Dr. Lamb

Dear Dr. Lamb—I have a daughter who had what I believe was epilepsy at age 1 to 5 years. He said it was called petit mal. She was treated with medication. At age 7 she has not had any attacks.

She claims that if it was epilepsy she would never have outgrown it. I say it is possible to outgrow it. What is your opinion on this matter?

DEAR READER—My advice is to forget about it. Petit mal is a minor form of epilepsy and can be outgrown.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I have a problem that others do not have. It's called "cannibalism." I have a son who steals off his plates (I have to add that everyone who steals off his plates doesn't have petit mal, or a lot of us would be in trouble).

The child seems almost suspended or frozen, totally unaware of anything around him. The blank stare may be accompanied by rapid eye blinking if you happen to notice it.

Characteristically, the attack occurs between ages 2 and 5 and disappears afterwards.

It is exceptionally rare to see petit mal attacks in anyone over 10, so the disappearance of your daughter's attacks is to be expected and is in very proved though she didn't have petit mal.

I'd be very much surprised if she were still having them.

She should live a normal life and just continue to eat her meals in phases. In her development, I am sending you The Health Letter number 164.

customers move away without paying their bills. And the city will lose in the budget up to $10,000 to $15,000 from unpaid utility bills over and above the security deposits paid by those individuals.

Mrs. Glenn also noted that the mayor was quoted in the article as saying he would prefer to stop collecting security deposits to customers by the way of a credit on the bills annually.

The story also pointed out that Lake Mary is the only Seminole County city of the six which uses utility systems that are interested on the deposits to customers by the way of a credit on the bills annually.

Commissioner Sandra Glenn, at Tuesday's city commission meeting, posed the question to Mayor Norman Floyd and asked that City Commission

Mrs. Glenn noted that she read a recent Evening Herald story (Feb. 1) regarding the city's current system of holding customer security deposits in interest-bearing accounts. Yet, none of the resulting revenue is returned to the customers according to records.

Mrs. Glenn said that she still would like a written report from Bentley.

Turlington. Community colleges would get a $15 million increase and universities, a $15.5 million hike.

The governor proposed a $57.8 million increase in state dollars for the Department of Health and Rehabilitation Services, $13.8 million less than requested by HRS Secretary William "Pete" Page. Page did get the increase in monthly welfare payments he sought.

Ash recommended $19 million to build two prisons.

Legislative leaders have said massive tax hikes are almost unthinkable now with the economy in the best shape it has been in for years and the anticipated growth in revenues sufficient to cover state government's additional needs.

It is different in 1978, they say, with Florida still reeling from several years of inflation recessions. Ash recommended a $14.6 million package last year and got $12.2 million of it passed into law.

"I don't see us passing any taxes this session," said Senate Appropriations Chairman Phil Lewis, D-West Palm Beach. "I don't see anybody wanting to and I don't see any need for it."

It is Ash's eighth and final budget and the state's last covering a single year. Florida switches to biennial budgeting in 1979.

Louis Crawford, assistant director of Seminole County's affirmative action, spoke briefly to the commissioners.

With little discussion, the Seminole County Commission Tuesday voted 3-to-2 to approve an affirmative action plan and forward it to federal officials for review.

The one "no" vote was cast by Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff.

He told fellow commissioners that he was unconstitutional.

"I am going to be voting against the plan," Kirchhoff said. "I do believe the affirmative action plan is unconstitutional and a violation of the Civil Rights Act."

Later, Kirchhoff explained "the federal and state governments set up these programs and say we have to do them, but they provide no money to implement these programs."

He said he is not opposed to minority hiring. He termed the intent of the affirmative action

Cool Bosses Reject Carter Bid For Tanks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The soft coal industry today rejected President Carter's call for both sides in the 72-day-old coal strike to resume contract talks at the White House.

In a letter sent to Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, chairman E.B. Leeserson of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association said Carter should deal first with the United Mine Workers officials because they are to blame for the impasse.

Bella Loses For 3rd Time

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bella Abzug, in her third consecutive loss at the polls in 18 months, has defeated Tom Foley in her run for the 18th Congressional District's seat left vacant when former Rep. Ed Koch became mayor, by Republican S. William Green. However, early today Mrs. Abzug refused to concede and called for a recount.

