County May Tighten Kennel Laws

By Charles Cobb
Herald Staff Writer

Kennels that board animals will be more tightly regulated if proposed revisions in the Seminole County animal control ordinance are adopted.

The revisions could be adopted by the county commission as early as October, said Bob McIntosh, county animal control officer.

McIntosh said the revisions would help prevent situations like the one that developed at Snow Hill Kennels and Plant Farm on County Road 426 near Oviedo.

Officials confiscated eight dogs and a kitten at the kennel last Thursday. Two of the dogs later died and the state attorney's office may file animal cruelty charges against Laurian Spankie, owner of the kennel.

The "neglected" animals were in "deplorable, unbelievable" condition, said Carol Cook of the Humane Society of Seminole County.

McIntosh said the revised ordinance would allow his inspectors to check the animals' condition, medical records and feeding records.

"If one of our inspectors saw a dog in a kennel that had a skin disease, for example, we could find out if the dog had been taken to a vet and if it had received proper treatment," said McIntosh. "We can't do that now."

Under the present ordinance, officials can only check to see if the animal has fresh water, clean utensils and is kept in a cage with enough room for it to stand up, McIntosh said.

The new ordinance "will allow us to function a lot better and give us greater flexibility in checking conditions at kennels," he said.

However, McIntosh said the new provisions probably would not have entirely eliminated the alleged abuses that occurred at the Snow Hill Kennels.

The two Doberman pinscher dogs that died after being seized were kept much of the time in Ms. Spankie's home, next to the kennel, McIntosh said. A former employee of the kennel informed officials of this and a search warrant was obtained allowing the residence to be searched.

One of the Dobermans apparently died of heart worms and the other from a skin disease, a veterinarian said.

McIntosh said the new ordinance would require that kennel dogs be exercised every day and would also protect animals in pet stores.

Puppies in pet shops are sometimes exposed to lighting that is too strong and "that can burn out a puppy's eyes," said McIntosh.

He said the proposed revisions are now in their sixth draft and he feels there is strong support among county commissioners for the revisions. Violations of the ordinance would carry a maximum penalty of a $500 fine and 60 days in jail.

Last Thursday officials revoked Spankie's license, prohibiting her from boarding animals commercially. She is appealing the revocation and a hearing is set for Sept. 14 before the the Animal Control Board at the Seminole County Courthouse at 8 p.m.

Zoning Request Rejected

A plan to build four duplex apartments at the corner of 4th Street and Mellonville Avenue in Sanford has been rejected by the city's planning and zoning board.

The board voted Thursday night not to recommend approval of a proposal by Hristos Hristopoulos to change the zoning of the property from single family to multi-family.

Their recommendation will be forwarded to the city commission which is scheduled to consider the zoning change request at its Sept. 12 meeting.

The negative review was a victory for neighbors who had opposed the zoning change. About 40 neighbors showed up at Thursday's meeting to protest the plan.

They complained that parking would be a problem for the duplexes particularly along busy Mellonville Avenue. The neighbors also said duplexes would not be consistent with the rest of the neighborhood.

"The whole area is residential," said Helen Haddad. "With four duplexes there could be a whole stream of people moving in and out of there all the time. It would affect our sense of community."

In other business, the board also approved a preliminary site plan for construction of Mayfair Meadows, a development of 356 townhouses on Oregon Avenue and Paola Road.

The project is being planned by the Babcock Co. of Altamonte Springs.

Sewer Pump Installed

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

The new pump at The Forest mobile home community sewer plant in Lake Mary has been installed, assuring continued operation of the facility which serves solely the 290 families in that community.

For the past week, since an old pump burned out, the second one in the twin pump operation has been carrying the load alone, according to the city's public works director Jim Orloles.

A new pump purchased from Locke Well and Pump Co. was delivered early Thursday morning and the city crew immediately began the installation. The $2,279 cost of the pump was paid for from sewer system reserve funds.

Orloles said today he is gathering information on the cost of rebuilding the old pump, which would be kept in reserve for a similar emergency.

Also being installed at the sewer plant are new check valves which also malfunctioned last week. There was no danger that raw sewage would overflow from the sewer plant into residents' yards, Orloles said.

The city has been plagued over the past two years, since it accepted a gift of the sewer plant from First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Orlando, with the plant's twin percolation ponds refusing to percolate.

While the city has a guarantee from the Orlando institution on the percolation ponds, the operating problems are not part of that guarantee and had to be repaired with sewer department funds.

Orloles said that First Federal of Orlando spokesmen have said they will dry out and scrape out the bottom of the percolation ponds and hopefully they will then percolate. Orloles said First Federal has not as yet given a definite schedule on when that work will be accomplished.

The city has sent bills to the savings and loan institution totaling $3,347.78 for work done over the past five months trying to avert the ponds overflowing their banks. In addition, Madeleine Minns, city treasurer, said a third bill was sent to the Orlando firm this week for another $666.64 to defray city costs of working on the ponds.

Orloles said his crews have pumped out the ponds four times over the past five months to keep them functioning in even a limited fashion.

The city has threatened to take the institution to court to force it to fulfill the guarantee on the ponds given to the city more than two years ago when the plant was deeded over at no cost to the city.

County-Wide Unemployment Rate Still Low

By Michael Beha
Herald Staff Writer

The unemployment rate in Seminole County remained below the area, state and national average in July but it could rise because many people are moving to Central Florida in search of work, an analyst with the Florida State Employment Service said today.

The jobless rate for Seminole County was 6.2 percent in July, down from 6.4 percent in June. Orange County's jobless rate was 7.1 percent in July, the state average was 8.6 percent and the national average was 9.5 percent, according to Sterling Tuck.

Tuck said Seminole County's economy has continued to grow during the past few months. The number of people employed in Seminole County in July was 105,105, the highest ever, but he added the number of people moving to Seminole County looking for jobs is growing faster than the job market is expanding.

"The labor force is growing faster than employment," he said.

The influx of people has not yet outstripped the county's economic growth, he said, but if the local economy slows down, that will soon happen.

About 8,000 more people are now working in the county than were employed in November when the jobless rate was 6.7 percent. But while employment increased by 8,000 over the last eight months, unemployment dropped by only 200 from the 7,100 who were out of work in November, 1982.

Tuck said the influx of people to Central Florida in search of jobs could have a disastrous effect.

"I get calls every day from people who say they're coming to Central Florida because they're out of work and we have a lower unemployment rate than other parts of the country," Tuck said. "I caution them against it. Wages are depressed here. They may not make as much money as they would up north."

Tuck said the high cost of living has also contributed to the increased work force by making it necessary for many wives who never worked before to get jobs to help out.

The analyst said the building boom in Central Florida has tapered off some in the past few months because of higher interest rates. Unless interest rates drop again, construction will not increase significantly, he said.

He said commercial building has not stopped. New commercial projects can be found throughout the county, but residential construction has slowed somewhat from earlier in the year when building permits nearly doubled over last year.

"Construction hasn't stopped, it's just not a boom," he said.

Tuck predicted the local economy would be similar to the national economy for the remainder of 1983, with developers keeping an eye on interest rates. "They're kind of sitting on the fence," he said. Tuck predicted a "flat" economy with no major new developments for the rest of the year.

He added that Seminole County's burgeoning electronics industry continues to hold its own. The local firms are not gaining employment "but they aren't going down either."

Tuck said their stability is surprising in light of the rollercoaster fluctuations that have hit the national economy.

Meanwhile the national unemployment rate in August was 9.5 percent, the same as a month earlier, the Labor Department reported today, with a record number of Americans holding jobs.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said there was little change in most categories of unemployment in seasonally adjusted data as the rate halted its slide from the recession high of 10.8 percent last December.

The number of Americans without jobs was about 10.7 million, an increase of 109,000.

Soviets Call Plane Loss An 'Accident'

By United Press International

Japanese and Soviet ships searched today for the wreckage of a Korean airliner shot down with 269 people aboard by a Soviet fighter in an "unbelievably barbaric act" condemned worldwide. The Soviets called the plane's loss an "accident."

There were no known survivors among the 240 passengers and crew of 29.

Amid angry congressional demands for diplomatic retaliation, President Reagan was flying back to Washington to consider the implications of the attack that destroyed Korean Air Lines flight 007 with at least 50 Americans aboard.

In Moscow, the Soviet government kept a stony silence on the fate of the Boeing 747 but its embassy in France condemned as "absolutely unacceptable" the "hysterical anti-Soviet campaign" by Western governments.

"It is a matter of an accident involving an airplane which twice violated Soviet airspace," the embassy said.

"For two hours the plane's crew did not answer the insistent calls addressed to it in accordance with the universal international code," the embassy statement said.

In Tokyo, Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Pavlov told Japanese officials the Russians had detected "signs" of a downed aircraft near Sakhalin Island about 785 miles northwest of the Japanese capital.

Pavlov did not identify the plane as the Korean Air Lines passenger jet, but the location coincided with the Boeing 747's position when it vanished from Japanese radar screens at 2:26 p.m. EDT Wednesday.

