Schools will open tomorrow

The Seminole County public schools and all business operations for the school district will be open on Thursday. They are closed for business today because of Hurricane Floyd. The school district is assessing any damage from the hurricane to assure safe schools for students' return. No major damage has been found in initial assessments, said Dianne Kramer, director of facilities and planning. Seminole Community College will also be open for classes on Thursday.

State of Emergency declared

President Bill Clinton on Tuesday declared an emergency exists in Florida and ordered Federal aid to supplement state and local recovery efforts in the area impacted by Hurricane Floyd.

The President's action authorizes FEMA to coordinate all disaster relief efforts, and to provide assistance for emergency measures, to save lives, protect property and public health and safety, or to lessen or avert the threat of a catastrophe in the counties of Broward, Brevard, Dade, Duval, Flagler, Indian River, Martin, Nassau, Palm Beach, St. Johns, St. Lucie, and Volusia.

Public comments sought on refuge policy

The US Fish & Wildlife Service is seeking public comment through Nov. 8 on draft compatibility policy and regulations affecting recreation and other public uses on units of America's 93 million acre National Wildlife Refuge System.

The refuge system has nearly 35 million visitors each year. The draft policy outlines a standard process to review the impacts of proposed and existing public use. Public uses that are determined by refuge managers to be incompatible will not be allowed.

The review is required by the 1997 National Wildlife Refuge System Improvement Act. The 1997 law also established "priority public uses," such as hunting, fishing, wildlife observation and photography, environmental education and interpretation, that receive preference over other uses.

Close call

Floyd heads north, misses Florida coast

By Joe DeSantis
Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County public safety officials breathed a collective sigh of relief Wednesday morning as Hurricane Floyd remained far enough off Florida's east coast to spare the county any significant damage.

"We dodged a big bullet and for Seminole County, that's great news," said Seminole County fire chief Terry Schenk. "We received sustained winds of 25 miles per hour overnight with gusts up to 40 miles per hour, but nothing compared to what it could have been like."

Director of Emergency

Management John Blackwood echoed Schenk assessment.

"What a difference 24-hours can make," said an understandably tired Blackwood. "We hope to be able to de-escalate to status level 2 by Wednesday afternoon. I'm happy with how things have gone so far, now we have to finish up."

"It looked for some time that we had the huge potential for loss of life, infrastructure damage, building damage," he added.

"People's lives could have been impacted for weeks, months and years. There are still some people settling up matters from Hurricane Andrew, and that's been seven years ago."

The waters of Lake Monroe became very choppy and had some small whitecaps as winds picked up Tuesday.

Samantha Banker and her father Daniel dash for cover from the rains and gusting winds. The Bankers are from Richmond, Va. and were vacationing in Daytona until Floyd forced them to an emergency shelter at Lake Mary High School.

Sanford commission approves condemnation of Ridgewood

By Bill Kerns
Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Sanford City Commission on Monday unanimously voted to condemn the troubled Ridgewood Villas apartments and condominiums.

All 60 units of Ridgewood Villas, located at 2580 Ridgewood Avenue near Seminole High School, were condemned. The condemnation also included the clubhouse, pool, shed, and common areas in the complex.

Next month, the commission will vote on demolition of the complex. If demolition is approved, the city will seek bids from private companies to perform the demolition, said Charles Rowe, director of the Community Development Department.

The bidding process would take approximately 30 days, Rowe said.

Meanwhile, despite the condemnation and a recent fire in two vacant units that the State Fire Marshalls Office considers suspicious and is continuing to investigate, a non-profit builder of affordable housing is still interested in purchasing and renovating the Ridgewood Villas.

Central Florida HANDS of Orlando is continuing to negotiate with multiple owners of Ridgewood Villas apartments to purchase the complex.

Steve Chitwood, President of Central Florida HANDS Realty, said that once an agreement is in place, the organization would spend at least $600,000 to renovate the complex.

"We are definitely still interested," Chitwood said. "We just haven't reached an agreement with the owners yet."

Couple face additional charges for child porn

By Joe DeSantis
Staff Writer

SANFORD — A Seminole County couple, arrested last Friday on charges of lewd and lascivious acts on children, faced additional charges at their initial appearance in Seminole County court over the weekend.

William Eades, 46, and Bonnie Eades, 29, remain at the John F. Polk Correctional Facility under no bond after authorities filed charges of capital sexual battery and sexual performances on a child during a Saturday arraignment.

The pair were arrested Friday after Seminole County investigators received information from a number of juveniles that the Eadeses had sex in front of minors, photographed female teens in sexually explicit poses, and forced under-aged girls to perform sex acts under the threat of physical punishment.

