

Casselberry Council Decides

Golf Course Puzzle To Voters

By BATHY NIBLACK

CASSELBERRY — The dilemma of the Land O' Lakes golf course and country club, and the question of how to keep it in a long term, has been around for a long time. The situation seems to be finally coming to a head, since the City Council decided this week to authorize a referendum on this matter. The purpose of the referendum will be to let the citizens of Casselberry decide whether they are willing to pay an ad valorem tax in order to purchase the course.

Dr. Zacco, who is a relatively new member of the council, presented a proposal this week for the city's purchase of the golf course. Zacco pointed out that "many people have tried to determine what the future of the golf course would be." He went on to say that the future of the course "affects every one in the city" since it is not merely a golf course, but "114 acres of land through a residential area." Zacco's proposal for funding the purchase provides for the lifting of the tax on utilities to a straight 10 per cent beginning in 1973, the reduction of the city's cigarette tax to the purchase, and the sale of certain lots from the total property area. The sale price of the course is $2,000,000, and there would be a city-wide bond issue to pay the $400,000 interest for the first five years, and $68,000 per year for 15 years after that.

There was a great deal of opposition from other council members to this plan. Councilman Harry Sambrook pointed out that as the population increases, the city's other financial needs will increase. Council Chairman Edith Duerr was concerned about the cigarette tax, saying the city could not operate if it was pledged to another cause. Zacco claimed that the sale of 27 lots from the total area would provide for the city's needs. Herb Licht, a local developer, has already indicated his interest in these lots at $5,000 each, but made it clear that this would be conditioned upon the availability of city water and sewer, and upon the city's agreement to place the lots. A large number of citizens were on hand at the work session on the golf course, and several expressed their feelings about it. These expressions seem to indicate that the citizens of Casselberry are interested in keeping this golf course for several reasons. The golf course is important not only for its recreational value, but for its ecological value, for the fact that it provides a "green belt" throughout the city. Citizens are also greatly concerned that the land will be sold for apartments and condominiums. According to Zacco, "if the city does not make a major commitment, it is in for the biggest apartment house development in the area."

Walter Johnson, "I am proud of the fact that we have money and space in this city. It behooves us to do everything in our power to keep this golf course." Dr. Harold J. McElrath, "I would hate to see this golf course come to a close. Dr. Zacco's method of increasing revenue like this will be a good one." Paul McClure, "I hope I don't have to see this golf course leave. There would be no problem getting the money if we go for ad valorem taxes."

The council then decided to place the matter on a referendum, and attempt to find the feeling of the other citizens toward this. Council will authorize the referendum at regular meeting on Monday night, and it will take at least 45 days before the referendum is ready to place before the citizens.

Diehard Opposition Won't Stop Plan OK

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Diehard opposition to a reapportionment plan creating a 120-member house with districts of six members is not likely to stop approval of the plan today. Democratic leaders had the votes to pass the plan Wednesday night, but a rule that keeps bills off final consideration with a two-thirds vote halted proceedings for a day. However, the 68-43 vote to go to third reading was a reliable barometer of support for the reapportionment plan. The Senate, which passed its 60 member reapportionment plan 28-1 Wednesday, was to consider claims bills and a measure extending the power of the state's planning agency. Meanwhile, Senate President Jerry Thomas said a five-day extension of the session, due to end Friday, is necessary to complete work on appropriations and reapportionment.

At the world's largest telephone convention, the volume of overseas calls climbed accordingly. Hence the number of long distance phone circuits from the United States mounted more than 500 per cent in the 1960s to meet the accelerated demand. In 1970, for example, there were more than 26 million phone messages to and from the United States — more than seven times the number reported in 1960. Reflecting the phenomenal 30-year growth of global telephone communications, in 1971 the world had a population of nearly 3 billion. There were slightly less than 25 million phones. By 1971, when there were about 3 1/2 billion people on earth, the telephone population had soared to 27.1 million.

So, while world population fell short of doubling in a half-century, the number of phones increased by more than 10 times. The 15 world cities with more than a million phones include: New York City, Baltimore, Detroit, Chicago, Los Angeles, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Philadelphia, London, Moscow, Rome, Madrid, Tokyo, Paris, Montreal, Sydney, Australia.

Gabbiest Nation In Entire World

By FRANK MACOMBER Copy News Service Americans are the most talkative people in the world — telephone-wise, that is. Each U.S. resident uses the telephone an average of 770 times a year, or roughly twice a day. And that doesn't count how many times the phone user answers someone else's call. Canada is second in the world with an average of 720 calls per person, still slightly above the two-day average. Sweden is next with 674 calls per person on the average. These are some of the statistics gathered over a 12-month period by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., in a report, "The World's Telephones," with the help of telephone companies all over the globe. Around the globe, the number of phones had climbed to 27.1 million by Jan. 1, 1971, a 17.6 million increase of 6.9 per cent over the previous year and in line with the rapid growth pattern established during the decade of the 1960s. Even with this sharp advance, the number of nations with more than half a million phones has reached only 20. It is the latest country to reach the half-million mark. Still leading the world in the number of phones as of Jan. 1, 1971, was the United States with 130.2 million in service. Japan, with 36.2 million, was second, the United Kingdom with 15 million was third and West Germany, with 11.1 million, next. While the telephone population has soared, the ratings are the same. Fifteen cities in the world have more than a million phones. Of these, seven are in the United States. At the world's largest telephone convention, the volume of overseas calls climbed accordingly. Hence the number of long distance phone circuits from the United States mounted more than 500 per cent in the 1960s to meet the accelerated demand. Business Mirror Bonds, Like Stock, Also Risk This is only a simple example, but it happens often. And now there is another reason why the purchase of bonds is hardly the wise way to seek conservation of capital: Inflation. In a massive but clear and erudite looseleaf volume called "Q-T-The Three Keys to Stock Market Profits," John Winthrop Wright, one of the nation's most consistently successful investment advisers, writes: "Inflation has become a permanent factor in the economy of every nation, including the U.S.A. Therefore, ownership of fixed-income and deferred-dollar payment obligations is always a losing proposition for the investor." Nothing startling about such an observation. Others have told us the same thing in other words, that it is wiser to be a borrower than a lender in times of inflation. Curiously though, we didn't apply this to the bond market. Wright is a fundamentalist whose market philosophy is based on quality, value and timing—QVT. His statements are always backed by masses of data rather than by subjective observations. Setting Up Budget Can Be Problem Of A Family

