Engine Difficulties Force Graf Zeppelin To Head Back Home

Giant Airship Was On Way To U.S. When It Developed Serious Trouble In Motor

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, May 16.—(INB)—The Graf Zeppelin turned back on her trans-Atlantic flight to Lakehurst at 6:35 a.m. this evening because of motor trouble, according to a radio dispatch received here from the ship. The Graf Zeppelin suffered an accident, which damaged part of the mechanism. The speed of the great ship was reduced considerably and when she turned back towards her home port at Friedrichshafen she was compelled to travel very slowly.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, May 16.—Heading out toward the broad Atlantic on her first trans-oceanic flight as a purely commercial liner of the air, the giant dirigible "Graf Zeppelin" was on her way today for the United States with a complement of 18 passengers and a crew of 30.

The great zeppelin, which already has two successful trans-Atlantic crossings to its credit, left a day from its hangar here at 5:54 o'clock this morning (12:55 A. M. Eastern Daylight Saving Time) just as dawn was breaking over Lake Constance.

Among the passengers was Mrs. Mary Pierce, wife of a New York stock broker, who after exercising the traditional womanly prerogative of changing her mind and embarking on the thrilling journey as the only woman aboard the air liner.

Not Advertisible

Disrespect for the law, of which we hear so much these days, is not due entirely to the failure of law enforcement officers to apprehend criminals; it is perhaps more largely due to the silly technicalities on which have thrived or thrived in a manner in which courts function. It is comparatively an easy matter to bring an offender before the bar of justice; it is something else to have justice done.

We hear much criticism of justice and the jury system. Especially in the case of the prohibition laws, it is said that no jury of American citizens will convict no matter how guilty the defendant. The recent case of the New York night club hostess and that of Congressman Nicholson seem to bear this theory out. Public sentiment, it is held, is against prohibition, and juries simply will not convict.

Much of the fault, nevertheless, lies in the whole system of jurisprudence. We have all at times dropped into court rooms to hear indignant lawyers objecting strenuously to the introduction of certain evidence, maintaining that it is irrelevant and immaterial, prejudicial and everything else. If their client is innocent, we do not see why they should object to an introduction of all the evidence, why it is necessary to keep a few secrets from the jury.

We have in mind the case of Mrs. Mary Dennett, a grandmother, who was recently found guilty of sending through the mails what the jury decided was "obscene" literature. She was the author of a pamphlet on sex education which she had originally prepared for her own children. When she appeared in court to be sentenced by the judge she made the following statement:

I would invite the attention of the court and the American citizens to the fact that during the 11 years that this pamphlet has been published and in circulation no adverse criticisms have ever come to me based upon anything remotely connected with it.

Thousands of decent, intelligent citizens have endorsed this pamphlet steadily and increasingly for 11 years.

In all the press editorials I have seen not a single one has been adverse to the pamphlet or to me. Surely, the press of the country and those thousands of representative citizens are not all of them corrupt.

This pamphlet is legally sold at this time in every state in the Union, in book shops and through organizations. To maintain a verdict of this sort, in view of that fact, seems to me, to put it mildly, inconsistent.

Commenting on this statement, the Tampa Tribune has the following to say:

Incredible as it may seem to non-legal minds, the defendant was not allowed to present any of these facts to the jury during her trial. The rules of evidence, apparently, prevented the admission of such testimony.

No wonder the verdict, the stigma and the fine are considered unfair and absurd by an overwhelming public sentiment. But do not blame it all on the jury. Blame it rather on antiquated rules of evidence, created and upheld by the American bar, which make it impossible to get before a jury and into the court record such essential and illuminating facts.

Juries often deliver "fool verdicts" because they are hobbled by fool court procedure. In England or Canada, in a case like this, the Judge himself would doubtless have drawn from the witnesses, if the defense failed to do so, the evidence which this defendant could not mention in the courtroom until after her conviction.

It would seem that under our system of jurisprudence it is easy to convict the innocent and difficult to convict the guilty.