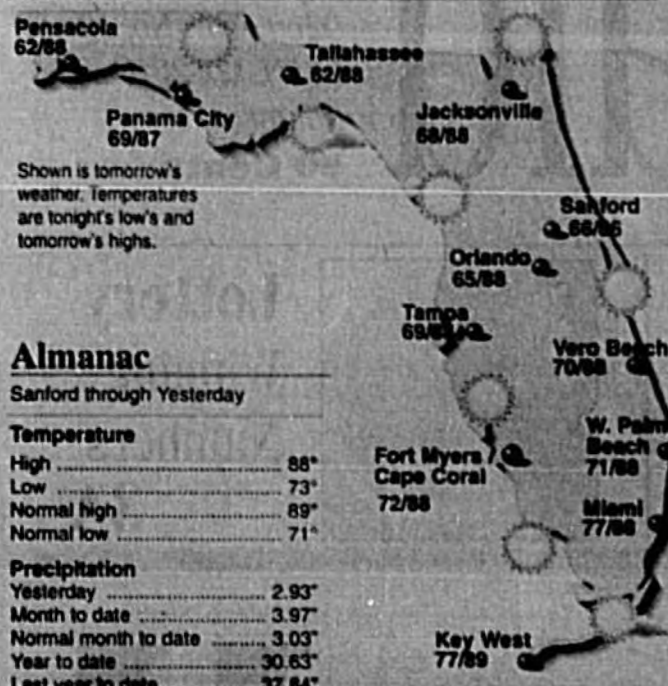

A number of witnesses, one as young as 10 years old, informed authorities that Bonnie Eades would meet

A whisper in the night wind - far, far away

By now, the wife and I have reached Spuzzum. That means we're beyond Hope, headed for Tulameen, British Columbia. We'll stop in Princeton, B.C. where my wife, DeeDee, was born.

Then, we'll negotiate 17 miles along a narrow Cascades Mountain road leading into the valley of Tulameen. There are 1,000-foot drops off the dirt road - and a quick and fatal trip into the Smilkameen River.

I've never understood how my wife ever left Tulameen. She grew up in a log cabin a couple hundred yards from tiny but enchanting Otter Lake. My wife's sister, Trudy, killed bear when she was only three. I imagine DeeDee thrilled a bear when she was three.

Legend is that the gentleman train robber Bill Miner used to hide from the Mounties in several areas of British Columbia. Miner was a latter day Robin Hood. He was always polite to those he robbed. He was generous, too to the folks who helped him hide.

Russ White

An adventurous movie director studied up on Miner awhile back and released a very pleasing film called "The Grey Fox." You can find it at most movie rental shops. Many of the "Grey Fox" scenes were shot in Tulameen and also in Kamloops, B.C. September is a lovely time to be in northwest British Columbia. The trees have begun to change colors. The air is crisp and clean. There are logging trucks on the Hope-Princeton Highway. Winter will arrive soon. The temperature at night has dropped into the 40s.

The Indians named Tulameen for its serenity. The Indian women and children stayed in Tulameen while the men hunted. The area remains a popular with hunters and fishermen. There used to be gold and copper mines here. Tulameen and Coalmont eventually became ghost towns. They built up slowly. No more than two dozen people lived in Tulameen 50 years ago. Several hundred are here now, more are on the way.

The dramatic contrast between Seminole County and British Columbia leaves me breathless at times. There's a whisper in the night wind and stars singing an anthem of glory tonight in the Cascades. What is it like 2,000 plus miles away? What do you hear this night?

Russ White is on vacation this week. The Seminole Herald will run the "Boys of Rain" on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Editorial & Opinion

Please Pat, don't leave the party

Dear Pat Buchanan: You and I have been friends for some time. You are a model of conviction and personal integrity. So far as I know, you have never allowed a focus group or opinion poll to help you form your convictions.

You are now flirting with the Reform Party, whose chief contribution to American political history is that it kept a Republican from winning the White House the last two election cycles and elected a man for whom a minority of Americans voted. This man, Bill Clinton, has named two liberal justices to the Supreme Court and contemptuously treated the highest office Americans can bestow on a fellow countryman.

You are absolutely correct when you say, as you did on "Meet the Press" last Sunday, that the Republican Party "at the national level has become a Xerox copy basically of the Democratic Party I think what we have is a one-party system in Washington that is masquerading as a two-party system, and I think what we need is a real opposition party." And you make a point worthy of consideration when you write in your new book, "A Republic, Not an Empire": "I sought to persuade my party that the course on which ..... America had embarked was replicating, with alarming exactitude, the course that brought the British Empire to ruin What was most frustrating was to discover in my own party a reflexive hostility to any dissent on foreign policy."

The party needs the debate you bring to it, Pat. Flee and it won't happen.

My concern is that you will surely go the way of Ross Perot, should you decide to run as the Reform Party's presidential candidate. Time magazine carries a Frank Luntz poll this week that indicates you will get about 6 percent of the vote, not enough to win but possibly enough to keep the Republican nominee from winning and handing the election to the Democratic nominee. A Democratic president will name enough justices to the Supreme Court to guarantee liberal political and social dominance in this country for another four decades. Would you like that to be your legacy? I think you love your country too much to contribute to that nightmare.

Here's a suggestion. Stay in the Republican Party for one more election. If your party holds its congressional majority while winning the White House, you can and should expect it to make good on its promises of significantly lowering taxes, substantially reducing the size and reach of government, offering school choice, seriously addressing the social issues and articulating a foreign policy that considers American interests first. If the GOP fails to follow through when it has government under its political control, then you should make for the door, and I will be among those cheering you on.