Pavlov denied U.S. charges that a Soviet warplane deliberately shot down the New York-to-Seoul flight with a heat-seeking missile after the jumbo jet strayed over a sensitive military area on Soviet-held Sakhalin Island.

The Japanese Maritime Agency said Japanese fishermen in the area reported seeing a "glowing, expanding fireball" and hearing a loud explosion at the time the plane disappeared.

Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., and chairman of the staunchly anti-communist John Birch Society, was one of the Americans aboard the plane.

...Local Officials Angered Over Incident

Local officials reacted with revulsion today to reports that a South Korean airliner with 269 people aboard was apparently shot down Thursday by a Russian fighter plane.

State Rep. Art Grindle, R-Altamonte Springs called the downing of the unarmed jetliner a crime and urged immediate sanctions against the Soviet Union.

"We have to take sanctions against them, something that lasts more than two months and is just a slap on the wrist," he said.

"It's either that or we just say to ourselves 'let's be careful. We know they're going to do things like that from time to time.' Personally, I don't think I could abide that," Grindle said.

He said sanctions used by the United States to protest Soviet incursions into Afghanistan and Poland had virtually no effect on the Russian economy. The curtailment of grain sales caused hardships for American farmers and American businesses were hurt by a boycott on selling parts for a Soviet oil pipeline. Eventually, those sanctions were lifted.

"We need to determine what sanctions can be imposed on a long-term basis," he said.

"The biggest problem we have in America is because we want to act in a responsible manner we assume everybody else does too. The Russians don't play by the same rules we do."

Grindle said the Soviet action exemplifies the militant mentality of Russian society. He warned that U.S. officials should remember the Soviet action when they are negotiating disarmament treaties.

"To annihilate 269 people is a crime, just a crime," he said.

Casselberry Mayor Charles Glascock found it hard to contain his feelings.

"As an American citizen I'm absolutely outraged. I wish I could think of better words to say my feelings. The news left me absolutely cold," he said. "My sympathy goes out to the families of the dead."

Glascock called the incident an affront to the United States and its people. "To me it's out and out murder."

Street Detour Set For Track Repairs

Persimmon Avenue from south of W. Third Street to north of W. Eighth Street will be closed beginning Sept. 6 for four weeks while Amtrak repairs the railroad crossing and tracks at the old Auto Train area, said Sanford assistant public works director and street superintendent George Rufas today.

Rufas said Amtrak is repairing the crossing in preparation for the new Amtrak Auto Train service slated to begin in October.

While Persimmon Avenue is closed, Rufas suggests that motorists detour by proceeding on Third to Pecan and then turning west on 8th Street to Persimmon.

The city, cooperating with the railroad on the project, will block the street at both sides and provide the detour marking.

Auto Train is scheduled to roll again beginning Oct. 30 on tri-weekly trips between Lorton, Va. and Sanford. The service is similar to a train operated between Dec. 1, 1971 and April 30, 1981 by the private Auto Train Corp. which filed for bankruptcy in September, 1980.

Extensive renovations are currently underway to the interior of the passenger station in Sanford with a new ticket counter and wheelchair facilities for the handicapped. Maintenance facilities and a storage area for spare parts are being upgraded. A new railroad car washer is under construction.

The Auto Train will have a capacity for 497 passengers in coach and sleeping cars and will be able to accommodate 264 autos.

Daily service is to begin on March 1, 1984.

Olympics Should Be Drug Free

In a competitive world where winning is said to be everything, it's hardly surprising that amateur athletes spare no efforts in their pursuit of the gold.

It's no surprise, either, that those efforts sometimes include anabolic steroids, the banned muscle-building chemicals that supposedly enhance their performance. That's been known for years.

Until recently, most got away with it. Then, officials at the Pan American Games in Caracas, Venezuela, launched a long-overdue crackdown.

Armed with a state-of-the-art drug laboratory, the technicians flown in from Germany were able to detect steroids taken within the past six months to a year.

The less sophisticated method used in evaluating urine samples at the recent Helsinki games detected only the drugs taken up to three months prior to the competition.

The Pan Am test results stirred a furor, heaping shame and embarrassment on athletes who only hours earlier had basked in glory.

In two days, steroids were detected in 11 weightlifters, eight of whom had to return medals they'd won. American weightlifter Jeff Michels was stripped of three gold medals. Cuban Olympic champion weightlifter Daniel Nunez lost his gold medal, too, after setting a new world record.

Thirteen American athletes left the games shortly before competing. And despite their silence and denials, skeptics assumed they departed because they knew they would flunk the drug tests.

Some of the competitors grumbled the new testing methods were overly strict. We don't think so.

It is good news that these sophisticated tests will be used at the Los Angeles Olympics next year.

We believe this may stop what appears to be a veritable epidemic of steroid use, which has spread from weightlifters to many other track-and-field events.

Unless the drug ban is strictly enforced, competitive pressures will lead hundreds of other athletes to take steroids, feeling they wouldn't stand a chance without them.

Hospices, Medicare

The hospice movement has opened a door for dramatic change in one aspect of health care in America, not from a breakthrough in medical technology but from simple compassion and a better understanding of basic human needs. Hospices provide care for dying patients, treating emotional as well as physical pain, and doing so preferably in the patient's home rather than in a hospital or other institution.

Hospices have won almost universal praise and acceptance in their communities, but they have posed a problem for Medicare and other health insurance programs which cover only the expense of hospital care. Most of the patients seeking help from hospices are cancer victims, many of them Medical clients. Although the typical hospice relies heavily on volunteers for much of its counseling activity, hospices could not survive solely on fees and donations collected outside the insurance system.

A solution now is at hand with announcement by the Health and Human Services Department (HHS) that it is now ready to incorporate hospice care to the Medicare program on a three-year trial basis. A dispute over the maximum amount that Medicare would provide for care of a hospice patient has been settled in legislation now awaiting the president's signature.

The three-year period now beginning will provide answers to some lingering questions about how hospices will fit into the larger scheme of medical institutions. The rules and guidelines announced by HHS are based in part on the experience of 26 hospices serving as demonstration programs during the past year.

Although hospice care ordinarily can be provided in the home, at much less cost than care in a hospital, the hospice must assume responsibility for any medical or surgical needs for a patient that may arise. The reimbursement for hospice care has been set at 40 percent of the cost of treating the average dying patient in an acute-care hospital. Only time will tell whether this figure is realistic.

A special display of reading programs will be presented by the Seminole County School District beginning Tuesday at Crooms High School on 13th Street in Sanford.

The display will feature textbooks presented by publishers for consideration for use in Florida's schools. Seminole County is one of 25 school districts participating in the pre-adoption evaluation of reading programs.

During this school year, educators and citizens will evaluate elementary reading materials before final state adoption of reading programs for all schools in Florida.

The display will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily through Sept. 16 in the Crooms High school library for citizens to check out the reading programs submitted for consideration by the state.

A school district employee will be on hand to answer questions about the various textbooks.

The beginning of school in Seminole County was the smoothest in several years, according to district officials. "It's just like school has been in session for several weeks," said Superintendent Robert Hughes.

The smooth start is a far cry from last year when more than 1,000 students were turned away from class on the first day of school because their immunization records were incomplete or not up to date.

But district personnel escaped another difficult opening by rescheduling all ninth, tenth and eleventh grade students for an additional class in the two months prior to the opening of school.

Nearly 10,000 students were given an additional class because of the increased graduation requirements approved this summer by the state Legislature.

A Volusia County school board member has been named to a 15-person committee to study teacher incentives and merit pay.

Beebe White, chairman of the Volusia School Board was named by Gov. Bob Graham to serve on the Florida Quality Instruction Incentives Council, which will be headed by former Brevard County principal B. Frank Brown.

Some Startling Statistics

The AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) disease has certainly damaged the cause of the homosexual movement, but more damaging than the disease itself have been the surrounding revelations about the behavior of many homosexuals.

The scientists, after all, will probably come up with a cure for the disease. But I myself had not known, for example, that the average number of sexual partners for an active male homosexual is 1,600 during his active lifetime. The average!

Nor had I known about the activities in the homosexual bath houses, where I now learn, it is not unusual for a homosexual to have a dozen sexual encounters in the course of an evening. Or that homosexual bars feature a back room for the purpose of sex between strangers who meet at the bar.

One homosexual was quoted in the press as saying that casual, promiscuous sex is essential to the homosexual ethos as he sees it. He said that such sex took place as casually as one might buy someone a drink. Thus the fear generated by AIDS, in his view, was damaging the entire lifestyle.

All of this has been a drastic eye-opener. When the scientists discover a cure for AIDS, fear of the disease itself will diminish, but what we have now learned about homosexual life will not be forgotten.

The behavior mentioned above does not indicate merely another "sexual orientation." It represents something entirely different from the behavior of heterosexuals.

