Private ambulance service may shift to fire departments

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sanford's fire chief says he believes firefighters around the county can save some money for ambulance passengers. The Sanford City Commission Monday was asked to consider if city and county ambulance service should continue on contract or be handled by firefighters. Fire Chief Tom Hickson said the matter had been discussed by the county Fire Chiefs Association, and was deemed worthy of consideration by each municipality. "The chiefs believe it's time to expand our roll in delivery service and put our units more into service to the people in getting them to hospitals." Hickson said he expected the change could be brought about in Sanford with no immediate request for more personnel or more apparatus. "Fire departments already have five times the number of units in Seminole County than supplied by the ambulance service," Hickson said.

"We already are dispatched to the scene," he said, "and our units are available right then and there. We already handle about 80 percent of the job, so I believe we can take on that extra 20 percent more." "We believe it would be of benefit to the people to have our units handle the transportation to the hospital," he added. Mayor Bettye Smith said she had a number of questions regarding fire departments taking over ambulance service. "How can you do this without

Cops seek bank robber

LONGWOOD — Sheriff's deputies are still searching for a man who robbed the Barnett Bank, 2601 SR-434 in Longwood, Monday afternoon.

According to Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, the suspect walked into the Barnett Bank at 12:30 yesterday afternoon and demanded money from the teller. She complied, McDonough said at no time did the suspect display a weapon or imply that he had one.

There was no information released regarding the amount of money which may have been taken in the incident. The teller, other employees and customers were reportedly unharmed.

McDonough said the man then fled from the bank getting into a white 1985 Chevrolet pickup truck. The truck reportedly had a Georgia license tag number RT 5517.

The suspect was identified as a white male, 30 years of age. See Robbery, Page 5A

Sanford OKs first reading of budget with no new taxes

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Sanford City Commission approved its Fiscal 1995/96 city budget on first reading last night. The second and final reading is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 25.

The city also approved, on first reading, setting the millage rate of 6.8759. The amount is above the recommended roll-back rate suggested by the Seminole County property appraiser, but at the same level the city has maintained for the past six years.

The setting of the millage rate and approval of the budget were among the first items considered during last night's city commission meeting. The entire budget matter required seven separate steps. Each of

Taxes at a glance

To determine the amount of ad valorem taxes you will pay: Take the assessed value of your property, deduct $25,000 homestead exemption if applicable, divide by 1,000, then multiply by the millage rate. I.e. A home appraised at $100,000, minus $25,000, divided by $1,000, times the millage rate of 6.8759 (for Sanford, below), equals ad valorem taxes of $515.69. This is only the city's share. School and county taxes would increase the amount and is computed the same way.

these steps was approved with unanimous votes.

Although the matters were presented on public hearing, there were no citizen objections or comments.

The general fund, from ad valorem taxes, is slightly over $5.2 million. In addition, the budget is based on other income such as fees, permits, fines, leases, rentals, and various other charges. The total amount of operating fund revenues is $31.3 million, which City Manager Bill Simmons has declared as balanced.

Included in the formalities of budget matters were ordinances officially making appropriations for the operating budget, and adoption of the personnel classification pay plan.

Students will learn more about other cultures, resolving conflicts

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — Multicultural education is a priority in the Seminole County public schools.

In an effort to bring entertaining and informative programs to the school, in addition to instruction designed to keep students from harm's way as a result of drugs, alcohol or violence, the school district has pursued a number of avenues of instruction and funding.

This afternoon, the school board will formally submit a request for a grant from the Orlando Magic Foundation that will help them implement a program that has been designed by the departments of community involvement and curriculum.

If it is accepted by the Magic Foundation, the grant will provide approximately $25,000 to the district to finance the program.

The three-pronged program has been designed to provide a variety of activities and events with the theme of multi-cultural understanding and conflict resolution.

Each school across the district will have the opportunity to offer the program to its students.

If the district's grant is funded, money will first be used to contract with the Orlando Urban League for school presentations and workshops for students such as goal setting.

Colombian stowaway arrested

MIAMI — A Colombian teen-ager, who has been sent back to his homeland twice after stowaway trips to the United States, has been arrested in Miami on theft and loitering charges, police said.

Juan Carlos Guzman, 19, tried to get on an airline crew shuttle bus Sunday at Miami International Airport with an American Airlines employee identification card, Metro-Dade Detective Marie Duboulay said Monday.

Guzman later admitted to police he had stolen the card from an Orlando hotel room he had burglarized, Duboulay said. Police recovered other stolen items, including a credit card and a laptop computer, during a search of Guzman's hotel room, she said.

The charges against Guzman include theft and fraudulent use of a credit card. He was also charged with loitering at the airport and with resisting arrest for giving police fictitious names, both misdemeanors, Duboulay said. Police do not know how long Guzman has been in Miami or how he got here.

Guzman claimed he got into the United States by slipping aboard a jetliner in Colombia. He previously was returned home in July 1993 after he claimed he arrived in Miami in the wheel well of a cargo jet.

State net buy back program probed

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles has ordered a review of the state net buy back program to determine whether outlawed commercial fishing equipment had been altered to collect more money.

The program was suspended last week after the $20 million fund almost ran out of money. Lawmakers established the buy back plan to assist fishermen after voters approved the net ban last year.

Commercial netters have turned in more large seine nets, which qualify for as much as $3,500, than expected. Smaller gill nets are worth about $800.

Chiles on Monday ordered the state Department of Labor to withhold payment of any outstanding vouchers and compare voucher applications with recent trip tickets filed by commercial fishermen.

Less than $1 million remained in the fund last week.

5 charged in crime spree

ORLANDO — Five people have been charged in a monthlong crime spree of carjackings and robberies that stretched from Miami to Atlanta and left one dead and another injured, federal prosecutors said.

A 14-count indictment handed down Monday includes charges of carjacking resulting in death, attempted carjacking resulting in serious injury, robbery, possession of cocaine, transporting stolen merchandise across state lines and firearms offenses.

Federal officials said the group killed the driver of a car hijacked in Orlando then used the car in the armed robbery of a Lakeland jewelry store. They are also accused of buying cocaine in Miami with money from the sale of stolen Rolex watches.

One person was injured during a carjacking in Tampa. And in Atlanta they hijacked a car at gunpoint from a woman and her young daughter, then used the vehicle in another armed robbery, Wilson said.

If convicted, the accused face from 10 years to life in prison and up to $1 million in fines.

Bombs unearthed in yard of home

FRUIT COVE — The Joe Arrigo family keeps unearthing bombs in the yard of their St. Johns County home.

About 18 months ago, Arrigo was digging in his front yard when he found what appeared to be a six-inch-long bomb, with a round head and four fins. He found two more devices about six weeks ago.

Sunday, Arrigo's 8-year-old son found a similar object while digging weeds.

Arrigo said he and his neighbors in the 50-home South Creek subdivision have been worried that the devices were bombs since they believe they live near an old bombing range.

Their fears were eased somewhat Sunday when police said they had been finding World War II marker bombs, which were used for target practice, for years.

Arrigo said he doesn't plan to let the discoveries scare him into leaving his home, "but we might invest in a metal detector."

Redistricting settlement irks Wallace

TALLAHASSEE — House Speaker Peter Rudy Wallace is not happy about how a Senate redistricting settlement was reached to preserve a minority seat in the Tampa area.

Wallace, D-St. Petersburg, said Monday he believed the agreement earlier this month circumvents the Legislature's constitutional role in drawing lawmakers' districts.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

To catch a criminal Gotcha tabloids get citizens involved

By LAURA MYERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Attention criminals: They know where you live and where you eat and drink. They know your face and your name. They've got your number, and they just gave it to police.

