FLORIDA'S FUTURE

What will Florida be by the middle of this twentieth century?

Just what the next generation shall make it, and that generation will be largely what the fathers and mothers of today shall make it.

Some of the greatest scientists declare that every man owes it, quite as much to his parents as to himself, whether he is a genius, a drunkard, a criminal, insane, or an ordinarily intelligent and useful citizen. Even his impulses to aggressive effort, or the lack of them they say, is inherited, so that a person with an inheritance of good morals, a sound mind and body, lacking the born impulse or addition to self-improvement, may sink by a kind of inertia into positive uselessness if not immortality.

We come into the world, not of our own volition, handicapped by a burden of fearful responsibilities; some of us with an inheritance of evil tendencies, with bodies predisposed to disease, with weak and feeble minds upon borders of insanity in some form, and some of us with an almost irresistible instinct to criminal action. It is undisputed that a large majority of the professional criminal classes has sprung from criminal parents and these violators of the law in turn pass on their tendencies to their children.

A large proportion of the insane is traced to a parentage in which either the father or the mother, or both, were similarly affected, and it is known that such tendencies in the parent are far more often than not exaggerated in the children.

The handicap upon the next generation may be much heavier or lighter by the will of the present one. No man can live unto himself alone. No parent can live unto his own time and generation alone. Whether he be weak or strong, a genius or a lunatic, his influence through his children will be felt for good or ill fifty or a hundred years in the future.

The matter of individual responsibility to the future is but little appreciated. "Nurse" us look very far into the future and are influenced by what we find there. Sufficient unto the day or generation is the evil thereof, is the consoling excuse for disregarding the years to come by any seriously inconvenient line of conduct.

Yet it is established beyond the reach of argument that the relations between successive generations are intimate. Nature working through the centuries has evolved a higher mentality and an attainment of higher moral standards, but it may be questioned if she has built up the race to a greater degree of physical perfection in the last thousand years. All of Nature's accomplishments have been brought about through the operation unconsciously to man, of laws inexorable and undeviating—the same laws that have destroyed the weak and imperfect specimens in animal creation, and have propagated their kind from the strong and robust individuals.

It is not to be anticipated that Nature in her cycles of evolution, contrary to the education and instincts of civilization, is going to wipe out from the human race the mental deficiencies, nor the diseased, nor the criminals by any process of selection. It is not to be expected that the individual is going to sacrifice voluntarily that instinct most deeply rooted in his being—the desire to have his part in the continuation of the race—because he fears to transmit to his children the weaknesses of his own body or mind.

There is no earthly authority superior to that of the individual excepting alone that of the state. It is the refusal of an individual or his ignorance or indifference to act for the good of the state shall bring serious injury to the state, either now or in succeeding generations; it is evident that the state must act, or known evils will continue to exist and increase.

In other words Florida has no law that prevents the marriage of persons with known or suspected tendencies toward insanity. She has no law that limits or regulates the marriage of criminals. No statute forbids the marriage of consumptives nor of those who have any of those diseases which the doctors disguise by long, unpronounceable names to hide their disgusting and sometimes horrible features. These contemptible marriages have only to declare themselves to be of responsible age, hiding from the license clerk and even from each other the fact that they are or have been afflicted with some loathsome disease which may be transmitted to their children, that lurking in their families, if not actually manifest in themselves, is the cause of insanity.

The offspring of such marriages is a burden, an increasing burden, upon private charity and upon the state. It is a burden that is increasing in Florida by a ratio greater than that of the growing population, including the growth by immigration.

These are serious facts for the consideration of Florida's citizens and taxpayers. They are being studied by earnest men and women in other states who find similar conditions everywhere. They must be considered soon and carefully by the thoughtful men and women of this state.

The State Board of Health is urging upon the people of Florida a careful study and discussion through the press and elsewhere, of the question whether Florida needs or should have a revision of its marriage laws to work out a solution of these problems. If such new or revised laws are essential, to what extent should the state go, in regulating marriages among its citizens to better the next and future generations?

May Ward Off Pneumonia.

Here is a recipe which a physician gave me several years ago, says a writer, and I have used it in my family ever since. For coughs, colds or any bronchial trouble saturate a flannel cloth and apply to chest; Turpentine liniment—Take a pint bottle, put in white of one egg, shake well, add four tablespoonfuls turpentine, shake till foamy, then fill with good vinegar; shake well.

Had the Doctor Guessing.

An exceedingly eminent and busy New York physician, who goes to many clinics and sees hundreds of patients weekly, was somewhat taken aback a few days ago when, in response to a telephone call, he took up the receiver and heard a thin, elderly German-American voice say these words: "Doctor, I was by you last week. What shall I do now?"

Just Married, Too.

"Young man," said the magistrate, severely, "the assault you have committed on your poor wife is a most brutal one. Do you know of any reason why I should not send you to prison?" "If you do your honor," replied the prisoner at the bar, humbly, "it will break up our honeymoon."

NEWS FROM THE NATION'S CAPITAL

Washington, D. C., Mar. 10 (Special).

The National Rivers and Harbors Congress, an altruistic association made up of the leading business men of the nation, boards of trade, chamber of commerce, and other trade bodies, which has taken the liveliest interest possible in bringing about an annual river and harbor bill of generous proportions, has again taken up the cudgels against the repeal of that portion of the Panama Canal act relating to free trade for American ships engaged in coastwise trade. A letter has recently been sent out to all the thousands of members of the big waterway organization stating the merits of the controversy which has been revived through President Wilson's expressed desire for the repeal of the free trade provision of the act and calling upon their members to express their views, whether in favor of the American or the British contention, Great Britain insisting that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty has been violated through the free trade provisions of the Panama Canal act.

The referendum which the National Rivers and Harbors Congress has instituted will give a fair reflection of the will of the people on this very vital question.

An episode that tickled official Washington immensely occurred at the recent brilliant reception at the White House by President and Mrs. Wilson to the Army and Navy. It is an episode that at first blush seems unimportant to repeat, but nevertheless it is going the rounds of the drawing rooms here by reason of the unpopularity of the lady in the case, who is the wife of a cabinet officer under a former administration. She was cordially and generally disliked during her regime and made so many outspoken and powerful enemies that at times the situation grew so serious as to cause surprise that the cabinet officer did not resign his portfolio. But he did not, and at the recent White House reception this lady was a conspicuous figure. Through the courtesy of the First Lady of the Land the ex-cabinet husband was invited to the sacred precincts of the Blue Room. She took her place directly behind her own successor, one of the most gracious and winning of the present cabinet, and, not content with this conspicuous place, the lady gave expression to unpleasant remarks and criticisms which were overheard by a number of the guests.

An acquaintance from the last administration greeted her with a pleasant remark about it seeming a little strange not to see her in her old place, and one speech led to another until the lady herself shrugged her shoulders and said: "A case of every dog has his day," which ungracious remark a statesman of fame, holding with suppressed anger, brutally blurted out: "Yes, and cats, too," and then walked hurriedly away. The ladies eyes snapping blue after his retreating form he would not have said it in the last administration, but all the women who heard it, except the victim herself, just nched to hug him, as one expressed it.

