Longwood Town Hall meeting

LONGWOOD — Monday night's regular city commission meeting, normally scheduled to begin at 7 p.m., will start one hour earlier this week. The meeting has been moved to allow for a special town hall program, scheduled for 7:30 p.m., also in the commission chambers.

Florida Legislators Rep. Lee Constantine and Rep. Bob Starks will be on hand to give an informative legislative update on activities that took place in Tallahassee during the just-completed legislative extended session.

The City Commission is urging all Longwood residents to be on hand for the discussion at this "Town Hall" meeting.

Gun activist receives award

SANFORD — The Citizens Committee for the Right to Keep and Bear Arms, has selected Robert H. Briggs of Sanford, to receive the Citizen of the Year award.

According to Alan Gottlieb, chairman of the Citizens Committee, "If it weren't for people like Robert H. Briggs, our Constitutional rights would have been eroded years ago."

According to the award announcement, Briggs was selected because of his dedication to the efforts to preserve the right of people to keep and bear arms as guaranteed by the 2nd Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The national organization has over 500,000 members, including over 130 members of Congress serving on their National Advisory Council.

Businessmen indicted for fraud

Three local business associates were indicted by a federal grand jury in Tampa Friday on charges of wire and mail fraud, money laundering, theft and obstruction of justice.

David Rose, 50, of Sanford; Harry "Bill" Marrero Jr., 38; and Theodore Navolio, 57, of Port Orange were arrested by federal and state agents and accused of being associates in Premier Benefit Capital Trust.

According to the grand jury 180 investors in several states were swindled out of $7.7 million.

FBI, Internal Revenue Service and Florida Department of Law Enforcement agents seized papers and computer records from Rose's home and Navolio's office in Lake Mary.

If they are convicted, each of the men could face 45 to 50 years in prison and $1.75 million to $2.25 million in fines.

During a court appearance on Friday, U.S. Magistrate David Baker ordered the three held in custody until at least Monday when they have a hearing on the matter in Tampa.

Splitting the difference

The Seminole County school board has approved for advertising the proposed placement of the students who will live in the still-to-be-built Hawkscrest subdivision in the Lakeview Middle School and Seminole High School attendance zones.

The proposal will be advertised and then brought before the school board for a public hearing before a final decision is made in the matter.

The school district is trying to avoid problems that might be caused after the subdivision, located on Markham Woods Road, is built.

As the current attendance zones are drawn the development would be cut in two with some students attending Seminole and Lakeview and others attending Lake Mary High School and Greenwood Lakes Middle School. In some cases, homes were split down the middle.

Lawbreaking tenants rarely evicted from public housing

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Eviction from public housing is supposed to go along with proof or conviction of drug possession, use or sale according to terms of the lease, but it is a rarely used provision by the Sanford Housing Authority.

"We are in the process of evicting someone now," Linda Williams, director of management explained. The housing authority has to have grounds to enforce the eviction clause. "In this particular case, we have a report she tested positive for drug use, so that is our proof. We don't necessarily need a conviction."

The provision makes the head of household responsible and subject to eviction if drug use, possession or sale can be proven against anyone living there or someone just visiting there.

"The tenant agrees to refrain from, and cause any household member, guest or others on the premises with the tenant's consent, (the) posses-

The housing authority may not have to follow through with the current case because the tenant is reportedly entering a drug treatment program and may vacate the apartment on her own thus negating the need to evict her.

Plan for weapons searches in projects

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Gang-infested public housing could be searched for guns without violating the Constitution if tenants agree, President Clinton said Saturday, announcing a new plan to make housing projects safer.

"We're going to work with residents in high-crime areas to permit the full range of searches that the Constitution does allow — in common areas, in vacant apartments and in circumstances where residents are in immediate danger," Clinton said in his weekly radio address.

"We'll encourage more weapons frieka of suspicious persons, and we'll ask tenant associations to put clauses in their leases allowing searches when crime conditions make it necessary," he said.

"We will empower residents to build safe neighborhoods, and we'll help to organize

Tears shed at Humane Society tribute for dogs killed in fire

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The chorus, dressed in a variety of coats from black to brown to spotted, provided a beautiful song to accompany the memorial service on Saturday afternoon.

Howls, barks and whimpers rose up from around the compound at the Humane Society of Seminole County joyously greeting those who came to remember those who died in a devastating fire a year ago.

Under the trees, about a hundred people dabbed away their tears as a number of speakers memorialized the 73 dogs that died in the fire in which most of the complex was destroyed.

Dogs, many burned and injured in the fire, accompanied their people to the service. Some danced at the ends of their leashes while others sat quietly and listened to the words.

Justice, a large mixed breed, skittered nervously from person to person whom he could reach at the end of his leash. If he ventured too far, his adoptive person would pull him back.

Justice, a survivor of Hurricane Andrew, was living in the Humane Society shelter when the fire struck.

More to this musical yarn

Morning again, folks! We hope you read last Sunday's column because this is really part II of the yarn we've been weaving about a parcel of old timers involved with the Sanford Band mentioned in a previous story about W.J. Thigpen.

So far two of our main "characters" have been Charles F. Haskins and his son Harold. We got about halfway through before running out of space. And, last week we wrote about a lot of people besides the Haskins.

Today we're going to begin with former Sanford Postmaster Harold Haskins and later an accountant with Crown Paper Paper Company.

Physically challenged anglers reel 'em in SANFORD — Ed Wallace wasn't giving away any secrets to how he managed to land a 28 and three-quarter pound fish in Lake Corolla behind the Sanford Museum in Sanford on Saturday.

"I'll be out here competing again tomorrow," he said with a boyish grin. "I'm not telling the rest of them how to catch the big ones."

Wallace is one of 28 fishermen (and women) taking part in the bank fishing division of the Central Florida Paralyzed Veterans of America (PVA) eighth annual tournament in Sanford this weekend.

He and the other bank fishermen will take the total weight of their catches of Saturday and Sunday to determine the tournament winner.

"I think with that (28.75 pound) fish, he's way out ahead of everyone," said tournament director Jerry Daniels. "But you never know..."

Meanwhile, on Lake Monroe, 99 boats with able-bodied captains and paralyzed fishermen went out about 5 a.m. Saturday to try to find the biggest fish they could catch.

On Saturday, both able-bodied and physically challenged fishermen, fished for the heaviest string of eight fish as a team. Cash prizes were awarded to the top winners.

On Sunday the boats will go out again, but only the physically

Ed Wallace landed a catfish weighing just under 29 pounds Saturday to take the lead in the bank division of the tournament.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Former police chief charged with fraud

ARCADIA — Bank fraud and tax evasion charges have been filed against a former Arcadia police chief who claimed he had been unaware his wife's lavish lifestyle was the result of $1.2 million she had stolen from her employer.

Federal prosecutors say the couple bought seven boats, a second house on a lake, 10 vehicles and breast enlargements for the wife over a three-year period.

A federal indictment against Kenneth E. Carlton, who left office last October, and his wife, Kathy, was unsealed Friday. Four years ago, the state attorney's office had refused to charge him, claiming evidence gathered by the Florida Department of Law Enforcement was circumstantial.

"He had a salary, and she had a salary. ... Everybody buys cars," said now-retired Assistant State Attorney Mack Futch.

Mrs. Carlton, who had worked for Turner Realty Co. in Arcadia, pleaded guilty to 252 state forgery and grand theft counts in 1990 and served 17 months of a 10-year sentence.

Even after her plea, Carlton insisted he was ignorant of the theft and even won a referendum to stay in office by a landslide.

Former prosecutor gets prison term

MIAMI — A prominent Miami attorney who once served as a federal prosecutor was sentenced Friday to 15 months in prison after pleading guilty to charges he laundered money for a fugitive Colombian drug dealer.

A. Scott Miller was also fined $14,000 and ordered by U.S. District Judge Federico Moreno to forfeit more than $140,000 in assets that represented drug trafficking proceeds, federal prosecutors announced.

Miller, 45, pleaded guilty in January to two federal money-laundering counts and one count of making false statements to federal agents. He could have been sentenced to up to 20 years in prison.

In his Jan. 12 guilty plea, Miller told Moreno he helped hide thousands of dollars in drug money for his client Fabio Enrique Ochoa-Vasquez, who is wanted on federal drug charges.

In his guilty plea, Miller admitted receiving $42,000 in drug money from Ochoa-Vasquez, which he then deposited in his personal bank account.

Father balks at declaring daughter dead

FORT LAUDERDALE — Patrick Sessions has crusaded for five years to keep the search for his daughter alive and he may fight his ex-wife's efforts to have the missing University of Florida student declared legally dead.

Sessions said Friday he's concerned that if Tiffany, missing since 1989, is declared dead by a judge, it could hinder efforts to continue the search and jeopardize any future criminal investigation.

"If I find out that there is one iota of a chance that it could screw things up, then I'm going to make my feelings known to the judge," Sessions said.

"I'm sure not ready to send a message to the world that I've given up."

Readers speak:

Should kids misbehaving be spanked at school?

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — To spank or not to spank, that is the question.

It was once said, "spare the rod and spoil the child." The Bible says if we use the rod we may deliver a child's soul from hell. Psychologists differ in their opinions. Some say corporal punishment damages a child's spirit. Others say it will control an unruly child when used along with other methods as "time out" and taking away privileges.

What is the answer in an age where domestic violence, child abuse and many crimes against children run rampant? Have the schools gone out of control? Are children testing those in authority or are we respecting their rights? Legislators feel if a child is sent to the principal's office for disciplinary measures then, when the parent is contacted to retrieve the child from school, the parent should be allowed to administer corporal punishment (spanking) on school grounds or other government areas if they see fit.

Many of our readers questioned about this also voiced their ideas about teachers and principals being involved in disciplinary action. Only a few were against spanking altogether.

Ron Sekura said, "We never spanked our child at all and she ended up in medical school."

His wife, Carol, commented, "I think spanking should be used to differentiate between danger and only with small children. Maybe just a slap on the hand would work."

Aynes Patrice stated, "Nobody should touch my child. I don't think it's appropriate to spank a child in public. There are other ways to curb bad children. Under no circumstances should anyone except the parent touch them. Remove them from the situation or use time out."

One response was from people that felt parents should be allowed the option to apply corporal punishment on school grounds but teachers and principals should not be allowed that option. Three people felt spanking elsewhere by the parent was fine but not by school authorities.

Lonnie Hillery

Lynn Patterson said, "If they get into trouble they deserve a spanking from the parent. I don't think principals and teachers should be allowed. They should use 'time outs' only."

Christopher Miller felt, "I'd wait until I got home. Teachers and principals shouldn't be allowed to spank."

Lori Drake said, "I don't think the teacher or principal should spank. I think the parent should be able to spank them if necessary." Tamii Cox commented, "Spanking anywhere other than the butt is abuse. I don't think parents should spank on school grounds. Principals and teachers shouldn't spank unless they have your permission."

One person commented that parents should be allowed the option but didn't voice her views on school authorities.

Patty Thompson said, "I think if someone would have told me I couldn't spank my daughter, then there would be problems. Don't abuse them, spank with a hand and not a board."

Twelve other people spoke out in favor of parents and school officials spanking.

Marilyn Fletcher said, "I think parents should be allowed to spank. I don't think a spanking ever hurt anybody. Principals should be allowed to spank too."

