Unemployment

U.S. Jobless Rate Climbs; Florida And Area Rates Held Down

While the nation's unemployment rate soared to 9.8 percent in July, the unemployment picture in Florida and Seminole County was somewhat brighter.

The jobless rate dropped in Florida in July to 7.3 percent, as compared to 7.5 percent in June, according to the State Department of Labor and Employment Statistics.

The latest figure available for Seminole County is June's 5.8 percent unemployment rate. Tim McCauley, Florida Employment Service office manager in Sanford, said he expects the local July rate to remain the same or drop slightly.

"We did pretty well in July," said McCauley. "We placed between 240 and 250 persons in jobs. We recruited employees for the new Toys R Us store in Altamonte Springs and saw 600 persons in two days. A lot of people with degrees applied for jobs like stock clerks and cashiers. There were 42 people hired, but they will be hiring another 40 later."

The U.S. Labor Department reported today that women and teenagers are bearing the brunt of the slump in the recession-starved job market.

The seasonally adjusted rate was 0.3 percentage points above the 9.5 percent level in May and June, and set a post-World War II record.

The previous high was 9.9 percent on an annual rate in 1941. The number of Americans out of work increased by 360,000 to 10.8 million in July, which does not include about 1.5 million persons considered too discouraged to actively seek employment.

Statistics of the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics showed the teenage unemployment rate setting a new record of 24.1 percent in July, a full point above the previous record set in May.

For adult women, the 8.4 percent level in July neared the record 8.5 percent rate in April and May of 1975.

The only category not to experience an increase over the month was black workers, which remained at a high 18.5 percent level.

For construction workers, the jobless rate broke the 20 percent level, hitting 20.3 percent in July.

Total employment during July kept in line with seasonal expectations, according to the department, and was at 99.7 million, about the same as June. Over the year, however, the job market has declined by 1.1 million.

In other unemployment categories, the rate for adult men rose 0.1 percentage point to 8.8 percent; the white worker rate was up 0.3 percentage points to 8.7 percent, and Hispanic worker experienced a 0.4 percentage point jump to 13.9 percent.

The rate for black teenagers, which was a record 52.6 percent in June, dropped slightly to 49.7 percent.

The average duration of unemployment, however, declined as the July increase in joblessness occurred among those out of a job less than five weeks.

Today's report follows sharp criticism of Reagan administration economic policies by AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland during the federation's summer Executive Council meeting in New York, and his irritation that the administration has allowed the rate to be as high as June's figure.

Cities Talk Bug Control

By JOE DeSANTIS
Herald Staff Writer

Lake Mary City Manager Phil Kulbes says that costs of a mosquito control program might be reduced if participating cities could work out a deal to swap equipment.

Kulbes' report to his City Council Thursday followed a meeting among various Seminole city managers about implementing mosquito control programs for the respective cities.

Earlier this week, the County Commission turned down the idea of an estimated $400,000 countywide spraying program, stating that the effectiveness of the program just wouldn't stack up against the cost.

Several weeks ago, Sanford City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles sent questionnaires to the various cities asking about the extent of their respective mosquito control programs and what each city was doing about the bug problem.

Altamonte Springs reported that it has a weekly spraying program, Winter Springs sprays on fair days, Longwood sprays if the city receives complaints about the flying insects, while Kulbes reported that he has not received a single call about a mosquito problem in Lake Mary.

"If that's the case," asked Councilman Vic Olvera, "What bit me the other day?"

Kulbes said that the county has come up with an estimate of $191,000 to purchase equipment for a countywide program.

Kulbes said that a cooperative agreement between the cities to share the equipment was discussed, however, no decision has been made to implement an eradication program.

County Administrator Roger Nelwender urged a cooperative effort but also pointed out that the cities would have to have certified operators to run the equipment.

Councilman Ray Fox said that it's been so dry in some areas of the state such as Jacksonville, that no self-respecting mosquito could survive.

Police Learn CPR

More than 50 Sanford Police Department officers were certified or recertified in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) recently when instructors from Central Florida Regional Hospital and Seminole Community College held classes at SPD headquarters.

Ruth Wade, American Heart Association affiliate faculty CPR instructor and registered nurse at Central Florida Regional who was in charge of the faculty, said the classes were presented free and held under the sponsorship of the Central Florida Chapter of the American Heart Association.

CPR is normally a six-hour course for non-certified persons. The course includes instruction and participation in one person, two persons and infant CPR along with procedures for clearing obstructed airways in adults and infants.

Central Florida Regional Hospital holds bimonthly Basic Life Support free classes which are open to the public.

Crime Lab Petition To Governor

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Downtown Orlando is still the Florida Department of Law Enforcement's favored site for the new $3.2 million Central Florida Crime Laboratory.

But the final decision on the site will be made jointly by the FDLE and the state's Department of General Services, Frank Carter, FDLE division director, said today. And no time has been set for a final decision, he said.

"If the Orlando site proves to be unfeasible, we're back at square one and will consider other sites," he said.

With the decision on a site not yet official, half of the employees of the Sanford Crime Laboratory in a last-ditch effort have petitioned Gov. Bob Graham and the Cabinet to step in and designate a Lake Mary site.

The city of Lake Mary has offered a long term lease to the state for a new lab off Rinehart Road.

Fearing the new laboratory "may be used as a political pawn," the employees cited the high crime rate in downtown Orlando as a major reason for their refusal to support that site.

The petition says although the employees pride themselves on their willingness to work overtime to reduce case backlogs, they warned this attitude may change if the new lab is built in downtown Orlando.

"There may be a significant decrease in caseload output because the analysts and support staff may not be willing to risk personal safety by working evening and weekend hours. Approximately 36 percent of our total staff is female, which makes a particularly easy target available."

The petition also points to the traffic congestion and high accident rate in Orlando as "very serious problems".

"Two out of the 10 top worst accident sites are interchanges that will be used by 75 percent of the employees in traveling to and from (the Orlando site)," the petition said.

The petition also notes that the laboratory should not be in a shared multi-story building. It was pointed out that the laboratory is predominantly a chemical analysis facility, and houses highly explosive chemicals and compressed gas tanks. The lab must provide for heavy use of electrical current and there must be available a firearms section with shooting area.

"Not only are the laboratory employees their own potential victims, but any other agency that shares a facility with the laboratory also incurs the risk of becoming a victim in case of accident or explosion.

The FDLE plan is to locate the laboratory in a state office building.

The petition signed by 26 employees also notes that the lab must have access to a fenced compound area adjacent to the laboratory garage for examination of vehicles.

"It has been suggested that the laboratory share a lot of a few blocks away. This is totally impractical," the petition states.

Citing disadvantages of an Orlando downtown site, the petition says that while the Orlando Police Department and the Orange County Sheriff's Departments are the largest single contributors to the lab, "their cases make up only 22 percent of the entire caseload. Only one person from each of these agencies visits our laboratory one time per week to submit evidence."