On Wanted was the sign for some months about the horse of the famous pure food expert, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, who is now chief of the Bureau of Agriculture, but on a recent morning the sign (a figurative one, of course) was turned for a boy arrived, the second pure food baby. The first one, Harvey W. Wiley, is not yet two years old, but is considered a wonderful success in every way. The second sign of the government chauffeur, who is now in his eighteenth year, bids fair to be just as great a success. He tipped the scale at ten pounds at his birth, and the famous father is the proudest man in Washington. However, the Girl Wanted sign in the Wiley home has just been destroyed; it is held in reserve for the future, says the optimistic septuagenarian.

Vice President Marshall is acquiring a reputation in Washington society, as the after-dinner speaker of this administration. The Vice President is nothing if not progressive, although he always has been a bumpy and felicitous speech-maker. Mr. Marshall has even progressed so far as to acquire a broad black ribbon attached to his glasses, a feature of a recent administration loss Democratic. The ribbon gives the Vice President an added dignity, although it is criticised by some of the supercritical in Washington as not avowing of Home-ism or of Democratic simplicity.

DON'T BE CREATURE OF HABIT

It is Better to Make Some Blunders Than to Oscillate Always in a Groove.

It is a good plan to break one's habits occasionally, to see that it can still be done. To follow even the best of habits too closely tends to ossify existence. It makes one stiff. It narrows his tastes. The retired farmer who still gets up before daylight every morning, goes to get an early start waiting for bedtime, would be much better off if during the stress of life he had broken his habit occasionally and slept until nine o'clock.

The day man, who less the street, the first, the office grind become an unbearable habit loses all his elasticity. Recently a brother and sister were found in an eastern state who had lived on the same farm for fifty years, and during that time had not been ten miles from home. For thirty years the woman had not been to town, five miles away, and for 35 years, although well and strong, she had not been so far from the house as the branch in their bottom field. Habits of life like this become prison chains. One must do some things the same way or nearly the same to learn to do them well, but once having acquired the skill of repetition, it is well to break away and do it some other way. It is better to make some blunders and get some knocks experimenting than to oscillate in a groove until freedom ends.—Collier's Weekly.

PAYING FOR HIS IMPATIENCE

Next Time It is Likely That Patrick Devlin Will Wait for the Jury's Decision.

If Patrick Devlin of Lawrence, Mass., were not such an impatient man he would be free today. Instead he is locked up at the state farm, Bridgewater, for an indefinite period. Patrick was on trial at Salem before a jury, charged with drunkenness. All the evidence was in and the jury retired. After a while Patrick became edgy. The longer the jury stayed on, the more impatient he became.

Finally he arose and said: "Your honor, I would like to change my plea from not guilty to guilty." The change was noted by the clerk. Suddenly the door opened and the jury trooped back into court.

"What say you, Mr. Foreman and gentlemen of the jury, is the defendant guilty or not guilty?" asked the clerk.

"Not guilty!" replied the foreman. Patrick was crestfallen. Having changed his plea, he had to take his medicine. Although the jury said that he was not drunk, Patrick said that he was drunk and so the court decided that he ought to know better than the jury.

WILLINGLY RISKED HIS LIFE

English Hospital Surgeon, Knowing Danger, Put His Patient's Interests Before All.

An act of unselfish devotion by Mr. E. T. Mullally, house surgeon of Guy's hospital, London, England, was disclosed at the Shoreditch county court, during the hearing of a case recently, which was adjourned some time ago owing to his inability to attend. It was explained that for a month he was hovering between life and death. The details of his fight for the life of a child were furnished by a doctor at Guy's hospital. "There are times," he said, "when life or death is a matter of minutes or even seconds. A child was brought into this hospital suffering from diphtheria in its worst stages. Mr. Mullally, who was the senior surgeon present, saw the child, and understood at once that an immediate operation was imperative, and that even a few minutes' delay might be fatal. Diphtheria in this stage is terribly catching, and in the case of an operation such as Mr. Mullally was to perform, the chances were a hundred to one on his catching the disease unless he took the usual precautions. It was, however, a matter of minutes. Possibly there would have been time for him to fetch his mask, which covers the whole face, and is a sure protection against infection, and to take the other general precautions in such cases. He knew that by doing so—by waiting a few minutes—he was risking the chances of the operation proving successful, and so he decided to operate at once, well realizing that he was almost bound to suffer. He saved the child's life, but he caught the disease, and it was touch-and-go with him during a while month."

Seeks to Reserve Land for Cattle.

Germany discourages the cutting of peat, as the government desires to convert the moors and bogs into arable lands through proper drainage. This action is taken because of the scarcity of cattle and meat.

Scholars as Chefs and Waiters.

Boys just out of school are trained by the London county council to become chefs and waiters. Not long ago a luncheon to one hundred visitors was cooked and served by the boys who are being so trained.

To Make Vegetarians of Kin.

In Leghorn, Italy, a wealthy Hebrew of the name of Modigliani has bequeathed a large estate to be used to provide a vegetarian diet for his children, with the object of accustoming them to abstain from meat.

New Kind of Word.

Clyde Cornsoll talked about splitting an infinitive in such a despairing way that his parents thought an infinitive must be some kind of stove wood.

EVERYBODY'S NEWSPAPER

From certain comments in a recent issue of this paper it appears that its editor has discovered that life is just one thing after another, and frequently, is two things after the editor. He gives space to an anti-suffragist and he then finds that some citizen who swears by the Pankhurst family and all their works is indicting a few lines for his column. He takes it, and lo! a rejoinder. Now there is a public on a Rockville which is in a more evil case because the editor has the suffragists, the anti-suffragists, the Socialists and the anti-vaccinationists, all vocalizing on his back yard fence at one and the same time. It is an interesting quiet and it is relieving the editor of that feeling of enmity which might steal over him were there nothing doing. Just the same in common with other editors, it is up to him to run the paper. Hence, brethren, let us draw a serious moral from the career of those gentlemen who tread the primrose path of Journalism; and let it be said in parenthesis that it is no more easy for the paper on the dailies than for those on the weeklies. Let us start with the pleasing prospect that the paper is going to be managed exactly to suit its editor. That sounds good but it is subject to some slight restrictions inasmuch as the editor has to keep in touch with the business office, which like a certain Scriptura character, who carried the bag, takes it the cash from the advertiser. No blank et, no hate-ful; no advertising, no newspaper, and the editor often uses the soft-pedal much against his will. So, on that side of the proposition the paper frequently does not suit the editor. Again, the proof readers are supposed to be subject to him, but, whoever saw a proof reader who was controlled by any power except Satan? The editorial department and the advertising department are his unwilling and protesting victims. A proof reader can do more unexpected things to the English language than any master of it ever dreamed of. Alike destitute of intelligence and of the better feelings which animate our nature he can select the vital word of the keynote sentence in a column article and reduce it to a shapeless mass and then prove, the next day, that he was absolutely blameless.

