WOODLAND PARK NOTES

To the Editor of The Herald

Sunday, April 7th, Reed's bus brought Mr. and Mrs. Reed and son, Mr. and Mrs. Gray and three daughters and Mrs. Stone and daughter. They are Woodland Park enthusiasts and come as often as they can. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Smith drove down to give the baby a swim and brought their friends Mr. and Mrs. A. King, Mr. Roy Symes and three ladies motored down. Capt. Pagenhart brought a party on the "Mamie." Mrs. Geo. B. Dickinson leased the park for last Friday to give her pupils a nice outing, an example that will be followed by other teachers after they hear of the enjoyment this gave to the girls. Capt. Pagenhart brought them on the "Mamie" and had two good loads of jolly girls. They certainly enjoyed themselves and kept the trolley squeak, swing and whirl going full tilt. Ask them if they want to come again. Some grown people also came as invited guests. Sunday was a good day. In the morning a party of boys came for a swim and other recreation. After noon Mr. Jenkins, who comes every Sunday, brought some friends in a launch and they all enjoyed the pool. Capt. Tillis made three trips with the "Nettie." The "Nettie" is all right, but with the Woodland Park habit growing, Capt. Tillis will have to get a larger boat this summer. Many people came by bicycle, buggies and a foot. Messrs. Crown and Wagner of the A. C. L. went to the park Saturday to investigate that railroad crossing, and after satisfying themselves decided, since it had to be, the crossing should be put in at once and promised positively to have the work finished promptly without any more delays, excuses, etc. This will enable autos to come by way of Monroe on a wide, dry road and enable Monroe people to come without wading.

CULLED FROM THE STATE PRESS

An Epitome of the Week's Most Important Happenings in the State's Domain.

The Order of Boy Scouts in Miami held a big banquet a few nights ago. The work for the summer months was outlined and a general big feast enjoyed.

The citizens of Sarasota have voted in favor of a twenty thousand dollar bond issue for public improvements.

Grading of the roadway from Duellon to Old Town is now in progress. Ties and rails will be laid as soon as the grading is completed. A short line is also to be built by the A. C. L. to Monticello. When these two roads are completed, Tampa will have a short route to the West.

Tampa is to have a new city hall which will occupy a whole block not less than 270,000 square.

Fort Meade has just voted for bonding $19,000 for water works and $20,000 for a sewerage system.

Six prairie schooners, or covered wagons, filled with men, women and children, passed through Miami a few days ago on route to the Homestead section, where they will become settlers. The newcomers are said to be from Oklahoma, and have been traveling ever since early last winter.

WHEREAS, Our dearly beloved brother I. B. Williams has been called to his long well deserved rest, and

WHEREAS, We have since the institution of this Aerie in the City of Sanford, been favored by his fellowship, he being one of the charter members of this order, therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED, That we bow our heads and will to the law of our God above us, with appreciation for the pleasure and honor of his long and faithful fellowship with us, and

BE IT RESOLVED, That we extend to his wife and family our heartfelt sympathy in this their hour of dire distress and trouble, and

BE IT RESOLVED, That a copy of these resolutions be sent his family, one spread on our minutes and one sent for publication to the Sanford Herald.

FINDING TITANIC VICTIMS

Sixty-Four Bodies Have Been Recovered From The Sea

The bodies of sixty-four of the victims of the Titanic have been recovered from the sea by the cable ship Mackay-Bennett, according to a wireless message received in St. Johns, N. F., Sunday night.

The message states that a number of bodies were recovered and cast back into the sea, obviously for the reason that they were in such condition as to make identification impossible.

The cable ship was ordered to the scene of the disaster as soon as it was known that the Titanic had sunk.

J. Bruce Ismay, president of the International Mercantile Marine Co., received a message from the Mackay-Bennett, stating that the steamship Rhein reported passing wreckage and bodies near the scene of the disaster.

An Old Time Revival

"Sanford will soon see a religious revival such as has not been here for years" is the statement of a prominent church worker of the city. Arrangements are being completed for the revival meetings to be held in this city beginning May 26 under the management of Evangelist J. M. Bass and his assistant, Prof. J. W. Stapleton, who has charge of the music.

Word has been received from Evangelist Bass who is now holding forth in Forsythe, Ga. that the meeting there is very successful. Many souls are seeking the light at every meeting and great interest is manifest. Among the interesting incidents that are occurring every day in Forsythe on account of the meetings are the settling of old scores among enemies, paying of old accounts, returning of ill-gotten goods, and the "burying of the hatchet" on several old family quarrels.

The merchants of the city are closing their places of business for one hour every morning, in order to allow their clerks and themselves to attend the meetings.

Notice I. O. O. F.

The members of Sanford Lodge No. 27, I. O. O. F. are requested to meet in lodge at 7 p. m. sharp, Sunday, April 28th, to observe the ninety third anniversary of Old Fellowship in America. All Old Fellows are invited. The anniversary sermon will be preached by Rev. J. W. Wildman at the Baptist church.

Clyde and M. & M. Wreck

The steamer Cretan of the Merchants and Miners line bound from Jacksonville and Savannah to Baltimore is making her way up the coast, seriously damaged above the water line from a collision during thick weather early Monday off Hatteras with the Clyde line steamer Iroquois from New York for Charleston and Jacksonville. The Savannah line steamer City of Montgomery was standing by the Cretan to give assistance if needed.

News of the collision stated that the Cretan was in no immediate danger, but gave no information concerning the whereabouts of the Iroquois.

It is thought the Iroquois, perhaps, sustained little damage and has proceeded on her voyage southward. No fatalities were reported.

Base Ball for Orlando

Let the sirens shriek, the horns toot, and the very rattlers rattle, for at 4:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the base ball fans of Orlando will assemble at the San Juan hotel to decide the question of a ball team this year.

The call went forth from that dignified gentleman in the court house who, it is said, has been batting pens around with lead pencils for the past three weeks.

Mr. E. G. Duckworth will be there, you bet your life, and with spikes on his shoes. He will be in a rather embarrassing position when war is declared, by the way, because he has a store in Sanford.

B. Beacham, Jr., and Paul G. Biggers spent Tuesday afternoon and night here. They have been campaigning in West Florida for several days in the interest of Hon. Braxton Beacham of Orlando who is a candidate for Congressman-At-Large. They were well received and did some effective work for Mr. Beacham who will be through this part of the state himself in a few days.—Chiploy Banner.

Mrs. Braxton Beacham, Miss Mary Davis and Bonny Beacham of Orlando were in the city yesterday.

T. E. F. Hoskins, of Orlando, spoke on the street here yesterday.

POTATOES ARE MOVING

Twenty Car Loads Left Sanford During Past Week

BRINGING TOP NOTCH PRICES

Sanford Growers Have Over Four Hundred Acres This Season in Early Potatoes

The Irish potato crop will be a great factor in the Sanford Celery Delta this season and on account of the scarcity of the crop all over the world the price bids fair to remain strong until the northern crop comes in. Sanford has over 400 acres in potatoes this year and they are of very good quality, bringing $5 and more for the No. 1 and even the culls bringing a fair price. The Hastings crop is of large proportions and will come in about May 1st, but this fact should not prove a bugaboo to the Sanford grower, as the price is bound to hold up during the season. Twenty car loads went forward last week and about the same number will go out this week.

Coggins & Co. are very active in the potato deal and this firm is making f. o. b. sales, paying out last week over $12,000 for potatoes here. F. F. Dutton, the resident manager, deserves great credit for the able manner in which he has handled the potato deal this season, and is very optimistic over the outlook, not only of the potato crop but also of the tomato crop.

Messrs. Walker and Pugh are probably the largest growers of potatoes in this section and will have about 3,000 barrels, which are bound to net them a neat sum as they are moving them this week. Both of these gentlemen are fully alive to the possibilities of the potato crop in this section and realize the value of Sanford soil. Mr. Walker has owned a farm here for several years and is one of the pioneers in the potato deal, having some fifty acres that he usually plants in potatoes. If any one wishes to learn of the possibilities of Sanford soil and diversified crops Walker and Pugh are always ready to take them over the place and show them real potatoes raised on irrigated land. The potato crop in this section is not to be despised and will fatten many a bank account that would otherwise be depleted by pinning faith to a fancier crop.

Unlike celery and lettuce and other tender vegetables the potato does not have to go to market at once, but can be held for some time. In fact the longer the potato stays in the ground the larger it grows.

At a safe estimate the Sanford potato crop will bring the growers about $50,000 and from this the net profit should be $30,000. On this same land the farmer can plant corn and this will mean that he can almost make back his fertilizer bill.

Some of the potato growers also have tomatoes on the same land and where they diversify in this manner the profit should be enough to satisfy the most pessimistic grower that ever played the avil chorus.

The possibilities of Florida soil are almost beyond computation.

Catholic Fair Attracting Crowds

The oil paintings on the fancy table at the Catholic fair are greatly admired by all patrons of that attraction, they are to be given away with other prizes Wednesday night. See the ladies about them. Everything good to eat is served at the supper table. One man, a veritable Epicurean, declared that he never tasted the like of that "Blooming Flower Cake." Never was it placed on a Sanford table before. The country store also has its attractions, and it looks as if the home-made candy will not last over Tuesday night. This fair is for a good purpose and every cent you spend there will remain in Sanford. The ladies will appreciate your patronage to enable them to continue the good work of improving our city.

Rummage Sale

The Ladies' Union of the Congregational church will hold a rummage sale Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week in the vacant store in the Stone & Gove block. Second hand clothing, furniture, shades, matting and other articles will be on sale. The ladies will appreciate any donations of this character from friends of the church. Articles can be sent to Mrs. C. E. Walker, Elm avenue or the Congregational parsonage or a phone message to either address, and the articles will be called for.

REGARDING ELECTION EXPENSES

G. R. Calhoun Takes Exception To The Herald's Questions

To the Editor of The Herald

After reading your article in the last issue of the Herald headed "Make A Statement," I think it would be best to post yourself on matters of this kind before going into print with it. You are in error and have evidently been misled by an article which recently appeared in the Oviedo Advance.

The Secretary of the Committee after each primary, makes his report to the Campaign Committee.

Everything is paid by checks. When the checks are returned, they are attached to the stubs.

The Committee always extend an invitation to candidates to attend these meetings. These deliberations are never behind closed doors.

The books are at the disposal of anyone interested at any time.

The proceedings and assessments of candidates in several counties in the state are also on file and open to the general public.

The Committee will meet at the court house in Orlando on Friday, May 3d, 1912, at 11 o'clock, for the purpose of canvassing the vote and transacting other business, and I am sure they will be pleased to see you and all others interested.

For your information, we have on hand Twelve Hundred fifty nine and 25/100 dollars.

Yours very truly

G. R. CALHOUN,

Chairman Campaign Committee

Replying to Mr. Calhoun's statement will say that the Herald is not in error and is not led by any statements of any other paper. The candidates think they are assessed too much and naturally they want to know the actual cost of a primary and so does the general public. We asked for a printed statement, and expect to get one either from an Orlando paper or from the committee. No reflections have been cast upon the committee, and no exceptions ought to be taken by a simple request that publicity be given to the actual expenses. If there is now in the hands of the Committee the sum of $1,259.25 does this represent the total assessment for the election, and will it cost that much to hold one? The Primary system is a costly affair and if the candidates can enter the lists with a lighter assessment they are certainly entitled to it. At any rate we will have the statement as per se.

