

Jap Door Opened Century Ago

By FRANCIS J. KELLY
WASHINGTON, July 17 (AP)—On the 50th anniversary of the opening of the first Japanese consulate in San Francisco, the Japanese government today dropped anchor in Tokyo Bay. Their decks were stripped for action.

It was a deliberately arrogant maneuver, a daring psychological assault which, for better or worse, forced a reluctant Japan to open its doors to the world. The doors had been shut for 200 years and the Japanese would have preferred to keep them that way. But U. S. Commodore Matthew C. Perry hadn't showed them open, someone else soon would have. The Pacific islands were a prize in a world of expanding trade consciousness.

The anniversary will be marked Tuesday in Newport, R. I., with city and state officials attending a dinner at which relatives and descendants of Perry will be guests. One of the features will be the playing of a Japanese war drum.

In Kurikuma, Japan, where Perry landed, another celebration is scheduled for July 10. It will feature a 11.5 mile relay race and an address by John M. Allison, U. S. ambassador in Japan.

A barrel of whiskey, a miniature railroad, a telescope and a newfangled device called the telegraph, with three miles of wire, formed in the opening act of a drama which was to be played in Tokyo Bay under even arrier circumstances.

It was on July 14, 1853 that Perry, backed up by the warships Massachusetts, Saratoga, Susquehanna and Plymouth, landed near Yokohama. He had a commission from Congress and a letter from President Fillmore for Japanese shogun.

In 1857, the privacy-loving Japanese had lived on the American warship Massachusetts. In 1858 the shogun had ordered that any American vessel approaching the coast be fired on. This annoyed Congress, which ordered something done about it. Perry already had a naval base, was chosen to do the job.

He arrived in Tokyo Bay July 8. Four 10th Century men o'war manned by 500 sailors must have looked impressive for the usual great number that there were—10 ships and 5,000 men. By the time the story traveled inland some distance, it had grown to 100 ships and 100,000 men. Nobody fired any shots.

The commodore adopted a dignified but definite take-it-or-leave-it attitude. He insisted that the Japanese receive the President's letter to the shogun. After some nervous consultation, the Japanese agreed.

On July 14, Perry and 300 of his men went ashore dressed in their naval best and armed to the teeth. They were met by Japanese armed with spears and a few muskets. President Fillmore's letter was handed like a precious relic. It was enclosed in red paper and carried by a ship's boy turned out in the finest apparel, preceded by "two tall blacks, heavily armed."

Opportunity Given In Mining Venture 'That Can't Lose'

IDAHO SPRINGS, Colo., July 17 (AP)—Here's a weather-secure investment whose operators guarantee you can't lose. But, tongue in cheek, they call it the Fat-Chance Mining Co. The investment? 75 cents.

This entitles you to a pair of tweezers, a pan, water and some gold-bearing dirt. What you get out of it is up to you. After "miner" gets a scoop of dirt, stakes out a claim mat a long sluice-box — which is built like a saw wear and tear on back muscles — and then goes about his business.

K. D. Kaasch, director of the operation, offers free advice. "That's it — rotate the pan in the water. Now scrape off the top gravel. There won't be any gold in that. . . gold's heavier, you know, goes to the bottom of the pan."

"Whirl it some more. Not so fast. That shine? Mica. Now we're getting down to the black stuff. That's magnetite and limonite. Easy now. Ha—there it is. Color. See it?"

The "prospector" uses the pair of tweezers to pluck the little flakes of gold from the pan and deposit them into a small vial. He also is given a certificate for shares in the "common rock" of the corporation.

Some tourists, eyes aglaze, try to pan after pan of the gravel. The operation should take 10 minutes, Kaasch says, but the "eager-beavers" go through a handful in a couple of minutes and thereby miss the gold.

Others figure they can do better for free in the nearby creek. They take off their shoes and wade in but the results are almost always disappointing.

Business is good at the Fat-Chance. Kaasch says the firm plans to open up a similar operation in Central City, another tourist haven.

Weekend Carpenters Are Now Given Opportunity To Receive Schooling

By GENE DETTS
RIDGEFIELD PARK, N. J., July 17 (AP)—Are you a weekend carpenter or a wood butcher? Thousands of homeowners have carpentry jobs that need to be done. They have the time and the will to do them but don't know the tricks of the trade that make the difference between an unattractive success and a botch.