Lonnie Hillery felt, "I feel that law is great. I feel teachers and principals should be allowed to spank I work at a school. I think it would get things under control. Kids seem to have the advantage over parents and teachers."

"Paddling should be allowed in a way that's not considered child abuse," Norma Lundy commented. "When I was a kid we used to get paddled at school and our parents were allowed. I think parents should be allowed to spank on school grounds. I think the child would learn some respect."

Walter Sterling said, "I think parents should be allowed to spank and principals and teachers too, if necessary. It depends on the situation."

Derek Gilchrist stated, "Yes, I feel parents should be allowed to spank. Principals and teachers should be allowed too. It makes the kids respect them. Just get parents' permission."

Robert Parker said, "I'd do it (spank) no matter where they show themselves, no matter what the law says. They need it right when they act up, not later. Teachers and principals should be allowed too. They did it when I was in school and things were fine."

Joan Ann felt, "It depends what the problem was and the teacher situation. Parents should have the option. Principals and teachers should be allowed to spank. The kids feel you can't spank and voice it. I think spanking would help the disciplinary problems." James Hughes said, "I don't have kids but I feel if they deserve it then they should get it (spanking). They spanked me when I was in school. It certainly was a deterrent."

Ann Pinnix stated, "If it's something the child did that was bad then parents should be allowed and discipline."

Stephanie Dickerson said, "It's fine with me. With parents' permission school should be allowed to spank. I think it might help the disciplinary problems."

Harvey Francisco said, "I think kids today think they can do anything. I think parents, principals and teachers should be able to spank."

Cornelius Green concluded by saying, "I think parents should spank. When I was little we were taught to respect all people. People other than my parents spanked me. Parents should chastise their kids. If they don't then they don't love them, the Bible says so."

Editor's note: Seminole County schools do not use paddling by a school authority as a disciplinary measure.

He married a young lady of Swedish descent, Helen Malm. They parented three children — Harold C. Haskins Jr., Clara Haskins Sauls and Hamel Tolar Haskins.

Last week's yarn started with a simple question: "What was the first name or the initials of the bandmaster of the Sanford band in which Thigpen was a clarinetist?" Harold Haskins Sr. was also a clarinetist in the band. From there most of last week's "characters" were musically inclined and it'll continue in this episode.

Harold Haskins, Jr.'s grandson sings with the Yale Men's Glee Club. Clara's son, John Jr., played clarinet in the SHS band, saxophone in the Florida Gator band and is now Tusculwilla Middle School's band director. John Jr.'s daughter played trombone in the SHS band and won the John Phillip Sousa Award. John Jr.'s son Erik plays tuba and is the current president of this year's SHS band. He plans to attend the University of Florida and play in the Gator band. If he graduates, he will be the fourth generation in the John and Clara Saul's family to graduate from the University of Florida.

Harold Haskins, Sr. graduated in 1898 in a class of six at age 17. Before that he graduated from Rollins College. He attended both schools on scholarships. What is really interesting is that he commuted from Sanford to Rollins on his own little handcar which he called a velocipede, using the main line of the ACL railroad. From time to time he would pause for a dip in an old "swimming hole" which later became better known as SanLando Springs.

Hamel Tolar Haskins plays guitar and lives in the house in which he was born at Sanford Avenue and 21st Street. He was named for Dr. Julian Nolly Tolar's brother, Hamel.

He was one of five children of Mrs. Joseph Tolar, a lovely lady who ran a boarding house in Sanford. The five youngsters, in addition to Nolly, were Ernest, Hamel, Alie and Loretta who is also believed to have been called Mary. Ernest was a locomotive engineer and lived across the street from the family of B.L. Perkins Sr. on Magnolia Avenue. His wife's name was Eva. His daughter, Mary Elizabeth Tolar Nance, taught piano Hamel was a banker and married Iva Malm and they had two daughters — Emma Louie Echols who married Claude Echols and Elsie Bryan Tolar who married a Baldwin.

Alie Tolar was a young man when he was killed while working for the ACL. Loretta Tolar married Thomas Augustus Brotherson Jr. Brotherson who was the father of Tom Brotherson who later worked for Hill Lumber Company, and Ernest A. Brotherson who was employed by Hill Hardware.

Finally, there was Julian Nolly Tolar, one of Sanford's beloved physicians, who married Lilla Mae McIntyre. She was the aunt of Mimi Persons who married the late optometrist Dr. Charles Persons. Dr. and Mrs. Tolar had a son Ralph who played trombone in the Sanford Junior High and the Seminole High School bands.

Quite a number of Sanford people were named for Dr. Tolar. Among them are Dr. Julian Baumel, son of fashion shop owner Sayde Baumel and a member of the SHS graduating Class of 1940; Julian Murphy; Nolly Trawick; Nolly Nance, an architect now living in Palm Harbor; Nolly Dunn and your columnist, Julian Stenstrom.

Many Sanford old timers will remember the familiar Frank Pavlick, a World War I hero and later the owner of Frank's Tavern. His untimely death in 1949 shocked many of his friends in this area. Frank's photo appears with this article. He was born in 1900 at Pilsen, Bohemia. He migrated to Cleveland, Ohio with his folks in 1907. Even before World War I he enlisted in the U.S. Army cavalry and served under General John J. "Black Jack" Pershing near El Paso. His troop became a part of the Third Division field artillery and went overseas in 1918 when this country entered the European conflict. There he was presented the Croix de Guerre by the French government for heroism during the Battle of the Marne. In this engagement both sides suffered the greatest number of casualties than any other in World War I.

He came to Sanford in 1942 and lived at 107 West 10th Street. His tavern was at 114 North Park Avenue, across the street from Eddie Langotti's Valdez Hotel restaurant. Frank became a very popular individual around Sanford. He had just returned from a state American Legion convention in Sarasota when he became ill and died.

Frank was survived by his wife Alice, his mother Marie and daughter Frances. Pavlick treasured a living cup awarded to him by a group of Marines stationed at the Sanford Naval Air facility during World War II.

Old timers will recall Pershing went on to become the commander of all the American

Frank Pavlick

Expeditionary Forces in Europe during World War I and became this nation's first "General of the Army." Pershing was the only U.S. Army general so honored until the rank was conferred upon General Dwight D. Eisenhower after World War II along with General Marshall and Bradley.

Armed robbery

Sanford police are investigating the armed robbery of a restaurant Thursday, in the 2400 block of S. French Avenue. According to the incident report, a man was sitting in his vehicle outside the restaurant, when he said four black men approached him with a gun and demanded he leave the vehicle and enter the restaurant. After gaining entry, police said the man, armed with what was described as a shotgun, made the man and a restaurant worker lie on the floor while they stole an unreported amount of money. The men then reportedly escaped in one of the victim's cars. Police said they later found the vehicle parked in the 400 block of Poplar Avenue. Police said each of the men was described as wearing dark jeans, dark colored shirts with hoods, and wearing ski masks.

If you're interested in hopping aboard the Information SuperHighway, then for now you'll need a computer.

Someday, you'll be able to do all sorts of wonderful things from your household communications center: watch television programs or movies, talk to and see people from all over the world, shop, work. But for now, the highway is, well, under construction. You can do different things using different things, but they haven't come together yet. The first true highway access now is by way of a computer. We'll discuss those other roads another time, but for now, let's take a look at the basics of computers so if you decide to hop aboard, you'll have the knowledge it takes to get you at least a step beyond "I want to buy me one of them there computers."

By the way, if all this seems scary, don't worry. Computers are little more than complicated toasters. You don't have to understand how a toaster works, but as long as you put bread in and get toast out, who cares! And as long as you follow two or three simple guidelines, it's pretty unlikely you'll screw up anything. We'll talk about the "Don't Dos" in about a month.

What are all those numbers?

Home and small business computers come in two styles, PC and Macintosh. PCs, which cleverly stands for "personal computer" (see how easy this is so far?) used to be made only by IBM, but now everybody and their mothers are making 'em. Macintoshes are made by Apple, nobody else.

We'll concentrate on PCs, because Macintoshes, for the most part, are package deals. You buy a Macintosh Quadra 605, you get one setup, you buy a Power 8100, you get another. PCs, however, come in a multitude of setup options which make a great deal of difference in the price you pay and the performance you get out of them. We'll help you get the most bang for the buck.

The brain of the computer is the microprocessor, a really complicated little black chip (literally) that costs a lot of money. Most chips for PCs are made by Intel and have cryptic names like 486 DX-33 and the like. Most Macintosh chips are made by Motorola and have cryptic names like 840-AV.

Here's all you need to know: the higher the number, the faster and more powerful and more costly the machine. A 486 PC is faster than a 386, but slower than a 586 (really called a "Pentium.") A 33 megahertz machine is faster than a 25 MHz machine but slower than a 50 MHz. The faster the machine, the more you pay.

Congratulations, you now know more about computers than about 99.99 percent of the human race.

Really, the higher the number the more stuff happens at the same time. By the way, the numbers are actually truncated versions of the actual processor type, which would be a 80486 or a 80386. Nobody uses all five numbers, forget the first two. Also, according to Harry Ellis, owner of Ellis and Associates in Sanford, expect to pay about $75 to $100 for each step up the numerical rung.

One other note, most PCs come in DX or SX. An SX is good enough for most home uses of a computer, but a DX performs math and games faster because it's got a "math processor." It also costs about $75 more than an SX.

Ellis says a basic 386 SX-40 machine will cost about $1,200. A basic DX-33 machine now costs about $1,500. I paid $2,500 for one a year ago, go figure.

Similarly, with Macintoshes, a basic Quadra 605 system will cost you about $1,600, says David Dean, salesman and purchasing specialist at MacUnlimited in Casselberry. A basic 840-AV will cost about $3,500. A basic Power 8100 will cost about $2,300 and a basic 8100 will cost about $4,500.

A word about computer store salesmen, even the most patient ones will sneer at you if you ask for something like "I'd like to see a personal computer based on the 80486 chip with a math co-processor running at 50 megahertz." Computer salesmen are a surly lot despite their corporate haircuts and white shirts. But if you look at them indignantly and say "Show me your 486 DX-50s," they will snip to and offer you coffee. It helps to be ruthless.

Thanks for the memories

Here's all you need to know about memory: the more you have the better everything works and, again, the faster they work — and as you're probably beginning to figure out, the more the computer costs. A basic machine should have 4 Mb of memory, a better one has 8 Mb. What's a megabyte? A really big sandwich. Ha-ha. Tell that to the computer salesman, but please, don't tell them you read it here.

Anyway, a megabyte is about a million bytes and a byte is the amount of memory it takes to store a single space or number. If a million spaces sounds like a lot of memory, it isn't. When you consider the typical program these days takes up 5 or 10 Mb, you begin to get the picture. Actually, computers, with magic, can work with lesser amounts of memory but they work slower. A Mb of memory costs about $50. You figure it out.

Slipped disks

A computer's "hard disk" stores the machine's operating programs and software you shove into it. They stay inside your computer and you never see 'em. The bigger the better and once again full together now! The more they cost. About 100 Mb (remember megabytes?) is decent. About 250 Mb is a good idea. You'll pay about $1 per megabyte.

A computer's "floppy disks" aren't floppy, but you can stick 'em in and take 'em out (that is, if you didn't put it in upside down!) A basic machine has one or two of them, sometimes of different sizes. Arrghhh! Floppies are what you store stuff on, like Junior's homework. Also, software comes on floppies.

