Maintenance team takes first

SANFORD — Tri-County Transit's three-man maintenance team won the first statewide "roadeo" this weekend and will represent the state at a national contest in Chicago later this year.

"They did real well," said Tri-County maintenance director Glenn Parrish. "They did the best with the powertrain defect and driving skills."

Parrish said the team discovered seven defects in the engine-transmission "powertrain" and was able to start the engine in eight minutes, two minutes under the 10-minute limit.

Lotto at estimated $21 million

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Lotto Jackpot elimbed to an estimated $21 million Sunday, ending the longest streak without double-rollovers in the history of the game.

No one matched all six winning numbers in Saturday night's drawing. The numbers were 8-9-11-12-17-44.

It has been 27-weeks since the jackpot has been in the $20 million range, lottery officials said.

"This will add a spark of excitement to the game for our players who enjoy the game every week, and for the many tourists vacationing in the state," Lottery Secretary Marcia Mann said Sunday.

Although no ticket matched all six numbers, more than 373,000 players won cash prizes for matching three, four or five of the numbers.

A total of 342 five-of-six tickets are worth $3,039 each, while 19,302 four-of-six winners are worth $78.50 and 354,054 three-of-six winners can be cashed in for $4.

Grasshoppers not expected

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A frightening grasshopper invasion is still hitting parts of Florida's west coast. But they are not expected to move eastward into the Sanford and Seminole County area.

Entomologist Dr. Gary Leibee, associate professor at the University of Florida's Central Research and Education Center on Celery Avenue in Sanford, was not concerned about an invasion by the west Florida grasshoppers. He said, "I don't think they will migrate into this part of the state." Locally, Dr. Leibee said, "We have a number of species of grasshopper here. We usually have them at this time of year. But they aren't anything like those causing all the damage in the western counties."

At the present time, the problem is most serious near Dade City where the invasion is considered the worst grasshopper plague in four decades. So far it has ravaged thousands of acres of farmland while scientists search for a weapon to combat the swarming, thumb-stzed terminators.

"I've sprayed everything and they just keep on eating. You kill one and 10,000 more show up for the funeral." said citrus grower Bill Jordan, who's watched a grove of his leafy, young orange

Longwood to try passing water rate measure at meeting today

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The City Commission will once again try to approve an ordinance pertaining to water charges. The measure only affects persons using city water outside the corporate limits.

The ordinance is the final part in a move to increase the amount of income derived from all users of city

Early last month, the commissioners approved a measure increasing the charges for water consumption inside the city. The changes were estimated to have raised the average residential water bill by $2.15 per month. The additional money to be obtained by the city through the increase will be used to assist in financing the overall city water program and future service needs to users of the Longwood city water service.

The second part of the increase, still not finalized, deals with Longwood city water users who live outside the city, on the tringe areas. The increase proposed for that area is a 15 percent surcharge. The commission voted in favor of the move during the first reading of the ordinance at the June 17 meeting. The public hearing and second reading was scheduled for July 1. That meeting however, was cancelled due to the lack of a City officials say they do not expect any objections from the estimated 40 water users which would be subject to this particular surcharge. In the brief 10 minutes during which the July 1 meeting was in progress, Mayor Hank Hardy asked if any citizens had attended the session with the intent to discuss the water rates, either pro or con. No one responded. The mayor then gaveled the meeting to an end.

The matter will be brought up again Monday night for final approval

The regular meeting of the Longwood City Commission will be held at the commission chambers at the Longwood City Hall, beginning at 7 p.m., today...

Sanford recycles most garbage in county

SANFORD — Local residents outdistanced neighboring cities in June to recycle the most garbage in the county.

Sanford residents separated 72.5 tons of glass, plastic, aluminum cans and newspapers from their garbage last mouth, a greater amount than residents participating in Aliamonte Springs — a larger city with an older recycling program.

In all, Seminole County residents decreased their recycling rate slightly between May and July, according to figures released this week by the Seminole County Environmental Services Department. A total of 844.3 tons of recyclable materials were collected in June, according to county and Sanford reports. A total of 867.3 tons were collected in May according to reports.

Casselberry has just begun their recycling program, so that city's reports won't be available until next month.

Newspaper recycling continues to be the most active of any materials lossed into city or county recycling bins. Over Emillion pounds, 500 tons, of old "fishwrappers" were stacked into the bins. Old newspapers, abbreviated as "ONP" in the recycling industry, can be converted to new newsprint for future newspapers, reducing the need for trees to be cut.

Glass recycling continues to be the second-most popular recyclable material in Scinniole County with more than 200 tons being collected last month. Glass is recycled into new glass containers to the extent that very few bottles and pars on store shelves are made with "virgin" class.

The state House Commmittee on Corrections is surveying sheriffs, prosecutors, public defenders, journalists, and a random sampling of the 316 death-row inmates seeking their opinions about televising executions in Florida's electric chair. The survey follows a court battle in California, where a public television station unsuccessfully fought to televise a gas chamber execution.

"We're going to assume that if the interest groups and the individuals on death row feel strongly that it should be done, then it's representative of the general public," said state Rep. Willie Logan, a Democrat from Opa-locka who chairs the House Corrections Committee. "If it's a strong feeling, then we'll probably consider some legislation.

There is no prohibition under state law preventing the televising of executions. But a Department of Corrections' policy bans "electronic or mechanical devises, including, but not limited to, still, moving picture or videotape cameras, tape recorders or similar devices, or Upon entering the room, the large, oaken. three-legged chair is empty. A doctor and physician's assistant stand off to the left. Through a slit in a wall on the left, the black-hooded executioner sometimes can be seen. An electrician with heavy gloves stands to the right of the chair.

Another prison official is talking to the governor's office on a telephone on the back wall. After the witnesses are seated, a guard opens up a heavy metal door at the back of the execution chamber to the rear of the electric chair. A corridor behind that door leads to the death-watch cells where the condemned man spends his final days.