Peglow Goes Higher

H. C. Peglow has been promoted to the position of master mechanic of the A. C. L. shops at Jacksonville. Mr. Peglow has been general foreman of the shops here for seven years and while his many friends here hate to lose him and his estimable wife and little son, Harry, they all rejoice in his well deserved promotion. Mr. Peglow will sell his home on Sanford Heights and make his departure this week.

F. A. Bissett of Port Linton will take the position of general foreman of the shops here and with his family will make this city their home. We welcome them to Sanford.

The Baby Show

The baby show is the magnet that is attracting large crowds to the Imperial Theatre every afternoon and night.

The pictures are fine and the contents are very laughable and enjoyed by all. At the small price of admission it is really cheaper to go to the show and enjoy yourself than to stay at home.

The Dixie Amusement Co's photographers are still taking photographs and snapshots and the show will continue all this week. The following has been received regarding the free baby:

Jacksonville, Fla., April 22, 1912.

Goodrich & McGary Sanford, Fla.

Gentlemen—Your favor of the 20th at hand and will say in reply we will send the baby girl to you on Wednesday, April 24th and she will reach you on the afternoon train.

If you fail to secure a good home for her kindly advise us promptly.

Yours respectfully,

B. F. JOHNSON,

Supt. Orphans' Home.

Circuit Court Postponed

The date for the Spring term of the Circuit Court has been postponed until June 4th, on account of the Primary dates coming so close as to conflict. At a request of the Orange County Bar, Judge Perkins kindly consented to change the date.

NEWS OF THE WORLD

HAPPENINGS DURING THE WEEK

Here the Readers Will Find a Brief Historical Spring Fling For Hurred Readers

With the arrival at Galveston of the steamships Denver and El Sud, which figured in the collision off Galveston bar at 7:45 Saturday night, first details of the accident were learned. The Mallory vessel, the Denver, is not badly damaged, but the El Sud has a hole rammed in her port side just forward of the forward hatch, reaching more than half way through the vessel from the deck to the keel. She was crippled and her forepeak full of water, but she was still afloat and with the assistance of two tugs and the pilot boat Texas, was able to make her way to the Southern Pacific docks. There were no lives lost and none injured.

Directors of the United States Steel Corporation, through stock ownership and places on directorates of the great railway systems of the United States, have a controlling voice in nearly fifty-five per cent of the roads of the country, according to a statistical study prepared for the Stanley Steel Trust investigating committee of the House. The aggregate value of the railroads is fixed at approximately $18,000,000,000, and of that the Steel Corporation affiliates are said to control more than $8,000,000,000.

Thirty-two persons are known to be dead half a score were so severely injured they may die and a hundred and fifty others were hurt in two tornadoes, one of which swept over southern Illinois and the other across northern Illinois into Indiana just before sunset Sunday night. Twelve were killed at Bush, Ill., five at Willsville, three at Redick, Ill., three near Murphysboro, Ill., and nine at Morocco, Ind.

News from the flooded area in Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana continued today to be increasingly grave. Thousands of those who were compelled to flee to higher places when the yellow flood invaded their homes have been cared for, but there are still many more who are in imperative need of aid. As the waters continue on their destructive way, more appeals for help are being received by those in charge of the relief work.

Five persons were robbed of money or valuables or both by three masked hold-up men who went through the sleeper Nottingham, of the Rock Island westbound Golden State Limited, a few minutes after last midnight, at Sheffield, Ill., forty miles east of Moline. After the robbers had finished their work they shot holes in the air signal tube connecting with the engine, thus bringing the train to a standstill and quietly made their escape.

The Race is On

The race between the E. M. F. and Ford cars started yesterday, the distance being DeLand to Tampa and return for $500 a side. The outcome is watched with great interest by motor car enthusiasts.

Strawberry Festival

The Hospital Association will hold a Strawberry and Ice cream Festival on Tuesday evening, May 2nd., at the park. The Sanford Band will furnish the music for the occasion and a good time is predicted for all. The feast will be from four o'clock until eleven. Everybody is invited to come out and assist in this worthy cause. Mrs. A. H. Moses will have charge of the affair which guarantees its success.

To Rival Celery City

With the same soil and the same flowing wells as at Sanford, why should not the land of and adjoining the Beresford Celery Company's property not rival if not surpass the famous Celery City output in quality and quantity?

With that expectation in mind, Messrs. J. F. Wilcoxon and F. E. Nettleton of Scranton, Pa., and Dr. Sturgeon of Pittsburg, Pa., bought through the DeLand Realty Co. 3 1/2 acres of property of the St. Johns River Land Co., at Beresford, this county, and the new company will at once clear the land for cultivation of celery.

There are other negotiations in progress with Eastern parties to take up more of this choice land.—DeLand Register.

NORTH STRONG FOR UNDERWOOD

"Sentiment Practically Amounts to Call," Says W. L. Percy. Labor and Business Will Both Be Satisfied With Him.

"The sentiment for Underwood through the north, and especially in New York, amounts practically to a call," said W. L. Percy, secretary of the Dobbs & Wey company, who got back home yesterday after a three weeks' trip through Cincinnati, Columbus, Buffalo, New York city and other points.

"The Republicans don't want anybody, to tell the truth. Roosevelt is too much of a demagogue, Taft has been unwise, La Follette is so much of a progressive that he is practically a Socialist, and Cummins is not in the running. Of the Democratic candidates Underwood is the only man who meets their demands for a constructive statesman, one who knows the practical side of government."

North Strong For Underwood.

"Nine out of every ten Republicans think Underwood would make a good president, and of those nine the majority are ready to vote for him. Of course there are not a few who always vote the straight Republican ticket. I was talking to one of these, who had expressed his dissatisfaction with all his party's candidates, and I asked him about Underwood."

"Well, I would be inclined to forget that it was election day if you nominate Underwood," answered this straight ticket Republican.

"The north has paid more attention to the last session of congress than has the south. They know what Underwood is doing, and they have learned about the man. For this reason there is a demand for him that was a revelation to me, and I am from the south."

Such is the gist of a recounal by Mr. Percy of his trip, containing the most remarkable view of the presidential situation in the north that has yet been presented here. His trip was a revelation to the man from the south, a man who left Atlanta not counted among the Underwood supporters, but who returned and under that banner because Underwood is the man of the hour, the man of destiny at the psychological moment in the history of the Democratic party.

Talked With All Classes

Mr. Percy's statements are not drawn merely from a scratching of the political surface in the cities and states through which he passed. He talked with laboring men and by the way it was from them that he heard the first favorable mention of Underwood. He talked with business men who control thousands of dollars and it might be added that he took lunch with an active candidate for the presidency, not Mr. Underwood, which, however, did not blind him to the fitness of the southern man.

Underwood Much Talked About

"When I left Atlanta I saw little of Oscar Underwood. I thought when he was mentioned that he was no right as a congressman, but beyond that I never went."

"The first thing that set me thinking of him and his chances for the presidency was a conversation which I butted into at Buffalo. I had just returned from Niagara Falls and was waiting for my train. A group of laboring men, mostly railroad men, were discussing politics, and I entered into the conversation without their knowing who or what I was. One of them was a rank Rooseveltian, but he was interrupted by one of his friends, a man dressed in overalls."

"I've been watching that fellow Underwood. I like what he says, and I like what he does, and I'm going to vote for him."

Then I Talked Politics

"That set me to thinking, and from then on I talked politics every time I got the chance. And then I commenced to notice a funny thing about the Republicans, and that is that they don't want anybody. You can't mention a single candidate from their party who is generally favored. I believe that Taft will be nominated because he will get the majority of the officeholders, but Roosevelt has a strong following among the hot poll. Offsetting that, however, is the fact that he entered the race too late or too early, too late to get his machine to running, too early to secure the nomination by the stampede route. And La Follette and Cummins have no chance at all.

"It doesn't matter who is nominated by the Republicans, he will not get the full support of his party. Mention any candidate and opposition will develop at once from the reasons I named, and you will find the opposition turning to the Democratic party."

Underwood Strong With Labor People

"Of the Democrats prominently mentioned there is only one who is receiving strong support, and that man is Oscar Underwood. The laboring men like him because he will stand up against the moneyed interests when it is necessary, and the business men like him because he is the only statesman with real, practical business ideas. And those that simply can't vote the Democratic ticket because they are Republicans, well, they will give their consciences and at the same time help Underwood by staying away from the polls."

"I found that the appreciation of what Underwood is doing and of his constructive ability is more in the north, probably because they keep up with the work of congress better than we do. He has been the dominating figure in congress for the past two years and, as one member of that body said to me, he commands the respect of Republicans and Democrats alike when he gets up to speak."

"It was a funny thing, though, when I found all these Yankee Republicans wanting a southern Democrat. It made me suspicious, and I said so."

"Look here, I told one of them, there is something up your sleeve Underwood either is mighty good or he is mighty poor, and you want to play a trick on us. The reply was instantly the same in every instance that he was a practical man, a conservative statesman who yet could be progressive without being radical, and that this is the man they want at the helm of the government. He is the one man in congress today with full appreciation of all the minute details that enter into successful conduct of business."

Ready to Agree With Us

"The north is now ready to concede the point to the south that she can produce a president. The cycle has rolled round, and the psychological moment has come. They are ready to agree with us and elect Underwood. Not all theory, not all ideas about how to run a government, he actually knows how, and he actually can. Not a man of many words, he never gives vent to those flashy platitudes that make good headlines and gain him notoriety. Some of us, I think, have even given him full credit for taking a mass of politicians in disordered chaos as the Democrats were when he became their leader, and bringing out of it the best idea, most perfect machine which the party has had for years."

"There is only one thing that is needed to put a Democrat in the seat of the president of the United States. There is only one thing that is needed to put a southern Democrat in the highest office of the land. That is a campaign of intelligence, a campaign to tell the people of this country who and what Underwood is, what he is doing and what he stands for."

"As soon as that is done he will be elected."—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD.

Trusted, Reliable and Sagacious Leader to Whom the Nation Turns.

To southern men there are encouragement and inspiration in the turning of the north and the west to the south for guidance and leadership in these troublous times. If we stop to consider a moment we realize that once the political outcasts of the nation we are now not only in our father's house, but we sit at the head of the table in the councils of the family.

The confidence in the soundness and efficiency of southern leadership is not embraced only in the favor with which the candidacy of Oscar Underwood has been received in the north, but in repeated manifestation of the confidence felt in the north and west that in the south the country would find undoubted the purest principles of republican form of government, kept bright by constant care and practice.—Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser.

"MOST AVAILABLE MAN."

Underwood and the Democratic Year Strong in New York.

"Long before I saw any mention of Oscar Underwood's name as a possible candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination I had selected him as the most available man to lead the Democracy," writes Albert B. Kerr, son of the late James B. Kerr, M. C.

"I am a Democrat, and I believe this to be a Democratic year," he further adds. "There is no man in my judgment who would prove so strong a candidate as Mr. Underwood. It is refreshing to Democratic partisans on the side lines to have a leader of the demonstrated capacity of Mr. Underwood. The Democrats of New York expect to win, and incidentally we shall take much pleasure in victory if it is over Colonel Roosevelt. I do not belong to the interests nor to 'big business,' so that my opposition to Mr. Roosevelt may be accounted for in some other way."—Washington Post.

DEATH AND FAMINE IN RUSSIA

Consequences of Crop Failure in Czar's Empire Are Almost Beyond Description.