So there are two powers to which the editor has to submit and there is ever one more which is very potent and which the readers ignore, and that is the desire of the editor to print those matters which will interest the greatest number of his readers. That is exactly what he owes them; to give them what they want and for what they are spending their money. The one thing which the editor must consider in connection with his article or a signed letter is: What per cent of the readers will be interested in this? If it hits 90 per cent it belongs on the first page; if it is of interest to not more than ten per cent it belongs in the waste paper basket.

So far as his editorial policy is concerned the editor may be considered as a free man, but there are some things which he cannot do. He cannot, for example, print a story which is untrue, or a story which is so untrue that it would do more harm than good. He cannot print a story which is so untrue that it would do more harm than good. He cannot print a story which is so untrue that it would do more harm than good. He cannot print a story which is so untrue that it would do more harm than good.

And yet, how much trouble all newspaper men have in bringing that idea home to the minds of some of their acquaintances! If a party is led at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Jones that is the support of the town, to them and yet the best of the people in the town or city go about their affairs as if nothing had happened and Mr. and Mrs. Jones, when they find what a modest amount of space has been given them, wonder what ground the editor has harbored to their disadvantage. And so it is a tough old world for the man who runs a newspaper. When the millionaires come along the public will undoubtedly have a good deal more confidence in the editor but until then he must get along as best he may, unwillingly making deadly enemies of good people whose lives are dedicated to some more or less harmless cause and those who are so thoroughly impressed with its importance that they fall to realize that the world is getting crazier little about it. Take him all in all the newspaper man has a wider circle of acquaintances and fewer friends than any other person in the community and, nine times out of ten, the severity of his friends is due to the fact that his acquaintances have not been able to get an undue amount of free advertising from his newspaper—Gulfport Times.

OUR RAILROAD COMMISSION

In saying that the state and interstate railway commissions had not been of benefit to us to the amount of a penny this paper of course had in mind the interior section of the state when it referred to the state commission and of the whole south when it referred to the interstate commerce commission.

It shows upon its face that the state railroad commission has been of inestimable benefit to our few seaport cities but it has done so at the expense of every town and city in the interior.

It has unfairly, unjustly and arbitrarily forced the interior to pay tribute, notwithstanding the fact that the enforcement of the payment of tribute has always been repugnant to the conscience of the American people.

No utterance has been more applauded than that of one of our revolutionary patriots, who said: Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute.

These men were elected to deal fairly with all sections, and what do we find? One dollar say on a package from Jacksonville. If taken off at Ocala—half the distance—the rate is one dollar and twenty-five cents. We are using round figures and relative charges.

These rank and raw discriminations are allowed by full grown men, elected to show no partiality or favor of one section over another.

When we come to the interstate commerce commission the discriminations are more glaring and unjust.

Forty-two dollars on a car of stuff from Chicago to Jacksonville and more than two hundred dollars on the return of the same car over the same route to Chicago.

Oh, yes the railway commissions are of inestimable advantage to one section over another, but the men composing them were elected and appointed to deal fairly, to see that the rate scales balanced evenly between interior and seaport points; between the section south as well as the section north of Mason and Dixon's line.

That utterance stirs our blood: Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute!

This compelling of one section to pay tribute to another grates on our conscience, as nothing else does—Leola Banner.

A FAST FIRE DEPARTMENT

When an utter stranger will put herself to inconvenience and trouble to aid another, it creates a greater bond of union for humanity, and makes one feel that there is such a thing as disinterested kindness and that the love of God still abounds, although there are those who claim that the world is getting worse all the time. These thoughts are forced by the fact that when Mrs. Jennie Moody heard that the writer's house was ablaze, she had her automobile run to the fire department and taking two firemen aboard was the first to arrive at the scene. We would be worse than heathens if we did not try to express the gratitude we feel and say that the night will never be so dark nor the way too dark for us to appreciate Mrs. Moody's great kindness, if it lay in our power to do so.

The third paragraph reveals the existence of several praiseworthy qualities and a thing or two that is not so admirable. One of these emotions that move our admiration is gratitude—that on the part of the editor of the Reporter-Star for assistance in saving, from destruction his house that was on fire; and the spirit of helpfulness that was displayed by the fire department in transporting the automobile to the home of the fire department.

It is revealed that a fire more administration than the primitive lack of means of locomotion by the fire department in an enterprising city like Orlando, and the helplessness that apparently waits in impious destitute of the fire department for the assistance of a fire department in reaching a fire. Here was all of the time that was consumed in the alarm reaching the fire department, the running to the fire, the fire, and the running to the fire.

Orlando had better get a move on her in the matter of some day the whole place will burn up while the fire department is waiting for some charitable lady to come for it.

NO PRESS ASSOCIATION

Secretary Thos. J. Appleyard of the Florida Press Association, who is a great admirer of Vice President Marshall and who in the days preceding the Baltimore convention strenuously advocated the nomination of this distinguished Indian for the Democratic standard bearer, has telegraphed from Washington that the Vice President had consented to attend the coming meeting of the Florida State Press Association. The presence of this distinguished American will be an honor which the editors and craftsmen of Florida will appreciate, and the cred of his coming is due solely to the efforts of our active and efficient secretary, Mr. Appleyard. It is likely that the session of the Press Association this year will be held in April, a month in which the session had always been held until the precedent was broken by the Palatka meeting two years ago, because of the activity of certain editor politicians in the primary. Last year also the meeting in Tampa was held in June and because of the work in the legislature of certain members. The session this year is to be held in Fort Myers, one of Florida's most progressive and beautiful cities, and an elaborate program has been prepared for the entertainment of the editors by the newspaper men and the board of trade of that city. The date and other particulars of the coming convention will be fixed later by the executive committee.—Palatka News.

There is much good timber in Orange county for the legislature and yet they seem shy about coming out. Among those who would make good are Strozier Eldred, Newton of Winter Garden, Sadler of Oakland, Witherington of Apopka, Overstreet and Ed Walker of Orlando, Way and Reynolds and Bob Hyer of Orlando, M. M. Smith of Winter Park and Seth Woodruff of Orlando. In fact there are dozens of good men in Orange alone who would make good legislative timber.

Exchange editors are beginning to brush up with oratorical artifice cells, with a view to taking the prize in the verbosity contest that will be pulled off soon in Fort Myers, the occasion being the annual meeting of the Florida State Press Association, which convenes here in April. Come prepared fellows, for it is going to be some talk race, and remember, that to the slow falls the cross-tie pass.—Ft. Myers Press.

SHOULD SEND OUT HERALDS

A Sanford Booster in Michigan Thinks We are Overlooking a Good Bit.

