Sanford Inn Sold; Will Be Converted To A Holiday Inn

By GEOFFREY POUNDS
Herald Staff Writer

An Altamonte Springs firm which recently purchased the landmark Holiday Inn in Sanford has announced plans to purchase the Sanford Inn at Highway 46 and I-4.

National Capital Companies Ltd., headquartered at 701 Semoran Blvd. in Altamonte Springs, will convert the Sanford Inn to a Holiday Inn by June 1, company president Fred Salgado said.

Salgado said his company will take possession of the Sanford Inn as soon as papers can be filed in Seminole County Court. The title transfer should be complete sometime next week, he said.

On Feb. 13, Holiday Isles, a subsidiary of National Capital Companies, purchased the Holiday Inn on Lake Monroe from Monroe Motels, Inc. The Sanford City Commission granted Holiday Isles a 99-year lease on the lakefront property, completing the deal.

On April 4, the new owners of the Holiday Inn were issued a building permit by the city to begin construction of a $50,000 expansion and remodeling of the property. The remodeling proposes the expansion of dining room facilities, including the addition of a dance floor.

Plans filed with the city indicate there will also be six new cabanas built near the inn on the lakefront. In addition, Salgado said there are further improvements planned for the lakefront property. He said an announcement on those plans would come at a later date.

Salgado said final arrangements for the purchase of the Sanford Inn were completed Thursday with Tim Brumlik, current owner of the motel. Salgado declined to disclose the terms of the sale.

"We expect to have the deal complete no later than next week, as soon as the papers are filed. It will be a Holiday Inn by June 1," Salgado said.

As soon as the transaction is complete, National Capital Companies will begin a "major remodeling" job of the motel, Salgado said.

"Jungle Joe's is going to be gone forever," he said.

The plans call for the redecoration of all the guest rooms and the redesigning of the lobby and restaurant area, according to Salgado.

Salgado said the motif of the dining area will be somewhat "more refined" than the "Jungle Joe" restaurant now located in the motel. He said designers have already been contracted to begin the remodeling concept.

Believer Is Nailed To Cross

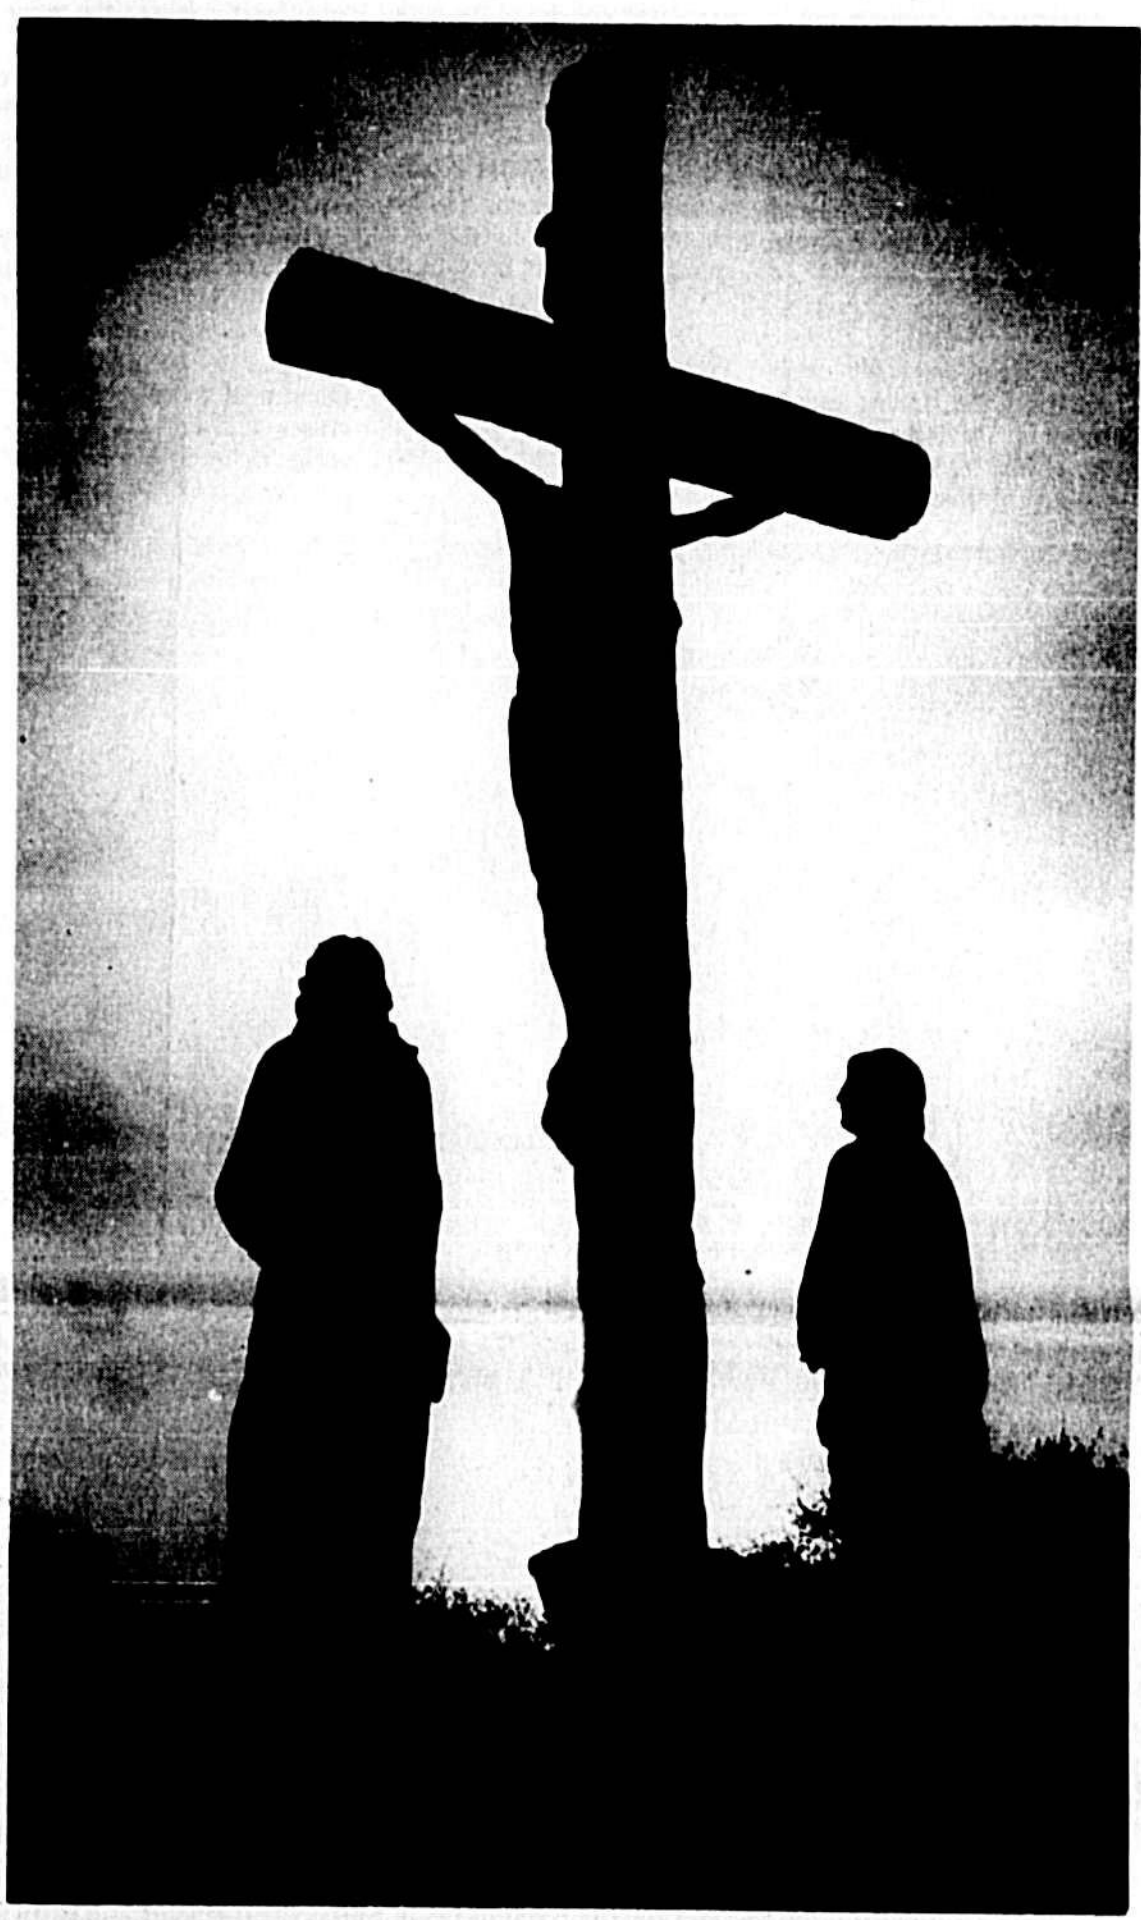

SAN PEDRO CUTUD, Philippines (UPI) — A 28-year old Filipino was nailed to a cross with 4-inch nails today amid tourist mobs who turned a bloody holy week rite into a rowdy carnival complete with colored balloons.