Appalling details are being given in the Russian newspapers concerning the present famine, which has now involved no fewer than twenty governments. The official calculation of the Economic society puts the figures at three hundred millions of peals, or 49,125,000 tons.

The consequences of crop failure are disastrous. In 1892 there occurred in the European provinces of Russia, some 100,000 deaths in excess of the normal figures. That is to say, in this single year famine carried off more lives than the far eastern war on both sides. It is a corollary of chronic famine in Russia that the normal death rate is as high as 350 in 10,000 inhabitants, while the figure for France is only 211, for Germany 181, and for New Zealand 104. The average duration of life in Russia is also much shorter than elsewhere. Of 1,000 males in Russia only 297 reach the age of 50 years, as against 412 in Germany 476 in France, and 537 in Sweden.

Still more appalling are the comparative statistics concerning the mortality of infants. In 1906 of 1,000 infants in Denmark only 122 died, in the United States, 98, in New Zealand, 62, but in Russia the mortality was 272. Comparative statistics of the mortality of children show a still less favorable result. In Norway, of 1,000 children 190 die before reaching the age of five, in Denmark 211, in Sweden 186. In Russia the number is 495—that is to say, of 100 children born in Russia about one-half only stand the chance of reaching the age of five. This is not to be wondered at when we learn that in the government of Ufa in the present year for many months already the children have had no other food than acorns, and even acorns will very soon be not available. A physician in this government writes to a St. Petersburg newspaper that snow has covered the forests, and the parents are now not able to collect even this primitive food for their children.

Country Life School.

It really is astonishing what nature offers in exchange for common sense and how extremely stingy she is with people who are lazy, ignorant and unimaginative. It is no use for anyone to go into the country to be happy just by force; especially if they rely on violets and pinks and birds to make them happy; when they do not even know one flower or bird or fruit from another and do not care to know,

CANDIDACY OF HON. O. W. UNDERWOOD

PROJECTED ON HIGH AND HONORABLE BASIS, CLEAN MAN ON A MANLY PLATFORM

[From the Washington Post.]

The Underwood movement has received such assurances of support that the distinguished southerner has yielded to the wishes of his supporters for a definite announcement of his candidacy for the presidential nomination at Baltimore. Mr. Underwood, as is well known, was for a long time averse to the idea of being taken up for discussion as a presidential possibility, and even after his endorsement by the Alabama Democracy he deprecated the efforts of his friends to give wider prominence to his eligibility. That he now consents to stand for the honor implies that developments have dispelled the doubts that first assailed him.

The call upon Mr. Underwood issues from influential quarters in all sections, a signal fact that permits it to be recorded that for the first time in fifty years the availability of a southern man prompts no mental reservation on the score of section. His status among the group of favorite sons is as assured as that of Champ Clark and Woodrow Wilson, both southern born, but no less esteemed for all that.

Mr. Underwood's claim to preference at the hands of his party as it is set forth by his manager, Senator Benhead, faithfully emphasizes what all know of the candidate's ability and simplicity of mind.

"I wish the people of this country to know that we expect to go on the strength of our candidate. His high character, his well tried leadership, his perfect sanity and poise and his fidelity both to his friends and also to the great and time honored principles of the Democratic party. If we are unable to win any through anonymous and unassigned attacks on other candidates then we do not expect or even care to win. Indeed, under such circumstances we would not deserve to win. If we do it will never be forgotten that there is a certain comity due between candidates of the same party and that after the nomination we must be in position to fight a common political enemy."

A clean man on a manly platform, truly.

My conviction is that there ought to be a school in each large city to teach applicants how to be happy in the country—how to get acquainted with country things and how to enjoy them. Something of the sort is under way through the work of our agricultural colleges, and of that we will have something to say in the future. It needs, however, a special department in all our city schools, where those who wish can go and prepare themselves for country life.—E. P. Powell, in the Outing.

Still Active, Though Aged.

Mme. Marie Delbard is a remarkable woman, eighty-four years old, who lives at Nantes, France, and who, since the age of ten, has never known a day's rest. She is at present occupied in bulging a cottage out of her savings, and can be seen daily going up and down ladders carrying bricks and mortar, or giving directions to the bricklayers. Her vitality is that of a woman of twenty, and she is indignant when anyone suggests to her that she ought to stop work at her age. "I hate laziness," she declares, "and since I have never known what it is to rest, it is rather late to change one's habit."

A Budget of Opinion "Just Between You and Me"

EVEN THE GATE POST NOT IN IT

A Chief is Among Ye Taking Notes and Faith, He'll Prent 'Em"— So Says Saunterer.

¶ The action of the state committee in taking the names of the presidential candidates from the ballots of all except Underwood and Wilson does not come up to my standard of fair play and the voters of Florida ought to rebuke this high handed business at the polls. There are four Presidential candidates, namely: Underwood, Clark, Wilson and Harmon and every name should have been printed on the ballot. The state committee has no right to disfranchise us in this manner and abrogate to themselves the sole power of picking our candidate for us. In fact I have never been in favor of instructing the delegates before they go to a convention. Few of my readers have ever been to a convention and you will hardly realize the mistake of sending a man to a Democratic convention absolutely tongue tied, bound and shackled and the Saunterer has too much red blood and Irish blood to sit down calmly under such a restraint. It has been my privilege to attend several conventions and I want to say that the best man cannot be nominated unless the delegates are absolutely free and untrammelled. For my part any one of the four candidates mentioned would make us an ideal Democratic President and now that we have such a good chance to elect a president we should not throw away that chance by any fool bickering about whose name should appear on the ballot in the state. There is no north, south, east or west in this little game and we should canvass the situation carefully and nominate the best Democrat and then support him next November. The Republicans have won for the past twenty years just because we can never get together on one man and put him in office, and if our party gets the "willys" again and loses out they will deserve the well merited solitude of the "has beens."

¶ The City Council at their last meeting endorsed Geo. Fox, Jr., for the Legislature, which is rather an empty honor, and will get nothing for Mr. Fox in the way of votes. Mr. Fox is a member of the City Council and that body could do no more than give him this endorsement, but the Sanford City Council controls no votes outside of their own bailiwick, and the voters of Orange county do not care a picayune about the opinions of the Sanford Council. There are two candidates in the race from Sanford, and the action of the City Council means that the members thereof are not of the Lake faction, and the same little internecine war in the City of Sanford goes merrily on. Mr. Fox was groomed for the Legislative race merely to defeat Forrest Lake; and this fact remains apparent to the people and, the thin veiled efforts to brush it off the political horizon will come to naught. A house divided against itself will fall; and, unless Sanford can cut out this factional business, and get everybody together on the subject of a Greater Sanford, there will be but little doing in the way of a better city. It is really immaterial to me which faction in Sanford is in the saddle, or whether either one holds the reins of government. I am in favor of the best man being in office, and my actions in things political will bear out this statement. The best man for the office, is my motto; and, "let him win on his merits"—without any gerrymandering, or wire-pulling. The people of Sanford, as a whole, are sick of politics and desire a period of innocuous desuetude, which, translated into plain English, means: "Give us a rest."

¶ The Jingoes are at it again, this time with a fairy tale that certain candidates are espousing the cause of county division in this county. There is not a taxpayer in the county that would listen to this question at this time, because our taxes are high enough now and none of us care to saddle on a debt for a new court house and incidental expenses of a new county. I can cheerfully and truthfully say that none of the Sanford candidates have had anything to do with starting such silly twaddle, and if the county is ever in a position to be divided we will not need the help of any candidates who are now running for office. Just about election time we are besieged with such rot made to deceive the unwary and unsuspecting voter and the Jingoes are always on the job. Sanford and Orlando and all the county of Orange are more firmly united now than ever before and I hate to see such stuff as this put on the political stage. We no one believes it, I think it a good opportunity to kill it now.

¶ The Right Honorable Arthur Donegan came around to my house to see me last week and I was certainly impressed with the capability of this new star on the political horizon. You can't keep an Irishman down and Donegan has made his way to the front in the face of difficulties such as few men ever face and come out winner. He is one of the people and can get into the confidence of the average man just as quickly as the most astute politician. Not only will Mr. Donegan be elected to the Senate, but I predict that he will not stop there, for Florida has need of Donegans in higher places. Speaking of Donegans reminds me that in Ireland Donegans were of noble blood and the first one that emigrated to America was Lord Donegan. Arthur is too democratic to claim any such distinction, but he is one of nature's noblemen which is much better in this land of the free and mosquitoes and politics.

¶ The people who do not want the truth told about Florida lands are after Frank Clark's scalp and they will get it if money spells anything, for they have plenty of it and are determined to squelch the activity against their pet schemes once and for all. Even some of the East Coast Railway papers and magazines are after Frank and it seems to be anything to put him down and out. The people of this section are not to be deceived by the land fakirs, for we too have suffered from these same fakirs and we owe Frank something for exposing them to the world if the lands are all right the people who own them ought to court an investigation and the strong protestations going up from so many quarters indicate that Frank's contentions are not far from the truth.

¶ With the horrible details of the Titanic disaster fresh in our minds, with the wonderful Spartan heroism of our American men mingling pride with our deep sorrow a question arises of which the reports of the rescued have made no mention—the women.

We understand that in this case, as in all others of similar nature, the first thought was for the women and children, and as the tale of the survivors shows, the men not only stood aside, but assisted in placing the women in the life boats and launching them to safety.

We also read, with the greatest respect and admiration, of the few cases of the women who refused to leave their life companions and died, as they had lived, true to the precept, "What God hath joined together let no man rend asunder."

But what of the women who believe in suffrage? What of her who demands her equal rights with men? Were there none of this mind on the ill-fated ship, or was the fruit too great for the limb that bore it?

Perhaps under the strain of the intense excitement politics were forgotten, but when our fair sex demands man's franchise it should not be at the polls only. If they feel qualified to do a man's part they should be consistent and act as men are expected to act.

The women want to guide our "ship of state" on the high sea of finance, commerce and international intercourse, but are they qualified as crew or favored passengers?

¶ In view of the number of men whose names, like that of Abou Ben Adham, "led all the rest," who went to their graves in the Atlantic on that awful night when the Titanic struck the iceberg, "as big as a mountain," it is interesting to know that the Chinese in the maritime regulations insist upon saving the men first, the children next and the women last, on the theory that the men are more useful to the state than the women, "for what would women do without their husbands?"

Burr Was in Town

Hon. R. Hudson Burr was in the city for several hours yesterday, but did not have time to make an address. Upon being informed that Sanford expected him to meet Clark here on the 26th inst. he said he had six different dates to fill on that day, so it seems that the candidates are shelling the woods some these days. Burr is well liked as a railroad commissioner, but he does not measure up to the Congressional timber and will be unable to beat Hilburn for second place.

UNDERWOOD CAN WIN.

An Old Soldier's View of the Situation.

Quitman, Ga., March 31.—In spite of the demonstration made by the recently organized Wilson club here, there is a very strong following for Underwood in Brooks county. This is illustrated by the statement of the Rev. W. R. Talley of Dixie, who was in town yesterday and said that out of a voting population of forty in Dixie he knew of only three Wilson men. The others were all supporting Underwood. Mr. Talley, who is a Confederate veteran and a man of prominence in county affairs, said: "As to Mr. Underwood not being a southern man, the fact that he is now living in the south seems to be sufficient. Representing a southern district in congress, he has become the leader of his party, and I think his record shows him to be a man of sufficient ability to deal with the real issues of the campaign adequately and squarely. They say we can't win with a southern man. We have been defeated with a western man and with a northern man, and I am willing to take chances with a southern man. I often pick a winner, and in this case I have a conviction that I am right in supporting Underwood." Savannah (Ga.) Morning News

UNDERWOOD AND THE ISSUES

PLAIN WORDS ON BIG QUESTIONS.

