Sanford election tomorrow

Herald staff writer

SANFORD - It's city election day in Sanford tomorrow but only residents of District 3 will be voting, and there's only one item on the ballot, the race for city commissioner between incumbent A.A. "Mac" McClanahan and challenger Martha

Both candidates are long-time residents of Sanford and both are well known in the area.

During their campaining, however, the two proved to be on opposite sides of the fence.

One major difference centers on the subject of Sanford paying Lake Mary $2.2 million dollars for disposal of treated wastewater. Yancey says the money should have stayed in Sanford and the water should have been made available to local residents for lawn watering. McClanshan, howev-er, argues that disposal of the wastewater in the Lake Mary Timacuan area was the least costly way Sanford could have gone in order to avoid loss of $8.3 million in state and federal grants.

Another difference is their opinions on the GAINESVILLE — In a university hospital lab, a doctor and his assistants are growing human skin to save burn victims.

Dr. Ammon Peck and his assistants at the University of Florida's Shands Hospital are nurturing cells in culture dishes and growing them into skin swatches the size of playing cards. They are then surgically stapling the swatches on burn

Peck has been growing skin and performing the delicate surgery since 1988 for people with the worst typer of burns.

Already he has helped about two dozen people toward recovery. Shand's lab is the only one in the state that provides the culturing technique.

Each swatch takes about three weeks to grow and costs about $300. Dr. Ammon Peck, the pathologist who developed the process, estimates the cost of treatment for patients with burns covering 80 percent of their bodies at more than $50,000.

Peck said many of Shands burn patients would not have a chance without the skin-growing technique.

Outbreak gives researchers prominence

VERO BEACH - This year's outbreak of St. Louis encephalitis has brought prominence to two mosquito researchers who were unknown a year ago.

Last August, Jonathan Fielding Day was a relatively obscure academic researching a relatively obscure disease.

But this year, the assistant professor of entomology with the University of Florida is a much-sought after expert on St. Louis encephalitis.

Day and Donald Shroyer, another UF assistant professor, knew something was happening in late July and August 1989. Indian River County chicken flocks used to monitor the deadly St. Louis encephalitis virus were testing positive in record

This will go down in the textbooks as Florida's fifth St. Louis encephalitis epidemic. Nearly 200 people have contracted the disease, about half of them were hospitalized and eight died. Now the epidemic is clearly in decline. Dry, cool weather and stepped-up spraying have drastically reduced mosquito populations.

For researchers, there is much left to do, and the very real possibility of back-to-back epidemics. But the state may never again be caught by surprise.

When complete, Day and Shroyer's findings will document for the first time the distinct patterns that precede epidemics of St. Louis encephalitis.

Hospital helps nursing program

Herald staff writer

SANFORD - HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford has donated more than $30,000 to finance the expansion of the nursing program at Seminole Community College.

Two-thirds of the money will be used for scholarships for nursing students attending SCC.

"In this time of nursing shortages. we want to encourage students to enter the nursing profession," Roy Vinson, ad-ministrator of HCA Central Flor-

Rental complex kept racial notes

United Press International

MIAMI - An apartment complex accused in federal court of discriminating against blacks routinely kept records describing the skin color and hair texture of prospective tenants, court documents show.

Hamlet Estates, a seven-building complex in north Dade County, is accused of conducting a "systematic and devious system of racial coding designed to secretly exclude black applicants."

Rental agents jotted comments about prospective tennants on questionnaire forms, making notes such as "black as black can be," "mulatto." "kinky hair" and "haif and haif," according to court documents obtained by The Miami Herald and published Sunday.

in court documents. Hamlet Estates owners and said they were not responsible for any employee's unauthorized actions.

Ernest B. Givens and three other prospective tenants, along with the Housing Opportunities Project for Excellence, a watchdog agency, filed the suit in August after Givens was told by Hamlet representatives that no apartment was available, then one was offered to a white acquaintance.

Hamlet Estates said Givens was denied an apartment because his behavior and manner of conduct in the office was such that he appeared to be an undestrable tenant."

A former Hamlet Estates rental agent. Carol

Murphy, has testified in court that the "pat response" to black applicants was that there were no available apartments. Court records indicated all prospective tenants were asked to fill out a questionnaire asking for their name, address, place of employment and type of apartment needed. After the prospective tenants left, employees would write down comments under a space labeled "remarks."

The names of black applicanta were transferred coded in the upper left corner with "D/A" - short for "didn't answer." No one on the waiting list was ever called, Murphy testified.

If black applicants called back to inquire about an apartment, they were told that someone tried to call them but the agent didn't get an answer. If blacks were persistent, they were steered to another complex.

Under the new resolution, the property owners would only be responsible for an overall total of 40 percent of the cost, or 20 percent from each side of the street, with the city picking up the remaining 60 percent of the costs.

Some residents have been hesitant to request street paving due to the costs involved. Acting City Administrator Don Terry said this new resolution is designed to encourage citizens to become more involved having their streets paved.

