the past 10 years however, ROBERT WALTERS growth in output per hour had dropped to 1.3 percent per year.

In seeking to pull ourselves out of this economic mess, it if impreative to know what the causes of our competitive decline are, and then target programs toward dealing directly with those fundamental causes.

The causes of the decline in productivity are primarily the decline in resources devoted to research and development, persistent inflation a slow rate of capital formation, and a diversion of capital formation from market-determined goals to government-mandated goals.

The federal government should not focus on targeting subsidies toward industries it considers to be "winners." Rather, the government's role should be passive. The most significant changes the government can make are restoration of price stability, the reversing of the tax code's bias against savings, and the elimination of unnecessary government regulations.

Inflation is one of the greatest disincentives to research and development. Since inflation is caused by excessive growth in the money supply, a monetary policy which reduces growth in the money supply will foster greater productivity.

Another essential change is the reversing of the tax code's bias in favor of consumption over savings and investment. The constraint placed on capital formation by a tax code that penalizes saving limits the funds available for modernizing the American industrial base. So long as consumption is financed by borrowing from the investment funds needed to update and expand industrial capacity, productivity growth will

Finally, government regulations which add to production costs without providing offsetting socio-economic benefits must be phased out, or altered. Minimum wage laws which raise labor costs should contain teenage exemptions. The inflationary Davis-Bacon Act, which ensures workers on federal construction projects wages comparable to those on private jobs must be

One of the most effective ways to reduce regulation is to require government agencies to present detailed descriptions of the costs and benefits of administering and complying with existing and proposed regulations. Federal regulators must be more flexible in considering, writing and applying their rules to small business. However, these policies require a firm commitment by the federal government to long-term objectives. There is certainly a need for much greater cooperation between the federal government and the business community. There is a major difference between government cooperation with business, and government participation with Government cooperation would amount to creating a good economic atmosphere: prudent fiscal and monetary policies to arrest inflation, reversing the tax code's bias in favor of consumption over savings and investment. eliminating unneeded government regulations, and promoting competition in industries that are protected by antiquated laws which dictate prices and restrict market entries. In short, government co-operation would amount to ensuring that the competitive playing field is level and free. On the other hand, government "participation" in economic decision-making represents an attempt to establish a planned national economy. Under such a system, resources would be allocated by the government to select group of firms. The factors determining which firms JACK ANDERSON receive governmental assistance would be political, not economic.

A wealth of literary talent living along the "Space Coast" will be gathered together May 7-9 at the Brevard Community College Titusville Campus, for the first Florida Space Coast

Writers Conference. The 14 guest writers will hold workshops on a broad range of topics in the field from writing Pulitzer Prize winning novels to newspaper and magazine fillers. The keynote speaker for the conference will be the Pulitzer Prize winning novelist, Michael Shaara, who lives in Melbourne. A former Florida State University professor of English, Shaara won the Pulitzer Prize in fiction for his Civil War novel, "The Killer Angels," and is now writing the movie script. He is second on the list of five nominees for the Nobel Prize in Literature. Three books by Shaara are to be published this year: "There Herald," the autobiographical "The Broken Place," and "The Best of Michael Shaara," a collection of 15 short

The other guest writers include Wyatt Wyatt of Oviedo, an English professor at the University of Central Florida, and author of "Catching Fire" and "Deep In The Heart;" Evelyn Van Tine, a

Hopkins; Iris Comfort, who wrote two books chosen as suspense book club selections by Doubleday; and Barabar Kennedy, whose first murder mystery will be published Aug. 1 as a Fawcett Gold Medal

The conference will begin on Thursday, May 7, at 12:30 p.m. with registration followed by a general meeting when Shaara will speak on "Writing a Pulitzer Prize Winning Novel." Three workshops on the short story (conducted by writer John F. Hopkins), poetry (Evelyn Van Tine) and self-help books (Vera Abriel) will be held in the afternoon with a reception in the Friday, nine workshops will be held: writing for young adults (Betty Sue Cummings), technical writing (Jan Langston), feature writing (Karl E. Kristofferson), the regional novel (Patrick D. WASHINGTON (NEA) - Consider this striking disparity: Although this country's presidents have become frequent targets for assassins, the same fate has not befallen government leaders in the world's other industrialized nations.