Tiresome Woosers

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again" is a popular adage among those who are inclined to give long-extended advice beginning "I attribute my success..." But sometimes too much persistence is not such a good thing. The billy goat, who butted his brains out against the stone wall, is an example of the "try, try again" doctrine.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, who at one time held the world's record on marriage vows, declares that the only reason she didn't marry Lord Northesk was because he proposed to her five minutes after he first met her and thereafter almost daily until she abandoned him for new and unexplored fields. A recent issue of Smart Set magazine reproduces a few pages from Peggy's diary beginning in New York when she first met the English Lord. Then she writes:

"Tuesday: David keeps asking me to marry him as soon as he gets his divorce (He was then married to Jessica Brown, former Follies beauty), but I will not say yes. I am not sure whether I want another husband, even if he is an earl. After all, an earl's wife is only a countess, and I am a countess already. I am sailing Saturday, anyway."

"Thursday: David says he is sailing too, but he could only get an inside berth, as the ship is so full, and there is no room for his valet. He is a nice boy but too young."

The next entry in the Smart Set diary is at the Rido, Italy.

"Tuesday: Really, men are impossible. After all, I am not David's fiancée yet, although he keeps telling everyone we are to be married. I have not said I would yet, and I am not sure that I want to marry him anyway. He is too Jewish. How can I help it if a lot of men want to talk to me and dance with me?"

After a few weeks, with the young Scotchman still in her wake and telling the world of their engagement, Peggy returned to New York. Then the diary's story of the hectic courtship reaches its climax.

"Friday: Well, that's that. Just because I would not see him and dine with him last night, the man goes out and sets himself into the papers. I have just telephoned him that I am through. I am not going to be made a public joke of by any man, earl or not."

CELERY, ITS POSSIBILITY

A pleasing interest is being developed among the celery growers of Manatee and adjoining counties as regards the proper marketing of this important vegetable. The value of advertising and distribution in being impressed and it is only natural to expect desirable results to come out of the agitation which is aimed at bettering the position of the celery growers. A meeting along these lines was held at the new pier building last night and the previous sessions of a similar nature were largely attended with considerable interest shown by the growers.

"As here the withering tongue lives Against the front of Postgresql"

Storm signals are being from the four corners of the capital of Washington as the House administration prepares for a vote on the bill to amend the tariff and farm relief bills. It is one thing to call an extra session and another altogether different thing to keep it within the bounds of the call.

Florida Republicans, having divested itself of its state chairman and its recent candidate for governor and United States senator, may be considered now as stripped for action.

It is rumored that if the senate should be adopted by the Florida legislature a candidate for governor in 1922 would readily make himself known. This is one of the few good arguments against the senate tax.

What with the importance of tobacco advertising to newspapers it would not be a job of covering the editors to favor a tobacco tax. But it needs just about as much courage for them to oppose the tax knowing well that they are sure to be suspected of selfish motives.

Congressman Rith House, Democrat of Illinois, announced his candidacy for the United States senate in 1920. Florida has a Rith who would look over his shoulder in the senate.

Senator Hitchcock and Dr. McMill have launched an effort to have the federal government reimburse Florida farmers whose crops have been destroyed by the Shelby and who are prohibited from replanting for this year's crops. In a congressional session called primarily for farm relief such efforts should have a most sympathetic attention. They represent the Red Cross work of the war on the fly.

"My kingdom for a horse!" cried King Richard III. The same, says Miami, that William, seems destined to be a winner here. That the moral sentiment of the state is against the racing bills is indicated by the avowal, with which certain of the ground politicians are leading the opposition.

It needs more than an engineer to build a bridge these days. In the promotion and financing of the great Gandy bridge some 42,000 shares of the company's common stock were issued to various prominent citizens and officials of the city. It would be interesting to know just where these prominent citizens, officials, and what the names of advertising was. With all respect to them (and their names commanding respect) we hope they never get a penny of profit on their stock.

RETRIBUTION For those, inspired with certainty who going: Heated ways to death, they'll high law; And for those other who, bitterly knowing: Their cause was futile, stayed to serve their cause. By Rupert, Creditable.

The United States Bureau of Standards attempts to standardize things, but it's too big a crowd to tackle the capricious Louisville Times.

Hand and proper distribution of the vegetable.

Advertising will play the largest part in the success of the program. That experience has proved that any product can be put on the market and an almost insatiable demand created for it if the proper methods are employed in placing it before the public. With celery the plan should be comparatively easy, because of its being so familiar. The vegetable is the richer in value than a majority of the vegetables that are being consumed in large quantities and which cost equally as much. But the public doesn't know this and until these facts are given the public will continue to use the other vegetables.