I agree with you that America is over-extended around the world, fighting and paying for other people's battles while ignoring jobs lost when corporations take them overseas. But not enough Americans are where you are on this. Going the third-party route will mean you won't persuade sufficient numbers to come with you in next year's election, but you will take enough votes away from the Republican nominee to possibly thwart his election chances.

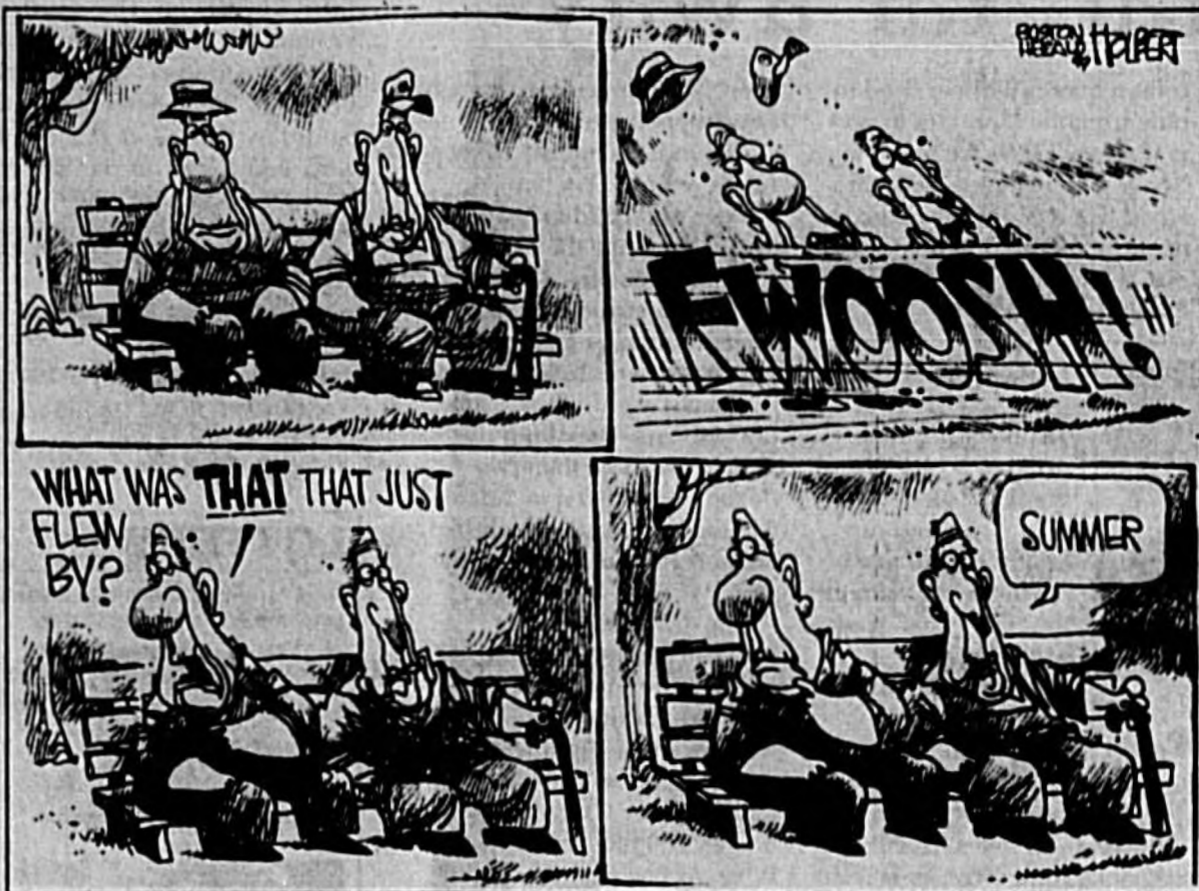

Do you think any Republican president would be worse than Al Gore or Bill Bradley? Gov. George W. Bush says he believes he'll take most of the conservatives with him, but he could be underestimating your threat and the growing fed-upness of the Republican letdown in Congress.

Pat, if you go third party and follow the debacle of Ross Perot's two candidacies, you will marginalize yourself into insignificance, as Sen. Bob Smith of New Hampshire has done with his withdrawal into independent status. Stay in the party and perhaps you can bring it home to the beliefs of Ronald Reagan. Leave it and you create a vacuum that few others can fill.

C'mon, Pat. One more time, not just for the Gipper, but for the republic.

There's blame to go around in Cisneros's case

Rupert Murdoch, CEO of News Corp. and the godfather of sleazy tabloid journalism, says politicians should not expect any zone of privacy. Maybe not. Maybe reporters are just doing what is required of them when they hound public figures about extramarital relationships, use of illegal narcotics, use of legal narcotics and shoe size.

With 24-hour newscasts, the fusion of politics and celebrity, and the currency of confessional TV, there may be no way to turn back the clock to a time when a governor or senator or president could conduct an illicit affair discreetly.

But even in this age, politicians ought to be able to expect that they will not be hounded from office — political careers in ruins — and pursued by an overzealous independent counsel over an adulterous affair concluded years earlier and already publicly confessed. That is what happened to Henry Cisneros.