By JOYCE ROARK Copy News Service Setting up a budget can be a problem to a family. By knowing the national average budget you can formulate your own family's budget. Joe Public's annual income after taxes is $3,500 ($700 per month). He found that his rent each month was $100 (14.3 per cent). His family spent $156 per month (22.8 per cent) on food (including alcoholic beverages and tobacco). They spent $99 per month (11.5 per cent) on transportation (gasoline and car payments). Because he has two school age children, he spent $78 per month (11.3 per cent) on clothes. For medical care the family spent $55 (7.4 per cent). Household operations each month cost $103 (14.3 per cent). The family spent $40 per month (5.3 per cent) on personal business (insurance, care, etc.). Recreation took $40 per month (11.3 per cent). The miscellaneous spending was $27 (3.8 per cent) each month. You may spend more for rent, house payments, etc. or you may spend more for food, transportation, medical care, etc. No matter what your budget is, compare it with this one to see how you compare with the national average. U.S. government offices did a survey in 1969-1970 of more than 10,000 urban and rural families. Their average income before taxes was about $9,794; after taxes, about $4,200. My own family would not be able to use this budget verbatim because our housing cost is higher each month and we like to put more in our savings each month. Your family will probably have similar discrepancies. By altering the percentages to fit your needs, you can establish a budget that fits your individual family. There are other ways of making up a budget for a family but this method is the easiest. Remember that there are no right formulas for determining the amount you should spend for housing, food, recreation, or any other category of expense. Authorities in the field of family finance recommend that a family not exceed 25 per cent of their income for housing, 25 per cent for food, or 15 per cent for clothing.

Computer Combats Phony Phone Calls

By ABRAHAM MAURER San Francisco Press Writer SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A computer programmed to say "no" in a feminine voice has been enlisted by the telephone company to stop fraudulent credit card calls. The computer, in a secret location in California, has prevented completion of some 500,000 bogus credit card calls since it began tipping off operators in January, says Ben Dial, assistant vice president for operations of Pacific Telephone Co. The only equipment of its kind in the United States, the computer was developed to combat a mounting credit card fraud problem in California, Dial said. "This machine will put a stop to it," he said. When a credit card call is placed, the operator keypunches the card number into the computer circuit. If the number checks out, the operator hears a recorded female voice say: "Okay." If the number is a phony, the voice says: "No." Repeats the number and says "No" again. The process takes 22 seconds. A caller who gives a false card number is offered the option of paying for the call or hanging up. The computer check is considered particularly around Hollywood and the larger universities, where most of the phony calls occur, Dial said. "In California, in fact, accounts for half the fraudulent credit card calls in the country last year," he said. "There may be some people who feel that real money is not involved," he said.

Dear Abby

No one proposed this proposed marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: About a week ago my friend and I finally set our wedding date. Nobody was surprised because we had been going together nearly three years.

My mother asked me how I "proposed" to me, and I told her I didn't think I proposed at all. She looked at me and said, "You didn't propose to HIM, did you?"

Then we got into a big discussion, and I told her that nobody proposed to anybody, we decided a long time ago to be married. My mother insisted there had to be a "proposal."

I will not remember any. I have never had any married friends, and they can't remember their "proposals" either.

Can it be that proposals have gone out of style? Please put your answer in the paper. My mother will think I'm crazy. And when she "GETTING MARRIED WITHOUT A PROPOSAL,"

SALLY J. FRIEDMAN

DEAR ABBY: I do not want to go to my funeral! I have devised the following plan to avoid it:

While my funeral service is being preached at the church, I have instructed the undertaker to take my body to the cemetery and bury it. Should anyone care to look at my grave after the services have been concluded at the church, they may do so.

I am grateful enough to lose a loved one without having to follow a closed box in and out of the church, and then slowly to be buried in the ground.

Not far from some of my family I think I am nuts. What do you think I'd like the opinions of others, too.

MRS. M. B. B. GREENWOOD, S. C.

DEAR MRS. B.: I am with those of your family who do NOT think you are "nuts."

DEAR ABBY: Our 13-year-old son is our problem. He refuses to participate in any sport. My husband says his coordination is good and he could do well in sports if he tried. My husband was an outstanding athlete and it kills him to see his own son shy away from it.

Our son is interested in sports as a spectator, however; he begs to go to the games with his father, and he gets his homework done ahead of time so he can watch sports on television.

How can we get him to participate? He's been this way since he was very young.

HIS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: As I see it, the problem is your husband's. It is his eagerness to have his son become an outstanding athlete, he's turned the key off.

Yes, yes, rather than fail and disappoint his father, I'm protecting himself by refusing to participate.

Perhaps if you could emphasize the fun and exercise of playing rather than the importance of winning, your son would become a participant instead of an observer. I hope so.