Gotcha! They aren't the viewers of popular television programs like "America's Most Wanted." Instead, they're the thousands of readers of locally published crime sheets — from Tampa Bay to Seattle — that are turning curious citizens into crime fighters.

These do-it-yourself publications focus on regional instead of nationwide man- and woman-hunts, and have the blessings of law enforcement, including police, sheriffs and the FBI.

"We work very closely with these people," said FBI spokesman Jack Callahan from Scottsdale, Ariz., where a 2-year-old multi-agency law enforcement task force just caught its 1,000th criminal, some of them thanks to tips that grew out of the local crime sheet.

"We see this as another opportunity to publicize the fugitives and get the public involved to take these people off the streets," Callahan said.

In the nation's capital, readers can scan the year-old "Crime Prevention Bulletin" for the names, pictures and criminal histories of the bad guys and gals — provided by the police and sheriff's departments.

In Seattle, the tabloid-sized newspaper is called the "Crime Report." In Scottsdale, Ariz., the "All Points Bulletin" regularly shows up in crime-ridden neighborhoods.

And, the precursor to them all, Florida's nearly 3-year-old "The Bay Area Crusader," comes out once a month to spur tips from the public. So far, the gotcha tabloid claims to have helped capture more than 480 fugitives.

"Basically, the communities that are deciding to do this have had enough of crime and they're tired of being scared," said Ken Donovan, editor and founder of the Tampa Bay publication. "We're asking people to do something about it in a constitutional way instead of becoming vigilantes. Just turn the criminals in because you know who they are."

Most of the crime sheets run six to a dozen pages, with 10,000 to 20,000 copies published every three to four months. Funding comes from advertising, mostly from fast food restaurants, liquor stores, attorneys, auto dealers and pawn shops — the same places where they are distributed.

Police and citizens groups contribute regular crime prevention columns. And pictures of missing children often fill some pages. The simple black-and-white newspapers resemble Post Office wanted posters, with mug shots above criminal information and descriptions. Despite their starkness, the publications are growing in popularity.

Some civil libertarian groups are concerned that the publications do little follow-up — they simply report that a person is wanted for a particular crime. They don't report whether the person was tried and acquitted, and some of them don't even report whether the offenders they feature are apprehended.

Donovan, editor of the Tampa Bay paper, is working with several communities nationwide to help them start their own crime sheets. Crime sheets are due soon in Jacksonville, Fla.; Lexington, Ky.; the Hudson Valley in upstate New York; Portland, Ore.; and Los Angeles.

"We distribute the bulletin in the toughest areas," said John Johansen, editor and founder of the Washington, D.C., region's crime sheet. "We get these criminals where they live. People know who they are. The whole purpose is to get people involved in their communities and to keep others from becoming victims."

The people behind the publications, in general, aren't victims of crime who have found a way to fight back. Instead, like Johansen, they're community activists.

This photograph was taken in 1910 soon after this People's Bank block was built in Sanford. The People's Bank adjacent and to the west of it was completed in 1906. Even though it is hard to recognize 85 years later, these are the buildings located at 201-205 East First Street. Present occupants include four antique shops: Main Street Antiques, a Touch of Class, Yesteryears, and Two Doves and a Hound. Also located in this building are Vince Jewelers and The Willow Tree Restaurant. At the time of this picture, in addition to housing offices for the bank, the People's Bank Block also held two real estate offices and a grocery. Most prominent, because of the large sign pointing to its offices, was the Howard Packard Land Company. Officers were B.A. Howard, president; C.C. Howard, vice president; and J.D. Packard, secretary-treasurer. Another occupant was Holden Real Estate whose owners were W.D. Holden and W.J. Thigpen. According to their ad in the Nov. 25, 1910 special industrial section of the Sanford Herald you could buy 400 acres of land in the Sanford Celery Delta from them at prices ranging from $100 to $150 per acre. At street level was James D. Roberts Groceries. This was perhaps its first location as it is not mentioned in the 1909 city directory, although a Garner and Roberts Grocery was at 107 W. First Street. Across the street is what is commonly known as the Touchton Building. Located there at 121-123 W. First Street was E.A. Haffield Company whose manager was W.H. Williams. They were furniture dealers and, according to the sign, also undertakers. Also notice the street car at the far right.

POLICE BRIEFS

• Willie Leon Wilson, 24, 2800 Georgia Avenue, Sanford was arrested by Sanford police Wednesday for domestic violence battery after an argument with his wife over car keys became a physical confrontation. He was arrested at 13th Street and Crooms.

• Terry Lee Eastman, 44, 124 Ingram Circle, Longwood was arrested by sheriff's deputies for aggravated assault when he allegedly pointed a loaded handgun at his wife during an argument. The woman told police she was in fear for her life at least three times during the confrontation even though Eastman stated he was not going to kill her, the report states.

• Carl Robert Hancock, 33, 405 Myrtle Ave. was arrested by Sanford police Wednesday for battery on a pregnant female after arguing with his girlfriend. The woman blacked out momentarily after being struck on the head, she told police.

• Kevin Haro Schneider, 35, 2586 Crowley Terrace, Deltona was arrested by sheriff's deputies Wednesday, at 109 Redbay Drive, Longwood after a fight with his brother. The two quarreled over money after being unable to locate insurance documents after their father was stricken ill.

Burglary alleged

• Two Longwood teens were arrested Wednesday for theft, criminal mischief and car burglary in a joint effort by deputies and Lake Mary police.

Gregory Lee Porras, 18, 910 Woodgate Trail and Michael Robert Slausner, 19, 1901 Lakeshore Circle were arrested for allegedly taking two retail boxes containing 48 bags each of M&M candies, one plain, one peanut from a vehicle in Timacuan. While a Lake Mary policeman was dispatched to the subdivision, an off-duty deputy saw a vehicle in an apartment parking lot off Lake Emma Road and what he thought be an attempted car burglary. When the deputy approached, the youths fled, the report states.

When the car containing Porras and Slausner was stopped near Longwood Hills Road for suspected vehicle theft the large boxes of candy was observed. An inventory showed 15 bags of plain and 5 bags of peanut M&Ms were missing. A CD player reported stolen from Silver Dew Drive was also found in the car. Both police agencies were involved in the arrest because the incidents crossed jurisdictional boundaries.

Quad Squad makes arrest

• Alvin Powell, 21, 57 Lake Monroe Terrace was arrested by members of the Quad Squad Wednesday for burglary and resisting without violence. Police were called to an apartment at Lake Monroe Terrace on an anonymous tip that a group of men were trying to break in and drugs were being used. As two officers approached, the subjects started to run. Powell was captured at 1716 W. 4th Street. When police returned to the scene, the door had been pried open and entry gained.

Grand theft arrests

• Donald Laurence Neulander, 20, 2513 Princeton Avenue, Sanford was arrested by sheriff's deputies in connection with the Sept. 1 theft of four tires and rims and the slashing of four other tires. The tires were found on the car of the suspect's girlfriend. She did not know they were stolen from his ex-girlfriend's car parked at a used car shop in the 2800 block of Sanford Avenue.

• Mark Lane Higginbotham, 30, 308 Rachele Ave. was arrested by Sanford police for grand theft after a number of deposits from a local pizza shop he managed were missing. Four deposits totalling over $3,100 for the store were not credited to the business account. Higginbotham offered to cover the losses and claimed he had a receipt for one of the missing deposits, but it was not found. The bank where the night deposits were made said no other customers claimed they had any problems with missing monies.