The petition says the employees are oriented toward the smaller police agencies and that it will cost those agencies more to travel to Orlando to bring in one case than it would for Orlando to drive to Lake Mary with 10 cases.

"The smaller agencies will be economically hurt. Many of our contributors have expressed a personal desire to travel to Lake Mary, not only because of economics, but also to avoid the heavily congested traffic in Orlando," the petition said.

—The Petition

More than 75 percent of the employees at the Sanford Lab, which is to be replaced by the new facility, live closer to Lake Mary than to downtown Orlando, the petition says.

The petition says that the traveling costs for the employees will be higher to Orlando and that the employees will have to pay $20 to $30 monthly for parking fees that would not be necessary at the Lake Mary site.

If it's decided by the state to build a new office building in Orlando and to have the crime laboratory in that building, it will be 1985 or later, the petition says, before the new crime lab space will be available. A free-standing building in Lake Mary just for the crime lab could be built by December 1983 or early 1984, the petition says.

Copies of the petition also were sent to Thomas R. Brown, executive director of the Department of General Services; State Rep. Robert Hattaway, Sheriff John Polk, Lake Mary Police Chief Harry Benson, FDLE Director-Designate Robert Dempsey, and Sanford industrialist and developer Jenno Paulucci.

Winter Springs Boy, 3, Drowns

An autopsy of a 3-year-old Winter Springs boy Thursday confirmed police reports that the child fell into his family's pool and drowned Wednesday evening.

Police said Michael David Hoop, of 70 S. Cortez Ave., died at about 8:30 p.m. Wednesday after he wandered away from his 13-year-old sister, who was babysitting him, and fell into the pool, drowning in about 4-foot deep water. Efforts by rescue workers at the scene failed to revive the young boy.

Young Hoop was the son of Kenneth and Sharon Hoop, and had two sisters, Pauline and Sherri Lynn, police said.

Dispute

Authority To Sue Over Damage

Attorney Ned Julian Jr. will go to court on behalf of the Sanford Housing Authority to settle a dispute over hail and storm damage to the roofs of five of the six public housing projects in Sanford.

Housing Authority Chairman Joseph Caldwell said today authority commissioners instructed Julian to file suit against Allendale Insurance Co. over the issue.

Caldwell said the roofs were damaged at five of the six projects in the early April storm. The only housing project that did not suffer roof damage was Redding Gardens.

"We have not been able to reach an agreement out of court," Caldwell said.

In other business at Thursday night's Housing Authority meeting, the commissioners interviewed two new candidates for the post of executive director.

Interviewed were Ramon McCough, currently with the Farmers Home Administration office in Sanford, and Vickie Leap, a Winter Springs resident who formerly worked with a housing authority in Ohio.

"We are having an almost constant flow of new applications for the executive director's post," Caldwell said. Other interviews with applicants will be scheduled in the next few weeks, Caldwell said.

New $1 Million Sanford Medical Complex Backed

The Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday night gave its blessings to the site plan of the $1 million medical complex to be built by the Triple County Medical Center, Inc.

The medical center complex is to be built on 1.3 acres off Mangoustine Avenue, across the street from the Central Florida Regional Hospital.

The approval was subject to the city's Board of Adjustment granting an exception to the footage in the side yard of the facility. The plans show less than 10 feet in the setback while city law requires a 20-foot setback. The approval also is subject to approval by the city's engineering department.

Construction on the project, containing eight doctor office suites, and a Faust's Pharmacy is to be completed and open for rental in early January 1983.

Dr. Kenneth Wing is president of the corporation.

A second phase of development to be done at a future time on the remaining property in the five-acre tract, Dr. Wing said, will be a 10-story condominium valued at about $12 million.

In other business, the board granted approval to preliminary plans for Phase III, Unit 1 of Hidden Lake, southeast of the present development.

It contains 100 lots. Approval also was given for a preliminary plat of Hidden Lake Villas, 97 cluster homes, southwest of Airport Boulevard.

The approvals were contingent upon engineering approval and zoning approval of final plats. — DONNA ESTES

NATION IN BRIEF

Nuclear Freeze Defeat Gives Reagan Major Win

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the defeat of the nuclear arms freeze by a two-vote margin, Congress gave President Reagan an important foreign policy and arms control victory. Reagan hailed it as a strong signal to the Soviets.

After eight hours of debate, the House Thursday rejected the nuclear arms freeze when it approved, 204-202, a resolution that supports Reagan's strategic arms reduction policy.

In its simplest terms, the resolution supported by freeze supporters calls for a freeze now and reductions later. The Reagan-backed proposal calls for negotiated reductions to be followed by a later freeze.

The United States and the Soviet Union now are meeting in Geneva on Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, called START, and on limiting Europe-based, intermediate-range nuclear missiles, called INF.

Carter, Arafat Nearly Met

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Jimmy Carter nearly held direct talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization but PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat scuttled the bid, Carter's national security adviser said in an interview.

"In 1977-78, we came very close to engaging the PLO in direct American-Palestinian discussions, but at the last minute Arafat attached unacceptable conditions to what could have become a very constructive negotiating process," Zbigniew Brzezinski said.

The United States government refuses to talk directly to the PLO until the guerrilla group recognizes Israel's right to exist.

Marilyn Remembered

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The fascination Marilyn Monroe held for millions lives on 20 years after her death, even extending to those too young to remember.

Many of the estimated 200 mourners who attended a cryptside ceremony on the 20th anniversary of her death Thursday said they attended simply, "because I love Marilyn."

Earlier this week, a private detective who claims Miss Monroe was murdered to protect government secrets revealed by Sen. Robert Kennedy called for a new investigation into her death.

Bush To Campaign To Help McCollum

Vice President George Bush will put in an appearance at two Orlando fund-raisers to benefit the re-election campaign of U.S. Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Altamonte Springs, on Sept. 6.

A McCollum campaign aide said today Bush is tentatively scheduled to appear with McCollum at a function at the Harley Hotel in Orlando at mid-day and then appear at Cheyenne Saloon at Church Street Station later in the day.

Tickets for both events may be purchased from McCollum's headquarters by calling 629-5400.

McCollum, completing his first two-year term in office, is being challenged in his bid for re-election by State Rep. Dick Batchelor, D-Orlando.

The slow-moving storms hit already sodden Des Moines, Iowa, with 5 inches of rain and flash-flooding watches were posted for lowland areas. In St. Louis, the downpour-caused flash flooding, knocked out power lines and left most of the city without power early today.

For Seminole Registrants

Voter Deadline Saturday

By JOE DeSANTIS
Herald Staff Writer

The Seminole County Supervisor of Elections office is expecting a hectic Saturday as voter registration deadline for the September 7 primary fast approaches.

Seminole County voters have until 5 p.m. Saturday to register at either the Sanford office, located in the old jail complex behind the County Courthouse between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. or at the branch office located in the Interstate Mall at the intersection of Interstate 4 and State Highway 436, Altamonte Springs, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

"It might be more feasible for people to take a few minutes and drive to the Sanford office to register," advises office supervisor Sandy Goard.

