BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

THE LORD HEARETH: The righteous cry, and the Lord heareth, and delivereth them out of all their troubles.—Psalm 34:17.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Children's voices in the orchard
Between the blossom and the fruit time;
Golden head, crimson head,
Between the green tip and the root.
Black wing, brown wing, hover
over;
Twenty years and the spring is
over;
Today grieves, tomorrow grieves,
Cover me over, light-in-leaves,
Golden head, black wing,
Cling, swing,
Spring, sing,
Swing up into the apple tree.

VIRGINIA

Red river, red river,
Slow flow heat is silence
No will is still as a river
Still, Will heat move
Only through the musk-king
Heard once? Still hills
Walt, Gates wait, Purple trees,
White trees, wait, wait,
Delay, decay, living, living
Never moving, Ever moving
Iron thoughts came with me
And go with me,
Red river, river, river.

T. S. ELIOT.

In California a doctor who reports that a dog he put to death twelve days ago is now sitting up and eating meat, may have started something he can't finish. If he succeeds in making it possible for people to sit up and take nourishment after they have died, the expense of providing government relief for people may go on for years after they have been buried.

Some people can't understand why newspapermen are so exercised over the freedom of the press and are continually adopting resolutions that it must be upheld. What people forget, but what newspapermen remember only too well, is that freedom of the press during the past few years has become extinct in practically every other country of the world except England and the United States. And that even in this country there is a growing sentiment that newspapers should be censored, at least those newspapers with whose editorial policies you happen to disagree.

The Senate has a schedule of "must" bills a little longer than the President's, but most of them are all right. They include reciprocal tariff powers, stock market regulation, corporation bankruptcy relief, municipal bankruptcy relief, communications commission, amendments to the farm act, pure food and drug regulation, loans to private industry, RFC import and export financing, and the Wagner labor board bill. If Congress cuts out its attempts at monetary tinkering, it should be able to complete the essential part of the program and adjourn by the first of June. That would be the best stimulant for recovery the country could have right now.

The people are generally told that "big business," speculators, and crooks in general are the gold standard advocates, while the silverites consist only of the farmers, the church folks, and all honest people. It is therefore particularly interesting to read that among those who gave a dinner for silver senators the other day and urged upon them their patriotic duty of enacting silver legislation, were the heads of Harris and Voss, New York commission merchants, and Continental Can, "big business" No. 1. It was also rather surprising to find in a list presented the Senate the name of William Jennings Bryan, Jr., son of the Commager, as one who had bought 100,000 ounces of silver standing to reap a 300 percent profit in case the metal is remonetized.

Slash Pine Paper

Another great industry looms as a possibility for the South. The making of newsprint, the paper on which the news of the day is printed, has long been one of the great industries of the American continent. In recent years, like almost everything else, it has not been profitable. But it will come back as fast as business conditions in other industries improve.

Mellows have been devised for making newsprint out of slash pine which grows abundantly in many Southern states. It is said of the slash pine newsprint that it is better than other grades of newsprint now available. However, the cost of constructing plants for the manufacture of newsprint is large, and the transportation charges from these proposed plants of the great centers of population are heavy. The financial possibilities of the enterprise are therefore doubtful.

"The making of newsprint from Southern slash pine is near enough, it is said, to justify warnings against hasty, inadequate or unimproved investment," according to John Temple Gaves, II, in the Birmingham Age Herald. "Dr. Herby's discovery is so revolutionary and involves such enormous promises for this section that many people are likely to be swept off their feet; by ill-advised or even dishonest promotion schemes. According to The Journal of Commerce, it would be necessary to build a newsprint plant in the South before pine could be used in commercial quantities. Construction of such a plant would cost several million dollars and might prove difficult at a time when the industry is already burdened with over-capacity, and agreements in regard to price maintenance are being sought from Canadian manufacturers.