Meanwhile, I notice a small but significant verbal coup that has been quietly perpetrated by the homosexual movement. During the past three years, or thereabouts, the term "homophobia" has begun to appear in the dictionaries. It means "fear of" or "dislike for" homosexuals.

But it further suggests that such attitudes are pathological. Just as "claustrophobia" and "agoraphobia" are neurotic conditions, so too is "homophobia." And since homophobia is pathological, the word suggests further that perhaps the irrational homophobes ought to receive medical or psychological treatment.

Now that represents quite a reversal. Sigmund Freud and the Catholic Church did not agree on much, but one thing they did agree on was that homosexuality is an aberration. Freud called it a neurotic condition, the Church called it a sin (at least the Church used to call it a sin; what it is saying now, if anything, I do not know).

In other words, homosexuality at one time was generally thought to have a pathological character. But with the introduction of the word homophobia into the vocabulary, the tables are being turned. It is not homosexuality but hostility toward it that is pathological.

But into the midst of this sleazy revolution comes the AIDS plague and the flood of revelations that have accompanied it, and maybe the term homophobia will disappear from future dictionaries.

No one, after all, is obliged to celebrate the behavior we have been hearing about in the homosexual baths and bars. Nor can one's opinion of such behavior be intimidated by a word.

WILLIAM RUSHER

Jesse Jackson Factor

NEW YORK (NEA) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson's evident intention to seek the Democratic presidential nomination inevitably inspires some fascinating speculations. Whatever else he may accomplish, he has already made the 1984 battle for the White House a far more interesting affair.

His bid comes at a time when blacks are acutely conscious of their growing power in the voting booth. The recent victory of Harold Washington in Chicago's mayoral election, and the nomination of W. Wilson Goode by the Democrats in their primary for mayor of Philadelphia, have demonstrated afresh that solid black support for black candidates can, in many areas, produce impressive results. Not unreasonably, many blacks are curious to see just how far they can push their luck.

The first result of a Jackson campaign in next year's Democratic presidential primaries will be a marked increase in the number of blacks who register to vote. That, in fact, is one of Jackson's major strategic aims: to increase black voter registration, and thus black influence, not only in next year's elections but for the foreseeable future.

Such an increase will be an unalloyed boon to the Democratic Party and a corresponding blow to the Republicans, since something over 90 percent of these new black voters can probably be counted on to vote Democrat.

The GOP's likeliest strategic response is a vigorous bid for a larger share of the Hispanic vote, which now is predominantly Democratic and growing fast. The Republicans believe, with some reason, that they can attract a substantial number of Hispanic voters — especially Cuban-Americans (who are passionately anti-communist) and Mexican-Americans. President Reagan's recent speeches to Hispanic-American audiences make it plain that he is aware of this possibility — and also of the dangers posed by higher black participation.

But how is Jesse Jackson's presence in the Democratic primaries going to affect those contests? He will undoubtedly win some delegates in areas of dominant black influence, but in most places he will probably come in second, or third, or last, winning few votes beyond his intensely loyal black base. The key point, however, is that almost every vote Jackson gets will be one that would otherwise go to one of the more liberal white candidates, such as Mondale or Cranston. The net effect of Jackson's candidacy, therefore, will be to help the most conservative Democrat: John Glenn.

Picture now the Democratic convention. Mondale arrives, perhaps still slightly ahead of Glenn in total delegate strength but indirectly damaged by the Jackson candidacy. Jackson has a fairly small but loyal and vocal bloc of delegates, and is clearly ready to wheel and deal.

Is it possible, in such a situation, that one or another of the leading contenders might offer Jackson the vice presidential slot on his ticket? It would be a terribly dangerous thing to do — not only because it has never been tried and we therefore cannot be certain how American voters would react to the prospect of a black vice president, but because many voters, black and white alike, have reservations about Jackson as a personality.

But what if, despite a strenuous Jackson bid for the vice presidential nomination, the Democrats wind up rejecting him and choosing a white instead? Is there any doubt that millions of black voters would feel that Jackson was rejected solely on account of his race? And, if they felt that way, would they swallow their pride and vote Democrat in November anyhow, or would they grimly sit on their hands?

Would it matter whether Jackson himself endorsed the Democratic ticket or sulked, old black voters refuse to follow his lead in the matter? Could Jackson publicly be promised something else — a Cabinet post, perhaps — without the gesture doing more harm than good?

At this point these are unanswerable questions, but may well hinge the Democratic Party's hope of victory in 1984. Before he is through, Jesse Jackson may have Democratic politicians wishing they were Republican.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Latin Debt Problem

The international debt crisis simply won't go away. It is likely to worsen in the next few years. The American people have to arrive at a decision as to what to do about it.

Latin American debt is the principal worry. Each of the major Latin nations has immense foreign debts. There's a real danger that they will default on debts to the United States, with a severe impact on the U.S. banking system. Brazil may be the first country to declare a moratorium on payment of its debts.

Many observers of the international banking scene are commenting on this situation. Jeffrey E. Garten of the Lehman Brothers investment banking house recently wrote in The Wall Street Journal that "There will surely be need for even more financial transfusions over the next few years." He warned that the Latin nations are not likely to be able to export their way out of their difficulties. Western markets are already glutted with foreign goods. Latin troubles also are causing severe losses for U.S. manufacturers. American exports to Latin America fell 40 percent from the same period last year. The Latins are broke and can't buy American goods.

Sally Shelton, a former deputy assistant secretary of state in the Carter administration, has warned of a social eruption in Latin America and urged opening U.S. markets to Latin countries, adding that "Existing quota arrangements, such as for beef and textiles, should be rewritten to favor Latin Americans." However, there will be stiff political resistance to such action.

Indicative of growing resistance to massive new aid or trade schemes is the stand taken by U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane (R-Ill.), a leading congressional conservative. He recently sent this message to his constituents:

"A desperate drive is being made by supporters of legislation which calls for a commitment of almost $30 billion in U.S. resources for international financial activities. This represents an increase of $8.4 billion in U.S. financial backing for the International Monetary Fund.

"I oppose the bill for a number of reasons, one of which is that under the IMF umbrella, the U.S. is unable to control the flow of money. Also, this is hardly the time to attempt to borrow additional billions of dollars for foreign nations at the expense of our own economy. The increased demand for dollars is bound to put a squeeze on interest rates."

Former Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon also opposes the 48.4 billion appropriation for the International Monetary Fund. He said the funding is another step in the direction of turning the IMF into an aid agency. In a powerful statement published in The Wall Street Journal, Mr. Simon said that the proposed transfer of funds to the IMF is a tragic spectacle of "the deficit-ridden rescuing the bankrupt," with the American taxpayer holding the bag.

The arguments advanced by Rep. Crane and Mr. Simon are compelling. Their views ought to prevail.

JACK ANDERSON

Nixon May Have Used Oil Man

WASHINGTON — A little-noticed item in the financial pages recently reported the purchase of Tom Pappas's oil company, Esso Pappas, by the Greek government. There's a fascinating story behind the $15 million deal.

Pappas was a major fund-raiser and contributor to the 1968 campaign of Richard Nixon and his running mate, Spiro T. Agnew, who was to become the highest elected official of Greek-American background. The Esso works in Greece was just one of the multimillionaire's holdings, which also included shipping and soft drink companies.

The Pappas enterprises were alleged to be fronts for CIA operations in Greece during the period when the military junta was in power. More serious were charges that CIA funds found their way through Pappas back to the United States into the Nixon-Agnew campaign fund. If Nixon got his hands on U.S. Treasury money indirectly through the CIA, it is a scandal of first magnitude.

An investigation into the Nixon-Pappas-CIA connection was begun by the Senate Intelligence Committee in 1975.

But it was dropped at the personal request of then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

The money trail led from the CIA to its Greek counterpart, the KYP, then to Pappas and back to the United States and into the Nixon-Agnew campaign. Pappas vehemently denied the charges, which had come from Elias Demetracopoulos, a respected Greek journalist who had fled his homeland after the junta took over in 1967.

A few weeks before the 1968 election, Demetracopoulos took his charges to Lawrence O'Brien, then chairman of the Democratic National Committee. O'Brien issued a press release demanding that Nixon and Agnew explain their relationship to Pappas, but it drew little attention in the final days of the campaign.

It is conceivable that if the truth about Nixon's secret funding by the CIA had come out, he might have lost the extremely close election to Hubert Humphrey. As things turned out, though, the Greek exile leader's charges may have played an unwitting part in Nixon's ultimate downfall. Here's how:

In 1971, Demetracopoulos laid his explosive charges before a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee, and was asked to submit details in a memorandum. Before he could do so, Nixon's longtime adviser, Murray Chotiner, told Demetracopoulos: "Lay off Pappas. It's not smart politics. You know Tom Pappas is a friend of the president's."

Then Attorney General John Mitchell got into the act. At a party, he confronted a Republican friend of the Greek journalist, Louise Gore, then-ambassador to UNESCO. She wrote Demetracopoulos: "(Mitchell) is furious at you — and your testimony against Pappas. He kept threatening to have you deported."