Florida State Prison Superintendent Tom Barton is the first person through the door. He is followed by two guards who are escorting the condemned, whose head is shaved and covered with an electrolytic gel. The inmate's right leg, where another electrode is attached, also has been shaved and his dark blue trouser leg has been rolled up to the knee.

As Daniel Morris Thomas was being strapped in the chair on April 15, 1986, he was able to get one leg and one arm free. Cursing and yelling. Thomas kicked two prison officials and tried to bite another in a struggle that lasted eight minutes.

After the inmate is strapped in the chair, Barton takes a microphone and asks the condemned man if he has a final statement.

When the final statement is completed, a strap is tightened over the condemned man's chin, a natural sponge is placed inside a head piece, which is placed over the inmates head. A black leather mask, part of the headpiece, covers his

Usually before the two-minute automatic cycle ends, the chair is turned off. Another loud thump is heard as the breaker is disengaged. Everything usually is over quickly, but the execution of Jessie Jospeh Tafero on May 4, 1990, turned into a gruesome event and brought into question the humaneness of the chair. Flames 12 inches high and amoke rose from Tafero's head as the chair was turned on. He appeared to continue breathing for about four minutes. It took three joits before it was over. 2 more appeals filed on boat speed limit

SANFORD - Two more appeals to the state manatee protection speed limit rule have been filed.

Howard E. Lay, a Sanford businessman, and Pete Legos, a Deltona retiree, said this morning they filed appeals to the Florida Department of Natural Resources, saying the state failed to fully establish the economic impact of the speed limits before imposing the 30 m.p.h. limit on the St. Johns River from Lake Monroe north. The speed limits go into affect later this month. "This has nothing to do with the manatee," said Lay. "It has to do with someone deciding they don't want powerboats on the St. Johns and this is the way they're trying to do it." Lay said he recently boat a powerboat that is capable of running at 85 to 90 m.p.h. He said he would be will to accept no boat zones in areas where manatees congregate, but speed limits on the main river should remain unlimited.

Legos said he moved from Daytona Beach to Deltona to be close to the St. Johns so he can enjoy his new powerboat with a 245-horsepower engine. Legos said he bought the $30,000 boat in March. This weekend, Legos

Rain doesn't stop jet ski races and wedding

SANFORD — The jet aki races and custom car and truck show event went off almost as scheduled at the Holiday Inn on Lake Monroe this past weekend. Rain caused only minor delays.

Several hundred onlookers watched as the fast jet ski competition got underway. The races, sponsored by West Coast Promotions, were part of the South Regional World Tour series being held in several areas around the nation.

Over 100 participants qualified on Saturday, although the rain showers caused a two hour delay in the start. The entrants were competing for points which could eventually lead to qualifi-cation for the World Tour Jet Ski competition to be held overseas later this year.

Holiday Inn spokesperson Debbie Jacques, said, "With the support people who came with the racers, we had about 300 on hand Saturday, then when the rain stopped Sunday, there were possibly as many as 500 on hand. In addition," she said. "there were several hundred people who came out just to watch the events.

Jacques said the custom car and truck show was well received. "There were 57 cars and trucks registered," she said. "Bill Cox, owner of the Cruzin Customs custom car company in Lakeland said the number was only about 50 percent of the total originally expected. "Some of the cars just couldn't drive to the Holiday Inn area because of the rain," he said. "Some of the rain," he said. them are chopped to the point where they are only 6 inches off the ground."

One of the highlights of the event at 11 a.m. Saturday, was the wedding of Bill Weekly and Wendy Mullins of Orlando. Cox. who is a Notary Public, officiated at the ceremony. Bill and Wendy, both custom car enthusiasts, used the event as the background for their wedding. Walking among the custom vehicles between a display of trophies, the couple was surrounded by custom-car well-wishers. Jacques said the groom, best man and ushers wore tuxedo jackets and matching purple shorts.

Information regarding the winners of the jet ski competi-tion will not be available immediately. West Coast Promotions were still in the process of compiling a list of the standings. and expect to have them com-pleted by later this week.

For a clean bill of health

Vermont Sen. Patrick Leahy has reintroduced his bill to break the so-called circle of poison by prohibiting U.S. companies from exporting pesticides that are banned for use in this country. The circle closes when residues from these chemicals, many of them known carcinogens, return to the United States in fruits, vegetables, beef and dairy products grown in other countries.

Every year, the World Health Organization estimates 220,000 people die from pesticide poisoning: 25 million people fail victim to injury or illness. There are no reliable numbers on how many of those casualties result from exposure to unlicensed chemicals exported from this country — the United States doesn't keep records on shipments of banned products and the chemical companies are reluctant to publish detailed sales figures. But there's no question that the American manufacturers who continue to traffic in these poisons are a significant part of the problem.

This isn't a cause that excites only environmentalists and public health officials. Leahy's legislation has drawn strong support from farm groups, who complain they are at a disadvantage competing with foreign growers who can use chesper and deadlier compounds than are permitted here. And consumer organizations back the crackdown because they want to avoid the kind of incident the occurred in 1988, when 22 tons of Honduran beef contaminated with illegal levels of the pesticide chordane were ground up and sold as hamburger in Florida and Kentucky.

The fact that this kind of unliateral action by the United Biston won't extinguish the world market for these products doesn't mean that we should condone them — let alone profit from marketing substances that we know to be unsafe.

Child support editorial lacking

Your editiorial regarding child support was both incomplete and lacking insubstantive data that would help the public understand real facts about why there are so many delinquent child support accounts. First, you imply that everyone who is delinquent is behind because they choose to be. This is a gross misconception!

Secondly, you stated that "arrangements can be made if a non-custodial parent is suffering temporary difficulties such as joblessness. If this is true, then you had better run down to the Seminole County Court House and inform some well-respected judges. The fact is, if you are a man, you could be unemployed because the company you worked for went bankrupt and still be ordered to pay $500 or $1000 per month child support without any income.

Clearly this kind of Judicial decision is not in line with child support guidelines set by the Supreme Court, but it does not hinder judges from making these kinds of decisions.

