The Importance Of School Taxes

It seems to be largely up to the individual counties to determine whether their schools are to operate on a full nine months' basis, for four months, or are not to operate at all. A delegation in Tallahassee yesterday was told by the Governor that there would be no special session of the Legislature and that the school representatives should "go back home and instead of having meetings and complaining about the situation, you should start a concerted campaign to tell the people themselves that if they will pay their taxes they will have a full school term."

It is difficult to see how the schools can operate if taxes are not paid. The only thing which a special session of the legislature could do would be to levy some new kind of taxes for the schools, to take them off of real estate and put them on something else. There would be a burden of taxation just the same as before. The people who are paying the real estate taxes undoubtedly think they are carrying more than their full share of the burden, but it is doubtful whether a sales tax, or any other kind of a tax would prove any more popular, or any easier to pay.

The only other way which the schools might be financed is by such ambitious plans as always include borrowing. Many of Florida's school boards are in no position to borrow, and it should be remembered that borrowing in no sense of the word is any final solution to the problem. It merely postpones the final reckoning, and incidentally only aggravates the problem which ultimately has to be solved. Those localities which have been operating their schools by exhausting their credit are inevitably the ones which are facing the worst plight today.

When all is said and done the people have but one question to decide. How long do they want their schools to remain open? If they want a nine months' term, they will have to pay for a nine months' term. If they want a four months' term, they will have to pay for that. It is no more complex a problem than a man has when he buys an automobile. If he wants it, he will have to pay for it. If the people do not pay their taxes, or at least their school taxes, the schools will close.

It is distressing to think of what a frightful condition the wholesale closing of schools in this state would cause. There still are a few people who recall the log cabin school houses of fifty years ago and who seem not to be able to comprehend the advantages of modern educational facilities. They walked four miles to school to study reading, writing and arithmetic; they do not see why the children of today must be carried in buses to receive instruction in home economics, manual training, physiology, agriculture, typewriting and all the other so-called "frills." However, most people agree that these things are helpful in promoting social betterment, and in developing children into more efficient and resourceful men and women.

The young people of more recent years have been given these advantages and have benefited by them. It would be an outrageous piece of inconsistency if, in the very midst of great national experiments in social improvement, local communities were to curtail or abandon the most fundamental sociological requirement of all, education. If at the very time we abolish child labor, we abandon child training in the schools, we hesitate to think what future generations will think of us.

Differences

Published obscurely in a few state papers the other day was an inconspicuous item telling the story of two young men who came to grief in an argument in Newport, Tennessee. They had been discussing the National Recovery Act and one of them was for it and the other one against it.

It began in a friendly conversation. It wound up in a free for all fight. The details of the argument were not reported, but it seems that as the discussion grew warmer and warmer, things began to fly. As the scene was laid in a blacksmith's shop, some of the things were big and heavy.

After the debris had been cleared away, one of the men lay dead. The other was placed under arrest to await trial on a charge of murder. If the courts of Tennessee function as they should, he will probably spend the rest of his days in prison. All because of a difference of opinion.

This is truly a time which tries men's souls. Every act of government, almost every current event, comes directly home in the form of fluctuating taxes or income. Whether those taxes are up or down, whether that income is increased or reduced means a great deal to all of us.

But who can say with any degree of definite finality that he is right? In times when even the greatest leaders in business and finance, government and politics differ greatly about policies to be followed, when even the world's wisest rulers hesitate uncertainly, try one thing then another as if not at all sure their plan is best, it is foolish for the average man to think he knows it all.

An honest difference of opinion is the best tonic in the world for a troubled intellect.

SANFORD TWENTY YEARS AGO

The Halloween masquerade and fancy dress dance given in the City Hall Friday evening by the young men's Athletic Club and the Social Department of the Woman's Club was a decided success in every particular. The costumes were varied and unusually good, many different characters being simulated. The grand march was led by Mrs. R. J. Holly, dressed as a gypsy girl, and Eugene Roumillat as Nephthys. Miss Josie Stinson, in a handsome Grecian costume won the ladies' prize and G. P. Syatt, who was elegantly attired as a young lady, won the men's prize. Mrs. C. O. McLaughlin and Mrs. J. H. Kowalkoff were assisted in carrying by Mrs. J. W. Dickson, Mrs. J. J. Stirling, Mrs. J. T. Brady, Mrs. Allen Jones, Mrs. Paul Biggers, and a number of the boys.

The first case of marriage in Sanford history today, when the social department of justice united Miss Francis Deane Tomlinson and Captain Robert Fayet in the city bonds of matrimony. These two youths have the distinction of being the first in the annals of the city to be united by the County Judge.