[Extracts from interview of Oscar W. Underwood, reported in staff correspondence of the New York World, editorial section, Dec. 8, 1911.]

"There has been no attempt on the part of the manufacturers to give labor its share of the benefits derived from the tariff. They have kept all the profits."

"To protect profits is to protect inefficiency and to strangle it rather than develop industry."

"I prefer to lower the tariff wall by taking bricks off the top of the wall rather than by dynamiting the structure at the bottom."

"The people have lost faith in the Republican party because it has not kept faith with them."

"If it (the Sherman act) is enforced as a criminal statute it is an efficient instrument for preventing and punishing monopoly and restraint of trade."

GEO. A. DeCOTTES

COUNTY SOLICITOR

CANDIDATE

RE-APPOINTMENT

OUR CANDIDATE---SAM HILBURN

Two years ago Congressman Frank Clark made a speech at Middleburg in which he stated that only two newspapers in this district opposed his re-nomination to congress, the Clay County Times and St. Augustine Meteor. Mr. Clark, at the same time, fired some uncalculated remarks around town about his conception of the moral instruction of the Times editor, to which we took no exception, knowing as we do that it is an absolute necessity for Mr. Clark to abuse some one to make a speech and we do not care that his "lambskin" has hurt us a bit, in fact we didn't hear of it for several months.

The Times was the first newspaper in this district to take its stand against Mr. Clark and to do so it made the right alone but there is plenty of help now, two thirds of the papers in the district are opposing his nomination this year.

Mr. Clark has resided at various times in five counties in Florida, Polk, Duval, Columbia and Volusia, and in each of these counties there are newspapers opposing his nomination, and it never speaks well for a man when his own neighbors turn their backs on him.

We believe there are but four papers in the district supporting Mr. Clark and some one mean enough to say that three of those papers and

Mr. Clark all belonged to the same folks—the East Coast Railroad.

We have long known that Mr. Clark was not the man to represent this district, but what is the three candidates announced should be honored by the people has been a question we have been unwilling to decide up to the present time.

Mr. Palmer is a good man and Mr. Burr has made a faithful railroad commissioner and either of them would make a worthy congressman but we have arrived at the conclusion, after mature consideration, that Hon. Sam J. Hilburn of Palatka is the man to beat Frank Clark with.

In point of ability Mr. Hilburn is Mr. Clark's superior, as a public speaker he is Mr. Clark's equal. He is a high toned gentleman who would command the respect of his fellow congressmen and the second district would once more enjoy the respect it enjoyed when represented by such men as Cooper and Davis.

As a member of congress Mr. Hilburn would not forsake his party and tell a republican congress that he was ready to vote for any robber tariff schedule if he be given some of the "swag" as Mr. Clark did.

If sent to congress Mr. Hilburn will not leave his duties in congress to come to Florida to tell us "loaf" crackers who we must vote for, as Mr. Clark did. Mr. Hilburn knows we know who we want to serve us and that when we need a guardian we'll make proper and formal application to the courts.

Mr. Hilburn would not have voted an expenditure of $75,000,000 to be given annually to the Union soldiers as Mr. Clark did a tax of $5 per year on every voter in this district.

Mr. Hilburn would not join forces with a congressman from a northern State to do his own State millions of dollars injury as Mr. Clark has done in the Everglades drainage row he and his non-resident partner, Bathrick have kicked up.

In fact, Mr. Hilburn could be depended upon at all times and under all circumstances to stand by his State and his party and his people.

(Clay County Times)

COUNTS AGAINST CLARK

The record shows that he has been away from Washington more than half the time when matters of importance came to vote.

His party record is bad. He voted with the Republicans on the tariff bill, the Sherman and pension bill. His reckless language and attacks are such as to make him a person to be feared by the people of this district.

He declared in his speech on the Everglades matter that he was willing for the people to be humbugged, he declared in his tariff speech that he was willing for the people to be robbed.

He has violently abused every Governor the State has had for sixteen years, he has gone up and down this commonwealth tongue lashing all men and newspapers opposed to him, he has been quarrelsome in his present position by the work and organization and influence of the sportsmen, targets which he has attempted to take away from the people of this district about all of Clark that they care for. The people of the State and district are verily sick and tired of being represented in the National House of Representatives by such a person. His standing with his own colleagues and the public officials of Florida was recently exhibited when both U. S. Senators and at least one of his fellow representatives were against him in his Everglades investigation and the Governor felt called upon to go to Washington to take the stand in defense of the State, which Clark attack had brought falsely forward as the home of takers and swindlers.

All these things and many more has Clark done to the hurt and detriment of Florida.

Haven't the people had enough? Now is the time to put the stamp of disapproval upon Frank Clark and his numerous iniquities.

SAM HILBURN'S GOOD RECORD

In considering the candidacy of a man for public office, the voters should acquaint themselves with the record of the aspirant. If his actions in the past have been of a nature calculated to benefit the masses rather than the classes, then he is worthy of support and endorsement. If, to the contrary, his public life has been devoted to promoting the interests of the favored few at the expense of the many, then it matters not how loudly he proclaims his love for the "dear people" and his loyalty to their cause, his utterances should fall upon unhearing, unbelieving ears. Bearing these self-evident truths in mind, we trust that the good democrats of this district will examine closely into the records of the three gentlemen seeking congressional honors, and will then, intelligently and unmistakably, cast their ballots for the man who has ever been and will continue to be a worker for "progressive democracy"—Samuel J. Hilburn of Putnam county.

Ever since entering upon the practice of his chosen profession—the law—in Palatka, Sam Hilburn has been active in the public life of his town and county, and in all the State no community has been served more ably, more honestly, more energetically. In whatever sphere of usefulness tried, he has been loyal to his people and faithful to the trust reposed in him.

But it is of his career as a legislator that we wish to treat in this article, though limited space makes it impossible to more than touch lightly upon the more important features of that admirable record with which we are intimately acquainted because of our association at the last two sessions of the Florida legislature.

At the 1909 session Mr. Hilburn was a recognized leader of the "progressives" in the house of representatives, and much of the good legislation enacted then can be traced directly or indirectly to his efforts. He introduced and secured the passage of a bill requiring the advertisement of State lands prior to their sale. Students of political affairs have rightly said that this law was one of the really great acts of that notable session.

By this compelling publicity competition has been invited in the sales of these coveted lands, and the financial benefits accruing therefrom cannot be overestimated. Suffice to say that in one sale this act saved the State a quarter of a million dollars.

Mr. Hilburn's record as a representative was so satisfactory to his constituents that he was elected to the senate in the following campaign. As a member of the "upper house" at the 1911 session he was a potent factor in the many reform movements inaugurated by the "progressives," and in his capacity as chairman of one of the judiciary committees was enabled to render splendid service to the State.

His locomotive electric headlight bill, which is now an effective law, should entitle him to the favorable consideration of the general traveling public and of all railroad men. His insurance bill, eliminating any specified time in which claim for damage might be brought, was extremely meritorious.

Other special acts might be cited, all tending to prove his ability as a lawmaker, and his energy as an official worker in the interests of the masses, but space forbids. However, the journals of both the house and the senate show that he advocated increasing the powers of the railroad commission; perfecting the primary system; improving the public highways; imposing stringent regulations upon trusts; abolishing the convict leases system; and equalizing the taxes.

In brief, Sam J. Hilburn has fought ably and earnestly for the rights of the people, and his record has ever been such as to commend him to the voters. As a national legislator he would be equally as faithful and efficient, and would give such service as would reflect credit upon Florida and honor upon himself.

THE PROPER STAND.

The Lakeland Telegram states it's position regarding various candidates and mentions Hon. B. Beacham as follows:

"Next we come to Congressman-at-Large. After carefully sizing up all the candidates for this position we have come to the conclusion that the man best fitted for the place—the man with no objectionable record to carry, and who gives the best promise of substantial service to the people, is Braxton Beacham, of Orlando."

Continuing, the Telegram says: "There is our ticket. It will not suit everybody, but we will quarrel with none on that account. It would have been more in keeping, perhaps, with the commercial policy pursued by many newspapers to have given no expression of preference in these contests. But we were eye a poor hand at carrying water on both shoulders, and we grow less inclined to do so in these later days. A newspaper's mission does not end with giving the news. It should aspire to be in some sort an adviser to those who have not as full means of information on public men and measures as it may possess—not arrogantly or in a dictatorial way, but as a friend taking counsel with its friends—its readers. And so we have made these suggestions, because the merits of certain candidates appealed to us it will be noted that the demerits of their opponents are not touched upon because these men seem best able to serve the people in the respective offices to which they aspire; and because we feel it a public duty to assist in electing, if possible, the best and most useful men to public office."

BEACHAM HIGH MAN

Hon. Braxton Beacham, of Orlando, who came to Tampa to attend the convention of orange growers, remained in the city yesterday and met many leading Democrats of the county in the interest of his candidacy for Congressman at Large. Mr. Beacham is developing much strength and support in Tampa and Hillsborough county and his personality add greatly to the favor in which he is held. He is being supported by some of the staunchest citizens of the county and it is now predicted that he will be one of the two high men in the first primary.—Tampa Tribune.

SOUTH FLORIDA PRESS GANG

The Enterprise hopes that the South Florida editors will continue to talk up the proposed South Florida Press Association. The South Florida papers have an important work to perform in which the best of the papers of the state are vitally interested. An organization of our own will bring us into closer relationship and better prepare us for the work. Let's get together. Arcadia would be delighted to entertain the South Florida ink-slingers any day in the year, especially during the dog days of this summer, for instance. More than that—she will arrange for them an excursion to Boca Grande and from there to Ft. Myers and up the Caloosahatchie river into the heart of the Everglades. What do you say, boys? You might as well enjoy your selves while you live—you may be a long time dead.—Arcadia Enterprise.

We have no desire to die, brother. Rather stay in Sanford.

JUST ONE MORE LIE.

The papers who are against Frank Clark are making their fight on the ground that he is injuring the land sales in Florida and especially on the East Coast, ought to suppress the items about sales being made. The following item hardly bears out their tales:

"The Tropical Sun says, 'The sales of the Florida Everglades lands, amounting to over a million dollars, closed last Saturday night a few minutes before twelve.'"

Frank Clark is stopping the greater from selling Everglades land by the quart instead of by the acre and naturally the land fakirs are using a big campaign fund to defeat him. Mr. Clark has spent less money than any candidate in the field.

ON CANNING FACTORIES.

There will appear Friday an article on the small canning factory from the pen of Prof. C. K. McQuarrie of the Experimental Station, and is worthy of notice of the people of this section who are interested in taking care of the surplus of the many crops raised here. The article is along the line followed by The Herald in so many articles on the canning factory and while exploiting the small home cannery mainly is a good description of the mode of canning and the expense of same, also the idea of an Association of canneries and getting markets for the finished product.

If the growers of the Sanford section would only realize the possibilities of the canning factory there would be more of them here ere another season rolls round. This year the saving on tomatoes alone would be a nice sum and as this crop nears the shipping season the idea grows stronger of having some good use for the surplus that is always left after the bulk of the crop is shipped. Read the article this week and ponder well the subject matter. It is another step toward economizing in the waste and in economy lies the salvation of the country.