Praying that God would cure his wife of suspected cancer, street hawker Mario Bagtas dragged a heavy wooden cross for more than a mile in blazing heat and villagers dressed as Roman soldiers impaled him on the cross, reenacting Jesus Christ's crucifixion.

The crowd immediately fell silent.

While aloft, Bagtas kept muttering prayers. When some people began to lower the cross as the second minute passed, the gaunt Filipino stopped them with a scream, "Don't, don't take me down."

The crucifixion highlighted the Good Friday observance in this predominantly Catholic

AT THE FOOT OF THE CROSS
This crucifixion scene taken in All Souls Catholic Cemetery in Sanford captures the mood of Good Friday. Special services will be held in many area churches in remembrance of Christ's death on the cross. For a listing of special Easter Sunday services see Religion, page 7A.

Thousands Join In Traditional Easter March

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Thousands of Christian pilgrims gathered in the thousands of the walled old city today to trace the steps of Jesus Christ on his way to Calvary where he was crucified nearly 2,000 years ago.

Men and women carried large wooden crosses at the head of individual groups of Christians from around the world who chanted prayers in Latin and their native languages as they stopped at each of the 14 stations marking the route known as the Via Dolorosa.

Black bereted artillery recruits with M16 rifles and khaki-uniformed Arab policemen with pistols on their hips were scattered along the route of the procession. No violence was reported, but then the tourist attractions of the old city have been the target of guerrilla bomb attacks.

"To have walked on the path that Christ walked when he was crucified on a Good Friday was a very moving experience," said James Heuser, a banker from San Francisco. "We passed one old man who was carrying a big cross and the peaceful expression on his face showed it was worth the pain."

"These are terrible mobs. We can't see anything very well because of the thousands of people," said Virginia Dabney, 78, a retired editor for the Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch.

Tom Fagan, a physician from Portland, Ore., who was taking a Mediterranean cruise, said, "We never thought we'd be here on this day. It's touching in many ways. It's a religious experience that we never thought we would have in this lifetime."

The holy sites of Christianity, Judaism and Islam are so close together that bearded Jews with skullcaps frequently had to wait for the Christian processions to pass so they could make their way to the ancient Wailing Wall for Passover prayers.

The convergence of the Jewish Passover holiday and Easter week brought an estimated 100,000 tourists, including 60,000 Christian pilgrims, to Israel, the government said.

The bulk of the pilgrims packed churches in east Jerusalem and elsewhere in the West Bank to watch the ceremony of the "washing of the feet" — a rite of humility also performed by John Paul II in Rome Thursday. In the cathedral of St. John Lateran in Rome, the pontiff knelt and washed the feet of 12 old, mentally handicapped men in an ancient holy week ritual intended to show all men are equal before God.

Many Local Stores Close

Many area business will be closed Sunday in observance of the Easter holiday. Among those closing Sunday will be J.C. Penney's in Sanford Plaza, Altamonte Mall, Montgomery Ward in Interstate Mall and Zayre, K-Mart, Winn-Dixie, Public and Pantry Price Stores.

Remaining open will be Albertson's, Eckerd's, Walgreen, Super-X and Touchton Drugs on a regular Sunday schedule.

Faust's Drug Store and Medco Discount Drugs, both of Sanford will be closed.

DOT Gets 'HOV' Funds

The Florida Department of Transportation (DOT) has been awarded $40,000 to wage a public campaign concerning the implementation of the high occupancy vehicle lanes along I-4 in parts of Seminole County said Bill G. Gray, a spokesman for DOT.

DOT is proposing the installation of high occupancy vehicle lanes along I-4 from U.S. 192 (SR 530) Occochee County to SR 594 in Seminole County. These lanes would encourage car-pooling and could lead to a decrease in gasoline consumption, DOT officials say.

The Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) met with DOT officials yesterday and awarded it the $40,000 needed to finance a public information campaign for residents in the three-county area where the high occupancy vehicle lanes will be installed, Gray said.

Monday is the "kick off day" for the public information campaign with a briefing session for the media to be held

Gas Pump Changes Due

By GEOFFREY POUNDS
Herald Staff Writer

When gas prices hit $1.00, which some say could happen as early as this summer, consumers won't be the only ones to feel the impact. Service station operators will be required to spend up to $50 per pump in order to convert their meters.

Present pumps have only three windows and thus can compute prices to only 99.9 cents a gallon. When the price per gallon goes over $1.00, four windows will be required.

"At first it looked as though we were going to have to buy new pumps, but they have devised a conversion kit so it will just be a matter of changing computers," said Jim Alford, who owns five Sanford area gas stations.

Alford said the kits are offered for sale in several trade magazines and sell for $200 to $500. He said he doesn't know when he is going to have to make the conversion.

"I know they're (some dealers) sitting on them waiting to begin installation. It looks like that is going to begin a little sooner than I thought," he said.

Predictions of when the price of gas will hit the one dollar mark vary from less than six months to two years. A sample of area prices reveals that unleaded gas, the most expensive, is more than 80 cents a gallon at some stations. The next increase is expected to come next month as the demand rises to meet the needs of summer vacationers, station operators predict.

Prices on the conversion kits average only $20, all industry spokesmen say, but the figure does not include the installation fee. Alford said the procedure to convert the pumps is relatively simple and should not cause a disruption of business. "Somebody is going to do well from this thing," Alford said.

Nationwide, industry spokesmen estimate, the cost of the conversion will be about $22 million.

An alternative to the conversion to four-window pumps would be to switch to a metric pricing system. Gasoline selling for $1 per gallon would cost about 25 cents per liter. But even that measure could cost dealers $50 in conversion costs, industry officials claim.

Layer: Committee Will Establish 'Sex' Ad Standards

By SHARON CARRANCO
Herald Staff Writer

As a prerequisite to adding sex education to the curriculum, the Seminole County superintendent of schools said concerned citizens must approach the media and boycott them, if necessary, until offensive advertisements as well as products advertised are "cleaned up."

She said today to define offensive advertisements, Sup.

William Layer said he and the committee of concerned citizens to be established will have to "review present advertisements and come up with some standards."

About 30 concerned citizens have signed up for the committee to clean up the media advertising and programs they feel are harmful to their children.

But a nationally prominent department store, an advertising agency and the president of the Sanford Business Association don't feel the environment is corrupt with suggestive ads.

Nora Gordon, president of the (SBA) said today the ads she has seen are "generally good" but finds some of the theater ads in the newspapers and on television "that children shouldn't see."

She said that children see these questionable ads in the home and that is where parents must step in to make sure what they see is appropriate for their viewing, Mrs. Gordon said.

"When my children were growing up, I knew the things they were reading," Mrs. Gordon said. "I saw the newspapers. If there were things not for them, they didn't see it."

Peter Barr, vice president of the Orlando advertising agency of Fry-Hammock-Barr, Inc., said the media has done a "good job" on the whole in policing for ads in poor taste.

"The central Florida media has done a good job," Barr said. "There are a lot of markets in the country that haven't done as well as we have in Central Florida. All of our ads are above reproach."

Chris Elsen, manager of the J.C. Penney Co., Inc. in the Sanford Plaza, said he didn't believe any of the ads for the Penney stores were in bad taste. All the ads for the national stores are created and composed in New York.

"I have never seen anything repulsive in our ads," Elsen said. "We have had advertisements but they have not been suggestive in the sexual sense. All of our ads are above reproach."

Layer said he would act as a temporary chairman to organize the citizen's committee but felt it should not be headed on a permanent basis by school personnel. Interested citizens may sign up for the committee at the board office.

Survivors, Buffs Commemorate Sinking Of Titanic

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Some 175 ocean-liner buffs, survivors and one "reincarnated victim" commemorated the 67th anniversary of the Titanic's sinking and paid homage to her glory at a $29.50 dinner and disco dance.

"It was a beautiful ship and its sinking marked the close of an era when those splendid queens of the ocean graced the Atlantic," said Charles Sachs, a self-proclaimed "Titanic fanatic" and president of the Los Angeles-based Oceanic Navigation Research Society.

Guests included ocean-liner buffs to one-time passengers, ranging from a 10-year-old girl who knew more about the Titanic than she did about dolls, to 94-year-old Edwina "Winnie" MacKenzie, the oldest living survivor of the disaster.

Mrs. Doris Williams, of Burbank, Calif., said she always wondered why she feared deep, cold water and felt sad when she heard the hymn "Nearer My God To Thee."

The Vote First, Questions Later

That plebiscite in Iran was obviously something less than a fair test of popular support for the Islamic republic espoused by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Balloting procedures were such that, in the words of one Iranian, "It would take a lot of courage to cast a negative vote."

In some locations, voting was conducted under the helpful gaze of local Islamic clergymen and members of the rightly feared revolutionary committees. Unquestionably, this sort of direct intimidation skewed the plebiscite's outcome. Preliminary returns suggest that the final vote in favor of the republic may total 97 percent or more a figure suspiciously characteristic of the kinds of elections held in Communist states.