With all the votes tabulated, Green, a former state assemblyman, had 30,240 or 53 percent to Mrs. Abzug's 28,970 or 46 percent, a margin of 1,270, according to a re-count of returns reported to the News Election Service.

Sulfide Fumes Kill 7

CHICAGO (UPI) — Tuesday, Charles Estes, a truck driver, pulled up his tank to a door of the Horween Leather Co., on the North Side of Chicago and was told which intake valve to hook up his hose to, in order to deliver some sodium sulphide to the tannery, police said.

The intake valve evidently was the wrong one, and the sodium sulphide went into a vat containing chrome liquor, producing deadly hydrogen sulfide fumes that seeped through the plant and killed seven persons. Thirty-four others were injured and were treated for burns, nausea, vomiting and irritated eyes caused by breathing the fumes.

No Topless Ban For Now In Altamonte

By DONNA EDITS

Altamonte Springs will not have a law banning topless go-go establishments, at least for awhile. And Mayor Norman Floyd told the city commission Tuesday evening that the delay may have "brought the city in the position . . . to hold our horses until we can get a wife" before he can cut off payments.

The 5-4 decision was a blow to more burdened by alimony payments even after a former wife has been living with another man for nearly two years.

Assessing Judge Sol Weisler noted that his fellow judges of resorting to a "literal interpretation" of the law which, he said, was unrealistic in light of "current social realities."

Floyd said action on the ordinance Tuesday. But Commissioners Harry Jacobs, an attorney, insisted on delay until city officials can hear a presentation from Hal Uhlig, staff legal officer, inspection service division, Orange County Sheriff's Office.

Uhlig is to guest speaker at the 8:30 a.m. March 1 meeting of the local police commissioners association in Orlando.

Jacobs at a workshop meeting last week suggested the ordinance might not withstand a court challenge.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — Two houses plunged down an ocean-front cliff late Tuesday night and a third was left perched precariously after a rain-sodden section of the hillside gave way.

The Pyramid And The Wheel

When Jimmy Carter began organizing his office in the White House, a year ago, he said pointedly that there would never be an H.R. Goldwater or John D. Ehrlichman on his staff.

These two intimates of the Oval Office in the Nixon years had come to personify a right-wing, autocratic pyramid of power — a source of criticism long before the Watergate scandal that sent both of them packing.

Mr. Carter was right about one thing: No president should be as isolated as Richard Nixon became when the Goldwater-Ehrlichman "Tea Party" was purging the door.

But the former governor of Georgia, eager to show that things are going to be different, has thrown out the concept of a staff-pyramid altogether.

He may have made a mistake.

There is nothing wrong with the pyramid as a geometric model for an organization chart. It provides lines of communication and authority narrowing at the top where, finally, important decisions have to be made.

An astute and trusted chief of staff sitting where those lines converge can be a lifeline for the person on top.

But Mr. Carter's organization chart — such as it is — resembles a wheel, with sides and specialists arrayed on the rim, each with access to the President at the hub.

There is no chief of staff, an individual with a finger on the flow of all presidential business — except, of course, the hard-working if not over-worked President himself.

It's no wonder the Carter administration seemed to spend its first year going around in circles.

Mr. Carter is said to like the free-wheeling atmosphere around the West Wing. He wants to avoid the backbiting and rivalry that can arise when there is a well-defined pecking order.

But what about the rest? — in the effort of rationalizing the President's time, in covering that the bickering issues still need to be better speaking out on an issue or making a decision, in giving coherence and continuity to White House policy?

A chief of staff with open eyes and ears could have prevented Mr. Carter's blundering in the Marsten affair.

A chief of staff could improve his relations with Congress.

That four pes that cast him deeply on Capitol Hill last year — Vice President Mondale's intervention to break a Senate filibuster on an energy bill — need not have occurred.

A chief of staff could reduce the number of occasions when Mr. Carter's public statements need correction or further explanation.

Watch Muriel

Mrs. Robert Humphrey has agreed to tell the U.S. Senate and her late husband and son to complete "some important business" before they leave Florida. She may just do that, though the husband-to-be ran for a full term.