There is, to be sure, a pattern of coups, insurrections and assassinations whose object is to topple the reigning authorities in various Third World countries, especially in Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Those violent acts, however, usually have a well-defined political or ideological purpose - to take control of the government - while assassinations in this country invariably have been committed by emotionally disturbed

But why are the recurring efforts deranged "loners" to shoot our president not matched by similar attempts to assassinate Britain's prime minister, France's premier, Germany's chancellor, Japan's emperor or Spain's king?

Nobody has a definitive answer to that troubling question, but here are some theories

First, the United States is the world's in which a single individual wields the vast power and influence that come from serving simultaneously as both chief of state and ceremonial head of government.

In almost all other developed countries, those roles are divided between two people a titular leader (often a monarch) and an elected head of state. Thus, would-be assassins seeking to vent their frustrations with a gun are torn between a queen and a prime minister in Great Britain, a president and a premier in France, an emperor and a prime minister in Japan. Not only is authority consolidated in the United States, but the concept of presidential omnipotence is reinforced by the news media's tendency to ascribe to that one man's actions almost everything of importance that occurs in the executive branch.

Finally, this country's populist tradition has been corrupted to produce a selfindulgent, circus-like atmosphere of gawking, cheering and hand-shaking that overwhelms the dignity of the office whenever the president appears in public. The result: for those unstable individuals who believe that the redress of personal grievances as well as political power grows out of the barrel of a gun, there is one - and only one - logical target.

Another theory: This country's citizenry now is entering its fourth decade of being exposed to television dramas whose level of violence is unmatched in any other nation. Moreover, those television programs portray violence as painless - not only for the viewers but also for the victims, who usually either instantly disappear from the screen or reappear in a fully recovered state.

The rest of the world is going to think we're crazy,"concludes Morris Janowitz, a University of Chicago sociologist. "We're the only country that repeatedly has this kind of

Costly Button-Pushing

We would like to call your attention to the item that appeared in the "Washington Report," March 9, 1981. "Congress spent $3 million to convert its elevators from manual to automatic operation, but still pays 89 people nearly $900,000 a year to push buttons for passengers."

It is appalling and shocking for the U.S. Congress to continue to employ elevator operators to push buttons in an automatic elevator for members and employees of the Congress.

The above expenditure is especially extravagant when the President and members of Congress are cutting the federal budget, and more than 300 Federal Programs will be reduced. These anticipated reductions will have a significant impact on the majority of Americans, rich and poor alike.

We believe that the pressing of buttons by the members of the U.S. Congress, rather than elevator operators, can be achieved with no Sen. Roger Jepsen (R. Iowa) says,

"That is 89 people too many." We agree. He has introduced a bill to eliminate the job of automatic elevator operators on Capitol Hill. Noting congressional demands for economy in government, Sen. Jepsen said, "I can't hink of a better place to start cutting waste than in our own backyard." We urge Sens. Paula Hawkins and Lawton Chiles and Rep. Bill McCollum to support Sen. Jepsen's bill.

Adding Crime To A Crime

With the nation still shaken by the attempted assassination of the president, along comes the FBI with some more bad news in the latest statistics on violent crime.

To no one's suprise, the G-Men find the national crime rate up. They always do. But even more so this time, a one-year rise of 13 percent that is the steepest in more than a decade. Murder, rape, assault and robbery are all up, the last the most - 20 percent.

"But today we've eliminated hunger." says Yang Lian Fang of the Agriculture Ministry, "although many problems remain, especially in the border areas."