WE HAVE NO PEASANTRY
 NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

Mr. George N. Peek, the chief of the A. A. A., recently expressed confidence in the sincerity of Milo Reno, the "farm holiday" organizer, and said that the objectives of Mr. Reno and of the A. A. A. were one and the same.

Mr. Peek's confidence is not shared in the Middle West. His assertions of a common purpose with an apostle of rural policy will certainly be met with a mixture of the Middle Western farmer. Milo Reno's Farm Holiday Association has claimed the active support of the agriculturalists of twenty-one states. Demonstrations of discontent, under the association's auspices, have been reported from no more than six of them; and these have been, for the most part, local and unimportant.

Mr. Reno has tried to make Iowa the storm center of his movement, as it was last year when his purely local disturbances in the northwestern counties, reinforced by imported city riffraff, was suppressed by state militia. As last year's performance showed, artificially fomented violence is essential to a Reno demonstration, as it is to that of a professional agitator who would give the dissatisfaction of some and substantial Americans the aspect of a peasant revolt. From the Iowa branch it is now reported that the holiday association there has proclaimed its opposition to picketing.

This is good news; for it is a public repudiation of the Reno tactics and is probably the beginning of a more serious and a thorough-going campaign among the non-peasantly American of the country in the self-right and the farmer campaign of all classes in the United States. It is at once an honest and a professional man and a landed proprietor of whose enviousness this country is generally proud. And this is an acknowledgment of the fact that, from generation to generation, a high percentage of this country's most able leaders in business, industry, the professions and public affairs are bred on the land. The farm is a source of national health and strength which we dare not exploit.

We have no peasantry and we want none. Even when the farmer exhibits a distorted view of his position, in relation to the troubles of others, the nation is glad to have him come forward with his grievances, get a perspective on them and co-operate as a citizen in the equitable solution of them.

One of the greatest obstacles to this is the exploitation of the farmer's tribulations by his legislative spokesmen, who often succeed in making him look like the nation's sinner. In the last year the individual farmer has any ambition to picket. It would now be nothing less than a national tragedy if agitators like Milo Reno were to succeed in infusing the Middle West with the spirit of a vindictive, privilege-seeking peasant caste. It is, for this reason, particularly good news to learn that the "farm holiday" movement is not living up to Mr. Reno's aspirations for it.

SELF CONTROL FOR BUSINESS IS PROPOSED

The council meeting. The plan would merge the chamber of commerce with various other groups that are representative of business and from the new organization would be named a board of appeals that would arbitrate all questions that arise in the application of codes.

In his conference, Johnson said: "It is a kind of goal to shoot at if we can reach it. Of course, it is a very ambitious plan but it has there."

The administrator added that the program was thoroughly in line with the fundamental conceptions of NRA and that it would be accompanied by governmental safeguards at every step through membership of federal appointees on every code authority and trade control unit. These men, he explained, would have no vote but a definite veto power.

Asked whether it would not be necessary for labor to be organized with equal solidity for success of the plan, and whether business would not have to abandon its present opposition to unionization, Johnson said:

"I think business eventually will help labor to attain that strength."

He said conversations with some of the leading business men of the country had convinced him that there was a great change underway in the attitude of industrialists towards unionization.

He said rotation of membership on the industrial advisory board, as started today would help this movement. He contended that, in association with NRA had been a strong liberalizing influence on the men who have served up to this time.

"They've changed to beat the band, I want to tell you," said Johnson.

Harriman said the Swaps plan was in embryo stage.

"The NRA will be a failure if it becomes simply a government bureaucracy," he asserted. "This is an endeavor to give it the full support of at least one of our necessary groups, business and labor."

Meanwhile, a definite step in the direction of a closer-knit industry was announced by the national association of manufacturers. At a meeting Tuesday in New York, at which were representatives of 25 major manufacturing groups, including the iron and steel institute, the central organization was strengthened.

SOUTH'S RETAIL TRADE PICKED UP IN PAST MONTH
 Volume In 6th Federal Reserve Area Was Better Than Usual

ATLANTA, Nov. 2.—(AP)—The volume of both retail and wholesale trade in the sixth federal reserve district showed increases in September over previous months, said the monthly review issued yesterday by the Atlantic Reserve bank.

Gains also were recorded in construction awards and in orders received by reporting cotton mills, but there was some decline in production and employment at textile plants and coal and iron output decreased.

Department store sales during September were 3.5 percent greater than in August and 3.2 percent greater than in September, 1932, the review showed. Because September was two business days shorter than August, however, the daily average gain for September amounted to 11.6 percent, although that figure was less than the usual seasonal increase.

The gain in wholesale trade parallel to the financial data gathered by the reserve system.