After an investigation lasting four years and costing $9 million, Cisneros ended up pleading guilty recently to a single misdemeanor count of lying to the FBI — in response to questions, incidentally, that the law enforcement agency had no business asking (unless an adulterous affair is a federal crime). Cisneros will pay a fine of $10,000 and a $25 court fee, but he is not precluded from running from office.

Of course, the one-time rising political star — formerly mayor of San Antonio, now CEO of Univision, a Spanish-language network — may no longer have any enthusiasm for public service after the persecution he has endured. If the foolish chase after Bill Clinton's womanizing had not killed the independent counsel law, the pursuit of Cisneros would have. Indeed, the case against Cisneros was less compelling than the case against Clinton, who led in a civil deposition related to a sexual harassment suit. But independent counsel David Barrett, like too many of his peers in the position, lost all perspective. He went after Cisneros for lying in FBI background interviews conducted in late 1992 and early 1993 about the amount of money he had given his former lover, Linda Jones. In the process, Barrett crucified not only Cisneros but also the prosecution's star witness, Jones. When she didn't turn out to be the damning witness against Cisneros that Barrett had hoped for, he put the classic squeeze on her, prosecuting her on a bank fraud charge for which she is serving a prison sentence of 3 1/2 years.

All this over a love affair. In the four years during which Cisneros served as Clinton's secretary of housing and urban development, he was not accused of any corruption related to his office. There were no charges of massive fraud of the sort that dogged the tenure of Samuel Pierce, who headed HUD in the Reagan presidency. No allegations of cronyism or influence-peddling. No charges of ineptitude or wasteful spending. By all accounts, Cisneros was struggling to shape up HUD's unwieldy bureaucracy.

But didn't Cisneros lie to the FBI? And isn't that a serious offense?

Serious enough that a misdemeanor charge and fine are about right. Any prosecutor should have been able to come to that conclusion in under-age females at the Adult High School at Seminole Community College, invite them to the couples' Red Lion Square apartment in Winter Park, and then engage them in a number of sexual activities.

During Friday's arrest, authorities confiscated computers, photography equipment including a digital camera, and a video camera after searching the Eadeses home.

One witness told investigators the pair would threaten, and if necessary, slap the juvenile girls if they refused to engage in sex acts and pose for the pair. They also told authorities that the Eadeses would often have sex with their bedroom door open or in the living room while some of the victims were made to watch.

Authorities also found pornographic pictures in the home, but at this point in the investigation, authorities do not believe the Eadeses were marketing or selling material depicting the young girls.

In an audio taped interview Friday, Bonnie Eades indicated that she had grabbed and touched the buttocks and breasts of one young girl and had watched juveniles perform sex acts on each other while William Eades took pictures. She also admitted to police that she and William had engaged in sexual acts with different girls who they admittedly knew were under the age of 18.

William Eades admitted to authorities that he took pictures of the juveniles, but denied having touched them.

Authorities believe the under-age sex acts took place over a period dating back at least four months. They plan to continue interviewing possible additional victims involved in

Lake Mary Commissioners unopposed

LAKE MARY - No one qualified to run against Lake Mary City Commissioners Al Crump or George Duryea on Friday, meaning that the two commissioners will both serve another term.

"It's a relief," Crump said. "It's a luxury I wasn't expecting to have. I rushed down to the elections office to check on who qualified, and I was so relieved."

Duryea will serve his seventh two-year term, and Crump is entering his second term. Lake Mary commissioners are paid $400 per month.

However, the commission faces at least one change in 2000. Mayor David Mealar, whose term ends in November of 2000, is seeking election to the State House of Representatives.

Commissioner Gary Brender said that he intends to run for mayor. Deputy Mayor Thom Greene has also expressed an interest in running for mayor.

Mealar was elected the Mayor of Lake Mary in 1996. He had previously served as a Lake Mary City Commissioner since 1988.

the case. Two of the teens have been placed into protective custody with Children and Families social service agency.

William Eades has no previous criminal record. Bonnie Eades, whose previous employer was listed as Bored Housewives escort service, has previously been arrested on drug and prostitution charges.

Only building two of the complex remained open prior to condemnation. The other four of the five buildings had been closed by the city because of unpaid water bills.

On Aug. 30, a fire broke out in two units of building four. Emergency officials were able to contain the fire within 30 minutes, and no one was injured. The fire erupted at about 9:30 p.m. in the second story of building four, which has been vacated by the City of Sanford because of unpaid water bills. Only one of the five buildings in the 60-unit complex remains open.

Sanford Fire Department inspectors said there may have been some structural damage to the building. Inspectors said the cause of the fire is being investigated, and appears suspicious in nature.

"Our understanding was based upon situations before (Monday's fire)," Chittwood said.

A state health and safety inspector issued a closure notice on the complex July 7 because of code violations. However, condemnation was left up to the city.

Because there are condominiums as well as apartments in the complex, multiple owners will be involved in condemnation procedures. The state revoked the licenses for owners of the complex on July 7 following the health and safety inspection.

Central Florida HANDS also owns the Lake Jennie apartments near Seminole High School.