The Herald has mentioned several times the efficacy of sending copies of the paper to people in the north and the Commercial Club was almost persuaded one time to take several copies and send them out. In fact, we went so far as to get up a fine list of names for the subscription that the Club purposed to give the paper to for three months but nothing so far has ever been done and all this winter the finest bunch of advertising has been lost to the city and county. Some of our friends come in each week and get copies to send north but no concerted effort to send the paper has ever been made. F. J. McDannel of Owosso, Michigan, who owns a fine place south of the city and spends as much time there as his duties will permit, has always claimed that if The Herald was used judiciously it would bring better results than any other advertising medium and reiterates his former statements in the following that will be of interest to the people here who seem to have been asleep on the job for several months.

Potatoes Are Inferred. The dickens is now to pay among the Maine potato growers. It has been discovered that the powdery scab disease is in the stocks of tubers in Aroostook county. The government has ordered all seed and table potatoes held until an inspection can be made. It will mean a loss of thousands of dollars to the owners. Seed should be going to the eastern states and this hold up will make a short crop there this year, not to mention the effect it will have on the general price of potatoes in the spring. The outcome will be watched with much interest. The best feature is the early discovery of the disease.

HERBINE A Medicine of Power in All Liver Disorders. When the liver is torpid, it throws impurities into the system, which hamper every organ in the body. The result is that function processes are not properly carried on. Impurities get into the blood, the stomach is bilious, the kidneys weak and the bowels irregular—generally constipated. Herbina clears these impurities, opens up the obstructed channels, stimulates the torpid liver, cleanses the blood, purifies and renews the system. After the system has been thus overhauled, there is immediate improvement. Appetite returns, digestion is prompt, the mind clear, of gloomy forebodings and everything looks bright and cheerful, which means sound, healthy conditions everywhere in the body. My how you hate that liar
You're tired of his bluff
You'd like to punch him in the head
Until he yells, "Enough!"
But, no, don't you be hasty
Two wrongs don't make a right
I'll tell you how to fix him
Without an ugly fight
You do despise a gossip
When that one comes around
You'd like to see him
And not his mate around
But now, don't get excited
You might have it you will
And I'll tell you a sure way
To keep a gossip still
You do not hate that fellow
He's always talking in
If he don't lead to his own tin
You'll get lost from the tin
Oh, no! Now, don't get ugly
Just wait a little bit
I'll tell you in a minute
A method that will fit
But, say, before I tell you
You, sir, must certify
That you don't gossip, butt in,
Put up a bluff nor lie.
For true reformers, don't you know,
Must be reform'd per se
Reforming first begins at home,
Just like real charity.

KURIOS FROM CORRESPONDENTS

Q. When are geese feathers ripe for plucking? A. When they pull easily and the quills show no blood nor liquid.
Q. What causes hens to drop their eggs while on the roost at night? A. It is generally done by hens that are overfat or injured in some way.
Q. Is there a way to prevent turkeys from molting? A. Not unless the molt comes from weakness caused by sick ness or lice. In this case treatment that restores vitality will stop the trouble.
Q. I have noticed you advise the use of crop in preference to first crop clover for fowls. Why so? A. Second crop does not have tough, long stems and is more juicy and tender.
Q. At what age does a rooster cease to fill the bill as a breeder? A. There is no arbitrary rule. We have seen a male break down after the first season and have also seen cock birds five years old that couldn't be beat. Some fanciers follow a rule to dispose of a male after three years. We kept them as long as they give satisfactory results.
Q. Is it necessary to cut off the comb and wattles of capons? A. The wattle shrinks and need not be cut. Absence of comb is a capon's distinctive mark, and some buyers will count them as signs when not dotted. Consult your market demand.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

The dropping of "Fuzzies" from the Standard of Perfection should be only the beginning of the elimination of certain ornamental breeds that are very rare, but of little use. Very few of these rare breeds are seen at exhibitions, and, of course, their owner has a sure who owns if they look like it.
Among the changes made by the recent A. P. A. Convention was the dropping of Buff Turkeys from the Standard. These birds are now rare, seen, and some other breeds continued on the list should have been dropped for the same reason.
England is a great country for fresh and mostly ornamental poultry. Among these are the Rumpless and Frizzles, the latter having clubs for White, Black, Blue, Gray, Red, Buff and Partridge. The Rumpless has never been admitted to our standard, and the Frizzles were recently thrown out.
Beds otherwise fine for show are often spoiled if these roosts are too near the wall and the growing tail feathers are injured at night. Too wide a roost slit will cause crooked toes, and a roost too near the ceiling not only puts the birds up where foul, but air is generally found, but the rooster who must stamp his head while in bed often gets a nap comb thereby.
Those who comment on the fact that a duckling swims faster than a chicken should remember that a duck also grows twice as fast as a chicken. Of course, that is not the case while it is fed the same ration. For a duck's digester is such that food must be fed soft and moist to get quick digestion, quick assimilation, quick growth.
The farmer who does not have a scratching floor where his hens must peck for their feed or die can't expect many white eggs. We have attended farmers' institutes where not 10 per cent of those present were getting white eggs and on investigation found that the large majority had no pine for their hens to exercise and feed corn exclusively.
England has imported 600 American hens for the improvement of native stock, and that government has placed an American in charge of her poultry improvements. The South American hen is small, of mixed color and an indifferent layer, but quickly responds to good treatment.
Chickens in molt present a bad appearance for sale and are full of pin feathers. All old stock not intended for breeders the next season should be sold off before molt. This makes room for young stock and saves feed and labor and brings more money.
Because a hen eats what is thrown down is no argument that that's what she needs or is good for her. Sour mash and mucky corn may be eaten by hungry chickens, but if the good article is placed side by side with the rank the latter will not be touched. It is always what a hen digests well and is needed by her system that hits the spot.

GROWER AND SHIPPER OF Florida Vegetables

Sanford, Fla.

Whether you are a farmer, poultry raiser, hotel keeper or merchant there is nothing that will add to your business and give you a good standing among those with whom you deal like a good letter head properly printed.

In order to give you a chance to get some good stationery without a great expense we are going to make next week a and will make an extra special price on letter heads during this sale in order that everyone in Seminole County may have a supply of letter heads at a very low cost.

Special Letter Head Week

Orders will be taken on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, March 16th, 17th and 18th, for letter heads at the following prices:

500 letter heads, on best ruled paper,	$1.85
1000 " " " " " " " "	2.85
500 " " " " plain bond paper,	1.95
1000 " " " " " " " "	2.95

For two colors of ink, $1.00 per 1000 extra

This will give you the very best printed stationery at a price only a trifle higher than the cost of good tablet paper. It will pay you to take this opportunity for it will not be offered again.

Why We Can Do This

The reason we make this special reduction of 35% from regular prices is in order to introduce the use of printed stationery to people who have never used it, altho the offer applies to old customers as well as new.

The reason we can do it without loss to ourselves is that we can turn a part of our plant over to this line of work for these three days exclusively, and thereby reduce the cost of changes on our presses, and cut down labor costs to the minimum.