Another factor is that the Courts, like most of society, favor women in their decisions even some of the most character-deficient women one can run across in society. And, if the woman is smart, she will fire her lawyer and turn to HRS, the impetus behind portraying unemployed and underemployed fathers as "Deadbeat Dads." And what entity in society represents more "Deadbeat and Derelict Mothers" than HRS? And to make themselves look heroic, they hide behind the theme that they represent the children - even though they give the money to known crack addicts, prostitutes and women who needed tests to detefinine which of the men they named was the father. And to further add insult to injury, the father paying huge sums of money in child support can only claim the children on his income tax return if the mother allows him.

The Courts have further stated that support should be based primarily on two factors — the needs of the children and the non-custodial parent's ability to pay. The truth is that it is usually based on how good of an attorney one has and which parent is the most knowledgeable and aggressive regarding the issue.

Unfortunately, men, who are the primary payers of child support, are the least knowledgeable about the subject. And further, because most of them experience guilt about having to separate from their children, they often agree to support settlements that are ambitious but not practical because they are under duress. And then, when reality sets in, that they too have to live and have a desire to maintain a decent standard of living, it's too late. The final judgement has been entered and that's Gospel according to law.

In closing, you concluded that as long as one denies "his" obligations to child support, vigorous laws will be needed. You tell me — is it justice that unemployed and underemployed fathers be sent to jail without bail when rapists, murderers, robbers, and child molesters are all entitled to bond. The answer lies not with more laws — just falrer ones. This will help our society, courts and more importantly, the children we claim we want to help.

Does court ruling suppress speech?

In the two months since the Supreme Court upheld the Bush administration's regulations that prohibit clinics receiving Title X funds from providing information about abortions, I've been trying to find an out for them.

trying to find an out for them.

I'd like to believe the justices didn't really tell physicians they couldn't tell their patients about a legal medical procedure. Or at least I'd like to believe if they did, there was a dam good reason for it.

I've tried to look at it from its professed rationale: that a lot of taxpayers don't like abortion, so the country as a whole should be able to say, "Not only can you not use taxpayers' money for something these taxpayers don't like, you can't even tell clients about that something." I can understand those taxpayers' feelings, as we all can, because there are all norts of things we'd just as soon our tax money doesn't go to.

Trouble is, my money goes to those things whether I'd like it to or not. Aside from the little box on my tax return that allows me to decide whether I want to help fund the presidential election, I can't earmark what my tax money can be used for. None of us can, even if we believe a practice, such as spending money for weapons, violates our personal moral beliefs. Sorry, justices, that one just doesn't wash.

Sometimes an analogy helps us to understand understand this. But I'm not sure there is an analogy here: I know of no other professional/client relationship where a client's right to choose a legal course of care runs crossways of another's moral

So I'm just as bewildered as I was when I started to try to make sense of this decision. In no other situation has the Supreme Court forbidden a professional to leave out part of the information he or she would ordinarily supply a patient or client, just because some taxpayers disagree with that information. The decision is not only stunning, it is unprecedented.

started.

bewildered as I was when I

The implications of the decision to free speech have been speculated about on editorial pages all over the nation. As so many have saked, if health-care workers can be forbidden from discussing a legal right with their patients, who's next? Lawyers, mental-health professionals, architects and engineers advising clients of unpopular but legal building projects? It's hard for me to believe that even proponents of a repeal of Roe vs. Wade want to see it accomplished in such a dangerous manner.

But for the moment, let's suspend the precept that in the United States professionals are entitled to discuss legal rights with their clients. Since this ruling affects only the free speech and professional responsibilities of those who trest clients in clinics that receive Title X funds, in reality the only people denied access to information are poor women. The rest of us have a choice. We can go somewhere else. If we decide we want to take advantage of our legal rights and learn about abortion, we can. Poor women can't.

So I have to wonder if this decision is geared more as a statement against abortion, or to serve notice to poor people? Is it demonstrating the muscle of a subgroup of taxpayers who merely hate abortion, or the subgroup who are tired of funding projects for the poor? Or for some taxpayers, does it just happen to get both groups, the pro-choice and the poor, in one lucky swoop?

When religion became an issue

One is the grandson of sharecroppers. The other, being almost a generation older, is the grandson of slaves.

By sheer dint of intelligence and plain hard work. Clarence Thomas. 43, and Douglas Wilder, 60, have risen to become, for the decade of the 1990s, the most prominent Afro-Americans in their chosen professions. They are also becoming the most controversial, in their own ways.

Thomas, the sharecropper's grandson who is our new U.S. Supreme Court nominee, was schooled by nuns on the teachings of St. Thomas Aquinas. He ended up with views embraced by senators whose philosophy spans the narrow range from Helms to Thurmond and judges who range from Rehnquist to Bork.

Wilder, the slave's grandson who is the Democratic governor of Virginia, aspires to be our future president. Yet those who make conventional wisdom say he's giving himself the sort of image that can be repaired only by a dentist who minored in podiatry. He's still apologizing for his most recent comment: a criticism of Clarence Thomas that seemed laced with religious intolerance.

Wilder told reporters that senators must require Thomas to answer questions about his views on abortion — because "he has indicated he is a very devout Catholic. ... The question is, how much allegiance is there to the pope?"

Conservatives pounced, led by columnist Patrick Buchanan, who wrote: "Wilder is indulging in one of the oldest bigotries of them all: You can't trust these people ... they take their orders from Rome."

Wilder may have to spend the rest of his political life apologizing for that impolitic eruption. But this much must be raised in his defense: Perhaps Wilder, no student of Aquinas, was taking his catechism from the teachings of Yogi Berra, who, in ceremonies honoring him at Yankee Stadium, humbly thanked all who "made this day necessary."

Sadly, intrusive questions tinged with religious discrimination have recently been forced upon us by a most unexpected source—the more conservative officials of the Catholic Church. Those of us who rejoiced 30 years ago when we thought John F. Kennedy courageously silenced such prejudicial inquiry must now wonder whether it is necessary to consider the private Catholicism of public officials.