Demetracopoulos submitted his memo to the House subcommittee anyway — disclosing that he had documentary evidence to support his charges. The White House was obviously worried about Demetracopoulos' evidence — and, according to competent sources, that may have been one reason the Watergate burglary was authorized. Nixon wanted to know what ammunition

Demetracopoulos had supplied to the Democrats.

The "smoking gun" in the Greek connection was eventually provided by the late Henry Tasca, in 1976 testimony to the House Intelligence Committee. Tasca previously had been U.S. ambassador to Greece, and his sworn testimony was kept secret at his insistence. He confirmed the funneling of money from the Greek junta to the Nixon campaign.

The eminent investigative reporter Seymour Hersh, in his book about Henry Kissinger, has written that Tasca's testimony "raises the question whether the CIA ... was aware that some of its funds were being returned to the United States for use in a presidential election."

As for the Senate investigation of 1975, Hersh declares: "Sources close to the committee have said that its investigation was abruptly canceled at Kissinger's direct request."

Footnote: Nixon, Kissinger and Pappas were either unavailable or refused to comment.

UCF's Beta-Eta Honored

The Beta-Eta chapter of the Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity at the University of Central Florida was recently honored for chapter excellence by their International Fraternity executive board.

The Grand High Alpha Award, as it is known, was awarded to the chapter at the Fraternity's bi-annual leadership seminar held this year August 17-21 at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind. It is given to chapters demonstrating consistently high achievement in all areas of chapter programming including scholarship, campus leadership, community service, and membership recruitment during a three-year period.

The Beta-Eta chapter has been in existence since 1971 and was given the same award in 1974. Lambda Chi Alpha is an international fraternity, maintaining more than two-hundred chapters in the United States and Canada.

Gardening

When Fall Comes, Mum's The Word

The beginning of college football season and approaching fall weather reminds many of us that it is also chrysanthemum season. This popular flower is relatively easy to grow but there are some cultural practices that will likely insure greater success if they are followed.

The common garden chrysanthemums, popularly called "mums" belong to a large group of annual and perennial herbs in the plant family called Composite. The cold-hardy, cultivated varieties are used extensively as garden and patio flowers for fall color.

The wide color range and type and size of flowers tend to increase the popularity of this fine garden subject especially noted for its excellent show of color in September and October.

Flowers of mums can be controlled by manipulating day length, but most home gardeners allow their plants to flower in the normal fall season. Controlled flower production at other seasons is best left to commercial cut flower producers.

Chrysanthemums will grow in any well-drained soil that contains an abundance of organic matter. If the soil is very sandy, a three to four inch layer of peat or other organic material should be worked into the flower bed to a six inch depth.

Mums are grown from cuttings or division of old plant clumps. Rooted cuttings are usually available from local garden stores. Space the plants a foot apart for a mass effect or two feet apart to emphasize individual plants.

Shaping Up At Geneva School

When classes started for the 1983-84 school year at Geneva Elementary School Monday morning, Tom Leonard, the physical education instructor, wasted no time getting his students out on the court.

"Now, listen up, kids," he said. "We are going to have groups, and group leaders. Heath, you stand over there and be the captain of team one; Julie, you are head of team two..." And so, Mr. Leonard's ninth year on the hallowed grounds of Geneva Elementary began.

For everyone who lives "in the heart of Geneva," the joyous sounds of the children competing in their gym classes are as welcome as a breath of Spring air, and just as refreshing.

It makes one feel a bit nostalgic to hear the little darlings squeal with delight as their team wins. Tends to take you back to your own childhood days when you watched the clock for recess or P.E. class, slapping that math book closed the minute the bell rang, joining the mad dash out the door while trying to look like you were not running or shoving.

One bit of change donned the halls at Geneva Elementary this week as history was made. According to the principal, Mrs. Nancy McNamara, it became necessary for the first time to add a second kindergarten class. Last year's enrollment for kindergarten was 17. This year the magic number of 35 students showed up for kindergarten to bring the school's total to 230 youngsters.

The influx of beginning students necessitated a huge housekeeping change and move of classroom furniture, books, students, and teachers. But, by Wednesday morning, everyone and everything was settled into their new rooms. Now the lower elementary building houses the two

After the plants are established and at least six inches tall break off the top one or two inches of the stem. This will encourage lateral branching and produce lower bushier plants.

Two to three applications of a 6-6-6 fertilizer at the rate of one pound per one-hundred square feet during the growing season is sufficient to grow a good crop of flowers. When applying fertilizers, keep the material off the leaves. Water thoroughly to distribute the fertilizer throughout the root area.

Chrysanthemums may need to be supported unless the plants are the low, strong growing types. Tall, weak stemmed plants definitely need some form of staking. If a wooden stake is used, drive it into the ground at planting time. Staking after the plants are established can cause injuries to the roots.

By careful choice of varieties, flowers of many types and colors can be produced from September until Christmas, although an early frost will injure some young buds and thus reduce flowering.

our town to observe the Prep Program at Geneva Elementary School.

Ms. Harris serves on the State Legislature's Committee on Education which is responsible to evaluate the early childhood development program implemented 5 years ago. Geneva's program has been very successful.

Mrs. McNamara hopes the program will be re-funded, and she says, "I think it is excellent for our students because they get more individual attention when they need it."

She further explained the program by stating that each student grades "K" through third is screened in the Prep Program for special needs. They are placed in either of two programs. The enrichment for advanced students, or remedial for students requiring extra individual instruction to reach potential.

Don't forget the first meeting of the Fall for Geneva Citizens Assn. is Monday, Sept. 12 at 8 p.m. in the community hall. The date was moved forward one week due to the Labor Day holiday.

Husband Drops Out At Wife's Reunion

DEAR ABBY: Last July, my wife and I went to a small town in Minnesota to attend her 30th high school reunion. This was the first class reunion I had ever attended, and it will be my last.

On our arrival we were met by a lady with a big smile who took my $30 for the dinner and said, "Thank you." That was the only time anybody other than my wife spoke to me. I tried on four separate occasions to talk to people, but they turned their backs on me.

I'm an average-looking man, quiet by nature, but I don't have leprosy. I finally felt I had had enough of these rude people, so I went out and sat in the lobby. I didn't feel like eating, so I found my wife and told her I'd be waiting for her in the lobby when the banquet was over.

My wife is still mad at me for skipping the dinner, but Abby, those people really hurt my feelings. Please comment.

NO MORE REUNIONS

DEAR NO MORE: Since you are quiet by nature, your wife should have made an effort to introduce you around.

I know it's not easy to have a good time with a bunch of strangers, but you could have been a good sport and sat with your wife at the banquet. Your conspicuous absence at the table probably embarrassed her. (To quote myself: "When you pick a lemon, make lemonade.")

Some general advice: Never drag a reluctant spouse to a class reunion.

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the man who sent $2,500 for a cat's funeral,

Dear Abby

then another $1,200 to have the cat dug up and moved across the country:

You should have given him your standard answer: "Get professional help!" Anybody who would throw away that much money on a dead cat needs to have his head examined.

If you print this, I will send a check for $10 to the American Red Cross Disaster Committee in your name, Abby. It puts its money to good use.

ARTHUR IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR ARTHUR: You just made a deal. But let me add that the cost of burying a pet is nowhere near what that cat lover spent.

Peggy Morris, the manager of Pet Haven Cemetery in Gardena, Calif., wrote to say that the basic cost for a complete burial service with a satin-lined casket is $240 — and even the fanciest special-order casket would not bring the total to $500.

Ms. Morris wrote: "We have a saying here at Pet Haven: You bury people because you have to; you bury pets because you want to."

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest your 10 tips on how to be a good wife, followed by 10 tips on how to be a good husband.

How about inviting your young readers to submit their 10 tips on how to be a good son or daughter?

That would not only make interesting reading, but it would tell us something about the younger generation.

OLD-TIMER

DEAR OLD-TIMER: A great idea! Children?

DEAR ABBY: The photographer in Fort Myers, wanted to know why lovers always close their eyes while kissing. Obviously the purpose is to shut out other distractions so that the ecstasy of the moment may be full and complete.

I, too, am a professional photographer, but my problem is not whether couples close their eyes, but how to get them to shut their mouths! In re-

'Babes In Arms' Opens Annie Russell Season

Dr. S. Joseph Nassif, director of the Annie Russell Theatre at Rollins College, recently announced the 1983-1984 season of plays. "We have chosen to focus this year's selection around some of the best that American theater has to offer," said Dr. Nassif. The season consists of five plays beginning with a musical on October 21st. The Rollins College theater has made one scheduling change for the coming year. Opening night has been scheduled for Friday, replacing the traditional Thursday opening, and a Wednesday evening performance has been added in the second week.