Pretty pictures

That TV-looking thing is called a "monitor." You need one of 'em. A 14" color SVGA is standard for a PC and a 14" High resolution color monitor is standard for a Mac.

Paperless typewriters

For now, you need a "keyboard" to talk to your computer. A basic system will have one. There's not much to know about them "Null said.

Eeek...

A "mouse" is a hand-sized thing with buttons and a wire leading to your computer which you roll around to make things happen in your computer. You don't need one, but most PCs and Macintoshes use them. They're usually included in a basic package.

...on the world

Make sure your PC comes with "Windows," which is a snazzy "graphical user interface." Without it, you'll face your computing life typing things on a black and white monitor such as "load c:\subgm\war.ba". Wouldn't that be awful? Windows is a system with a bunch of little pictures and "drop-down lists." With a click of the mouse button on one of them, things start whirring around inside the machine, programs start, run, disappear or do whatever you want them to do. Macs come with a similar GUI, which served as the model for Windows. It's a small, frightening world.

Other stuff

Printers are typewriters that a computer uses. A "dot matrix" printer costs about $175 and up, says Ellis. A fancy laser printer costs $500 or more, says Dean. You may not start out with a printer, but you'll probably add one later. Also, color dot matrix printers cost about $100 more than their black and white brothers.

Sound cards are internal things you never see, but make the sounds coming out of your computer sound something like a transistor radio instead of a paper cup with a string on it. A basic setup should have one. Make sure it does.

The latest computer craze is CD-ROM drives. Buy one. For an extra $140 to $250, you can put an entire encyclopedia complete with talkin' movin' pictures in front of you. You can play musical CDs on your computer. I've got a CD ROM which has 10 million telephone numbers on it which I look up by name, city or ZIP CODE. Make sure your computer has a CD-ROM drive. You'll thank me.

A modem has a weird name, but make sure your computer has one. It's a $50 to $150 thing you'll probably never see which allows your computer to talk to other computers via telephone lines. Without one, you won't even get that shiny new computer out of the garage let alone merge onto the information highway.

That's about it. And it wasn't so bad was it? For less than $2,000, you can have a fairly decent new computer which does more stuff than you can imagine. A used computer will

Impoverished community held prisoner

Many streets are named in keeping with people who lived there or owned land on which they are located. One local area however, has several streets named after conditions.

When a community has streets named Ruff Road, Rut Street, Water Street and Muddy Lane, you wouldn't be wrong if you imagined an area in very poor condition.

Such a community is Midway. It is located in the county, just east of the Sanford city limits and north of S.R. 46.

More than half of Midway's 9.8 miles of streets are unpaved. Whenever rains fall to any extent, many of the streets become flooded, as do some of the homes. Improper drainage has been a hazard and health problem for decades.

It is estimated that 64 percent of the 665 residences in Midway are occupied by families earning very low incomes, less than $20,000 per year. 72 percent of the units are assessed below $25,000, which means no property taxes are paid.

Because many of the people in Midway cannot afford better housing, they have to remain there, and put up with the conditions.

In August of last year, Seminole County formed a 26 member Midway Task Force. They were charged with looking into the community, identifying needs, and making recommendations. They have now submitted their findings.

Because of the poor conditions, the task force has suggested it would cost $5 million in drainage improvements, $2.5 million in road improvements, and another $2 million in installation of an adequate sewage transmission system.

These were determined to be merely basic needs. Midway requires much more. Suggestions were also made in helping provide better education, job training and recreation.

Last week, the task force made a presentation to the Seminole County Commission on its findings. The commission agreed that this is a problem and needed serious consideration.

Some funds are to be allocated toward improving Midway. The amount however, is not sufficient to do any major problem solving. Much more will be needed.

Efforts will also be made toward applying for grants and other financial assistance. Each of these will take time.

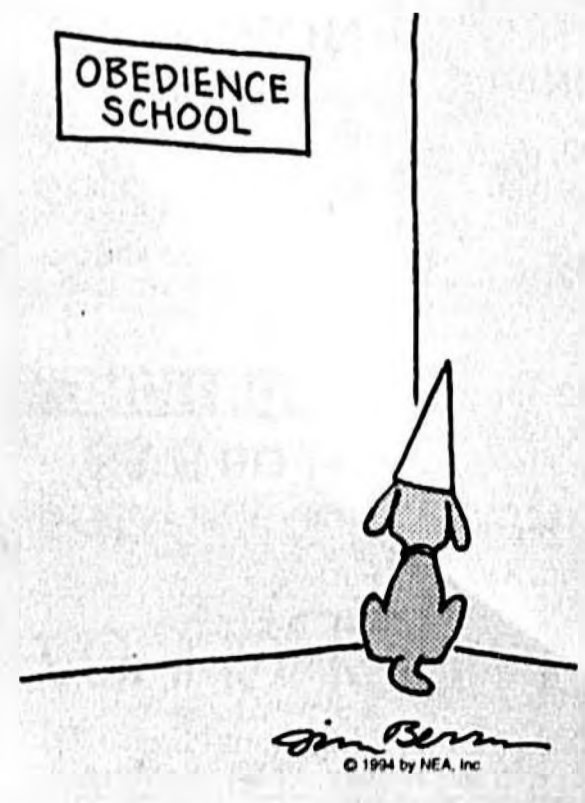

The rebuilding of the Midway community cannot be done immediately, or within a year. It is going to take many years.

In the meantime, we applaud the work done by the Midway Task Force so far. We urge them to continue pursuing the needs of the community, and work diligently toward seeking ways with which to pay for improvements.

It would be nice to change those street names, and no longer have to call them Muddy, Rut, or Ruff.

Abuse: Most times all in the family

The majority of people who are murdered are not the victims of strangers, but rather, of an acquaintance. Sixteen percent of the time, the acquaintance is a family member.

Richard Gellis, director of the Family Research Program at the University of Rhode Island, estimates the medical costs and economic loss related to family violence is between five and 10 billion dollars annually.

The number of women physically abused during their lifetime range between one-fifth and one-third of the population. Violence at home is the direct cause of 25 to 50 percent of the homeless families headed by women. Women who are divorced, separated or otherwise estranged from their partners are at the highest risk of assault. Half of the murdered women in America are killed by a current or former partner. Women commit about eight percent of all homicides in the country and 51 percent of these homicides are against partners with a history of wife abuse.

Even during pregnancy, abusive male partners continue their abuse. The younger the women, the more likely she is to be abused. About 37 percent of women are abused during pregnancy with kicks and blows aimed at their abdomens.

Children are the most helpless and the most vulnerable victims of abuse. The abuse is not only physical, but also psychological. This is particularly true because children look to the adults in their lives for unconditional love, nurturing, acceptance and security from harm. Instead, the adult caregivers become the real threat to the children's psycho-social development and survival.

SEMINOLE

In a recent year, nearly one million children were harmed as a result of abuse or neglect. During that year 1,100 died from abuse or neglect. Caregivers were responsible for the sexual abuse or rape of 40,000 children.

Children growing up in families where abuse and violence are a regular agenda item are prevented from developing socially, emotionally and mentally as they should. There is, generally, an inverse relationship between high self-esteem, performance on standardized tests and harmful childhood experiences.

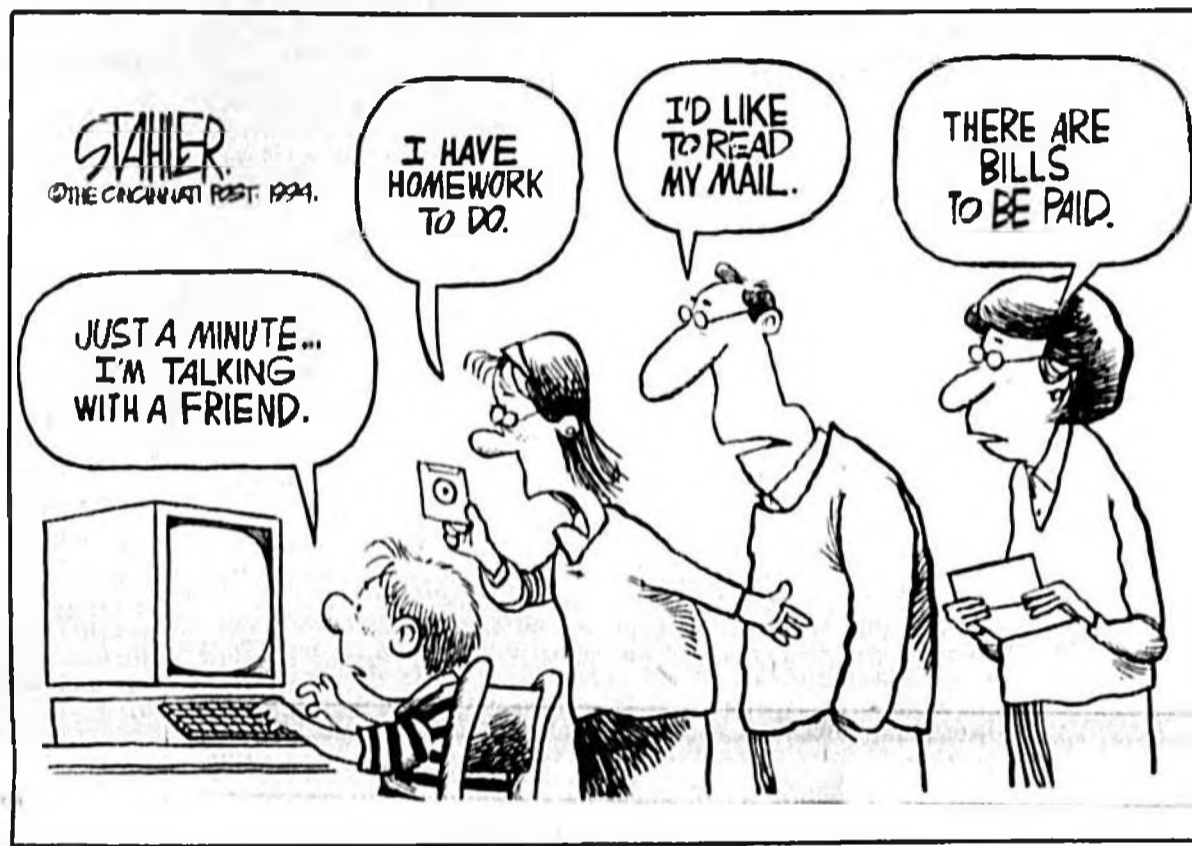

Social and psychological problems rooted in violent abusive family relationships leave scars on family members. Battered women may turn to drugs and alcohol to escape their physical and emotional pain. Statistics indicate that half the female alcoholics are battered women. In addition, the likelihood of them becoming drug abusers is nine times greater than women in the general population. Suicide is often considered by 35 to 40 percent of the battered women.

Child abuse was medically recognized in 1961 as the "battered child syndrome." In 1990 investigations confirmed 1.5 million cases of child abuse and neglect. Nearly 10 million children under age 18 are affected by the substance abuse of their parents.

Shaken Baby Syndrome (SBS) is the term applied to the injury that occurs when a young child's head is whiplashed back and forth during shaking. A baby's neck muscles aren't strong enough to control his/her head movements. The rapid movement associated with shaking may result in the brain being bruised from banging against the skull wall. After a severe shaking episode, the baby may have seizures, be partially or permanently blinded, suffer paralysis or mental retardation or bleed behind the eyes and brain, resulting in death.