The new and bigger chamber would take in all the trade and industrial associations, grouping them in kindred units. Even the textile institute, the iron and steel institute and such big units of commercial self-rule would come into it. On its governing board would sit the secretary and assistant secretary of commerce.

A highly organized statistical bureau would be built around the existing industrial conference board of New York. It would classify the economic data, publish it, make it available to the government.

from August to September was 5.9 percent and 14.7 percent over September, 1932.

From Sept. 13 to Oct. 11 the volume of federal reserve credit outstanding at the Atlanta bank increased by nearly $3,000,000, the report said. An increase of about $4,600,000 in holdings of U. S. securities was partly offset by a decrease of $1,600,000 in discounts for member banks.

Construction contracts in the district increased by 22.4 percent from August to September. Residential contracts declined 21.4 percent but other classes of awards showed a gain of 43.9 percent.

Production of both cloth and yarn by cotton mills decreased but orders reported by these mills increased a bit. Employment at reporting cotton mills fell off 3 percent in September but was 58.2 percent greater than in the same month of 1932.

Output of coal in Alabama and Tennessee was smaller in September than in August but greater than a year ago, the review said. Although daily average production of pig iron in Alabama declined 6.7 percent in September, it was more than four times as large as in September, 1932.

DODGERS PICK ORLANDO

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Judge Stephen W. McKeever, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, announced last night that the club would trade of Orlando, Fla., instead of Miami. Judge McKeever said the Dodgers had agreed with Chicago officials to trade there for one season, with the option of returning to New York. They will use Tiger Field, formerly occupied by the Cincinnati Reds.

Seminole High Faces Ocala In Important Football Game On Local Field Tomorrow

The outstanding game on the 1933 Seminole High School football schedule is to be played at Municipal Park tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock when the ever victorious Ocala Wildcats top bracket team meet the Seminole Conference team to open looking for a third straight win over Seminole High. The game is all-important. It will make or break the local season which now stands at two victories and two defeats. A victory is absolutely essential if the team hopes to continue its quest of the conference title. A defeat would eliminate any chance of winning the title.

Every man on the squad realizes the importance of the game. Practice sessions this week have been hard and the early season rough spots gradually are being polished. A noticeable improvement in blocking and tackling has been reported from the practice field while at the same time an offensive defense against passes and long and runs has been perfected.

The Ocala team, which comes here tomorrow is one of the strongest in the loop despite the fact that it beat DeLand by a 6 to 0 score, and was tied, 0 to 0 by the Leesburg Yellow Jackets. Past weeks have been hampered by a sluggish line, but that problem is now corrected, according to all advances down from Ocala.

But the Ocala team isn't worrying Seminole High and some of the players there are those players who will say that Jordan, ripping backfield will live up to some pretty fine performances in recent games and that he is better than anything Ocala has to offer. Brock, a center, is expected to be one of the best defensive fullbacks the team has ever had. Jimmy Dyson, fearless lightweight halfback can run with the rest of the conference stars, any Seminole High gragger will tell you while Oliver Miller has the edge over the average high school halfback based on past performances. Much is expected of the Seminole High line here tomorrow. Russ O'Brien has been leading the way ever since the season started, with Levi Brannan close on his heels. O'Brien's style is reminiscent of that old spirited devil Murray Kanner used to feature. Not a same one passed that hasn't found O'Brien tearing through into the enemy backfield to spill play after play. A defensive feature that should be followed by every man on the line.

Stanley Displeased As Rats Beat Reserves In Spirited Session

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA, GAINESVILLE, Nov. 2.—The University of Florida second team took a beating here yesterday afternoon in a 30-minute scrimmage against the frosh eleven using Stanley's plays. Coach Dutch Stanley was not satisfied with the performance of his reserve squad. The freshmen had expended their best efforts before the regulars took the field and made less headway than against the reserves, but Georgia's plays looked to have much deception and power even against the best Stanley could put against them.

Bill Perruzzi, senior center, was slightly hurt in the scrimmage and Alton Brown was inserted in his place for the signal drill that brought the afternoon's program to a close. In the back field in the first eleven was Capt. Sam Davis, Wally Brown, Hub McAnly and Jimmy Hughes. In the line were Chuck Rogers, Hal Starbuck, Drayton Bernhard, Alton Brown, Bill Starke, and George Moye.

Cheer For Florida

Music by RAYMOND HUBBELL, Lyrics by HERBERT FALKEL

This year the University of Florida has used its own football song, both tune and lyric of "Cheer for Florida" being written especially for the Fighting Gators; and in 1933 the Floridians have been undefeated and unscored on until last Saturday when they led the powerful Tennessee Vols for three quarters, holding them scoreless until the final period, despite the fact that Florida was in its worst physical condition thus far this year, with a half dozen of Coach Stanley's most valuable players suffering from injuries. The Orange and Blue defend today to date are 10 points ahead of last year, and have scored more points already than they did in the entire 1931 season.