With fingers crossed and Floyd behaving as computer models predicted, the Category 4 hurricane with sustained winds of 155 miles per hour took a more northerly course late Tuesday afternoon, remaining 100 to 125 miles off Cape Canaveral and sparing Seminole County anticipated tropical force winds and flooding rain. Brevard County appeared to have been the hardest hit area in Florida, sustaining pounding winds of 120 to 140 miles per hour and hours after hours of driving rain. Early Wednesday afternoon Floyd was taking aim off the Carolinas and was predicted to hit Louisiana or Charleston, S.C.

Floyd, which prompted Florida Gov. Jeb Bush to declare all of Florida's 67 counties in a state of emergency and President Bill Clinton to place the state on Federal State of Emergency status, was expected to leave the Central Florida area entirely by late Wednesday afternoon, leaving behind just some wind gusts and sporadic shower activity across the Central Florida area.

By 8 a.m. Wednesday Seminole County emergency management authorities rescinded its mandatory evacuation order for mobile home residents and residents living in manufactured housing. Although the order was officially lifted, authorities still cautioned Seminole County residents to use caution in returning home and advised evacuees from coastal areas to remain in shelter facilities until conditions improved.

Between late Monday afternoon and Tuesday, Seminole County officials opened a total of nine shelters, including three for special needs residents. Some 1,400 county residents spent Tuesday night at a shelter, including 750 with special needs. The Red Cross provided some 2,000 meals to those seeking safety.

We still have some substantial issues with coastal evacuees and with damage assessment, said Blackwood at the 8 a.m. status briefing.

County officials reported that as far as Seminole County's infrastructure was concerned, Floyd spared the local area significant damage beyond what we might normally see during a summer thunderstorm.

The county reported no loss of water service, minimal short-term power outages, no reports of downed power lines, and no major road closures or blockage of major intersections affected by imperative traffic lights.

We were very lucky, but we were also very prepared," said Kevin Grace, Seminole County Manager. "The roads are clear and the utilities are working. We don't expect too much damage in the county. We're aware of a couple of minor problems, but those are few and far between."

County services were scheduled to remain closed Wednesday as well as the Seminole County School District. All services were expected to be open for regular operation by Thursday morning.

Schenk said tropical force winds should be leaving the Central Florida area by 11 a.m. Wednesday.

It will remain breezy for the next day or two, but we're in good shape now," Schenk said.

He added that forecasters are now keeping a wary eye on Hurricane Gert, upgraded to a Category 3 storm Tuesday.

Gert is traveling in an area where Floyd initially became a concern for Florida. Depending on what happens in the next 48-hour forecast, we could be back in the Emergency Operations Center early next week.

Hurricane recovery tips for businesses

Getting a business up and running quickly after a natural disaster can be crucial to keeping your customers. Lucent Technologies, which specializes in communications and computer technology, has the following tips for recovering your business from Hurricane Floyd.

AVOID POWER SURGE DAMAGE

Electrical power surges that can occur when current is restored after an outage can damage PBXs (telephone switching systems) and other electronic office equipment. If your electrical power is out, unplug your office equipment and wait until after the power is restored to plug it back in and switch it on. If you are planning to use an electrical generator, it is best to have an uninterruptible power supply (UPS) between the generator and your telephone. The UPS will regulate the power being fed to your system by the generator and shield your equipment from possible sporadic power surges as the area's electrical power grid is being repaired.

DRY OUT YOUR ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT

If your office equipment became wet during a storm, make sure it is completely dry before switching it on. Switching on power to wet circuitry can cause damage. To dry out computer equipment, do the following:

- Unplug your computer, remove its cover and use a hair dryer to evaporate any moisture inside. (You can remove the cover of most PCs by loosening four screws in the back or sides.) You can also use a hair dryer on keyboards and monitors (CRTs). If your equipment fell in a storm or was moved, this is a good time to make sure all the components are well seated in their slots and check for loose connections.

Be aware, though, that heat from a hair dryer can damage backup tapes and diskettes. Therefore, allow them to air dry for two or three days before inserting them into a machine. You can try simple do-it-yourself methods first, but there are companies that specialize in such media.

If your PC doesn't work after its "drying out," don't despair. You may still be able to retrieve the data from your hard drive by moving the drive into a working PC. (You might need a "service representative's" help for this step.) Remember to gather up all your scattered diskettes or tapes.

They can be. Surprisingly resilient and your backups may help you get up and working quickly.

USE FLEXIBLE COMMUNICATIONS TO SERVE YOUR CUSTOMERS

If your normal work location is out of commission, talk with your local and long-distance telephone companies about rerouting the calls you make and receive (including 800 number calls) to a temporary or new location. If necessary, you can contract with a telemarketing center to receive the calls.

Use a telephone business calling card. This allows you to work from any telephone and still have the card billed to your business account. You'll also have a detailed account of your toll calls.

Use network teleconferencing to hold telephone meetings. Check with your long-distance company for services that require no special equipment. You can use these services to conduct conference calls with people in your local area or from around the country using regular telephones. One such service is called Lucent Teleconference Service (1-888-252-7228).

When disaster strikes, Bill Stewart feeds the hungry

By Dan Ping
Editor

SANFORD — Bill Stewart's a popular man.

Just ask the folks at the Emergency Operations Center (EOC) located in the Seminole County Sheriff's Office facility. For the men and women who ensure the county's resources are available throughout emergency situations — natural or otherwise — Stewart is the man who makes sure everyone gets fed.