China has 25 percent of the world's propulation but only 7 percent of its cropland. That amounts to just a quarter acre per person compared with 2 acres per person in the United States.

About 90 percent of the country is too dry, too cold or too mountainous to grow food. But China is feeding 470 million more mouths than it did 30 years ago. These are some of the reasons for its agricultural

Epidemic From Incurable Herpes

DEAR ABBY: You recently replied to a young man who had contracted Herpes Simplex 2 infection from a sexual encounter. Your answer was brief and offered valuable informational help. However, was disappointed that you did not react to his statement, "I have not had relations with anyone since - except prostitutes, which is all I deserve." My question for him is, "Do the prostitutes deserve you?" Apparently this young man has a conscience so finely honed that he is "ashamed to set foot in his mother's house," yet thinks nothing of sharing his affliction with another unsuspecting human being. The old double standard rears its ugly

DEAR NURSE HRATH: The young man's insensitivity did not escape my notice, but you are right, I should not have let it go without comment. Herpes Simplex 2, for which there is no known cure, has assumed epidemic preportions, so I advised readers who want free, up-to-date information on this disease to write: Help, Box 100, Palo Alto, Claif. 94302. Please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

I am informed that since that item hit print, the

DEAR ABBY: I am planning to marry this summer. My parents are divorced and my mother is remarried. I have my heart set on having a traditional church wedding. Who should give me away, my father or my stepfather? Both consider me their daughter, and I love them equally.

My mother says the one who pays for the wedding should give me away. (Probably my stepfather.) This is giving me an ulcer. I've even considered eloping so I wouldn't have to make a choice, but I really do want a church wedding. I have a 21-yearold brother who could walk me down the aisle, but he says he'd rather be an usher.

Please tell me what to do. I don't want any hurt feelings on my wedding day.

'Danger Factor' Attracts The Crowds

Herald Staff Writer It's not that they want to see a skydiver get splattered, or watch as a sophisticated aircraft disintegrates into a smoldering pile of nuts and bolts, but you can bet that the possibility of that happening — the danger factor as the performers call it - is what will attract many of the 40,000 people expected to attend the Central Florida Air Show at the Sanford-Central Florida Airport this weekend. That's the opinion of a man who should know - Larry Stanton, former member of the Army's Golden Knight parachute team, and air show publicist. Stanton said only a very small percentage of the audience actually comes to see someone get hurt, "but a large number come to the show because there is a chance of that happening. They don't necessarily want to come in contact with it or see it before their eyes," he says, "but the element of danger is a drawing card — definitely." Taking all the danger from a sporting event such as the Daytona 500 stock car race, or even a football game, would cut attendance in half, Stanton says. "I guarantee

Although the danger will be the same as always, Stanton said he expects attendance at this year's show to exceed, or at least equal, last year's record of roughly 40,000

Performing for the second year in a row will be the U.S. Navy's Blue Angels precision flying team and the Army's Golden Knights parachute squad. Also soaring and looping in the Sanford skies will be the Eagles aerobatic team, the world's smallest jet airplane, Wayne Pierce and his 450-horsepower Steerman biplane complete with wing walker, and various types of radio-controlled model

And on the ground, there will be enough flying machines to form a small air force. Included in the stationary displays will be the world's only B-29 Superfortress bomber in flying condition. Also on display will be a World War II vintage P-51 Mustang, Navy A-7 light attack plane and an A-6 bomber, an F-4 Air Force Phantom fighter, and one of the hottest fighter planes in America's military arsenal - the Navy's F-14. Sponsored by the Sanford Rotary Clubs and cosponsored by the Sentinel Star, the air show is designed to provide exciting entertainment for the entire family while raising funds for local charitable organizations.

Gates will open at 9 a.m. each day with the show beginning at 1:30 p.m. The airport is located at the East end of Airport Boulevard.