Her acceptance satisfied some possible rough spots in Minnesota politics.

Gov. Rudy Perpich, who first indicated Muriel would be no "co-chair" appointment for the seat, would have had a dilemma about my choice among the continental one.

He has created party conflicts and planned meet, if not at all. Mrs. Humphrey isn't expected to be just a neutral in the Senate. She is a veteran campaigner of many political wars, and she did. She has extensive knowledge about the body politic and about the programs in which her husband was involved.

Her husband overshadowed Mrs. Humphrey, but if there are three in the Senate who tend to think of her only as the "shining Muriel," they may be in for a surprise or two.

On Deck: Labor Reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the Panama Canal dispute still smoldering, a domestic issue of equal import is whether to amend the law on the part of a Carter-Torrijos joint statement.

One Carter spokesman offered that estimated that as much as $100,000 in public funds might have to be returned to the Federal treasury because it was disbursed for election day "walking around money" and other questionable purposes.

In one instance, a campaign in Oakland, Calif., was forced to return $10,000 to the Carter campaign after acknowledging that he had been given a false account of campaign expenses.

Three other ministers in the five-Panama area received $10,000 in "street money" from the Carter campaign without being required to adequately document the disbursement of the funds.

The financial reports filed by Carter's campaign committee list hundreds of thousands of dollars similarly distributed, under various and suspicious categories such as "advertising," "travel," "public relations," and "material-other-expense."

After a controversy last summer over five gifts Carter took in 1975 and 1976 on a plane owned by the National Bank of Georgia, the bank was ultimately reimbursed for almost $1,000 worth of travel.

Another embarrassing disclosure showed that Carter was the beneficiary of about $100 worth of free air travel on corporate and charitable planes during a 1976 trip to Latin America, through North Carolina and South Carolina.

One more incident of ours: the questionable nature of more than $10,000 in a corporate political action committee given to labor candidates who sponsored a bus tour attended by Carter and more than 20 lawmakers at the St. Regis in New York in the summer of 1976.

The movement was sponsored by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., who said it was a compromise in the spirit of preserving "peace and harmony."

After it was exposed by an O-2 vote over the objection of most members of the Senate, the Senate voted 10 times last year for employees that didn't give it little more than a "toss-up."

What the administration calls its "labor reform" will be called up for action after the canal debate, and its opponents are predicting a filibuster. Judging from the early stridency of its opponents, that debate could be the highlight of a repressive legislative doubleheader.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd will decide when the bill is up, and when we'll be able to get a vote on it. I'm told, referring to the canal treaties, the still-stalled energy legislation and other bills that are out of committee.

If the threat of a filibuster is clear, Byrd may call it up at all.

The bill was designed as a reaction to the outcry of some companies — notably the J.P. Morgan leather firm — in complying with labor laws requiring them to recognize unions if the employees want them and to begin collective bargaining.

Conservative opponents see it as nothing less than "intimidation by union bosses" to force thousands of small companies to minimize.

The bill, already passed by the House, sailed through the Senate. Republicans Committee three weeks ago with the understanding that its opponents would offer their crippling amendments on the Senate floor.

At that time, the committee did take up one amendment — to increase from 21 to 20 days the length of time a company has in which to hold an election among employees to determine if a union should come.

The amendment was sponsored by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., who said it was a compromise in the spirit of preserving "peace

Spinks May Give It His All But...

By MELTON RICHARD
UPI Sports Editor

LAS VEGAS, Nov. 1 (UPI) — One roll of the dice, one turn of the card, can make a man a fortune in this city and it's also possible one lucky punch tonight can make a man a borg.

Possible, but highly unlikely.

Something called built-in instinct always keeps Muhammad Ali moving away from those lines of punches, only one of which you can't see coming. And that's all he'd need to become the next world heavyweight champion.

All didn't take the fight to him. He took it because he felt he could handle the incoming. And Muhammad Ali Spinks without a whole lot of trouble and losses is now on many choices of picking up another $1 million without hurting himself too much.

Professionally speaking, Spinks hasn't even gotten his feet wet yet. He has had only seven previous fights. His biggest prize up to now is the Olympic he was two years ago. So what? All can share the one he won 10 years ago. Spinks thinks of himself as a full-fledged professional, but in Ali's eye he's still nothing more than a nobody. And can you honestly picture an amateur taking over Ali's title?