Fireplace, Walls Stir Questions

By BARBARA HASTUNG
Copy News Service

Q. Recently we purchased a new home and now we are trying to decorate it. Currently the problem is the living room: what color shall we paint, paper or panel the walls, and what type and color draperies shall we select? Our furniture includes a love seat and sofa, a floral bed, heavy and pair green chairs and a large rug. The carpeting we selected is a heavy medium gold color. The end tables are a peach, fruitwood. In addition to walls and draperies, we are wondering whether or not to paint the curved gray stone fireplace which covers part of our wall in the living room. If so, what color? What color would you suggest?

A. I would think that either a light gold paint for walls or a honey gold wood paneling would be delightful with draperies to match the wall color. If you paint in a light gold (otherwise tone lighter than the carpeting) with a green thread woven through, is your fireplace architecturally quite fine — do you wish to call attention to it or do you wish to have it blend with the background? If the latter, paint it the wall color. If the former, you might

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

EXPANSION RANCH: Three to six bedrooms are available in this design which has 2,312 habitable square feet, plus garage, on the first floor. Stairway to optional attic sleeping area is located between two bedrooms and foyer. This HACBY was designed by architect Herman H. Nock, 3604 14th Street, Jamaica, N.Y., 1142. Strangely indeed in the closet where three places for storage — the shelf, the clothes rod and the floor — aren't jammed to capacity.

The shelf is actually crammed with hats, boxes, blankets and several other items. The rod is packed with clothes suspended from hangers so close together that it takes considerable physical effort to remove one of the garments. And the floor is packed with shoes, coats and a variety of objects, plus at least a couple of things that have slipped off the hangers.

It might not seem possible to find any extra space in such a closet, but if there is, you look for it in addition to the areas not presently being utilized, more space can be created by the simple process of removing from their present locations clothes which are rarely, if ever, used any more. Make a check of your main clothes closet. Are there several shirts and dresses which you haven't put on for at least a year? If you simply can't make up your mind to dispose of them, how about taking them and storing them somewhere else — so, for instance, use of those empty suitcases you use only once or twice a year?

As for space that's already there, note how much of it there is between the lone shelf and the closet ceiling. Put another shelf there and you've made a big gain. It may not be as handy as the other, but it may even require a little maneuvering to remove things you put there. But it still will serve for little-used and perhaps seasonal items, freeing that much room from the lower shelf.

Another source of space is that between the bottom of the hanging garments and the floor. How about another shelf there? It must be carefully placed so it does not interfere with the clothes nor prevent you from getting things off the floor or from shoe racks, if you use them. In my well-planned arrangement, the closet had such a shelf, but it extended only about two-thirds across the

Here's How

Beauty Old Floors with Colorful Paint

By VIVIAN BROWN
AT-Newsletters Writer

The art of cover-up is an interesting aspect of the current resurging do-it-yourself movement.

If you cannot afford to replace walls and floors, you find another solution and sometimes the inventive substitute proves to be more attractive than the original.

For example, old gouged floors always have been at aesthetic detriment to the beautification of old houses. But people buy these dwellings, good floors or not, and then put their imaginations to work treating the problem in new ways.

Some people even replace old pine boards by making new ones look old. One man left two random-width floor boards out all winter. They he treated them with creosote until they had almost the exact finish of the original board.

Many of the painted floors in old houses are so attractive that they may be regarded as bright colors to liven the decorative scheme. If one owns the house with bad floors, one must decide whether the floors will be improved by the treatment. Painting them is done when the owners contemplate putting in new floors some day.

But painted floors haven't become so popular that many interior designers use such finishes on the best of floors. White is popular in the bowling alleys, but some use blue, pink, yellow, green, and there are designers who like dark brown-black lacquered floors.

On bad floors in an old house the inclination may be to do something drastic on them — an eye arrester, but it's better to look at the project as a lasting one. You might change it in a few years, but then again, perhaps you may not.

One couple put red over brown floors, but they regret it. It was called because they hadn't sanded the floors. They got another coat over it, but still didn't like it. They finally covered the hallway with a carpet and bought area rugs for the bedrooms.

Here are some ideas for painting floors:

For best results, the floors should be sanded "if it gets a tooth" as they say in the floor trade. Once this sanding procedure is completed, you can proceed. Outdoor paints may be used for good results and these are available in grays, browns, green, and brick, but other colors also can be formulated in most paint stores. A vinyl sealer-antidye is used.

One amazing design for floors is a big checkerboard design, but it takes planning and the careful interest of two people. One couple painted a giant blue and white checkerboard of three-foot squares. They marked the wall every three feet at the base and then drew white string from the middle of each wall to the opposite wall at these points, fastening it to tacks on the floor. When they had a series of string checks in the center of the room, they marked off the floor with chalk at the string lines. This set of squares was painted first. Lucky, too. As the project developed, they discovered the room wasn't plumb. But they solved that one by painting a blue border around the room. Improving as one goes along makes for something individualistic. But you don't want to experiment unless you think it through carefully.

This amateur painter worked on a 12' x 12' floorboard on the chalk line to keep from slipping over to the next square. White squares were painted first — two coats were needed — so they could dry before the darker color was put down. The lady of the house painted the darker squares using the checkerboard as a guide. It is a tedious job, but the couple feels it was well worth the backaches.

The couple was limited about using the power sander which they tested locally, but the floors were gouged to begin with, so they decided to take a chance. The alternative might be hand sanding and it's can be employed if all you want to do is get a rough finish.

Holmes Yard A Show Place

Gardening Secret: Tender Loving Care

By MARILYN GORDON

Somewhere in Seminole County there may be a yard as pretty as the one belonging to Oliver and Mildred Holmes, at Fern Park. But nowhere could there be a prettier yard.