We cheered Kennedy's 1960 speech to Protestant clergy: "I believe in an America where the separation of church and state is absolute — where no Catholic prelate would tell the president ... how to act ... where no public official either requests or accepts instructions on public policy from the pope ... where no religious body seeks to impose its will directly or indirectly upon the general populace or the public acts of its officials. ..."

But shockingly, views contrary to Kennedy's are being voiced anew — by prominent Catholic Church leaders.

"... The politicians have failed to recognize their obligation to bring their Catholic faith and morality into the public arena." declared San Diego's Roman Catholic Bishop Leo T. Maher in 1989, in denying communion to a legislator who was pro-choice on abortion. "We are trying to teach them, direct them, that is their obligation."

Then, last year,

Then, last year,
New York's Cardinal
John O'Connor said
Gov. Mario Cuomo
and any Catholic

Brooklyn Bishop

so, too.

If JFK was right, we needn't worry.
But if the Bishop of San Diego and the prelates who share his predilection are right, then perhaps we owe Doug Wilder a reassessment of sorts. This grandson of slaves, who has felt the sting of prejudice all his life, made a politically incorrect blurtation — but it may lead us to accept a sad truth:

We cheered

Kennedy's

1960 speech to Protestant

In this, the 30th anniversary year of the inauguration of our first Catholic president, the church may have forced us back to inquiring of Judge Thomas his views of the separation of church and state, prayer in schools, and the potential for a conflict between the interests of the Founding Fathers and the Holy Fathers.

Will Judge Thomas side with Bishop Maher, et al., or will he endorse the words of JFK, who pledged:

"Whatever issue may come before me ... I will make my decision in accordance ... with what my conscience tells me to be in the national interest, and without regard to outside religious pressure or dictate. And no power or threat of punishment could cause me to decide otherwise."

Shoddy ID of MIA remains riles kin

WASHINGTON — Lou Anne LaBohn won a minor victory recently when the Pentagon agreed to take her brother's name off a tombstone in Arlington National Cemetery. But she still has not won peace of mind.

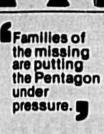

LaBohn has been negotiating with the Pentagon since November to have the name of Army Sgt. Gary R. LaBohn removed from a memorial over a group burial at the cemetery. The Pentagon claims her brother a body, or at least bits of teeth and bones that could have been her brother, are buried beneath that stone. But LaBohn isn't convinced.

Her story is similar to the tales of many anguished people who have battled mountains of Pentagon red tape to find out what happened to their loved ones missing in action in the Vietnam War.

Last year, the

the Vietnam War.

Last year, the Pentagon collected 17 teeth and 145 bone fragments from a helicopter crash site in Laos. Gary LaBohn is believed to have been in that helicopter. Using the bone and teeth fragments, the Pentagon satisfied itself that seven U.S. soldiers and two

Victnamese pilots had been accounted for, and they buried the remains in a common grave at Arlington.

Only one of the nine men was positively identified from the remains. An anthropological study of the fragments concluded that not even the race or sex of the people could be determined, let alone their identity. But the Army claims it was able to account for the rest based on evidence found at the site and accounts of witnesses. Gary R. LaBohn was declared officially accounted for, and his name was removed from the list of the missing.

For years, Lou Anne LaBohn tried to find out more about the crash, and she held out hope that her brother was still alive. The helicopter carried a special operations team on a secret mission in Laos, and the nature and purpose of that mission remains classified today, further complicating LaBohn's efforts to find out what happened to her brother.

Even though there was no hard evidence to prove that Gary was dead. LaBohn consented to have his name put on the headstone last year. She said she felt pressured by the Army, which is eager to close the books on as many POW/MIA cases as it can.

Now, her feelings have changed. "To grant the military the power to make several identifications on so little data would set a terrible precedent," she told our associate Melinda Maas.

When she asked the Army to take Gary's name off the marker, they told her that it couldn't be done without defacing the whole stone. If LaBohn wanted a marker without her brother's name on it, she would have to pay for it, the Army said, and the cost was $1.810.25. She said she would have to save for quite a while to raise the money, but she was willing to do it. Then the Army changed its mind and said the Department of Veterans Affairs would pay for the new stone.

With the Bush administration moving closer to normalized relations with Vietnam, families of the missing are putting the Pentagon under pressure to account for the bodies that were never returned after the war from either Vietnam or Laos. The Army denies that it is in a hurry to close cases, but some POW activists think the administration is trying to sweep the issue under the carpet for political reasons. And one easy way to do that is to gather up random bones and teeth and consider cases closed. The Army justifies the group burials as the best way to put the family's mind at ease.

Hernandez, speaking Sunday on the opening day of the National Council of La Raza's annual convention, said the redistricting fight probably is the most important political issue

Sanford area pest control companies say that have only had a few calls regarding grasshoppers. But even the local Lubber grasshoppers. Lubber grasshoppers are almost impossible to eliminate at the resent time. A spokesman at Rowe Pest Control said, "There is little that can be done to get rid of these grashoppers. We can fight them when they're small, but after they are full these parts they are full the parts they are full to the parts they are full to the parts they are full they are fu grown, they can't be eliminated." Sanford Pest Control reported no calls about any infestations.

The American grasshoppers in west Florida don't bite humans, but that's about all residents have good to say about them. Their goosy excrement covers cars parked beneath trees, and some homeowners say they've even chewed through the steel mesh acreens of patio porches.
"At night 1 can hear them clicking across the roof of my trailer," said pasture land manager Dave Johnson. "I can't help but think they're trying to get inside. It's like something out of a bad horror movie."

For the Florida Department of Agriculture, finding the perfect poison to fight the fully grown grasshoppers has become a nightmare of futility. And it's led to a major shift in strategy - going after the next generation.