How To Be Happily Married Is Explained

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—For the bride who wishes to get along with her mother-in-law (and her husband), science has come forth with the following suggestions. Here they are:

- Don't criticize her "old-fashioned" ideas.
- Don't try to reform her method of household management.
- Don't (out loud) resent dealings she has with her son.
- Don't begrudge waiting on her.
- Don't believe her real or fancied ailments.
- Don't criticize her personal habits.
- Don't forget to practice tolerance always.

If the bride will just do these things all will be well with her mother-in-law, said Dr. E. W. Burgess, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago.

WATER PROTECTS RUBBER

that's why you get 30% more mileage by getting new Goodyears now!

OF COURSE you want the grip of tough new rubber between your brakes and the road in fall and winter - when there's more slippery driving than any other time in the year.

And now - scientific tests prove that tires "broken in" during wet, cold weather average 30% more total mileage.

Hot summer roads make tires wear faster. Using your brakes on hot dry roads is like holding them against a whirling grindstone.

But roads are cool in winter - and most of the time they're wet. That means danger when your tires are thin and worn. But it means protection for stout new rubber, because the water prevents rapid wear by preventing friction between the tire and the road.

Think that over, and ask yourself - can you afford to wait till spring when new Goodyear Pathfinders are still selling today at prices just about the same as they cost a year ago?

Not on your life! The wise thing - and the thrifty thing for you to do is to buy new Goodyears now!

FIRST MARINE CORPS BIRTHDAY DATES BACK TO COLONIAL DAYS

Bridging a span of nearly 160 years, modern U. S. Marines are shown taking over the duties performed by sea soldiers of colonial times during a birthday celebration at Philadelphia, where a Corps of Marines was first established on November 10, 1783.

Tracing their history back to the American Revolution, the U. S. Marines will observe the 150th anniversary of their Corps on Nov. 10.

Long before Old Ironsides sailed the seas, years before the national capital was established at Washington, Marines were fighting their country's battles on land and sea. It is a proud boast of the Marine Corps that it was authorized by an act of the Continental Congress in 1775, nearly eight months before the Declaration of Independence was signed.

Among their exploits of nearly a century ago, the Marines point with pride to the fact that they fought side by side with the army in battles with the Indians in Alabama, Georgia and Florida under their own leader, Colonel Archibald Henderson.

Some of their earlier skirmishes were with the Creek Indians along the Chattahoochee between Georgia and Alabama. One battalion of the sea soldiers established its camp near Columbus, Ga., and another at Fort Mitchell, Ala., in the summer of 1836.

and in addition many special tasks have been assigned to them. They fought gallantly, afloat and ashore, in the war against Tripolitan pirates, and took part in the famous sea duel between the U. S. S. Constitution and the British frigate Guerriere.

They have stalked Indians through the forests of our own country, stormed the barrier forts in Korea, battled Boxers in China, chased seal poachers in Alaska, engaged in numerous skirmishes against revolutionists in many countries, and did their heroic bit in scores of campaigns.

It was their service in Mexico and Tripoli that furnished a theme for the Marine's Hymn, "From the Halls of Montezuma to the Shores of Tripoli."

Back in the days of flintlocks and fighting tops, the sea soldiers wore green coats, white waistcoats and buff-colored trousers that disappeared in leggings reaching above the knees. A three-cornered hat, perched on a white wig, completed the uniform.

Many of the gracie uniform details disappeared early in the last century, but the Marine of today in his smart blue uniform is still a colorful figure.

The stiff leather collar worn by the Marines several decades ago, won for them the nickname, "Leatherneck," a term which the sea soldiers greatly prefer to other more or less picturesque titles which have since come in vogue.

Times, customs and manners have changed, but the Marines have kept pace with the development of the Navy since the days of John Paul Jones. The old wooden frigates and murre load-cannon with which colonial marines were familiar, have long since faded into the past.

This was a purely voluntary service on the part of the Marines, who won high commendation for promptly coming to the aid of the several states when they had neither been ordered nor requested to do so.

From the first day the sea soldiers were recruited for service on ships of the Continental Navy, to the present time, when their faithful support is sought in China, Hawaii, the Philippines and elsewhere, the history of the Corps reflects closely the history of the republic.

In the closing days of the Revolution, the War of 1812, the Mexican, Civil, Spanish and World Wars, the Marine has a brilliant past. Every country that America has faced has seen the sea soldier's change of make, history, and in addition many special tasks have been assigned to them.

On their birthday Marines all over the world will pause to glance back over the record of service to the country. "Semper Paratus" or always faithful is their motto. It has never changed.