• Lisa J. Kemp, 20, 786 E. Charing Cross Circle, Lake Mary was arrested by sheriff's deputies Wednesday after about $600 in refunds were traced to her between Sept. 1-6 at the Lake Emma Road supermarket where she worked as a cashier. She was arrested and held on $1,000 bond. Kemp told police she used the money to pay traffic fines, two car payments and rent, according to the police report. The refunds were all in even amounts but the store manager said items in the store are not priced in even amounts. Bookkeepers checked the tapes and cash drawer receipts and discovered the excessive number of refunds.

Threats alleged

Altoina Hayes, 24, 1599 Enterprise Drive, Deltona was arrested by Sanford police for threat of a public servant Tuesday in the parking lot of Seminole Gardens. Police were investigating a complaint about individuals smoking marijuana and members of the Quad Squad asked Hayes for identification to check for outstanding warrants. Hayes allegedly became hostile and was uncooperative with police. When an officer issued a trespass warning, Hayes made threats against the officer and his immediate family, the report stated and was arrested.

Prostitution arrest

Anna Marie Allgood, 31, 1624 8th Ave., West Bradenton, was arrested for assignation to commit prostitution by City County Investigative Bureau agents conducting an undercover investigation Wednesday near Seminole Boulevard and Sanford Avenue. She allegedly agreed to perform a sex act for $20.

Poll: Floridians nix casinos

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Most likely Florida voters favor limiting social services to illegal immigrants and abolishing state-sponsored affirmative action efforts, a new poll shows.

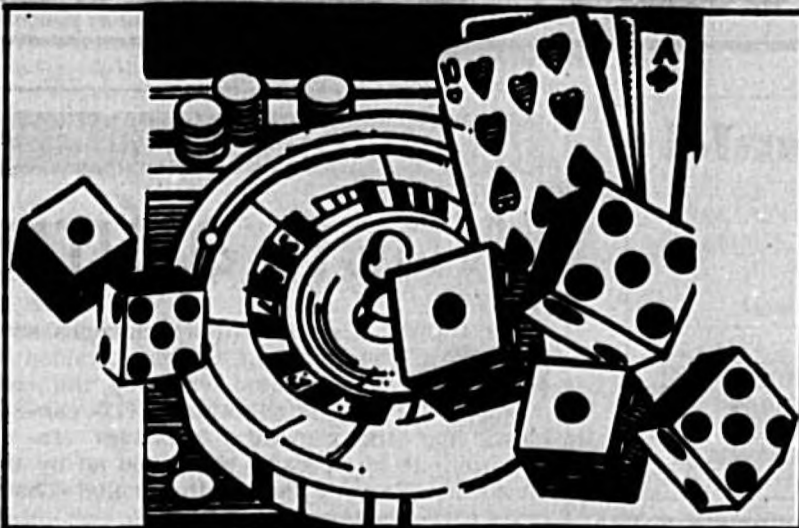

The poll, conducted by Mason-Dixon Political Media Research, also found that any attempt to legalize casino gambling next year would again fail.

With more than a year before the next statewide election, the results of the survey offer an early glimpse into the thinking of a sample of Florida voters. None of the three issues has been placed on the November 1996 ballot.

The poll found that nearly two-thirds of likely voters said they would vote "Yes" to a possible constitutional amendment that "would limit taxpayer supported social services to illegal aliens."

"I'm not surprised we did so well. Just talking to people on the street shows there's widespread support for this idea," said David Abrami, executive director of the Orlando-based Save Our State campaign which is trying to garner enough signatures to put the issue on the ballot. "It just makes sense."

Fifty-seven percent of those polled would approve prohibiting state agencies and other public institutions from "giving preference to applicants based on race, sex, color, ethnicity or national origin."

On the casino issue, 60 percent of respondents said they would vote against another attempt to legalize casino gambling. Voters were asked whether they would approve gaming at large hotels, aboard riverboats and in 30 casinos statewide.

A petition campaign financed by casino giant Bally Corp. is close to obtaining the required 430,000 signatures to qualify for the 1996 ballot.

But the effort, dubbed Florida Locally Approved Gaming

(FLAG), looks doomed to suffer the same fate as last year's Proposition for Limited Casinos, which won support from only 38 percent of voters despite a record $16.5 million campaign.

"It shows the attitude among voters hasn't changed since the last election," said Orlando Mayor Glenda Hood, president of No Casinos Inc. "But we expect a very aggressive and vigorous campaign on Bally's part."

The poll was based on telephone interviews with 420 Florida voters who said they were registered as voters and usually vote in statewide elections. The interviews took place Sept. 5 and Sept. 6. The poll's margin of error is 4.9 percentage points.

Only the movement against illegal immigrants has garnered any organized support in Florida.

In the last year, Save Our State and the Palm Beach County-based Florida 187-Committee have emerged to lead the fight against illegal immigrants.

Each group models itself after the grassroots movement in California, where voters overwhelmingly approved Proposition 187 in November. The measure bars illegal immigrants from receiving most social services, but its constitutionality is being challenged by opponents in court.

So far, Save Our State has collected less than 10,000 signatures, said David Abrami, the group's executive director.

"These findings (the poll results) suggest that an amendment modeled on Prop 187 might have a good shot at winning approval in Florida" if supporters can place it on the ballot, said Poll Director Robert Joffe.

Joffe said that persuading Florida voters to end affirmative action may be much harder and may hinge on the wording of any proposed amendment.

"Many Florida voters might be attracted to a measure with wording that appears to be opposed to unfair discrimination," he said.

It's time

Seminole County commissioners were recently taken aback when a portion of a joint study about the best location for the courthouse was released to the press before they had time to review it. They say it was premature and the study should have been released later, in toto.

The study's author, planner and architect Bruce Andersen, suggests the courthouse remain at its present site in downtown Sanford. The portion of the study not yet released, the economics involved in choosing the location, presumably detail the reasons for that conclusion.

Commissioner Daryl McLain, who was the driving force behind a feasibility study relocating the courthouse to Five Points, and board Chairman Randy Morris expressed dismay that the city of Sanford would release the results prematurely. They, and the other commissioners, say they will wait till all the facts are before them. Then the board will review, discuss, and hopefully decide.

Sanford officials fear a move to Five Points would hurt the business climate downtown.

Morris says those fears are unfounded, that downtown has been in decline despite the strong judicial presence.

McLain makes a point that some court facilities would remain downtown, possibly freeing other prime real estate to be developed and returned to the tax rolls.

We find all these theories interesting. And we encourage detailed discussion between Sanford and the county in the VERY near future. Because a trend is now emerging. The tentative plans for the Festival Shopping Center on the lakefront, the plans for a parking garage and the downtown expansion plans for Sun Bank are all on hold, all contingent on the courthouse remaining where it is.

If examination of the rest of the study reaffirms the only logical decision is the one that keeps the court facilities downtown, then commissioners should decide. We suspect that officials who, for whatever reasons, still advocate this move to Five Points, will respond that there is not enough information available, and that another study is needed.

Mr. Morris is right, downtown Sanford has been in decline. But now that we see a chance to reverse that trend, we hope county leaders will quit studying and make a decision.

Truth about Premarin

Premarin. Millions of women are taking this estrogen replacement drug for menopause. In so doing they are unwittingly and unnecessarily contributing to animal cruelty, for there are synthetic drugs that contain no animal derivatives, are just as effective and, in some instances, cheaper.