The public works department reports a total of 9.4 miles of dirt roads within the Longwood city limits. Longwood has 54.7 miles of paved streets.

Although the new resolution would reduce the cost to property owners, it would increase the costs to the city.

While the matter was discussed and thought to be worthy of approval during a July 18 commission meeting, there is no indication of the direction that may be taken by the new commission with two new members seated during mid-November.

The regular meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m., tonight in the commission chambers of City Hall, 175 W. Warren Ave.,

Quake or crock? Today's the verdict

 One man's prediction of an earthquake along the New Madrid Fault from Illinois to Mississippi will prove to be the greatest non-event since a 1930s radio drama triggered panic over fictitious invaders from outer space, a geologist said.

Many residents waited anxlously for today to come and go, the day New Mexico climatologist Iben Browning said was the most likely for a quake. Others more skeptical partied to music like "Shake, Rattle and Roll" and ordered Jello for dessert so they could watch it

Browning said there was a 50-50 chance of a quake along the New Madrid Fault sometime between Saturday and Wednesday, with the most likely date being Monday. The fault stretches from Illinois to Mississippi and runs through parts of Ten-

Browning has stuck by his projection based on lunar and tidal forces even though his daughter recently said recently she thinks Asia faces a better chance of a major earthquake than the central United States.

Brisk sales of earthquake inaurance were reported in advance of the quake D-Day and many agents said the San Francisco quake - not Browning's prediction - was the real reason for the sales boom.

Orphan profits

Lured by the prospect of sales and profits, U.S. pharmaceutical companies have been wonderfully inventive, creating thousands of drugs to treat major diseases. But in the 1980s, Congress recognized that in the care of rare diseases, where the prospect of profits was small or non-existent, the commercial spur for drug development was weak. So it passed the Orphan Drug Act, which gives grants, tax breaks and marketing monopolies to companies willing to produce drugs for conditions that affect fewer than 200,000

On the whole, the law has worked well. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has designated 375 drugs as "orphans," and more than 40 new compounds have reached market. But in a few cases, drugs that started out as "orphans" have proven wildly profitable after they turned out to have wider uses than originally thought or when the disease to which they were targeted became more common, such as AIDS.

To eliminate those anomalies, Congress recently passed amendments fine-tuning the law. One would remove orphan status from drugs if the number of people who need it eventually exceeds 200,000. Another would permit other companies to market an orphan drug if they apply to manufacture it within a year of the original application.

Both were intended to prevent windfall profits at the expense of patients and the taxpayers. To overcome objections from drug manufacturers that the rules were being changed in the middle of the game, the changes were written to apply only to future applications, not existing drugs.

But that compromise, passed unanimously in Congress, was not good enough for President Bush, who pocket-vetoed the measure. Administration officials complained that the amendments weakened incentives needed to attract companies to invest in orphan drugs.

Those complaints are misplaced. What attracts companies to make orphan drugs is the lure of public support, not the rare chance that a drug that looks commercially suspect will turn out to be an unexpected goldmine.

New order emerges

Nearly half a century of Cold War in Europe ended officially with the recent signing of the most far-reaching arms-limitation treaty in history.

The document signed in Paris by leaders of the 22 nations that make up the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact drastically curtails offensive forces from the Atlantic to the Urais and from the Arctic to the Mediterranean. By estblishing parity between the two blocs at reduced force levels, the agreement eliminates the long-dreaded threat of invasion by Moscow's numerically superior conventional armies.

Yet the treaty merely codifies what was already a military reality: the demise of the Warsaw Pact as a viable fighting force.

Practically speaking, the new democracies in Berlin. Warsaw, Prague and Budapest ensured the collapse of the communist alliance months ago. Earlier this year, Mikhail Gorbachev agreed to remove all Soviet forces from Eastern Europe within the next three years, anyway. And to comply with the new arms agreement, the Kremlin will eliminate far more weapons than NATO. In tanks, for instance, the Warsaw Pact must cut by 40,000 compared with a cut of only 2,000 required by NATO.

The question that couldn't be answered in Paris: "Where does Europe go from here?"

Although the nations on both sides of the old East-West divide initialed a nonaggression pledge at the Paris conference, the two halves of the continent remain separate economically and politically. It will be many years, at the very least, before market-based economies bear fruit in Eastern Europe and living standards there catch up.

More ominous, supernower rivalry no longer defines — or contains — the ancient antagonisms that lurk in Central Europe and the Balkans. Nor can a collapsing Soviet empire continue to suppress the nationalistic ambitions of the Baltic states, Moldavia, the Ukraine and others on the periphery of Consequently, as the world celebrates the passing of the Cold War, new multilateral structures will be needed to manage the inevitable conflicts of a new era. For the foresceable future, a scaled-down NATO will be essential to preserving stability.

In the long run, the spread of democracy, free-market economic systems and individual liberty is the best guarantor of a tranquil Europe.

or harried traveler. Baltimore-Washington International Airport appears to be quite similar to the country's other big-city sirfields. But the initial modifications that will make BWI unique already are in place and others will follow soon.