This is not to suggest that Iranians would have rejected the concept of an Islamic republic in a free election. Most of what we know of the Iranian revolution so far indicates that a working majority of Iranians indeed favor a republic guided by Islamic law, as revealed in Islam's holy book, The Koran. Regrettably, the ayatollah and his fervent followers were unwilling to risk the relative endorsement of, say, a 70-percent mandate rather than the near-unanimous endorsement they are likely to claim.

But whatever the doubts about the probity of this electoral "choice," the real questions for Iranians remain largely unresolved. What exactly is an Islamic republic and what changes will this new form of government impose on Iran's 36 million citizens? And how many of the social and economic reforms instituted by the shah will be repealed? Iran's women will want to know whether they are to be disenfranchised and relegated to the status of chattel, the state whence the shah freed them during the 1960s.

Iran's farmers will want to know whether the shah's land reforms are to be voided in favor of restoring the vast landholdings of the Islamic clergy. Iran's religious and ethnic minorities are no doubt nervously awaiting word of their fate under an Islamic "republic." Indeed, some Kurdish and Turkmen tribesmen have already taken up arms in an effort to win at least limited autonomy from the central government in Tehran.

The answers to these and other significant political questions are unknown, partly because Iran's constitution is being drafted in secret by the ayatollah's hand-picked committees. The Iranian people have not been consulted on the provisions of this fundamental document.

According to the ayatollah's blueprint, a popularly elected constituent assembly is to consider ratification of the constitution later this year. And because it may be the last chance for the Iranian people to assume a direct role in the formation of their government, we hope these elections are a good deal fairer than the recent balloting.

Lesson: Let's Be Prepared

HARRISBURG, Pa. (NEA) — In the tense days following the nation's worst accident involving a commercial nuclear reactor, none of the institutions responsible for providing guidance to a worried citizenry covered themselves with glory.

Both federal and state officials, the news media and the utility corporation that operates the troubled-plaque generating station on Three Mile Island all failed to properly serve the public during that unprecedented crisis.

By far the most irresponsible was the General Public Utilities Corp., whose subsidiary power companies own the sprawling plant on the Susquehanna River 10 miles southeast of this state capital.

In the early days of the crisis, the company regularly issued deceptive, misleading and inaccurate statements, apparently designed to minimize both the excessive damage done earlier and the potential for far more profound disaster in the future.

As a result, the utility firm was publicly rebuked and repeatedly contradicted by senior officials of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) dispatched from Washington to bring the runaway plant under control.

According to state officials here, several pressure from the White House was used to force the company to cease proclaiming unwarranted optimism.

The NRC hardly distinguished itself, providing often-conflicting information from at least four scattered locations — two different sites in Washington, the generating station here and regional office in King of Prussia, Pa., a Philadelphia suburb.

Spokesmen for the federal regulatory agency variously a) offered technical data without providing any context enabling laymen to understand it, b) claimed they lacked basic information, and c) were unavailable when critical explanations were most needed.

The Community Mental Health Board of Central Florida is mounting a campaign to defeat State Rep. Dick Batchelor's proposal to eliminate district mental health boards.

In a letter sent to "Friends of District Mental Health Boards," Ron Reinhold, president, is urging Batchelor to be written to various state representatives opposing the proposal.

Reinhold says if the move by Batchelor is successful, it would effectively eliminate local citizen control over mental health programming and funding.

Batchelor is saying there is sufficient local control now with citizen involvement and community participation. He has also said, according to Reinhold, that the district boards are ineffective and are composed of "doctor's wives, wives of county commissioners and the county club set."

Reinhold's questions, however, even if true, Batchelor is saying is true, whether this precludes the board members from acting responsibly or effectively.

He says the state mental health association and the state association of county commissioners are actively supporting the continuation of district boards, but support from the community is most important.

The current construction phase at Seminole Community College is scheduled for completion by mid-May. The $10 million expansion project involves the addition of 154,000 square feet onto existing facilities. The project includes the addition of several new shop buildings for the college's vocational program and three floors of classrooms and labs for the library and resource building.

Maintenance and clerical employment opportunities will be created by this expansion.

Seminole County Attorney Nikki Clayton was quick to add her new file on parliamentary procedure has a low priority in her work program after county commissioners wondered why such a file is necessary.

Mrs. Clayton in her weekly report to the board said she has been keeping the file open and including information as it comes to her attention.

One of the commissioners quipped that the board operates under "Robert's Rules of Order."

In another matter, Miss Clayton urged an updating of the codification of the county code be undertaken, noting the code is codified through 1977.

State Rep. Bobby Brantley reports he has filed legislation to designate the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) as the controlling agency over Florida aquatic weed control activities and programs.

The Brantley bill would also permit DNR to "propagate" three U.S. Air Force personnel for spraying the ambassador's plane. Washington did not deny the charges, but suggested the South Africans needed "scapagos" to draw attention from its own explosive domestic scandal.

Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha, in a special television address apparently designed to embarrass the United States, said Ambassador William B. Edmondson's personal Beschert plane was fitted with a high-speed camera for spying sweeps over "strategically important areas of the country."

"It has been established that members of the United States Embassy have been engaged in espionage against South Africa," Botha said. "I am bitterly distressed to learn how South African hospitality has been abused. These actions against South Africa are actions which I would have anticipated from the Russians," Botha said, "but not from the leading Western country."

Commandos Hunt Amin

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — Squads of undercover Tanzanian commandos today hunted for Idi Amin with orders to bring the ousted Ugandan dictator back alive for trial and eventual execution, military sources said.

Neighboring Kenya nervously moved hundreds of troops to the border with Uganda to police the stream of refugees, some high-ranking Amin officials arriving in Mercedes limousines and trucks filled with booty.

In Kampala itself, the national radio urged people to go to church on Good Friday to offer prayers for being saved from Amin, a Moslem. Electricity was restored to the city and witnesses said Ugandan policemen were reporting back for duty, although looting was still widespread.

Fight To Control City

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaragua's national guard says the anti-communist city of Esquel will fall under its control today but Sandinista rebels in the area and its capital said they were successfully restoring government air and artillery attacks.

"We already control 70 percent of the city and we think we can capture it by today," Col. Aquiles Aranda Escobar, the national guard spokesman, said Thursday.

The Sandinista Radio disputed the claim and said, "The city is completely under Sandinista control." The rebels said they attacked the guard command in Esquel at midday Thursday and reported mounting fighting in the afternoon.

Brown Gets Some Privacy

MAHARAJA, Kenya (UPI) — With Easter showers falling, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown and his rock star girlfriend Linda Ronstadt today viewed some of the world's last great herds of wildebeest from the seclusion of their private tented camp deep in Kenya's big game country.

Brown and Ms. Ronstadt fled from the rigors of official engagements and a posse of pursuing journalists Wednesday night and went to a luxurious camp in the Masai Mara Game Park in the eastern portion of the country — a favorite of former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger when he visited Kenya.

One of the commissioners quipped that the board operates under "Robert's Rules of Order."

In another matter, Miss Clayton urged an updating of the codification of the county code be undertaken, noting the code is codified through 1977.

Lietzke, Watson Open Masters Strongly

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — Bruce Lietzke should find holding a lead in the Masters less painful than it was when he won at Tucson, but he seems to feel it's going to be more difficult.

Lietzke explained that after tearing a rib muscle while driving off the 18th tee in the third round at Tucson, he continued playing. "I did take a couple of weeks off after playing hurt, and winning, that Sunday, but may have come back too soon."

Lietzke ran off a string of four straight birdies Thursday, two on tap-ins after putting for eagles, to go six under and inside he would have been better than that "if I hadn't come out of my trance on the 17th hole."

Watson, missing a tie for the first-round lead when he misjudged the wind and put a six-iron shot in the water at the 10th hole, had a first-round 68 to share runner-up honors with Joe Inman, Ed Snod and Leonard Thompson.

Ray Floyd, fresh from his victory at Greensboro, opened with a 70 and defending champion Gary Player had a 71, a stroke better than last year's first round when he needed a final-round 64 to win by a stroke.

Nicklaus, off to the worst start of his career this year, said he was satisfied with his round, claiming "it puts a lot of confidence back in my head."

He's Along For Ride

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — He's as careful with his words as he is with his shots, hardly ever oversteering or over-swinging, so you have to believe Art Wall when he says he's only along for the ride.

According to him, he's trying to make today's 36-hole cut. From the looks of it, though, it seems more as if he's trying to make the kind of showing that would prove to himself, as well as others, he still hasn't lost all of the golden touch which made him a winner here 30 years ago.

"Realistically, I don't think of my chances of winning at all," he says. "All I'm trying to do is make the cut so I can still be around here the last two days."

"Some of the galleries watching the bone-thin, gray-haired former Masters' champ smoke that first tee shot of his for up the hill on the opening hole of this year's event Thursday immediately checked their programs to make sure this actually was 56-year-old Art Wall they were looking at and not some long-hair hitting, hungry young lion like the 27-year-old Bruce Lietzke, who jumped out in front of everyone else with his opening round 67."