The manager of a (brewer) lumber company here knows about that. And he knows, too, that there is the open door to an average above $75 a year from every household. So Leonard Roughgarden came up with the idea of a free school for weekend carpenters.

Two of these newspaper ads announced a series of seven weekly practical lectures on how to do your own carpentry work on the conversion of the building trades.

The response was terrific. The main hall of the civic center was crowded with 175 amateur builders, ranging from newbies to retired couples.

One woman registered her father for the course. He wants to build an apartment for himself in the attic of his house.

One man registered by special delivery, an email from Reading, Pa. He had learned about the school when he telephoned home.

8 Years In Prison Is Lad's Reward

BERLIN, July 17 (AP)—For one night of Christmas gingerbread, a 17-year-old boy in prison today.

That's the penalty Hans Hering paid. He was 9 when it happened. Today, at 17, he's back with his mother after half a lifetime of orphan's homes, Soviet jail and uranium mines.

In his pocket, every time he ventures out, is a detailed map of Berlin. He knows if he ever gets caught in the Russian sector, he's in trouble. He's had enough to last him, no matter how long he lives.

The strapping, smiling Hering told his tale as a self-assured youngster who has weathered so many vicissitudes tomorrow holds no fears. It started Dec. 23, 1945, when he attended a Christmas party in Newellin, West Berlin. The boy was given two gingerbread packages, one for a younger brother too ill to come to the party.

On the way home, Hans (we both gingerbread) and started worrying about parental capture. He strolled around, finally went home and looked in the window, but lacked the courage to walk in and take certain punishment.

"I went to East Berlin, not knowing anything else to do except walk around parental capture. The police picked him up. He gave them the plummy name of Horst Klein Smith.

Soviet police took him to Huhnsberg in an orphan's home. He ran away, but soon was picked up by Soviet soldiers.

"They cut my hair off and put me in a Russian uniform," he recalls. "I was marched off with about 120 other German children and about 2,500 head of cattle to ward East Prussia."

On the way, he spotted some refugees moving west. He slipped out of his column and joined them. His sturdy legs carried him all the way to Saxony, more than 100 miles westward. He wound up in other orphan's homes.

Anglers Get Benefit

By DALE BURDEMAN
LINTON, Ind., July 17 (AP)—Low wooded hills and clear little lakes dimpled by feeding game fish are replacing some of America's most unproductive waterways.

Some individual companies are restoring vegetation on the churned up shallow coal lands — or "spoil banks," as the miners call them — in Kansas and Missouri.

The Indiana Coal Producers Assn. contends the idea of doing something with the ugly heaps of shale was born in this state. An experimental planting of peach, apple and pear trees was made in 1918 on spoil banks near Patricksburg. The pear trees are still there.

Indiana strip mine companies joined in an organized reclamation program in 1927. They have reforested 45,000 acres of land. Only 5,800 acres were suitable for pasture. About 5,000 acres were turned over to recreational use and 34,000 acres have been reforested with 31 million young trees.

Some of the early tree plantings are yielding pulpwood, peach, apples and pear trees. Thousands of lakes were left by the strip mining. One incident result of the reforestation is the creation of water conditions that produce whopper bluegills, bass and other game fish.

The water often is acid immediately after mining operations, but gradually comes to support aquatic plants and fish.

Then comes an unfortunate situation. The mine companies have learned that whenever anybody draws in one of their stripper lakes, they can expect a damage suit. Hence most of the lakes are posted against fishing and swimming.

Anglers ignore the "no trespassing" signs, however. They perambulate the shores and barren mounds of shale left by coal mining operations.

So some of the best inland fishing in the U. S. is being enjoyed by technical "poachers."

American Innocence Abroad

Vary often when people of prominence travel abroad they make statements about their home country which seem in the clear light of analysis appear silly. So it was with Eleanor Roosevelt, who announced in Greece recently that the "People in the United States today are afraid to be different, to disagree with neighbors because of the possible consequences."

Warning From Bradley

General Omar N. Bradley, retiring Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, warned recently against using the riots behind the Iron Curtain as an excuse for relaxing our defenses. He pointed out that unrest has had little effect on long range Soviet plans and may even strengthen the position of those in Russia who see a war with the West as one way of creating internal unity.