As at other airports, there are locked doors at each gate position in the passenger terminal, providing access to the jetways that stretch out to the parked aircraft. But the locks at BWI are Pecially designed.

Airline employees attempting to open the doors must follow a two-step procedure: First, they place a personal identification badge in a slot on an electronic device that "reads" the information encoded on it. Then, they enter a secret multi-digit number on a keypad similar to those on telephones.

Only badge-holders who have been authorized to enter the jetway and who know the code number can open the door and gain access to the make other fields equally safe. Securing a field against sireraft hijacking, bombing and sabotage is a relatively easy task with severe controls in place. But drastic measures conflict with an airport's primary function - quickly and efficiently moving large numbers of travelers.

"Absolute securi-ty" is a readily achievable goal, notes one official working on the BWI project, "but those kinds of practices don't work at airports."

The BWI experiment seeking to strike that balance is a joint project of the Federal Aviation Administration, a component of the Department of Transportation, and the Sandia National Laboratories, a unit of the Department of Energy.

Perhaps the most important element in designing the BWI test is the concept of the "Sterile Exclusion Area" that places the planes in a protected environment where everything and everybody reaching them is screened first.

That includes examining passengers, crew members, airport employees, baggage, cargo, mail, food, ramp vehicles and service trucks before they come in contact with the planes. In addition, federal officials have constructed profiles of potential troublemakers, in an attempt to classify them into three categories: First is the amateur, possibly a homesick person acting on impulse, who attempts to hijack a plane or otherwise disrupt operations.

Next is a more sophisticated individual whose actions are carefully planned but who is not

Backstairs at the White House

WASHINGTON - White House reporters learned about the energy crunch when they bought gasoline during their journey to Europe and the Middle East Nov. 16-23. Those with cara payed $8 a gallon in Prague, Czechoslovakia, and $5 a gallon in Paris.

And that is not all, a soft drink cost as much as $8 in the hotels where they were staying. There was no such thing as a free breakfast even in Saudi Arabia, where coffee and a danish pastry cost $5.

The president's legendary stamina is wearing out his staff. All of his top aides are bone weary with travel, but nevertheless embarked on one more major journey to Latin America.

Bush, who plays 18 holes of golf in two hours, is a man in a hurry and his trip south of the border amounts to about 20 hours in a country. But he promised not to neglect the nation's good neighbors and he decided to carry on with previous commitments despite the pressure of Persian Gulf decisions.

Barring the unexpected, President and Mrs. Bush are expected to go to Texas after Christmas, where Bush will take time out for his annual quall hunt in Beeville. The Bushes always celebrate New Year's in their adopted hometown of Houston with old friends and

The president also has Moscow on his travel agenda for January, when he will sign the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty that drastically cuts the superpower arsenals of long range ballistic missiles.

The treaty-signing and summit talks also may give Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev a much needed boost. When Bush entertained Gorbachev at dinner at the U.S. Embassy in Paris, aides said that the Kremlin leader was more interested in pouring out his economic woes than in the Persian Gulf crisis. Bush may have to be carrying tons of food with him when he goes to the Soviet Union. which is suffering severe food shortages and no relief in sight for the cold winter months.

There is an irony that in a matter of a year. the Cold War enemy is on the ropes. Gorbachev is presiding over the breakup of the Soviet empire and trying to hold the union together against severe odds.

Water embargo's weapon in Iraq

WASHINGTON - The embargo against !raq may be pinching the man on the street. but it has done nothing to alter the resolve of Seddam Hussein. That has some desperate strategists proposing a more convincing embargo — cutting off freshwater supplies to rivers for 95 percent of its agricultural and industrial water and 85 percent of its drinking water. Both rivers have their headwaters in Turkey - a faithful ally of the United States.

It would be foolish but not impossible. Iraq reportedly relies on the Tigris and Euphrates

Through seven new dame and irrigation projects on among them the new Ataturk Dam — and six more on the Tigris. Turkey is in a position to dry up much of Iraq. Without water, time would be working against Iraq and be-fore long Saddam would have to come to the negotiating table.

The option is possible, but highly volatile.

The option is possible, but highly volatile. Perhaps nowhere else in the world is water a more scarce, and potentially more explosive, resource. Some experts argue that by 2000 water will overshadow oil in importance in the Middle East. With that scarcity comes politics. More than one regional leader has in recent years predicted that the next Middle East war will be fought over water.

The Euphrates flows through Syria before it reaches Iraq and has been the source of squabbles. In 1975, when Syria cut the flow of water from a new dam on the Euphrates, the dispute over water rights brought Syria and Iraq to the brink of war. Turkey and Syria have also been at odds about the Euphrates in recent years. Charges and countercharges are common between Turkey and Syria, with each accusing the other of plotting to manipulate the water. One such squabble last year culminated with Syrian MIG fighter planes shooting down a Turkish survey plane.