What animal derivative does Premarin contain? The name Pre-Mar-In stands for pregnant mare urine. Yes, that's what Premarin is made of, and therein lies the cruelty to the mares. They must be pregnant, and are kept on PMU farms in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Canada, and in North Dakota in this country. They are forced to stand on concrete floors in stalls 3 1/2 to 5 feet wide by about 8 feet long for the better part of their pregnancies. In the stalls, they are unable to take more than a step in any direction and cannot turn around or lie down properly. Some become crippled, some suffer from kidney and liver disease, and some have died as a result of the conditions under which they live. When they receive only half the water they need, since lack of water raises the estrogen concentrate, this brings in more money to the farmers. Once they have given birth, they spend only a short time in pasture with their foals. During this time they are impregnated again, then separated from their foals and put back on the production line. How long does this go on? Their life expectancy is 12 to 14 years; some endure this cruelty for more than 20 years. When they are no longer "productive," they are sent to slaughter.

What happens to the foals that are the by-product of this industry? Some are killed immediately, some are kept as replacements for worn-out mares, but most are sent to feedlots to be fattened and then slaughtered for meat for foreign markets. In 1993, an estimated 75,000 mares in Canada and North Dakota were confined for urine collection, giving birth to some 90,000 foals. Cruelty to the mares! Cruelty to the foals!

If every woman taking Premarin will switch to a plant-derived synthetic estrogen replacement therapy (ERT), Canada-based Ayerst Organics, Inc., the only producer of Premarin will have to either go out of business or start producing a synthetic product. Meanwhile, here are some alternatives to Premarin: Estradiol Transdermal System, Estradiol tablets, Estropipate, Estrone, Estrace, Orthoest and Ogen. Estrace is the most popular of these. Tell your doctor the truth about Premarin (many doctors don't know how it is produced) and ask for an alternative. There is no need for either women, mares or foals to suffer.

When affirmative action equals layoff

Like Christmas, presidential campaigns start early. When I was a boy, they were heralded by parades and inspirational visits by the candidates to our very neighborhoods. FDR came to mine. Now the elevating messages are on television, as in an early re-election ad by the president: "Expand the death penalty! That's how we'll protect America."

He won't lose many votes with that proof of his decisiveness; but an affirmative action court case, currently in the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, may cause him a lot of trouble.

Affirmative action is likely to be a more divisive issue in the coming campaign than abortion, and certainly more than the radical Republican Congress's evisceration of the Fourth Amendment and the once Great Writ of habeas corpus -- while the president remains silent.

The acutely controversial affirmative action case involves the Justice Department's support of the Piscataway, N.J., school board's layoff of a white teacher, Sharon Taxman, during a budget shortage, while it retained Debra Williams, a black teacher. Both had been hired on the same day nine years before. Both were equally qualified, but the teacher who kept her job was the only black in the nine-member business department. The school board wanted diversity, so Sharon Taxman was let go because she was white.

In court, Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights Deval Patrick has been vigorously supporting the school board despite some opposition in the Justice Department. He has the president and the attorney general behind him. In a letter to The Washington Post (Aug. 20), Patrick claims that in my columns on this case, I do not understand the relevant legal basis for the Justice Department's position.

Actually, the guiding Supreme Court law is Wygant v. Jackson Board of Education (1986) in which a school board had granted preferential protection against layoffs to certain employees because of their race or national origin.

Justice Lewis Powell said then that giving preference to "minority role models" to overcome discrimination in society was not a sufficiently "compelling reason" to lay off non-minority employees.

Furthermore, said Powell, setting affirmative action goals for hiring is different than using race to decide who gets laid off. Applying for a job and not getting it because of affirmative action is much less burdensome than losing one you already have as a result of affirmative action.

As for the current view of a majority of the court, Sandra Day O'Connor has declared that trying to accomplish diversity as an independent goal is "too unrelated to any legitimate basis for employing racial classifications."

What makes the action of the Piscataway school board even more difficult to defend on constitutional grounds is the absence of past discrimination. As Stephen Klausner, the attorney for Sharon Taxman, points out in a brief to the Third Circuit: "The percentage of black teachers employed by the Piscataway township Board of Education is approximately twice that of the applicable qualified labor pool."

Like Christmas, presidential campaigns start early.

DONNA BRITT

The key word here is 'black'

WASHINGTON — While most of my friends have given up closely following the O.J. Simpson trial, one has continued to watch as much of the proceedings as her schedule permits.

Even before revelations about retired L.A. detective Mark Fuhrman — and before Judge Lance Ito's controversial decision to allow jurors only limited access to Fuhrman's tape-recorded rantings — something about the trial bothered her. It reminded her of how, "as a former police reporter, I've seen some police exaggerate evidence, how they lie on the stand to bolster their case."

Today, my friend — who once thought Simpson was guilty — has serious doubts about the case against him. But you know what she finds "amazing?"

"When I tell people about these doubts, they get incredibly angry," she says. "And I don't get why."

Did I mention that my friend is white?

She's not supposed to believe that Simpson may be innocent. Polls suggest that while most whites are emotionally invested in O.J.'s guilt, most African Americans are invested in his innocence.

I'm wondering how many folks are invested in the truth.

Reactions to audiotapes of Fuhrman freely using the racial epithet he swore under oath not to have used for a decade — and the response to my friend's new mind-set — suggest how deep some people's investment goes.

Much of white America — not to mention the media and Judge Ito — appear to buy into the prosecution's contention that the tapes are merely a manipulative and cynical distraction unrelated to "the real case."

Now that's amazing.

First, let me admit that I long believed O.J. to be guilty, even as I wondered at the ease with which the bloody glove and socks were found, and the allegation that an aging athlete could viciously murder two aerobicized young adults in a well-traveled residential area with no witnesses.

But for me, Simpson's history of woman-battering and his self-pitying apparent suicide note were as incriminating as the cash and passport he reportedly gathered before his furtive Bronco bolt. When I added the physical evidence, Simpson's guilt seemed probable.

Many people did that — took the available evidence and testimony, interpreted it and arrived at a conclusion.

For most whites, racism wasn't part of the O.J. equation. For those who've never experienced racism, it seldom is.

For most blacks, skin color was at least a consideration. Those who've experienced racism play a daily weighing game, deciding how much it matters in any given situation.

Though I've seen firsthand the meanness of certain L.A. police, I felt the evidence suggested that race wasn't crucial here.

And then came the Fuhrman tapes. And his 41 recorded uses of the N-word, along with 17 other epithets and references to his own or other officers' misconduct, during interviews with a screenwriter. And his boasting on tape about abusing — and yes, framing — suspects.

How could it not matter that the prosecution's star witness — the man who found a key piece of physical evidence — is a liar and self-described evidence falsifier?

How could it be immaterial that a man who had the option of testifying that he'd sometimes used epithets common among some cops — or that he just didn't remember — instead chose to lie about that which he knew had been recorded? Such recklessness and arrogance makes previously far-fetched defense conspiracy theories seem much more plausible.

Which brings me to my friend's theories about why some people — all of them white — are outraged that she doubts Simpson's guilt:

"For some," she began, "the murders are tied to domestic violence — letting him off the hook on one lets him off the hook on the other."

But much of the reaction, she says, "has something — no, everything — to do with race."

"White Americans want to think everything is equal and wonderful. Not needing affirmative action, not needing to acknowledge racism, would be a sign of the progress we've all made. Saying, 'No, there's still wrongness' — and in such an exaggerated way as in this case — says something about ourselves that people don't want to acknowledge."

She smiled. "Remember when O.J. started out as a suspect, all the talk was about how he wasn't really black? But now, what role does he play in most people's heads?"

For many people, he's either the aggrieved black male victim or the violent black male criminal. For many people — even whites who'd never admit it — the key word is "black."

Which isn't amazing at all.