Remember—this will not be inferior work in any way but your order will have the same personal attention as always has been our custom. The work done in this office is not surpassed anywhere for we have the very best workmen and the best and most up-to-date machinery and materials in every department.

This offer positively good for three days only and no deliveries will be made until the following Monday. No work to be charged. Terms cash with order or on delivery. This is imperative at these prices. Mail orders given prompt attention.

CURBSTONE GLEANINGS

BUDGET OF OPINION "JUST BETWEEN YOU AND ME."

EVEN THE GATE POST NOT IN IT

A CHIEF IS AMONG YE TAKING NOTES AND FAITH. "HE'LL PRENT 'EM"—SO SAYS SAUNTERER.

The March American Magazine publishes the autobiography of a stingy man. Following is an extract:

Why is it we teach our children that thrift, proper economy, and the saving spirit are akin to the cardinal virtues; that wastefulness is near to sin—and then laud the spendthrift as a good fellow and ridicule the stingy man? Why do I that we will loan money to a known wastrel and refuse to tide over a saving person in an emergency. I have never been able to understand these things. I am stingy. I enjoy being stingy. The penny saved gives me quite as much, possibly more, satisfaction as does the twopence earned. My friends treat my stinginess as an eccentricity. They call me 'Old Rainy Day,' and laugh at my stinginess when my back is turned, wrongly thinking that open reference to it would hurt my feelings. I do not dispute the fact that their attitude exasperates me at times. It is not that I care for their opinion but that they never give me an opportunity to explain my theories regarding stinginess. I am well aware of their semi-contempt for my frugality in certain lines, but far from being ashamed of my stinginess I am rather proud of it.

I am not in the least ashamed of it. Indeed I'm to the defense of stinginess and declare that stinginess is the one virtue for the present plight of the people. Before stinginess ceased to be one of the American traits no one heard of the high cost of living.

Many people have an idea that there is something mysterious and occult about the work of the weather bureau in forecasting the coming of storms, frosts and floods. Not a few think that the observers must necessarily get their idea by reading the planets, the stars and the moon. As a matter of fact the forecaster of the bureau follows the coming of disturbances in a business-like way very similar to that in which a man who has ordered a shipment of goods should estimate the date of its arrival.

Suppose a man had ordered a carload of pineapples from the Hawaiian Islands. He would know the average time it would take the steamer to make the trip to the Pacific port, the average time for unloading into refrigerated cars and the average number of days to be allowed these cars for their trip across the continent to New York. His estimate, however, would be subject to error, because the steamer might be delayed by fog, or the cars might meet with an accident.

Storms, like pineapples, as a rule do not originate in the United States. They come to us, some from the Philippines, Japan, Siberia, Alaska, Canada or the Gulf of Mexico. The weather bureau gets cable, telegraphic or wireless notice of a foreign storm. Station after station or vessel after vessel reports the storm's arrival in its neighborhood, so that the general direction and rate of progress can be determined very early. In fact the arrival of some storms can be foretold ten days in advance.

The forecasters watch for the region of low barometer which is the storm center around which the winds blow. This whirl or eddy moves bodily forward with the general eastward drift of about 650 miles a day in our latitude. As the lines of equal pressure (isobars) around the low center crowd closer together, the winds attending the storm increase the force. The forecaster determines the direction of movement of the storm and its velocity.

When weather disturbances are reported, the forecasters know from experience about how long it takes them to reach our Pacific coast, and then how long after it will reach the Atlantic coast. For example, if a storm coming from Siberia drifts eastward around the north pole and reappears in Alaska, it should appear in Washington and Oregon in about two days; should get to the Great Lakes in six days and to the Atlantic coast in seven or eight days.

Unexpected conditions may delay storms or divert them from the straight track just as a refrigerator car may be thrown off its schedule or be shipped by accident on a wrong road. Some of these storms deplete themselves by running into regions of high barometers which are of greater magnitude than the storm itself. Some of them, however, travel completely around the world.

To keep tabs on cold waves that come into the United States from Canada and Alaska, the weather bureau studies the Canadian weather reports. England sends reports from Iceland, the British India and continental Europe, and daily reports come from St. Petersburg of the conditions in Russia and Siberia. The same businesslike system used in tracing the track of a storm is applied in determining the arrival of frosts.

Flood forecasts are made in the same way. Information as to the amount of rainfall at the headquarters of streams that cause floods are covered by telegraphic reports sent by local observers. As the rain reaches the main channel the height of the water in the channel is determined by successive gaging stations. Past records establish how much a height, say of twenty feet at Dubuque, Iowa, will produce at Davenport, another station eighty miles down the Mississippi. This plan is followed all the way down the river, and at each point full allowance is made from the effects of water from tributaries and additional local rainfall. As a result of these observations in the recent flood, the people of Cairo had warning a week or ten days ago. The Pittsburg district can be given only 12 to 24 hours notice, because a flood is upon them within 24 hours after a heavy storm.

It is slightly amusing to the average citizen that those who are interested in the National Baseball League, describe those who would start the Federal Baseball League as outlaws, and describing playing members of the old league as outlaws if they make contract with any of the clubs in the new league.

The people at large are not apt to be deceived by the use of such a severe term. It has been regarded as a kind of slavery that was fastened upon men when they entered the baseball business as players. Contracts have been drawn up to the immense advantage of the owners of clubs and men who might improve their positions by availing themselves of the reputation which they have made, are prevented from doing so under their past iron contract which compels them to play with one club unless, by consent of the managers, they are transferred to others, but, in any event, they are compelled to play within a certain narrow circle of clubs to be subject to injunction which prevents them from playing at all.

A man is tied up for life when he goes into the business unless at the end of a season or a term of years service he is free to renew his contract with an old team or decides to go with a new one. The new one, of course, has just as good a right to go into the baseball business as the old ones ever had.

It is diverting to say the least, to hear both of the old leagues now speaking in the Federal League in the same way that the National spoke of the American when the latter was formed a few years ago and began business.

Every honorable contract should be kept and it may be that there are difficulties in keeping men in clubs when they have made a reputation when there is more money in another place. Yet we do not hear that any other kind of business are prevented from changing employers. Why did that they can better themselves by so doing.

The fact appears to be that in baseball, as they are called, have a close corporation, and should not be allowed very much to suit themselves within the two old leagues. This may be a prejudiced view of the subject, but at least the description of the new league as a gang of outlaws is diverting at the moment.

An Appreciative Orchestra.

Rubinstein had promised the orchestra players a supper if one of his operas should prove a success. It was a dismal failure, and he went home sadly. Presently the doorbell rang and, behold, there were the players! In response to his looks of astonishment they exclaimed, "We liked your opera."

Limitation May Be Gainful.

Cowper could tell a story better and more tersely in rhyme than in prose. The builder of engines for ships has long been teaching the builder of engines for mills how to save space, materials and coals. In much the same fashion the automobile is pointing the power house to new economies.

Desire to Be Free Is Wrong.