"Watching him make some of his shots during a practice round Monday, Gary Player couldn't help but notice Wall's sheer intensity."

"You're one of the greatest tryers I've ever seen," he said to Wall. "You always try. You never give up."

"Four years ago, when he was just a boy of 11, Wall astonished everybody by winning the Milwaukee Open. It made him the second oldest competitor ever to win a recognized PGA tournament."

Byington, Merthie Key Chase To Fourth Win

Clint Byington hurled a four-teeing no-hitter Thursday as Chase & Co. clubbed Cardinal Industries, 13-0, to boost its record to 4-0 in the Sanford Little League.

Clem Leonard Shell gained sole possession of second place with a 3-1 record after defeating Medical Center, 13-6, while the Railroaders posted their first win, 14-4, over First Federal.

Byington fanned five and walked three in holding Cardinal Industries hitless. The game was called after six innings under the 10-run rule.

laughter rate. Dury Merthie again led the Chase hitting attack, blasting a home run and triple. In just four games Merthie has unloaded 10 extra-base hits, including six round-trippers.

Thomas Graham slammed a home run and double and Byington blasted two doubles for Chase. Teammates Jasper Collins, Oscar Merthie and Keith McGriff had one double apiece.

Lee Frederick scattered six hits and struck out eight in pitching Clem Leonard Shell to his win.

Medical Center took an early lead with single tallies in the first and second frames, but Clem Leonard Shell knocked the score at 3-0 with a pair of runs in the top of the third.

Robert Hill led the winners at the plate with a home run and double while Thurin Leggett slugged a pair of singles. Richard Leonard also homered.

Orin Waldo was the winning pitcher in ruler of Donald Grayson.

Grayson had three home runs, one inside the park, and drove in six of his team's 14 runs. Danny Jumpy added two doubles and a single, while Herbert Dixon and Robbie Boyd each had two singles.

Joe Linton had a double and two singles and Central Knight added three singles to lead First Federal at the plate. Tony Gates had a home run and a double and Roger Hall slugged two doubles.

Carl Yastrzemski, Tommy John and Ferguson Jenkins, three veterans who have put in more than 40 years in the big leagues, layed their respective teams to victory Thursday night.

Yastrzemski, 35, hit his seventh career grand slam, doubled twice and singled and scored the winning run on Jim Dwyer's single in the sixth inning, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 13-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

In Baltimore, John, 36, pitched a three-hitter for his second straight victory as a Yankee when he paced the New York to a 6-0 victory over the Orioles.

Down in Texas, Jenkins, 36, pitched a six-hitter over 8 1/2 innings before Sparky Lyle came on to wrap up a 1-0 Ranger win over Cleveland.

Giants Use Luck To Buckle Padres

By United Press International Philadelphia's Roy Roth once made a call for first-base umpire Fred Brockmeyer, who fell down on a knee during the right-field line. Roth ruled for the home side.

"I've always said you have to be a little lucky as well as good to win," the manager said. "The Padres appeared to have been umpired Jim Cooney, who indicated he did not get a good look at the play. Again, rule for the home side."

Phantom's G. Conditto II Dave Parker tripled in one run and John Milner doubled in another in a two-run sixth, leading St. Louis to its first win in four games this season.

The young left-hander threw 100 pitches in four innings, and put himself in a near-constant tussle with six walks, but still combined with reliever Dave Roberts in a six-hitter.

Costumes are unlike usual epics

THIS IS GODSPELL

To see Jesus wearing a Superman shirt may come as a surprise. John the Baptist in a military coat with medals is also a departure from the expected. But, this is not a Cecil B. DeMille Biblical epic. This is Godspell.

Godspell is a musical based upon the Gospel according to St. Matthew and is being presented by the Seminole High School Thespian Society Wednesday and Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Originally produced on the New York stage, Godspell was conceived and directed by John-Michael Tebelak with music and new lyrics written by Stephen Schwartz.

The local production is directed by drama teacher Jane Epps and assisted by Anthony Sutton. Musical director is Bob Maguire.

With Jimmy Miller as Jesus Christ and John Perinchief as John the Baptist, Godspell traces the events in the life of Jesus. The songs are familiar to most and the dialogue is witty and sharp. In this fast-paced show the audience is advised to sit up and pay attention so not to miss any of the zingers tossed out by the cast of colorful characters.

The production also features Scott Arnett, Mari Baker, Brantley Brumley, Tim Brumley, Fred Bukur, Russell Crumley, Debbie Hawkins, Kevin Kelley, Chris Miller, Patti Osborn, Jill Palmer, Colleen Richardson, Kim Sires, Steve Weldon and Eloise Williams.

Admission is $2.00 per person and will be presented at the Seminole High School Auditorium.

Reruns Are Here

Season of Cancellations

By DAVID HANDLER

It's rerun season again. The next five months offer us two basic choices:

(a) Watching limited-run series that weren't good enough to get on the air during the first, second or third season.

(b) Catching episodes of "Vegas" for the second time to ferret out the subtle moral dilemmas underpinning the more obvious haymakers and unencumbered booms.

So turn off your set and go outside. Toss a ball around. Hose down the car. The season is over.

Last year, you'll recall, was the season of titillation. Sex on television blossomed into a heavy weight issue - pungent newsmagazine cover stories on Suzanne Somers deemed it so. They also did a heckuva job on the newscasters.

This season began the same way, until the new batch of leasers like "The American Girl" and "Flying High" crashed in a sea of double entendres and halter tops. No obituaries, however, could be penned on anything else the networks put on crashed too.

If any label can be found for this season, it would be to proclaim it the year of the cancellation. This was a frustrating six months for viewers who still believe in loyalty - it was dangerous to like a show for fear it would be cancelled tomorrow, moved to a new night, revamped or all of the above.

Of the 20 original fall premieres, only a handful of shows survived the season. NBC threw out its entire fall lineup, the only evidence of good judgment the network displayed all season. ABC went all the way with "Taxi," "Vegas," "Mark and Mindy" and "Battletstar Galactica," the latter of which got bumped from the lineup every other week for a long movie or celebrity gain.

CBS stayed with "Paper Chase," "Kaz" and "WKRP in Cincinnati" for a couple of months and then Prime time sports events like the World Series, Monday Night Football and Friday night lights provided fine entertainment throughout the season. Unfortunately, because of poor ratings, ABC will cut back Monday Night Baseball this summer from 18 weeks to 12. But that's still something to watch.

Since the networks are taking an extended station break until the fall that means there won't be much of anything to review. I'll be seeing them. Be back in September.

brought it back. Mary Tyler Moore also came back, but in an entirely different format. The schedule shuffling was the best advertising anyone could have devised for selling videocassette recorders. Even the most tight-lipped viewers began to cry: "Why be a prisoner to prime time TV when you can buy your way out?"

To be fair, there were a few series bright spots. For consistent high quality, I would rate "Taxi" the best new show of the season. "Taxi" is the only show I'll go out of my way to watch because it's the only

Charles Grodin: He Can Do It All

By DICK KLEINER HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Sometimes the problem is that a person has too much talent.

Charles Grodin is a case in point. Maybe if he were just an actor, he'd be one of the biggest stars around today. Or maybe if all he did was write he'd be winning awards and garnering trophies for his scripts. Perhaps, if all he did was direct, he's going down in the film history books as one of the great directors of all time.

But the thing is that Grodin does it all. He acts — most recently, you saw him vis-a-vis Dyan Cannon in "Heaven Can Wait" — and he directs — several Broadway hits and some good TV shows — and he writes — couple of plays and screenplays.

"Warren encouraged me to participate," he says. "I said, 'But you have two directors already.' Warren said it didn't matter, he wanted my input. And he said I had the best manners of anybody on the set, because of the way I made my suggestions and took rejection, when my suggestions weren't accepted."

"I think that Warren's openness to everyone's input tributed.

"Warren encouraged me to participate," he says. "I said, 'But you have two directors already.' Warren said it didn't matter, he wanted my input. And he said I had the best manners of anybody on the set, because of the way I made my suggestions and took rejection, when my suggestions weren't accepted."

"I think that Warren's openness to everyone's input

He thinks doing all three will have certain advantages, however, notably the advantage of not having to spend a lot of energy in persuading people to agree with you. All the people you might have to persuade are yourself.

"But there is a big disadvantage, too," he says, "and that is that each function is a lot to be concerned with. I want to do it all once, to see what it feels like, but I somehow doubt I'll do all three again."

Mostly, lately, he's been just acting. In the last year and a half, he's been an actor in five films. Sometimes, it gets hard to subjugate his writing-directing personality in a straight acting situation.

"I was in 'Sunburn' with Farrah Fawcett-Majors and Art Carney," Grodin says. "Art's been in the business easily 20 years longer than I have. He comes in, does what he's told to do, goes home. I can't do that. I have to present my ideas — although I always present them with deference and politeness, and I won't push or sulk if my idea is not accepted."

On "Heaven Can Wait,"

Shepherd's office mate. As a director, he has made some of the best films for "Saturday Night Live."