Did I mention that my friend is white? She's not supposed to believe that Simpson may be innocent.

JACK ANDERSON

Packwood's antics finally lay him low

WASHINGTON — The 27-year career of Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., — which came to a tragic end last week with his resignation amid charges of sexual misconduct — was marked with contradictions from the very beginning.

As a freshman senator who'd been labeled the "Boy Wonder," he often worked out his frustrations in the Senate gymnasium. More notable than his exercise regimen, however, was his dress code: A sweatshirt advertising arch-conservative Spiro Agnew covering a T-shirt featuring liberal John Lindsay.

Thus began the career of a man whose greatest legacy will be the disparity between his public achievements and his private failings.

Over the last three decades, nobody was a more forceful champion of women's rights on the Senate floor. To the consternation of his own party leaders, Packwood fought lonely battles on behalf of women's reproductive rights long before Roe v. Wade became part of the lexicon and more women were elected to the Senate.

But away from the Senate floor, Packwood treated women in a "degrading" way, according to the Senate Ethics Committee. Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., the committee's chairman, said Packwood was guilty of a "habitual pattern of aggressive, blatantly sexual advances" directed mainly at women on his own staff or women he worked with in other capacities.

In a scene typical of the allegations against him, one woman described her encounter with Packwood to the ethics committee as follows: "He stood on me and grabbed my ponytail and pulled my head with it so that he could kiss me.... At the same time his right hand was trying to reach up under my skirt to pull off my panty girdle."

Packwood's own diary is filled with lurid accounts of his cravings and conquests. Like the intern he called a "cute little button blonde thing" and the boastful reference to "the 22 staff members I'd made love to and probably 75 others I've had a passionate relationship with."

Based on all of the teary tributes Packwood received from his colleagues on the day of his resignation, it was easy to forget that these admiring colleagues were the very people who had spent the previous 24 hours begging Packwood to resign in the first place.

It was Packwood's final flip-flop that brought him down for good. Just weeks after persuading enough of his GOP colleagues to vote against public hearings into the charges against him, Packwood himself asked the ethics committee to hold public hearings.

We first predicted last month that Packwood was going to reverse course because the ethics committee had voted to release over 18,000 pages of documents from their investigation. Sources close to Packwood told us he feared that the press would pick the five or six juiciest items from these documents and skewer him, but that he believed he could defend himself at a public forum. Why did it take Packwood nearly three years to figure that out?

After standing with Packwood against public hearings at great political peril, his GOP colleagues were shocked when Packwood called for public hearings because it suited his personal interests. It was too much for even Packwood's friends to stomach, and that's why the ethics committee finally voted unanimously to expel him.

But even in his moments of triumph, the inconsistencies were there.

It was Packwood's final flip-flop that brought him down for good.

increasing the manpower," she asked. "Also, who would do the billing, where would the money go for transportation, and how long did the fire chiefs consider this before bringing it up as a suggestion?" Smith said she didn't want an immediate answer but would like to have the information documented for consideration at a future commission work session.

Commissioner Whitey Eckstein said he agreed. "I think we need to discuss this at length because I wouldn't want to act too hastily," he commented.

Commissioner Lon Howell was concerned over the insurance liability to the city if this change would come about, but Chief Hickson responded that there would be no increase according to what he had heard in discussion with the Seminole County Public Safety officials.

Hickson said last year, his department handled between 2,600 and 2,700 ambulance calls. "The main thing this would do," he said, "is reduce the cost to citizens who receive ambulance service."

Responding to a question from Commissioner Kerry Lyons, Hickson said he could not immediately give any estimate of changes in ambulance costs if the system would be placed strictly in the hands of fire personnel.

Atlantic Ambulance Service presently handles the needs in Sanford and Seminole County. City

Manager Bill Simmons said the Atlantic contract will expire as of January 1, and a re-negotiation would be required. "If the county is going to renew the contract with Atlantic," Simmons said, "they will have to begin sending out an RFP (request for proposals) by the first of October."

He added, "But it appears as though, regardless of what the city believes, if the county decides not to send out the RFP, and place ambulance service in the hands of county firefighters, I don't see that the city would have any other choice but to go along with it."

Hickson will be arranging to have various county public safety and fire officials on hand for discussion of the matter at the next city commission work session, on Sept. 25.

Commenting on the matter to the Sanford Herald, Hickson said the main purpose of the request for the change is to give the citizens ambulance service for a lower cost. "I believe, if for nothing more, this makes it worth looking into," he added.

Hickson admitted that while there would be no immediate need for any additional personnel or equipment, "who can tell. Down the road a few years from now, as our population grows, there may well be a need for some expansion, but right now, we can do it with the manpower and equipment we already have without causing any problems in other firefighting responsibilities."

positive attitudes, self-esteem, drug and alcohol awareness and problem solving and decision making.

The programs, and others that are seen as being needed by the students, will be offered to schools in one and two hour blocks.

Secondly, some of the money will be expended to pay for several performances by Fresh Starts.

The Rollins College group will offer entertaining, informative programs to help young people appreciate their cultural differences and similarities. There are programs appropriate to high school, middle school and elementary school audiences.

Finally, part of the money will be used to stock several "multi-culture trunks" with art, artifacts, music, videos, audiocassettes, software, books and suggested activities for use in classrooms. The board will meet this afternoon at 3:30 p.m. at 1211 S. Mellonville Ave., Sanford.

five foot seven inches tall, weighing approximately 165 pounds. He had no facial hair and was wearing a curly gold wig that went past his shoulders.

Sheriff's deputies did not say whether the bank's video cameras had supplied an adequate photo of the robber for the sake of identification.

When last seen, he was wearing a blue shirt, black pants, and black cap.

The pickup truck was found to have been stolen from outside a jewelry store at the Sanford Towne Center sometime after 9:45 yesterday morning.

VA announces health care network sites

WASHINGTON — The Veterans Affairs Department has designated 22 sites for a new decentralized health care network.