Since researchers have had some success in killing the young grasshoppers, they've isunched an ambitious plan to attack the next big hopper hatching expected to begin in August.

it involves pinpointing the densely wooded areas surroun-ding the farmlands where the bugs breed in the dirt, using ground mist blowers to shoot out insecticide at 120 mph, and then deploying heavy equipment to plow under the soil to further disrupt the reproductive cycle.

But the control program expected to cost up to half a million dollars — won't begin until researchers find the most effective pesticide for grasshop-

"We've got a battle plan, but we're just looking for the right weapon," said Richard Gaskaila, director of the state's Division of Plant Industry. "We're not yet ready to start all-out warfare."

That is expected to begin late this month or early next month, when the first eggs begin to hatch. The chemical malathion ended the last major infestation of grasshoppers 40 years ago, but increased rain may have played a part by promoting the spread of natural diseases and parasites, said John Capiners. director of the University of Florida entomology department.

The last infestation began in Plant City, just cast of Tampa, in 1946 and spread gradually through the citrus belt and then northward, infesting certain areas for one or two years until they moved into Georgia and finally died off in 1962.

That kind of scenario is exactly what strikes fear into Piorida's 87-billion-a-year citrus industry, with 760,000 acres of groves. But will it happen?
"I don't think so. Disrupting the reproductive cycle is the key to stopping them," said Capinera, noting that an unchecked hatching could result in the grasshoppers doubling or even quadrupling their num-

Episcopals debate homosexual issue

By aconst W. Con AF Religion Writer

PHOENIX - Hours of debate at the Episcopal governing con-vention left dangling the issue of whether to sanction ordination of active homosexuals.

Psychologist Stanton L. Jones of Wheaton. Ill., said those who support ordaining homosexuals are trying to "to normalize a pattern which is destructive and abnormal."

But Nancy G. Westerfield of Kearney, Neb., pleaded that the church "open the door to all God's children."

The arguments came in a 21/2 hour joint hearing Sunday night before about 2,800 people at the Phoenix Civic Plaza. It followed neveral smaller hearings over the last two days.

Nearly 120 people had aigned up to speak Sunday but only about 20 took the microphone.

No decision on the issue was expected before Tuesday. Some members advised delaying a decision until further study. The triennial convention ends Satur-

The church's 190-member House of Bishops and 860member House of Deputies make the decisions. Both bodies are half clergy and half laity.

Bishop William Frey, dean of Ministry at Ambridge, Pa., backed a move to restrict clergy sex relations to marriage, saying the call was to "God's standard set high on the hill."

But Bishop Frederick H. Borsch of Los Angeles, a the change.

member of the commission proposing the ordination of active homosexuals, said it essentially would restore past practice — letting each disocese do as it chooses.

A 1979 convention action says such ordinations are "not appropriate," although a few have occurred since. The com-mission proposal also would take steps toward blessing same-sex unions. The Most Rev. Edmond L. Browning, presiding bishop of the 2.5-million-member church. said his constant aim was to "keep the church from polarizing."

If debate at the convention failed to produce a consensus. the matter should be delayed for grass roots study, he said.

But "I do not want the issue shunted aside," he said.

In the open hearing, Bishop George L. Reynolds Jr. of Nashville said the church was polarized and "positions have hardened." He questioned whether the church was "able to make a mature decision."

Retired Bishop Christopher F. Allison of Charleston, S.C., said the church bureaucracy and staff had deluged deputies with material advocating the change, without local consideration.

"All people are welcome in the Episcopal Church," he said, but Trinity Episcopal School for that doesn't mean "approval of the lifestyle of homosexual behavior."

As he spoke, associates brought forward boxes of what he said were petitions signed by 14.900 Episcopalians opposing

AIDS-infected surgeons: Voluntary testing is urged

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Federal guidelines for AIDS-infected surgeons are expected to urge them to voluntarily undergo testing and stop practicing if they have the disease.

Details of the guidelines from the Centers for Disease Control were reported today in the Los Angeles Times, which quoted sources it did not name. The recommendations are to be released Thursday.

The Times said the CDC would urge voluntary testing of people who perform "seriously invasive" procedures - those in which a sharp instrument is present inside a highly confined anatomic site or where visibility is poor.

The guidelines also will sug-gest that those who are infected seek counseling from a local medical review board.

Critics contend that such guidelines would push hospitals toward mandatory testing for doctors and other health-care fundamental issue of infection

Guidelines aimed at preventing infection already are in place and include sterilizing equipment and wearing protective

"Unfortunately, the impact of the recommendations will be driven by how the insurance companies react, which is not what we would like to see occur," said Katherine McCarter. associate executive director of the American Public Health Association.

The language is more moderate than earlier drafts and em-phasizes that the scientific evidence of doctor-to-patient transmission of AIDS "is inadequate," the newspaper said.

However, the basic message is that surgeons and others who perform invasive procedures should know whether they are infected and probably should not practice if they are, the newspaper said.

A Florida dentist whom CDC investigators believe infected five patients is the only health care work known to have infeeted patients during treatment.

"There are so many risks in workers. The critics also say the the world that are so much more guidelines fail to address the real to the average American citizen than this one, it makes no sense to be so worried about this when we don't worry about the other ones," said Dr. Michael Callaham.

No prenuptial contract for second Mrs. Trump

Associated Press

NEW YORK - Maria Maples doesn't intend to follow the first Mrs. Trump in signing a prenuptial agreement. "I don't think we're doing it that way," she said. "This relationship is going to be built on trust, and that's it."

Maples said in the July 22 issue of People that her short, highly publicized breakup with Donald Trumponly strengthened their love.

"I was into this relationship for so long. I was just going with it without knowing if it really made me happy," she said. "When I realized I could be happy alone, it made me love him more freely - now instead of desperation, it's out of

The engagement announcement came after Trump publicly dumped Maples and was linked to Italian supermodel Carla Maples, sporting a 7.5 carat diamond ring, said she hopes to be married in a small, quiet ceremony sometime this winter.

Couple wed in jail gets unexpected honeymoon

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. - Marjie and Robert Reichard were married in jail, but they got an unexpected honeymoon on the outside because of a paperwork mix-up.