The season opens with Richard Rogers and Lorenz Hart's vintage musical, Babes In Arms. It is a story of a resolute, talented group of summer stock apprentices who try to stage an original revenue in the face of a hateful playhouse producer, a megalomaniacal Southern playwright, a former child movie star and her overbearing stage mother. But the "show must go on" in trouper tradition and it does — with songs such as I Wish I Were In Love Again, Where or When, My Funny Valentine, and The Lady Is a Tramp. Performances are scheduled October 21-22, 26-29.

Another successful playwrighting partnership takes the stage for the second Annie Russell production. This time the incomparable team of George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart have teamed up to write one of the greatest comic classics of the American theater, The Man Who Came to Dinner. In performance December 2-10, this play kept New York laughing for two years in 1939-1941 and it's been a popular favorite ever since. The fun begins as a dinner guest, Sheridan Whiteside, arrives for dinner and proceeds to break his hip. Since he cannot be moved, his prolonged stay becomes a disaster for his hosts, the Stanleys, and an outrageous delight for audiences.

Undoubtedly, one of the greatest of all American dramatists is Tennessee Williams and he is represented in the Annie Russell season by perhaps his greatest play, The Glass Menagerie. It is a poetic, tender and enchanting story of a faded southern belle's efforts to marry off a daughter as fragile as the glass animals she collects. Performances are scheduled for January 27-28 and February 1-4.

A powerful, emotional and highly theatrical drama of a grisly chapter in Colonial America — the Salem witch-hunts — is presented with the fourth production, The Crucible. Written by another of America's great playwrights, Arthur Miller, The Crucible is a chilling portrait of how small lies — children's lies — build and build until a whole town is aroused and nineteen men and women go to the gallows for being "possessed of the devil." Performances of The Crucible are scheduled March 16-17, 21-24.

The final production of the Annie Russell Theatre's 52nd season is Anna Cora Mowatt's comedy of manners, Fashion. Written in 1845, it is the first successful play by an American writer. It is a melodrama with ten musical hits, a farce and pure sentiment of a time past. Among the characters of this play, which satirizes the nouveau riche society of mid-nineteenth century New York, are a wealthy but vulgar merchant, his ambitious wife, a rude upstate farmer and, naturally, a phony foreign count. Performances are scheduled for May 4-5, 9-12.

In addition, the Annie Russell Theatre is again sponsoring the Asolo State Theater on their annual tour. Two performances only are scheduled for Saturday, February 25 at 3:00 and 8:00 p.m. This year's offering is Promenade Aile a fast paced, hilarious comedy sketching the history of an upper-middle class American family across 75 years and four generations.

The Annie Russell Theatre has also sponsored a touring professional dance company for the last three years, and this year will present The Dance Company, Inc., on Friday, September 30, at 8:00 p.m. The Dance Company, Inc., is Orlando's first professional modern dance company combining modern, ballet and jazz to create their own unique style of dance.

Tickets to the Asolo State Theater and The Dance Company, Inc., are offered to season subscribers at discounts. Season tickets are available at last season's prices by calling the theater box office at 646-2145. Free brochures listing prices, dates, and descriptions are available by calling the same number.

Defense Should Signal Turnabout For Patriots

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

The nucleus of any good team can usually be traced to its linebacking corps. When the Chicago Bears ruled as the "Monsters of the Midway" in the 1960s, linebackers Dick Butkus and Doug Buffone were breaking bones week after week.

Lake Brantley football coach Dave Tullis has some bonebreakers of his own returning from last year's 2-8 squad — four linebackers to be exact — which is one big reason the amiable Patriot boss thinks good things are in store for the Big Blue this fall.

Defensively, eight of 11 Patriots return. The main bonebreaker — middle linebacker Donnie O'Brian — is 35 pounds heavier and stronger than he was as an all-conference selection last year. He has a great supporting cast in Pat James and Byron Bush, along with younger brother Sean O'Brian, who will also see time at defensive tackle.

"Donnie O'Brian is the strongest linebacker we've ever had here," said Tullis. "We had the weight room open for 30 days this summer and he made all 30. He has really worked to improve himself."

Lake Brantley accomplished last year's 2-8 record despite only two returning starters. Tullis, however, saw more than two wins. "We knew going into the season it was going to be a tough year. We were just too inexperienced. But, you build on each year," he pointed out. "Last year's team has made a big contribution to this year's team."

"They were very unselfish. There were no individual stars, although we did have players who stood out. The was no resentment or bickering about who made the mistakes."

"Those are the things which determine winning more than the mental things. If we can keep the same unity, we'll be all right this year, too," Tullis added.

If the Patriots produce an offense half as good as their defense — they'll be more than all right. The Big Blue didn't score a touchdown in its first four games last year, but things should be much better this year.

"Our offense has improved drastically," continued Tullis. "[Quarterback] Dennis Groseclose is a lot bigger and stronger. He throws the ball with more zip and he's the strongest (245-pound bench press) quarterback we've had."

Patriot punter Chuck Stallings was the first Stallings can boom team, all-conference them with the best. punter last year.

Prep Football

Lake Brantley plays in the Lake Howell Jamboree tonight, taking on Lake Mary for a half after the Silver Hawks play DeLand at 7 p.m. In the first half, "I don't put too much stock in jamborees," said Tullis. "If will, though, give a chance to look at some more kids."

OFFENSE

Backfield — Running back Allen Armstrong hasn't looked as strong as he did in the spring game, but the 6-2 tailback has been hobbled by injury. Fullbacks Greg Shatto and Chuck Stallings are both solid runners who can get the tough yards. Shatto played at Lake Mary last fall. Bill Black and Steve Emmons are pushing Armstrong for the tailback spot. Both are durable runners.

Groseclose, a junior, is ahead in the battle for the QB job with transfer Kenny VanCaster and Kyle Frakes, another transfer from Lake Mary. Frakes suffered a knee injury early in the Rams' season last year. "It's pretty close for the no. 1 job," said Tullis. "We'll make an evaluation after the jamboree." John Harris, who played quarterback last year, has been moved to wingback.

Receivers — Tullis is high on John Mondo and Brad Dunn. "Both have good hands and are real quick," he said. Sean Lindahl is the third split end. Harris and Rex Black are the top two wingbacks. "Harris runs real good routes and Black has got good size (6-4) and is a good blocker," said Tullis. Tim Hosley is the third wingback.

Line — Another strong area for the Pats. A pair of three-year starters — tackles Robert Maier (6-2, 234) and Brian Hamman (6-3, 215) — should make life comfortable for the Big Blue backs. Center Curt Mull is a hulking 6-5 and 276 pounds. "Curt ranges from 270 to... he won't let me see the scale," laughed Tullis. "Curt is so big he doesn't need to get all of you (on a block), he just needs to bump you." Greg Risse is the backup.

Some other good bumpers include guard Kevin Moser, tight ends Carlos Ince and Tim Whittmore along with guard Bob Whittick. Whittick was the Patriots' most valuable lineman as a tackle last year. He has trimmed off 10 pounds and Tullis is looking for a good year from his streamlined guard. Ince is a devastating blocker who will also get help from James.

Andy Kraft and Kevin Joseph are the backup tackles while Bill "Best Technique" Neville and sophomore Matt Gabrovic will spell the guards. "All our offensive linemen are close in talent. We'll do a lot of interchanging," said Tullis.

DEFENSE

Backfield — Cornerback Scott Salmon, an all-conference choice last year as a sophomore, heads up a strong secondary of big hitters. Returning also is Ricky Phillips at cornerback. Bobby Garrison will backup and play some roverback, too, where Scott Horwitz returns. Horwitz started every game last year.

The safeties are Jeff King and Clark Lee. "Both really like to hit you," said Tullis. "Our defensive backfield should be a strong and experienced area." Curt Marn will backup at corner.

Linebackers — Donnie O'Brian joined Lyman all-stater Mike Hill and Oviedo standout Tom Johnson on the all-county team last fall. Don't be surprised if O'Brian picks up some postseason honor of his own. James and Bush aren't too far behind either. "Bush spent a lot of time in the weight room, too," said Tullis. "He comes up on the ball real well and his pass defense has really improved, too."

James, who is also a fine discus thrower, missed some of spring practice because of his track commitment, but Tullis said he has made up for lost time with a strong fall showing. Jeff Morris, another good hitter, is trying to find some time as a linebacker, as is Larry Mula.

Line — Although the linebackers are much ballyhoed, Tullis rates the bulk in the pit as an area just as strong. "In fact, during the spring, the defensive line outplayed the linebackers," said Tullis. "We have three excellent defensive tackles who will interchange."

The best of the trio is junior Dean Shirley, a second-team, all-conference selection last fall. "We have trouble blocking Dean because of his quickness," said Tullis. "He can really move and a year of wrestling really helped him."

Tullis labels strong and sturdy Chris Anderson "a big surprise" and Larry Froemming, a junior who bench presses 305 pounds, another tough one to block because of his quickness.