"We anticipate a longer wait at the branch office because that seems to be where most of the county growth has been," she said.

Mrs. Goard said that despite a lull in registration activity over the past month, the number of voters coming in to register this week has picked up dramatically.

"Registration wasn't very heavy at all until this week," she said. "That could be because the various municipal City Halls have been taking registrations also."

Goard said, however, that the Sanford office and branch office have averaged about 140 registrations per day during this, the final week of registration.

Voters who fail to register by 5 p.m.

Saturday are not eligible to vote in either the September 7 or October 5 primary elections. Registration will, however, continue for the general election in November. Voter registration deadline for the November general election is October 2.

Goard said no identification is normally required, although voters with old registration cards from another jurisdiction are requested to bring the old registration cards and turn them in.

"People take an oath when they register," said Mrs. Goard.

"Usually the only time we'll ask someone for identification is when the registration applicant looks younger than 18 years old."

Birth Control Proposal Called Political

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Family planning and some members of Congress are worried about a Reagan administration proposal they say would move government birth control programs into the political arena.

The proposal under consideration in the Health and Human Services Department would shift authority for federal birth control programs from career health employees to a political appointee with ties to anti-abortion groups.

But critics say the plan could be a cover for the administration's real intent to destroy federally financed family planning programs.

The proposal would transfer family planning programs from the Bureau of Community Health Services in the HHS Public Health Service to its Office of Population Affairs.

The office is run by Marjory Mecklenburg, HHS deputy assistant secretary for population affairs and co-founder of American Citizens Concerned for Life, a group opposed to abortion.

She is also architect of the administration's proposal to require parents be told when girls under 18 get birth control prescriptions from federally financed clinics.

Builder To Appeal License Suspension

A Lake Mary home builder plans to appeal to the Seminole County Commission the suspension of his operating license by the county's Building Contractor's Licensing Board.

The board Wednesday suspended the license of Erwin Peltzer, president of Peltzer Construction Co., for supposedly violating a county ordinance requiring the installation of drainage swales to divert water runoff from around structures.

The indefinite suspension was levied after a Wekiva Club Estates couple, Robert and Ruth Goldenberg, said drainage at their house has been inadequate since they moved into it in June 1981.

The Goldenbergs said rain stands for days in their backyard and runs into their garage and screened pool. The couple said they tried unsuccessfully to have Peltzer remedy the situation.

Board members said the suspension would be lifted if Peltzer corrects the drainage problems and has an engineer verify they meet county specifications.

Peltzer said he would correct the problem, but promised to appeal his suspension to the County Commission.

Under the license suspension, Peltzer would not be allowed to undertake any new construction in Seminole County. The suspension would not affect projects now under construction, according to county law.

Peltzer told board members he has tried to do everything possible to correct the situation but the real problem rests with the developer.

The swales, lowspots that improve drainage, were constructed, but County Building Official Don Flippen said he inspected the Goldenberg's home in late June and found that water from side yards was draining into neighbors' yards. The back yard had not been swaled at all he said.

Peltzer was unavailable for comment concerning any further action he plans.

When Should Women Have Children? Controversy Grows Over French Study

BOSTON (UPI) — Women who pursue careers and put off childbirth until their 30s are more satisfied with their lives than younger women who have children shortly after marriage, a study shows.

The findings, reported Thursday in the New England Journal of Medicine, contradict the advice of Yale University doctors who urged women to have children early in life to avoid problems with pregnancy.

The Yale recommendation was based on a French study that found fertility in women undergoing artificial insemination began to decline after 30 and dropped off sharply after 35. In some cases, older women failed to conceive at all.

In an editorial accompanying the French research in the Feb. 18 Journal, Yale's Dr. Alan H. DeCherney and researcher Gertrud S. Berkowitz said it may be a good reason for women to have babies while they are in their 20s and concentrate on careers afterward.

today's issue from psychologists, medical experts and a sociologist who accused the Yale team of misinterpreting the results of the French study and misleading women.

Psychologists Kathy Weingarten and Pamela Daniels of Wellesley College's Center for Research on Women said their 86-couple study showed women who delayed childbirth had fewer regrets and more solid careers than women who had babies in their 20s.

'Without exception, couples who had their first child in their early 20s later wished they had delayed parenthood.'

"Without exception, couples who had their first child in their early 20s — within one or two years of marriage — later wished they had delayed parenthood in order first to develop as individuals and as couples," the researchers wrote in a letter to the editor.

"Both men and women experienced psychological and economic strain with early parenthood," they said.

The Wellesley researchers suggested women postpone parenthood until their late 30s, "allowing the necessary time in the 20s to develop a coherent sense of self, a relationship resilient enough to meet the challenges of parenthood, and a meaningful lifework for both parents."

"DeCherney and Berkowitz have done a substantial disservice by misinterpreting the results of the French study," wrote Norman B. Ryder, a Princeton University sociology professor and population specialist.

Edith Brickman and John Beckwith of Harvard Medical School's microbiology department said the slightly longer period of time it would take for an older woman to conceive "is certainly no reason for a woman to disrupt her career."

Paraquat Spraying Supported By Feds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Justice Department is endorsing spraying of the controversial herbicide paraquat to eradicate marijuana, maintaining the spraying will not damage the environment or harm human health.

The department has urged a federal court to dismiss a motion by the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws seeking to ban the use of paraquat in Florida.

NORML, which favors marijuana decriminalization, asked the U.S. District Court in Washington Friday to issue a preliminary injunction against the spraying of paraquat in Florida. The group cited possible adverse environmental and health effects.

But the department said there is no evidence of significant environmental or health effects from the use of paraquat, which is used for various other agricultural applications in the United States.

Kevin Zeese, NORML executive director, said the government's position was "not surprising" to the pro-marijuana activist group.

He said the Justice Department ignored a National Academy of Sciences report that found "exposure to paraquat results in death and disease." He said he is "very confident" when U.S. District Judge Harrington Parker weighs all the evidence he will agree to the injunction.

The DEA is encouraging state officials to undertake law enforcement efforts aimed at large-scale cultivators and distributors of marijuana. The agency gives technical and financial assistance to such law enforcement efforts.

Headache Research A Long Time Coming

MIAMI (UPI) — Folks have been suffering painful, chronic headaches since the days of the cavemen, but it's only been in the last 20 years that medical experts have been taking headaches seriously.

Dr. Barry Baumel, head of the Miami-based Neurological Center for Headache, says it's been a longtime coming, but the myth that headaches are "all in the mind" has died slowly.

"Finally, they are beginning to get the attention they deserve," said Baumel. "Headache sufferers no longer have to believe that they brought it on themselves."

"A lot of people were ashamed to say they had headaches before," added Seymour Diamond, executive director of the American Association for the Study of Headache. "They were told their pain wasn't authentic, that they were putting it on."

Statistics show that throbbing, piercing headaches will send 70 to 90 million Americans to the doctor for treatment this year. Headache victims will gobble 700 million pounds of aspirin and their 126 million sick days will cost industry $6 billion in lost productivity.