"It was a dream come true," Mrs. Reichard said. "The Lord was giving us a week. I was so thankful we got the time to spend together."

The two were wed June 26 in Lancaster County Jail, where been released. Reichard was in custody on a fugitive-from-justice charge from Cape Girardeau, Mo., for allegedly violating probation.

Just hours after the wedding. he was released because of the mix-up. The mistake was discovered seven days later. The sheriff's office contacted Reichard, who returned to custody voluntarily and went back to Missouri on July 3 to face the charge.

Sheriff's Sgt. Larry Russell said Missouri authorities called him July 2 and said they would arrive the next day to pick up Reichard.

"Come on down, I told them," Russell said, then went to the jail only to find that Reichard had

"I think I was more amazed than arryone," Russell said.

Because of Reichard's cooperation in the matter, the sheriff's office allowed him to spend one more night with his family after the mistake was discovered.

IN BRIEF

Suns, Merchant win

JACKSONVILLE - Jim Bowle's double scored Ken Pennington with the running run in the 11th inning to give Jacksonville a 7-8 victory over Charlotte.

Jacksonville trailed 5-2 when Pennington hit his fifth home run of the year in the fifth inning to close the gap to 5-3. Jacksonville took the lead in the sixth inning on Jim Campanis' sacrifice fly and RBI singles by Oviedo's Mark Merchant and Tony Manahan.

Mailon takes U.S. Open

FORT WORTH, Texas - Not so long ago, a smiling, friendly, light-hearted 28-year-old named Meg Malion was just another frecklenosed face on the LPGA Tour, a fair golfer with a nice swing and no victories.

Today she's the U.S. Women's Open champion and a budding superstar.

'When you're on a roll, you're on a roll," she said after firing a 4-under-par 67 in the final round to overtake Pat Bradley and Amy Alcott and secure the $110,000 top prize by two shots.

Bradley earned the runner-up $55,000 prize at 285 while Alcott was third at 286 and Laurel Kean fourth at 287. Joan Pitcock, the co-leader with Bradley after three rounds, fired a 75 and fell back to 289.

TOUR de FRANCE

LeMond holds lead

RENNES, France - Greg LeMond started the second week of the Tour de France the same way he started the first — as the leader.

it's also the way he usually ends the race. although two weeks remain in this year's bid for a third consecutive litle.

He usually wins it just in the nick of time like the final-day time trial two years ago that enabled him to nip France's Laurent Fignon by eight seconds, or his come-from-behind effort on the next-to-last day last year to overtake Claudio

Chiappucci of Italy. He can control himself, as he did Saturday in naking up more than 90 seconds on favored Erik Breukink in the last 6.2 miles of the 45-mile LeMond was second to Miguel Influrain of Spain, but finished more than a minute ahead of Breukink.

Breukink, seven seconds behind LeMond at the start of the time trial, is now 1:13 back and second overall as the race approaches the midway point.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - After 31 races and two years of excuses, nagging doubts and unanswered questions, Bobby Rahal was back in Victory Circle.

The mustachioed two-time CART PPG Cup champion was convincing as he ran off with Sunday's Marlboro Grand Prix at the New Jersey Meadowlands.

Not since the Meadowlands race in 1989, an event shortened by heavy rain, had Rahal enjoyed the fruits of victory.

Rahal, who has 20 career victories including three at the Meadowlands, took the lead with 89 of 150 laps remaining on the 1.217-mile, six-turn circuit. He fought off a late challenge from Michael Andretti and raced off to margins as big as 14.9 seconds by lap 126.

Andretti was still running second on lap 108 when his engine failed. Within a few laps, Al Unser Jr., the defending series champion. passed Rick Mears for second place. But the final margin of 6.954 seconds was as close as he could get to Rahal.

Mears, who started from the pole and led the first 61 laps, wound up third, followed by John Andretti, Michael's cousin.

Bodine wins

MONROE, Wash. - Geoff Bodine took the lead for the final time shortly after the halfway point and drove his Thunderbird to a 20-second victory in Sunday's NASCAR Motorcraft 500 stock car race at Evergreen Speedway. The Chemung, N.Y., driver was forced to start 21st in the 36-car field after his first-day qualifying time was disallowed, but he took just 89 laps to get to the front. Bodine twice was beaten out of the pits during caution flags but never was passed for the lead on the track. lapping all but the second-place Chevrolet Lumina of Jim Bown at the finish.

Bill Sedgwick, last year's winner, finished third in a Chevrolet Lumina, one lap behind Bodine. Following Sedgwick were Jon Paques in a Pontiac Grand Prix and Billy Jac Shaw in a Butck Regal.

Bullets walk to sweep of Sanford

LONGWOOD - Walks are deadly. With the bases loaded in the bottom of the seventh, two of the runners reaching via bases on balls, Brian Dangel walked to force in Shane Odom with the winning run as the Bullets defeated the Sanford Post 53 Orioles 7-6 in the first game of a doubleheader at Lyman High School Sunday afternoon.

"We played good baseball and hit well in the first game," said Sanford head coach Mike Powers. "But the bases were loaded in the seventh and we walked the batter and that was that."

Sanford opened the second game slowly and rain impeded any hopes of a comeback. After a rain delay in the fourth inning, the game was called in the bottom of the fifth with the Bullets (Lyman's summer team) ahead 6-0, giving the home team a sweep of the doubleheader.

"We struggled a little in the second game," said Powers. "Then the rain delay lasted an hour or an hour and a half and the rains came again in the fifth to end the game."

After Phillip King and Demmy Beamon opened the first game with walks for Sanford, King raced home to score when Beamon was caught in a run-down on a failed hit-and-

Doug Porter, Odom, Brian Saunders and Kenny Hayes all singled in the bottom of the second inning as the Bullets took a 3-1 lead. Will Ramirez singled while Odom and Chad Siemer doubled as the Bullets added two more runs in the third.