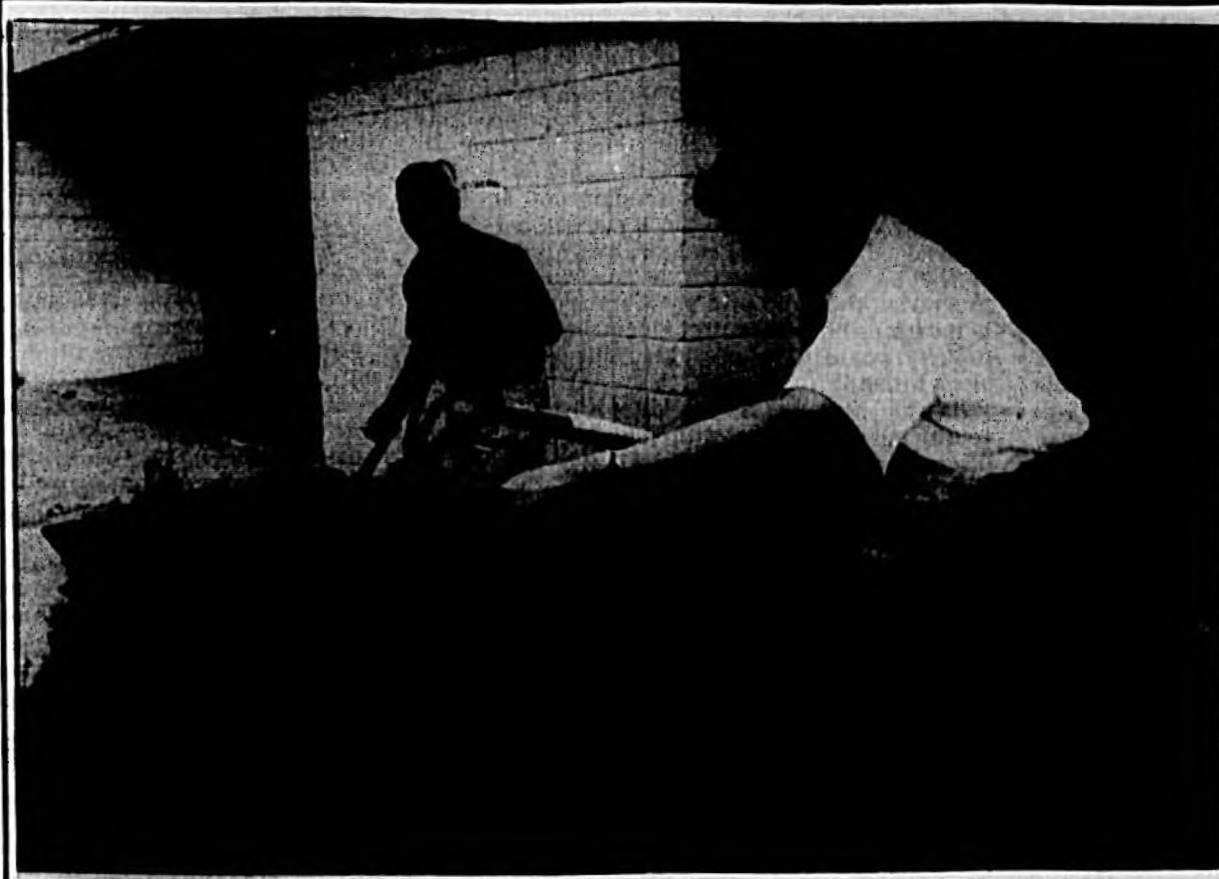

The new system is to replace the VA's current health-care structure divided into four regions, each with jurisdiction over some 40 medical facilities.

Under the reorganization, announced last March, each of the new, smaller regional headquarters will have responsibility for five to 12 medical centers. One objective of the decentralization is to better meet local community needs.

The 22 headquarters sites announced Monday will be in Boston; Albany, N.Y.; Bronx, N.Y.; Pittsburgh; Baltimore; Durham, N.C.; Atlanta; Bay Pines, Fla.; Nashville, Tenn.; Cleveland; Chicago; Minneapolis-St. Paul; Ann Arbor, Mich.; Omaha, Neb.; Kansas City, Mo.; Jackson, Miss.; Dallas; Phoenix; Denver; Portland, Ore.; San Francisco and Long Beach, Calif.

The current system has centers in Baltimore, Ann Arbor, Jackson and San Francisco.

Study: Building bones without side effects

By PAUL ROGER
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — A new slow-release fluoride pill builds bone and reduces fractures among women who suffer from severe osteoporosis, a disorder that leaves thousands with brittle bones and some crippled with deformed spines.

Dr. Charles Y.C. Pak of the University of Texas, Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas, said the new fluoride formula caused an increase in spinal bone density of more than 4 percent annually among older women who already had severe osteoporosis, making their bone tougher and more resistant to injury. It also reduced spinal fractures by about two-thirds.

Pak was reporting on the study today at a meeting of the American Society for Bone and Mineral Research in Baltimore. The study also is being published in two peer-reviewed journals.

Dr. Robert Lindsay, president of the National Osteoporosis Foundation and a professor at the Columbia University medical college in New York, said Pak's study is "very important" because it proves that a proper dose of fluoride and calcium, sustained over time, can reduce fracturing.

"The key is the delivery system," said Lindsay. "It appears to give sodium fluoride in a more sustained fashion."

Earlier studies found that sodium fluoride in combination with calcium citrate will build bone in women with osteoporosis.

But the studies also showed that doses of fluoride strong enough to strengthen bones also caused toxic side effects in the stomach. When high doses of fluoride mix with normal hydrochloric acid in the stomach, hydrofluoric acid, a corrosive chemical, is formed.

"That's what they use to etch glass," said Lindsay. "It caused a lot of gastric bleeding."

Pak said the new form of fluoride avoids this problem by packaging the drug in a gelatin capsule that does not dissolve until it is passed out of the stomach, avoiding most of the hydrochloric acid effect. Instead, the pill is slowly absorbed in the intestine.

In a four-year study, Pak used 110 women who had all suffered severe bone loss, including spontaneous vertebrae fractures. The women were all past childbearing age, the time in life when osteoporosis most commonly strikes. On average, the women had lost 30 percent of the density in their backbones, Pak said.

Half of the women were put on a program of taking the sodium fluoride pill along with calcium citrate. The other half were given calcium citrate and a placebo that resembled the fluoride pill.

After four years, Pak said 85.4 percent of the women on fluoride had experienced no more spinal fractures. Among those on placebo, 56.9 percent escaped fractures.

Spinal density increased by more than 4 percent annually and hip bone density by 2.4 percent annually among those on fluoride. The increase was less than 1 percent annually for women taking only calcium citrate.

Pak said other studies with the new fluoride pill show that the increase in bone density is even more dramatic for women whose osteoporosis has not yet become severe. "The message is to start therapy early," he said.

CINCINNATI — Jerome Walton's single with two out in the bottom of the 11th inning lifted the Cincinnati Reds to a 2-1 victory Monday night over the Florida Marlins.

Cincinnati won for only the fourth time in 12 games, snapping a four-game losing streak against the Marlins.

Rich Garcia (0-2) gave up a one-out single to Hal Morris and a walk to Barry Larkin — the Marlins' 10th walk of the game — and then struck out Reggie Sanders before Walton singled to right.

Mike Jackson (6-1) pitched a perfect 11th to help the Reds improve to 10-2 in extra innings.

Holtz to have surgery

INDIANAPOLIS — Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz will have spinal surgery today and will be sidelined at least three weeks.

Defensive coordinator Bob Davie will coach the No. 24 Irish while Holtz is out. Holtz, 58, said it's the first time in 26 years as a head coach that he will miss a practice or a game.

Holtz has what appears to be a bone growth that has compressed the spinal cord, university physician Dr. James Moriarty said. An immediate operation is required to avoid permanent spinal cord damage and possible paralysis.

LINCOLN, Neb. — Nebraska's two top running backs, including Heisman Trophy contender Lawrence Phillips, were arrested over the weekend for allegedly assaulting women, leaving the defending national champions in turmoil.

Coach Tom Osborne kicked Phillips off the team Sunday night, but hinted that the junior's college career might not be over.

Osborne said the other arrested running back, junior Damon Benning, won't be suspended because he believes Benning is innocent.

Sanders said he will undergo the procedure if and when the San Francisco Giants are eliminated from playoff contention.

Sanders received a seven-year contract with a $13 million signing bonus, the team announced.

Rams see double

Lingard's in loss

By TONY BOSCHER
Herald correspondent

LAKE MARY — Situations being what they were, Shawn Lingard had to pull double duty for the Oviedo Lions in their 6A-District 4 football game with the Lake Mary Rams this past Friday and Saturday night.

Lingard killed a Lake Mary drive by intercepting a Shaun St. Dennis pass and returned the ball to the Lake Mary 37-yard line.

Three plays later, Lingard took in an 11-yard pass from Andy Neufeld for a touchdown that started the Lions on their way to a 12-6 win.

Oviedo (1-1, 1-0 6A-District 4) hosts Winter Park this Friday while Lake Mary (1-1, 0-1 6A-District 4) travels to Dr. Phillips.

The Lions' first win of the season came under somewhat trying conditions for Coach Jack Blanton and his crew.