The pain they suffer will range from mild tension headaches, centered in the neck and scalp, to violent cluster headaches that drive some victims to the brink of suicide. Migraines, another crippling form of headache, will strike an estimated 8 to 12 million Americans, most of them women.

The International Headache Registry estimates 20 percent of the world's population suffer chronic, recurring headaches.

Even though headaches are sometimes triggered by stress and anxiety, many researchers now believe chemical abnormalities in the brain make some people prone to headaches.

Certain foods, coffee, alcohol, the weather, altitude, menstruation and sexual intercourse also can play a role in triggering headache attacks.

Oral contraceptives, upsetting hormonal balance, can intensify migraine headaches, warns Dr. Michael Goodson, chief neurology at Miami's Mount Sinai Medical Center. Chocolate nuts, hard cheese and red wine (not white) also can cause attacks.

There is some evidence the migraine is an inherited illness. In families where the parents suffer migraines, there is a 70 percent chance their children will have them as well, some studies show.

Cluster headaches, so named because they occur in clusters, strike 300,000 Americans each year. They are also linked to changes in blood flow to the brain and recur one to three times daily for up to 12 weeks before mysteriously vanishing.

Alcohol is a key triggering agent for cluster headaches, and even a piece of rum cake can touch off an attack. Men are 20 times as likely to suffer cluster headaches than women, studies show.

Baumel's clinic is experimenting with calcium-blocking drugs, which prevent blood vessel spasms, as a remedy for migraine. Several of the new arthritis drugs, including Feldine and Anaprox, also seem to combat migraines, Baumel said.

Tension headaches, an aching sensation that radiates out from the neck and scalp, are the most common form of headache. About 60 to 80 percent of headache victims seeking medical treatment suffer tension headaches, studies show.

Men and women suffer tension headaches in equal numbers. Stress, anxiety, poor posture, caffeine and eye strain can be contributing factors. But a deficiency of adrenalin-like chemicals in the brain may be the chief culprit, Diamond said.

Diamond has successfully treated tension headache patients with zomepirac sodium, a prescription drug that relieves pain without the side effects of tranquilizers and barbiturates.

Small doses of tricyclic antidepressant drugs like Elavil, Imipramine and Sinequan also have been highly effective, said Baumel.

Acupuncture, widely used in China to treat headaches, has not been very successful in America.

Let Doc Decide Vitamin D Needs

DEAR DR. LAMB - I'm a 66-year-old female who had a complete collapse of the vertebrae due to osteoporosis three years ago. I'm getting along very well without the brace I wore at the time because of intense pain. I'm free of pain now.

I'm very upset because I read an article that said taking vitamin D can result in vitamin D poisoning if you take too much. It is true that vitamin D will my condition get worse?

DEAR READER - Many things in life that you need can also be harmful. And in the presence of disease some things you use need to be increased or decreased. It is true that vitamin D will cause damage in a normal person. BUT it is known that people with osteoporosis have trouble absorbing calcium from the digestive system. To bring them up to normal and get enough calcium into the bloodstream to strengthen their bones many doctors prescribe large doses of vitamin D along with calcium.

In these cases, since you are combating a calcium deficiency in the body, you will not develop the problems of vitamin D toxicity. There are other medical conditions too, where absorption from the digestive system is impaired and additional vitamins and minerals are necessary.

Let your doctor chart your course in relation to your evidence of bone loss, symptoms and blood calcium levels. Do not change your medicines without his consent or you may increase your chances of having further bone loss.

And I'm glad you are doing well without your brace. I don't recommend braces unless there is an acute problem such as pain. Then you need them.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-10, Osteoporosis: Bone Softening, to give you more information on what causes it and how it is treated. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB - Our daughter is becoming quite serious with her boyfriend. We like the lad, but there is one problem. He has deep rings under his eyes. We have been told these have some relationship to a man's sexual potency. Is this true? If it is true, is there any cure?

DEAR READER - From all the letters I get about dark circles under the eyes there must be a rather deep-seated prejudice against people with this condition. Why? Possibly because when a person is thin or loses weight the veins and the dark pigment are more obvious. A hundred years ago when the leading cause of death was tuberculosis, this may have been observed in terminally ill patients.

But is caused by an increase of pigment, the same pigment that induces a tan, and in thin people the loss of fat pads make the veins more obvious. It is untrue that it has any relationship to distipation, too much sex, masturbation or not enough sex. Dark circles under the eyes have no relation to your prospective son-in-law's sexual potency.

Opening lead: ♠K
By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag
West was a member of that group of bridge players who bid everything they can and then double their opponents. Of course, this West had a mighty good hand for his bidding. Even with East's blank hand West would make eight or maybe nine tricks at hearts.

As for his final double, the less said the better, except that it was a bad percentage play. He wasn't going to set South more than one trick and there was no reason to expect to even collect that small penalty.

Anyway, West did double and opened his king of hearts. East followed with the deuce and West stopped to try to figure out any way to get four tricks out of what now appeared to be a collection of junk.

Finally, West saw a chance. At trick two he shifted to the deuce of diamonds. South won the trick in dummy and went into a slight trance.

He could see that West had found a way to beat his normally lay down contract. Then South cashed two trumps. He couldn't afford a third trump lead since that would leave him with his last two hearts as losers, so South led a second diamond. West rose with his ace, gave his partner a diamond ruff and set the contract when East returned a heart. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Inspect Tree Lightning Damage Before Treating

This is the time of year when a number of trees are lost due to lightning.

Lightning injuries to trees are extremely variable and appear to be governed by the voltage of the charge, the moisture content of the part struck and the species of tree involved.

The woody parts of the tree may be completely shattered, then may burn. A thin strip of bark parallel to the wood fibers down the entire length of the trunk may be burned or stripped off, the internal tissue may be severely burned without external evidence, or part of all of the roots may be killed.

Desmond Hastings

Urban Horticulturist
323-2500
Ext. 181

The upper trunk and branches of evergreens may be killed outright, while the lower portions remain unaffected. In crowded groves, trees close to the one directly hit may also die. In many cases, grass and other vegetation growing near the stricken trunk will be killed.

So-called "hot bolts" with temperatures over 25,000 degrees Fahrenheit will make an entire tree burst into flames, while "cold" lightning can make it literally explode as it strikes at 20,000 miles per second.

On occasion, both types fail to cause apparent damage, but months later the tree dies from burned roots and internal tissue damage.

Tall trees or those growing alone in open areas and trees with roots in moist soils or those growing along bodies of water are most likely to be struck.

Though no species of tree is totally immune, some are definitely more resistant to lightning bolts than others. Birch, for example, is rarely struck, whereas elm, maple, oak and pine are commonly hit. The reason for the wide variation in susceptibility is not clear.

Some authorities attribute the variation to the composition of the trees. Trees high in oils (birch and beech) are poor conductors of electricity, whereas trees high in starch content (ash, maple, and oak) are good conductors. In addition, deep-rooted or decaying trees appear to be more subject to attack than are shallow-rooted or healthy trees.