Braxton Beacham is gaining more strength every day and opposition papers concede that he will be in the Second Primary. Watch him get there!

MR. CLARK'S ANSWERS.

In his speech here last Friday night, Congressman Frank Clark did not evade any of the charges made against him by his opponent, Mr. Hilburn, but went into them fully enough it seemed to satisfy the audience that heard his two hour's address.

This paper had suggested that Mr. Clark owed it to himself to answer Mr. Hilburn's specific charges, and we are of the opinion and we so told Mr. Clark after his speech, that he had fully vindicated his position on the Everglades matter, but that on his vote on pensions and the tariff he did not as consistently occupy the historic Democratic position. However, as he declared he was voting on these matters as he believed his constituents desired, these same constituents are the final jury of arbitration, as they know, what they want and whom they want to represent them in Washington, the decision at the coming primary will be awaited with impartial interest.

Mr. Clark is a forcible speaker, and held the attention of his large audience throughout, and never seemed at a loss for language or for a reason for his course.—DeLand Register.

Every newspaper in Osceola county was given the call for the primary election and paid liberally for the space. Why does the Orange county executive committee economize on newspaper space for the benefit of one paper?

HITS THE NAIL ON THE HEAD

R. Hudson Burr, who is a candidate before the primary in this district for Congress, advocates his claim by denouncing what Frank Clark said about the Everglades. We don't see that Clark was wrong in asking that the Everglades scheme be given full publicity. No man can in the end build himself up by running another person down in matters over the right of which opinions differ. The Everglades proposition may be right, if it is, Clark's course can not hurt it.—St Cloud Tribune.

MARRIED IN DECEMBER

Young Couple Stole March on Their Friends and Were Quietly Married.

Cards are out this week announcing the marriage of Miss Neva Alice Gormley and Mr. Walter M. Haynes. The couple stole a march on their friends and while on a visit to the bride's sister, Mrs. H. H. Steverson, in Jacksonville during the holidays they were quietly married at the parsonage of the Springfield Presbyterian church, Rev. Lynne officiating.

The marriage was a secret until they were ready to keep house in Sanford and this week their friends were apprised of the marriage by announcement cards.

Mrs. Haynes is the daughter of Mr. J. W. Gormley, formerly of Topeka, Kansas now residing at Cameron City and has a large circle of friends in the city of her nativity and in her adopted home.

Mr. Haynes has been a resident of this section for the past three years and for some time has been identified with the Herald Printing Company as Secretary and Treasurer and Business Manager.

Sanford Music Club

The Sanford Music Club held their regular meeting Saturday afternoon. In the Auditorium of the Sanford High School, as the chorus were to practice there for their concert.

Mrs. George L. Speer was leader. Chopin, the great composer, and his works or compositions were the subjects of the afternoon study. Mrs. Speer read a very interesting sketch of the "Life and Personality of Chopin"; in which some of the causes or incidents, which led to certain compositions were mentioned. Miss Mabel Bowler read a short article on "The Compositions of Chopin". All the musical selections on the program, both instrumental and vocal, were demonstrations of Chopin's compositions. Miss Florence Frank played one of his "Polonaises," in A Major. Miss Mabel Bowler, accompanied by Miss Olive Hill, sang "A Maiden Wish", by Chopin. Miss Josie Stumon, on the flute, accompanied by Miss McKim, rendered one of Chopin's most delightful selections.

Miss McKim also played a "Prelude" and a "Mazurka," by Chopin.

After the mention of several matters of business by the president, Mrs. M. Martin; Mrs. Tolar, secretary, called the roll; after which, with Mrs. Hoy leader, the chorus practice was taken up.

Who Shall Succeed Frank Clark

The one thing made manifest in this campaign is the certainty that a majority of Mr. Clark's constituents desire his defeat.

That result is assured;

But it is not enough.

We shall have another in his place;

But that is not enough.

We must have the best man in his place.

The Glow of the Rubies

by FRANCIS PERRY ELLIOTT
ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT 1911 BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Richard Lightnut, an American with an affected English accent, receives a present from a friend in China.

CHAPTER II.—The present proves to be a pair of pajamas. A letter hints of surprises to the wearer.

CHAPTER III.—Lightnut dons the pajamas and late at night gets up for a smoke. His servant, Jenkins, comes in and, failing to recognize Lightnut, attempts to put him out. Thinking the servant crazy, Lightnut changes his clothes intending to summon help. When he reappears Jenkins falls on his neck with joy, confirming Lightnut's belief that he is crazy.

CHAPTER IV.—Jenkins tells Lightnut of the encounter he had with a hideous Chinaman dressed in pajamas.

CHAPTER V.—In a message from his friend, Jack Billings, Lightnut is asked to put up "the kid" for the night on his way home from college. Later Lightnut finds a beautiful girl in black pajamas in his room.

CHAPTER VI.—Lightnut is shocked by the girl's drinking, smoking and slangy talk.

CHAPTER VII.—She tells him her name is Francis and puzzles him with a story of her love for her sister's room-mate, named Frances. Next morning the girl is missing and Lightnut hurries to the boat to see her off. He is accosted by a husky college boy, who calls him "Dicky," but he does not see the girl.

CHAPTER VIII.—Jack Billings calls to spend the night with Lightnut. They discover priceless rubies hidden in the buttons of the pajamas.

CHAPTER IX.—Billings dons the pajamas and retires.

CHAPTER X.—Lightnut later discovers in his apartment a beefy person in mutton-chop whiskers and wearing pajamas. Jenkins calls the police, who declare the intruder to be a criminal, called "Foxy Grandpa."

CHAPTER XI.—The intruder declares he is Lightnut's guest and appeals to the latter in vain.

CHAPTER XII.—He is hustled off to jail.

CHAPTER XIII.—In the morning Lightnut is astonished to find Billings gone, and more astonished when he gets a message from the latter, demanding his clothes. Lightnut, bound for Tarrytown, Billings' home, discovers "Francis," the girl of the pajamas, on the train.

CHAPTER XIV.—Lightnut speaks to her and alludes to the night before. She declares indignantly that Lightnut never saw her in black pajamas. At Tarrytown Francis is met by a husky college youth, who calls Lightnut a "Dicky." The latter ignores the boy, who then threatens to thrash him for offending Francis. Lightnut takes the next train home.

CHAPTER XV.—Billings storms over the outrage of his arrest. He and Lightnut discover mysterious Chinese characters on the pajamas.

CHAPTER XVI.—Professor Doozenberry is called in to interpret the hieroglyphics.

CHAPTER XVII.—He raves over what he calls the lost silk of Si-Ling-Chi.

CHAPTER XVIII.—The writing declares that a person wearing the pajamas will take on the semblance of the previous wearer. The professor borrows the pajamas for experiment.

CHAPTER XXI.

A Message and a Warning.

"It's all right, miss," Wilkes reported; "at least, I hope so. Perkins is with him—we've been trying to persuade him to have a bath and lie down. But I don't know—"

He shook his head gloomily, then turned to me.

"If you will come with me, sir—"

Then he added, and it seemed a question: "You must have made a quick run, sir. Seems like only a few minutes since we got Mr. Jack's 'phone message. His voice dropped: 'From the station house, you know.'"

"Eh—what's that?" I paused with my foot on the first tread of the stairway. "Jack's 'phone message—from the station house?" I repeated blankly. "What are you talking about?"

Wilkes coughed reproachfully. "Why, you know, sir, he told about being arrested in front of the Kahoka Apartments. He mentioned that it was about—h'm!" He stole a furtive

"Of Course You Know, Sir."

backward glance at the frump, but she was enjoying herself berating a fat girl she addressed as "Flora." He looked at me eloquently and whispered: "About his—h'm—stealing some black silk pajamas."

My monocle dropped, and I almost did myself.

"By Jove!" I gasped feebly.

"Yes, sir," Wilkes looked up at the paneled ceiling and stroked his chin. "He mentioned that they found them—or thought they found them in the bag he had with him."

"But he's got them on, and they are his own," I managed to get out.

Wilkes' face lightened understandingly. "Oh-h, I see, sir," he said, nodding with his jolly chin hanging; "so that's how you got him off—I was wondering!" He looked at me, his fishy old eyes twinkling admiration. "Very neat, if I may say, sir—making, as it were, a sort of alibi—very neat, indeed! Of course, when they puts 'em on him, they see for themselves they are his'n, and not any lady's what had been stolen—Oh, I see!"

"Dash me, if I did! The only thing

I saw was that it must have been Jenkins that had telephoned and the message had been twisted. What he had said, of course, was that Billings had almost been arrested. But the police finding the pajamas in his bag—I did not like that. Could it be that, after all, Billings had found his sister's pajamas in the guest-room and had quietly confiscated them? It looked devilishly, ominously like it! Or perhaps he, himself, had recovered them from Foxy Grandpa, and with more delicacy than I thought him capable of, had kept the whole matter to himself. One thing only was certain: the sleuth hounds of the law, attuned by the extravagant reward I had offered over the telephone, had run down and recovered her pajamas. It was a relief that they were out of his hands, anyhow—I could get them again, but he couldn't. By Jove!

Alone in my room, I stood before the mirror, hands in pockets and rocking on my toes—kind of smiling, you know—and thinking what a dare-devil, reckless thing it had been—clever, too, dash it—in getting them away from old Jack, and right under his nose. By Jove, I felt a bit proud about it—sort of exultation, don't you know—and I had just got off a wink at myself, when Wilkes appeared again.

"Pardon, sir, for disturbing you, but Mr. Billings is acting so queer, we are afraid to cross him; and he just insisted I take his message to you at once."

"Message?" I repeated, sobering.

"Yes, sir—something about some pajamas—"

"Pajamas?" I faltered, and I dropped into a chair. "Oh!"

Wilkes looked grave. "Pajamas seem to be the thing with him this time, sir—it's the queerest go! That's a new one, that is!" He shifted contemplatively. "The last time it was hards and the time before blue dachshunds, but his main stand-by, so to speak, is piebald rattlesnakes—them we're used to; but this new turn, pajamas, gets me!" He shook his head dubiously. "And he won't take his off—you can't get him to; he just gets kinder peevish and goes off on the queerest streak of freak talk you ever heard. Perkins tried to coax him to take a bath, but he said he never had taken a bath in his life—and he called Perkins something awful—some name about a yard long. It squelched Perkins so that he—"

"But the message?" I suggested nervously.

"I was just a-coming to that, sir. He asks me if I knew whether you were still on the place; and when I said you were, he says to me kinder excited and impressive like: 'Well, you go to him at once—at once—and tell him I'm on the trail of the mystery of those pajamas, and I'll soon know as much about 'em as he does. Just tell him that—he'll know what I mean.'"

"Oh!" I gasped shortly.

"Yes, sir," Wilkes nodded, "but that ain't quite all. He says: 'Tell Mr. Lightnut that when I first saw those pajamas in his rooms—' Wilkes paused inquiringly. "Did you say something, sir?"

"I had not—I had only groaned!"

He went on, repeating as by rote: "When I found and took them away, I was curious and amused, but skeptical—firmly skeptical—of there being any dark mystery about them. But now I know I let myself be deceived and I mean to get at the bottom of the whole thing."