Oh, the worth of coercion in a daily duty which must be done whether we like it or not! The desire to be free from such compulsions is wrong. As well might the locomotive ask to dash out unrestrained over the prairie and the bridge. The tracks which confine it continue its usefulness and its life.

Dodging Promotion.

There is a chafing-dish period for every college student; but when the time comes for the promotion to the higher position hard by a grand square cooking-stove, most of the graduates prefer to toot the alarm-whistle on a limousine.

POULTRY NOTES BY C.M. BARNITZ RIVERSIDE PA. CORRESPONDENTS SOLICITED

(These articles and illustrations must not be reprinted without special permission.)

POULTRY AS PETS.

You seldom see a human turn up his nose at a fellow for making a fuss over a dog, a horse or a rooster. Most humans love pets. The dying Daniel Webster exemplified this when he asked that his cows be driven near the window that he might look into their kind, gentle eyes before he died. Among your first proud accomplishments will be to whistle for the dog and to crow like a rooster. When as young as the lovely baby petting the big Orpington cockbird in the picture you fell in love with the chickens and, if as old as the eighty-year granddad, fussing with the little Minors in the hammock, you still likely have this affection for the live creatures in God's beautiful world around us. Mother taught me to love chickens—she brought the baby chicks.

BABY'S PET.

In her apron from Biddy's nest in the barn and set them in a covered basket by the kitchen stove. She let you pet them and feed them, and it was no time till you had some of them of your own, and ever since that you have liked to have chickens around. There are 134 varieties of poultry in the American Standard today, and American poultry is the most beautiful, the most practical and the best paying in the world, and back of much of all this vast improvement and wonderful achievement is the fact that fanciers have loved their birds, made pets of them, brought out their qualities, evolved new breeds and thus made our billion dollar poultry industry possible.

kind and unselfish. Adds interest to life, brings him close to nature and there are thousands of men every day who are glad for the restful hour they get after the treadmill of the office and the store, which they while away among their flocks of cooling pigeons, crowing roosters and cackling hens. And poultry reciprocates the affection and care bestowed on them. They soon know their owner, soon show their trust and affection, and we have always noticed that fowls that are pets and kindly cared for grow the best, lay the most eggs and pay best interest on the investment.

DON'TS.

Don't pass your time regretting that you didn't have the chance some other fellow had. A poor excuse of a man can waste time making poor excuses. Be up and doing or be forever ruling.

Don't forget the grit. Chicks can't thrive without it. There are three sizes—for chicks, chickens and old hens.

Don't forget that stunks and crows are attracted by eggs. A rotten egg as bait draws them to the trap.

Making the Little Farm Pay

HORTICULTURE is going forward again in the central states after a long period of neglect. Farmers are acquiring business ideas and begin to understand that in a well balanced program fruit is an important feature. It is much more profitable than dairying or grain raising. To make fruit pay there must be clean, tidy orchards. The grounds cannot be neglected. Cultivation is needed, but it must not interfere with tree roots. If vegetables are grown they should be kept clear of the trees. Old trees may stand pruning, but this is fatal to young ones. A liberal dressing of stable manure before plowing is recommended. Fall plowing is best. Fertilizer is necessary whether other crops are grown or not. There is such a thing as starving trees.

In many cases it will be found that the old trees have exhausted practically all the available nutritive material contained in the soil, and they need considerable nitrogen in order to produce new wood and to put new vigor into them, and therefore they will stand lots of stable manure. But if they were young, bearing trees in their prime they would need only a light dressing of manure.

While the actual fertilizing material contained in a ton of average stable manure is small, not much above twenty-eight pounds, if lime is not considered, it is a great humus producer. Humus adds lots of moisture, and in turn and moisture working together release the nutritive material already in the soil and put it in shape so that those little hungry feed roots can gather it up and send it on its mission of supplying leaf, bud and branch with life and vigor.

If one should want quicker and better results than just stable manure alone, phosphate rock, ground bone and potash may be added in the proportion of 100 pounds of phosphate, 200 pounds of ground bone and 100 pounds of potash, but the user will have to be his own judge of just how much to apply to the acre, as there are so many different conditions to be taken into consideration that the same quantity will not answer for all.

An cultivation is needed anyway, it is well to raise vegetables in the orchard, thus making the land pay a good average profit even if the fruit has a bad season. Weeds are to be kept out of an orchard as zealously as out of a garden.

It is also important that we practice a good system of shallow cultivation in young orchards. The trees respond to good tillage just as the corn and other cultivated crops. Barnyard manure, cowpung and clover are three great fall cover crops for a young orchard. Trees ought to stand about thirty feet apart.

Good drainage is important in the apple orchard as elsewhere. The apple does not like "wet feet." For that simple reason it succeeds more often on naturally well drained, rolling land than in low, boggy places.

Just after the leaf buds in the spring and before the blossom buds open the old orchard should be given a good spraying with the regular Bordeaux mixture and, this green or lime-sulfur and arsenate of lead, another one; just after the blossoms drop and a third some time later if troubled with the roiling moth, which is almost sure to be the case in an old orchard.

This fight against the codling moth must be unrelenting. The worm is migratory, traveling surprising distances in the work of destruction. Spraying should be done in any part of the season when pests are seen, but it always seems necessary just as the fruit has become nicely formed.

Many of the farms that have had one silo before are using two this year. This is further evidence that the silo pays. Comfortable Winter Range. Give the hens full range of the barn, stables and other farm buildings during the day, where they will have comfortable, dry shelter and will be able to glean much feed that would otherwise go to waste. Confine them in their own house at night, so they will not become a nuisance in the other buildings. Keeping Out From Axle. When one is hauling sand or gravel axle grease and horsefeed may be saved by the simple device of a piece of tin nailed on top of the axle to extend over the hub of the wheel on the inside. This prevents grit from getting into the hub.

SANFORD CITY GROWING IN RAPID BUT THRIFTY MANNER

NEW BUILDING RECORD BREAKS ALL PRECEDENTS

HOME PEOPLE CONFIDENT

ARE INVESTING THEIR MONEY IN THE CITY OF THEIR FAITH AND HOPES

That Sanford is growing into a real city is apparent to any one taking a short drive over the city and noting the signs of prosperity on every hand in the shape of new dwellings and store rooms.

Magnolia avenue and Palmetto avenue seem to be in the lead in the matter of new dwellings, although the building fever seems to be prevalent in all parts of the city and wherever the eye can reach new buildings are starting.

Magnolia has taken a start that will carry this street ahead rapidly and from First street to Tenth street will soon be an unbroken front of fine residences.

At the present time there are no less than a dozen new homes either just started or nearly completed on Magnolia and the past six months have seen about that many more until at the present time there are but one or two vacant lots on this beautiful avenue.

Palmetto avenue has almost as good a record for fast growth and about six new houses are building on this street and over a dozen have been built in the past six months.

In this business portion there will soon be an added activity and there will be several fine business blocks built during the early spring and summer.

J. Musson has just finished several nice store rooms near the union station and will rent these out and also sell them to investors.