National affiliations next step in Sanford's progress

The timing couldn't be better. This past weekend, three occurences took place that, while it may not seem like it. are interconnected: • It was announced that the 12-year-old youth baseball program with Little League Baseball. · A group of Sanford All-Stars enjoyed a successful weekend at the Babe Ruth Class A state tournament

Sanford Recreation Department is taking steps to align its 10, 11 and

In Sarasota. Sanford American Legion Post 53 (Seminole High School's summer team) won two of four games to improve to 21-8 on the summer. The connection is more than Sanford and more than baseball. In a summer that began with a group of Sanford teenagers being charged in the beatings (one fatal) of two men, we were due for some good news concerning our youth and not just in terms of wins and losses.

What ties these three incidents together is what they mean, independently and together, in terms of the progress of Sanford youth athletics. It wasn't all too long ago that what there was of Sanford youth recreational opportunities were in disarray. For a variety of reasons. parents were taking their children to leagues in other parts of the county. The number of teams dwindled. Forfeits were common. There was no girls' softball program to speak of for several years.

SPORTS

TONY DeSORMIER

But this summer, according to recreation department superintendent Rocky Ellingsworth, the number of teams involved in youth baseball alone grew from 17 to 26. three teams being added in the Pee Wee (7, 8 and 9) instructional league, two in the 10, 11 and 12-year-old bracket and four in the 13, 14 and 15-year-old group.

Impressive gains by any standard. Also. Sanford was able to field eight girls' softball teams, four in both the Juntor (12-and-Under) and Sentor (16-and-Under) leagues, and play a nine-game schedule in each league. It was also recently announced that there will a fall program. Finally, the Sanford Recreation Department opted to move its 13. 14 and 15-year-old boys' baseball program under the national umbrella of Babe Ruth Baseball this year and is just a signed formal declaration away from placing its 10. 11 and 12-year-old boys under the auspices of Little League

For now, the Pee Wees and girls' softball programs will remain unaffillated.

While it might be argued that it was change strictly for change's sake, I believe that the tying of Sanford's programs to national governing bodies is the next logical step to take.

Part of Sanford's problem is that despite being the county seat, it has a history of being somewhat insular. especially on the youth level. There's nothing wrong with the Florida Little Major League program (which Sanford had been a part of before these changes) other than nobody else in the county plays in

And as ludicrous as this may sound, the association with a recognized national governing body helps remove the "non-calibre" stigma Ellingsworth said has plagued Sanford's youth programs.

It's ludicrous because if you take the way the leagues are run next year and compare them to how the leagues were run this year, you will see very little, if any difference. Ellingsworth and former Little -League District 14 administrator Jim Hovis agreed the real difference comes in post-season play.

On the other hand, it's not ludicrous because as new families move into Sanford, they are going to look at the recreational outlets available to their children. Deserved or not, an affiliation with a recognized national body lends a degree of credibility.

But these are ethereal qualities that concern adults and have no meaning as far as the kids are concerned. What is important is finding a way to get increasingly more kids involved. Concretely, it would be very difficult for Sanford to continue to expand its programs without some larger organization to provide the framework.

An immediate case in point was the decision for the 13, 14 and 15-year-olds to play Babe Ruth this year.

The Florida Little Major League organization provides one league for 13 and 14-year-olds and another for 15. 16 and 17-year-olds. Wanting to find some way to get the 15-yearolds involved, the Sanford Recreation Department broke away from that association and aligned that age group with Babe Ruth Baseball. That's largely how Sanford doubled its number of teams in one year. What this does is give those boys who are so inclined a clear path to follow in the sport, starting at 7 years old in the Pee Wee instructional league and advancing through 15 years old in the Babe Ruth League

At that point, they're in high school and the players have pretty much weeded themselves out. The lesser players become disinterested and go on to other things while the better players get involved in the high school program. And that's how it should be:

Start preparing for fall vegetables

July is the time to start preparing for the fall vegetable gardening season. Now is the time to start tomato and pepper plants so that they will be ready to set out in the garden in 6 to 8 weeks.

There are several advantages to starting your seed in a controlled situation rather than seeding directly in the garden. First, you can avoid adverse weather. Many folks who planted directly in the garden last spring lost their seedlings in the heavy

You also can choose the healthiest plants to transplant into the garden. Most seeding produces many more plants than needed. You can select only the best ones to transplant into the garden rather than thinning a heavily seeded planting area. Very few people thin successfully. I guess most people hate to destroy anything that is growing. But thinning is very important because all plants need a certain amount of space to grow adequately.

Starting your own transplants lets you select the varieties that you want to grow. Special varieties may not always be available as plants at the garden center when you are ready to plant them. Also, you can reduce the number of seedlings lost to damping off disease by using sterilized soil and a controlled environment. Commercial pot-ting soil is more ideal for seed germination and seedling growth than garden soil.

To start your own transplants. you can use a pot, seed flat or sendbed. Plant pots include peat pots, pellets or small plastic pots. The pellet is a compressed about the size of a jar lid. When moistened, it expands to form a planting pot soft enough to insert a seed. Sow a seed or two directly into the plant pot. This method will produce a single plant in each pot and can be directly transplanted in o the garden.

A seedflat or seedbox is a practical way to start a large number of plants. Any small, shallow, wooden or plastic box can be used. The box should not be so heavy that it cannot be easily moved when filled with moist soil. Small cracks in the bottom provide drainage. A newspaper can be placed into the bottom to prevent the soil from dropping through the cracks.

Prepare your own seeding soil by using one part peat moss, one part perlite or vermiculite, two tablespoons of lime and 1 to 2 tablespoons of a 6-6-6 fertilizer or purchase a ready prepared potting mix. Fill the container within 14 inch of the top of the Phone 323-2500, ext. 5558.

mixture of peat and nutrients flat and firm the soil. Moisten the soil and let drain.

Broadcast tiny seed over the soil surface and gently press them down. Small seeds need not be covered. For larger seeds, make a furrow in the seed bed 14 inch deep and about 2 inches spart. Cover the seed and press until firm. Place newspaper or plastic over the flat until the seedlings begin to emerge.