Wilkes seemed to kind of waver and fade before me, and then go out like a candle. Then he came back into view, and I heard his voice again: "And what's more, you tell him—"

VOTE FOR DONEGAN FOR STATE SENATOR

(From the Kissimmee, (Florida) Valley Gazette)

"When the County of Osceola was created, the late John Milton Bryan was the senator but at the next election Orange County furnished the senator and E. M. Hammond was elected. He was succeeded four years later by M. R. Marks, of Orange County, giving that County the senator for eight years. Mr. Hammond was succeeded by C. A. Donegan, the people of this county feel that they can assure the people of Orange County of a representative in the State Senate in every way the equal of any of those who have preceded him in service in that distinguished body."

The butler hesitated and seemed embarrassed—his heavy jaws reddened a little. He looked beyond me and coughed.

"Of course, you know, sir," he said, shifting uneasily, "Mr. Billings ain't exactly himself, so to speak, so you mustn't mind. Fact is—if I may say so—he's got the most considerable case of jimmies I ever see him with, so—"

"Oh, go on!" I breathed miserably.

"Yes, sir—h'm!" Wilkes heaved distressfully, then drove doggedly ahead. "Oh, well, sir, what he says was that it was his duty, he thought, to tell the family the truth about those pajamas, so that they would know that the man they were harboring under their roof wasn't what he seemed to be." His gaze bored higher over my head, his voice tapering off so faintly I could hardly hear.

But I heard all right! Oh, yes, I got the full devilish force of it; but I couldn't speak. My dry lips touched wordlessly and I hunched deep into the hollow of the big leather rocker. I would have liked to get even deeper, and I studied wistfully a tiny floor-crack under the radiator. I thought I could make it if I were alone!

Wilkes coughed again. I winced—there was evidently more!

"Yes, sir," he murmured, as I cut a quick glance upward. "He did say further that if you weren't satisfied, though, and would prefer another trial—"

"Eh?" I bounded out of the chair. "What's that? Oh, dash it, yes—I would, by Jove!"

"Very good, sir." Wilkes looked relieved, himself. "In that case, he said he was willing to experiment again—that was his word—experiment. He said he wouldn't detain you here on his account, but he would have to ask you to stay another day or two while he made his observations."

It was a devilish cold shoulder, but I had no choice. Fact was, by Jove, I was so jolly glad for that chance, and for being trusted again by Billings, even in this half-hearted way, that I just ground my pride under my heel—why, dash it, I would have ground anything under my heel for

SENATOR LOUIS C. MASSEY

CANDIDATE FOR RE-NOMINATION

Senator MASSEY has taken a leading part in the State Senate ever since he entered that body. The Committees on which he has served are the most important in the Senate. He has been Chairman of the Committee on Judiciary; of the Committee on Finance and Taxation, and on the Committee on Legislative Expenses, besides serving as a member of the Committees on Constitutional Amendments, Education, Appropriations, Fisheries, Militia, Corporations, Railroads, Canals and Telegraphs, and Rules. Consequently has obtained a knowledge of State affairs and of legislative matters that would naturally be of use to the people of this senatorial district. His record is not attacked in any particular.

WHY MAKE A CHANGE?

See? I was as happy as a bird, and life was again one grand, sweet what's-its-name.

And then I just flopped down upon a divan and lay there panting like a what's-its-name—reaction, you know. So he had known! He had known when he let me come to Wolhurst, and had waited for the moment when he would have me under his roof and be able to confound me. This, then, explained his mental condition, his relapse to drink again—his madness on the subject of pajamas. It was awful!

CHAPTER XXII.

I speak to her father.

"So glad to see you here, my boy," the judge was saying. And his little round face beamed at me across the library table. I had encountered him in the hall just as I had descended to rejoin the girls in the living room. Forthwith, he elbowed me into the library.

"Know from Jack how glad you always are to escape girls," he remarked cheerily as he produced cigars. "Don't blame you at all—in fact, do you know it refreshes me to find—"

Don't know what dashed thing it refreshed him to find, for I never caught it. For just then through the doorway there floated, from across the hall, a bar of music—the laugh of the dearest girl in the world!

I strained for another bar.

"Hah!" ejaculated the judge, pausing with questioning uplift of cigar. "The silly cackle of those girls—it disturbs you. Yes, it does—I can see it—you look disturbed." And, dash it, he insisted upon closing the door. "You mustn't let them bother you while you are here," he urged pleasantly; "you must just go ahead and do the thing you want to do."

By Jove, there seemed little opportunity for it!

"Thanks awfully," I murmured feebly.

The judge proceeded genially: "Of course we all understand that you just came up to Wolhurst to please Jack." Then his face clouded. "H'm! Sorry to learn that he came home with another—er—is not feeling just a circle—er—is not feeling just a little too bad, for I wanted some one to take you over the neighborhood—interesting landmarks, you know, reminding of Major Andre and Washington Irving."

"Charmed, I'm sure, I chirped up Jolly He, though, for I wasn't impressed—didn't know who the other fellow was, but I had seen Irving in London—scores of times. Not a patch on John Drew to my thinking!

"And now, let's see," said the judge. "I wonder who we can get to take you?" His fingers drummed together thoughtfully. "Um, of course, there is Francis—" my heart took a jolly leap—but Francis is impossible—quite impossible!"

"By Jove, no!" I ejaculated eagerly, and I came up in my chair like a galvanized what's-its-name. "Just the thing he delighted, you know!"

He smiled grimly. "Natural you should say that, but—" He expected with deliberation, glowering at me as he did it. "No, sir!" His head shook with decision. "Wouldn't do—I wouldn't think of treating you with Francis, he finished shortly.

"Oh!" Just a gasp, you know; and my jolly cheeks stung as from a dash of fiery what's-its-name sauce. So he knew about the pajamas, too!

I half rose from my chair.

"I—I assure you, sir—" I began stily.

His fussy shrug checked me. "No, no, we'll just have to wait till Jack gets up. The only thing I'm anxious about is the scenery and the view points; and I just know if Francis went with you, you would never see any of it."

By Jove, I thought that quite likely enough, but of course it was devilish personal of him to say so. And dash it, seeing the scenery and view points, anyway—who wanted to see them, if they could see her? I was just going to suggest this, when he went on:

"The fact is—" He hesitated, then flicked his ashes with a sigh. "Oh, well, since I've said as much as I have, I should go further, I suppose. It's only fair not to leave you in the dark, especially as my daughter was enthusiastically telling me just now—puff—that she already looks on you as one of the family."

"By Jove, did she thought?" I blurted to the front of the chair.

"How day—I mean how—"

He nodded. "And so I feel justified in talking to you frankly—not that I want to prejudice you against Francis, you understand, but just because—his head under, soberly—" Francis won't do!" And he looked at me steadily.

Something like a sharp pain struck through me. Again—and this time from her own father? I just sat there kind of frozen, you know, except that I could feel the smile slowly loosening in my face. He moved to a seat nearer.

"I don't like to seem to be displacing my own flesh and blood, Mr. Lightnut," he proceeded gravely, "but the truth is Francis is the only one of my children that gives me any anxiety."

"Oh!" I felt myself shrink together, my knees slanting away from him. My dashed monocle hung limp.

He angled closer. "Jack's drinking is bad—that I admit, but perhaps—still Jack—he comes by it naturally; still Jack has never forgotten that he is a gentleman—the son of a gentleman—and has never been what you would call fast, but—" His chest lifted under a deep breath—"but Francis—whew!"

"Faint Francis!" It faltered tremulously from my lips, my cigar dropped with a soft thud.

His eyes widened. "Oh, yes—frightfully!" And he tendered me another cigar, and I had to light it—he made me!

"Of course, the mistake was in ever sending Francis away to school—not always a wise thing, Mr. Lightnut, especially when the home life has been too cloistered. I think the reaction was too much for one so green and inexperienced as Francis. And extravagance—my!" He lifted his hands. "I thought Jack was bad"

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Richard Lightnut, an American with an affected English accent, receives a present from a friend in China.

CHAPTER II—The present proves to be a pair of pajamas. A letter hints of surprises to the wearer.

CHAPTER III—Lightnut dons the pajamas and late at night gets up for a smoke. His servant, Jenkins, comes in and, failing to recognize Lightnut, attempts to put him out. Thinking the servant crazy, Lightnut changes his clothes intending to summon help. When he reappears Jenkins falls on his neck with joy, confirming Lightnut's belief that he is crazy.

CHAPTER IV—Jenkins tells Lightnut of the encounter he had with a hideous Chinaman dressed in pajamas.

CHAPTER V—In a message from his friend, Jack Billings, Lightnut is asked to put up "the kid" for the night on his way home from college. Later Lightnut finds a beautiful girl in black pajamas in his room.

CHAPTER VI—Lightnut is shocked by the girl's drinking, smoking and slangy talk.

CHAPTER VII—She tells him her name is Francis and puzzles him with a story of her love for her sister's room-mate, named Francis. Next morning the girl is missing and Lightnut hurries to the boat to see her off. He is accosted by a husky college boy, who calls him "Dicky," but he does not see the girl.

CHAPTER VIII—Jack Billings calls to spend the night with Lightnut. They discover priceless rubies hidden in the buttons of the pajamas.

CHAPTER IX—Billings dons the pajamas and retires.

CHAPTER X—Lightnut later discovers in his apartment a beefy person in nut-ton-chop whiskers and wearing pajamas. Jenkins calls the police, who declare the intruder to be a criminal, called "Foxy Grandpa."

CHAPTER XI—The intruder declares he is Lightnut's guest and appeals to the latter in vain.

CHAPTER XII—He is hustled off to jail.

CHAPTER XIII—In the morning Lightnut is astonished to find Billings gone, and more astonished when he gets a message from the latter, demanding his clothes. Lightnut, bound for Tarrytown, Billings's home, discovers "Francis," the girl of the pajamas, on the train.

CHAPTER XIV—Lightnut speaks to her and alludes to the night before. She declares indignantly that Lightnut never saw her in black pajamas. At Tarrytown Francis is met by a husky college youth, who calls Lightnut as "Dicky." The latter ignores the boy, who then threatens to thrash him for offending Francis. Lightnut takes the next train home.

CHAPTER XV—Billings storms over the outrage of his arrest. He and Lightnut discover mysterious Chinese characters on the pajamas.

CHAPTER XVI—Professor Doosenberry is called in to interpret the hieroglyphics.

CHAPTER XVII—He raves over what he calls the lost silk of Si-Ling Chi.

CHAPTER XVIII—The writing declares that a person wearing the pajamas will take on the semblance of the previous wearer. The professor borrows the pajamas for experiment.

CHAPTER XXI.

A Message and a Warning.

"It's all right, miss," Wilkes reported; "at least, I hope so. Perkins is with him—we've been trying to persuade him to have a bath and lie down. But I don't know."

He shook his head gloomily, then turned to me.

"If you will come with me, sir." Then he added, and it seemed a question: "You must have made a quick run, sir. Seems like only a few minutes since we got Mr. Jack's 'phone message. His voice dropped: 'From the station house, you know.'"

"Eh—what's that?" I paused with my foot on the first tread of the stairway. "Jack's 'phone message—from the station house?" I repeated blankly. "What are you talking about?"

Wilkes coughed reproachfully. "Why, you know, sir, he told about being arrested in front of the Kaboka Apartments. He mentioned that it was about—h'm!" He stole a furtive backward glance at the frump, but she was enjoying herself berating a fat girl she addressed as "Flora." He looked at me eloquently and whispered: "About his—h'm—stealing some black silk pajamas."