Joyce Starr, a Middle East specialist who presides over the Global Water Summit Initiative in Washington, says cutting off water to Iraq would be "idiotic." Starr told our associate Dean Boyd that even in the worst crises in the Middle East, no one has ever used water as a weapon. "Doing so now would set a very serious and dangerous precedent for the future," she said.

For that reason, Starr said, it would be hard to talk Turkey into shutting off the rivers. Not only would Turkey be the villain in the eyes of Saddam, but Syria would not take kindly to losing the Euphrates.

Turkish President Turgut Ozal has been the region's leading voice in resolving water disputes. Next November he will host World Bank. United Nations and regional government officials in the second International Global Water Summit in Istanbul. No matter how loyal he is to the United States, Ozal is unlikely to go down in history as the leader who turned water into a weapon. A spokesman at the Turkish Embassy told us. 'We never considered using water as a form of leverage, nor will we in the future."

Robert G. Neumann of the Center for Strategic and International Studies says the idea goes completely overboard. "It would be inhumane ... crazy," he told us.

Congressional sources argue, hypothetically, that any water shortage would not hurt Iraq until next summer during the driest months of the year. That is beyond America's 'window of opportunity" to wage war before the hotter weather and Islamic religious holidays would hamper an attack.

U.S.-Latin relations from contentious national security issues to the promise of greater economic interaction.

Jetting daily from one capital to the next, Bush will laud the bitious notion of a hemispheric free-trade zone stretching from the Artic Circle to Tierra del

At home, however, news of his discussions on trade, investment, debt and such noneconomic concerns as the proliferation of nuclear weapons and protection of the environment will in all likelihood be obscured by preoccupation with the gulf crisis, which is keeping two of his senior foreign policy advisers — Secretary of State James Baker and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft back in Washington.

As Bush shuttles about the southern cone of South America, giving that region a level of U.S. attention unseen in years, Baker is slated to testify before Congress and prepare for a possible mission to Baghdad to deliver a last-chance warning to Saddarr. Hussein that he must give up Kuwait or risk a U.N.-senctioner attack by U.S. and other forces arrayed against Iraq.

The situation in the gulf has been more than a distant distraction for the Latin American leaders who hope Bush's pre-sence will help bolster sagging domestic support for the often painful steps they have elected or been forced to take to overhaul their economies.

Brazil, for example, has taken a double hit from the gulf crisis as a former exporter of goods to iraq and importer of iraqi oil. In Argentina, Bush will praise President Carlos Menem as the only Latin leader to commit forces to the gulf. In Venezuela, he will thank President Carlos Andres Perez for boosting oil production to help meet the shortfall caused by the loss of Iraqi and Kuwatti exports from the world market.

While that may make the trip topical back in the United States, the theme for consumption in Latin America will be what George Landau, president of the Americas Society and a former U.S. ambassador to three of the five countries Bush will visit, described as formal American recognition" of the policies these democratic governments.

With the road to economic reform still strewn with obstacles of various shapes and sizes, part of Bush's mission will be to sell the people of South America on a point some of their leaders have had trouble driving home: that short-term sacrifice can produce long-term benefits.

Bush "will give some kind of Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval" for what each leader is doing. Landau said, at a time when reforms in Brazil, for example, have run into opposition from business leaders and bureaucrats and austerity measures have prompted violence in Argentina and Venezuela.

"It's a lot of goodwill, a lot of rhetoric and Bush pushing them in the right direction," Landau sald. "He annoints them, in effect saying. 'You're doing the right thing," and at the same time encouraging them to do proposed expressway to be built in southern Sanford. McClanahan sees it as a way to get more people into Sanford or an easy bypass for people wanting to drive around it. Yancey opposes the expressway saying it is going to split the city into two parts.

District 3 includes all of some voter precincts and parts of others. Generally, the area lies north of 25th Street, south of 13th Street and east of French Avenue to the eastern city limits. One exception is the area to the east of Mellonville Avenue, to the lakefront. To make matters even more confusing, there are some small pockets in the area which are in other districts.

There is no way to tell in which city district a resident may live. There is no indication of it on the voter registration

Seminole County Elections Supervisor Sandra Goard said, "We've been looking into that problem, but so far we haven't found any solution." She said if the district were to be included on a voter registration card, "every time the city changed an area or annexed new property. we would have to re-issue new expensive."

There is only one polling place established for District 3, at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, located at 2315 S. Park Ave. Election officials say voting will be done with the usual punch-cards, and that eight punch-card booths will be

Saddam: Dialogue may avoid war 1990 has leap second

Dy EDVARDO CUE United Press International

PARIS - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, in a television interview broadcast Sunday, gave a peace a 50-50 chance in the Persian Gulf crisis and said it hinged on whether the United States would engage in a "real dialogue."

In the interview shown on the fourth anniversary of Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, Baddam said peace or war will depend on whether Secretary of State James Baker will try to negotiate a settlement during an expected visit to Baghdad, or simply try to show Iraq is intransigent and war inevitable.