It is commonly believed that lightning never strikes twice in the same place. This is not true for some trees have been struck by lightning as many as seven times, judging from the scars on their trunks.

Inspect an injured tree carefully before any attempt is made to fix the damage. Many trees are severely injured internally or below ground, despite the absence of external symptoms and will soon die regardless of treatment. Consequently, expensive treatments should not be undertaken until the tree appears to be making a good recovery.

Where external damage is not great or where the tree is particularly valuable, several immediate measures are justifiable. Some benefit is derived by tacking on and covering with burlap any long thin pieces of bark that have been split or lifted from the sapwood. Shattered limbs and torn bark should be removed carefully and open surfaces dressed. In addition, the tree should be fertilized to stimulate vigorous growth.

All Extensions Programs are open to anyone regardless of race, color, sex or national origin.

Family Reunion Attracts 500 Before Sundown

The grandest family reunion you've ever seen was held Saturday in Geneva at the home of Viola Levine and her daughter, Eloise Moore.

Over 200 members of the Butler and McMillian families gathered for the noon meal, a covered dish event held in the yard. The gang swelled to almost 500 by the time the sun was going down.

In the evening hours, the families had a fish fry — and by Sunday, those who were still "visiting" got into making some homemade ice cream.

Some of the interesting facets of the Butler-McMillian reunion were: the person traveling the farthest to attend was Mrs. Marie Baker Hall from Rochester, N.Y. The ones who claimed to be "the oldest family members present" were: Viola Levine, Viola Wheatherspoon, Eva Mae Kelley, Ada Johnson, Alice Simmons and Francis Williams. The youngest in the family present was 2-month-old Chiffvon Hillery who just happened to be the last baby born at the Seminole Memorial Hospital.

An action-packed field trip is being planned for the grade school children who are participating in the Summer Activities program for next Thursday.

According to Karin Cochran, coordinator of the program, the kids will be leaving Geneva Elementary School at 9 a.m. to go by car caravan to the Ranger Tower in Longwood. They will return to the school in time for lunch.

For more information, you may call Karin at 349-5558. The Summer Activities program is open to any boy or girl of grade school age in the Geneva area, and they need not have attended any previous programs to attend this field trip.

So, please call today, and get in on the fun. This program is sponsored by the Dividend Moms.

The Rev. A. H. Salter, pastor of the Chuluota Assembly of God Church, announced Sunday that the new church building would be dedicated Sept. 4, by District Superintendent, the Rev. Foy Johnson from Lakeland.

There will be a dedication service at 3 p.m. in the afternoon followed by a fellowship barbecue on the grounds. The new facilities are located on Highway 419 in Chuluota, south of the Girl Scout Camp Mah-Kah-Wee.

The regular Sunday services of the church will include Sunday school at 9:45, morning worship at 11:00, evening service at 7 p.m., and mid-week worship on Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

A Smoke Alarm May Have Saved Loved Ones' Lives

DEAR ABBY: Last week a man here in Dayton lost his wife and three children in a fire. The fire chief said a smoke alarm might have saved them.

It hit me hard, Abby, because I lost my three daughters in a fire, wrote to you, and you printed my letter. Please run it again. My three daughters are gone, and that man's three sons plus his wife are gone, but if a rerun of my letter can save one life, it will be worth the space.

By the way, Abby, I'm getting along just great. Thank you very much.

VIRGINIA IN DAYTON

DEAR VIRGINIA: Here's your letter — it's worth the space: (Aug. 30, 1981)

DEAR ABBY: Last Memorial Day our house caught fire. Our three daughters were asleep upstairs, and my husband and I were asleep in the downstairs bedroom. The fire spread so fast and the smoke was so thick we weren't able to get the children. Melinda, 5, was dead on the scene; Suzanne, 2, was dead on arrival at the hospital; and Tonya, 7, was in a coma for two days. She died without coming out of it.

My husband and I still can't believe our little girls are gone. Maybe if we had had a smoke alarm we would still have our children.

While Tonya was in a coma, we were expecting the worst, so we willed her kidneys to the organ bank so that two children who needed a kidney could have them. That gave us some comfort.

Please print this. It's too late for us, but it may save some other parents from having to go through what we went through.

STILL GRIEVING IN DAYTON

DEAR ABBY: I am a sort of unofficial "office manager" by virtue of the fact that I have seniority. (I've been here for 21 years.) There are six girls in this office. Our boss is really the office manager, but he leaves a lot of the details to me.

We recently hired a new secretary. She is a nice person and came well-recommended, but she comes to work at 8 a.m. (like the rest of us), fixes coffee for herself (we have a coffeemaker with cream and sugar here, compliments of the office), but she also brings cottage cheese and bagels, and sometimes hard-boiled eggs and fruit, and she has her breakfast here. She is rarely finished before 8:45 because she brings the morning paper with her to read while she eats.

Do you think she's out of line? She's paid to work from 8 to 4. No location or names, please.

UNOFFICIAL OFFICE MANAGER

DEAR UNOFFICIAL: She's paid to work from 8 to 4, so at 8 she should start working — not eating.

DEAR ABBY: "No reunions," said the person who had no desire to go back and see the classmates who snubbed him (her?) in high school. I know exactly how that person feels.

I was lonely and miserable in high school, too, but I lost some weight, bought some sensational clothes, borrowed a Mercedes and went to my 25th reunion.

All the cute, popular girls who had snubbed me when I didn't have a friend (or a date) showed up looking old and faded. I was the belle of the ball! You should have seen the men line up to dance with the attractive, sultry brunette I had become. Revenge is sweet. I say, "Don't get mad. Get even!"

Let's Putter Around The Golf Course

By JOE DeSANTIS
Herald Staff Writer

There's an old saying around many a golf course clubhouse that goes: "Drive for show, putt for dough."

Calvin Peete, the recent winner of back-to-back Professional Golf Association tournament titles illustrated the importance of putting when he quipped, "After a lot of years with a 65 swing and a 73 score, I think I've discovered how to putt."

On a regular golf course, consistency and possession of all the shots, the drive off the tee, the irons and the putter, are paramount to shaving down those strokes.

But transform the big links to a miniature-sized golf course, like one of the several putt-putt courses in the central Florida area, and the game becomes all together different.

In putt-putt golf, it's not distance that counts, it's touch. And if you plan to par the course, you'd better learn to play the boards, the angles, the loops, the drops and the rises.

One local course, the Fern Park Putt Putt located on U.S. Highway 17-92 and Fern Park Boulevard across from the Orlando-Seminole Jai-Alai fronton, plays host to would-be world conquering putters seven days a week.

The house specialty is a weekly tournament that tees off each Wednesday night at 7:30. For $3, aspiring amateurs can test their skills over 36 holes. There's even a pro ranking among putt putt courses affiliated with the Professional Putters Association. And the PPA is nothing to scoff at.

The annual National Professional Putters Association Tournament held in Columbus, Ohio features $50,000 in prize money with a $25,000 check going each year to America's best putter.