My monocle dropped, and I almost did myself.

"By Jove!" I gasped feebly.

"Yes, sir," Wilkes looked up at the paneled ceiling and stroked his chin. "He mentioned that they found them—or thought they found them in the bag he had with him."

"But he's got them on, and they are his own," I managed to get out.

Wilkes' face lightened understandingly. "Oh-h, I see, sir," he said, nodding with his jolly chin hanging; "so that's how you got him off—I was a-wondering!" He looked at me, his fishy old eyes twinkling admiration. "Very neat, if I may say, sir—making, as it were, a sort of allbi—very neat, indeed! Of course, when they puts 'em on him, they see for themselves they are his'n, and not any lady's what had been stolen—Oh, I see!"

Dash me, if I did! The only thing I saw was that it must have been Jenkins that had telephoned and the message had been twisted. What he had said, of course, was that Billings had almost been arrested. But the police finding the pajamas in his bag—I did not like that. Could it be that, after all, Billings had found his sister's pajamas in the guest-room and had quietly confiscated them? It looked devilishly, ominously like it! Or perhaps he, himself, had recovered them from Foxy Grandpa, and with more delicacy than I thought him capable of, had kept the whole matter to himself. One thing only was certain: the sleuth hounds of the law, stimulated by the extravagant reward I had offered over the telephone, had run down and recovered her pajamas. It was a relief that they were out of his hands, anyhow—I could get them again, but he couldn't. By Jove!

Alone in my room, I stood before the mirror, hands in pockets and rocking on my toes—kind of smiling, you know—and thinking what a dare-devil, reckless thing it had been—clever, too, dash it—in getting them away from old Jack, and right under his nose. By Jove, I felt a bit proud about it—sort of exultation, don't you know—and I had just got off a wink at myself, when Wilkes appeared again.

"Pardon, sir, for disturbing you, but Mr. Billings is acting so queer, we are afraid to cross him; and he just insisted I take his message to you at once."

CHAPTER XXII.

I Speak to Her Father.

"So glad to see you here, my boy," the Judge was saying. And his little round face beamed at me across the library table. I had encountered him in the hall just as I had descended to rejoin the girls in the living room. Forthwith, he elbowed me into the library.
"Know from Jack how glad you always are to escape girls," he remarked cheerily as he produced cigars. "Don't blame you at all—in fact, do you know it refreshes me to find—"
"Don't know what dashed thing it refreshed him to find, for I never caught it. For just then through the doorway there floated, from across the hall, a bar of music—the laugh of the dearest girl in the world!
I strained for another bar.
"Hah!" ejaculated the Judge, pausing with questioning uplift of cigar. "The silly cackle of those girls—it disturbs you. Yes, it does—I can see it—you look disturbed." And, dash it, he insisted upon closing the door.
"You mustn't let them bother you while you are here," he urged pleasantly; "you must just go ahead and do the thing you want to do."
By Jove, there seemed little opportunity for it!
"Thanks awfully," I murmured feebly.
The Judge proceeded genially: "Of course we all understand that you just came up to Wolhurst to please Jack." Then his face clouded. "H'm! Sorry to learn that he came home with another—his eyes rolled through a circle—er—is not feeling just fit. It's too bad, for I wanted some one to take you over the neighborhood—interesting landmarks, you know, Yem-fu-scent of Major Andre and Washington Irving."

"Charmed, I'm sure," I chirped up Jolly He though, for I wasn't impressed. I didn't know who the other fellow was, but I had seen Irving in London—scores of times. Not a patch on John Drew to my thinking!
"And now, let's see," said the Judge. "I wonder who we can get to take you!" His fingers drummed together thoughtfully. "Um, of course, there is Francis—my heart took a jolly leap—but Francis is impossible—quite impossible."
"By Jove, no!" I ejaculated eagerly, and I came up in my chair like a galvanized what's his name. "Just the thing he'd be delighted, you know."
He smiled grimly. "Natural you should say that, but—" He expected with deliberation, glowering at me as he did it. "No sir!" His head shook with decision. "Wouldn't do—I wouldn't think of trusting you with Francis," he finished shortly.
"Oh!" Just a gasp, you know; and my jolly cheeks stung as from a dash of fiery what's his name sauce. So he knew about the pajamas, too!
I half rose from my chair.
"I—I assure you, sir—" I began stiffly.
His fussy shrug checked me. "No, no, we'll just have to wait till Jack gets up. The only thing I'm anxious about is the scenery and the view points; and I just know if Francis went with you, you would never see any of it."
By Jove, I thought that quite likely enough, but of course it was devilish personal of him to say so. And dash seeing the scenery and view points, anyway—who wanted to see them, if they could see her? I was just going to suggest this, when he went on:
"The fact is—" He hesitated, then flicked his ashes with a sigh. "Oh, well, since I've said as much as I have, I should go further, I suppose. It's only fair not to leave you in the dark; especially as my daughter was enthusiastically telling me just now—puff—that she already looks on you as one of the family."
"By Jove, did she though?" I blithered to the front of the chair. "How dey—I mean how—"
He nodded. "And so I feel justified in talking to you frankly—not that I want to prejudice you against Francis, you understand, but just because—his head wagged soberly—"Francis won't do!" And he looked at me steadily.
Something like a sharp pain struck through me. Again—and this time from her own father? I just sat there kind of frozen, you know, except that I could feel the smile slowly loosening in my face. He moved to a seat nearer.

"I don't like to seem to be disparaging my own flesh and blood, Mr. Lightnut," he proceeded gravely, "but the truth is Francis is the only one of my children that gives me any anxiety."
"Oh!" I felt myself shrink together, my knees standing away from him. My dashed monocle hung limp.
He angled closer. "Jack's drinking is bad—that I admit, but perhaps—h'm—he comes by it naturally; still Jack has never forgotten that he is a gentleman—the son of a gentleman—and has never been what you would call fast—but—" His chest lifted under a deep breath—"but Francis—whew!"
"Fast—Francis?" It faltered tremulously from my lips, my cigar dropped with a soft thud.
His eyes widened. "Oh, yes—frightfully!" And he tendered me another cigar, and I had to light it—he made me! "Of course, the mistake was in ever sending Francis away to school—not always a wise thing, Mr. Lightnut, especially when the home life has been too cloistered. I think the reaction was too much for one so green and inexperienced as Francis. And extravagance—my!" He lifted his hands. "I thought Jack was bad"

The Forward Movement

The Men and Religion Forward Movement is first of all practical.

This must be the conviction of every Sanford man who has come in contact with the "Team" that have been with us this past week.

But the Team has left behind them a program that is both practical and far-reaching. And the Sanford men are sure to bring some of it to pass in the near future.

Another important proposal was that the city should take up the question of providing some central social place for the young men and boys of Sanford.

Many other suggestions were made which will be presented in detail in an early issue of the Herald.

High Wind And Storm

Without any warning a high wind accompanied by a heavy storm of rain and hail struck this city and for a time it seemed that the October gale would be repeated but after a thirty-minute deluge the skies cleared and the storm was over.

Darning

Miss Mary Hare has recovered her health sufficiently to be able to darn. Any orders sent to 418 Fourth street will be greatly appreciated.

Rummage Sale

The ladies of the Congregational church will hold a Rummage Sale next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Articles can be left with Mrs. Dr. Walker on Elm avenue, or at the parsonage or will be called for.

Titusville, Fla., April 13, 1912.

To the Democratic Voters of the Seventh Judicial Circuit of Florida.

I have received so many letters from about the circuit asking information about Mr. Cary D. Landis and his qualifications that I have concluded to answer publicly, and so pay brief tribute to him before the people.

Mr. Landis is a thorough and accomplished lawyer, a practical citizen, a systematic business man and a ripe scholar.

Clean and true in all the relations of life, just and loyal in the court house and out of it, no lawyer in the circuit could bring to the service of the people brighter promise of satisfactory administration of the office of state attorney than he.

The argument that he is a "yankee" because he came from the west, will appeal to but few people.

MINOR S. JONES.

Beacham Sentiment Strong

Pensacola, April 17.—Braxton Beacham, Jr., of Orlando, was in Pensacola yesterday in the interest of his father, who is a candidate for Congress from the State at large.

W. M. TOOMER

Candidate for Congressman-At-Large.

FIRST PRIMARY, APRIL 30, 1912.

To the Democratic Electors of Florida:

In the coming Primaries you will decide, among other things, the vitally important matter of whom you will have to represent our entire State in the National House of Representatives at Washington.

THE TAMPA TRIBUNE, in its issue of April 15, says the following: "Mr. Toomer is one of the best equipped men in the State for public service at the nation's capital."

True to my promise, made at the outset of the campaign, I have not stooped to attempts to belittle or demean my opponents; and such attacks as have been made on me I have not stooped to answer.

I have visited personally many places in all sections of the State and everywhere my candidacy has been received with hearty sympathy and voluntary assurances of support.

If you choose me to serve you I will be faithful to the trust you impose in me. Let me thank my friends all over the State for their cordial support and, at the same time, assure them that all indications point certainly to my nomination and election.

WM. M. TOOMER.

Items of Interest Gleaned From Various Sources

HAPPENINGS DURING THE WEEK

Here the Readers Will Find a Brief Historical Spring Flowing For Hurrled Readers

A small citizens' posse fought a two hours battle with four robbers at Midland, Arkansas, but the latter escaped with their loot, estimated at $8,000, after wrecking the Bank of Midland safe.

The Senate committee investigating the Titanic disaster began its fifth day inquiry today with the hope that before the close there will have been fixed the question of responsibility of the collision with the iceberg that proved the great ship's undoing.

There is little change in the flood situation. Levees in New Orleans section are in no immediate danger. The river at most points is falling slowly. It is thought all refugees are now cared for.

On motion of Senator Johnson of Alabama the Senate Wednesday adopted a resolution directing the attorney general to supply the Senate with instructions given by Roosevelt in 1907, concerning the proposed prosecution of the International Harvester Co. and the reason for the abandonment of the prosecution.

Reports brought to Galveston, Texas, by fugitives from Mexico yesterday and flashed over the entire United States, indicate that American citizens have been subjected to torture and assassination in that country.

The names of additional identified Titanic victims are awaited by the White Star Line officials from the cable ship Mackay Bennett, now searching the scene of the disaster.

Floyd Allen and five other members of the Allen clan who are under indictments for murder in the first degree in connection with the tragedy at the Carroll county court house, started for Wytheville this morning under heavy guard. They will be placed on trial singly at Wytheville, the trials to commence next Tuesday morning.

Secretary Knox returns from reconciling the fraternal republics to the south and finds his own state revolted from his chief. His efforts, like charity, should have no end at home.

The doom of the "loam shark" is near at hand. After more than a decade of fighting to drive this pest from the national capital the foes of the voracious money lender are reasonably sure of victory. The senate has agreed to the house bill which fixes the legal rate of interest for loans on personal chattels, including household goods, at 1 per cent per month, and this means that it will soon become a law unless the powerful lobby organized by the land sharks succeeds in delaying its passage.

For A Ball Schedule

A committee from Orlando composed of Harry Beeman, John M. Cheney, Gray Rush and J. M. Pounds met the Sanford Association here yesterday afternoon in a conference relative to formulation of plans for the coming season. Every lover of balls knows that unless Sanford and Orlando can arrange a schedule there is no need of organizing any team at either city, and the first idea after the season opens is to have a love feast and arrange to make an ironclad contract that the two teams to battle to the death and ask for no quarter. The committees yesterday arranged the preliminaries and decided to hold another meeting at Orlando next Thursday, when each team will sign a contract to forfeit a million or two in case all the games are not played. Three games per week will be played, alternating the Thursday afternoons.