Moth-Trap Gets Results

An Italian collector reports splendid results in catching butterflies by blowing a horn he carries for the purpose. This entomological successor to the Pied Piper maintains that butterflies find his "F" flat irresistible. We have known a few social butterflies who lost their heads over musicians but until now we were not aware that real butterflies were equally vulnerable.

Man Balks At New Fashion

NEW YORK (AP)—The American male is quite a trial to the men's clothing industry at times. They're chasing an up-hill battle to make him as fashion conscious as his wife. On top of that, his fender keeps making trouble. He doesn't wear the same color as he used to. He doesn't wear the same size as he used to.

truthfully that we met no one who was afraid to argue with his neighbor, from the traffic policeman right on through the hotel clerk. The right to be right in his own mind has not been taken from any citizen whom we met and with whom we talked. And one of the chief subjects of debate is Sen. McCarthy himself, who is all wrong to one and all right to another.

This Afternoon

By GORDON DEAN. A writer in Kansas observed recently: "Mama entered the White House with a bang and Hess left with a jerk." It is becoming increasingly difficult for functionaries of the Soviet government to take out life insurance.

The Moscow radio is blaming the recent workers' uprising in East Berlin on the work of foreign hirelings in "Texas shirts who came from the Western sector." Isn't that just like Texas to get all the credit.

Subway fares in New York have been increased a nickel to 15 cents which still makes a ride on the city's underground transportation system the cheapest chiropractic treatment available anywhere.

Careless smokers started 7,174 fires that took 61 lives and caused property losses of $8,620,740 in New York City last year. That sounds like an awful price to pay, but just think how stupid radio and television would be without the support of the tobacco companies.

News stories Thursday inform us that one-fourth of Brazil's coffee crop has been destroyed by the recent cold wave, but on the same day in the Times Union a financial writer declares: "The tipsters said snow and frost in Brazil will reduce the crop. Don't you believe it. Some trees may be damaged, but the crop was completely picked before the frost hit. The coffee price squeeze looks more like a speculative play to frighten United States consumers into new buying."

We don't believe in "book burning" for it is symbolic of the worst tyrannies in mankind's history, but if we destroy germs that invade the sick room, and we isolate the killer who threatens to destroy our family, and if we quarantine the disease that menaces our health, why not take a stand against books that are mean, low and ugly. Books that would poison our minds, destroy our government, deprive us of our pursuit of happiness? Let us strive to keep on our shelves books that renew our faith and hope in God and mankind and let us keep them free of writings that libel, deceive, and spread falsehoods.

We are told that America's women are finding new opportunities in a field heretofore the exclusive province of man due to the advent of power steering on the largest automotive vehicles. Women truck drivers will soon be commonplace, or so we are led to believe, and a whole new conception of the manners and attitudes of truck drivers may be developed and many of our most colorful adjectives and facial grimaces of the lords of the highway may be completely lost. With women at the wheels of the nation's trucks a new daintiness and charm will supplant the hairy arm, the evil look and the 24-karat epithet.

Brides Get Expert Advice

(Editors note: How should a girl bride break to her husband when the honeymoon is over? Every woman has her theory. But whoever asked a man? In the following article, first of a series, Hal Boyle gives the man's view on the subject.) NEW YORK (AP)—The honeymoon is over for many a June bride, and she is wondering: "Okay, now how do I set about turning my big dummy into a responsible human being?" If she turns to her mother or any other lady survivor of a marital battle-scarred husband, wise counsel will be hard to come by. "Put the bruiser in his place right now. If he ever gets the bit in his teeth, it'll take you forever to teach him who's really boss."

And don't cry. Cry any time later if you want to. But you have taken the when she wants to cry, and he will hate you if you beat him to it. After all, he has just found out honeymoon has exits into duties, and you have known it for a couple of weeks. Tell him you can't stand to see him feel bad. Tell him you'll look your wedding ring. Tell him you'll take in washing. Tell him anything nice—a girl can always back out later.