Tickets are $4 in advance, $5 at the gate. Children under

deGanahl: He Puts Air Show Together

START THE SUMMER

WITH A PATIO GROUP

FROM STERCHI'S!!

Herald Staff Writer

If there is such a thing as reincarnation, Jim deGanahl ought to come back as a bird. An eagle, probably; or, maybe a hawk. It's somehow easy to picture him as a great winged predator soaring effortlessly on unseen air currents against a sunny backdrop of crystal blue sky.

"Big Jim" deGanahl loves the freedom of flight. That's what kept him in the Navy for 26 years flying reconnaissance jets and twin-engined bombers. That's also what has kept him at the controls of the Sanford Rotary and Breakfast Clubs' annual air show for four of its seven years, organizing the event which attracts huge crowds and raises thousands of dollars for local charities.

But the skies are no longer friendly. The air has become sullied. The 56-year-old deGanahl says he may clip his own wings after this year's event, set for Saturday and Sunday. Oh, he will continue to have a say in who performs and what exhibits are displayed at future shows. After four years, hot dogs (to 140 degrees) and add a couple few people in these parts have more knowledge and contacts in the area of deGanahl.

aerial acrobats, and assorted other crowd pleasers. You also must be a diplomat and politician. You have to concern yourself with such weighty matters as how hot must the hot dogs be, and how many times will 15,000-20,000 people go to the bathroom on any given afternoon.

Such earthly problems nearly grounded this year's show when Seminole County Health Department officials complained that the hot hogs hadn't been hot enough last year, and so could have spoiled, and there weren't enough portable toilets to accommodate the crowds. Unless there were some changes made, they said, the Rotary's 1981 show would not go on.

Now, deGanahl is usually an easy-going, good-humored sort of guy, but that really got him steamed. But then, you have to understand that as a Naval aviator, he was usually on the giving end of an order, and at 6-foot-4, 240 pounds, he seldom had to repeat himself.

But this not being the Navy, deGanahl couldn't pull rank so he agreed to heat up the dozen extra toilets.

And though he smiles when he says it, you barnstorming aviation than does Jim know he means it when he tells you, "I never want to see anyone from the health But there's more to putting on a major air department again," and "I may never eat another hot dog."

"Big Jim" deGanahl points proudly to Blue Angels Photo as he organizes air show for Sanford Rotary Clubs. April event and works up to the very last minute. The first order of business is putting in his requests with the Defense Department for the military teams he wants.

By December, he knows what the brass will give him and he then starts looking around for other acts to flesh out the show. Like the B-29 bomber that will be on display this weekend, the trio of biplane stunt flyers, Ol' Smokey and his wingwalker, and the BD-5. the world's smallest jet aircraft.

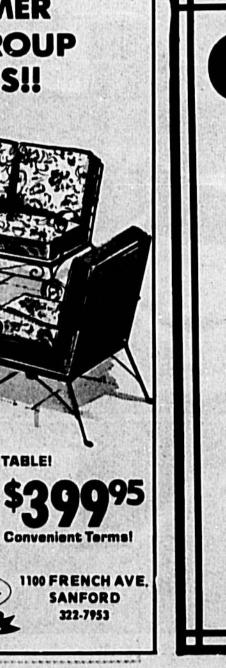

A successful show would be a nice way to bow out. Because after four years, "I'm the Golden Age Olympics, Central Florida tired of worrying about it all. Let me handle Zoo, 4-H Clubs, Good Samaritan Home, and the acts and give the hot dogs, and toilets, the Seminole Community College Foun-put this thing on."

And he has, except for 1979 when a scheduling conflict with the major attractions forced the event to be cancelled. Every other year, however, deGanahl and the Rotarians have put on a two-day affair to which you can bring the whole family and see some of the fanciest man-made birds ding-dangdest flying this side of the barnstorming 20s. You can eat hot hot dogs and generally have a grand old time.