Friends, relatives or anyone aware of abusive families should encourage them to seek help. This might start with contacting a minister or counselor with agencies in the community that provide family therapy.

Journalists sink to new depths

I dressed in black to write this column. I did it because I am mourning the impending death of an honorable trade.

I speak of journalism (OK, so I should have said a reasonably honorable trade), with which I have been associated for nearly 30 years. It used to be a vibrant, noble thing in my eyes, now it has deteriorated and I fear for its survival.

Perhaps the word death is too strong.

Maybe I should say I am mourning the devolution of my business. And, as in all devolutionary processes, it has degenerated by degree. From the heady days of Watergate, when I participated in the worthy endeavor of deposing the evil Richard Nixon, through the trashing of Clarence Thomas, to the terrorizing of Bill Clinton, we have retrograded a long way, baby.

It used to be a vibrant, noble thing in my eyes; now it has deteriorated.

If you're thinking there he goes again with his alibis for Bill, you're wrong. I think Clinton is a major improvement over Ronald Reagan and George Bush in a lot of ways, but I don't have strong feelings about him. Indeed, the central theme in his governing philosophy -- spend, spend, spend -- utterly turns me off.

Nor am I about to argue the press lacks objectivity, which it does, but that is irrelevant. What I am contending is that we have lost sight of the bedrock axioms to which our business was bolted: Fairness, accuracy and responsibility. They are no more.

Fairness? Time magazine's cover of April 20, 1992, featured a photographic negative of Clinton the candidate that made him look like he had consumed a radioactive moon pie. Time's cover of June 7, 1992 -- less than five months into his presidency -- featured an itty-bitty Bill starting up at the words, "The Incredible Shrinking President." Time's cover of April 4, 1994, featured a distraught-looking Bill Clinton and aide George Stephanopoulos apparently pondering their Whitewater woes.

If you've been following the news, you know the truth by now: The photograph had nothing to do with Whitewater. It was an official White House photo taken last November during a scheduling meeting. Other people in the picture had been cropped out. Plain dealing people might regard this as deception, but not the folks at Time. "I don't think the readers of Time expect the cover photo is going to be a representation of that event," a spokesman told the Washington Post.

I say with absolute certainty that in all my years as a journalist, I have never heard an agent of the mainstream press make such a patently absurd, breathtakingly stupid statement.

Accuracy? In late March, Newsweek accused Hillary Clinton of profiting from a "sweetheart" commodities deal in which she had put up no money of her own. The magazine even issued a press release to flaunt its "exclusive." There was just one problem: It was wrong. Hillary had invested her own money -- albeit a small sum relative to the profits reaped. Newsweek had not called the White House for comment before going to press.

Responsibility? When Jennifer Flowers called a press conference to make the uncorroborated claim she had once been Clinton's lover, CNN carried it live. When two Arkansas state troopers with suspect histories charged, without substantiating evidence, that they had helped arranged trysts for Gov. Clinton, CNN carried the story without any apparent effort to confirm it.

LETTER

Former volunteer speaks out on Humane Society

My name is Norma Spivey. I have been involved as a volunteer with the Humane Society of Seminole County since April 1990. I have served as a board member, treasurer, operated the thrift shop, volunteer director, fostered animals. I cleaned out and dog crates, fed puppies, kittens and did fund raising.

I first became involved when I met Diane Albers and she begged me to take home to foster nine newborn puppies over the Easter holidays. When my daughter and I got home we discovered Diane had smuggled a tenth pup in the basket. That puppy has been a member of our family ever since.

I have worked hard and although I have not always been in agreement with the policies and/or board decisions, I continued to keep one thought in mind. I was doing this for the animals. That's why I was there!

Finally, on July 28, 1993, I had no choice but to resign from the board and as a volunteer. I could no longer go along with the board's actions. I have stayed away from the shelter and the board except for attending two meetings since then.

I went to the shelter on Feb. 6, 1994 to check and see if the complaints that I was receiving about Carter and Molly, the shelter mascots, was as serious as I had been told. Let me preface this by telling you a little about Carter. I have known Carter since he was three weeks old. I met him at the same time I met Diane Albers. He had arrived at the shelter at four days of age with eight brothers and sisters, five brindle, and four fawn. Mrs. Albers saw them the day she went for her first interview. When she returned four days later only four fawn pups were left. We found out that the five brindle pups had been euthanized as unadoptable. Diane and I fought many battles to keep these remaining pups alive and adopted into good homes. Carter stayed behind, yes, he had demodectic mange but after the initial treatments of dip we finally were able to get him on a new medication and it was working. This medication was paid for by a dog food company that had seen Carter at the shelter when their representative was visiting. When Diane was laid off in September 1992 he weighed 90 pounds and had a beautiful golden fawn coat. Likewise, he and Molly were in great condition when I left the shelter in July 1993. Carter and Molly lived in the offices of the shelter. They ran and played in the morning and in the evening when the shelter was closed and during the day were walked by volunteers. They greeted new animals and visitors to the shelter and went out on fund raising activities with us.

On February 6, 1994 when I went to the shelter, I found Carter and Molly living in a run. Carter had been dipped again, though his medical cards said no more dips. They claimed they could not find his medical cards. He had little hair on his body; he had large clusters of sores on his neck and shoulders and his feet were bleeding. With tears in my eyes, Cindy Milburn and I began to apply vaseline (given to me by an employee) on his bleeding sores and feet to try to soothe them.

Mr. Black came out and began yelling at me! What are you doing in that run with those dogs? Before I could even answer him, he said "Don't you know those dogs could maul you?" He never gave me a chance to even answer him, never mind scream profanities at him, as he was quoted. He then began yelling at Joy Mears and backing her up and yelling that he was an ex-police officer. Carter has been at my home and has even slept in bed with my son, and now he's going to maul me? I went out to my car as I was so upset with the lack of care not only for Carter and Molly but the other animals I saw there.

Mr. Black came out and invited Joy and myself into his office where we were shown letters and had what I thought an enlightening and constructive conversation. He invited us to return to fund raise.

For this I received a letter of expulsion from the society! No warning, no hearing before my peers, no chance to defend myself, just expulsion!

One by one, Mr. Mason and his board are getting rid of all the people who cared about this shelter and the animals beginning in September of 1992 when they laid Diane Albers off. Many dedicated volunteers and employees have been gotten rid of because of the egocentric political games played at the shelter. The animals are at their mercy.

Why are we being expelled? Because we are concerned about the conditions of the shelter and the care of the animals? Because we ask for a financial statement? Because we want to know where all the money that has been donated has gone?

A great deal of money has poured into this shelter, many offers of free materials and labor. Why is there no accountability to the community who supports this shelter?

From March of 1990 to July of 1993 the shelter became what it was initially established for in 1973, a haven for sick, injured, abused and unwanted animals. A place where they would be cared for both physically and mentally and adopted out into new homes as well-adjusted animals, not just a place to die.

One by one, these last 18 months, the board and Mr. Mason have gotten rid of anyone they so chose without any regard for anyone or anything. Our community needs to have answers to their many questions! Something needs to be done now before there is no money left or anyone left who cares for the animals.

give other people's addresses and they are not actually in the household," Williams said, when asked if the eviction clause has been used extensively in the past.

"If the arrest is made there (in a housing authority unit), but the resident denies the person visited there or what have you," Williams explained, it is difficult to prove. "I don't know of any (cases) where we have gone the full nine yards (to eviction) on. Normally, in a drug related case, if they are a resident and are arrested or whatever, they give up the unit. Like the one I'm working on now, if she gives us a notice to move out, then it wouldn't be necessary to proceed."

Sanford Police Commander Dennis Whitmire said although drug investigations and arrests are conducted in the public housing developments, he was not aware of the housing authority evicting anyone under the lease's drug provision.

Whitmire said Sgt. Willie Hardin, who has worked drug cases in the special investigations unit for two years, could not recall any time when the housing authority evicted someone on a drug related case.

There are six developments containing 480 units of public housing under the direction of the Sanford Housing Authority, according to Williams.

They are: Castle Brewer Court containing 125 units which was built in 1951; William Clark Court, 85 units, 1952; Edward Higgins Terrace, 40 units, 1952; Cowan Moughton Terrace, 30 units, 1959; Lake Monroe Terrace, 100 units, 1972; and Redding Gardens for the disabled and elderly, 100 units, 1971.

In order to qualify for public housing, individuals or families must meet federal standards on income limits ranging from $22,400 annually for one person up to $42,250 for a family of eight.

"I would estimate the waiting list to be in excess of 400 families," Williams said, "that would include some extended families. People who are living in standard housing, living with parents, aunts or uncles, what have you, and now have a family of their own. Some of them are living in sub-standard housing, and those housing authorities build, own and operate the public housing at their particular housing authority," Walker explained. "They are set up under state law. They are usually separate and apart from local governing bodies. They are autonomous. There are two, Jacksonville H.U.D. and Dade County H.U.D. which are a part of city or county government. But the rest build, own and operate public housing."

"When a housing authority builds public housing, they enter into, with U.S. Federal H.U.D., an annual contributions contract. This is a legal document which binds U.S. Federal H.U.D. to the local housing authority contractually and provides they will maintain that housing for low income housing. In return for them doing that, and following some rules and regulations that U.S. Federal H.U.D. has, we provide operating subsidy and modernization funds to these authorities," Walker explained.

Although the need for affordable housing is great, little money is available for new construction. The housing authority has been awarded 30 more vouchers in the "section eight" program funded by the federal government which enables qualified low income applicants to seek housing in the private sector. If a landlord agrees to rent his property, the tenant pays his qualified portion and the remainder is paid by voucher.

James Walker, deputy manager of the Housing and Urban Development (HUD) public housing division in Jacksonville said Sanford now has 89 vouchers under the program.

"People refer to H.U.D. housing in a number of ways," Walker explained. Although some of the public think the federal government controls low income housing, it does not. The government does provide rent subsidies and money to repair and modernize housing projects.

"There are 80 plus housing authorities in the state of Florida tenant patrols to ride the elevators and look after the public spaces in these high-rise public housing units," Clinton said.

Although the new policy is national in scope, it will be targeted immediately on Chicago, where gangs and guns in scores of high-rise public housing projects are seen as an immediate threat.

Filling in the details at a briefing later in the White House, Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros said the goal is to accomplish sweep searches "within constitutional limits."

Cisneros said the policy will entail tenant associations to write leases permitting police searches for guns and drugs as part of a multifaceted attack on crime and violence in housing projects.

And he said discussions are taking place within the government on whether to try to ban guns outright in all federally assisted public housing units.

Clinton and Cisneros were responding to a federal judge's ruling in Chicago last week that searches conducted without legal warrants violate the constitutional protection against unwarranted search and seizure.

"My guess is there are some who might want to test these

"We should have called him Lucky," his person said. Elizabeth, a shepherd mix, was injured in the fire and still lives at the shelter.

"If she had been in any other shelter she would not be here today, a year later," Victoria King, a member of the board of directors said, referring to the society's policy of not euthanizing animals except in extreme situations.

Barry Black, the society's new director, thanked all who had volunteered time, money and talents to the slow rebuilding of the center.

"We owe you all an enormous debt of gratitude," he said.

Emotions ran high during the service. Volunteer Melody

Foster, who spoke on behalf of all those who have given their time to the shelter, tried to start speaking three times, but had to begin again three times as she tried to fight back the tears.

"This is like the Peace Corps," she said. "It's the hardest job you'll ever love."