"If one wants to make of this encounter a real dialogue, then we will be closer to peace." Saddam said.

Bush decided last week to send Baker to Baghdad and invited Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to go to Washington in a final effort to convince the Iraqi leader to withdraw from Kuwait and avert war.

"It is normal that every time there is a dialogue in view of an agreement, the parties arrive at a compromise," Saddam said. "The important thing is that the dialogue include all the problems of the region so that peace can be real and global."

"If President Bush desires to establish a balanced dialogue, there should be no prior conditions," he added, evidently referring to the U. N. Security Council's demand for his unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait.

Saddam accused the Western powers of maintaining two standards and having two U.N. charters, one for oil-rich countries and the other for the Palestinian people.

WASHINGTON - Because clocks made by humans are more constant than Earth's own rotation, 1990 will have one extra "leap second" to adjust for the difference, officials said Sunday.

"It really bolls down to the fact that the rotating Earth itself is not a very good timekeeper," said Donald Sullivan, chief of the Time and Frequency Division of the National Institute of Standards and Technology in Boulder, Colo.

The world sets its watches by "atomic clocks," which operate by measuring the vibration of a single atom and are accurate to one- billionth of a second per day. The standard second, which is the basic unit of time, is defined by the vibrations of an atom of the metal cestum.

Earth's rotation, by comparison, is off "by a few tenths of a second per year," Sullivan said. Because time measured by Earth's rotation is not as regular as atomic clocks, the clocks slowly get out of sync.

Although a second here or there may not sound very important, everything from the timing of traffic lights to the precise navigation necessary for sea and air travel depend on very exact time coordination, Sullivan said.

Atomic clocks originally were adjusted to match the varying rotation of the Earth.

Kohl leads center-right coalition to victory in all-German election

By PATRICK MOSER United Press International

BONN, Germany - Helmut Kohl led his center-right coalition to victory and inflicted a crushing defeat on the opposition Social- Demorats in the first all-German elections in almost 60 years, confirming him as chancellor of the newly-reunited country.

Officials results announced early Monday morning showed the coalition led by Kohl's conservative Christian Democratic Union garnered 54.8 percent of the vote, while the Social Democratic Party received only 33. 5 percent.

In the only major surprises in the elections, held two months after the Oct. 3 merger of East and West Germany, the environmentalist, left-leaning Greens party suffered a major loss of support while the liberals registered stronger-than-predicted

Kohl's government had been widely expected to maintain the parliamentary majority it held in West Germany since 1983 and in united Germany since unification.

But the liberal Free Democratic Party, the junior partner in the coalition and the power base of Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher received far more votes than anticipated, obtaining 11 percent of the vote.

Together with the 36.7 percent won by the CDU and its Bavarian sister-party, the Christian Social Union, the results will give the center-right coalition 398 seats in the 656-seat Bundestag - the federal German parliament in Bonn.

The CDU-CSU will have 319 scats and the FDP 79.

Genscher is also believed to have derived electoral benefits from his longstanding policy of East-West detente.

"Now we will have the task of successfully concluding German unification domestically ... Which will also mean an inner renewal of the coalition," said Genscher, in what was seen as a hint that the FDP will be seeking more power in Kohl's government.

The crushing defeat of the SPD, which will have 239 deputies in the Burdestag, had been largely anticipated.

Crisis worsens in Soviet Union

By MICHAEL COLLINS United Press International

MOSCOW - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev fired Interior Minister Vadim Bakatin'Sunday and replaced him with the former head of the Latvian KGB, the latest presidential move to assert stronger control as the country's crisis worsens.

The shakeup at the ministry responsible for ensuring domestic order was announced in a two-sentence presidential decree that gave no official reason for the move. Boris Pugo was appointed to replace Bakatin, the decree said.

'President Mikhail Gorbachev released Vadim Bakatin from the duties of the Soviet interior minister in connection with the transition to another job," the official Tass news agency said.

The new job was not named. however, and it appeared Bakatin had been fired in a series of moves by Gorbachev to regain control of the country and the economy amid spiraling economic and political disorder.

Gorbachev replaced Bakatin two weeks after he announced a major reorganization of the government that would put all Soviet ministries under his direct control and create a "national security council" in his office to include the KGB and the Interior Ministry.

The Interior Ministry is responsible for all local police forces and also controls special troops that have been used frequently in the past several years to put down ethnic unrest and other disturbances.

Gorbachev, blaming a breakdown of law and order and a lack of "discipline" for the current food shortages and ethnic unrest, has made several moves in recent weeks to consolidate power and use a stronger hand in governing the country. Friday he issued a decree ordering the formation of "workers committees" with authority to monitor the food industry and ensure that pro-

United Press International

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - Riva' black factions armed with guns and axes clashed in the troubled black township of Thokoza east of Johannesburg overnight and police said Monday at least 45 people had been killed.