And it doesn't hurt knowing that all the profits - $20,000 last year - go to local outfits like the Salvation Army, Boy Scouts, and weather and . . . to somebody else," he dation to provide financial aid to needy

That's all he ever really wanted to do, So, after this weekend's show, when that anyway. He says he joined the Rotary Club last plane barrel rolls off into the sunset. primarily because "I love the Blue Angels recall how good it all was and dip your wings and air shows. The following schedule is a list of approximate show times. Sunday's performance will be a repeat of Saturday's.

From 9 a.m. until the flying starts at 1:30 p.m., spectators will be able to get close-up views of an assortment of military aircraft on display.

At 11 a.m., a squadron of radio-controlled model airplanes will be put through their paces.

The Army's Golden Knights parachute team will fall from the sky at 1 p.m. streaming the Stars and Stripes. That will be followed at 1:35 p.m. by the Eagles aerobatic biplane team.

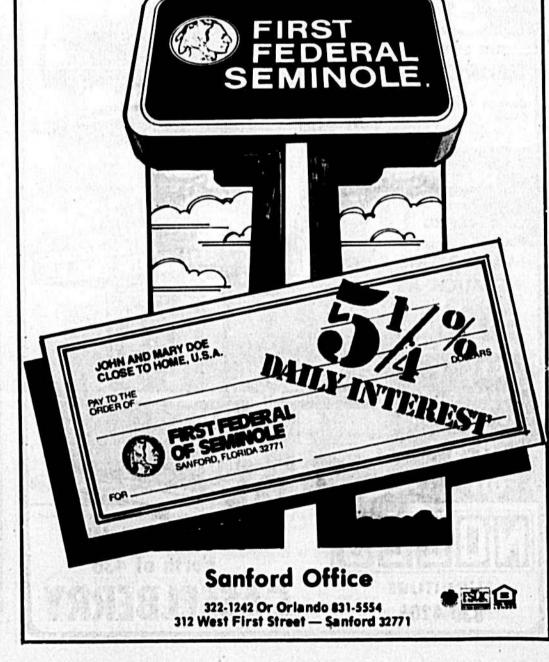

The Golden Knights will make another jump at 1:45 p.m. to be followed by a display of solo aerobatics. Bob Bishop and the world's smallest manned jet will do some stunt flying at 2:27 p.m. with another demonstration by the Eagles at 2:39

Ten minutes later, there will be more solo aerobatics. Then, at 3:06 p.m., the Eagles will fly again, followed by the Navy's Blue Angel precision flying team at 3:26 p.m.

Tickets at the gate will be $5. Children under 12 admitted free.

Parachute Team:

In addition to their accomplishments in the field of competition, the Knights have presented more than 2,700 live parachuting demonstrations, more than either the Air Force Thunderbirds or the Navy Blue Angels. Unlike the Thunderbirds or the Blue Angles, whose star performers are officers, the Golden Knights' competitors and demonstratiors are all enlisted personnel.

The Knights are the Army's only official parachute demonstration unit. In this capacity, they perform over 200 exhibitions of aerial acrobatics and precision free-fall techniques throughout the United States and the World before an average annual audience of ten million spectators. These performances form only one part of the complete mission of the "Golden Knights".

The basic parachute used by the Golden Knights is the Para-commander, a high-performance canopy that can glide 11-12 feet forward for every 10 feet down. The Para-commander descends at a rate of about six miles per hour and can attain a forward speed of up to 12 mph. It achieves this performance through a series of 36 directional vents in the

The parachules are maneuvered by the manipulation of two steering lines which charge the size and shape of the directional vents to slow, accelerate and turn the canopy.

CAROL ACTON . . . business manager, wing walker

Wayne Pierce And His Lovely Wing-Walking Lady

1981 is Wayne Pierce's 12th year to travel the continent in his Stearman biplane "01' Smokey." The summertime is quite hectic for Pierce as it includes a heavy schedule of travel, performances, maintenance and appearances on radio and television. Some of the show sites require up to 2,000 miles of travel in a week.