As a sergeant in the Salvation Army, providing food during times of need is nothing new to Stewart. But he doesn't limit himself to feeding hunger in the belly. When disaster strikes, often it's the hunger of the soul that people crave.

"A lot of people turn to God," when hurricanes and other natural disasters strike, Stewart observed. "Some turn away."

Either way, Stewart tries to feed their spirit. Such is the nature of the calling when you are a soldier in the Army. Unlike other agencies that provide relief services, the Salvation Army focuses on spirituality in everything it does, from feeding the hungry to sheltering the homeless.

"That's what we're about," Stewart said. "When you become involved with the Salvation Army, it's usually because God has called you to do it. It becomes your life."

Stewart said the public is aware of the Army's spiritual aspects and seeks them out during times of tragedy.

"You actually get some people who are mad about what has happened and come looking for you," he said. "They're mad at God and want to know why these things happen."

How does Stewart comfort those people? Surprisingly, the same way he comforts everyone.

"You listen. It's not always important to have an answer. In fact in many of these situations, they mainly just want someone to listen."

An 18-year veteran in the Salvation Army, Stewart has listened — and seen — just about everything.

Stewart was there after Hurricane Andrew, he assisted with the relief effort during last year's wild fires, and he recently traveled to Oklahoma to help clean up after the tornadoes. In fact, it was the tornadoes that brought him to Sanford. Stewart and his wife moved to Seminole County to help rebuild homes for those who lost them to the twisters.

Each situation is different. Circumstances are varied, but Stewart has noticed there are always those willing to sacrifice.

"The ones who go through the devastation are often the ones who are reaching out, even as they have suffered great losses," Stewart said.

Asked why some react in such a manner, Stewart has a simple answer — "They're just reflecting God's loving."

"I've seen some hard people in my life, but when you see someone in pain, it breaks them down," he said. "They reach out to help."

And when they do, Stewart will be there to feed their hunger.

Hurricane Gert could crash Florida coast within the week

By Dan Ping
Editor

SANFORD — Hurricane Floyd didn't deliver the devastating blow to Central Florida many expected, but you may not want to take down the plywood just yet.

Hurricane Gert is following the same path Floyd took to the east coast of Florida, and forecasters say if the effects of Floyd don't push weather systems further out into the Atlantic Ocean, Central Floridians can expect to batten down the hatches once again.

During an 11 p.m. Tuesday briefing, Seminole County Fire Chief and meteorologist Jerry Schenk informed county emergency personnel that Gert is just shy of a Category 4 hurricane and picking up speed as it heads west. While Gert could deliver a second blow to the east coast of Florida, the possibility exists that hurricane could be pushed out to sea.

As Schenk explained, hurricanes coming off the western coast of Africa follow along the southern edge of the Bermuda High, a weather formation in the Atlantic Ocean that extends westerly toward the North American continent. As weather systems in the United States move easterly across the continent, they force the Bermuda High away from the coast. This creates a through between the east coast and the Bermuda High where hurricanes travel.

As Floyd moves up the east coast along this through, Schenk said the hurricane could shove the Bermuda High further into the Atlantic Ocean. If that happens, Schenk said it could force Hurricane Gert to further into the ocean as well.

Schenk cautioned, however, that it is too early to predict where Gert will head.

Cup of Joe anyone?

Hurricane Floyd did not prevent some business owners from trying to capitalize on the storm. Bart Hush, owner of the Celery City Coffee Shop, used the plywood put up to protect his business as a form of advertisement.

Preparing for the storm

Brenda from the Home Depot helps Sheila Segars and her brother Mark Knight load up plywood Tuesday afternoon. The brother-sister duo were lucky to find and streets left as central Florida residents quickly bought the lumber in anticipation of Hurricane Floyd.

WIN AT BRIDGE

More bridge author's license

By Phillip Alder

This is the third deal from Alan Hiron's interesting article in the June issue of Bridge Magazine. He discussed the various possibilities when one holds either K-x opposite J-x, or K-x-x opposite J-x.

As with yesterday's deal, this one features contorted bidding to get South into the contract Hiron wished to discuss. How should the auction proceed?

Against five diamonds, West leads the spade queen; after ruffing, East switches to a low heart. What should South do now?

Opening with a weak two-bid usually shows only a six-card suit. Yet starting with a three-spade bid when vulnerable and holding nothing higher than a queen isn't everyone's choice.

Some would compromise by passing. (I feel this is a matter of personal or partnership style.) Whatever West does, three no-trump should be the final contract, made with at least one overtrick. (After two spades, North passes, South balances with two no-trump, and North raises.)

East ruffs the spade-queen lead at trick one, then returns the heart four. (For tournament play: In a match-pointed pair event, East should cash the heart ace at trick two. It should be clear that three no-trump is making, probably with an overtrick, so holding declarer to his contract — plus 600 — cannot be bad, and will outscore all these East-West pairs conceding 630.)

If West wins this trick, another spade ruff will defeat the contract. So, South must go up with the heart king, maximizing his chance of keeping West off the lead. When the king wins, declarer draws trumps and claims.