The defensive ends were an unsettled area until the fall. "We played the spring jamboree without our top four ends because of injuries," said Tullis. "Clark Millican has picked up 23 pounds and made a strong return from a broken wrist. Scott Hubbard has come back from a shoulder injury at the other end."

Two transfers — Chris Loy and Tony Hostetter — add depth as does Joe Czachowski.

Kicking — Stallings, an all-conference choice last fall, returns to handle the punting and place kicking. "Chuck got a little too much practice last fall," laughed Tullis. "We hope that doesn't happen again." Stallings will be backed up by Garrison.

OUTLOOK

The defense should again be awesome. The question is how well will the offense perform? All the ingredients are there in the offensive line except great speed, but it will probably come down to quarterback where either Groseclose or VanCaster will have to come through. Armstrong is a quality tailback if he shakes his injury. Shatto is a hardnosed fullback.

The Patriots were the class of last spring's jamboree, but they have not shown the same ability thus far in the fall. "We haven't played as well yet this fall," said Tullis. "We've sat down and talked with the players about it. I don't know the reason. We think it will just take time."

"We may be expecting too much too early. When we played the spring jamboree we were in pads for 16 days. We've only been in pads about 10 days so far. When that first game rolls around we'll have the same number of practices. Then we should be all right."

Tonight's jamboree — Salmon will not be in action because of an injury while Whittmore and Armstrong may play sparingly, if at all.

Colbourn, UCF Keep Football Commitment, Time For Area Fans To Commit To Knights

Central Florida vs. Elizabeth City State University

President Trevor Colbourn and the University of Central Florida Knights have finally made a commitment to a strong football program — now it's time for the fans of Central Florida to commit to UCF.

With the hiring of Lou Saban, Colbourn has gone out and found a man who can build a winning program. It's something he should have done a few years back — if he was really serious about going Division I. Circumstances, however, apparently didn't make that possible at the time.

Colbourn, though, is now off the hook with the hiring of Saban and athletic director Bill Peterson. Both Saban and Peterson have worked tirelessly to promote the 1983 Knights. Something which had to be done, especially after last year's 0-10 season.

Lorenz "Chicken" Rivers should provide the offensive excitement tonight. The Kissimmee fullback helped Osceola to a second place finish in the 3A State Playoffs last fall. Rivers is a very elusive runner and is a good receiver.

"I must have spoken to 60-70 groups of people," said Saban about his Central Florida circuit running. "UCF football was very well received. We'd like to fill the stadium (50,000), but realistically we'd like to average 30,000 fans."

It's a big goal, but so is Division I football within a few years. But it's a goal Colbourn, Peterson, Saban and a youthful 1983 squad are willing to undertake. "We're all headed in the same direction," said Saban. "There's no doubt that Dr. Colbourn mapped out the future, so there's no turning back. We just need a couple of breaks along the way."

Central Florida fans, who have been apathetic to the UCF program the past four years, can give the Knights a big break tonight by turning out. And turning out in big numbers.

Despite the lackluster past showings, Saban feels a winner will bring out the fans. "This is an excellent community," continued Saban. "I think they are inquisitive about what we're doing out here. If we go out and give them a good product, I think they will support us tremendously."

And that good product may be on the field tonight. UCF has more size, depth and speed than any of its past teams. More importantly, the schedule has been downgraded after last year's slate which was lacking only Nebraska and Notre Dame from being a 10-game suicidal journey.

Tonight's opponent is Elizabeth City (N.C.) State

University. A school with an enrollment of just 1,500 students. The Vikings are a Division II school to which UCF lost, 14-9, two years ago. This year, ECSU returns two offensive standouts — quarterback John Robinson and halfback Bruce Butler — and four defensive stalwarts led by all-conference defensive back returnee Bobby Futrell.

The Vikings were 5-5 a year ago. "That's about all we know about them," said Saban. "Except, they're supposed to be big and fast. That's okay, they don't know anything about us either."

The Knights have produced a good defense most of the time the past few years, but the offense has been lacking. Speed and a power fullback have been the missing components. The recruitment of Lorenza "Chicken" Rivers from Kissimmee Osceola should fill the first need, but a power back may still be a problem.

Rivers is an exciting back who plays much tougher than his 148 pounds. Dana Thyhsen, the "DeLand Rifle," will handle the quarterback slot. Thyhsen is a good thrower and has some good targets in seniors Jeff Froehlich and Jimmy Roundtree. Lake Howell grad Jim Bray is the center.

Defensively, Darrell Rudd is a mainstay at tackle while ex-Lyman standout Danny Allen will see some time in the pit. Oviedo's Tom Johnson will be at one linebacker while Jamie Lugo, who is getting some work at QB after Raymond Agee quit the team, is the top defensive back. Lyman grad John Poor will see some time at tight end and maybe as a punter if Thyhsen can't handle the booting.

Saban likes the team he is putting on the field tonight, but he has the usual first-year reservations. "Immaturity bothers us (the coaching staff) a lot," said the grizzled veteran. "We just don't know how we'll do under fire. But it should be an interesting year. We plan to put on a good show. Come on out...and bring a friend."

Sounds like a good idea, Central Florida.

In Florida

EPA Lists Four New Hazardous Waste Dumps Marked For Cleanup

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four hazardous waste dumps in Florida are among 133 new sites made eligible for cleanup through the Environmental Protection Agency's $1.6 billion Superfund, officials said.

Cabot-Koppers in Gainesville, Hipps Road Landfill in Duval County, Pepper Steel & Alloys, Inc., in Medley and Tri-City Oil Conservationist, Inc., in Temple Terrace were identified by the EPA for future cleanup action.

The listing of the new Florida sites "does not mean that bulldozers will be pulling up at the new sites tomorrow," said Lee Thomas, an EPA assistant administrator.

Field and feasibility studies will be undertaken at each priority site. Soil and water will be monitored and sampled and plans drawn up for each cleanup before any physical action is begun, he said.

Thomas said, however, that EPA is authorized to take immediate action to prevent the problems at each site from getting worse.

Candidates for the list were proposed by state officials and the EPA's regional offices.

Some 419 sites, including more than two dozen in Florida, were originally listed by the EPA last December. Thursday's action marked the first expansion of the original list.

State Environmental Regulation Secretary Victoria Tschinkel said the new listing brings to 29 the number of Florida sites in the $1.6 billion program.

'Whistleblower' May Get The Ax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bertrand Berube, promoted to a top job at the General Services Administration because he was a "whistleblower," now faces a dismissal notice partly because of his dogged campaign of public criticism against the agency's chief.

In a notice of dismissal delivered last Friday, GSA Administrator Gerald Carmen charged Berube with "misconduct" and "a pattern of increasingly disruptive behavior ... over an extended period of time, which has been deliberate and which has amounted to abuse of position and authority."

He accused Berube of seeking in statements to the news media criticizing the lack of GSA maintenance for federal buildings to "create an environment of sensationalism demeaning to the government."

Carmen ordered Berube, whom he placed on "detail" last January from his powerful job as chief of the agency's National Capital Region, to work at home while preparing a response.

Berube cleaned out his desk at the GSA Thursday, and referred most questions to his attorneys, one of whom said Carmen had only the "slenderest" legal basis for the action.

Ironically, Carmen had previously praised Berube and two other outspoken agency employees, whom he gave top-level jobs upon taking office to carry out a 1980 Ronald Reagan campaign pledge to "put the whistleblowers back in power at the GSA."

In the spring of 1981, Carmen awarded Berube, William Clinkscales and Howard Davis $7,500 bonuses for their recommendations for improving agency operations.

Since then, Berube has been the only one of the trio to regularly score the GSA's failures and Carmen's performance as agency administrator, often publicly.

The 20-year agency veteran has become a crusader for reforms in the government's landlord agency, calling for improved building maintenance to avoid what he says have become life-threatening conditions for some federal workers.

Louis Clark, a lawyer for the non-profit Government Accountability Project that is representing Berube in fighting his ouster, alleged that Berube has been "set up" for firing in recent months.

"I think ... despite the possibility of bad press for having gone after a whistleblower of Bert Berube's stature, they've decided it's still better to do that than to have an internal critic of their performance," he said.

Clark said it would cost Berube thousands of dollars to defend himself and "it could very well be that Berube will not have that money."

"We are not permitted by law to comment on any personnel matters," a GSA spokesman said.

Berube was removed from his job as chief of the National Capital Region last January just hours after he told top agency officials of a pattern of serious deterioration and inadequate maintenance in the federal buildings the GSA oversees.

As recently as June, Carmen denied he was punishing Berube with the job shift.

"We're happy to have four more sites eligible for 90 percent federal cleanup funding because it will help state funds go further in our efforts to protect the state's major drinking water sources — its groundwater," said Ms. Tschinkel.

The action does not mean the federal government will be paying for the entire cleanup effort. Thomas said the new sites "become priority targets for private-party cleanup efforts through enforcement actions by states and EPA."

EPA data on the new Florida sites follows:

—The Cabot-Koppers site covers about 38 acres and consists of an unknown number of settling ponds built by the two companies, containing "phenols" and coal tar products.