Grodin says Brooks (with two others) wrote "Real Life" which is the story of a filmmaker who moves in to do a movie about a real American family. And Brooks also directed it and plays the biggest part, that of the filmmaker. Grodin is the family head.

"He didn't want any recognizable faces," Grodin says, "so he had me gain weight, fix my hair differently and look older."

With these three upcoming films — "Real Life," "Sunburn" and eventually, "The Joy of Sex" — Grodin believes the next year or so will be important to him. Maybe he'll finally break the mold.

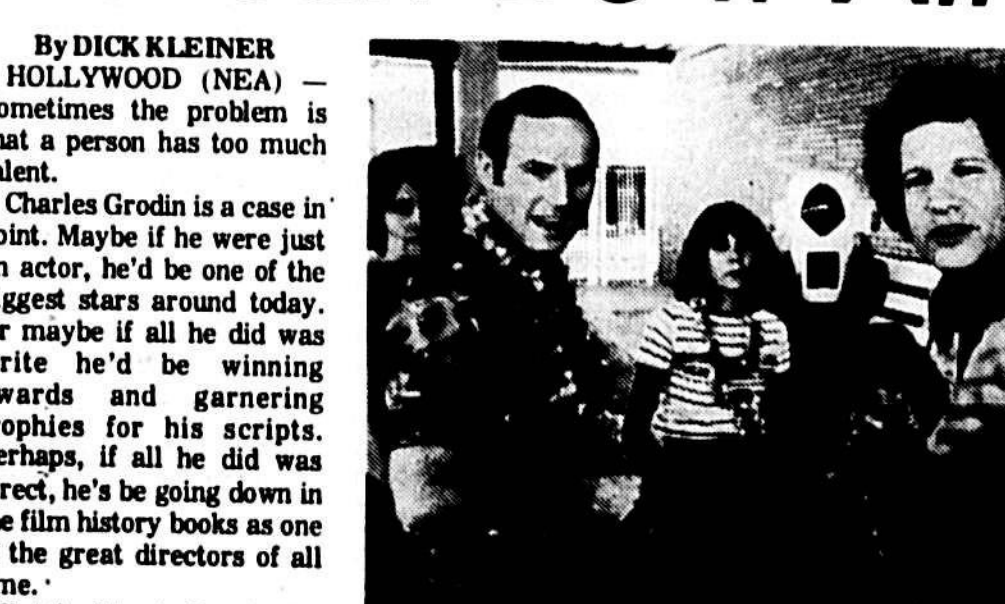

"About two years ago or maybe less," he says, "I realized that I had done a significant amount of roles that had something unpleasant about them. I decided I'd do no more of them."

"You don't want to be always a comic jerk. They may be good parts, but the trouble is if people don't find the part funny, you wind up just a jerk."

All this scramble to accomplish things is not for financial gain, primarily. Grodin seems honest when he says that money is not the object of the scramble.

"I'm living in the same apartment I lived in '77," he says. "When I had literally no money and owed $600. My clothes are all from movies and plays I've done. I drive a 10-year-old Dodge. I have no luxuries, except maybe going out to dinner."

"I'd want to get out and get it. But there's nothing I want."

Ghost Story Based On 'Real' Incident

By DICK KLEINER

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (NEA) — "The Changing" is a film supposedly based on something that happened some years ago in Denver. When the script was written, they changed the locale to Seattle. So, naturally, it is all being shot here in Vancouver.

Scott, Trish Van Devere in movie scene

Michael says there are advantages and disadvantages to filming here. The chief advantage, he says, is that there is no studio to tell them what to do; "this way, I assume all the artistic responsibility."

The disadvantages are that Canadian law imposes restrictions on the venture. They have to employ a certain percentage of Canadian technicians and actors. And there is a cut-off date; if the filming isn't done by that date, the money is taken back.

So director Peter Medak is battling the clock as well as the usual things directors have to battle, like actors and scripts. In this case, he has, he says, a good cast (headed by George C. Scott, Trish Van Devere and Melvyn Douglas) and a good script.

Medak, the director, is a Hungarian-born, English-trained California resident. He says that, although he has been a resident alien in California for 18 years, most of his work has been in London.

"That the entire business has left London," he says. "I want to move to California permanently, but my kids are in school and my wife is an actress in England, so it is difficult."

He says it was havoc when he became involved in "The Changing." He signed on only six weeks before shooting was scheduled to begin, and he prefers having more time. Even so, he says, he revised the script three times and, "I changed the entire plan of the picture."

Medak says it was havoc when he became involved in "The Changing." He signed on only six weeks before shooting was scheduled to begin, and he prefers having more time. Even so, he says, he revised the script three times and, "I changed the entire plan of the picture."

General Public Eats Up Flood Of Dieting Books

By STEPHANIE ZVIRIN

Nobody wants to be overweight, although the fact remains that most of us, at one time or another carry around more excess baggage than is good for us. But why worry? The diet book industry is keeping pace with all our fatities.

Each year, almost like magic, enough weight-loss manuals hit the bookstore shelves to keep us well supplied with ideas — occasionally even a few that work! Check your health out with your doctor, and go to it.

The rage this season — "Family Circle" called it the "no hunger-no hassle" diet is Dr. Herman Tarnower's "The Complete Scarsdale Medical Diet."

Originally conceived by the Scarsdale internist, cardiologist as a simple guide for his own patients, the SMD has now been expanded into book form, and the general public is eating it up.

Basically, the SMD is a practical, three-meal-a-day, low-fat, low-carbohydrate diet designed to be strictly observed for two weeks, then followed by a less rigid plan.

Aside from promises of quick weight reduction, the SMD is attractive in several other ways: it is as suited to men as to women (most diet guides are female oriented) and it demands no tedious weighing of portions and no time-consuming calorie counting.

Predictably, Tarnower allows no fats, oils, alcoholic beverages or fatty meats. Nor does he encourage food substitutions, stressing his introduction that foods have been selected and combined especially to encourage fat metabolism and promote the production of ketones.

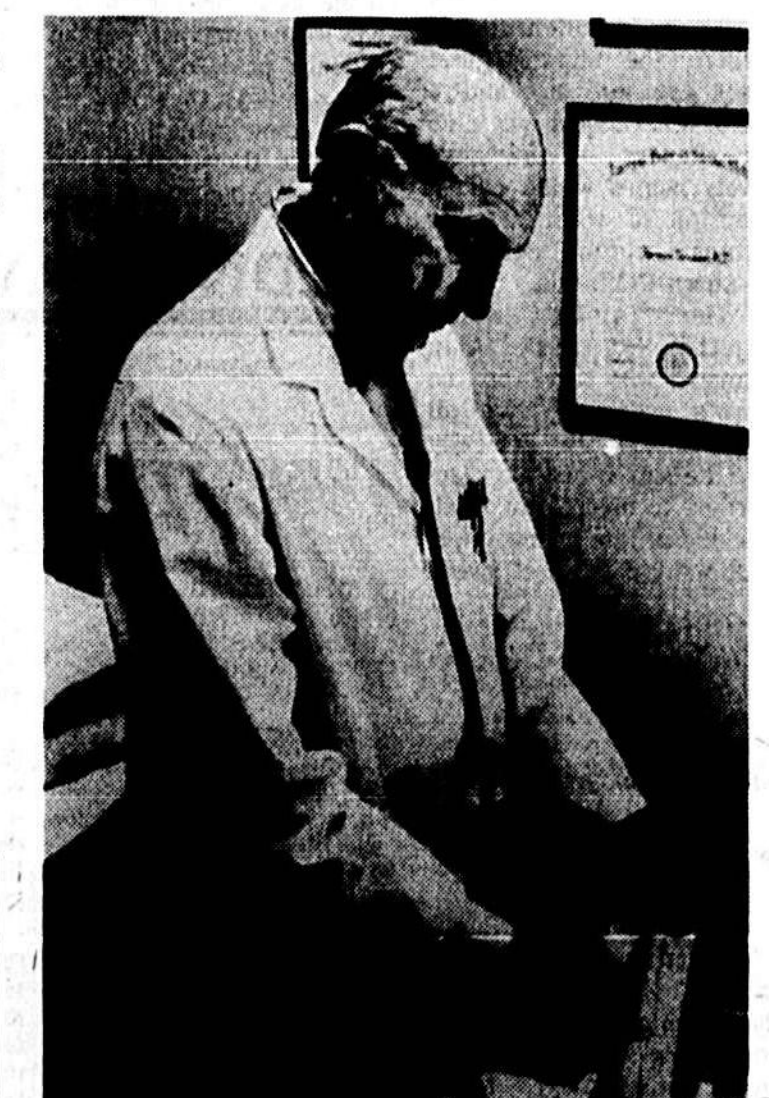

A disciplined attitude toward a weight-loss program is, Tarnower emphasizes, one of the most important ingredients for dieting success.

With "this-is-in" nerve, Lindauer guides dieters toward altering their eating patterns through a simple plan of gradual behavior modification. The recipes which she has scattered throughout seem surprisingly palatable for diet fare, and Lindauer's comments on personal grooming, her keep-that-weight-off outline, and illustrated exercise section add to the book's appeal.