Earlier in the week, Blanton installed a new offense that limited his personnel options.

Then, just a few minutes into the game, an element of surprise the new offense might have provided was lost when an accident caused a power outage. After completing the Lake Mary's Donnie Casey (No. 26), who had big game last week, could not get away from Oviedo linebacker Leon Scott (No. 82, left) and the rest of the Lions Saturday night, gaining just four yards on six carries.

Volunteer of the Week

He teaches, counsels inmates

By SUSAN WESSNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Roland Boye has been a resident of Sanford since 1979. Although a widower, Boye has kept his hours busy involved in the Good News Jail Ministry.

As an elder and member of the Sanford Alliance Church for the past 10 years, many in the congregation agree his example of faithfulness has been an encouragement to them.

Boye teaches literacy, phonics and discipline to inmates at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility several days a week. His commitment for the past 15 years has brought the joy of reading to much of the jail population.

Another duty of Boye includes distributing Bible study lessons within the confines of the facility. "I make copies of the discipleship books and the Bible study books," he said.

Boye continued, "It's great to see men come to know the Lord and learning too. I hope I have the opportunity to do some biblical studies at the Orlando Rescue Mission. I'll be teaching discipline, literacy and doing some Biblical counseling."

service in the Good News Jail Ministry. Boye is a recently retired minister.

ministry, Boye left because of poor hearing and the loud volume in the jail. Chaplain Cawthon commented, "Roland was a very dedicated and committed servant of the Lord. He went beyond the call of duty in his commitment to the ministry. He was warmly welcomed. He was a bundle of joy."

He continued by saying, "I hope that when he reaches Gloryland one day God will say, 'well done thy good and faithful servant.'"

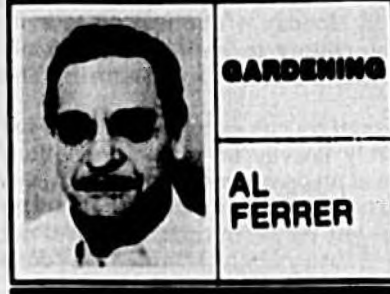

Many diseases affect turfgrasses

In our lab we constantly receive calls and samples from people concerned about disease problems in their lawns. There are many diseases that affect turfgrasses. We will briefly discuss some of the most common and important of these diseases for the benefit of the people who work very hard on their lawns but still find it difficult to maintain them free from diseases.

Take-All Disease: Susceptible grasses: Bermuda grass, St. Augustine grass, and many other grasses. Disease: Disease is favored by stress. Kinds of stress to residential lawns include too short a mowing height, nematode injury, soil insects, poor irrigation schedules, etc. Minimizing stress will avoid or delay disease development.

The disease is caused by a fungus that is widely distributed throughout Florida in many grasses. It is likely that the fungus is present in all lawns but will only cause damage if the plants suffer stress.

Symptoms: Initial symptoms will appear as chlorotic areas that expand over time. These patches thin gradually to bare spots. Affected areas will not respond to fertilizers or irrigation because the plants have a poor root system. Damage will be more noticeable in summer and fall. Leaves do not present any visible symptoms of the disease. The fungus is limited to the roots and lower portions of the stems.

GARDENING

AL FERRER

The disease is difficult to diagnose because it requires a microscopic examination and the fungus does not produce consistently the typical fruiting bodies that it produces in other grasses like wheat and rice, which are also seriously affected by this organism.

Control: If disease is present, fertilize with nitrogen (1/2 - 1 N/1000 sq ft). Use acid-forming fertilizers. Manganese deficiency predisposes the plants to infection. Include this nutrient in your fertilizer program if the disease appears in your lawn. Raise mowing height. Remove dead grass and reseed.

Use the fungicides Terasen, Fungo or Bayleton, according to their labels. Make sure to water immediately to move the product into the root zone.

BROWN PATCH
Susceptible grasses: St. Augustine, carpet, rye, centipede and zoysia are most susceptible. Bahia, Bermuda are less susceptible.
Conditions for Disease Development: A soil inhabiting fungus causes this disease. Warm weather with high surface moisture is necessary for disease to occur. This fungus becomes active at 73°F. Most damage occurs between 80-85°F, but is inactive above 90°F. High nitrogen levels and thatch buildup favor disease.

Symptoms: Turf develops irregular brown to straw-colored areas. Affected areas of turf enlarge up to several feet in diameter. Turf at the margin of the affected area may appear dark and wilted. Leaves and leaf sheaths wilt and turn brown. On St. Augustine grass, whole leaf sheaths can be pulled up easily. Leaves rot at the base. Severely affected plants can die due to root and stem rot. Leaf blade lesions can be observed frequently on St. Augustine grass. Cultural control: Use slow-release N fertilizers. Avoid excessive applications of readily available nitrogen. Irrigate only when needed. Water early in the morning. Mow diseased areas last. Reseed severely affected areas.

Use the fungicides Bayleton, Ronilan or Regal ConSyst according to their labels.

GRAY LEAF SPOT
Susceptible grasses: St. Augustine grass is the most susceptible grass, particularly the blue-green (bitter blue) selections. Bahia, Bermuda, centipede and rye grasses can also be affected.

Conditions for disease development: Warm, humid weather promotes disease development. Cloudy days increasing the period of wetness on the leaves also favors the disease. Excess available nitrogen will increase the severity and spread of this disease.

Symptoms: The fungus produces oval or diamond-shaped brown spots on leaves, and irregular lesions of sheaths and stems. Spots have a definite dark brown to purple margin and when spores form, they will develop a grayish color. Some lesions may have a yellow halo. As lesions increase in size they join and form a necrotic tissue. Leaf blades will die and the turf will present brown patches of dead grass. Plants are not affected.

Control: Avoid excess applications of nitrogen. Use slow-release nitrogen fertilizers. Irrigate only when needed. Apply water in early morning only.

The fungicides Terasen 1901 and Fungo are excellent chemicals for control of this disease; use them according to label.