—The Hipps Road Landfill occupies nine acres in the Jacksonville Heights area. Earlier this year, the state found that a number of residential wells near the abandoned site were contaminated with organics, including chlorinated compounds.

—Pepper Steel & Alloys reportedly disposed of transformer oil containing PCBs on the 10-acre site in Dade County. In 1975, a county inspector found oil-soaked ground on site. In 1982, the county found an oily layer up to six inches deep in each of six pits up to four feet deep.

—Tri-Cities Conservationist, Inc., which recycles waste oil, is located about 3,000 feet from the Hillsborough River and within three miles of a public well serving the community's 16,000 residents.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

No Cure Yet For Painful Neuritis

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — My mother is a diabetic. She takes insulin every day. She has neuritis or inflammation of the nerves in her hip. The burning pain extends down both legs to the soles of her feet.

She takes Tylenol with codeine but this causes constipation. Is there any other medication she can take that will relieve this terrible pain? She has been told by her doctor there is no cure for neuritis. Is this true?

DEAR READER — Almost every diabetic develops some form of neuropathy within a few years of the onset of the disease. It can cause problems with the bladder or impotence in men, but one of the worst features is the involvement of nerves to the legs, causing painful feet and legs.

There is beginning to be a little better understanding of the altered metabolism that causes this unpleasant side effect. But there is no cure. All evidence points to good control of the diabetes as helping to prevent such complications. In animal studies as soon as the blood glucose level became too high, changes in nerve function were observed. When the blood glucose level was lowered to normal the nerve function returned to normal.

This is one of the important arguments for maintaining good control of a diabetic's blood glucose level around the clock, and I am hopeful that the new pumps and devices being developed will make this possible.

Even now it is important to review your mother's blood glucose levels over the day. If the levels are varying too much, she should see if they can be better controlled.

The rest of the treatment is symptomatic. It helps to keep the bedclothes lifted off the feet at night. And then there is the search for which medications work best to provide relief. Alcohol makes neuropathy worse.

There have been a lot of changes in the thinking about diabetes which are discussed in The Health Letter 18-10. Hyperglycemia: The Diabetic Problem, which I am sending you.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 40-year-old female and three years ago I developed ulcerative colitis. I was treated with corticosteroid enemas which really worked. It was gone in three weeks. Six months later it was back. The corticosteroid didn't work but Sulfasalazine did. I was fine for three months then it recurred.

Now I have been on Sulfasalazine for six months and am not improving. I don't have diarrhea but have a lot of gas, blood and mucus and I am anemic. Is there anything else that can be done?

DEAR READER — Your doctor has treated you with the common methods used to control ulcerative colitis.

As you know, ulcerative colitis is associated with diarrhea and bleeding. Your absence of diarrhea suggests some degree of control.

I wonder whether you have other colon problems superimposed on your ulcerative colitis. I am thinking of milk intolerance that often occurs in patients who have ulcerative colitis. Why not stop eating all milk and all products made with milk. Eliminate coffee, tea and colas if you use them and see if that helps at least eliminate the gas.

Being short of funds today won't diminish your choice of activities. Your creative mind will come up with several fun alternatives.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

You might be better off today maintaining a low profile, so that people with chips on their shoulders won't use you as a scapegoat.

Pessimistic Pete looked at his fine hand for some time before passing at four spades. He liked his high cards, but didn't like his distribution.

West opened the queen of diamonds. Pete put on dummy's king and East ruffed. Most players would play their diamond deuce and wind up one in the soup, feeling like Al Capp's unlucky Joe Blisk, who had his own personal rain cloud over his head.

Pete wondered if he could find some rainbow in back of the cloud and finally found a possible way to overcome that 9-0 diamond break. He carefully played his ace of diamonds, so that East ended up ruffing both diamond winners at the same time.

East returned a trump, and Pete noted that West had produced one spade. Next came dummy's ace of hearts with West following. Now Pete played his ace-king of clubs with West following to both clubs. Pete felt like Archimedes when he invented the lever. His game was coming home.

He threw West in with a diamond. West had to lead another diamond. Pete chuckled a heart from dummy and his own six of clubs. Another diamond was led. Pete got rid of dummy's last heart, ruffed in his own hand and claimed his game.

Spice Up Summer With A Saucy Bar-B-Q

An Expert Reveals His Culinary Secrets

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

Barbecue is a tradition in the South, but you don't have to be a Southerner to enjoy it. You just have to know what you're doing, take your time doing it and not mind messy fingers.

Chris Ray, a runner-up in the Herald's "Father of the Year" contest, former chief Assistant State Attorney in Sanford, and self-professed barbecue expert, knows how to do it so well that his skills are considered legendary among family and friends and all those fortunate enough to have wrapped their lips around some of his delectable edibles.

But such talent is not God-given. It takes practice, hours spent slaving over a hot grill in pursuit of the perfect barbecue. Ray says he performs his culinary artistry two or three times a week, and then thoroughly enjoys the fruits of his labors.

Barbecuing became a hobby with him after he got married 16 years ago. Born and bred in Florida, and a lover of barbecue all his life, he has certain unalterable rules for turning a hunk of meat into a bit of gastronomic heaven.

No fancy barbecue pit for him. Ray uses a regular old Sears-Roebuck grill, but any grill will do, he says, as long as it has a hood. The hood is important, he says, in order to keep the smoke in and, should things get out of hand, for smothering the fire. "You never use water to put a barbecue flame out," Ray warns. "When water hits the coals, soot comes up on the meat."

The second secret of good barbecue, he says, is to use an oak tree limb that is seven or eight inches long in combination with "not too much charcoal."

The oak limb should be green so that it smokes and doesn't burn. Ray explains that the "not too many coals" means 20-25 briquettes being used for a slab of ribs or two chicken halves.

The charcoal must be given about 30 minutes to turn ash white before the meat is put on the grill, Ray says.

Almost any kind of meat can be barbecued effectively. But, of course, you can't cook just any old fatty meat and expect it to taste great with sauce. For spare ribs, Ray suggests that the chef find the shorter boned variety at the market. "Usually they are meatier and juicier," he says.

Also good for barbecuing are: any standard pork roast or pork loin, chicken, eye round or sirloin tip or Boston butt, Ray says.

The quality of the fire, how long one cooks and how fast the meat is cooked are also important. Ray says he doesn't like to cook fast. He prefers cooking slow and long to turn out juicier meat; but that's also just an excuse to stand outside around the fire and avoid other chores like making the baked beans or setting the table.

For something like steak, you need a very hot fire. Rays says, adding with all meats doneness can be measured by touching.

"If the meat is spongy, it is rare, but not raw. The more firm the meat is the more done it is. You can cook thick sirloin and do it exactly as you wish by touching the meat," he says.

Seasoning is also important. "On most roasts such as pork loin, eye round or whatever, I use salt, garlic

Playboy's 'Hot Rocks' Glows With Potential

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Music video shows on cable and broadcast TV are growing faster than you can say "I want my MTV!"

Most have pretty much been knockoffs of MTV, leaving the viewer wondering why watch them when the original is around?

There's a new exception. It's on the Playboy Channel and it's called "Playboy's Hot Rocks" and it airs next on Sunday, Sept. 4. What makes this one-hour show — which, incidentally, was created by two former MTV execs — appealing is that it's thematically coherent.

Unlike other rock-video shows, it doesn't take a scatter-shot approach to its videos. You know what you're getting here. All videos shown on "Hot Rocks" must convey some sense of sensuality.

Since sex has always been an integral part of rock 'n' roll, the show has a world of material to choose from. Indeed, "Hot Rocks" casts a wide net; its moods range from romantic to erotic — from Marty Balin's sensual ballad "Hearts" to a bizarre ditty about an oversexed priest, Lorna Right's "The Teen-age Confession."

You will see some videos that the other shows feature, such as Diana Ross' "Muscles" or Queen's "Body Language", with a finite number of rock videos, one supposes that's an unavoidable problem. But you will also get to see some videos banned by MTV, such as the unexpurgated version of David Bowie's "China Girl." Then you'll see stuff that you'll never see anywhere else on TV, like Wet Picnic's "He Believes."

Also on the plus side: no annoying veejays. Each segment is glued together with animation. There are some dumb aspects, such as the tabloid-like tag lines introducing certain videos — "jiggle-lovers special" or "banned in Britain" — which tends to give a smarmy tone to some of the show.

On the whole, however, the show has kind of a lowbrow infectiousness about it. "Hot Rocks" provides modern-day make-out music, a video version of Johnny Mathis records.

But the rub here is if the show triggers the desired response in its viewers, who's gonna be able to keep their eyes on the screen?

'Eye On Hollywood' Bombs

By David Handler

Much has been said this summer about the MTV-style rock video shows popping up on regular TV. Most notable is NBC's Friday Night Videos, which runs after Carson on Fridays in the old SCTV slot and is produced by Dick Ebersol of Saturday Night Live. Syndicated and local offerings also can be found.