Frank Woodruff who has faith in the future of Sanford will build another block this spring on the corner of Commercial street and Park avenue. The building will be 64x100 feet and will be brick two stories in height. The first floor will be occupied by a drug and the upper rooms will be fitted up as offices.

Mr. Woodruff has also purchased the lot of the Sanford House property on First street next door to his present new block and will tear down the frame stacks that now adorn the premises and build two nice store rooms. Being in the very heart of the city these rooms should be filled by desirable tenants all the time and Mr. Woodruff is making no mistake in this enterprise.

T. J. Miller has purchased the lot for between his Imperial Theatre building and the John Miller building on Magnolia avenue and will build store rooms on the site during the summer.

Several other Sanford business men are contemplating building in the business portion of the city, thus demonstrating their absolute faith in Sanford. The very best demonstration of the solidity of any growing city is the faith of her citizens and the fact that our home people are doing all the building is proof sufficient that we are a power within ourselves and the city will become great through that faith.

Geisel's Lecture Called Off

A telegram received in the city Thursday a. m. calling off Dr. Geisel's lecture for this (Friday) evening, because of the illness of Dr. Geisel has occasioned much disappointment. The lecture was widely advertised, so the disappointment reaches a large class of people. Dr. Geisel's telegram states that she is voiceless with an attack of laryngitis, and that she is unable to give the lecture. There is every reason to believe that the lecture will be given at a later date, notice of which will appear in The Herald.

SANFORD GROWERS PROSPEROUS AND MAKING GOOD THIS YEAR

LETTUCE AND CELERY HAVE NETTED GOOD RETURNS

SALES MADE HERE

GROWERS HAVE NOT TRUSTED TO FLUCTUATING MARKETS BY CONSIGNING PRODUCTS

The Sanford section will probably make more money from vegetables this season than any other section of the United States. Taking a general average of what has already been marketed and what will be marketed to spring crops and not to these the hay and corn crop and the figures would be most startling.

The lettuce was the first pay streak to be struck and started off with an agility that was most agreeable to the growers and kept up the gait through the season. Only once was there a lull in the market during a few days of very warm weather, but Hieser's advance brought in the first again and the market advanced saving the growers a bunch of money.

Lettuce is selling here for $2.50 per crate and several growers sold lettuce this week for $1000 per acre. A grower yesterday offered $5,000 for five acres of lettuce and is in no hurry to accept the offer, which demonstrates more than any other one thing that the Sanford growers have the vegetable market down to a fine point and the demand is steady.

Of course this price may not stay at the high places and several warm days in succession could make lettuce hit the tobagian chute but the buyers are offering money for the crop in the field and in the grower's take no chances. It can be safely estimated that every grower in the celery delta has made money this season. Some have lost money on the crop only to make on another and lettuce, cauliflower, celery, etc., have brought excellent returns.

Cabbage looked for some weeks like a loser but has come back this week and looks good for the remainder of the season as the stored cabbage and foreign shipments have been exhausted. The recent cold snaps killed all the green stuff north of Florida and these markets will not enter into competition with Florida early in the spring as they formerly have and the prospects for spring crops in the Sanford section are ever better.

The border stuff here was touched but not much of it went through and is practically untouched and these crops are bound to bring top prices.

It is too early to make predictions on the general average of Sanford crops but not too early to predict that there will be more money made here than ever before, a fact that is becoming apparent to the most casual observer of trade conditions.

House Warming

On last Tuesday evening a party of Sanford's young people had a sort of get-together meeting and went in a body to surprise Mr. and Mrs. Deas, in their new quarters on Palmetto avenue. It was quite a surprise as the young couple were not expecting such an onslaught of jollity and good fun. After a general good time tables were brought out and 500 was played. The first prize, a hand made towel was won by Miss Laura Fish; the gentlemen's prize, a stein, was won by Mr. Braxton Perkins. The game was continued until the wee small hours when ice cream and cake and bonbons were served. Many thanks are due Miss Fish for the lovely refreshments.

The Co-operative Meeting

The cause and principles of Co-operation assumed a unique aspect Tuesday at the Imperial Theatre. It was in the form of an entertainment of music by a male quartet and by an orchestra, moving pictures and a lecture. The committee having this entertainment in charge was composed of Charles Ingold, Henry Egge, M. A. Mitchell, Bert Brimms and J. E. Thomas, all of the Co-operative Association of our city. The following program was rendered:

- Musical by Orchestra.
Read of Pictures.
Musical by Orchestra.
Quartet.
Lecture by Mr. A. B. Hawk.
Musical by Orchestra.
Read of Pictures.
Quartet.
Musical by Orchestra.
Read of Pictures.

The Quartet, which gave some taking, got to beautiful harmony, was composed of Messrs. Woodruff, Stockton, P. J. Body and Wright. The Lecture, under the capable leadership of Mr. Brock had the following gentlemen in it, Messrs. Brock, Hess, Thornton, Graves, Crosby, Appinwall, Bradford and Munson. Clarence Mahoney pianist. The audience appreciated this feature of the entertainment about as much as any other. The lecture by Mr. A. B. Hawk, the international secretary of the Co-operative, Homestead Co. of America, was a clear and forceful presentation of the origin, growth and principles of the great co-operative work of our country. The moving pictures on livestock and evening for the youngsters, but we thought that boys for the purpose of giving space to any well ordered program. Altogether the cause of co-operation received such a boost as could hardly have been realized by any one means.

Change to See Mexico

Sanford people are going to have a change to see something about Mexico without the risk of running against one of the industries of Mexico or the people. An expedition car, entitled "Seeing Mexico" will be on exhibition at the A. C. B. depot four days this week, from Monday to Thursday, being open daily from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. The car was built in Mexico City during the Mexican regime by the Mexican National Educational Society, having been built under the patronage of that many valuable things were added to it taken from the National Museum and placed for exhibit on the car. The Mexican National Railway also supplied many valuable gifts, such as the glass plate photographs.

Besides the agricultural, industrial and mineral exhibits of Mexico of great interest are the Aztec relics of stone and pottery, some of the relics being recently unearthed by Professor Nivn, who has discovered a buried city 15 feet below the old Aztec capital. The discoveries of Professor Nivn are regarded of such importance that the United States Geological Society recently sent experts to Mexico City to secure detailed account of his work. There is one Aztec idol called "The God of Love" which is the only idol ever permitted to leave Mexico. In the car will be found many things of special interest to the ladies, such as the drawn work, handkerchiefs, finger paintings, etc. The school children will be interested in the school display of the Mexican children, also in the Mexican talking parrot, Mexican monkeys, etc.

A small admission fee, five cents for school classes in charge of teachers, and ten cents general admission, is made to help defray transportation and other expenses of the trip, the deficit being made up from a fund set aside by the National Educational Society. The car is under American management. It will be one of the attractions at the San Francisco exposition.