It is so perfectly landscaped that no matter where your eyes fall they see a complete picture.

Nice years ago when the Holmeses decided to make Cal. all Florida their home they had to start from scratch with their yard. Trees were the only thing green coming with the house and the Holmeses even improved there. They put out palms, oak and fruit trees.

Almost everything was started from either seed or plants which friends and neighbors gave them.

"The secret," explained Mrs. Holmes, "is tender loving care. We put in a sprinkler system and water it about 15 to 20 minutes every day. I try to work three full days a week in the yard."

She advised couples landscaping their first Florida home to remember that everything is different in Florida. "Start with plants that do not freeze. Do not be afraid to start with small plants. They grow very fast in Florida. When shopping look for healthy plants that do not have insects under the leaves. Landscaping is a matter of personality. Our plants around the house are low. We like to be able to see the lake from the back and the neighborhood from the front. It is a matter of trial and error," she advised. "To be a successful gardener you have to love plants. I consider it a challenge to grow something. Success will not come to one who plants just to make the neighbors.

"We keep the lawn mowed at a level to cut the grass short and try to cut at the same time every week. Of course, if you cut too short you will bruise the grass," Mrs. Holmes cautioned.

"We also put racks all around the house so that there is a walkway and also so that when the time comes to paint the house we will not have to remove or injure any plants. None of our plants touch the house.

"Once for a lark I made mint jelly from my mint plants. It was delicious. Crush the mint leaves and the stems. Cover with water and bring to a boil. Remove from the heat, cover and let sit for 10 minutes. Strain. Add green food coloring to tint and a few drops of mint flavoring. Put your juice and Sure-Jel together. Add one cup of sugar for every cup of juice. Bring it to a hard boil. We served it with meat," she said.

Mrs. Holmes is an active member of the South Seminole Garden Club.

Springtime Is Here

By LOUISE L. GILL

New knowledge and new technological information is rapidly increasing. We are bringing much that influences our day-to-day lives. The answers cannot be found in the past — and we cannot see very far into the future. What we can walk into tomorrow, then, we found to help meet these challenges.

From community resources, among which are those offered by the Florida Extension Service —

Extension programs in Florida are involved with many areas of human relationships. Some topics currently being studied and explored by extension groups include improving family communications; the enacting roles of men and women; the relationships of parent, child and school; living with teenagers; being a parent; and using guidance and discipline to help children grow.

Two of the most important subjects to be taught by any person — male or female — are choosing a life partner and raising children. Should we not expect to put as much considered effort into good performance here as in other areas of living? No one is born with human relationship skills. They are learned, practiced, evaluated and improved.

Plants Important With Environment

The events in the last decade, particularly man's journey to the moon, have sharpened the awareness of the relationship between man and his environment. We depend on our understanding of ecology and environment to show the way to a quality existence. Quality existence must include open space and pleasant surroundings.

The goal of conservation is now also directed toward this ideal of encouraging and building of pleasing man-made environments which is the purpose of landscaping and proper use of plants. The most fragile of the existing natural resources are the open spaces, greenery, waters and choice scenery. They are the outdoors that we use for recreation — they are the charm of the countryside. The well groomed city street and the picture-perfect landscaped home.

Plants play a very important role in the improvement of our environment. As engineering elements, plants provide acoustical control, sounds can be deadened, deflected and absorbed by foliage. Glare, reflection of sun and light can also be controlled by plant use. Erosion control and traffic control are provided by plants. The transpiration and respiration of plants cool the environment acting as natural air conditioners and at the same time produce life giving oxygen while consuming unwanted carbon dioxide.

Plants act as natural light filters, absorbing harsh rays and heat. Air currents are directed, obstructed and filtered by trees and foliage. Rain and other forms of precipitation are slowed by foliage, protecting soils. Shade provided by plants controls soil temperature and reduces oxidation of valuable organic matter. Air temperatures are modified by groups of trees and foliage. Plant roots and organic matter from plants provide the reservoir that holds the valuable fresh water needed for human use.

These are some physical effects of plants in the environment. What plants do for our mental well being is difficult to measure. We all know the nebulous benefits from plants in the environment are probably the most important. Greenery and flowers tend to relax us and lift our spirits. Even if a person is not a gardener, the effects are noticeable. Plants affect life in more ways that are unknown or not understood probably than those we do understand.

Plant use then is not only ornamental but environmental as well.

"I have just moved to Seminole County from plants in the North and have no idea how to grow plants in this area. Where can I find information to help me garden in Florida?" This question is heard over and over again.

There are a number of sources of gardening information for the new homeowner or gardener. A good place to start is with a visit to the local garden supply store or plant nursery.

Cactus Numbers 1,500 Species

The cactus family (Cactaceae) contains more than 1,500 species and subdivisions. These plants can be divided into two groups — those indigenous to the desert and those native to the tropics. Cacti that grow in warm climates but a few are cold hardy. They vary in size from small plants less than an inch high to tree-like forms 30-60 feet high. Their habit of growth varies from upright, spreading or vine types. Some have thorns or spines, others do not.

All cacti require full sun and some are fast growing, while others are extremely slow growing.

Cacti usually produce large showy flowers and their fruit is an edible berry.

You cannot identify the plant unless it has typical cactus spines or you know the botanical structure of the flower and then see the plant in bloom. Many of the plants we call cactus are not. These include agave, aloe, and many others that resemble cacti.

Cacti may be grown in flower pots, glass containers or ground beds. Regardless of where they are grown, they should be planted in a well drained soil. Grave, coarse sand or broken clay pots may be used for soil drainage in containers or outdoor locations. Plants should be planted at the same depth at which they were grown. Deep planting may cause rot of the base of the plant.