While it is a great deal more flexible in terms of preferences than the SMD — yogurt, milk, cereal and even a limited amount of alcoholic beverages take their places along-side traditional diet foods — calories do count.

Measuring is a must and special information such as the fact that eight ounces of meat eventually cook down to six ounces must become part of the dieter's daily thinking.

Perhaps the most unusual aspect of Gross' regimen is her discussion of fasting, a practice she, unlike many medical authorities, views as vital to the establishment of new eating patterns. Not everyone, however, will want to forego eating completely (For three or four days as she suggests) to lose weight — nor should they.

Charlie Rich At Sea World

In the second of its five-country Style series, Sea World's Atlantic Theatre will feature Charlie (The Silver Fox) Rich and Florida-born fiddler Vassar Clements at 8:30 p.m., Saturday, April 28.

While both artists based their early success on the country sound, both have also made names for themselves in much broader musical spheres.

Clements is known for his at-ease playing with rock, bluegrass and country bands. While he was best known during his early career as a country artist, he became a national musical figure in 1971 when the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band featured him on the album "Will the Circle Be Unbroken?"

Tickets are priced from $2.50 for lawn seating to $7.50 for theatre seating.

Osmonds: George And Olive's Kids

OREM, Utah (NEA) — In the lobby of the sandstone-colored new studio here, there is the bust of a man. It is sitting on a column, as though the bustee were some great heroic figure. Around here, he is.

It's the bust of George Osmond, the father of all the Osmonds, the daddy of Donny and Marie, Jimmy and Jay, Merrill and Alan and Wayne and Biri and Tom and grandfather of 18, who may (or may not) carry the singing tradition into yet another generation.

And down the hall, inside the studio, in one of the rehearsal halls, George and his cheerful wife, Olive, are working like beavers on the next edition of the family's show. Now it's called "The Osmond Family Hour," and it took over from "The Donny and Marie Show" when that began to falter. This one has the whole family involved. Even George and Olive are part of it, and Viri and Tom, the two oldest sons who are hard of hearing and thus don't sing, help out by putting on their dancing shoes.

George Osmond is 64 now, and a happy man. His wife is a happy woman. Their family is successful and not one of them has strayed — either from the straight and narrow or from the Utah environment in which they grew up.

They have rejected Hollywood and, instead, come back here and built a 90,000-square-foot studio on a 38-acre site. It has quickly become Utah's second biggest tourist attraction (next to the Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City) and Orem's second biggest industry (next to U.S. Steel).

The family's TV show is made here, but the studio is used for much more than that. They have made a couple of Osmond movies ("The Great Brain" and "Going Coconuts"), they make dozens of commercials, they've done other TV shows and hope to do other movies.

The reason for the studio's success is, of course, economic. Dick Collatar, the former Los Angeles lawyer who now runs the Osmonds' business here, says they can do shows 12 or 13 percent cheaper here (cost of sets is cheaper, the design of the studio facilitates quicker shooting schedules, they have their own equipment, labor costs less) and the cost of making commercials is a one-third of what Hollywood or New York studios charge.

DEAR DICK: When I saw Tony Orlando's special some time ago I wondered whatever happened to his two sisters that were on his regular show. I missed them. His special just wasn't up to par with their missing. CLIO R. MILLER, Eureka Springs, Ark.

They were called Dawn, collectively, and Telma Hopkins and Joyce Wilson, individually. They are no longer with Tony, and, as a matter of fact, they are no longer with each other, either. From all I can find out, Joyce is no longer in the business. And Telma has turned to acting. She was on the recent "Roots" and just did an episode of "Love Boat." Actually, Telma is under contract to ABC, who are high on her. They are planning to create a series for her.

DEAR DICK: When will the movie "The Shining" be released and who will be playing the part of Jack Nicholson's wife in it? E.P.W. Barnaby, R.C., Can.

That's a Stanley Kubrick film. Kubrick takes his own sweet time and when it's finished it's finished and not a moment before. Warner Bros, who will release it, say they expect to have it out early in 1980, but that's just a hope, not a promise. Blythe Danner will co-star with Nicholson in the thriller.

DEAR DICK: Could you please settle an argument for me? Is Randolph Mantooth's partner from "Emergency" the same as either one of the stars of "Adam-12"? I say they were not the same person. Finding this out would win me a bet if I'm right. MRS. T. MINOR, Tucson, Ariz.

You are now a rich woman. Mantooth's fellow fireman in "Emergency" was Kevin Tighe. The two cops on "Adam-12" were Martin Milner and Kent McCord.

DEAR DICK: My friends and I are having a controversy over the pronunciation of Laura Tewer's name. She stars in "Love Boat." Can you help? JULIE COOK, Kalamazoo, Mich.

It is Law-wren. Oh, you mean the last name! All together now, pucker up and say: "Twice. There, you've got it."

DEAR DICK: I would like to settle a bet. A friend of mine told me that Mikey, the kid on the Life cereal commercial died. It was said he died of eating cosmic candy and drinking pop at the same time. I would like to know if this is true. LEE DEE, Portage, Mich.

That rumor has swept the Midwest. I've gotten a bunch of mail, all variations of the same theme. I have heard nothing to verify it. By the way, what is cosmic candy?

DEAR DICK: Ross Martin co-starred with Robert Conrad in "Wild, Wild West." I still see Conrad on TV regularly, but I can't recall seeing Ross Martin since "Wild, Wild West" ended. What's happened to him? L.J. OSBORNE, Warsaw, Ind.

Ross has been busy, but selective. He's done several good things — TV movies, mostly — and there are prospects for another series. He isn't hurting.

DEAR DICK: I would like some information on Kene Holliday, from "Carter Country." Did he go to Air Force school in 1956 at Parks Air Force Base and was he from St. Louis? G.L., Tucson, Ariz.

Wrong man. This Kene Holliday is a New Yorker, and never was in Air Force school.

DEAR DICK: I am a big fan of "The Hardy Boys." Has the show been taken off the air? I haven't seen the show on TV lately. A.S., Troy, Ohio.

Wrong man. This Kene Holliday is a New Yorker, and never was in Air Force school.

Building An Empire: It's Easy As ABC

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — The man who started the world's largest independent retail liquor business says discotheques are just country clubs for young people.

Jack Holloway says every new ABC Liquor lounge is a disco, even though the bars have catered to blue-collar workers for 43 years. It was not his own idea, Holloway admits.

His son, John, 25, bluntly told him that ABC Liquors' 93 lounges were "old fashioned and have no appeal for young people who are going to discos."

The first ABC discotheque opened three years ago after installation of extremely expensive sound and light days still lingered. He opened Jack Holloway's Friendly Bar, 30 feet wide and 80 feet long, in downtown Orlando.

When he went to the president of a local bank for a loan to open the tiny bar, he was turned down. Holloway said it was not his age, 24, that prompted the refusal.

"Unfortunately, the banker headed the local 'dry,'" Holloway said. "He was shocked by my plan and turned me down. After a while, people got used to the idea."

When he opened a second store, Holloway changed the name because out-of-state visitors had no trouble recognizing his ABC signs as a place where their thirst could be quenched. Liquor was only available in some states at Alcoholic Beverage Commission outlets — usually called "ABC's."

Other tricks that increased profits were:

- single newspaper advertisements that promoted several store locations
- volume purchases at low cost
- broader inventory than competitors
- discounts on featured items

Good location was — and still is — the best sales method of all, according to Holloway. He locates ABC stores on the right side of the road leading away from high employment areas whenever possible. That way it is easier for someone on the way home from work to pull in and park.

"Few people want to buy a bottle of liquor or wine on the way to work," he said. "They might drop it on the street and be embarrassed

Osmonds: George And Olive's Kids

OREM, Utah (NEA) — In the lobby of the sandstone-colored new studio here, there is the bust of a man. It is sitting on a column, as though the bust were some great heroic figure. Around here, he is.

It's the bust of George Osmond, the father of all the Osmonds, the daddy of Donny and Marie, Jimmy and Jay, Merrill and Alan and Wayne and Berti and Tom and grandfather of 18, who may (or may not) carry the singing tradition into yet another generation.

And down the hall, inside the studio, in one of the rehearsal halls, George and his cheerful wife, Olive, are working like beavers on the next edition of the family's show. Now it's called "The Osmond Family Hour," and it took over from "The Donny and Marie Show"

when that began to falter. This one has the whole family involved. Even George and Olive are part of it, and Viri and Tom, the two oldest sons who are hard of hearing and thus don't sing, help out by putting on their dancing shoes.

George Osmond is 64 now, and a happy man. His wife is a happy woman. Their family is successful and not one of them has strayed — either from the straight and narrow or from the Utah environment in which they grew up.

They have rejected Hollywood and, instead, come back here and built a 90,000-square-foot studio on a 38-acre site. It has quickly become Utah's second biggest tourist attraction (next to the Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City) and Orem's second largest industry (next to U.S. Steel).

The family's TV show is made here, but the studio is used for much more than that. They have made a couple of Osmond movies ("The Great Brain" and "Going Coconuts"), they make dozens of commercials, they've done other TV shows and hope to do other movies.