The Pierce story all began with a boyhood dream to be in the air show business. Before Pierce was even a teenager, he was seen riding his bicycle to the local airplane born-yard. Countless hours were spent in surplus military trainers that had been scrapped for their engines.

Finally, he was old enough to be a Civil Air Patrol Cadet. In the CAP he learned subjects such as navigation and principles of flight. He had begun to move forward in aviation. Three years later Pierce rode his bike to the airport and soloed an Aeronca Champion at age 16.

On his next birthday he was inducted into the Air Force. After basic and the graduation from aircraft and engine mechanics school at Amarillo AFB, Wayne was assigned to Walker AFB at his hometown of Roswell, New Mexico. There he was assigned to the 40th bomb squadron where he served as an assistant Crew Chief on Boeing B-52s.

After the Air Force, Pierce bacame a pilot for a USDA contractor, then at age 23, became a copilot for Trans-Texas Airways (now Texas International) where he flew Douglas DC-3s and Convair 240s.

Pierce eventually felt the airline was getting in the way of his job as an air show pilot, so in 1965 he left to pursue a dream. In the interim Pierce had to find the money to buy a 450 Stearman. This was accomplished by three years flying as a captain on a Lockheed Ventura in the Southeast United States spraying timber at tree-top level.

Carol Acton comes from the Midwest where barnstormers made their fame. One of the pastures used to hop rides could have been on her farm in Mattoon, Ill.

Her first interest in flying stems from an airshow at her hometown airport, Ironically, Pierce was the star at-

Acton checked around to find an airplane capable of carrying her as well as a safe pilot. The answer was Pierce flying Ol' Smokey.

As fate would have it Ol' Smokey was on the way from Nova Scotia to a commitment in Tennessee. Acton was right on the way.

Other experiences include that of patrolling a pipeline and flying various aerobatic aircraft. A big part of the performance week includes TV talk shows and various planeside interviews with cameras. All a far cry from the basic idea of puttering in her garage, building her own custom airplane.

What It Takes To Be 'Angel'

There have been fewer than 176 officers assigned to the Blue Angels during their 35 year history. The few openings each year are highly sought and the competition is keen. However, any Navy and Marine Corps aviator, on active duty, may apply for assignment to the Blue Angels if he meets a few basic requirements.

He must volunteer, be career oriented, and have accumulated 1500 flight hours in tactical jet aircraft. Once these requirements have been met any Naval Aviator is eligible for selection.

The next step is the careful survey of each applying officer's performance record by the Bureau of Naval Personnel. From those applying comes a final group of individuals who are then encouraged to become more familiar with the Flight Demonstration Squadron, its mission, its members, and their lifestyle. This exchange allows the applicant to observe the Blue Angels first-hand as well as providing the Flight Demonstration Squadron with the opportunity to observe the applicant. The final selection of two or three members per year takes place within the squadron itself. This is done with direct cognizance and ultimate approval by the Chief of Naval Air Training. The leader is not selected in this manner, but is appointed by higher authority as a result of his superior performance and projected an ability to excel at this exceptional and demanding assignment.

Current officers of the Blue Angels take time out before weekend air show.

All the members of the squadron spend two years as a demonstration pilot, then return to an operational assignment. This constant turnover of personnel serves as a testimony to the high quality of training given our Navy and Marine Corps pilots.

The average age of a Blue angel is 33. He may or may not be married. Each pilot has served at least four to six years in the Navy or Marine Corps and has completed his first operational tour at sea aboard an aircraft carrier or at a land base installation. This amount of time is required to accumulate the 1500 hours of flight time necessary for application. Also, the most opportune time in the officer's career pattern for assignment with the Flight Demonstration Squadron is following his initial operational sea

New members report to the Squadron in October or November of each year. This begins a transition period which is used to familiarize the selectee with ground and flight operations unique to the Blue Angels. At this time each selectee becomes thouroughly versed in the Squadron's history and its mission. He also becomes aware of his responsibility as an "ambassador of goodwill" and representative of the professional naval officer.