Wiley Hopes Post-Truce Results May Open Way To Peace In All Asia

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Wiley (R-Wis) said today that a hopeful that post-truce political negotiations in Korea may open the way for peace in all of Asia. Wiley, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in an interview he believes wide cracks are developing in the Kremlin which might lead to an independent move by the Chinese Communists to arrange a settlement for Asia.

Wiley said, however, that if quick action is needed, he believes the Senate would ratify the treaty in this session despite an early adjournment target. Wiley said he would not be too surprised if the Chinese Communist government, headed by Mao Tse-tung, pulls away from Russia because of signs of an internal struggle for power in the Kremlin.

Wiley said he thinks he is an big or a bigger Communist leader than any of those left in the Kremlin—that he is the logical leader of the Communist world. Wiley said Sen. George (D-Ga.), a Foreign Relations Committee member, said he isn't particularly impressed, however, with the thought that the Chinese Communists may desire peace. George said he thinks they are willing to sign a truce in Korea which would give the Soviet aid to continue to equip their armies all out war there.

Things Just Happen To Imagine

HOLLYWOOD — Things just sort of happen to Imogene Coca. Take her pets. She rented a Brentwood mansion for the summer and the swimming pool looked lonely. So she bought a couple of ducks and called them Millard and Grover, after the 13th and 22nd U. S. Presidents. Now her houseguest is sick in bed with a virus which the doctor says may have been carried by the ducks.
Then there is her French poodle. He was named Apry because he was supposed to be apricot-colored. One elbow turned out that way. The rest of the dog is a washed-out white.
The co-star of "Your Show of Shows" is spending her vacation from TV in a huge home that once belonged to Milton Sills. "The rooms are so big they make my ears pop," says the constantly beleaguered Miss Coca, who is here with her husband, Robert Burton.
Why did she come to California? That's another example of the Coca complex.
"I knew one producer Max Liebman was coming out here, and I thought Sid (Caesar) would join," she explains. "I thought it would be a wonderful opportunity to plan next season's shows. So then I decided to go to Westport, Conn. And on the day I arrived, Max left town for 12 days."
But there was another reason for her journey. She wanted to come back to Hollywood as a winner.
"I had played here twice before," she remarked. "and both times was not too successful. The first time was when I was appearing with Jules Marsh as part of George Olsen's show at the Palmomar dance palace. It burned down the week after we left."
"Then about five years ago, I appeared at a place on the Strip called La Poulton. It wasn't a very good engagement, but the audience was too chic or something. Anyway, the place went broke a few weeks after I left."
See what I mean about things happening to Imogene?
The comedienne is more satisfied than her T. V. popularity and a good deal prettier in person. May be the California tan. We discussed the plans for "Your Show of Shows" in the fall.
"It's going to be much different," she said. "I don't know all