The soil should be a mixture of one-third sand, one-third leaf mold or peat moss, and one-third soil. Sand may be omitted from the mixture if the soil is already very sandy.

The Natural Look Is In

By MARIE STANTON
Copy News Service

WANTED: Lively family needs furniture, practical fabrics, more versatility, accessories to pick up tired old houses. Must be priced for second-hand market.

Sound familiar? If so, take heed. Help is on the way. Because the lively, busy person's or family's needs have been reflected in the home furnishings market and the nation's manufacturers are beginning to offer a livelier look to home furnishings.

fashions for the buyer concerned with aesthetics, function and price. Here are a few general observations from manufacturers showing at the Los Angeles market where retail furniture store representatives go to buy.

The natural look is here. Ecology seems to have brought influence and that goes for color as well as material and design. Nature's colors are seen everywhere. Earth, sky and sea inspired many of the color combinations, perhaps the most refreshingly used: brown, blue and white. This combination was treated in a variety of ways, from stylized floral prints to traditional upholstery or contemporary stripes or geometrics on modern pieces.

The soft sky and ocean blue were a foil for basic brown—seen extensively. There were deep, polished brown-blacks, rich chocolates, rusty terra cotta shades and honey-toned camel colors with all manner of shading in between. They are seldom pale beige, however. More frequently they're often in color, although the shade may be fairly light.

Green can hardly be ignored as an important home fashion color. However, it's color that has become so earthy. It's often hard to distinguish from brown.

In many cases, avocado is giving way to olive, and olive to a greenish brown.

Gold is still an important home fashion color and its range from palest honey to deep mustard.

PERSONAL COMFORT—A sepia brown urethane-coated fabric covers an eight-foot sofa which is combined with matching chairs and ottoman covered in heavy linen. A carpet fabric covers the walls.

The small floral design of the "Caucasian" rug is characteristic of deep, rich colors. It is sometimes seen as well as a more geometrically oriented design which well might have been derived from Oriental rugs originally woven in the Caucasus region.

Sophisticated geometrics obviously borrowed from the American Indians as well as provincial styles from such countries as Poland and other Middle European nations are making their way into the upholstery market and are shown on both traditional and modern styling, depending greatly on their color combinations.

Handcrafted articles—rugs, occasional tables and seats, particularly lamps—are increasing in the middle-price home furnishings field. An especially appealing example was Sunset Lamp Corp.'s design for lamp bases on crochery.

"We're definitely committed to a more natural look," explained Sunset's marketing director, C. W. Butler. "And people are becoming more sophisticated. They expect a lamp to be more than just a lamp. It needs to be an interesting and attractive accessory."

Illustrating his point further is his firm's collection of lamp bases inspired by African sculptures and those taken from the designs of the American Indian.

America's interest in handcrafted materials for the home, in some ways, is related to the people's interest in natural quality today. Many fabrics for draperies, upholstery, walls and floors provide terrific textural interest. Sensoons in nature are the large number of homespun-looking fabrics, soft velvets (both printed and cut), soft leather-like vinyls and long-pile nylon in a furry look.

Summer Annuals Color Gardens

Color in the garden during the summer can be emphasized by the use of summer annuals according to Florida Nurserymen and Growers Association (FNGA). The winter flowering annuals are beginning to look rather sooty, losing their vigor and probably well riddled by bugs. These can be rogued out of beds and preparation made for the summer flowers.

Summer flowering annuals are almost in the minority when it comes to choice. Here are a few that will be available from your local nursery and garden supply store. Zinnias, many forms and types. Marigolds both dwarf and tall growing varieties. The Washbone flower is ideally suited to shady locations. Gomphrena is another summer annual that looks much like a red hot piper. It is everlasting and thrives on hot weather. Don't overlook Hosta. If you have a hot dry sunny place this little plant can form a beautiful carpet all summer long. It is related to the Cockscomb family. The plant produces a mass of foliage and as it matures the top becomes a flaming red. Give Fireball plenty of room and full sun. It grows to a height of 4 to 5 feet.

A few rain showers during this month may bring out an abundance of toadstools. Don't gamble on eating them unless you are a qualified botanist.

There isn't too much you can do about toadstools. They are going to appear and reappear as the summer showers progress. Now is the time to think about increasing your shrubs. You may want to put in a few air layers on your Rubber trees or on Crotons.

New growth on the Cuban Laurel at this time of year may become infested with thrips. Thrips cause a distorted lip growth only on the Cuban Laurel.

This plant grows well in a sunny or shaded location, and will tolerate slight salt air. The plant's foliage is considered poisonous and should not be eaten by humans or animals. Cherry laurel prefers a rich, well-drained, fertile soil for best growth. Poor soils should be improved by the addition of organic matter, such as peat moss, leaf-mold, manures or sludge.

Container-grown plants are available at nurseries. The can should be cut and removed from the plant before planting.

Container-grown plants may be planted at anytime during the year. Field-grown plants are generally dug with a ball of soil around their roots and wrapped in burlap—thus, the term "balled and burlapped." This type plant will recover best if set out during the cool months of the year.

Cherry laurel are useful as tall hedges or screen plantings. They also are effective as a trimmed hedge.

The tree also suckers to some extent and may be trained into a clump, leaving the desired trunks intact. Lower branches may be removed to give an attractive top canopy. The tree may find use close to the house or where a small shade tree is wanted.

The live oak is one of our most prized and desirable shade trees. Its wide spreading horizontal branches and shape make this tree one of the most picturesque trees for landscape use. This tree will attain a height of 50 feet or more, and a spread of 100 or more feet. Its trunk is short, stout and deeply furrowed. The older trees will have a diameter of three or four feet.