Capt. J.L. Barnard, a police spokesman in Pretoria, said that between 6 p.m. Sunday and noon Monday authorities had recovered 45 bodies, and most of them had been stabbed, hacked or shot.

The killings pushed the death toll in political violence in the Johannesburg-Pretoria metropolitan areas since Friday to nearly 70, including a white man attacked in another township near Thokoza and set on fire, according to a compilation of official reports.

The fighting that crupted Sunday Afternoon in Thokoza prompted Nelson Mandela and Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok to have a late night meeting at the township's police station to investigate the bloodshed. On Sunday Mandela had reiterated his charge of security force involvement in stirring the conflict.

Orangewood wins, loses

The Orangewood Christian girls basketball stepped up in class and came away with a huge win but the boys team did not suffer the same fate in dropping their first game of the season.

Christa Hogan scored 22 points herself as the girls stomped the visiting Greenbacks 80-22 Friday night as the Rams improved to 3-0.

Hogan hit 11 of 14 attempts from the floor in coming within one point of the school record. She also grabbed a game high 13 rebounds. Also having big nights for the Rams were Liz Hufford (17 points, 13 steals, eight rebounds, six assists). Lisa Gable [14 points] and Katherine Pramming [12 points] and Amanda Climer (eight points, eight rebounds).

Hufford's 13 steals broke her own school record of 10.

The men on the other hand bit off a little more than they could chew in dropping an 80-39 decision to Class 4A Metro Conference power West Orange, Guard Quentin Smith led the way for the Warriors with 27 points, including seven three-point field goals.

Tim Seness hit all five of his field goal attempts in posting a team high 11 points for Orangewood now 3-1. Daniel Parke added 10 points and grabbed a team high seven rebounds.

Breakers stop gangsters

OVIEDO - The Breakers, under coach Brian Hart, took a 19-18 double overtime victory over the Gangsters of coach Frank Scucei in the third annual "Burger Bowl" at Oviedo High School's John Courier Field Saturday.

The game featured pick-up teams from the Pee Wee champion Lions Pop Warner team.

The winning points scored on a botched extra point attempt that turned into an 85-yard fumble return by Ancel Kinnaird.

Andy Neufeld opened the scoring for the Breakers with a one-yard run before Demetrus Scott fied the game at the half with a six-yard run for the Gangsters.

Both teams also added one touchdown each in the second half with Josh loos scoring on an 18-yard run for the Breakers and Scott scoring on a 75-yard interception return.

Neither team scored in the first overtime but Josh Greer scored on an eight-yard pass from Neufeld for the Breakers to open the second quarter and Scott scored on a nine-yard pass from Roger Halliburton to tie the game but Kinnaird then came up with his winning return.

Greer led the Breakers defense with 15 tackles. Neufeld and Matt Tucker had eighttackles while Dwayne Hampton added two sacks and a forced fumble.

For the Gangsters J.R. Billingsley had 12 tackles and a fumble recovery, Joe Thomas nine tackles and Joe Macak with eight stops.

Bucs finally win

TAMPA - Vinny Testaverde capped a recordsetting performance by completing a 35-yard touchdown pass to Mark Carrier with 39 seconds remaining, ending a six-game losing streak and rallying the Tampa Bay Buccaneers to a 23-17 victory over the Atlanta Falcons.

Carrier, a Pro Bowl receiver in 1989, got behind Brian Jordan in the left corner for just his second scoring catch of the year as the Buccaneers improved to 5-8. Atlanta, 3-9, lost its fifth straight and the team's road miseries extended to 17 consecutive games.

Rookie Steve Christic kicked three field goals for the Buccancers and Testaverde completed an 89-yard TD strike to Willie Drewrey in the second period for the longest pass play in Buccancer history.

Redskins maul Dolphins

WASHINGTON - Earnest Byner rushed for 157 yards and scored three touchdowns against the NFL's top-rated defense Sunday to bring Washington a 42-20 rout of the Miami Dolphins. critical to the Redskins' chances of a wild-card playoff berth.

The decision put Washington's record at 7-5 and dropped Miami to 9-3.

Mark Rypien, backing up Byner's career-high touchdown output, completed 21 of 28 passes for 245 yards and three touchdowns, two short scoring strikes to Art Monk and one to Jiminle

Johnson, Monk caught 10 passes for 92 yards. Byner's big day marked the first time this season the Dolphins have allowed a rusher to break the 100-yard mark. The Redskins' point total was also the most the Miami defense has given up this season and the most Washington has scored this year.

The Redskins snapped a four-game regularseason losing streak against the Dolphins, dating back to 1974. Maint defeated Washington in the 1973 Super Bowl. The Redskins beat the Dolphins in the 1983 Super Bowl.

Beautiful tree yields edible fruit

The loquet or Japanese Plum, is a versatile flowering fruit tree for your landscape. Since it is evergreen, it maintains its attractive appearance year-round. Plus, it yields edible fruit.