A Birthday Party

The ever hospitable home of the Stewarts was thrown open to the ladies of the Baptist Aid Society Monday evening on the occasion of Mrs. Stewart's birthday. The guests, as they came, dropped into the treasury of the society pennies to number the age of the hostess. There was not one dull moment during the evening. Conversation, music and when the most laughable reports of a wedding in Hingville. About 9:30 the young ladies of the home sewed delightful coffee and sandwiches and bonbons. Then too noon time came for adieu. Even afterward some lingered for songs and then the good byes again. The Stewarts indeed know how to entertain. Ye Olden Style.

TWO MORE REGIMENTS LEAVE FOR THE BATTLE SCARRED BORDER

SOMETHING DOING IN MEXICAN CRISIS ARE LONG

LOOKS BELLIGERENT

OTHER NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE WORLD AT LARGE AND THEN SOME

Washington, Mar. 10.—Two or more regiments are today moving to join the American border patrol. The Seventeenth Infantry at Fort McPherson, Ga., and two battalions of the Ninety Infantry at Fort Thomas, Ky., and Ft. Logan, Roots, Ark., are loading their baggage on trains and with their arrival at Eagle Pass and Laredo, Texas, the border patrol will be larger by 3,000 than Shafter's army when it entered Cuba. The White House and state department maintained today that there was no significance in this movement and said that patrol had been increased at the request of Texas congressmen. The war department said the troops would probably actually enter Sunday or Monday and the Seventeenth Infantry would probably go to Savannah and from there to Galveston on an army transport; the others by rail.

The superdreadnought Texas, the most powerful battleship afloat today left the yards of her builder at Newport News and proceeded to Norfolk to be placed in charge of Rear Admiral Fisher. The Texas carries ten fourteen-inch guns and twenty-one five inch guns. She is 373 feet long, has a speed of 21 knots and a displacement of 25,000 tons. Her armor belt is 11 inches thick. Her contract cost was $5,500,000.

So as to enable him to take better care of the rural credit legislation in the senate, the senate leaders yesterday afternoon decided to increase the banking and currency committee by one member for the special benefit of Senator Fletcher, of Florida.

There is a persistent renewal today of the report that Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo will marry Miss Eleanor Wilson, the youngest daughter of President Wilson in June. There has been no announcement and Secretary McAdoo said it would be inadvisable for him to discuss the matter. Miss Wilson is 21 and Mr. McAdoo is 50. He is a widower and father of six children and has one grandson.

Miss May Richardson, the suffragette who mutilated the Rokeby Venus at London was sentenced today to six months imprisonment. She has been on a hunger strike since her arrest. Suffragettes burned a large unoccupied mansion at Stewart, belonging to the Free Church of Scotland. A message was left stating this in revenge for the brutal arrest of Mrs. Pankhurst.

What the district attorney's office described as material for at least fifty indictments alleging fraud against Henry Siegel and Frank E. Vogel, president and vice president respectively, of the Siegel stores corporation, who were arrested yesterday on three indictments and are now at liberty under $25,000 bail each, was placed in the hands of the grand jury today. Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train said that as many indictments as the ends of justice seemed to require would be found against the merchant bankers.

Thrasher for Superintendent

The superintendent's duties are not to teach but to see that the children are under the instruction and training of competent and efficient teachers and also to direct and manage the schools as prescribed by the school laws of the state and to make such recommendations, from time to time to the county school board as may tend to promote the best interests of the schools of the county, and to see that all orders of the county school board are carried out as directed; to issue warrants to pay teachers and other bills of the schools; to keep records of all the acts of the county school board; to hold teachers examinations; issue certificates; make reports to the state auditor and to the state superintendent of public instruction. These are only a few of the duties of the office of superintendent of public instruction. The present incumbent is experienced and trained in the work and is competent and fitted for the office.

CONDITION OF SANFORD

From the Viewpoint of the Sanitary Inspector of Our City

In an interview with the sanitary inspector a few days ago he suggested a few facts that will probably be interesting and beneficial to the public's welfare at large, if only partly carried out.

First, there are at least one thousand families in the city of Sanford. Suppose each family put in two hours a week cleaning and beautifying their homes. This would mean 2000 hours per week, 250 days or a little over 41 weeks. It would cost the city to do this work, $1.50 per day, $375.00 per week or $2,625.00 per year. Think of it! If each one will do a little. It's the small things that count.

Again, if your trash has not been moved call up clerk Griffin or Mr. E. E. Brady and make your complaint. Don't say my trash has not been moved, if it has. Say it has but is not moving again. He will gladly move it.

If your garbage tax is due and you do not care to come down town to pay it, call up clerk's office and give your name and number and the inspector will call on you for same.

Clean up your yard before the inspector has to tell you. It is more embarrassing for him to have to tell you than for you to be told.

Put your trash in some receptacle and place it in a convenient location. The wagon man has not the time to rake trash and cans up that are thrown over the fence in alleys. He has just so much work to do in so much time and if delayed at your home will be late at the next.

Keep your chickens up. It is against the city ordinance for them to run at large. This also applies to ducks.

If you have any rain barrels that are not covered cover them or do away with them. They are mosquito breeders and also against the city ordinance.

The city will have on hand in a few days a supply of galvanized cans with covers that you may have at cost. Can't give price at present.

The city is in very nice shape at present. Let's keep it that way, by doing as will prevent disease and save you a doctor's bill. Spring is here and what comes with it you all know. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

At the Methodist Church

The attendance and interest in the services at the Methodist church are growing each Sabbath. All members and friends are cordially invited. Visitors will receive a real welcome.

The Sunday school continues to grow in interest and numbers. Since curtains have been put in we can accommodate a much larger attendance than before. Mr. J. K. Mettinger, the superintendent, for twenty-six years is awake to all the new methods of the modern Sunday school.

The Wesley Brotherhood class is a fine body of men, taught by L. R. Phillips.

Wesleyan Truth Seekers is under the efficient leadership of Mrs. Steinmeyer.

Daughters of Wesley is making a fine record. Mrs. Marshall, the teacher deserves credit for large class of young ladies.

The younger members of the school have a fine corps of teachers.

Those not in attendance upon Sunday school will have a glad hand in this school.

The subject of the morning sermon will be The Base of Missionary Activity. The evening subject, Influences. These subjects will be handled in a practical way by the pastor, Mr. Steinmeyer. Familiar songs will be used so that all can take part in the singing. However, there will be special music, both vocal and instrumental at both services.

Remember the time, 11 o'clock a. m. and 7 o'clock p. m.

Congregational Church

Next Sunday morning a Lenten theme will be presented for consideration. Sunday school, 9:45. The Baraca class will welcome all young men, at this hour, who are not attendants upon other Sunday schools.

The C. E. Society is profiting by the study of "What Next in Turkey?" a book presenting a great field of our missionary work. All Endeavorers are urged to be present at 8:30.

The evening service, 7:30 p. m., will be a gospel service: good singing, special music by choir and orchestra, and a sermon from one of Paul's important utterances. Please do not forget that the evening service hour is now 7:30, instead of 7 o'clock.