The leaves are thick, leathery, smooth above, pale and silvery white beneath, and edges slightly rolled under. The live oak is an evergreen tree, but loses most of its leaves for about a week or ten days in late winter. New leaves quickly replace the fallen ones.

Shade Trees Prized

Cherry laurel is a fast growing, cold-hardy evergreen tree or large bush. In a good growing atmosphere, the plant may reach a height of 40 feet. Its leaves are glossy green with a few teeth around the margins. Leaf arrangement on the stem is alternate.

Clusters of small, white, fragrant flowers, about one-eighth inch in diameter are produced in the spring. The fruit that develops is about one-half inch in diameter, round in shape, with a stone or pit, and black when mature.

This plant grows well in a sunny or shaded location, and will tolerate slight salt air. The plant's foliage is considered poisonous and should not be eaten by humans or animals.

Many Flowers Suitable

Every Florida garden should have some annual or perennial flowers. With our abundant sunshine, there is no reason why we should not take advantage of the colorful display provided by a wide range of flowers suitable to this area.

Special preparation of the soil is usually necessary if thrifty plants which produce large numbers of flowers of good substance are expected. If the soil is light, sandy and low in organic matter, it should be built up by using food quantities of rotted manure, rotted leaves, hammock soil, or peat. If the soil, on the other hand, is low and subject to flooding, adequate drainage should be provided. Beds raised about 12 inches with ditches between them should be satisfactory. Much evidence points to the value of mulching after the plants are set where they are to bloom. A layer of peat, rotted manure, or oak leaves will sequester moisture, keep the roots cool, and discourage weed growth.

After the plants have been growing in their permanent positions for about six weeks and are well established, a schedule of regular feeding may be started. A balanced fertilizer which contains nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium together with traces of the minor elements should be used to insure robust plants and an abundance of blooms. A light sprinkling of this balanced fertilizer every two or three weeks is much preferred over heavier feedings at great intervals. If the flowers are growing under a much of leaves, the fertilizer can be sprinkled on top and watered in. If you are using a hoe for clean cultivation, the fertilizer should be lightly hoed in, followed by ample irrigation.

Time To Plant Summer Annuals

Spring is opening up, but you still have time to plant summer annuals according to Florida Nurserymen and Growers Association (FNGA). If you have no success in planting seeds that require no seedling already started from your nursery or garden supply store. Here are some that will perform admirably for you during the summer months. In Zinnias, there are many new varieties available. Most of them are a far cry from the old fashioned flowers that grandma grew. You may want to try the Mexican Zinnia, or the Persian Carpet. Don't overlook the Thumbelinas. These are ideal for pots, low beds and edgings.

Some of the larger varieties, of course, are ideal for cut flowers. The new hybrid variety Zinnia make excellent cut flowers growing to a height of two and a half feet. For an outstanding bright color try Firecracker Red. The new super giants are a very doubled flower and may have pastel colors with two and three tone effects.

Most everyone is familiar with the common Pigweed that infests our garden, but there is a beautiful variety sometimes referred to as Summer Poinsettia. This plant produces a striking effect against a green or white background. The young leaves are flaming, rosy crimson and attain a height of three feet. Other summer annuals that you might find highly desirable are Marigolds. These come in new shapes, heights and colors. Don't overlook planting Coleus.

The WEEDERS GUIDE

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures
Take your plants to the night football or baseball game with you. It will do them good. Mercury metal halide lamps, used to illuminate sports fields and warehouses—have increased plant growth up to 60 per cent in greenhouse culture.

The Weed Science Society of America recently was told at St. Louis, Mo., by Prof. William B. Duke, an agronomist at the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, "the prime advantage of this lighting system is that plants exposed to mercury lamps more closely resemble field-grown crops than any we have observed before."

This includes plants grown in refined growth chambers, he added, explaining that plants grown under conventional greenhouse light normally differ from those grown in open fields in that they are tall and spindly. Plants he grew under mercury lamps had sturdy stems and heavier leaves.

Unlike the fluorescent and incandescent lamps normally used, the mercury halide lamps emit a continuous spectrum similar to that of natural sunlight. Duke related other advantages listed were increased light intensity and less lampage (strength of electrical current) in the greenhouse.

Because of this heightened intensity the lights can be held at a higher level, Duke added. "This, combined with the fact that fewer banks of lights are needed, decreases shading and permits more natural sunlight to filter to the plants."

There is one disadvantage. Weeds such as quackgrass, wild mustard and green foxtail showed a growth increase of 60 per cent, while the growth rate of corn, soybeans and alfalfa climbed 40 per cent in greenhouses with mercury halide lamps.

Organic Fertilizers derived from composts, animal manures and plant residues give any unique nutritional qualities to food crops? A Cornell University soil scientist says not.

Prof. William H. Allaway says that "although the addition of organic matter is beneficial for soil management and conservation, the plants produced on organically fertilized soil are not necessarily of higher nutritional quality than plants grown with inorganic or commercial fertilizers."

In explanation, he said, the elements essential to plant growth for the most part enter plants in inorganic form. "When organic matter is added to the soil," he added, "it is broken down by soil microorganisms and the plant nutrients in the organic matter are converted to simpler inorganic compounds. Plants use these inorganic compounds of nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, sulphur and trace elements as sources of the substances needed for plant growth."

"Within the plant, and in the human that eats the plant, these elements have the same effect, regardless of whether they were added to the soil in organic or commercial fertilizers."

The professor said there was no laboratory test, or animal feeding trial, that will infallibly distinguish plants grown with organic fertilizers from those grown with commercial ones. But he did stress that soils with a high amount of organic matter have many desirable physical properties. And he urged farmers to use all practical means to conserve the organic content of their soil.