The Rev. Bob Work of the DeBary Christian Church offered a non-sectarian prayer for those dogs that died in the fire and for those still waiting for a home.

He read a poem called "Rainbow Bridge" which tells of the place where dogs go to wait after they die for their human companions to join them on the trip to heaven. He said that many have told him they will take some of those dogs who died in the fire without human friends when it is their time to cross the Rainbow Bridge.

Before the society passed out plaques and certificates to the dogs surviving the fire and returning for the memorial service, King detailed the financial situation facing the Society as they begin to rebuild.

She said $300,000 had already been raised, but an additional $500,000 was needed; She noted $200,000 was needed for site preparations and $20,000 was needed to pay Environmental Protection Agency impact fees before ground could even be broken.

"We need your continued support," she said. "The dogs need your help."

Just a few of the events scheduled to inform residents about their county government. All events and tours are free.

Forty-four students from each middle school in the county will be treated to tours and programs Thursday designed to teach them about "tax collection, recycling," and other county functions. Featured is the annual mock county commission meeting, where students have made decisions about zoning and taxation issues.

Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith, former state representative Art Grindle and County Manager

Ron Rahun will tell the children about county government from their perspectives.

Students will also "shadow" county employees, including road workers, attorneys and Circuit Judge Seymour Benson to discover their day-to-day routine and challenges. Following a lunch at Fort Mellon Park, which includes Sheriff's Department and Public Safety Division demonstrations, the students will return to school.

Saturday, a "Kops 'N' Kids Drug Freelymptics Day" is scheduled at Lyman High from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

The county's 1,300 volunteers will also be feted in a reception Tuesday. All volunteers will be personally invited to the event.

Tours of the John E. Polk Correctional Facility are slated for two days, Monday and Friday, from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. each day. Tours of the Sanford and Casselberry Health Clinics will feature health screening for all, including blood pressure tests. A county information booth will be set up at Altamonte Mall Thursday from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Residents may register to vote there until 3 p.m.

Tours of county parks are also scheduled, including Red Bug Lake Park Thursday, which features a boardwalk made of recycled-plastic planks.

They still need money!

This is the second time that I've written on this subject. This is more than the second time we've asked for help. The choruses at Seminole High School are making preparations to travel to Gatlinburg, Tenn. next week and, sadly enough, not everyone is going. This year a record number was set in the amount of students not participating in the Fiesta-Vol National competition. The reason? Money. Every person planning to perform is required to pay $215 for expenses. That price tag includes bus, hotel, competition fees and breakfast for two days. Notice that only one meal is paid for. So, extra money for food is also needed. At the beginning of the year or Who's really running the U.S. government?

By JOHN KROLL
Special to the Herald

How many people actually know who is running the country and where your hard earned tax dollars are spent? The popular answer might be Congress or our famed President, but that would be quite incorrect. The question of who is in control comes up. Government agencies such as the ATF are in control. Yes, these helter-skelter law enforcement agencies such as the ATF, the FBI and the CIA use your tax dollars to harass your fellow citizens, and intimidate the public by showing their brute force. In fact, in the ATF, over $350 million was spent on intimidation and elimination. For example, the David Koresh incident in Waco, Texas. The ATF's initial raid of over 100 officers, helicopter gunships and the heavy explosives proceeded with the knowledge that women and children were presently living in the compound. No pre-raid attempts were made to free these innocent women and children. Not only that, but the ATF agents were forewarned that the "Branch Davidians" knew of the raid. What were the results of this strike? 11 deaths? Eighty-six people, 24 of which were children, died in a blazing inferno. Who started this fire? Contrary to popular

'BLIP' may help disarm bacteria

NEW YORK (AP) — It's called BLIP, and scientists say it may give clues for disarming some bacteria that resist conventional antibiotics. Doctors are worried about increases in drug resistance by disease-causing bacteria, including those that literally tear apart penicillin and other widely used antibiotics called cephalosporins. These bacteria include bugs that cause pneumonia and blood infections, destroy the drugs with an enzyme called beta-lactamase. Scientists have some drugs now that block this enzyme, but experts say there is room for more. Some are turning to BLIP, which stands for beta-lactamase inhibitory protein. The substance is secreted by a bacterium, but it's not clear what the bacterium uses it for, said biochemist Michael James of the University of Alberta in Edmonton. James and his co-authors report in the April 14 issue of the journal Nature that BLIP is the most powerful known blocker of a variety of beta-lactamase types. They have also figured out the three-dimensional structure of the BLIP molecule, a first step in determining just how it works. BLIP itself could not be used in people because it would provoke a potentially fatal immune system reaction, James said. Osteoporosis is a thinning of

Dance and eating disorders closely tied in new study

By IRA DREYFUSS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — An unhealthy thinness may not simply be an occupational hazard for ballet dancers. Some researchers fear that it may also be an occupational disease. One report finds many dancers have eating disorders. However, the study also indicates that dancers' problems may not be as bad as those facing nondancers who have eating disorders. It says nondancers are more likely to abuse drugs. This may mean the dancers' weight problems are driven more by the demands of their profession, the researchers believe. The report in the American College of Sports Medicine's journal, Exercise and Science in Sports and Medicine, compared 50 dancers with 50 nondancers, all women. The researchers used questionnaires and clinical interviews to check for eating disorders and substance abuse. They also looked for medical problems including weight loss. The dancers were primarily drawn from national and regional ballet companies, the nondancers, primarily from private high schools and colleges. Dancers averaged 21 years of age; nondancers, 23 years. Thirty-six percent of each group had missed periods for five months or more. Although this can result from high levels of exercise, it also can result from a sharply restricted diet. "For a normal person to try to keep our weight down there, we would have to starve ourselves," said Dr. Michelle P. Warren of Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York. Nondancers' weight averaged about 5 percent

African-American needed for national analysis of tissue types

Researchers at the University of Florida are seeking six African-American families to participate in a national analysis of different tissue types used to match organs and bone marrow for transplantation. The study will be the first to establish reliable data on the frequency of various tissue types, also called HLA antigen, in the black population. "The results of this study will be used to better define the tissue types unique to African-Americans and clarify what is required to improve tissue matching for transplantation for them," says Dr. Juan C. Scornik, professor of pathology and chief of immunology and transplantation at UF's College of Medicine. "Since some tissue types are unique to particular ethnic groups, people are more likely to successfully match someone with a similar ethnic background." For a family to participate, members must identify themselves as African Americans and have two biological children older than 18 willing to take part in the study. The two-year study is funded by the National Institutes of Health and coordinated by researchers at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine and Georgetown University School of Medicine. The research findings will be of particular benefit to kidney and bone marrow transplants. Other organ transplants do not depend as much on specific tissue typing to be successful. "We also hope to increase interest in transplantation among African-Americans," says Dr. Wilma Blas, a professor of medicine at Johns Hopkins and one of the study's principal investigators. The study will involve analysis of blood samples from 500 families nationwide. "There are more than 150 different tissue types," says Scornik. "In the white population, we have reliable data on the frequency of each tissue type and the associations between them. But reliable data on the frequency of tissue types in the black population do not exist." To participate in the study, families must be able to visit the University of Florida for researchers to obtain blood samples. The samples will be taken using sterile, disposable needles. Each member of the participating family will be reimbursed $30. For more information, call the Shands Hospital Immunology Laboratory at 904-395-0072.

National organ, tissue donor week brings awareness

The Central Florida Tissue Bank celebrates National Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness Week April 17-23. National Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness Week was created to help increase knowledge about the need for organ and tissue donation, as well as instruct the public about the requirements organ and tissue donors must follow to make certain their desires to donate are known and respected. In addition to signing a uniform donor card, donors must inform family members of their decisions. Federal law mandates that when a death occurs, the next-of-kin must give the final consent for organ and tissue donation. In other words, even if an active member of the Organ and Tissue Procurement Advisory Board and is licensed by the Florida Department of Health & Rehabilitative Services. In 1985, Central Florida Blood Bank established the not-for-profit Central Florida Tissue Bank (CFTB) in response to requests by area surgeons. CFTB provides services in procurement, processing and distribution of donated tissues. Some of the patients who receive tissue transplants include children with spinal disorders, patients with cancerous bone tumors, and accident victims needing bone reconstruction. Bone and tissue transplants can save many patients from amputation. One tissue donation can benefit as many as 100 patients. CFTB was the first tissue bank in Florida to be fully accredited and inspected by the American Association of Tissue Banks, and the first to participate in the AATB Tissue Network for locating needed tissues. CFTB is an active member of the Organ and Tissue Procurement Advisory Board and is licensed by the Florida Department of Health & Rehabilitative Services. For more information or to sign a donor card, the public should call CFTB at 800-852-0346.

Experimental treatment for osteoporosis could safely reverse bone loss

By DINAH WEISBERG BRIN
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Scientists have developed an experimental fluoride-and-calcium treatment for osteoporosis that appears to be safe and without causing serious side effects. Treatments now on the market to prevent bone loss do not reverse it. And while combinations of fluoride and calcium have been shown to increase bone mass before, the fluoride has been blamed for ulcers, gastric bleeding and brittle bones, that are prone to fractures. Researchers from the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas reported in today's Annals of Internal Medicine that the side effects can be avoided by slowly releasing low doses of fluoride into the body. "We may be well on the way to developing a treatment which may reverse the effects of normal, healthy bone," said Dr. Charles Y. Pak, the lead researcher and director of the Center for Mineral Metabolism Research. Osteoporosis is a thinning of

Rabbit experiment suggests possible glaucoma treatment

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — A tiny disc placed on the eyes of rabbits released a substance that lowered the fluid pressure inside their eyeballs, suggesting a possible new approach to treating glaucoma. In glaucoma, which affects perhaps 3 million Americans age 10 and over, excessive fluid pressure in the eye can damage the optic nerve and lead to blindness. Most cases are treated with eye drops. But they can cause side effects, patients do not always take them, and they eventually stop working in many patients. If drug-fall, doctors can use a scalpel or laser to make a tiny hole that lets excess fluid leak out. But that hole can become plugged or heal up, ending the procedure's effectiveness, and making a hole carries risks of surgical complications, said researcher Dr. Jacob Dan. In the experimental procedure, an enzyme released by the disc thins the white of the eye underneath. That lets fluid drain through the tissue without creating a major hole. Dan, with Arieh Yaron of the Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovot, Israel, reports the work in the March issue of the Journal of Ophthalmology. Dan is affiliated with the Institute and the California Pacific Medical Center in San Francisco. Dan said human experiments are expected to begin soon, but he stressed that it is not yet clear whether the disc will work in people. Even if it does work, it will be years until it could be widely available. The Ophthalmology article reported results in 15 rabbits without glaucoma. In each animal, the fluid pressure of the two eyes was virtually the same before treatment.

Kindergartners Casey Grubb and Sonia Puskarna learned about cooperation at the eye-hand coordination at the Eyelink Elementary School field day event last week. The youngsters probably didn't think they were learning anything, they just knew they were having a great time with the Beach Ball Pass. The annual field day is a much anticipated event at which the students play games and have a great time in competition and good old fashioned fun.

Crusade to keep prisoners locked up borne of pain

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA — Kathleen Finnegan says she never planned to be a crusader against the early release of prisoners. "I was forced into it at the point of a gun."

She still has long, thin bullet scars on her arms from her abduction and robbery in a Punta Gorda field six years ago when a career criminal on early release from prison opened fire on her and a fellow prosecutor, killing him.