Thin the plants 2-3 inches apart when they are abut 2 inches high. You can transplant them to small pots if you want. Before setting them out in the garden, place them where they will be hardened by sun and wind. Increase the time the box is in full sunlight until the plants are thoroughly hardened.

For more information about starting your own vegetable transplants, just give me a call or drop by the Agriculture Center for a free brochure.

Garden of the Month

A planter filled with calladiums, vicuna and golden pathoes is the focal point of the yard of Mr. and Mrs. George Benton, 105 E. Jinkins Circle. Hanging baskets of geraniums are at the entranceway. A variety of flowers and shrubs front the home. Blooming hydrangeas and chinese lanterns border the driveway. The Garden of the Month was chosen by Mrs. Carl Lind of the Rose Circle for the Garden Club of Senford.

You will receive one PLEASE CALL POLICE banner as a premium for a $5 contribution to SCIL, and another banner to tell them why? with each additional $4 contribution. DEAR ABBY: Please help! My 17-year-old son, who just graduated from high school, has been invited to accompany his girlfriend's family on a monthlong vacation across the country. As the girl's parents did not consult me before inviting him. I am now in the position of being the mean mom if I refuse to let him go.

As a registered nurse in the obstetrical unit that provides services for about 100 unwed teen-age girls a week, I am very much aware of the dangers of allowing teen-agers to spend large amounts of time together unsupervised. Her parents will be there but I'm very uncomfortable about the closeness this kind of vacation will provide. Secondly, we have a 15-year-old daughter, and I can't afford to set this kind of precedent for a similar situation involving her. And, finally, our son has a summer Job to pay for his clothes and books for college this fall, and a month's absence would significantly decrease his contribution to college financing. Needless to say, our once-quiet household is being torn apart by this situation. Please rush your reply.

CONCERNED MOM

DEAR CONCERNED: Remind yur son that he agreed to work this summer to help with his college expenses, so he can forget about accompanying his girlfriend on her family's vacation trip. And don't be apologetic when you tell him. His girlfriend's parents should have consulted you before inviting him. At 17, he is still a minor.

DEAR ABBY: When you get an invitation to a wedding and you can't go, are you obligated

I received an invitation to a church wedding that is scheduled for 10:30 in the morning. It's a good four-hour drive from where I live, and that's too long a drive and it's too early.

DEAR PERPLEXED: It is not necessary to state why you are unable to accept an invitation to a wedding - or to any other affair - but it softens the turndown if you can truthfully say that you are unable to attend due to a previous commitment or that you will not be in town.

Scieroderma can be something rare called CREST syndrome. My doctor indicates I will eventually suffer from crippling arthritis. I already have pain in my joints and am on pain medication, but I wonder what ites ahead. DEAR READER: CREST syndrome is an acronym for complications resulting from acteroderma, a chronic autoimmune (self-allergy) dis-case marked by scarring and other degenerative changes in many organs. C: calcinosis, calcifications under the skin. R: Raynaud's phenomenon. poor circulation to fingers and toes that is made worse by exposure to cold.

E: esophageal malfunction, difficulty swallowing, heartburn and inflammation of the esophagus. S: scierodactyly, taut, shiny akin over the fingers.

T: telangiectasis, dilated blood and lips. In addition, patients with scleroderma often suffer from arthritis, shortness of breath. maldigestion, heart inflamma-tion and renal disease (the major cause of death). Although scleroderma is a serious disease, its course is variable and unpredictable; it may be slowly progressive, but the prognosis is poor in the presence of heart or kidney complications.

Scieroderma is usually treated with prednisone, a type of cortisone. Other drugs are used to relieve specific symptoms, such as joint pain and intestinal complaints.

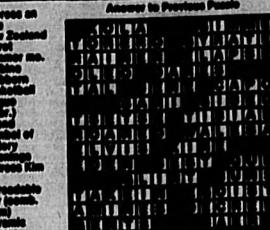

You seem to have a relatively severe form of scleroderma. Should there be questions about your prognosis and treatment. you may seek a consultation with a rheumatologist, a doctor specializing in the management of autoimmune disorders.

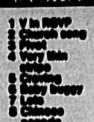

To give you more information.

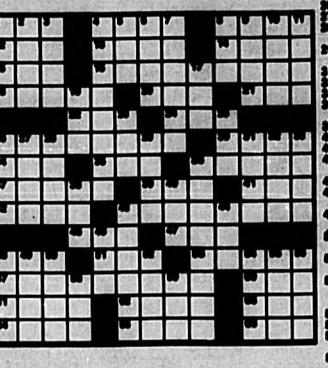

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have I am sending you a free copy of omething rare called CREST my health Report "Help I — rndrome. My doctor indicates I Physical Illness."

By Phillip Alder Last year's winner of the American Bridge Teachers' Association's Book of the Year award was the workmanlike "How to Play a Bridge Hand" by William Root (Crown, $19.95). It is an excellent textbook of intermediate-level declarer play, with more than 300 pages of example deals. As you study these deals, you may test yourself before reading Root's explanations. Also each of the 12 chapters ends with a quiz.

All this week's columns feature hands from the book. Today's is from the chapter "How to Play Suit Combina-tions." The contract is three no-trump and the lead is the spade four. East playing the king. What is your approach?

When playing in no-trump. start by counting your top tricks stop. Here you have seven top tricks: three clubs, two diamonds, and, after West's lead of the spade four, two spades. You need two more tricks, which apparently can come from either hearts or diamonds. But you don't have the time to play on hearts. The defenders will establish and run their spade suit before you have set up the hearts.

You must attack diamonds, where the only danger is a 4-0 break. After taking East's spade king at trick one with your ace. lead a low diamond from hand. If West discards, put up dummy's king and lead back toward your A-10. If West follows suit on the first diamond, finesse dummy's nine. No matter how diamonds break, you must make your contract with this safety-play.