But even if you're not out to join the grind of the pro putting tour, Putt-putt golf offers an excellent chance to test your eye-hand coordination, accuracy and nerves. It's a lot of fun, too.

Over a typical 18-hole course, aspiring putters can look forward to the challenge of straight putts, putts over curved holes with built in rises and dips, bank-shot putts, putts through or around small bodies of water and even a few blind shots.

"We get just about every kind of person out here on the course," says June Daniel, one of the managers at Fern Park Putt Putt.

"Young, old, kids, grown ups. It's a lot of fun for everyone."

On the average, the prospective putter can expect to pay about $1.80 to $2.25 for an 18-hole round. Most courses offer a discount for a three-game ticket. The price includes two-thirds of everything you need to play. The course supplies the putters and the balls. You bring along the nerves of steel and dead-eye accuracy.

And if you are accurate, it pays off. Throughout the Proving putt putt golf has no barriers on age or size, this youngster applies his over-sized club on one of the two 18-hole courses at the Fern Park putt putt course. In addition to regular putters for regular-sized golfers, the course has special putters for little folks. Birthday putt putt parties and weekly tournaments are also part of the putt putt fun.

Trial balloon

'Chandlerstown,' a film anthology of Philip Marlow detective stories, marks the first time cable television has created its own all-new series programming. Could pay TV one day challenge the broadcast networks with such exclusive production? Page 2.

School's in

Following a three-year absence, school is back in session on TV with the addition of 'Teachers Only' to the NBC lineup. Lynn Redgrave plays a sensitive English teacher to Norman Fell's opinionated school principal. Page 5.

Books and films

How many times have you heard, "The book was a lot better than the movie?" That's due in large part to the fact that many authors — like Tommy Thompson — frequently don't, or won't, pen the movie versions of their works. Page 8.

'Bo Duke' Schneider Can Really Carry A Tune

DEAR DICK: On the recent Academy Awards, one of the nominated songs was sung by a good-looking young man named John Schneider. My husband says it's the same John Schneider from "The Dukes of Hazzard." He was blond and sort of looked like Bo Duke, but was it the same person? If so, he should take up singing and drop the cornball "Dukes" routine. LOIS BOWLDS, Garberville, Calif.

It is the same John Schneider and isn't it a shame for a young man who can sing that well to be wasting his time saying, "Ain't that them thar Boss Hogg thatway nohow?" But, let's face it — playing Bo Duke pays well, and chances are he would not have been invited to sing on the Academy Award show if he wasn't a star, and Bo Duke made him a star.

DEAR DICK: On "Days of Our Lives" April 12, at the beginning of the show they showed a picture of the lady who plays Lee and I thought they said she died. Could you tell me if she did? And what happened to her? KAREN MCKEE, Billings, Mo.

Yes, that was Brenda Benet, who shot herself. She had been despondent over the death of her young son.

DEAR DICK: My friends and I have been wondering why Gregory Harrison has been wearing a cast on his foot the last few weeks on "Trapper John, M.D." Has he broken his foot in real life? HELEN CHENG, Lawrence, N.J.

He didn't break anything, but he did strain an ankle

Ask Dick Kleiner

very seriously while skiing. Since he was required to wear a cast, they wrote in a line in one script saying that he had been hurt in a skiing accident to explain the presence of the cast in the cast.

DEAR DICK: Please settle a bet for me. Who was the actor who played in "Love at First Bite?" T. STANTZ, Michigan City, Ind.

If you mean the star, it was George Hamilton.

DEAR DICK: Recently, I saw Phyllis Diller on "Tattletales" with Rip Taylor. I thought I heard her call him "Fang." Is Rip really her husband? My lady friend thinks they are not husband and wife. Please clear this up. BOBBIE DOEPKER, Prudenville, Mich.

It's simple. They are friends, that's all. Phyllis was just kidding when she called him "Fang."

DEAR DICK: David Hedison recently played in an episode of "Fantasy Island." Did he ever play as a regular on "Lost in Space" or "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea?" GWEN NIX AND CATHY BACON, Atwater, Calif.

He was a regular on "Voyage," but not on "Lost in Space."

DEAR DICK: I am interested in finding out under which sign of the zodiac Shelly Winters was born. Can you please enlighten me? BEA MATTHEWS, New Roads, La.

Shelley's birthday is Aug. 18, making her a Leo. (Or should that be Leona?)

DEAR DICK: A couple of years ago, I saw a movie called "The People." It starred Kim Darby as a teacher and William Shatner as a doctor. Could you please tell me the title and author of the book on which it was based? C.P.H., Kalamazoo, Mich.

It was a TV movie, first shown in 1971, with a screenplay by James M. Miller, adapted from a novel by Zenna Henderson. The credits do not say what the novel was called; possibly it was also called "The People" although I am not certain on that point.

DEAR DICK: I am 7 years old. One of my friends say Fonzaelli's real name was Jack. I say it is not. Who is he? MELISSA BROWN, Coleman, Alberta, Can.

Well, there are two names. There is the name of the character, which is Arthur Fonzaelli. And there is the name of the actor, which is Henry Winkler. But certainly no Jack.

Cable May Challenge Network Productions

TWICKENHAM, England (UPI) -- Powers Boothe, who won an Emmy as the Rev. Jim Jones in "The Guyana Tragedy," is back before the television cameras in the first electronic anthology of Raymond Chandler's Philip Marlowe stories.

But what has centered industry interest on little Twickenham Studios is the debut of Home Box Office, largest of the American cable networks, as backers of "Chandlertown," marking the first time pay TV has created its own all-new series programming.

At this stage the six one-hour thrillers, based on the exploits of Chandler's classic private detective, may be only another occasional essay into production by HBO and no threat at all to the broadcast networks.

On the other hand, if the venture is a success, it is not hard to see HBO and other cable giants repeatedly challenging for viewers with their own exclusive programming.

"We're trying to build an audience of our own for an alternative form of viewing," said Jane Deknatel, HBO's vice president of made-for-pay motion pictures. "We may never outdo the (broadcast) networks in numbers but we can match them in quality, in provocative programming."

And, of course, make "significant" inroads into broadcast viewers.

With so much to shoot for, HBO is taking very few chances.

The idea of "Chandlertown" came from David Wickes, a Briton and producer of "The Sweeney," the best cops-and-robbers program never shown in the United States. A hit in 34 countries "The Sweeney" didn't sell to America because the dialogue was "too English."

With his good track record as writer and director as well as producer Wickes managed to persuade the Chandler executors to let him use six of the stories that established the private eye in literature.

If the films made from these meet the approval of the executors, there are 16 other Marlowe stories that might become available.

"Chandlertown," he said, "is unique on three levels. It's the first cable series, the first TV filming of Marlowe and the first series on an American subject completely made abroad, bar exteriors in Los Angeles could recreate 1938 Los Angeles."

He conceded there was deco interiors here than some overseas doubt he there are in California."