Loquata are excellent additions to the landscape. They ke a good specimen or accent plant in your design. They also have a nice phape and they are somewhat maintenance free. At this time of year, when many other trees are losing their leaves, loquate are in full bloom with small, fragrant white flowers. In the spring, loquat fruit is ready to harvest.

Loquets are a relatively small tree reaching a height of about 25 feet when full grown. Their leaves grow up to a foot long and have a fuzzy texture when young which becomes smooth and waxy as they mature. Lo-quat fruit are oval in shape, about 1 or 2 inches long and turn yhellow to orange when ripe. The flesh is firm and juicy and it's a little on the tart side.

Most loquats bear fruit regularly each February through April.

Loquats may be grown three ways; from seed, rooted cuttings and budded trees. Loquats are easy to grow from seed, and seedling trees are satisfactory for ornamental purpodes but seed-grown trees produce inferior fruit and may take years before bearing. Superior varieties do not come true from need, so it is a good idea to plant vegetatively propagated trees.

Although loquate do best in a sub-tropical climates, mature trees can withstand temperatures as low as 10 degrees F. and fruit can be killed by temperatures of 28 degrees F. which can cause fruit or flower

Loquets can be grown in most soils as long as they are welldrained and salt free. Although they can tolerate drought, the loouat wil not bear fruit under dry conditions and irrigation is needed during blooming and fruit development.

Fertilizer requirements for the loguat are not exactly known but fertilizer is necessary for fruit production. Use a 6-6-6 with micro nutrients 2 or 3 times

Regular pruning is not needed se loquete have a natural symmetrical crown of foliage. Occasional pruning to remove dead wood as well as thinning the fruit load may be necessary.

Loquats do have a problem with a disease called fireblight. however. This bacterial disease can cause death of twigs, branches and sometimes the entire fireblight except to prune out the diseased branches down to healthy wood. Be sure to sterilize your pruners with bleach or alcohol after each cut! Also, high nitrogen turf fertilizer seems to aggravate the situation, so if your loquat is in a lawn area, use a lower nitrogen product around the tree. Sprays of bordeaux mix (a copper and lime spray) are recommended.

The locust is a beautiful tree and the fruit is delicious to eat fresh or can be made into jellies. lams, preserves or ples. For a free fact sheet on loquats, give me a call or drop by the Extension Service.

All Seminole County Cooperative Service programs are open to all regardless of race, color, sex or national origin.

Big family is challenge for determined mom

ADVICE

DEAR ABBY: The letter from 'One Plus Seven' really got me where it hurts, it was from a woman with seven children whose abusive husband taunted her by saying. "You'll never find a man who will want you with all those children."

Fifteen years ago, I was a mother with five children under 18. I was also trapped in an unhappy and abusive marriage I knew I had to find a way to support myself and my children. so I decided to go to beauty school, so if I got a job I could be home when my children left for school. I worked hard at beauty school and prayed a lot. I got a divorce when my eldest was a sentor in high school. I was determined to give my kida a chance to have a decent life. although everyone said I could never support five children.

Well, Abby, today I'm the proud mother of a social worker

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN (head of her department), a physician, a professional football player, and three kids in college. Oh yes, after the divorce I adopted a 14-year-old girl.

could feed six, and she desperately needed a home. So, please tell "One Plus Seven" that with God's help, all things are possible. You may use my name. BETTY THOMAS, HOUSTON DEAR BETTY: Beautiful. Read on for another. "They-said-itcouldn't-be-done" success story:

DEAR ABBY: "One Plus

Seven" reminded me of my own situation — only I was the father of eight motherless kids under the age of 15. (Two sets of (wina.) Soon after my wife died, a friend fixed me up with a young widow with five children ranging from 3 years old to 14. She had also been told that nobody would want her with "all that bag-As it turned out, 13 was our merged families, and between us we have 13 kids who get along great - for the most part. Now we laugh because we both thought, "Who in their right mind would take on somebody with a houseful of kids?" The answer was, "Somebody else with a houseful of kids."

LUCKY IN NEBRASKA

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 years old and this is the first time I have written to you, but this is something I have never seen in your column.

There has been a lot of death in my family. Before I was born, my grandmother dled. When I was 4, my grandfather died. When I was 7, one of my uncles died. And recently my mother died. They all died of cancer. (They were all over 40.)

Since cancer so obviously runs in the family. I am terrified that I am going to get it and die also. My older sister and I have discussed it and she feels the same way. I don't want to go through life scared of dying. What can I do?

SCARED OF CANCER DEAR SCARED: Tell your father about your fears, and sak him to schedule an appointment with your family doctor for you and your sister. The topics of discussion should be, "What is the healthiest lifestyle we can adopt to prevent this from happening to us?" and, "How much at risk are we?"

The doctor should be able to put your fears to rest, since he is familiar with your family history. I'm happy that you wrote. The best way to conquer your fears is to face up to them - and by writing, you have already taken the first step.

DEAR ABBY: I was frustrated by the letter from the retired schoolteacher who advocated the publishing of the names of parents of juvenile lawbreakers. and I was angered by your apparent agreement.