ASK DR. GOTT

Take steps to combat loneliness

DEAR DR. GOTT: Because of Alzheimer's disease, my husband is confined to a nursing home. I'm 84 and live alone. For the past few months, I have been disturbed by my increasing isolation. I've stopped seeing my friends, stay at home watching daytime TV, skip church, feel sick most of the time, and find that I have increasing trouble breathing. What do you suggest I do?

DEAR READER: Your situation is complex. Certainly, your husband's Alzheimer's disease is playing a role but, I suspect, there may also be a physical component to your symptoms.

In a very real sense, you have lost a valued partner. Alzheimer's disease has effectively removed your husband from your life. This understandably has resulted in a grieving process, depression and loneliness. I am not surprised that you are experiencing a sense of helplessness.

Yet I am equally concerned about your physical health. Feeling "sick" and breathless may reflect an undiagnosed ailment, such as anemia or heart failure, that should be addressed.

Therefore, I have four suggestions that will help you to regain control of your life.

First of all, see your doctor for a check up. In my opinion, you need an examination and testing to discover any hidden diseases. At the same time, the physician should assess your emotional state. If you are suffering from depression, appropriate prescription medicine may be in order.

Second, while you're awaiting your appointment, begin to attend church. A person's spiritual life is important and, by the sound of things, yours needs some fine-tuning. I am sure that your pastor would be eager to include you in church activities, such as Bible study and various meetings that would get you out of the house and involve you in stimulating enterprises. For example, one of my local churches subsidizes the Older Women's League, a splendid organization that supplies food to the needy. OWL provides as much benefit for its members as it does for its recipients.

Third, pick up the telephone and call a friend. Ask her over for tea or to accompany you to a movie. You are not alone in your loneliness. There are many elderly men and women in your situation who would welcome such contact from a friend or acquaintance.

Finally, consider attending an Alzheimer's support group. Your telephone yellow pages or local newspaper should contain the whereabouts of such an organization in your community.

Despite the fact that you are 84, there is much life to be lived and enjoyed. Therefore, I encourage you to reach out to your physician, to your church and to other people who can help you.

Feed the kids a tasty, healthy snack after school

When I am counting the ways in which I have totally failed as a parent, food is high on the list. I vowed that my children would grow up loving vegetables, clamoring for broiled fish, eschewing white bread, and snacking on dried fruits and nuts. I personally know many parents whose kids do all of the above. Plus, they floss. I know lots of others, though, whose kids, like mine, consider a peanut-butter-and-jelly sandwich to be the ideal lunch, who prefer neon cereal with marshmallows in it to granola, and who think fish are born in the shape of a stick.

Feeding the kids a healthy snack, if nothing else, will ease your conscience when you slap those fish sticks on the table at supper time. On the weekend, of course, you'll start on that court bouillon.

FOOD
MARIALISA CALTA

2 tablespoons brown sugar, or to taste
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
assorted sliced seasonal fruits, sprinkled with lemon juice to prevent discoloration if they are not going to be eaten for a while

Stir the yogurt, zest, orange-juice concentrate (if using), sugar and vanilla together until well-combined. You can serve this dip right away, but it is better if chilled for at least an hour. Serve with a platter of fruit for dipping, or serve the fruit in bowls and pour the sauce over. Yield: 1 cup.

— Recipe adapted from "Stonyfield Farm Yogurt Cookbook," by Meg Cadoux Hirschberg (Three Rivers Press, 1999)

YOGURT DIP FOR VEGGIES

3/4 cup plain yogurt
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 teaspoon dried dill weed
1 teaspoon celery salt
1 small clove garlic, peeled and crushed in a garlic press
3/4 teaspoon freshly squeezed lemon juice
assorted peeled and sliced vegetables, such as carrots, cucumbers, celery sticks and bell peppers

Combine the yogurt, mayonnaise, dill, celery salt, garlic and lemon juice, and stir until well-mixed. Serve immediately or chill. Serve with assorted vegetables and use as a dip. (This can also be used as a salad dressing or over baked potatoes). Yield: about 1-3/4 cups.

— Recipe from "Stonyfield Farm

Yogurt Cookbook," by Meg Cadoux Hirschberg (Three Rivers Press, 1999)

QUESADILLAS

8 ounces grated cheese (cheddar or Monterey Jack or other)
8 6- or 8-inch flour tortillas
1/2 cup tomato salsa (optional)
chopped chili peppers, sweet bell peppers, or green onions (optional)

Place one tortilla on a microwave-safe plate and sprinkle with 1/4 of the cheese (a generous quarter cup). Put a few spoonfuls of salsa, and/or chopped peppers and green onions on top, if desired. Top with another tortilla. Microwave at High for about a minute, or until cheese melts. Remove from microwave (careful, they will be very hot) and repeat for remaining tortillas.

You can also make this on the stove-top: Lightly grease a skillet, heat it and slip the quesadillas into the hot pan. Cook for 2 to 3 minutes. Turn over and cook another minute or so, until cheese is melted. Remove and serve immediately. Yield: 4 servings.