Jane Fonda Tries To Be Funny On Showtime

By Ann Ferrar

Some of us view our cable channels as alternatives to mindless commercial network fare. That's why it's disappointing when a cable service shows a network rerun, or an original special that isn't significantly better or different than what can be seen on "free" television.

"Jane Fonda's Celebrity Comedy Fashion Show," premiering on Showtime Aug. 21, fits into the latter category. But let's start with the good news.

If you're a star gazer, you'll enjoy catching glimpses of Chevy Chase, Morgan Fairchild, David Steinberg, Sally Field, Helen Reddy, Sally Kellerman and Ms. Fonda herself as they participate in the show's antics.

If you favor female impersonators, you'll get a giant kick out of the two "La Cage Aux Folles" players. Michael Andrews does an incredibly convincing Ann-Margret routine, complete with flimsy dress and sexy dance, and Kelly Jenkins mimics Ms. Redding singing "I Am Woman."

The fashion models do a magnificent job of strutting their stuff, with every step, turn and twist of their hips carefully calculated to look chic. The total, unabashed glorification of glitter that the fashion world represents is on display here, and if you're impressed by that you've come to the right program.

However, these segments of the 90-minute show comprise only a small portion, and the rest simply doesn't deserve your at-ention. The program, taped before what looks like a kaffeeklatsch of Burbank housewives, is supposed to prove that Jane Fonda has a sense of humor. But, as she admits herself, "I don't have a sense of humor."

The attempt at comedy comes in the form of what Showtime calls "a contemporary melodrama." Is that stretching it! In reality, it's an infantile sketch, a very weak parody of "Raiders of the Lost Ark," in which Ms. Fonda and Steinberg search for a lost sewing machine (groan). The sketch is so dumb that it makes the jokes on "Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters" sound intellectual.

There are plenty of stars (mostly in cameo appearances) but this program just isn't a class act. The whole thing is disjointed, with the silly sketch cutting in and overshadowing the fashion theme. Surely Ms. Fonda could have found a better way to show us her "lighter side."

American Classical Music On Bravo

It is generally agreed that all forms of American music — from ragtime to contemporary classical — are not taken as seriously as their European counterparts. That is why the Rockefeller Foundation and Carnegie Hall joined forces several years ago to sponsor the annual International American Music Competition, to promote classical music composed here and in this century.

Pianists of all ages and nationalities have competed by performing the works of American composers at Carnegie Hall. The 1981 semifinals were filmed by director Allan Miller. His one-hour documentary will air on Bravo beginning July 4.

Miller, who won an Academy Award for his documentary "From Mao to Mozart," chronicling Isaac Stern's 1979 trip to China, does an ample job technically of filming "The Competition." His camera is unobtrusive and the sound quality is excellent. But instead of focusing on the music, he zeroes in on the 12 semifinalists, most of whom come across as unspeakably dull, slightly neurotic, super-intellectual types.

Miller attempts to "portray them as people" by following them in cabs and restaurants. The overall feeling is: Who cares? There is too much unnecessary talk and not enough of the wonderful music these gifted pianists played during the contest. The film begged for more background on the composers, too.

And just when things started to get intriguing, the camera cut away. For instance, one semifinalist, Judith Olson, demonstrated how she manipulated the strings inside the piano with a bow made from fishing line, a wine bottle and a golf ball, eliciting an array of different sounds. She combined this with ballet to stage an unusual avant-garde performance. But we saw only a snippet of it. Apparently there wasn't enough time to squeeze it in next to the self-promoting speeches by executives of the Rockefeller Foundation, Carnegie Hall and even Bravo!

Thankfully, Miller says he is working on a second documentary that will supposedly contain the contestants' "full performances."

Teachers Only' Passed

"Teachers Only," with Lynn Redgrave and Norman Fell, received good grades during its eight-episode spring term and has been renewed for next season.

NBC hopes the comedy, starring Miss Redgrave as English teacher Diana Spencer and Fell as her principal, Ben Cooper, will continue the school tradition started 30 years ago with a science teacher named Robinson Peepers.

Wally Cox starred as "Mr. Peepers," a nice guy — awkward and a little shy, perhaps — whom everybody liked, except his overbearing principal.

On "Teachers Only," principal Cooper is always on hand to air his opinions, which sometimes conflict with those of the faculty. Television school shows have always featured this conflict and that was no different for another of the old-time educators — "Our Miss Brooks."

Eve Arden starred as the talkative English teacher Connie Brooks, and Gale Gordon was her surly principal. The show's popularity began on radio in 1948 and transferred to TV from 1952 to 1956. Miss Arden has continued to get involved in school roles — she played the principal of Rydell High in both "Grease" and "Grease II."

School has been out for a few years on TV until another popular English teacher came along in 1963. As "Mr. Novak," James Franciscus was young, handsome and dedicated to his craft, but his methods were sometimes questioned by his principal, played by Dean Jagger. Jagger was replaced by Burgess Meredith during the show's last semester in 1965.

Before David Hartman ever said "Good Morning America" he spent the 1974-75 term as "Lucas Tanner." A former baseball player, as was Hartman, Tanner returned to teaching English after his wife and son died in a car accident. When Tanner wasn't in the classroom he was chatting with his little, bespectacled neighbor named Blendon (Robbie Rist).

"Welcome Back, Kotter" did for high school what "Animal House" later did for college. When Gabe Kotter (Gabe Kaplan) returned to his Brooklyn high school to teach, it was mostly for laughs. The 1975-79 series did produce one "honors" graduate — John Travolta. It also originated the word "sweathog" a term Kotter bestowed on his class of remedial rowdies.

On "Room 222," education was a serious matter. Lloyd Haynes starred as history teacher Pete Dixon, Karen Valentine as a perky student teacher and Denise Nicholas as Dixon's guidance counselor girlfriend. The 1969-74 series, which was partially filmed at Los Angeles High School, achieved excellent grades for its realistic portrayal of student problems.

Not so for NBC's "Fame," which has received demerits because students at New York's High School for the Performing Arts don't really do intricate dance numbers in the hallways and sing spontaneously in the cafeteria during lunch hour.

It has, however, found a following and has been renewed.

"Making the Grade," CBS' limited-run series from the spring, was not promoted to sophomore status. "Paper Chase," starring John Houseman as the pompous and omniscient law professor Kingsfield, failed after one season (1978-79) on CBS, but now is receiving good grades as a transfer student on PBS.

"Teachers Only" hopes to continue its passing grades by expanding its story line to include more of Lynn Redgrave's life away from school. That should work. Anybody who ever went to high school will tell you there's more to life than 8-to-3.

Ancient Romans believed that anythet had the power to prevent intoxication and fashioned wineglasses out of the gem.

NEW YORK (UPI) — "M-A-S-H" fans — thousands of whom have followed the show for 10 seasons now — can get their black arm bands ready for mourning, but the man who brings them the irreplaceable B.J. Hunnicutt every week says they'll be better off without the Korean War. "M-A-S-H," a virtually unchallenged champion of the Nielsen Top 10, will pull the numbers for CBS in one final season, beginning next fall, before it passes into the video eternity of syndicated reruns. It's quitting a winner and that's just the way Mike Farrell wants it. "You can only do so many things in that sort of situation, then after a while I think you begin to copy yourself," he said. "I don't want to preside over a 'M-A-S-H' that's less than it once was. We've all held our heads high about the show we've done and we want to go out with that same feeling."