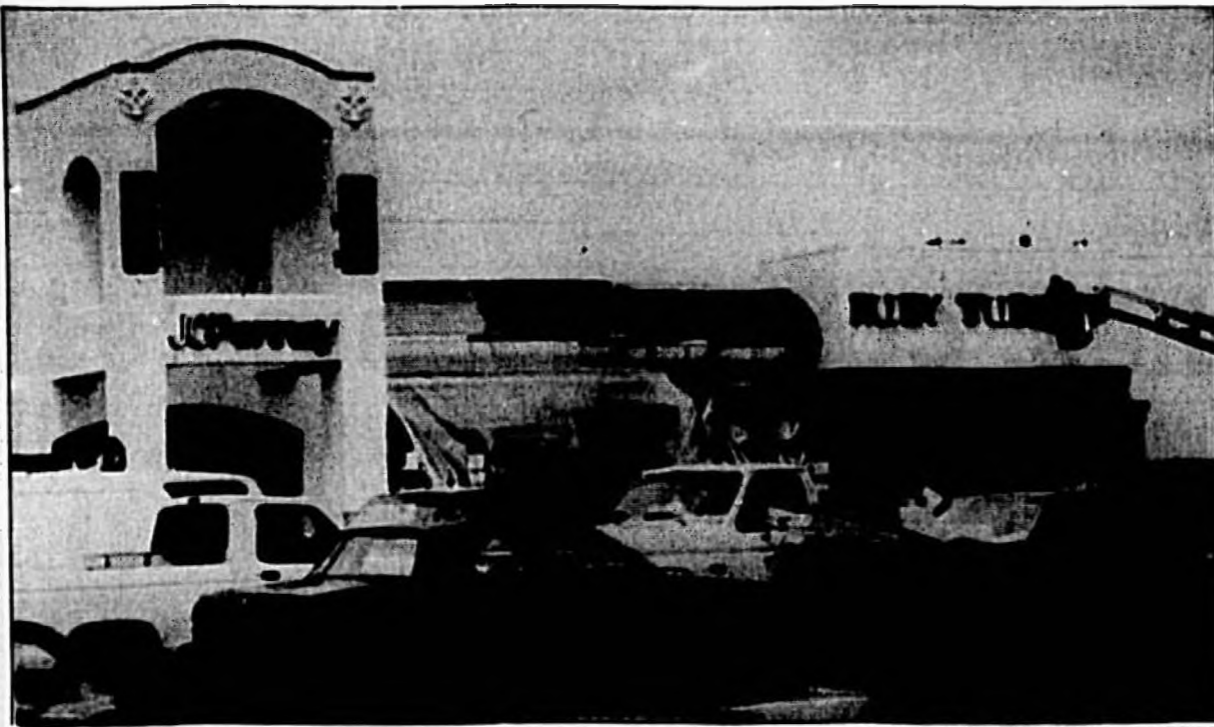

PYTHIUM ROOT ROT
Susceptible grasses: All grasses are affected. There is no difference in susceptibility among grasses to this disease.

Conditions for Disease development: The fungus lives in the soil and is active over a wide range of temperatures. Overwatering contributes to the problem. Good drainage is necessary to avoid this disease.

Shoppers makes people hungry. Sanford's new Ruby Tuesday Restaurant is nearing completion next to the J.C. Penney store on the east side of the Seminole Towne Center, built by developer Melvin Simon. The restaurant, along with all of the mall store, is expected to be fully operational by the grand opening gala scheduled for September 21, with the entire mall open to the public on September 22.

Seminole Towne Center developer has eyes on West Palm Beach land

From Staff and Wire Reports

The owner of the Indianapolis Pacers who is also the developer of the nation's largest Mall of America and the about-to-be open Seminole Towne Center in Sanford, has his sights on a 77-acre downtown parcel destined for redevelopment.

If Mel Simon is picked by city officials to develop Downtown/Uptown, site of the Kravis Center arts complex, you can expect something unexpected.

Rivals, partners in the development industry and Simon watches say he's a down-to-earth tycoon worth $580 million with flashes of brilliance, flamboyance and vision.

From his home base in Indianapolis, an oceanfront mansion in Manalapan, just south of Palm Beach, and vacation home in Aspen, Colo., Simon runs an empire of retail holdings, including 55 shopping malls, 59 shopping centers and five mixed-use developments in 29 states.

His original company was Melvin Simon & Associates. He owns 69 percent and his brother Herb owns 31 percent. That company controls about 34 percent of Simon Property Group, which went public in 1993 as a real estate investment trust.

The company manages 67.7 million square feet of space, employs 4,100 people and has assets worth $2.3 billion.

If things work his way, Simon, 68, plans to form a partnership with Houston developer Gerald Hines for the West Palm Beach property.

Simon won't talk about plans in progress, so his ideas for the project are unknown. But with the development in the pre-drawing board stage, Simon developed a key relationship with Mayor Nancy Graham, hosting a re-election party in January.

The direction of the project could be decided in November when the Palm Beach County commission is expected to choose a convention-center site from among four locations: West Palm Beach, Boca Raton, Riviera Beach and Mangonia Park.

Simon committed in July to build a hotel if West Palm Beach is the winner, and city officials plan to seek development proposals this fall while pursuing land purchases from more than 40 owners. About 35 acres already is in city hands.

"If we are the site selected for the convention center, that probably will accelerate our discussions with Mr. Simon and Mr. Hines," Rick Greene, the city's director of planning, zoning and building, said Monday. "The timing is such that we want the county to make the decision, and then we get into the actual site planning and land planning."

If Simon is favored by city officials, experts say he is bound to rely heavily on entertainment, a hallmark of some of his recent retail projects.

"Simon Property Group is probably the preeminent retail-real estate player in the country, if not the world," said industry analyst James Gaydoah of McDonald & Co. in Cleveland.

Minnesota's Mall of America, the nation's largest indoor mall, is built around a seven-acre amusement park and features a level of restaurants, shops and entertainment. Forum Shops at Las Vegas' Caesars Palace recreates a Roman street scene, complete with a ceiling that changes colors like a Mediterranean sky.

"They were the quintessential '80s developers, saying, 'We can build anything,'" said Joseph Luik, managing director for the Teacher's Insurance & Annuity Association, which has loaned more than $500 million to Simon's company and holds a $350 million stake in Mall of America.

His and her gift: Name on plane, unlimited travel for a year

By SUSAN HIGHTOWER AP Business Writer

DALLAS — It's not a stocking stuffer and it doesn't come wrapped, but one Christmas gift this year is sure to send its recipients soaring. The Neiman Marcus department store chain is taking bids starting at $100,000 to paint a couple's name in foot-high letters on the nose of a new United Airlines Boeing 777.

The names would stay on the plane for a year and the couple would also get a year's worth of unlimited first-class travel. Any amount paid over $100,000 would be donated to the American Red Cross disaster relief organization and is tax-deductible.

About 300 champagne-sipping guests applauded Monday when the Dallas-based retailer announced its his-and-hers gift — a tradition since 1960 — at its annual Christmas Book party at Dallas Love Field Airport. The most expensive gift in the catalog hung heavy around the neck of a model in a full-length velvet evening gown: a $900,000 yellow diamond necklace with 185.5 carats.

"I love it. It's damned exciting, isn't it?" Jim Chandler said of the party.

Chicago-based United is also auctioning space on 10 of its planes to frequent fliers who can use their mileage credits to bid for the chance to have their name, or someone's they choose, in the sky for a year.

The airline approached the department store months ago with the plane auction idea, bumping what the retailer had chosen as this year's his-and-hers gift: $3,000 wood-carved coffins.

Post-hysterectomy pap smear not needed

DEAR DR. GOTT: Could you tell me if it is necessary to have a Pap smear test after having a complete hysterectomy? Many of my female friends' doctors are now urging them to have a Pap smear. I have not had one since my hysterectomy over 27 years ago.

DEAR READER: As an internist, I've had a running argument with gynecologists for more than 25 years about this very issue.

The Pap test is a method of detecting cancer of the uterus and the cervix (the mouth of the uterus). During a hysterectomy, these structures are removed, so I've never seen much sense in taking a smear from organs that are no longer present.

My GYN colleagues point out that this examination enables them to make sure "nothing's wrong." However, I chide them for performing unnecessary tests just to collect a fee. If a post-hysterectomy woman were to develop a vaginal problem, it would cause bleeding or a discharge, reason enough for a thorough exam.

Therefore, I advise post-hysterectomy patients to avoid Pap tests because I don't believe that the techniques constitute good preventive care. Of course, I'd be willing to hear from any gynecologist who can show me medical studies that prove post-hysterectomy Pap tests are a cost-effective procedure that saves lives.

DEAR DR. GOTT: As far back as I can remember, I've suffered from insomnia during the summer months. When I get back into junior high school, I'm fine. What could be causing this and is there something I can do for it?

DEAR READER: Summertime may cause insomnia in some people because the days are longer; we are less likely to sleep when, for example, sun streams in the window at 6 a.m. Also, many schoolchildren get caught up in summer activities and look forward day by day to these events. Finally, young people may not get as tired when school is not in session -- or they may tend to nap during the day.

Your insomnia may simply reflect an altered schedule and a re-setting of your biological clock.