Putting One Over

George A. DeCottes of Sanford, prosecuting attorney was at the San Juan today. Asked for the news of his north county town, he said the main news is, he sure is running some. Then he got down to real news: "Sanford beat Kissimmee yesterday 2 to 1," said he. "I understand," he continued, "that the Kissimmee pitcher was a good one and the Ocoosa crowd came near putting one over. However, they didn't." That one, we might have added, but didn't, will be put over later.—Reporter-Star.

AN EVENING OF MUSIC

People of Sanford Royally Entertained by Sanford Music Club

The Sanford Music Club, composed of a number of ladies, who not only love music themselves, but are lending their influence and efforts, to create and develop a musical atmosphere, love and standard for Sanford; that will be helpful, not only to the people of the town, but will be an attraction far and near for many of musical talents and proclivities, who are seeking homes in our beautiful Florida, where surroundings and influences are in every way helpful and elevating, as well as healthful.

The first appearance of the Chorus, of the club Monday evening, was before an appreciative audience of music lovers. Every number on the program was selected with the desire to please, and, as each was so splendidly rendered, it is not egotistical for the club to hope that their object was satisfactorily accomplished.

The introductory numbers "Calm as the Night" Carl Bohm Robyn and "Pauzola"—Danza Mexicana, was given by the Stumton Orchestra in their best style.

"Woodland Echoes"—Rubenstein, was next given by the club chorus. Miss Florence Frank followed the chorus with a finely executed interpretation of Chopin's Polonaise in A Major.

One of the most appreciated and delightful numbers on the program was the "Grand Duo"—Violin and Piano—Le Barriere de Seville, by Mrs. O. W. Brady and Miss Olive Hill. This Duo was perfectly and artistically interpreted by the exceptionally sympathetic and fine performers.

The Aria—"Rosy Morning Over the Meadows" from Il Trovatore Verdi by Mrs. Gertrude Hoy was charmingly sung, as only Mrs. Hoy can sing, as was also the encore "Dance Cuckoo" was next given by the chorus. A short intermission followed after which the Stumton Orchestra played "Intermezzo Russe" and an encore in a sprightly happy style. The "Hunting Chorus" which was given by the Club was quite a bright and cherry selection, which Miss Mabel Bowler followed with the charming vocal solo "I Hear You Calling Me," and the "Song of the Soul" as encore. "Valse Brillante"—a piano solo—Troskowski, was most brilliantly rendered by Mrs. Ernest Tolar.

A very delightful vocal trio—from Elijah was given by Mrs. I. A. Newton and Miss Mabel Bowler and Stumton, after which the club chorus sang Sullivan's beautiful soul longing "The Last Chord." Two more vocal solos were sung by Mrs. Hoy. The program was concluded by the beautiful quartette "Good-Night, Beloved," Edouard Pinauti, given by a double quartette composed of Mrs. B. H. Pugh, Mrs. C. L. Polk, Roland Wildman, W. L. Tillinghast, Paul Pugh.

Each performer on the program certainly did their parts so delightfully and well that special praise is unnecessary, except to congratulate the Music Club on their good fortune in having Miss Olive Hill as a member, her skill as a pianist and sympathetic interpretation in an accompanist can rarely be surpassed. She contributed very largely to the success of the concert last Monday night, as well as to the pleasure of the practice by the chorus.

Numbers of companies have given concerts and musical entertainments, for which seventy-five cents, and one dollar have been paid, that in no single instance, surpassed the excellence of the concert and class of music given by home talent Monday evening. They, however, had one advantage, namely that they were strangers, and the expectation was something new.

Fun At The Baby Show

The climax of the baby show at the Imperial came on Wednesday night when the baby was given away. This event had been advertised far and wide and the house was crowded from pit to dome by the people who were anxious to see the beautiful orphan baby given away. The numbers were placed in a box and one of them drawn out, and the lucky lady walked up to the stage to receive the sweet little infant.

CLARK AND GIBBONS

Made Address Here On Wednesday To Large Crowd

CLARK DEFENDS HIS POSITION

Gave Brief History Of His Work In Congress and Replied To Attacks of Enemies

Sanford's first real political meeting of the campaign took place Wednesday on Park Avenue at Newlan's corner, and for that time of the day, was well attended many business men taking an hour off to hear a discussion of the questions of the day.

Hon. Frank Clark had been advertised to speak today but on account of previous engagements it was necessary to change the date and for this reason there were many people denied the chance to attend the meeting.

Mayor Spencer presided and introduced Frank Clark who launched into the subject in a most vigorous manner and in a calm and forceful style gave a true account of his stewardship as member of Congress from this district taking up each subject along the line of the charges that have been leveled against him by his opponents. His exposition of the Everglades matter and the attacks of Governor Gilchrist and others brought forth repeated applause and the large crowd present seemed to be with him to a man. He stated that the Everglades investigation had been started by him because hundreds of working people throughout the country had purchased lands that were under water and would be for years and the truth had not been told them. That the report had gone forth that Clark had suppressed the report on the Everglades for his personal interests and in justice to his state, to his district and himself and to the purchasers, he had called for the truth and if the Everglades proposition was a good one it would certainly bear an investigation. Gov. Gilchrist had come to Washington and written a garbled report for the Washington Post condemning Clark and he had only defended himself when attacked by the governor first. His statements were roundly applauded and the people here were glad to hear Clark's side of the controversy for the first time. Continuing Mr. Clark took up the Sherwood bill, his position on the tariff and his manner of looking out for the best interests of his constituents at all times in connection with the present tariff with Republicans and Democrats and fully explained the order of obtaining measures for the Florida people by assisting other members to pass their individual bills.

Giving a brief history of his stand on various bills of importance Clark finished by telling of his good work for this section in the matter of deeper water for the St. Johns and Lake Harney and the securing of a public building for Sanford.

Frank Clark has always received a warm welcome and a good vote here but he will receive a greater one this time after his plain and straightforward talk to the voters Wednesday. He has done all that man could do for this section and will do more under a Democratic administration and the people do not wish to try out a new man on this important position when Mr. Clark can accomplish so much for us in the next two years.

Hon. Cromwell Gibbons was the next speaker and his hearty, good natured way had before the audience his claims for the position of Governor of Florida. Mr. Gibbons won the crowd at once and his plan for selling the Everglades and putting the money, some twenty-five million dollars, in the state treasury for good schools and good roads and forever settling the matter of the Everglades and the I. I. Board up peeled to the people at once and was the best proposition regarding this white elephant that has been laid before the voters yet. He also gave his plans for working the convicts on the state roads and making them self supporting.

Gov. Gibbons had but a few moments to speak as he had another engagement to fill but he captured the crowd and can rest assured that in Sanford he will have a large vote next Tuesday. His full platform is given elsewhere in this issue of the Herald.

COLONEL GIBBONS HERE

Prominent Candidate for Governor Meets Sanford Friends

Col. Cromwell Gibbons, candidate for Governor, was in Sanford for several hours on Wednesday and divided honors with Hon. Frank Clark in the afternoon. Col. Gibbons has not been in Sanford for some years and was greatly surprised at the wonderful growth of this section.

"South Florida," said Col. Gibbons, "is just entering a period of remarkable agricultural and industrial development which gives its people a particular interest in some of the important issues which are being discussed in this campaign."

"You need splendid roads to open the thousands of acres of magnificent farm lands to your markets and railroad stations. You need settlers of the type who come prepared to work and assimilate with the best element of your communities. You need schools for the education of the children of these people. You need railroad service that is prompt, safe and adequate for the transportation of these people to your settlements and for the hauling of the products they raise to the best markets."

"I am advocating the abolition of the convict lease system, and the employment of prisoners in the construction of good roads, not in the form of an expensive revolution which would be a burden upon the tax payers, but a gradual development of a permanent and inexpensive system. I am urging the establishment of State bureaus of publicity and migration, the first to exploit the rich resources of Florida and the agricultural and industrial opportunities it offers. The second is for the purpose of making an impartial distribution of the new settlers who come in response to our advertising to all parts of the state where there are lands ready for cultivation without expensive reclamation processes."

It will be recalled that the school systems, health better structures to house and educate school children pay the instructors salaries that are more in keeping with the requirements of the position in point of character, education and special fitness.

"Stand squarely on that plank of my platform which demands that the railroad commission of the State be given the authority which is necessary to enable it to make orders and enforce them in such a way as to guarantee that the just rights of the people and communities which these lines touch and cross be protected. The disparity between the political favors granted and the state during the past season and the movement unsatisfactory locals which serve the people of Florida every day in the year is entirely too great to please a loyal Floridian."

It is my contention that the State owes it to the people to undertake a program of interior development which will offset the unfavorable effect of present operations of our banks and companies. We should have a department for the control of those corporations and use for the control of corporations generally. Every corporation which desires to offer its stocks or securities to the people of this state should be subjected to careful scrutiny at the hands of a competent state board before permission to do this is granted. This would save the people vast sums of money annually and would add to the stability of worthy enterprises. The state should inspect and go into the affairs of corporations regularly, as it does with banks, at stated periods.

"There are more than 40 million acres of the finest farming lands in the world in Florida which do not need drainage or irrigation. I want to see that the state do its share of the work of peopling them. Of the cultivable lands in Florida, only three per cent is now productive according to the last official statement. The people of this section can assist me in this work by supporting my candidacy."

To raise money I am in favor of selling the remaining lands of the state in the Everglades for $20 an acre, the proceeds to take up the burdens of reclamation. This will give us $25,000,000 for schools and good roads."

Work will soon begin in Jacksonville on a five-story structure for the Ames Realty Company. The building will be located on Adams and Julia streets.

In the case of Dr. W. E. Davis, charged with making an assault with a deadly weapon on J. A. Bryan at Brooksville, there was a mistrial at the last term of court, the jury yesterday brought in a verdict of not guilty.

Paul Ley, the 15-year old son of Rev. F. F. Ley of this city is in the class of young heroes, having saved the life of another boy while swimming in Peace river yesterday. Young Ley, Luther Langford, Robert Hellingworth and some other boys were down at the river about noon yesterday. Alvin Kellam, a boy of perhaps 10 years was in the water, playing around and stepped off over his head. Being unable to swim he was in great danger of losing his life and would have done so but for the prompt action of Paul Ley. The boy had gone down the second time when Paul reached him and soon had him safely on the shore.

The several committees arranging for the entertainment of the members of the Florida State Horticultural Society have nearly completed their work. The citizens of Miami feel that it is a great honor to have the members of this society gather here for their annual meeting and every possible effort will be made to make their stay enjoyable.

Stabbed By A Negro Boy

Joe Miot, the young son of M. A. Miot was stabbed by a negro named Broxton as he was on his way home Wednesday evening. The negro made the assault so quickly that Joe had no time to defend himself, and as he was stabbed several times one cut that would have proved fatal but for the fact that the knife glanced from his ribs and the blade was deflected. The negro was arrested and in Judge Stringfellow's court was bound over to criminal court for assault with intent to murder, and he ought to be sentenced to making roads until he reaches the age where he will know better. His victim is under the physician's care and expects to recover sufficiently to be out in a few days.