A few years ago when my son was 16, he took up smoking. I repeatedly warned him that he could not afford the habit and sooner or later he would be tempted to steal a pack of eigarettes.

Well, on his 17th birthday, he was caught shoplifting. He went to court, did 12 hours of community service and made restitution. Since then, he has never been in any kind of

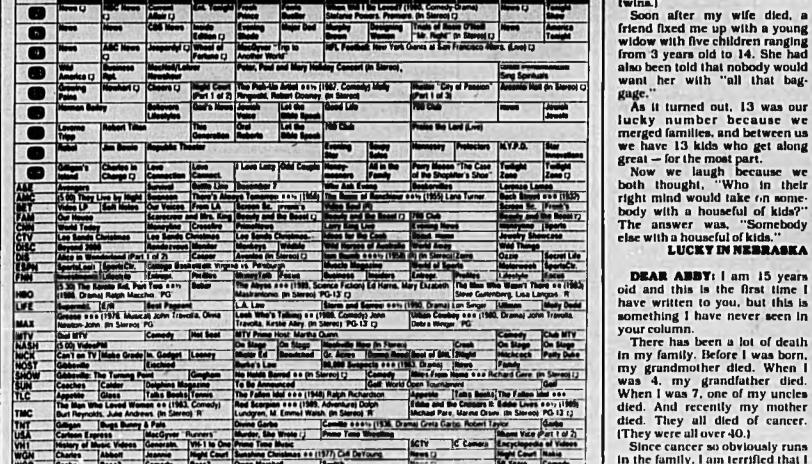

So what would be gained by labeling a 16-year-old kid a thief, or putting our names in the paper as irresponsible parents? And what about families with more than one son or daughter? Wouldn't the siblings suffer unnecessarily?

Would the retired teacher print the names of the parents of the 8-year-old who stole a Popsicle from the supermarket? Where would you draw the line?

Please, Abby, don't be so glib in your responses. The law protecting the identity of juvenile lawbreakers is a good one and should remain on the books. MINNESOTA MON

Mesh strengthens surgical repairs

DEAR DR. GOTT: Over a period of 18 years, I've had a hernia repaired seven times. I'm now experiencing low-grade pain in the area of all the incisions, ed my doctor tells me I need mesh in the area to strengthen the muscles. Can you provide information on this procedure?

DEAR READER: A hernia is

by Chic Young

by Mort Walker

an abnormal opening through which comething protrudes.

Most readers are familiar with inguinal hernias (ruptures) that occur in either groin. The bulge, which characterizes such hernias, is usually a portion of bowel or bowel covering that squeezes through the defect in the abdominal wall. Similarly, a knuckie of bowel can protrude through an opening in the front of the abdomen; this is called an abdominal or incisional hernia because it usually follows abdominal surgery, which weakens a part of the abdominal muscles.

Treatment for hernias that cause symptoms, such as pain, is surgical repair of the defect. Ordinarily, the surgeon can casily reduce the hernia (push the bowel back through the hole) and over-new the opening in much the same way you would stitch a tear in a garment. This treatment usually suffices.

However, if the abdominal tisques are lax and expand (as can happen with age), the suture line may pull apart and the hernia will recur. Depending on the amount of scar tissue and the size of the hernia, the surgeon may choose to re-suture the defect.

However, with repeated recurrences — or with especially large hernias - the abdominal muscles must be given additional support. In such cases, the surgeon will usually use a mesh. resembling a window screen. This mesh gives added strength to the incision and enables the surgeon to provide a much more permanent solution.

Therefore, you have been given sound advice. Since your hernia is painful it should be repaired; because several previous attempts have failed, the use of mesh is entirely appropriate and should put an end to your problem. To give you more information, opposite a no-trump opening showing 15-17 will not produce a slam. But the situation changes when there is a fit in a suit as well as some distribution in the responding hand, it's easy to make six diamonds with today's North-South cards, but not so easy to arrive at this excellent contract. Here's how it was done. The two-spade response, an application of the Jacoby transfer bid, showed both minor suits. Then, when South duly showed his diamond support, North's bid of three hearts showed a singleton in that suit and enough high-card values to play a game. South bid three spades, leaving room for North to progress beyond three no-trump if he wished. The continuing bid of four diamonds.

and the four-heart and four-Normally 12 high-card points spade acc- showing cue-bids, all expressed slam interest. When South now showed the ace of clubs, North had heard enough. He bid six dia-monds. Certaini there are other ways to reach six diamonds. No argument. What is interesting about this deal is that If South's minor-suit cards were changed to A-Q of diamonds and four clubs to the jack, a similar bidding sequence would enable North-South to arrive at a good six-club contract. The play in six diamonds is plain vanilla: win the king of spades, force out the ace of trumps, win the next spade, draw the other trumps. and play A.K of hearts shedding dummy's losing spade. Dummy then becomes good after the ruff of a club.