I can't.

Having seen Spinks fight in the Olympics, I imagine he'll get in there tonight and give it everything he has for as long as he can. He has a tendency to swing wildly and that means he'll probably miss a lot. That also means he's bound to get nailed by Ali at any given time, and when Ali catches him, I think it'll be lights out for Lou Spinks.

Personally I think they should have held this as a four-round exhibition rather than a five-round title contest. All has practically all the advantages over Spinks, starting with a 20-pound plus in the weight. He also has a much longer reach and 30 times more experience.

If you've been watching the champion in his last few fights, then you've noticed he has been going about his work with the same nonchalant attitude as most elevator operators or city bus drivers go about their business.

To put it simply, Muhammad Ali is beyond belief. He's bored with what he has been compelled to do the past 10 years, tired with training and all those elements connected with business—except of course with the money it brings him and eventually that could bring him down before he's done. To amuse himself for awhile, he just takes things off the light.

"I'm tired of carrying the burden," he said. "Who do I have to do this for?"

It's greatest and I'm the champion now but someday there'll be a champion for the kids will be the new doctors, the new lawyers and the new scientists.

All has a way of saying a lot of things, some of which he means only for the moment. The way he talks now, when he does talk, he sounds as if he's getting ready to wrap it all up.

Sometimes this year probably. Not tonight, though. Not against Lou Spinks.

SANFORD'S KIP BRADEN GETS TAGGED BY RYALS

Casselberry's Clark Wins Southern Title By KO Over House

Casselberry's Scott Clark stalled Anthony House for a round and unleashed a flurry that put House outside the ropes and then down to the canvas.

House came up swinging, but Clark bulldozed him back into the corner and once again got the best of the ropes and then down to the canvas. The house was down to stay.

In the third professional contest at the Orlando Sports Center, Kevin House, 21, of Winter Haven, beat Lou Spinks over Jerome House, 26, of Fort Lauderdale at 2:01 in the first round.

In an amateur contest at 119 pounds, Eddie Palmer of Winter Park won a "downout" decision and the Golden Gloves Florida Sectional title over Keith Goldstein of Fort Lauderdale.

The next card at the Orlando Sports Stadium is slated for Feb. 25. DENNIS FROLK

Midway through the sixth, Clark caught House across the chest and House was trapped in a corner. Clark went down but beat the count, his manager, however, insisted the contest be stopped because he suspected House had broken his arm.

The bout came at 2:09 of the ninth round by knockout.

House, 10-2, was clearly in command through the first four rounds, capitalizing on his quickness and switching from south paw to conventional. Fighting with his hands at his side, House jarred Clark with stinging lefts and rights to the head in the second, third and fourth rounds.

But Clark kept finding forward, finally knocking a tired House into the ropes. In the fifth round with odd shots to the head and body, Clark took command sharply after the start of the sixth, getting inside his opponent's longer reach.

He came up swinging in the fourth, catching Ryals against the ropes and unleashing a

People TalkCarter 'Pulled Sister's Hair'

By United Press International
FAM WEATHERS PRESENTS
Littleton, Colo., probably isn't the place to say you don't like the Denver Broncos, but that Miss Littleton Carter was mayor then most of the members of her audience — and besides she was 2,000 miles away in Florida. So, she told Dry Creek Elementary School students by telephone yesterday that she had "I Love New York" and Valentine's Day campaign to promote the Big Apple and the Great White Way. The audience of third graders were Morgan Thompson, Gina Johnson, of "Valentine Night Lives"; and Carrie Potts, Anna, who sang the show's theme music: "Morgan." It's a ditty in 4/4, 8/8, 6/8 time, and it's been a hit since it came out in Super Bowl XII. Miss Littleton then admitted to a 10-year-old John Carter that she, too, is a fan of the Broncos. President Carter, was nonplussed when he was asked if he'd ever "pulled his sister's hair" a lot and he got into a lot of trouble."

A NICE PLACE TO VISIT: It's Election day in 22 states today.