Prime Minister Of Canada Kaps GOP

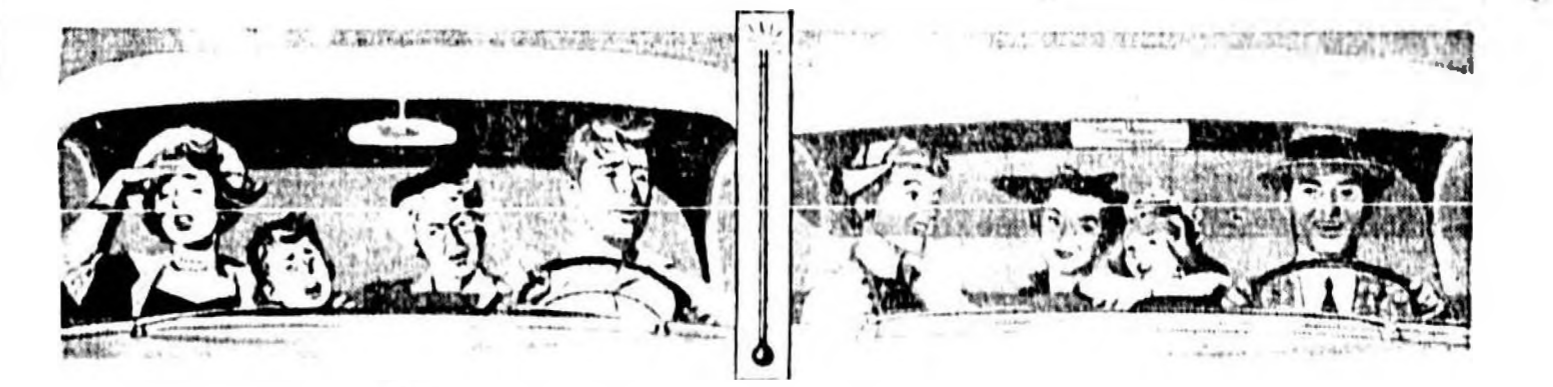

CAGARY, Alta. — Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent implied Saturday that the U. S. Republican party blew its way into power by promising voters such "hot air" as tax cuts it couldn't deliver.
The implication was contained in a political speech the Canadian Liberal party leader delivered before a party leader lunch on here.
It formed his main attack against the 500 million dollar annual tax cut the Progressive Conservatives in the Aug. 10 Canadian elections in the Aug. 10 Canadian elections.
St. Laurent speaking of a political party "in another land" that had given aid to free countries but not in Canada, did not mention the United States by name, but a Liberal party official said: "The U. S. is obviously the country he meant."
As late as Jan. nearly 90 per cent of the world's rubber came from Brazil.
In U. S. cities, 60 to 80 percent of traffic fatalities are pedestrians.

THE WEATHER

Partly cloudy with scattered showers and thunderstorms through Thursday. Little change in temperature.

Here's a tip to merchants: If you see a trio consisting of a man, woman, and teen-age girl come into your store and one of them gives you a check to cash, you'd better look over their credentials carefully. For such a trio has been cashing bad checks in Orlando, Daytona Beach and Fort Pierce. Sanford might possibly be their next stop.

Police discovered a penny check a few days ago and other unnamed merchants of that city were also duped. The system, according to Police Chief Harry I. Conyers of Ft. Pierce, is to have the woman make a purchase with the little bill here company. The man, a South Carolinian mortician card as her identification in each instance a check was presented for payment in the amount of $20 for the item purchased.

When members of the Sanford Duplicate Bridge Club start play tonight at the Sanford Woman's Club, they will be striving for fractional master points. Mrs. Fern Berg, one of the directors of the organization, announced today the club has received into membership of the American Contract Bridge League. That organization has a membership of over 100 clubs. Fractional master points will be awarded to the top and third place winners. If in or more tables are in play, points will also be awarded for fourth place finishers. Last Wednesday men and women competed. Chapter memberships are still available. This fall approximately 1500 people have joined, and the goal is 2500.

Gene Tucker, general president of the Florida State Bank may have run into his tennis equal in Mrs. Connie Chittenden of New Smyrna Beach, former women's college late champion, who now lives in New Smyrna Beach. Connie is here for a ten-day visit with the Tucker's. Yesterday afternoon Gene and his guest tangled on the courts with the local man finally coming out on top after a grueling battle in three sets. A single set played incidentally was understood. That E. U. Kilpatrick Jr. has accepted Charlie Morrison's 'old folk' challenge for a match, but no date has yet been set. Nothing official has been heard from Roy Hiller about a match with the Herald's round advertising legman.

Sanford won't soon forget John and Mary Chittenden of the Navy Auxiliary Air Station. The captain and his wife along with their 20-year-old daughter, Mary Ann, who will be a junior at Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg next September, leave for Newport, R. I. today. They have been integral members of the community and as a result have been honored with a Sunday night party honoring the naval officer: "he was the most civic-minded person ever to live here." Any city which has a military base within its boundaries is exceedingly fortunate for not only is the economy of the community lifted, but the benefits go far beyond the mercenary side. Both the officers and men of the local command have fit right into the life of the city and by so doing, have not only helped themselves but the civilians as well.

Here's a special note for the kiddies. Just in case your mom or dad forgets about it, be sure to remind them that Friday night will be "Clean Night" at Memorial Stadium. A comedian named "Brother" Corriere will be on hand to provide additional entertainment. And for some of the older boys who think they have an excess of ability, the St. Louis Cardinals' trout camp is scheduled for Friday and Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock. Then a week from Friday, Merchants' Night is on tap when the park will probably be completely jammed for the first time this season. We like to see these extra-curricular events for it's our strong belief that baseball should not be a game for a handful of spectators to meet some special nights are a must. The game needs to be sold to the fans and new clubs are doing it these days.