And her voice still quivers when she recounts the horror of being covered in blood as she ran into the night for help, hiding in ditches along the way, fearing the killer was closing in.

"I always felt I survived for a reason," said Finnegan, who credits slain prosecutor Norman Langston with taking two bullets in the head for her after the gunman began shooting them in their car.

"He covered me, he leaned over me — he actually made a decision at some point to save my life. That can't be in vain."

"I can't ever pay back Norm for saving my life, but maybe if we can stop it from happening to someone else, then it may somehow justify his death."

The 34-year-old Port Charlotte woman last year gave up her legal career and volunteered to run STOP — Stop Turning Out Prisoners — a grassroots movement devoted to fixing the "revolving door of injustice."

Florida inmates currently serve only about 40 percent of their sentences because of prison overcrowding. More than half of those released early commit crimes and are put back behind bars again.

Frustrated at years of inaction by lawmakers on the issue, STOP is leading a drive to force the state to stop releasing prisoners early.

More than 100,000 Floridians already have signed a petition for a November ballot initiative that would amend the state constitution to require all prisoners to serve at least 85 percent of their sentence. STOP must have 430,000 validated signatures by August to get the issue on the ballot.

At county fairs, shopping malls and grocery stores across the state, Finnegan tells her story to anyone who will listen and never lets people forget the human toll of early prison releases.

"I like to call Kathleen our poster child," said Manatee County Sheriff Charlie Wells, STOP's founder. "Every movement has to have somebody who has been there, suffered through it and is the human face of the tragedy."

It was Wells who first approached Finnegan about speaking at STOP's organizational meeting three years ago. She balked.

At the time, Finnegan wallowed in anger and depression over her ordeal. She had quit the prosecutor's office because it was "getting too personal." And private practice left her unfulfilled.

She couldn't stop replaying the night in her mind — how the gunman approached in a bar parking lot, how he forced the two prosecutors to drive, and how he wasn't satisfied just to rob them.

And she dealt with the fact that the suspect, Samuel Pettit, had 17 prior convictions, served two years of a 3½-year sentence for car theft and resisting arrest, and was out of prison two months before the abduction.

After finally seeing Pettit sentenced to death row, dredging up the tragedy again was not something she wanted to do.

But Wells was persistent about getting Finnegan to tell her story. Finally, she agreed.

"I cried through the whole thing," she said, recalling her first speech. "But afterwards, so many people came up who were crying too and said, 'I know how you feel. I've been through it too.'"

"Suddenly it went from me and my own problem to everyone's problem. I saw how many other people were victims of early releases. I'm just one of thousands."

Some of the latest early releases gone bad have only served to fan the flames of the STOP movement.

One of the two men who admitted to February's murder of a Florida State University student and the rape of his sister had 14 arrests on his record and was last freed from prison after

At a glance

The grassroots group STOP, Stop Turning Out Prisoners, has launched a petition drive to amend the Florida Constitution to ensure prisoners serve at least 85 percent of their sentences. STOP in Seminole County collected signatures in front of WalMart Saturday and will return Saturday, April 23 to collect additional signatures.

STOP currently has about 100,000 signatures and must have 430,000 by August to get the referendum on the November ballot. The text of the petition reads:

"Except for pardon, clemency and incentive gain time, no state prisoner shall be released prior to serving the full term of the lawful sentence of incarceration. Granting of incentive gain time shall not be automatic but awarded only for good conduct. In no event shall incentive gain time exceed 15 days for every 100 days of the sentence."

serving only a year of a five-year sentence for grand theft.

And last month in Lakeland, an angry Polk County Sheriff Lawrence Crow called on the state to apologize to the family of 11-year-old Kimberly Ann Waters, who was snatched from her bedroom, raped, strangled and dumped in a garbage bin. The man accused in the attack had a rap sheet six feet long and was released from prison after serving only five years of a 15-year burglary and grand theft sentence.

When the mother of a 17-year-old Hollywood girl strangled by a convict released early offered her help to STOP, Finnegan gave her the same advice she gives all survivors.

"Bring pictures of your daughter and show them to your legislators. Let them see what this is costing us by not having enough prisons."

The intended effect of the STOP amendment is to force the Legislature to pay for the additional prison beds needed to protect Florida's citizens.

Corrections officials say it would cost $2.3 billion over the next five years to add 47,000 prison beds to the existing 55,000 to reach the level where inmates serve at least 85 percent of their time. STOP maintains it is up to lawmakers to find a way to pay for it.

"This is what infuriates us," Finnegan said. "It's still happening while up in Tallahassee they're arguing and they're playing politics. Don't they realize there are lives at stake?"

Ernie and Jessie Whittaker, and Audrey Ogden solicit signatures for STOP at WalMart Saturday.

Fishing

challenged fishermen will be fishing.

For the largest five fish string, the prize on Sunday is a ProCraft Boat with a Mercury outboard motor.

"We've got some big corporate sponsors behind us this year," Daniels said. "It's made it very nice."

According to Daniels, fishermen from 26 states are taking part in the tournament this year. Five participants came from Oregon.

Wallace has come from Lennox, Ill. each of the eight years of the tournament in Sanford.

"I like coming down here," he said. "This is a really nice tournament. It's relaxing. It's well run."

He said, like others, he gets in his car and heads to warmer climates when he can to participate in tournaments such as this.

"I'm heading out to California next," he said. "I enjoy kicking back, enjoying and relaxing."

Daniels said the tournament tries to be sure to catch and release all the fish.

"I believe we have a 98 percent success rate with getting the fish back out there," he said.

He said the fish are often healthier than when they were caught because they are held in water that has anti-bacterial agents and chemicals to clean their bodies.

Daniels said while this year's tournament is still under way, plans are being made for the 1995 tournament which will be April 28, 29 and 30.

"We're getting ready," Daniels said.

At the same time, more than 200 volunteers from across the state are making sure that this year's tournament runs smoothly.

Lee Wynings and his wife travelled from Lutz (near Tampa) to volunteer their time with the tournament.

"We think this is just great," he said. "We come up every year."

AROUND THE STATE

QB's pace UM scrimmage

MIAMI — Quarterback Ryan Collins tossed two touchdown passes and engineered the winning drive as Miami's White squad beat the Orange 21-14 on Saturday in Miami's final spring scrimmage.

But Miami's other quarterback, Frank Costa, also threw for two first-half touchdown passes, meaning that the "U" at "Quarterback U" still stands for undecided.

Miami coach Dennis Erickson said he won't decide on the starter for another two weeks.

Chris Jones finished with three receptions for 78 yards and second-year freshman Yattil Green had four catches for 93 yards.

Costa was 15 of 20 for 179 yards and scored on a quarterback keeper from 1-yard out. Collins finished 7 of 12 with 121 yards.

The running attack was buoyed by the return of Danyell Ferguson, who sat out last year with an ankle injury. The speedy tailback rushed for 77 yards on six carries, including a darting 44-yarder and a 4-yard touchdown. Larry Jones gained 46 yards on 11 carries and Al Shipman amassed 55 yards.

AROUND THE NATION

Myers grabs modified win

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. — Pole-sitter Gary Myers took advantage of Frank Fleming's troubles one lap from the end Saturday and won the Lowe's 150 NASCAR modified race for his first victory on the circuit.

After giving up the lead on the opening lap, Myers took command for the next 42 laps in a Chevrolet before Fleming overtook him in his Pontiac. Tim Arre came up from the eighth position to catch Fleming on lap 72, but he surrendered the lead to Fleming just 14 laps from the end.

Apparently heading for victory, Fleming's car quit on lap 149, and Myers passed him to get the checkered flag and the $3,650 first-place money.

Bobby Hutchens was second in a Chevrolet, followed by Phillip Smith in an Oldsmobile and Arre in a Chevrolet. Kenny Minter drove his Chevrolet to fifth place.

We've got us a race

Shutout gets Pats into second place

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD — Never count Lake Brantley out of a baseball race. After losing their first two Seminole Athletic Conference starts, some may have thought that this was going to be a down the year for Lake Brantley.

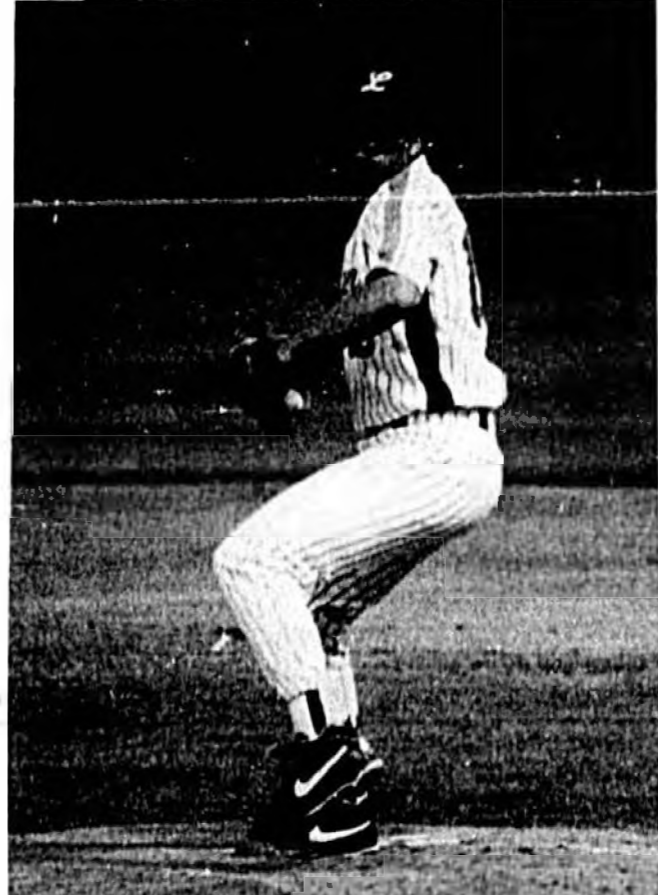

But after Friday night's 8-0 whitewashing of the Lyman Greyhounds, the Patriots have now won four straight conference matchups and find themselves tied with Lyman for second place in the SAC, and just one game behind league-leading Oviedo.

Scott Conner (4-1) was the main thorn in the sides of the Greyhounds Friday night as the left-hander tossed a four-bitter and struck out eight.

Jeff Butler and Joey Harmer paced the offense, as Butler was 2-for-4 with two doubles and three runs driven in and Harmer was 2-for-4 with an RBI.

Kiley Calapa led Lyman, going 1-for-2 with a double. Lake Brantley (16-6, 4-2 SAC) was in Miami to play a doubleheader on Saturday and will host Lake Mary in an SAC contest Wednesday night.

Lyman (15-6, 4-2 SAC) will be at Seminole for a 3 p.m. SAC game tomorrow (Monday).

Lyman ace Tommy Dixon gave it his best, but he could not stop a hot Lake Brantley nine that has now won four straight SAC games to gain a tie for second.

Hawks hand Lions first SAC defeat

From Staff Reports

CASSELBERRY — Mike Ferrell's worst fears have been realized. A week ago the Oviedo head coach was concerned that the talented Lake Howell baseball was about ready to start winning.

It happened Friday night as the Silver Hawks handed the Lions their first Seminole Athletic Conference setback of the season, 8-5, at the Lake Howell baseball field.