Here's How Lightening Panel Not Easy

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. We have a deal on to sell our house. But the prospective buyer thinks the paneling in the living room is far too dark and asks if it could be lightened. Since it seems to be a certain sale, I agreed to have the job done. Can you tell me the best way to go about it? If necessary, I will hire a professional in the refinishing business. — Arthur M.

A. I can give you instruction. Then, if the job seems too difficult, you could hire a painter. To lighten the tone of the paneling, the present finish must be removed. Even before the stain can be bleached, any existing wax on the present finish must be removed. If you decide to go ahead with this complete process of removing the finish and starting over, first thoroughly clean the surface. If it is waxed, try washing down an inconspicuous area with turpentine to learn if past wax has previously been used. If liquid self-polishing wax was used, try a wax remover.

Q. We have a house on the side of the canyon and our recreation room is on the lower or basement level, below grade. We are having trouble with the floor, which is a concrete slab that has been painted with porch enamel. It seems to be constantly dusty, even though we first treated it with a sealer. It looks terrible. Is there any way we can correct this condition? — Mrs. Helen F.

A. The fact that your floor is dusty indicates that either your paint is flaking or that the floor was not properly prepared in the first place. Conventional paints and enamels are not suited for application to concrete for the reason that natural alkali in

Kimono Wall Hangings

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. My husband who is in the Navy was recently given a very old and heavily embroidered Japanese kimono as a gift by a family with whom we have become acquainted. It is in colors of deep blue, two shades of yellow and some peach shades. I would like to use the kimono in our living room and I have thought of using it as an upholstery fabric or for pillows. However, the fabric looks rather delicate and so I don't think it would hold up well. What might I do with it? N.H.C.

A. I think it would be sad to cup up an old and beautiful kimono especially if it is in fairly good condition. Why not treat the kimono as a painting and hang it on your wall like a work of art which it probably is. A Japanese kimono can make a handsome wall hanging and a dramatic one as well. The most common and surely one of the most handsome ways of displaying a kimono is to obtain a large piece of bamboo and insert it through the arms and across the shoulders of the kimono so the kimono is flat and the embroidery can be appreciated.

Q. We are moving into a new house. The living room has shades of green — light to medium. The draperies are eggshell and white sheers. Our sofa is avocado, two matching chairs are orange and gold print. The organ, stereo and tables are walnut. What color should we paint the walls? Also, what colors for throw pillows? N.N.

A. The color probably should be decided taking into consideration the exposure of the room as well as what you like. If you want a warm look to the room, choose a pale gold. If you want a cool room, choose a pale green. If you want a neutral, choose an eggshell. They all would look well with what you describe.

If you can get, still have or can match the sofa and chair fabrics, I'd use those — the print pillows on the sofa and plain on the chairs, as well as

Christians Observe Good Friday Rites

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Christian pilgrims flocked to Jerusalem today to retrace Christ's final footsteps along the Via Dolorosa - The Way of Sorrows - to the traditional scene of the Crucifixion.
Thousands of visitors from abroad passed through the narrow lanes of Jerusalem for the annual Good Friday pilgrimage of mourning to Calvary.
Warm spring breezes swept the city as the pilgrims, some of them carrying 2-foot wooden crosses on their backs, began the mile-long procession through Jerusalem's bazaars.
It was the fifth Good Friday in Jerusalem since Israel captured the old city from Jordan in the 1957 war.
In Berlin, a massive Good Friday flow of Westerners crossed the wall into East Berlin and East Germany.
West Berlin police reported crowds at all nine border crossing points. "Processing continues quick but the crowds apparently have overburdened the Eastern facilities," they said.
Cars carrying West Berliners into the East German countryside for the first time in 20 years were lined up as much as two miles at the three main access points.
In the Philippines, several hundred flagellants underwent their annual torture rituals to recall the sufferings of Christ and atone for their own sins.
With some wearing head-pieces of vines, they were whacked on the back with wooden bats covered with razor sharp glass, then flogged with whips of bamboo rods.
When it was over they fell to their knees and prayed, then washed off their wounds in nearby rivers.

It'll never go down in history alongside the works of genius like Shakespeare, etc., but I think that the efforts of one Roy Stevens of Kentucky bears repetition.
It's entitled, Love to A Preacher.
You throw your bricks, and speak of love; You can't take pushing, but you like to shove. You swear by peace, while you light your torch; And lose it on your neighbor's porch. "Rights and freedom," that's what you say; But heaven help us if we get in your way. Our country's awful, you cry and frown; You'll build it up by leaving it down. Oh what a life, just flapping your jaws; and creating problems while pointing out flaws. But talk is cheap, and so are signs; "Progress comes, from Alexander designs. For you see the world, wasn't built in a day; Not with unachieves and not with play. We got where we are, because we are strong; Not preachers of hate, and doers of wrong. Hard work and thought, have paid our debts; And we won't be undone, by shouting and threat. If you want this country, placed in your hands; try work and sweat, instead of demands. Don't get angry, if it takes some time; You've got to earn, a place in line. The things you want, you may never see; If you spend all your time, just marching on me. So start at the beginning, and help set the pace; Don't look for a win, if you forego the race. Give of your energy, stand sturdy and tall; And together we'll build, a world better for all.

The Tomb of Jesus Christ can symbolize the truth beyond man's scientific eyes. Explosion in that Tomb was cosmic force. To prove the death of Christ was not a loss. Christ's mortal body fashioned instantly. From flesh to highest radiant energy. Like oxygen in water changed by death. To gaseous atmosphere for cosmic breath. Then Christ appeared in mortal form to show True body of the spirit men shall know. Thus goal of death let every man behold. With many missions Jesus Christ foretold. The Father's House exists out there in space. So wipe the tears, my children from your face.