"Nevertheless, the claims made for slash pine as against spruce for newsprint manufacture are sufficient, if correct, to make its use certain sooner or later. It is said to be cheaper than spruce, to have greater 'burst' strength, and to be of lighter weight. The cost of the pulp, says The Journal, is estimated at about $3.50 a ton, as compared with $9 to $10 a ton for spruce. Burst strength of pine paper is estimated at 10 to 12 pounds a square inch, as compared with only six to ten pounds for standard newsprint. The weight of pine newsprint is 30 pounds, as compared with 32 pounds for spruce. Furthermore, it is claimed that pine trees 10 to 13 years old can be used in the manufacture of paper, whereas an equal growth of spruce requires almost 50 years.

"Newsprint manufacturers," cautions The Journal, "question the feasibility of large-scale use of Southern pine in the near future, owing to the remoteness of the supply from existing plants, the probability that relative costs of materials are not as favorable as claimed, the likelihood that power would cost more than in Canada, and the difficulty in financing the construction of a newsprint plant at a time when the industry has long been on an unprofitable basis."

The Exploitation Of Leisure

With 35 and 40 hour maximum working weeks being laid down for all industrial workers, it is important how these workers spend their new found leisure hours. Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, discusses this difficult problem in Good Housekeeping. The tendency to exploit the leisure hours of workers, she says, must be controlled as well as the efforts to exploit their working hours.

"A large part of leisure for all of us is directed and developed for business and profit," she points out, giving as examples the movies, radios, pleasure trips, dance halls, pool rooms. Agents for certain manufacturing companies go about to organize teams and so increase the market for athletic equipment. Such projects have, of course, great value in that they stimulate outdoor life, but they determine for many the use of almost all their spare time. Up to a certain point, the profit motive in developing recreation is sound, but it must not be carried to exploitation. There are other ways of human development, too, and these ways must be found.

"This is a new problem," she continues, "the prevention of the exploitation of leisure—a problem of some seriousness because leisure time represents that part of life which ought to be in the control of the individual."

Those who fear the New Deal will bring a regimentation of American life to the point where even leisure will be regulated, are assured by Miss Perkins that their fears are groundless. She states positively that she believes no group of people should determine how the leisure of another group should be spent. All should spend their time doing what they enjoy, she believes. The Secretary of Labor feels however, that many of the people will have the good sense to use leisure for music, art, and culture.

"Added leisure to many," she says, "will almost certainly be used in part by adult workers for further education. The courses for unemployed workers, opened a year ago by the University of the State of New York, in New York City, with an enrollment of 3,400, have now a registration of 75,000. . . . The reading rooms of the public libraries are crowded. . . . Circulation departments everywhere are asking for money to replace volumes worn to shreds. . . . The records of those who go through the turnstiles of the great art galleries and special museums on free days are evidence of the mass appeal of such opportunities as exist at present."

PALM BEACH HAS MOVED FORWARD DESPITE LOSSES

Resort Among State's Few Solvent Cities; Has Low Bond Debt

(Editor's Note: Another of a series on Florida communities, prepared by the Miami Herald and released to Florida papers.)

TOWN OF PALM BEACH

MIAMI, Apr. 27.—No other small community in Florida could stand the loss of three-quarters of a million in closed banks as Palm Beach has done and continue in a beautifully solvent condition to meet its obligations.

The home of some of the nation's wealthiest individuals, Palm Beach has long enjoyed a unique position among winter resorts. With a permanent population of only 1,630, it has taxable property values of $51,044,128 and is able to spend nearly a half million dollars annually for operating expenses and retirement of its $1,924,703 bonded debt. The winter population is placed conservatively at 15,000.

In the bank failures of 1927, Palm Beach lost nearly a million dollars but has recovered all except $755,315. This reduced the cash of the following year to $100,000, but the fact that its principal property is owned by men and women in the millionaire class has enabled it to keep its collections up to a point where its bonds were not affected.