THE EAGLES UP

The Eagles Aerobatic flight team, which will be performing at the Central Florida Air Show this weekend, is composed of three of the very best in the business. Charlie Hillard, center, is the team leader. His versatile and imaginative flying style earned him the gold medal at the 1972 World Aerobatic Championships in France. Tom Poberezny, left, was the 1973 U.S. national unlimited aerobatic champion and has been flying in air shows for more than 12 years. Gene Soucy, right, is a professional airline pilot when he's not performing with the Eagles. He has the singular distinction of holding the U.S. national unlimited championship for three consecutive years, 1970-72.

Blue Angels Squadron: 'Perfection'

On June 15, 1946, the Blue Angels flew their first flight demonstration to "demonstrate precision techniques of naval aviation to naval personnel and, if directed, to the public." Today, after 35 years, the 1981 Blue Angels accomplish essentially the same mission. However, that mission has taken on new perspectives.

By presenting a faultless display of aerial artistry to what has now exceeded 145 million spectators, the Blue Angels seek to attract talented and qualified youth to join them in the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps. This is an important function in an all-volunteer naval force. As "Ambassadors of Goodwill" the Blue Angels take naval aviation to the public as a means of demonstrating the quality of men and equipment comprising the U.S. Naval service. When traveling abroad, this role is expanded as these young men and women represent our country and those who serve it.

Internally, the Flight Demonstration Squadron strives to set a standard of perfection for its contemporaries in naval aviation thus enabling out Navy and Marine Corps to continue to produce the finest aviators in the world. Sixteen officers and 74 enlisted personnel comprise the Navy Flight Demonstration Squadron, the Blue Angels. Seven of the officers are tactical jet pilots, four of whom fly in the diamond formation, two as solo maximum performance demonstrators and the seventh is the Narrator for the aerial demonstration who also provides jet orientation flights for news media representatives.

Here part of the Blue Angels Squadron Assembles

The Events Coordinator is a Naval Flight Officer and is responsible for logistics coordination, and the Public Affairs Officer is in charge of the enlisted maintenance crew and is responsible for ensuring that the ten aircraft assigned are kept in topnotch condition. The squadron's Flight Surgeon administers to both the physical and psychological needs of the officers and the enlisted personnel, and the Administrative Officer and Supply Officer perform their duties and maintain normal operations while the Blues are on the road. There are also three Marine Corps Transport Pilots and five enlisted crewmen assigned to fly the C-130 support aircraft that carries the necessary equipment and personnel needed to perform demonstrations at show sites. The seventy-four enlisted personnel are specialists in all the aviation roles required to support and maintain the Squadron's maintenance, administrative and public affairs requirements.

Early January finds the "Blues" moving to their winter training home at Naval Air Facility, El Centro, California. The Imperial Valley provides the excellent weather conditions and training environment for the Blues to prepare themselves for the upcoming season.

For the next 60 to 70 days all hands devote total concentration to honing flying skills to the fine edge of perfection required to carry on the Blue Angels tradition. The pilots fly twice a day seven days a week, with each day beginning at 5:30 A.M. and ending in the early afternoon with the remainder of the day being occupied with a selfimposed physical fitness program. All emphasis is put on preparing the pilots and crew for the no-nonsense flight operations of the long show season to come. By mid to late March, the Squadron is ready to debut the skills and team work which they have worked so diligently to perfect. Anticipation is felt throughout the unit to "get on the road." The Blue Angels are once again groomed for the

Once the season begins, a pattern of operation is established. The number seven pilot precedes the main body to each show site, by one day, to give a last minute check on the myriad of preparations that have been completed over several months prior to each demonstration. On the next day the demonstration aircraft and C-130 transport arrive and the pilots get their first look at

While visiting at show sites, the Blue Angels visit hospitals and youth organizatins, speak to civic clubs and attend school functions in order to provide positive community relations. They also talk to young men and women with potential interests in Navy careers both on campus and at social gatherings.