Lake Howell (11-10, 1-5 SAC) broke a scoreless tie with three runs in the bottom of the fourth inning, but Oviedo (14-7, 5-1) appeared to take control as it came up with five runs in the top of the fifth inning.

The Silver Hawks were not going to be denied their upset, however, as they came right back in the bottom of the fifth inning with five runs to take the lead for good.

Brad Butterfield came on in relief of Rich DiTore and pitched scoreless ball over the final two innings to get his first decision of the season.

DiTore and Butterfield also carried the big bats for Lake Howell as DiTore was 2-for-4 with three RBI and Butterfield was 2-for-2. Tim Slavik was 2-for-4 for Oviedo.

The Lions were at Deltona for a game on Saturday and will be at Lyman for a crucial SAC matchup on Wednesday. Lake Howell will be at Seminole on Wednesday.

Win puts Rams back in contention

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald Sports Writer

LAKE MARY — It was a game only the pitchers wanted to win. Lake Mary's Rich Alexander and Seminole's Todd Braden hooked up in a classic pitcher's duel with the Rams coming out on top 3-2 to complete a season's sweep of the Fighting Seminoles in a Seminole Athletic Conference contest at Rams Field Friday night.

But as good as the pitching was, the fielding was even worse as nine errors led to all five runs being unearned. "They're all tough," said Lake Mary head coach Allan Tuttle of the win. "The pitcher's were tremendous, but

Scott just misses triple jump mark

By TONY DeBORMIER
 Herald Sports Editor

LONGWOOD — Seminole's Andre Scott came within two inches of becoming the nation's best high school triple jumper ever Friday night at the Lyman Invitational.

Scott won the triple jump with a leap of 53 feet, 7 1/2 inches, less than two inches off the national record of 53 feet, 9 1/2 inches set by Brian Tabor of Athens, Ga., on June 11, 1989.

He also smashed the meet record of 50-3/4 (which he set last season) and exceeded the recognized state record of 51-0 (set by Boone's James Beckford (set at the Class 4A state track meet last year).

The Florida High School Activities Association only recognizes records set during state meet competition. Belinder Morgan gave Seminole a record-setting sweep of the triple jump as she broke the girls' meet record of 36-10 (Vanessa King, Evans, 1993) with her winning leap of 38-1.

In all, seven meet records fell Friday night. The Seminole boys shattered their 4 x 100-meter relay of 42.1 seconds (set at last year's meet) as Scott, Cory Wilson, Derrek Swain, and Charlie Farmer posted a winning time of 41.4.

Both 4 x 400-meter relay records were lowered. The Dr. Phillips girls won in 3:57.7 (breaking the record of 4:01.3 set by Seminole in 1984) while the Winter Haven boys came in at 3:21.1 (eclipsing the mark of 3:23.0 set by Oak Ridge in 1979).

Evans' Vanessa King, who saw her triple jump record broken, set a new standard in the long jump with her winning effort of 19-2. The old mark was 18-11, set by Lyman's Princess Reese in 1979.

The oldest record to fall was the boys' 300-meter intermediate hurdle mark, where Oak Ridge's Johnny Love won in 37.0, shaving a second off of the mark set by Edgewater's Jeff Dixon in 1977.

Inside Sanford Memorial Stadium, the White Sox crushed the Kiwanis Club Orioles 15-1 in four innings. The White Sox remained the only undefeated team in the league with a 5-0 record, while the Orioles fell to 3-2.

will be used during the tournament. All boats will be checked prior to the tournament to insure there is no live bait or cast nets. Any angler found using live bait will be disqualified.

3. The slam is an all boat tournament and all anglers understand and agree that they cannot leave their boats to fish from shore or wade fish.

Anglers may leave their boats in case of an emergency or to return to the weigh-in area where they must check in with a tournament official. Any angler found out of their boat will be disqualified.

4. All boat occupants must be registered anglers and must have paid their entry fee. Any boat found with an unregistered angler or occupant will be disqualified.

5. No tournament boat may fish within fifty (50) feet of another angler's boat. No tournament boats may ride outside of one another while underway. Tournament anglers in different boats may not combine catches. Nothing may be exchanged between boats. Any tournament boat found violating these rules will be disqualified.

6. All fish must be caught from a boat with a rod and reel and line using an artificial lure.

7. All tournament anglers must abide by federal and state regulations, laws and rules governing the taking of saltwater fish.

8. All boats must check in, be in the water and depart from the county ramps at Bethune Beach. There will be no fishing until the official start of the tournament at approximately 6 a.m., June 5. Violators will be immediately disqualified.

9. All anglers will promote "Catch and Release" by bringing their catch in to be weighed in live condition. There will be a 20-point penalty for a dead fish weigh-in and a 10 point bonus for a live release. Anglers may return to the weigh-in area beginning at 7 a.m. to have their catch weighed in. A DNR biologist will be on hand to help insure live releases of tournament fish.

10. All tournament anglers will display tournament stickers in such a manner that can be seen by tournament officials.

11. All fish must be legal size according to saltwater rules.

STATE NEWS

Barnett Bank

JACKSONVILLE — Barnett Banks Inc. reported that quarterly profits rose 28 percent to $118 million.

The increase amounted to $1.12 per share for the period ended March 31, compared to $92.3 million, or 88 cents a share, for the same period last year.

The company on Wednesday attributed the increased earnings to reduced loan losses and continued emphasis on cost controls, including reduced expenses from the consolidation of First Florida Bank Inc. with Barnett. That transaction led to the closing of 98 branches last March.

Net interest income declined 5 percent to $415 million from $436.7 million in last year's quarter.

Average loans were up $85 million from a year ago, paced by a 6 percent increase in loans to consumers which now represent 71 percent of Barnett's total portfolio. Commercial loans increased $144 million.

During the quarter, Barnett agreed to buy Loan American Financial Corporation, a Miami-based mortgage banking company, for about $62 million. The acquisition, which is subject to regulatory approval, represents Barnett's entry into wholesale mortgage banking.

With $38 billion in assets and 621 offices in Florida and Georgia, Barnett Banks Inc. is the leading financial institution in Florida.

Consumer loans

TALAHASSEE — Consumer borrowing will become more expensive as the result of a new law Gov. Lawton Chiles allowed to go on the books without his signature Wednesday.

The measure (HB 2403) will permit lenders to charge up to $10 to pay for character and credit investigations of loan applicants. They also will be able to charge annual fees of $25 for each line-of-credit account.

The new fees will apply only to loans or lines of credit obtained after July 1, the effective date of the bill.

Making sure you're safe

Building safety week is celebrated

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

This has been National Building Safety Week. Although primarily aimed at building contractors, officials are also suggesting individual business and home owners spend some time in checking out their own buildings.

In presenting the proclamation of National Building Safety Week, contractors (and others) are cautioned to be continuously aware of safety hazards for their workers, as well as being certain the buildings they construct are safe for the residents.

With government demands for continuously improving safety in the building trades, contractors and builders have little choice.

Fortunately, some go well beyond what is required.

Local officials however, caution that even with regular business inspections, complete safety cannot be assured. The City of Sanford for example, requires inspections by both the building department and fire department before an occupational license is issued.

"Most of the time," said Fire Marshal Richard Cohen, "we find everything is in order, because people know they have to follow certain rules and ordinances, and they try to have everything up to specifications."

Sanford however, doesn't stop there. Safety checks are also made on businesses on a yearly basis. "What we usually find at that time," Cohen commented,

"is an outdated fire extinguisher, or an alarm system with old batteries."

He added, "It's not that people aren't safety conscious, but fire extinguishers have to be replaced every year, and that's generally the only problem we find when we conduct our annual inspections."

Cohen observed that the City also has various ordinances pertaining to fire safety, the requirement for sprinklers, and other safety needs.

Other areas which should be checked, not only in businesses but homes, include storage areas which may have flammable or harmful liquid storage areas, and safety valves or fuses on large electrical appliances.

Swimming pools should also be part of regular safety checks. Not only the actual structure but fencing around the pools must be in perfect shape in order to promote as much safety as possible.

Officials suggest conducting regular safety checks at homes and places of business should not only be done during this Building Safety Week, but at regular intervals throughout the year.

"We don't do regular checks on private residences," Cohen commented. "They therefore fall into the responsibility of the people who own homes or rent them to make sure all safety features are properly operating and other safety practices are being observed."

Up a lazy river with me

SANFORD — Forever Resorts of Phoenix, Arizona, is not well known as being responsible for a tourist attraction in Sanford. It nevertheless has an offering which is becoming more and more prominent.

Through Florida Houseboat Vacations, located at the Port of Sanford, Forever Resorts is offering houseboat rentals for trips on the St. Johns River.

Forever Resorts has similar operations in Nevada, Missouri, Texas and Kentucky. Robert and Tracey Hilbert who manage Florida Houseboat Vacations were transferred to Sanford from Nevada, where they have worked for the company for 13 years.

Two sizes of houseboats are available. The largest is 56 feet in length, and sleeps 10, with five queen size beds. It contains a full size range, blender, microwave, coffee maker, toaster and two refrigerators.

The ship also has a complete entertainment center, central heat and air conditioning, and one and a half baths. All cooking and eating utensils, towels and bedding are also supplied.

For shorter cruises by the hour or day, Florida Houseboat Vacations has 26 foot deck cruisers available for rent. They have two built-in ice chests, an AM/FM stereo cassette player and can accommodate up to eight people.

Tracey Hilbert said the Sanford operation has four 26 foot ships and three 56 foot ships for rentals.

The use of the crafts for river trips and vacations has become very popular and Tracey suggested people make early reserervations, especially for the larger craft.

"If a group wants to rent one of our houseboats but doesn't know how to operate them," said Tracey, "we have one of our people go through about one hour of instructions with at least two persons who will be on board, and they will tell you everything you need to know about operating the crafts."

Study: U.S. lost billions on imports, exports

MIAMI — Two Florida International University professors figure the United States lost more than $33 billion in potential tax revenue last year due to artificial overpricing and underpricing of imports and exports.

John Zdanowicz and Simon Pak have spent three years looking at international trade data.

"As economists we wanted to see how efficient the markets were in pricing the same commodities in different countries," Zdanowicz said Wednesday. "As we began doing our analysis we ran across anomalies that were unexplainable by conventional economic theory — such as $720 bottles of salad dressing."

What happens, he explained, is that importers and exporters may adjust the prices of their goods for tax advantages.

For example, if a product is manufactured in this country for $100, then transferred to a foreign subsidiary for $200, the manufacturer should pay $11 taxes on the $100 profit.

But if instead, the $100 item is transferred for $1, the maker shows a $99 loss — and reaps the tax benefits.

U.S. Customs tracks some exports. From Washington, Customs spokesman Dennis Shinkofski was unable to confirm the tax loss, which Zdanowicz and Pak say equals $90 million a day.

"It would be real nice if it was true and there was some way to actually get a hold of that," the spokesman said. "The courts would be tied up for a long time. Corporate attorneys would be going crazy."

Star Search held; Parade of Homes marches in today

The Lake Mary Elementary PTA Star Search was held Tuesday, April 12. Students of all ages showcased their talent in song and dance. The acts were as varied as the students. Among the standouts, Tom Neuhauser played ragtime on the keyboard; Marni Becker sang "Hero;" Jennifer Mitchell danced to "Melody of Cowboy Dances;" and Jennifer Grosinkemper and Robtu Dvornik combined dancing and gymnastics for their performance.