The shrinking audience is at the root of this. Free TV doesn't want to lose any more teenagers to fee TV, at least not without a good brawl. If it's rock video they want, it's rock video they'll get.

MTV has also left its mark on prime-time this summer. ABC has been running a five-week, half-hour magazine, Eye on Hollywood, which I think borrows from it in a far more profound fashion.

Eye on Hollywood hasn't ripped off the MTV format of running one video clip after another. It has taken the chic, New Wave style of those videos — the mesmerizing, rapid-fire cuts and dissolves and the relentless hard rock beat — and grafted it onto an otherwise conventional P.M. Magazine-style soft-info program.

This doesn't necessarily make Eye on Hollywood a good show. In fact, it doesn't. But it does make it the summer's most alarming experiment. After all, this is prime-time journalism that is all style and glimmer and no content. This is flashy, dizzying, overproduced air that passes itself off as a feature magazine.

Attention must be paid.

Our hosts are Chuck Henry, Tawny Schneider and Johnny Mountain. They are all young, attractive and casually attired. Chuck and Tawny drive from one story to the next in an open convertible.

Eye on Hollywood isn't so much about show business as it is about Southern California's pop culture and trendy lifestyle, though some celebrity interviews are thrown in.

So we do get to visit John and Bo Derek at their ranch. "She is," says John of Bo, "my existence."

And we do hear from Jennifer Beals of Flashdance and Cynthia Rhodes of Stayin' Alive and Pia Zadora of, um, who can remember anymore? "I love every minute of it," coos Pia.

But mostly we get these bizarre, revved-up, crazy-quilt "essays" on a variety of Southern California subjects, all of them familiar, all of them set to rock music.

I'm still in a state of shock from watching Eye on Hollywood. I jump when the phone rings. This isn't television, it's... it's... I don't know what it is. All I know is if there are any more shows like this we will no longer need fish tanks.

TV Moms Come In All Sizes And Descriptions

Jayne Meadows

By Elaine Thompson
When it comes to mom-roles on television, have the usual casting stereotypes won out?

Jayne Meadows says no. "Just look around," she says. "There's no one type in life, or on the screen."

Checking the record proves Jayne is right. Sada Thompson was opinionated and matronly on "Family," Michael Learned was properly simple on "The Waltons," yet clipped and chic on "Nurse." Bonnie Franklin has imbued her Ann Romano character on "One Day At a Time" with her zippy attractiveness as the daughters grew into full-fledged adults.

Nancy Dussault was perhaps initially the most baffled at being scouted as the mother of two grown daughters for "Too Close for Comfort," but now she blesses whoever thought of it. She got a second surprise, of course, when they fitted her with a pillow harness that called for her to look pregnant again.

Nancy says that "possibly because I've never had any children of my own, I didn't realize that time was passing," and wondered why the "young girl" roles she had always done were dwindling down.

If casting glamorous Jayne Meadows as the mother of Ken Howard in the new ABC series "It's Not Easy" caused some eyes to blink, her own navy blue orbs weren't among them.

In the series she keeps house for him, her divorced son, and they live across the street from his ex-wife and her new husband.

It's a situation on the new side to television plot lines, but one Miss Meadows has lived. Married to Steve Allen for 28 years, she laughs that at moments their big house looks like a haven for the zany. Sometimes costumed actors are using the dining room to rehearse. The robed religious-commune friends of Steve's oldest son use the upstairs as a crash pad when too many guests are over.

Jayne and Steve's son, Bill, is now 25. The house has also been home base for the three sons of his first marriage.

"At Christmas and holidays I always invited Steve's first wife to come with her current husband. She has married and divorced five times," says Jayne. "We were especially fond of her third husband, who was a builder. It was he who, when I wondered if anything could be done with that crawl space, built the top floor for us."

..Good Barbecue Takes Much Time And Practice

salt and coarse ground pepper. With ribs, I put garlic cloves about every third rib by poking a hole in the fat."

Ray cooks a pork roast generally three to four hours and puts the sauce on that last hour, basting periodically. Ray cooks chickens for 90 minutes and puts on the sauce for the last 40 minutes.

He usually prepares his own sauce, but occasionally buys a prepared sauce he loved as a boy. Ray says that when he was a youth of 14, he used to get barbecue ribs from a roadside stand in Eustis and begged for the sauce recipe from the proprietor, always to no avail.

However, a few years ago, the same man put the sauce on the market and one can find it at Sani's Portion Meats in Sanford across from Sanford Dry Cleaners. It can also be found at a grocery store in Mt. Dora where old Route 441 bends left going downtown. The store is on the left next to a Holiday House.

Ray's sauce recipe, which he has been using for 15 years, calls for a cup of white vinegar, two cups of water, two sticks of butter or margarine, half a tablespoon of salt, six tablespoons of sugar, two thick lemon slices, four tablespoons of prepared mustard, a touch of cayenne pepper, a touch of pepper and a large onion, cut in thick slices.

The ingredients are simmered for 20 minutes and then four cups of catsup, six to eight tablespoons of Worcestershire sauce, according to taste, and four or five drops of liquid smoke are added and the sauce allowed to return to a simmer for another 20 minutes.

Ray serves barbecue with baked beans and cole slaw, or macaroni and cheese, or with conch peas, similar to black-eyed peas, and greens.

Ray said he never serves dessert with his barbecue. Probably because after a feast like that, there's no room.

Place Your Bets; The Answers Follow

DEAR DICK: There are big steaks riding on your answer, so answer fast. Was Johnny Cash ever in jail or prison? — D.E., Manitowoc, Wis.

Only as an entertainer and speaker, not as a prisoner. People think he served time because he has done so much entertaining for prisoners, and because he wrote "Folsom Prison Blues." Although he has had some hard times, he has never done hard time. Incidentally, he says he wrote "Folsom Prison Blues" after seeing a movie about that prison.

DEAR DICK: When I was growing up, we would watch Shirley Temple movies. They would show them on TV every year. I'd see them often but still end up in tears. Now I have a little girl of my own and want to know if they will ever bring those movies back? — Mrs. L.N., Yacolt, Wash.

Not as prime-time specials, as they did in your younger days. They could still find a spot on some rerun series somewhere. You might ask your local station to run them, but probably they will never again be seen as a regular show on one of the networks.

Ask Dick

DEAR DICK: My husband and I have a long standing argument about the origin of the song "Mariah." He said it was written for the original stage play "Paint Your Wagon." I thought it had been written and sung before that. — K.C., Carl Junction, Mo.

Hubby wins this one. Lerner and Loewe wrote "They Call the Wind Mariah," to give that lovely song its official name, for the stage musical.

DEAR DICK: In the movie "Thief of Bagdad," with Tony Curtis and Piper Laurie, she played an acrobat. I have a bet with my sister who says she performed her own contortions and I say they used a stunt woman. — T.B., Saginaw, Mich.

You win. Piper is a talented lady, but doing contortions is not among her repertoire of special skills.

DEAR DICK: My wife and I have a little bet. She says Anne Murray is around 22 years old and hasn't sung too long. I say she is in her 40s and has been singing for a long time. Who's right, me or her? — L.D.E., Kalamazoo, Mich.

Me is right, or at least you are more right than her. Anne was born in 1945, she was 38 in June. She has been singing professionally for some 20 years already, and seems to get better every year.

Second Generation Carrying Out Family Tradition At Carlo's Restaurant (Pizzeria)

Entering Carlo's Restaurant is like stepping back into tradition. Paul Bairo is a second generation owner-operator of this Italian restaurant located eight years at its 1008 South French Avenue, Sanford, address.

Although steeped in his family's tradition of fine Italian cooking, Paul has picked up a few "trade secrets" as a chef in New York City. His special touches are notable in the many dishes all of which are begun with quality imported foods, oils and seasonings.

The delicacy of the recipes is detectable to the diner's nose as he awaits arrival of his order in the cozy, red-checked atmosphere of the restaurant.

For a 52-seat restaurant, Carlo's menu is lengthy. If your taste runs to veal, whether it be scallopini or parmigiana, you can count on a fresh, select cut of meat properly prepared in a special breading and served with tender cooked peppers and mushrooms. Imported wines bring truth to the flavors.

A blend of three cheeses produces the creamy sauce Alfredo for fettuccini, which, with salad and garlic bread calls for a $7.50 tab.

Paul's antipasto is a combination of Italian spiced meats, provolone cheese, green and black olives on a bed of lettuce with just the right seasoning and the house Italian or another choice dressing.

Carlo's New York style pizza has a thin, crisp crust that is moist. The special sauce is topped with whole milk mozzarella and a choice of garnishes. The restaurant offers both round and the square Sicilian pizzas.

Paul's wife, Debbie, will greet you at the door Monday through Friday beginning at 11 with a choice from six lunch specials and in the evening until 10 through the week and 11 on Fridays. Dinners start at $3.65.