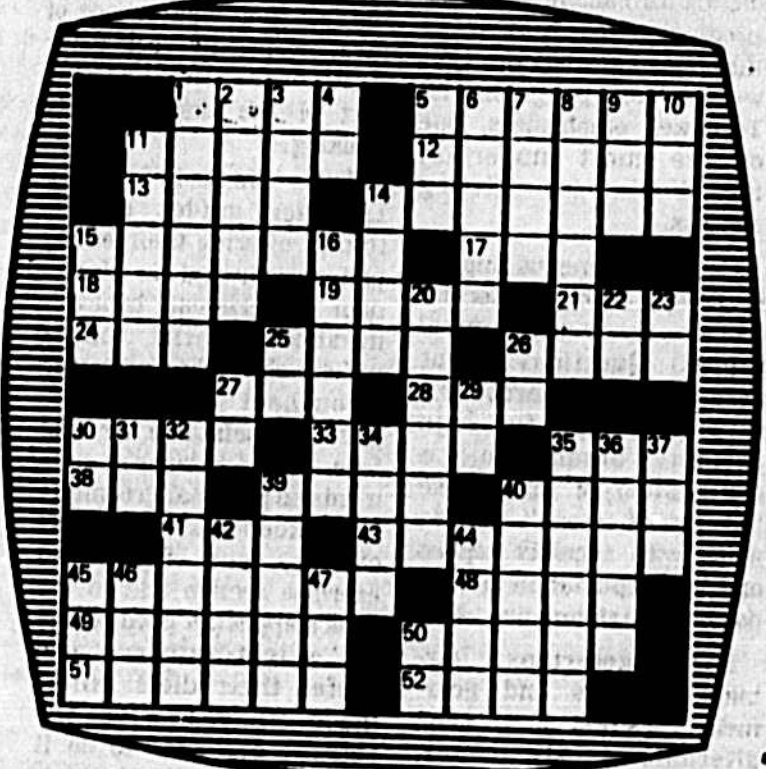

The reason for the studio's success is, of course, economic. Dick Collister, the former Los Angeles lawyer who now runs the Osmonds' business here, says they can do shows 12 or 13 percent cheaper here (cost of sale is cheaper, the design of the studio facilitates quicker shooting schedules, they have their own equipment, labor costs are less and the cost of making commercials is one-third of what Hollywood or New York studios charge.

Some have expressed concern over what might happen to the studio (and to all the local jobs) if the TV show were cancelled. But the Osmonds point out that in 1979, already, they had 44 non-TV-show projects in the studio, so they believe the studio will prosper no matter what happens to the show.

For the family, this is happiness. George and Olive Osmond have their family around them. The children have their work and they like

DEAR DICK: When I saw Tony Orlando's special some time ago I wondered whatever happened to his two singers that were on his regular show. I missed them. His special just wasn't up to par with their missing. CLIO R. MILLER, Eureka Springs, Ark.

They were called Dawn, collectively, and Telma Hopkins and Joyce Wilson, individually. They are no longer with each other, either. From all I can find out, Joyce is no longer in the business. And Telma has turned to acting. She was on the recent "Roots" and just did an episode of "Love Boat." Actually, Telma is under contract to ABC, who are high on her. They are planning to create a series for her.

DEAR DICK: When will the movie "The Shining" be released and who will be playing the part of Jack Nicholson's wife in it? E.P.W., Burnaby, B.C., Can.

That's a Stanley Kubrick film. Kubrick takes his own sweet time and when it's finished it's finished and not a moment before. Warner Bros., who will release it, say they expect to have it out early in 1980, but that's just a hope, not a promise. Blythe Danner will co-star with Nicholson in the thriller.

DEAR DICK: Could you please settle an argument for me? Is Randall Mantooth's partner from "Emergency" the same as either one of the stars of "Adam-12"? I say they were not the same person. Finding this out would win me a bet if I'm right. MRS. T. MINOR, Tucson, Ariz.

You are now a rich woman. Mantooth's fellow fireman in "Emergency" was Kevin Tighe. The two co-stars on "Adam-12" were Martin Milner and Kent McCord.

DEAR DICK: My friends and I are having a controversy over the pronunciation of Lauren Tewes' name. She stars in "Love Boat." Can you help? JULIE COOK, Kalamazoo, Mich.

It is Law-reen. Oh, you mean the last name! All together now, pucker up and say: Tweeze. There, you've got it.

DEAR DICK: I would like to settle a bet. A friend of mine told me that Mikey, the kid on the Life cereal commercial died. It was said he died of eating comic candy and drinking pop at the same time. I would like to know if this is true. LEE DEE, Portage, Mich.

That rumor has swept the Midwest. I've gotten a bunch of mail, all variations of the same theme. I have heard nothing to verify it. By the way, what is cosmic candy?

DEAR DICK: Ross Martin co-starred with Robert Conrad in "Wild, Wild West." I still see Conrad on TV regularly, but I can't recall seeing Ross Martin since "Wild, Wild West" ended. What's happened to him? L.J. OSBORNE, Warsaw, Ind.

Ross has been busy, but selective. He's done several good things — TV movies, mostly — and there are prospects for another series. He isn't hurting.

DEAR DICK: I would like some information on Kene Holliday, from "Carter Country." Did he go to Air Force school in 1956 at Parks Air Force NBase and was he from St. Louis? G.L., Tucson, Ariz.

Wrong man. This Kene Holliday is a New Yorker, and never was in Air Force school.

DEAR DICK: I am a big fan of "The Hardy Boys." Has the show been taken off the air? I haven't seen the show on TV lately. A.S., Troy, Ohio.

Goodbye forever, Joe and Frank Hardy. Yes, the show has been axed, as they say in the TV trade, and is gone from the networks, although a re-run might show up here and there still.

Building An Empire: It's Easy As ABC

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — The man who started the world's largest independent retail liquor business says discounter clubs for young people.

Jack Holloway says every new ABC Liquor lounge is a disco, even though the bars have catered to blue-collar workers for 43 years. It was not his own idea, Holloway admits.

His son, John, 25, bluntly told him that ABC Liquors' 93 lounges were "old fashioned and have no appeal for young people who are going to discos."

The first ABC discotheque opened three years ago after installation of extremely expensive sound and light systems.

"They're like country clubs for young people who can't afford a country club but need a nice place to go for entertainment," Holloway said.

Holloway, 67, began building the ABC Liquors Inc. empire in 1936, when the stigma from prohibition's bootlegging

GOOD LOCATION
A good location was — and still is — the best sales method of all, according to Holloway. He locates ABC stores on the right side of the road leading away from high employment areas whenever possible. That way it is easier for someone on the way home from work to pull in and park.

"Few people want to buy a bottle of liquor or wine on the way to work," he said. "They might drop it on the street and be embarrassed or else they might leave it in their car where it would cook and lose some of its taste."

ABC Liquors Inc. now has 149 package stores. The company has been buying an average of two or three liquor licenses a year. Most of its outlets are concentrated in Central Florida, but stores can be found as far south as Fort Pierce and Fort Myers.

"And we will probably buy an existing chain in Miami one of these days," Holloway said.

Seminole Jail Gets Poor Mark

Inspectors from the Florida Department of Corrections cited problems of sanitation and inadequate housing in the Seminole County Jail following a recent spot inspection.

In a report received by circuit court clerk Art Beckwith this week, FDC inspectors indicated the jail was not in compliance with three recommended standards, primarily as a result of overcrowding at the facility.

The report stated the jail did not meet satisfactory housing standards in that there is no area in the facility specifically set aside for juveniles. Inspectors noted "the overcrowding in the jail makes separation by offense impossible."

Inspectors further said the overcrowding has generated some problems relating to sanitation. The report said the crowding in the cells creates potential health problems, adding "general housekeeping could be improved."

The third violation dealt with the posting of rules and regulations relating to contraband. Inspectors said there was not a written list of those rules visible in the facility.

In addition to the areas of noncompliance, the inspectors suggested the lighting in the cells be improved and that the rules pertaining to prisoner conduct be posted. FDC of Florida said the report would be used to compare progress made by the county prior to the next unscheduled inspection.

The inspection was made on March 27. At that time, the jail log indicated that the population for the month varied from a low of 106 to a high of 128 persons. The facility was built to hold 86 persons.

Since the time of the inspection, the situation has not improved. Sheriff's department records show 123 persons are now in custody. To alleviate overcrowding, the county must detain some persons in facilities in Lake, Brevard and Orange counties.

The problem of overcrowding prompted Seminole County Sheriff John Polk last month to write circuit judges and ask them to discontinue the practice of "weekend sentencing." Some offenders are permitted by judges to serve their sentences two days at a time — from Friday to Sunday — so that they may keep their jobs.

The practice, Polk said, compounds the overcrowding at the jail.

Judge Robert McGregor and Judge Volle Williams defended the practice of the weekend sentencing, and did not respond to Polk's letter. Williams said the problem of overcrowding at the jail is the result of poor planning by county commissioners, who did not foresee the need for a bigger facility several years ago.