To some extent, Palm Beach has felt the competition of Miami and Miami Beach and since the boom much of the popular attention toward Florida as a winter gathering place of the wealthy has been turned to Miami. The old life wherein Palm Beach as a name was the symbol of all that was luxury and exclusiveness has largely ended. The Palm Beach suit no longer is the only tropical relief from heavy winter clothing.

But in spite of the expansion of the winter resort industry, Palm Beach retains certain features that will always make it distinctive. Even Miami Beach cannot match the magnificence of its great estates. Bradley's Casino has no counterpart in the United States. The area of Palm Beach is limited and while the wealth of the nation continues, that small strip of land between the blue Atlantic and Lake Worth will command premium prices as residential property. Miami may have her race tracks and her gaudy night clubs, but Palm Beach is independent of such diversions except as her people issue forth at intervals to go to Miami for them.

Because Palm Beach is peopled with men of wealth, the town's affairs have been held securely in their hands, and its administration is as efficient as a big business, as indeed it is. Official position usually written off, as this class of tax has a very wobbly standing in Florida courts. Palm Beach leaves to private initiative the display and publicity that some municipalities seek at public expense. It may not know the heights of civic spleen, but it also is saved the hangovers that inevitably follow.

And, of course, you want shock-proof steering—it is the natural companion of the gliding ride. You pay for these things, and you want them all—but you can get them, in the low price field, only from Chevrolet. The reason is simple. Fully-enclosed Knee-Action wheels are Only Chevrolet has the resources and the assured volume of sales that permit this extra production cost. Other amendments would: Make it clear that the secretary has the power through licensing to prevent non-co-operating handlers of farm commodities from shipping their products in interstate commerce. This would apply, however, only to a specific commodity whose distributors had been licensed through a marketing agreement.

Specify that the secretary may prorate amounts that may be purchased from producers through licensing but only where rice, milk, and its products, peanuts, flax, dry edible beans, vegetables, fruits or naval stores are concerned. Such prorations, the secretary said, may apply to producers only after two-thirds of the growers agree it should be done.

Still another important amendment would give the administration of the farm act authority to take into account in determining a parity price for a crop current farm labor costs; interest on farm indebtedness; and taxes on farm property.

Department of Justice officials in Washington said, however, that reports of the finding of Lindbergh ransom money in New England were unfounded and Attorney General Cummings said there was no concentration of federal agents in Vermont.

Dr. Beardall performed the autopsy in the presence of other physicians and said he cut from the brain a small section in which there was a wound. Later he said he dissected it, revealing an ice-pick wound. In an affidavit he said he filed with the grand jury, Dr. Lucien Dyrenforth, laboratory physician of Jacksonville, declared a brain which had been delivered to him by Paul Eaton, state board of health, was intact and revealed no wound.

However, Dr. Eaton said the brain which had been sent to his office from Orlando had remained in an ice box several days before Dyrenforth's examination. He said it was not probable the specimen would have been switched while it was in his office although the ice-box was not locked.

Clark declared he had not abandoned his family but that since his wife had declined to come to Tampa with him when he moved his business connections there in January, 1933, from Wheeling, W. Va., he had been sending his wife $50 a month maintenance. Clark said his wife's attorneys had sought additional payments, which he was unable to make.

"While it's not up to me," Governor Sholtz said, "I think you should send $50 a month to the court in Marietta, for delivery to your wife. In view of the statements here, I'm not interested in your wife, but I am interested in the care of the children."

Cubs, Dodgers, White Sox, Yanks Seem To Have Best Rookies

NEW YORK, Apr. 27.—(AP)—The Cubs and the Dodgers, the White Sox and the Yankees, on the eve of the early returns, are most likely to be congratulated on their best scouting system.

More than a score of first-year men have been chattering on major league diamonds since the season opened but standing out above the rest so far have been George (Toots) Shainback of the Cubs, Zeke Bonura of the White Sox, Don Heffner of the Yankees, and Len Koencke of the Dodgers.