CBS and the show's producer, 20th Century Fox, probably don't share the sentiment, but while Farrell is grateful to CBS for nursing "M-A-S-H" through an infancy made sickly by low ratings, he has little sympathy for network television as it exists today. "I think we have an unfortunate attitude in this country that says you've got to milk every last dime out of your investments," he said. "I think we owe the audience a little more in this respect. They've been so responsive and so supportive and they have such a close identification with these characters that I want them to be able to share in the end."

The end will come at the end of the 1982-83 season with an armistice in the war that has been the "M-A-S-H" setting. Like all armistices, this one involved a compromise — with the network and the producer. "We all just kind of sat around and discussed it and we feel that now is the time for us to end it," he said. "We arrived at this compromise which was one more season, plus a movie which will deal with the end of the war and how we all muster out and go home."

Farrell said the show never could survive the opening salvo of the ratings war if it were new and going on now for the first time. "If 'M-A-S-H' were to start on the air cold today and take the same time to build as it did when it first got started, it wouldn't have a shot," he said. "Four or five times on the air, and they'd write it off.

When you hang in with a quality show, I think an audience will develop. In the first year, 'M-A-S-H' was in the bottom of the ratings until people began to understand what it was. Now you couldn't kill it with a stick."

Farrell will leave the video showcase with several other dramatic irons in the fire, but his favorite project at the moment is production of a board game invented by a friend.

It's called "Broadway," and it best can be described as a clone of "Monopoly" in which investment in Broadway plays and musicals replaces wheeling and dealing over Boardwalk and Park Place.

day, most putt putt courses run "ball-light" specials. If you're playing a green ball, for instance, and you score a hole-in-one while the green light is flashing, you win a pass for one free game.

Par for an 18-hole course is 36 with each of the holes calling for two strokes to sink the ball in the hole.

Once a beginning putter makes his or her way around the course a few times, the key to scoring becomes evident. The trick more often than not is to use the boards running alongside each hole to bank the shots rather than rolling the ball directly at the hole.

Most putt-putt courses cater to the entire public no matter what work shift folks may be on.

During the summer, the Fern Park course runs weekend specials. From midnight to 4 a.m. putters can play as many rounds as they like for $3.

Most courses also run seasonal specials around the holidays on discount books of game coupons, and some even cater to private putt-putt birthday parties.

How Authors View Fame, Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Among authors, the big debate is — and has always been since movies were invented — should the author write the screenplay of his own work?

Some feel it is not only their right but their duty to insure that the film is true to the book's intent. The other school, however, says that if you write something once, you should move on to something else and not plow the same furrow twice.

Tommy Thompson belongs to that second group. He is the author of such riveting non-fiction works as "Blood and Money" and "Serpentine," and now he has moved to fiction with one of the most fascinating novels in years, "Celebrity."

"I won't do the screenplays of my own books," says Thomas Thompson. "I feel that I have written those characters already, and I don't want anything more to do with them. Would you ask a painter, 'OK, Vincent, you have done a nice painting of those characters, now do the sculpture?'"

But a movie or TV miniseries based on "Celebrity" seems to be almost inevitable, because it is such a marvelous yarn and the characters are so intriguing.

Thompson says that the theme of the book is celebrity status, and how it affects different people. He has observed that phenomenon often in his professional career as a journalist.

"Celebrity" has several references to Natalie Wood, who was a good friend of Thompson. He says all those references had been written and set in type before she died. Some people are trying to read prophecy into the book, as a result, but Thompson shrugs that off as nonsense.

Another novel worthy of your attention is "Bijou Dreams." It is one of those history-of-Hollywood books, as told through the eyes of one man. But this has more realism than most because it was written by Jack Warner

THOMAS THOMPSON Jr., the son of one of those genuine Hollywood film pioneers.

TV Critic Steps Into The Electronic Age With VCR

By DAVID HANDLER

I've been reviewing TV shows for nearly five years without the aid of a video-cassette recorder. It's always seemed to me that an armchair critic should take in shows the way everyone else does — half-asleep, distracted, captive.

I wouldn't, I thought, be getting the full experience if I were to watch network-provided tapes during office hours — tapes free of zesty promo spots and Ramblin' root-beer commercials. The same would hold true with any off-the-set tapes of my own, since I would doubtless watch them in bulk when I felt like it, and would skip over commercials.

So I fought off getting a VCR. I worked my life around the TV. I could write a cookbook on dinners that can be prepared during commercial breaks.

I lost numerous acquaintances who couldn't accept my bowing out of an invitation to play poker or go to a ballgame because I had to stay home to watch "Gimme a Break."

I trained close friends and relatives to phone me only on the hour or half-hour, and then never for more than 60 seconds.

If you're thinking I'm extraordinarily committed to my work, I should point out that I'm also extraordinarily cheap, as well as highly suspicious of new gadgets. I don't understand them. They don't like me.

Then a friend went and got me a VCR for three months as a gift. The thing and I didn't hit it off so well at first. On the first night of my return to cafe society, I chose the correct time and channel of the show to be taped. When I came home, nothing had happened. I'd forgotten to punch the record button.

But now that I'm used to having it around the house, well, I hate to say this, but I love it intensely. I now understand why 3 million people have them. It's staying.

Why? A few thoughts:

- There just isn't that much good programming around. A VCR allows me to find it wherever and whenever it is, and hold it for when I have time to watch it. The only drawback to this is initially I found myself spending hours and hours scouring the TV listings and then taping more old movies and reruns than I could possibly watch. I've finally settled down.

- I no longer live my life by TV. I eat, sleep and go out when I feel like it.
- It's great to be master of my set. The first time I watched a show that had been on opposite another show I liked to watch, I felt like I'd done something positively magical. The first time I stopped a tape, left for 10 minutes, came back and picked up where I'd left off, I felt like I'd stopped time. It was a giddy feeling.

- TV is incredibly habitual. I kept starting tapes on the hour, since that's when shows always start. I kept fighting to stay awake until a tape was over, even though it would still be there tomorrow. You don't realize how regulated you are by it until you cut loose. Too regulated.
- Having a VCR means you don't have to watch anything that has Barbi Benton in it.
- Once I learned it wasn't necessary to start a tape on the hour, I was not quite so certain when it would be over, thus predictable. Some shows seem stronger for it, especially whodunits.

- Deprived of the promotion frenzy, news briefs and strength of the surrounding line-up, some shows seem rather weak and pitiful. That would be most sitcoms, actually.
- Anyway, that's about all I've learned so far. I'll keep you posted if I make any more little discoveries.
- Oh yes, one other thing. Having this hunk of expensive hardware around makes me feel like more of an American.
- I wonder what it's like having an electric typewriter.