Was a time not so long ago when celery was regarded as a delicacy for the obese but this false impression is being rapidly dissipated. Many people, even those who are usually considered as being of the "stout" persuasion, are realizing that it is not only a healthful food but also a most delicious one. It is not true that they have not learned it in sufficient quantities and because of this celery should be found in every home and on all dining tables in the tropics, making it a most desirable vegetable in the country. Better is not produced anywhere else in the country and if the growers only follow the leadership of those who are in position to help them this vegetable would soon be one of the most popular in vast quantities each year.

ARMY TO THE FRONT

A militant soldier and two heroic sailors lay down a quiet course of action against the other side. They had no help in their determination from the citizens. The soldiers were the only ones who were not satisfied by a compromise of the law. It was a matter of honor for them to stand up for the law. They were not afraid to die for the law. They were not afraid to die for the law.

General Bullard, the able commander of an army in the American Expeditionary Force, was a representative leader. His position in the army was a position of honor. He was a man of high character and high ability. He was a man who was not afraid to die for the law. He was a man who was not afraid to die for the law.

FARM CREDIT

Merchants' resolution which was introduced with purposeful haste by a group of merchants, largely representing the retail trade, is the subject of a bill introduced in the House of Representatives.

The bill is a measure to provide for the establishment of a fund to be used for the purpose of providing credit to farmers. It is a measure which is of great importance to the farming community. It is a measure which is of great importance to the farming community. It is a measure which is of great importance to the farming community.

Our age is more practical than that of the past. We are more interested in the things of the world. We are more interested in the things of the world. We are more interested in the things of the world.

However, this age is not content with the things of the world. It is more interested in the things of the world. It is more interested in the things of the world. It is more interested in the things of the world.

What will 1923 mean to the farmer? These are questions which are being asked by the farmers. They are questions which are being asked by the farmers. They are questions which are being asked by the farmers.

There is a probability that we may find it necessary to create another kind of money. In the past, it has been the case that we have found it necessary to create another kind of money.

Engines, Modern Music Are Rhythmically Akin

BERNARD C. RENWICK

So Says French Line Official Who Has Studied Subject
New York City.—Modern American music is what it is because we are a mechanical nation, and our composers translate into our folk-songs the rhythms they hear in the engine-throbbing veins of industrial America.
"I've watched one of my assistants draw a perfect 'Chorale' on the rhythm of the ship's engine," said Bernard C. Renwick, Chief Engineer of the S. S. Le Grand, a patrol ocean liner of the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, and author of the above statement. "The rhythmic engine has given way to the motor-sound type with its high pitched whine sound and you find this same strain note in the latest jazz music."
Renwick, whose hobby is music, has been with the French Line Steamship Company for twenty-eight years. He has taken the rhythm of this machinery down by note, and translating these notes on the piano, has found a wealth of interesting minor tones. "Gypsy," which Paul Whiteman plays so wonderfully, has a rhythm which a perfectly adjusted engine could duplicate," he asserts. "Which proves that music is mathematically perfect and that its mathematical perfection is what makes jazz the world's perfect dance music."
"There is only a hair's breadth of difference between noise and music. Mechanics and engineers who understand music are most apt to succeed at their jobs. All great mechanical principles are worked out in rhythm, and a good engineer can tell exactly what is wrong with an engine by listening to its tone."

Kiwanis Luncheon Featured by Short Talks Wednesday
The weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club at the Yacht Club tea room yesterday was featured by a number of short talks by several visitors and most interesting musical program by an orchestra composed of a group of High School pupils.
Alan C. Gottschmidt, head of the Gottschmidt-Humphrey, Inc., advertising agency of Atlanta, introduced in his short talk a complete report of the progress made in signing up elderly growers in this vicinity. Major Woods of the Salvation Army, spoke on the broadening scope of work of the Army and expressed his pleasure at the growth of the movement in Sanford. Evangelist Roy L. Brown and Rev. Frank L. Miller were also called upon.
The musical program was given by an orchestra with the following members, and was thoroughly enjoyed: Wilbur Smith, Christine and Pauline Stoudermire, Ann Bell, Lynn, Lillian Branch, Virginia McDonald, Alice DeCourcy, and Charlotte Nix.
The club moved to accept an invitation to meet with the Orlando Kiwanis Club in that city on June 7. R. H. Bullock was welcomed as a new member, and H. E. Odham was elected as a new member.
Kiwanians P. E. Scott and S. E. Jones were elected as alternates to the Kiwanis International Convention in Milwaukee in June.