Given his chance for a regular outfield berth through the preseason injury to hard-luck Hazen Oyster, Shainback, one of the greatest speed merchants the National League has seen come up in years, has delivered with a bang. His fielding has been flawless and his batting so good that Oyster probably will be kept on the bench until the rookie from Los Angeles hits a slump. So far he has pounded opposing pitching for 10 hits in 24 times at bat for a .416 average in the Coast League last year.

Bonura, big first baseman from Dallas, has been just as big a sensation in the White Sox lineup. He has slipped along at a .381 rate, so far, and inserted three homers in his collection of eight hits.

Heffner, however, has been the real surprise, stealing the headlines of more highly-touted rookie centerfielder Bob Rolfe, had been expected to draw. A smooth second baseman from Baltimore, Heffner was rated a weak hitter whose brilliant fielding would nevertheless keep him in the Yankee lineup. But the rookie has shown no batting weakness so far. His average stood at .381 today while Koencke, new on the shelf with an ankle injury, was hitting at only a .200 clip.

Like Shainback, Koencke received his big chance through the injury of a regular, Danny Taylor. Labeled a "bust" when he was put up with the Giants a few years ago, Len has pounded out 10 hits in 27 times at bat for an average of .370, and fielding sensationally to boot.

Plant, Flagler, Doherty To Be Honored In Parades, Pageants

MIAMI, Apr. 27.—May 5 has been designated as "Pioneers Day" in Florida. Tentative plans by a state committee comprised of Florida publishers and leading business and civic interests, call for celebrations in every city and town in the state to honor local pioneers and such outstanding state leaders, both past and present, as Henry M. Flagler, Henry B. Plant and Colonel Henry L. Doherty.

Parades and pageants will give color to the occasion, which is primarily planned to review the new prosperity that has come to Florida in the wake of her highly successful tourist season.

Figures and facts will be released shortly by the committee in charge of plans to show Florida's business upturn and her leadership in the march to recovery.

The Pioneers' Day celebration is Doherty Day set aside in March, 1935, to honor Colonel Doherty for his work in Florida. When a second day was proposed by the committee this year, Colonel Doherty wired from New York suggesting that since "it is Florida that has triumphed over depression and not a single citizen" he could not accept the tribute for himself and proposed instead a day of honor to all those pioneers, both living and dead, who have contributed to Florida's growth and prosperity.

He added that he would be glad to play a part in this occasion to the end that "the entire nation may know of Florida's initiative and faith, that every other state in our country may discover in Florida's leadership a pattern for a planned prosperity of its own."

New Way Is Found To Detect Intoxication

CHICAGO, Apr. 27.—(AP)—A possible courtroom scene of the future.

A man stands before a court of justice, charged with driving an automobile while intoxicated. A bailiff hands him a glass of water and a piece of paraffin. He rinses his mouth, and chews a few times into the wax.

It is handed to a chemist, who disappears into a back room, to return within a half hour with scientifically accurate knowledge of the man's guilt or innocence.

This new and simple test of degree of intoxication was devised by Theodore E. Friedemann, assistant professor of bacteriology in the department of medicine at the University of Chicago.

Blanton Continues His Dispute With William R. Hearst

WASHINGTON, Apr. 27.—(AP)—Representative Blanton (D-Texas) continued his dispute with William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, saying on the House floor that "if he ever makes a cowardly dirty little attack on me again in his papers, I'm going to get up on the floor and give his life's history."

Blanton was irritated by a story in the Washington Herald, Hearst newspaper, saying that because the representative from Abilene (Texas) is up for reelection again, "he blocked House passage of an old-age pension bill for the District of Columbia."

"I am getting tired of Mr. Hearst and his reporters trying to hamstring me every time I try to stop a bill that I think unworthy," Blanton said on the floor.

Blanton said a "Hearst reporter told me he was going to give me a— in his newspaper, and I told him when he did I would give him just as much."

"I don't have to account to Mr. Hearst," he continued. "Do you think I'm going to let this rouser continue to accuse me in his paper? Mr. Hearst, I've got your number. Go ahead and give me