Tips To Watch Air Show By

If you're one of the thousands of spectators expected to attend this weekend's Central Florida Air Show at the Sanford-Central Florida Airport, you may want to heed the advice of deGanahl is air show chairman for the Sanford Rotary Clubs sponsoring the event. Here are deGanahl's tips:

-If you're driving, there will be ample parking. But motorists should attempt to follow Airport Boulevard to the airport entrance. Sanford Police and the sheriff's department will have officers directing traffic.

—There are, this year, limited seats (1,000) available at $2 per seat, first come first serve. So, if you're not sure you'll get one, bring your own.

-Be sure to bring some protection, such as an eyeshade, to aid you from the sun's rays. Spectators will, for the most part, be looking up into the sky to watch the show, and the sun can have a devastating effect on your face and eyes.

Lt. Kevin Miller, Narrator

Kevin was born in Washington, D.C., and raised in Arlington, Virginia, where he graduated from high school in 1970. After spending a year at Wingate Junior College in North Carolina, he attended the United States Naval Academy where he played number one singles and doubles as Captain of the Varsity Tennis Team and served a term as Brigade Commander. He graduated from Annapolis in June 1975 with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Analytical Management.

After undergoing flight training in Pensacola, Florida, Kevin was designated a Naval Aviator in December 1976. Following transition training in the F-14 TOMCAT while assigned to Fighter Squadron ONE TWENTY-FOUR as NAS Miramar, California, he reported to Fighter Squadron EIGHTY-FOUR (VF-84), the "Jolly Rogers,"

The Skyhawk: From Carrier

The A-4F Skyhawk II is a simple but rugged, easy-tomaintain ground support aircraft with a record for longevity unmatched by any other military aircraft. The Skyhawk II flown by the Blue Angels, the most advanced of the series, and was introduced to service in 1972.

Or Airfields

The A-4 was born from the Korean conflict experience as a specialized high subsonic-speed attack aircraft capable of carrying heavy loads of ordnance over long distances. Through more than two decades of production, succeeding models of the small, light-weight airplane have provided major advances in performance, with improvements in power, payload, and avionics systems. The Skyhawk II's combination of high power and light weight gives the bantam aircraft impressive maneuverability, rate of climb, and acceleration, and improves its short-field performance. A Pratt and Whitney J52-P-408 turbojet engine powers the Skyhawk II, providing 11,200 pounds thrust — 45 percent more than the thrust of the original A-4.

The Skyhawk can fly from aircraft carriers and from rough combat-zone airfields as short as 4,000 feet, fully loaded with multi-mission armament, and includes such basic design features of earlier models as nose-wheel steering, in-flight refueling capability; and the McDonnell Douglas ESCAPAC zero altitude, zero speed emergency ejection system.

Miniature Aircraft Demonstration

The Remote Control Association of Central Florida (RCACF) will, for the fourth time, showcase its miniature aircraft at the Central Florida Air Show.

The demonstration flights will begin at 11 a.m. and end at 12:30 p.m. both days of the event. In addition, the planes flown plus others will be on static display. These will be on tables next to the spectator line so they can be easily seen. Types of miniature aircraft will include trainer, sport scale, helicopter, pattern and Pylon racers (capable of at least 185 mph) plus some novelty types.

The program will start off with a banner towing aircraft piloted by members of the West Orange Sunflyers Club. Flights thereafter will be of the type normal to the aircraft, including acrobatics and high speed flight. Not so normal flying will be done by Norm Holland flying a helicopter which will loop and roll. The Kississimee Valley Model Club will feature its specialty acts by flying