The Star Search was essentially an audition for the Spring Art Fest to be held Saturday, May 7 at Olde Lake Mary Day. A panel of judges watched the Star Search and will decide which individuals or groups will perform at the Spring Art Fest.

These builders fall into the "custom home" category. Custom builders generally provide a full range of services for their clients including site evaluation, design, construction, interior design, and landscaping and product selection.

The Harkins' home is located in Heathrow Woods. Dave Brewer built two homes in Alquia, and Environmental's entry is in Tuscanville. All of these homes incorporate styles and features that are becoming synonymous with Florida architecture.

Audrey and Paul Markos were not expecting a celebration on their golden wedding anniversary since Paul underwent surgery a short time ago.

As the time neared, they were invited to join their son and his girlfriend for dinner at Touchton's, but nobody mentioned a word about "anniversary." Soon after they were seated, a tour of the recently renovated premises seemed to be the order of the day — and finally the banquet room door swung open where a big celebration was in process.

"We were very much surprised," Audrey said. "Oh, it was beautiful!"

Friends and relatives gathered in the banquet room for a sit down dinner, complete with golden decorations and a large chocolate anniversary cake.

embroidery to cross stitch," she said. "I've been doing cross stitch for about 10 years now. I found I could do more with cross stitch. I had more freedom to change patterns than with embroidery and crewel."

Occupying herself was cited as a contributing factor to continuing her hobby. McLain's husband enjoys many athletic activities so McLain found she could cheer him on while still keeping busy. "My father always said busy hands are happy hands," said McLain. "I go along to games with my family but the cross stitch keeps my hands busy and keeps me from being bored."

Another favorite place McLain enjoyed relaxing with her stitching was their hunting camp in Georgia. "Cross stitch is so portable and it doesn't take a lot of thought process," she said. "You can put it down and pick it up six months later and continue. When you finish a project it makes you look brilliant. I guess I'm just a frustrated artist so this satisfies that need." She also finds time to work about 1 to 2 hours a night after homework is done which ends up about 9 p.m. Not only has McLain completed numerous pictures, towels, Christmas stockings and bread clothes baskets, but her T-shirts and sweatshirts were the most numerous and beautifully designed. "I see a pattern, the kids or Daryl sees one and I start on it," she said. "Sometimes I buy a kit if I can't find a pattern. I'm not into flowers and plants so this is my hobby." A detailed cross stitch of Brittany hunting dogs was a present to her husband since this was one of his hobbies. She has made a deer wall hanging for her son and several T-shirts for her daughter, one of which she wore to show her mother's great talent.

McLain spoke of how easy she feels cross stitch is. "I was talking to a little girl who felt it was too hard," she said. "I told her, 'Don't look at the whole project. You can't let something intimidate you. Just get involved, get started and go piece by piece, day by day, like a puzzle.' I guess that goes well with life too."

Department stores for thread and supplies was where McLain felt interested people should begin. "I also get ideas from all the craft books," she said. "Fourteen count is basically what I do. I've done a little bit of 18 count. I get the Cross Stitch magazine, Leisure Arts and several craft catalogs. They have any count pattern you might want to try." McLain used waste cloth for her T-shirts and sweatshirt designs. The waste cloth was placed on the front of the shirt and the pattern stitched on. The waste cloth was then removed thread-by-thread to make the stitching appear as if it was done freehand.

Craft shows were cited as another source of new ideas for her stitching. McLain discussed how early schools taught stitching. "They taught little girls to stitch long ago in school," she said. "It taught them to finish what they started. Maybe it also taught them to be good wives and mothers." She told of a friend who does quilting, so now and then, they make things for each other or combine their talents to make quilt squares with cross stitch centers.

McLain won several competitions in the past with her work. "Years ago when we lived in Palatka, I entered my cross stitch in the Putnam County Fair," she said. "I won first place and a blue ribbon. It's been 20 or more years ago so I can't remember what I won it for. I got second or third place a few years ago in a craft fair."

The McLain family enjoys much of their weekends traveling around the state boating, hunting, fishing or skiing. Never forgotten was the bag of cross stitch just in case of a dull moment. Her spare minutes have turned idle time into beautiful creations for family and friends. Her T-shirts hug the bodies of her children with their tender stitches as if to say you're loved and mom is right here reminding you. Showing her husband, family and friends that she cares through the time and special chores she puts into each work, gives the touch of warmth needed to add her joy to their day.

Ministry: Volunteer clowning

Burnham has fun while spreading the gospel to kids

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Being the class clown was an image one may have of Doug Burnham, but just clowning around was surely one of his favorite pastimes. Burnham was upbeat and with his happy personality it was obvious there were not tears of a clown for him.

Burnham was born and raised in Sanford. His family moved away for awhile but have been back now for six years. He and his wife, Frances, have been married for 17 years and have three children, Candace, 15, Casey, 12, and Nathan, 4. The family attends the Sanford Church of God. He is employed by Mac's Electric Repair where he works on repairing electric motors.

His clowning began about two years ago. "I've worked in children's church most of my life," he said. "Clowning is a great way to reach out to kids with the Gospel." Burnham said that clowning had its start in the church in the 12th century. "They would have a person to mime the preacher," he said.

Remembering what inspired him to begin this work, Burnham spoke tenderly. "I had seen a Christian clown troupe come to our church when I was in college," he said. "I saw the positive effect they had on the children. I think, too, my basic start came from Floyd Schaffer and Penne Sewell. They really inspired me."

Talking about one of his first acts, Burnham said, "I started with a transparency for children's church with a narrator," he said. "It was 'How Seymour Got Saved.' I'd love to get it published so other mimers can use it."

Although much of Burnham's clowning has been at various churches in children's ministries, he stated another favorite place was local nursing homes. "It's such a rewarding thing," he said. "I keep interested because of the smile on their face. Many of the older folks just need someone to smile at them and touch them. I get such a reward just being there for them. There is one lady at a nursing home, when she sees me coming she breaks out in the song, 'You Are My Sunshine.'"

"I made up a song called 'Sin Busters' based on the song and theme from the movie 'Ghost Busters.' They all love that one."

Burnham felt from the beginning that this was a ministry that God placed him in. "It is a ministry," he said. "I wanted to take the ministry beyond the church walls, to the highways, by-ways and hedges. You can't lead people to Christ from a distance. It has to be more of a one-to-one. When people see a preacher coming with his big Bible and a Thompson chain reference, it can scare them away."

Burnham hoped to begin a non-profit organization to train clowns. "I want to start an organization and call it CIRCUS," he said. "That stands for Clowns in Righteous Consecration Unto Salvation. I've been trying to train my own troupe to do skits in churches but training is slow. It takes numbers and dedication. Maybe one day we can take the city, county and the whole state for Christ. I hope the organization can help train for that because I feel it's time for Christians to get out and witness. Clowning is a tool for witnessing." He said that he hoped through this organization that people could pool from the experience of other Christian clowns.

For beginners or those interested in clowning, Burnham suggested to look at as many resources as you can. "People interested need to read a lot about the history of clowning," he said. "Watch closely when you see a circus and notice the clown routines. Be instant and be inventive."

He also spoke of the three different clowns you will read about in the history of clowning. The white face clown represents the happy, jolly and upbeat image. The august (pronounced ah-goo-st) clown has a pink face with white around the eyes and mouth, outlined in black. August clowns are more of the fall guy wearing outsize clothes and acting clumsy. Burnham has modeled his outfit and make-up after this clown. A character clown or tramp was named as the tear jerker, the sad clown and the hobo. Another familiar word heard by clowns was an "alley." "An alley is a training time," said Burnham. "Clowns come together to modify their clowning skills. They learn new tricks, skits, trips, slaps, the punch and double-take looks to name a few."

Once a person has determined the type of clown he wants to be, then make-up and outfit is next.

Born in Columbia, S.C. in 1928, Young Brock, a Seminole High School graduate, got his start at the First United Methodist Church in Sanford. He recalls writing a letter to the pastor while he was in the Navy which the pastor misinterpreted into thinking that Alva's goal was in

Answer to Previous Puzzle

Try to do as little delegating as possible today where critical assignments are concerned. You could be extremely lucky in things you manage or direct but your surrogates might not be.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not give too much credence to early indicators today, because they could be misleading. You should get luckier when the finish line is in sight, not visa versa.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You and two of your close friends are likely to be in complete accord today where major issues are concerned. However, this harmony might not prevail where minor ones are at stake.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today you're in a marvelous achievement cycle where major accomplishments are concerned. Give yourself meaningful objectives, don't mess around with insignificant stuff.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You could do rather well today in endeavors or enterprises that require taking a calculated risk. Chances aren't apt to intimidate you, yet you'll not do anything ridiculous.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
April 18, 1994

Last year you may not have been too successful at finishing what you started. The year ahead, however, could be just the opposite where you'll complete not only new things, but old things as well.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Overreacting emotionally to developments today could cause you to behave in a nonproductive manner. In order to win support from others you must be logical and cool headed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you're plagued by old self-doubts today it's time for you to start looking for new solutions to your problems. Be patient, because your early array of thoughts might not be your best ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today if you're doing business with an unfamiliar firm, get them to put all of their promises and guarantees in writing. Don't do business on merely assumptions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

The position you take today might be counter opposed to the positions of associates. It should be easy to distinguish the loyalist from the adversary.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There are certain times when it is wise to keep our mouths shut, and this could be one of those days. If you must be heard, limit it to loved ones who won't misuse what you say.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Listen to all points of view today and be considerate regarding the opinions of others. If you attempt to be manipulative, you might get tangled in your own web.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Who you are and what you stand for might be put to the test today. If you lower your standards for expeditious purposes, it could do serious harm to your image.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might not be very successful today trying to serve as a mediator between dissenting friends. Instead of getting everyone mad at you, let them work out their own problems.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In order to be successful today you must be able to draw the line between friendship and business. If allowed to overlap, you might do something you'll later regret.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In dealings with friends today try to do that which is best for the greatest number. If you fail to take into consideration everyone's needs, you're not apt to succeed at what you attempt.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Someone with whom you'll be involved today might attempt to have others believe he/she deserves credit for something you did. Nip it in the bud.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Guard against inclinations today to try to revise something that includes others, as well as yourself, without getting their consent. Their views might conflict with yours.

Have you been wondering where I find out about those silly signs? They come from the amusing "Notes & Queries" column by Joseph Harter in The Guardian newspaper in England. Here is another one. On the tip of Great Camanoe Island in the British Virgin Islands there used to be a sign proclaiming "No trespassing without permission."

In bridge, there are a few suit combinations that are misplayed regularly. Today's deal features one of them. Against your contract of three no-trump, West leads the diamond six. After East plays the Jack and you win with the queen, how do you continue?

You have seven top tricks: two spades, three hearts and two diamonds. Maybe you attacked spades, hoping for a 3-3 split.

But that will happen only about one time in three. Maybe you played on clubs. But good defenders will defeat you. East wins with the ace (even if you start the suit from the dummy) and returns his last diamond. West's suit is established while he still holds the club king as an entry.

The declarer was Colette Myrans, a top Belgian player. She foresaw the dangers. Knowing that she only ever had two diamond tricks, Myrans didn't win the first trick. She played her two, which cut the communications between the defenders.

As South played low smoothly, East returned the diamond seven. Now declarer could safely play on clubs. But if East had switched to a low spade at trick two, declarer would have triumphed by playing low: a second dissecting ducking play.