Andrea McArthur, star of Broadway hit, "Annie," has shown her start as a Kwanzaa "Little Miss Peanut" contest winner. She's plugging Florida's Kwanzaa Peanut Day March 10 and 11, when thousands of Kwanzaa members will be on street corners throughout Florida giving away bags of peanuts to passersby as a token of thanks for their donations. All funds raised stay in the community in which they are collected for local Kwanzaa charitable projects, including handicapped children and senior citizens.

Attorney Says 'No'

Church Vs. State Crunch In W. Springs?

By DONNA KESTER
Herald Staff Writer

Does the request of a Presbyterian minister for permission to rent the Winter Springs recreation building constitute a question of separation of church and state?

Rev. Hugh C. Hamilton, who plans to found a church in the Winter Springs community, doesn't think so.

The request for use of the recreation building was contained in a letter from Rev. Hamilton to the city, which also asked for a reduced rate for renting the facility.

"We only want to rent the building on Sunday mornings and pay the commercial rate of $35 for a four-hour segment if anyone else," said Rev. Hamilton today.

"We asked for a lower rate only because someone in city hall told us that a reduction in rates is given at times if the use requested is for the Winter Springs community."

Rev. Hamilton said that he would hope to use the building on Sunday mornings indefinitely—for several months—and to press on to the organization of a question which came to his mind was one of separation of church and state.

He said the question would be referred to City Attorney Gary Manney, also absent from the meeting, for an opinion.

"As long as the church is charged the same rate as would be charged by any other user for renting the building, there would be no problem with the doctrine of separation of church and state," said City Attorney Gary Manney, contacted at his Altamonte Springs law office today.

"I have to do some research on Rev. Hamilton's request to place signs near the facility, however," said Manney. "I didn't even realize there were even bags sign out there. It may be all right."

"My gut reaction is that as long as the city isn't doing anything it would not do for someone else, there is no problem. If it was voluntarily letting the church use the building or giving it a reduced rate, that would be something else," the attorney said.

Mary Wilson, the city hall clerk in charge of renting the recreation building said today that no one else in the two years the building has been available for the use of the public has ever asked to rent the facility on Sunday mornings. And, she added, as far as she knows no one has ever been denied rental of the building.

Job Suit Alive

Legal counsel for Alfred G. DeLattibaudere, 689 South Sanford Ave., has rolled his discrimination suit against Seminole County in Orlando federal court, according to DeLattibaudere.

The suit against the county was dismissed two weeks ago by U.S. District Court Judge John A. Reed Jr. because Larry Jackson, DeLattibaudere's attorney, failed to answer within the required time the county's motion to dismiss the case.

Originally the suit was filed July 25. DeLattibaudere claims he was discriminated against because he is black in seeking a job as a county building inspector. He had asked for $52,000 in back pay in the suit. He claims a less qualified white person was hired for the job in May 1973.

Jackson had until Wednesday to rattle the suit.

David Kornreich, the county's labor attorney, suggested in late January the county hire DeLattibaudere until the case is resolved. He speculated the suit might be held up in court for two years.

The federal office of revenue sharing ruled that the county was not willing to offer Mr. Lattibaudere a building inspector's position.

"There's, of course, a lot of money involved," Colson said. "It looks like he'll be the greatest loss to come along since Clifford Irving who wrote a book about Howard Hughes, then admitted it was a fake."

Haldeman, still serving a Watergate prison sentence, was President Nixon's top aide at the White House and Colson was another top Nixon assistant. Colson was interviewed on the ABC Good Morning America program.

Haldeman says Nixon was interviewed in the Watergate cover-up from "day one" and three days after the break-in at Democratic National Headquarters on June 17, 1972, he told Haldeman they would be raising money for the Watergate defendants.

Haldeman contends the impetus for the break-in stemmed from Nixon's and presidential assistant Colson's desire to "get the goods" on Democratic Party Chairman Lawrence O'Brien. And, says Nixon later tried to destroy the taped evidence, but couldn't do so because he simply couldn't operate a tape recorder.

"Things will be different when I'm president," a heckler (right) shouts at Seminole Community College during a forum on the Panama Canal treaties, led by Constance Filippovich (left), a representative of the U.S. State Department.