Easter Ceremony Recalls Victims

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (UPI) — The parishioners of All Saints Church remembered their neighbors who were victims of recent killings, murders and other tragedies as they reenacted the Stations of the Cross in a Good Friday observance.

More than 200 people joined the procession that wound through the Lafayette section of the city, an area scarred by increasing crime and urban decay.

The group followed a man dressed as Christ as he walked barefoot through the streets, stopping at the sites of recent crimes.

"There have been too many muggings here. We have got to stay together. Everyone is scared to go out at night..." said

Frances Lonsido, who said she has been mugged twice at her front door.

Members of the procession, garbed in period dress, reenacted the 14 Stations of the Cross. Jesus Christ's journey to Calvary Hill where he was crucified.

They stopped at several schools, churches and the sites of recent murders, muggings, a house where a family was displaced by fire and a street where a teen-ager, allegedly under the influence of drugs, smashed his car into a parked vehicle.

The group also stopped in front of the home of Mary Yabuk, an 86-year-old woman who was strangled in her home two years ago. Her assailant has not been caught.

"I hope the murderer's conscience will torture him. I hope he sees this," said her daughter-in-law, Betty Yabuk.

And the Rev. Thomas Olsen, pastor of All Saints Church, offered a prayer for Mrs. McMahon.

"We come to the site of the most recent outrage committed against our community. Today this spot is our Calvary. It was here that Frances McMahon was asked by you, O Lord, to accept a violent death at the hands of a disturbed person," Olsen said.

The group also stopped in front of the home of Mary Yabuk, an 86-year-old woman who was strangled in her home two years ago. Her assailant has not been caught.

Relief Supplies Sent To Island's Volcano Victims

KINGSTOWN, Windward Islands (UPI) — U.S. airplanes today rushed relief supplies to 10,000 people fleeing the spectacular eruptions of Soufriere volcano on the island of St. Vincent, which blasted boulders high into the air and covered the clear Caribbean skies with a blanket of ash seen 100 miles away.

Premier Milton Cato declared a state of emergency and a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman in Miami said a decision may be made as early as today by St. Vincent authorities on whether to evacuate the island's 100,000 residents.

Cato ordered the evacuation of some 10,000 people from villages in a 10-mile radius of the volcano, 30 miles north of Kingstown, shortly after the first of at least three spectacular eruptions Friday.

U.S. State Department officials in Washington said two Vincentian children were killed, possibly as the result of toxic gas. St. Vincent Tourism Minister Hudson Tanner said he had heard of the deaths, but could not confirm them.

The 4,000-foot Mount Soufriere, which killed 2,000 people in 1902, erupted at 5 a.m. Friday, belching clouds of choking fumes and ash that residents nearby said virtually blotted out the sky.

It exploded again at 5 p.m., blasting huge rocks hundreds of feet into the air along with a dark plume of ash that darkened the evening sky over neighboring Barbados, 100 miles to the southwest.

Tanner said the third eruption at about 9 p.m. did not seem to be as powerful as the first two, although he could not see Mount Soufriere from his home in Kingstown.

An official of the U.S. Agency for International Development reported a fourth eruption before 11 p.m.

"This could die off or it could really blow and create a disaster of major proportions," said AID official Brian Moss.

He said all Americans on the island were believed safe and Peace Corps volunteers working in the volcano area had been accounted for.

The Coast Guard in Miami said the 378-foot cutter Gallatin and Dallas and the 210-foot cutter Vigilant were steaming toward the 150-square-mile island along with aircraft from its air station in Puerto Rico.

"If the decision to evacuate is made, we hope to be on the scene ready to begin," the Coast Guard spokesman said.

In Washington, the U.S. Agency for International Development ordered U.S. aircraft stationed in the Panama Canal Zone to immediately fly to St. Vincent with 4,000 cots, 10,000 blankets and cooking utensils.

In Elizabeth City, N.C., the Coast Guard said its C-130 aircraft and pilots were put on alert to assist in any possible evacuation.

The government of St. Vincent, a British-associated state mobilized all island doctors, nurses and police vehicles and designated police stations and other public buildings as gathering points for an island-wide evacuation.

A Barbadian journalist said he managed to drive to within 10 miles of the erupting crater but had to turn around because "the road was totally choked with refugees fleeing the danger area."

Mount Soufriere last erupted in 1971, but its deadliest outbreak was in 1902 when it killed 2,000 people. Two days later, Mount Pelee erupted on the French island of Martinique and killed more than 30,000.

Sex Education View: 'Made Folks Aware'

By SHARON CARRASCO
 Herald Staff Writer

"Regardless of the result, it has made people more conscious of a problem and something should be done about it."

That was the reaction of Elmer Wontenay of the Seminole County Chapter of the Florida Alliance for Responsible Parenting to the school board's recent decision to ban a sex education program in the classroom.

Members of the alliance touched off a heated controversy recently when they asked the Seminole County school board to implement a mandatory "family living" curriculum in the public schools for students in kindergarten through grade 12.

Instead, the school board instructed Seminole County Superintendent of Schools William Laver to initiate steps to develop a proper educational program in sex education with the help of the Medical Association, National Association, health and social organizations and interested parents. The program will be away but we admit it is impossible to do it that quickly," Parker said.

"We want it thought up and done properly," Parker said.

"If it takes a year to do it extremely well, it takes a year," he said.

Parker said he would help develop the sex education program if he is called upon.

Previously, Laver has contended that sex education cannot be taught in the classroom until the offensive advertisement and products in the media are "cleaned up."

Laver is organizing a committee of concerned citizens to define offensive advertisements, review present advertising and set standards.

To date, approximately 30 citizens have signed up to participate on the committee, he said.

"Certainly all of us would like to see something started right

Owning a home has been a dream of Americans for years. And Matt Tuttle, assistant manager of H.I.S. office at the Sanford Plaza symbolizes that dream by accepting the keys to his new home from Stewardson Realty agent, Linda Morgan Tuttle, who moved from Orlando to Sanford will reside at 1267 Randolph St. There's a special significance to his getting these keys: It's private property week April 15-21 and thousands throughout Seminole County are observing it. Now it's all in the special private property week section in today's Evening Herald.

'I'll Eat My Shoe:' And He Did It Too

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — In a college town known for radical politics and bizarre life styles, you have to be really offbeat to attract attention. So on his latest visit, German film director Werner Herzog ate his shoe.

The desert book consumed by Herzog Thursday on the stage of a theater near the University of California had been shredded and boiled for five hours in a sauce of garlic and rosemary.

Herzog had promised to eat his shoe if a friend, Errol Morris, who had never worked on a film, produced a work about a pet cemetery in Napa, Calif.

Morris made the film — and Herzog fulfilled his part of the bargain before 1,000 spectators prior to the premiere of Morris' cinematic effort.

The director told the audience he hoped to provide "encouragement to all who want to make films and are afraid to start. It's a good example."

Herzog, undaunted by his first taste of "sole food," has made another promise. He says he'll eat his other shoe when Morris' film is picked up for distribution.

Marjorie Choquette: No. 1 Rabbit Breeder

This Is A Really 'Hare-Raising' Tale

By JANE CABELLBERY
 Herald Staff Writer

Rabbits have long been the favorite subject of writers... there was Peter Rabbit... and wisecracking Bugs Bunny.

But some bunnies do more than deliver Easter eggs and chomp on carrots and we've discovered a really 'hare-raising' tale right here in Sanford.

These rabbits have won many prizes at rabbit shows and fairs, including the award they have just received at the State Fair at Tampa and the Jacksonville Ragamuffin Show. In fact, they parlayed their winning ways into the title of No. 1 breeder in the state for their owner, Mrs. Marjorie Choquette of 3415 Stevens Ave., Sanford, last year.

Yet they have an even more unique accomplishment to their credit — these rabbits like to swim in the family swimming pool! So don't be surprised if they bring home a medal for their back splash or crawl at the next bunny Olympics.

"I'll sit out in my bathing suit and watch them swim around," said Mrs. Choquette. "They all enjoy it except the Dutch. They don't like to water too well."

"I did notice the Satin rabbit was having trouble with his cost and then I found out it was the chlorine in the water that was taking the shoes out, so I had to keep him out of the pool," she added.

Mrs. Choquette says some of her rabbits are even house broken and are allowed to hop around the house.

She has — at last count — 80 rabbits housed in her backyard. She has several varieties including some new breeds recently developed. There are the Blue, Bechen Rex (It has two colors), Siamese, seven colors of Satin, three varieties of Lop — English French and the new mini-lop, and the English Spots.

The English Spots have to be running when they are judged. It was this breed that first won Mrs. Choquette national recognition. When she went to her first national show in Houston last year one of her entries won the title of Best of Breed for English Spots. She took 20 rabbits to the Central Florida Fair in February and they all placed. She received nine firsts, four seconds, four thirds, one fourth and two fifths — place awards. In the State Fair at Tampa her English Lop took awards for best crested ear, and best of breed. Her Rex was judged best of breed and best white Rex fur.

Last year she also displayed her rabbits in competition in