North Orlando, Longwood Hit Tornado Rips County

A tornado touched — down in Seminole County early this morning, striking the Village of North Orlando first and then hop-scotching into the Longwood area, along Highway U.S. 192.
No injuries were reported at any of the damaged sites, the only two reported to the Seminole County sheriff's office.
In North Orlando, the twister tore apart a utility shed and also flipped a travel-type camper onto its side. Also, power lines were ripped from the poles and telephone communications were disrupted.
In Longwood, the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Cox, on George Street, had part of the roof torn off. A six-year old daughter, Christine, was asleep in her bedroom when the bow of the boat came sailing through her window. She was uninjured. (Related Photos Pgs 3A and 7A)
Also in the home was John Jr., age 2, who said he was awakened by the "terrible noise and lightning." The family said when it heard the loud noise outside, "We knew a tornado had arrived."
The Longwood fire department was the first on the scene, having received the call at 5:18 a.m.
While the firemen were busy covering the gaping hole in the roof of the Cox home, Elnora Lommer, wife of the Longwood fire chief, was preparing coffee to be served to the men.
In her anxiety, Mrs. Lommer fell, fracturing a couple of ribs and was rushed to Winter Park Hospital.
The Longwood fire department also responded at 7:37 a.m. to put out a fire at the Woodland subdivision where an exploding gas water heater caused minor damage.

The estimated damage to the Cox home is in excess of $6,000 with water more than ankle deep throughout the house.
It was noted that a "technically" was overlooked in that this storm-damaged house was 5/8" outside of the Longwood city limits but this did not deter its firemen in making haste to the scene.
The Coxes' neighbor reported that some time during the height of the blowing wind, their power mower was "lifted" from its storage space. Prior to press time, it still had not been found.
At Creel's Mobile Home Sales, one of the mobile homes was overturned by the high winds.
The Longwood police and fire departments were on the scene Cont'd On Pg. 3A Col. 5'

Split Sanford For Council Has Support

By BILL SCOTT
A five-to-four vote, the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce legislative and national affairs committee this morning approved a resolution offered by George Crosley to request the city commission to ask the voters of Sanford to decide whether to divide the city into four districts.
In a battle between proponents of districting and those committee members opposing change from the present system of having four commissioners and the mayor-commissioner run at-large, the motion was finally passed by Robert Daehn, chairman, voted "yes."
With Crosley asking that the people be given the right to vote on whether they want commissioners to reside in city districts, much opposition was generated by Clifford McKibbin and Andrew Carraway.
McKibbin disclosed that several businessmen had expressed opposition to districting. "The chamber will alienate some of its own members with this thing, and I would like to drop it," McKibbin advised.
Under questioning from Crosley, McKibbin explained that certain people were of the opinion that blacks could not adequately represent them.
"That's incredible, just incredible," was Crosley's reply.
Carraway shot back, "You're not supposed to do that because you are catering to a minority." Carraway explained that by limiting to districts, the quality of people to serve is also limited.
City Commissioner Gordon Meyer, giving an indication of how the City Commission may approach the issue, stated he felt another recommendation to the Commission from the chamber should be from the entire Chamber.
Walter Giesow warned that in Orange County, the people had to circulate petitions to allow a charter question to come before the people for vote.
Kridler asked, "All we are asking is that the people be given the right to vote on the question."

SHS Narcotic Charge Denied By Principal

A statement that 75 per cent of all Seminole High School students are using some kind of drugs was dropped before the Friday meeting of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce legislative and national affairs committee but drew a vigorous denial from Jack Redding, principal.
George Crosley, committee vice chairman, said he was quoting Det. Sgt. Ralph Russell of the city "narc squad" in asking the chamber of assistance to police in the drug fight.
Crosley quoted Russell as saying that the drug heroin can be purchased easily in the city.
Redding retorted, "It's a damn lie." Redding added added, "Even if it were true it should not be quoted."
Robert Daehn, committee chairman, told Crosley he would appoint a sub-committee to investigate his proposal.
Later The Herald contacted Det. Eddie Hubbs, until a few weeks ago a member of the city's "narc squad," and questioned him about the high amount of drugs used at the high school.
Hubbs agreed that drug use is extremely high at the school and opined that the majority of students are taking drugs. He said the type being used ran from marijuana to "acid" and heroin.

Near McCoy AFB B-52 Crashes

Sanford police radio reported there was a nuclear weapon aboard the B52 bomber.
Firefighting and other equipment was dispatched from Sanford Airport to the crash scene.
By Gary Taylor
A military aircraft, a B-52 bomber, crashed near McCoy Air Force Base at approximately 11:30 a.m. today. According to Herndon, the Air Force, the plane was on a mission to drop bombs on a target area in Cuba.
The plane crashed into a residential area, and Major Carl Langford said seven crewmen aboard were killed. He also said there were numerous civilian casualties.
The base is just south of Orlando.
Witnesses said the bomber still was burning about an hour after the crash and that residents of homes around the crash site were being evacuated because one wing of the aircraft still was filled with fuel.
The roof was ripped off a fourth. It was not known if there were any civilian deaths.
Bart Forster, a spokesman for McCoy Air Force Base, where the plane was based, said it carried a crew of seven when it exploded and burned about a quarter-mile northwest of the base.
The base is just south of Orlando.
Witnesses said the bomber still was burning about an hour after the crash and that residents of homes around the crash site were being evacuated because one wing of the aircraft still was filled with fuel.