NUTS AND BOLTS

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons canola oil
4 cups bite-sized, unsweetened shredded wheat cereal garlic powder, to taste
1-1/2 cups thin pretzel sticks or pretzel nuggets
1/2 cup dry-roasted peanuts
1/2 cup raisins

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a heavy, cast-iron skillet, melt the butter until it begins to brown. Add the oil. Add the shredded wheat and toss well to coat. Sprinkle with garlic powder to taste and toss again.

Bake for 15 minutes, shaking occasionally.

Remove from oven, and transfer shredded wheat to a bowl. Add pretzels, peanuts and raisins and toss. Store in an airtight container in the refrigerator. Yield: 8 snack portions.

— Recipe from "Good Food," by Wendy Martin, published in 1999 by the Central Vermont Community Action Council, Barre, Vt.

HANNAH'S SMOOTHIES

1 small (4-ounce) container flavored yogurt — peach, strawberry or vanilla works well
1 frozen banana, peeled under hot running water and cut into chunks
1 cup orange juice
1 peach, peeled
a handful of fresh or frozen strawberries, if needed

Put everything in the blender. Process until smooth. Taste and sweeten with honey, if desired. Yield: 1 very large drink, or 2 smaller ones.

— Recipe from my daughter, Hannah Van Susteren.

CITRUS YOGURT SAUCE

1 cup plain yogurt
1 teaspoon grated orange zest
2 to 3 teaspoons frozen orange-juice concentrate (optional)

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a well-known surgeon, and we have two beautiful children together. One morning we awoke and made love.

Then he went off to the hospital and I left to do some errands. When I returned later in the day I was shocked to find that our house had been burglarized - the furniture, artwork, electronic equipment had all been taken.

I called my husband's office to tell him the bad news, and his receptionist told me my husband was not available and gave me the number of his attorney. When I called the lawyer, I was told to come to the office to sign some settlement papers - there was a check for $20,000 waiting for me that I could have if I agreed to give up custody of the children. When I called my husband's parents, who are prominent people in this community, they urged me to take it and leave the state so my husband could have a happy life with a new wife. Needless to say, I was in shock.

ADVICE COLUMNIST

Dear Abby

When I tried to hire a lawyer to represent me, I discovered that my credit cards had been revoked and our bank accounts had been cleaned out.

Abby, I never saw this coming. Do you think I'm right to stay and fight for my children?

IN SHOCK AND HEARTBROKEN DEAR IN SHOCK AND HEARTBROKEN: You have my respect for deciding to fight for your children against such odds, and I hope you prevail. Your husband must be a brilliant surgeon to have amputated a beating heart and left the subject viable enough for a custody battle.

Your unfortunate predicament demonstrates how important it is for a married woman to have credit and sole access to a sum of money to tide her over in case of the sudden death of a spouse or, God forbid, desertion. It's one of today's realities.

DEAR ABBY: "R.I.P'd Off" in Walla Walla, Wash." complained that his father's grave has only a military marker and no gravestone. He also stated that the marker was sinking. He felt the fact that his father didn't have a gravestone was a sign of disrespect, but was unsure about approaching his mother about it.

Abby, the bronze marker he referred to was provided by the Department of Veterans Affairs. Those markers are attractive. When my mother passed away, we purchased a bronze marker for her that matches those of my father and brother - both veterans.

If the marker is indeed sinking, he should contact the caretakers of the cemetery. They are responsible for ensuring that the grounds and markers within the cemetery are properly cared for. When a marker is out of adjustment, it is their job to reset it properly. Sign me ...

A VETERAN IN ARIZONA DEAR VETERAN: A number of veterans wrote to tell me that the bronze marker provided by the VA is a type of gravestone, and one which "R.I.P'd Off" should be proud to have adorn his father's final resting place. Thank you for pointing out that the responsibility for maintaining the gravestone belongs to the cemetery caretakers, including resetting the markers.

Sanford night life still alive at Stooges Nightclub

If you're looking for a happening spot to hang out with friends or a restaurant that offers some of the best food in the area, Stooges Nightclub is your place.

Located at the corner of Park Avenue and 25th Street, the locally owned and operated establishment has been serving the residents of Sanford and Seminole County for quite some time.

Great food at great prices is the motto of Stooges. They offer daily lunch specials that are served hot and fresh for those busy business people on the go. There is also an oyster bar that serves up the freshest hand shucked oyster around.

Crab and shrimp are a specialty at the nightclub. You won't be able to find more succulent crab legs served at such a low price anywhere in the county. In addition, there is also a full complement of sandwiches, finger foods and salads that are sure to satisfy the biggest and pickiest appetites without draining anyone's budget.

After enjoying a nice dinner, stick around and take part in the night life at Stooges. Every night there is something going on, in addition to the pool tables and dart boards that are enjoyed by many.

Wednesday night is Karaoke night at Stooges. Patrons who want to express their exhibitionist side and sing to the crowd can compete in a contest and win prizes.

Ladies are the theme of the evening on Thursday, as the more feminine customers enjoy two-for-one drinks from 9 p.m. until close.

Stooges comes alive on Friday and Saturday nights. Live music is provided on both nights for dancing, singing along or simply enjoying. This weekend, the Back Water Band will be performing.

Head on out to Stooges and raise your entertainment level a notch or two. Beside enjoying one of the best restaurants in town, you'll be able to kick back and have an evening filled with fun, music and good friends.
