Phillip Bathalter, 13, of Lake Mary, was attacked at about 4 p.m. Monday as he walked home from school. He said he was cut above the lip by a B-B pellet. Bathalter said he saw three or four boys run into woods after he was shot. Deputies said the earlier incident was similar.

The certificates were validated in circuit court Oct. 26.

Sheriff's car hits doe

GENEVA — Seminole County sheriff's Lt. Jim Brantly, an avid hunter, accidentally bagged a doe late Saturday night.

Brantly, a patrol shift supervisor, was on patrol in an unmarked car on Snowhill Road, Geneva, when his car accidentally collided with the deer in the road.

Capt. Jay Leman said there was minimal damage to Brantly's car. The deer ran away and its fate is unknown.

There was no comment from Brantly on the collision, but Leman said Brantly is known to travel extensively in pursuit of wild game, but never before while on duty.

Clerk-killing arrest

Cops use thumb prints to link 21-year-old to stabbing death

SUSAN LOREN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Jonathan Shuler, 21, of Sanford, was arrested this morning and charged with murder in the stabbing death of convenience store clerk Herbert Malcomb Allen, 48, who was working an overnight shift alone on Nov. 19.

Sanford police arrested Shuler within hours of the Sanford City Commission approving the first reading of an ordinance that requires two clerks to be on duty at convenience stores at night.

Police allege that Allen, of Deltona, was killed around 2 a.m. that Sunday morning by Shuler who allegedly stole five cartons of cigarettes from the Circle K, 1809 W. First St. Police said Allen was stabbed three times — in the left chest, hip and inner thigh.

A thumbprint on a bloody butcher knife found near Allen's body reportedly identified Shuler as a suspect in the case. The print matched Shuler's right thumbprint on file at the Sanford police station, police said.

Police said Shuler has a criminal record, but early today couldn't say what crimes he had been accused of before.

The print match was made Monday afternoon by a Florida Department of Law Enforcement Crime Lab technician. After the match was made, the technician returned to the Orlando lab and reportedly matched a second print found on a carton of cigarettes that had been knocked from a store shelf during the robbery-homicide, police said.

At about 1:30 a.m. today, Shuler was found at his house at 54 Lake Monroe Terrace, and arrested without incident, police said. He is held without bond in the Seminole County jail and is also charged with armed robbery and use of a weapon on the commission of a crime.

Police PFC Carlos M. Monti, who made the arrest, reported that on the night of Allen's death, Allen is believed to have been last seen by Police Officer Walter Gaines. At 1:40 a.m., Gaines took a report of an attempted theft of cigarettes from the store from Allen.

Lt. Mike Rotundo said today that police "can't say for sure if he (Shuler) was a suspect (in that earlier robbery attempt.) We don't know at this time."

"I thank God he's off the streets — that he won't be able to do it to another family. I thank God and the police department," Allen's widow Ruby said this morning of Shuler's arrest. She said her husband, an assistant manager, hadn't been scheduled to work on the night he died, but he was filling in for another clerk, who had cut his hand. Mrs. Allen said her husband believed there should be two clerks on duty at convenience stores at night.

Mrs. Allen said that security at convenience stores must be increased for the sake of customers as well as workers. "They're very vulnerable, even customers walking from the store. The lighting is bad. Whatever means it takes, do it," she said of security measures at the stores. "Nothing is worth the loss of a human life."

Allen's bloody body was found sitting on crates and leaning against a wall behind the checkout counter when customer Michael Wayne Metcalf walked in to the store at 2:08 a.m. Nov. 19.

Metcalf, police said, left the store and went to the 7-Eleven on the corner of First Street and U.S. Highway 17-92, to ask an employee there to call police to the Circle K. At 2:10 a.m. Police Officer Darren L. Scott arrived at the store.

Wife of murdered store employee pleads for two-clerk city ordinance

Commission follows with approval on first reading

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The widow of a convenience store clerk stabbed to death this month tearfully urged the city commission last night to approve an ordinance requiring two store clerks to be on duty overnight.

Ruby Allen's statement came before commissioners unanimously passed the controversial legislation on first reading. A second public hearing on the ordinance will be Dec. 11.

Ruby Allen's husband, Herbert Malcomb Allen, 48, was killed during a robbery Nov. 19 at Circle K, 1809 W. First St.

A family member read a statement prepared by Allen as she held his hand and sobbed.

"No amount of money is worth a human life. I know because I have lost everything that is meaningful to me," Allen's statement read.

Allen said she supported the two-clerk mandate, as well as provisions of the ordinance requiring security cameras, drop safes, better lighting and clearer visibility into store windows.

Mayor Betty Smith said before casting her vote for the regulations, "Our saying yes to this may save

Lake Monroe restoration gets priority

By SUSAN LOREN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Lake Monroe will be one of three Florida lakes to benefit this year from the first major lake restoration project of the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission (GFWFC).

Increases in freshwater fishing license fees will provide funds to step up lake restoration efforts throughout the state, said Vince Williams of the GFWFC.

In addition to Lake Monroe, Lake Tohopekaliga and Lake Miccosukee will be restored in the first phase. Lake Tohopekaliga, in Kissimmee, and Lake Miccosukee have priority in the current fiscal year, Williams said.

Williams said during this fiscal year the GFWFC expects to have $450,000 to spend on lake restoration. Next year will be the first full year of increased revenue from fishing license sales and based on expected sales, Williams said the restoration fund is expected to be $2 million for the state.

Thirty-four subpoenaed in Kelley case

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The State Attorney's Office has subpoenaed 34 people in its election-law-violations case against Seminole County Commissioner Jennifer Kelley and her husband Eoghan.

Kelley campaign workers, the county elections supervisor and officials from three Central Florida banks were subpoenaed by Assistant State Attorney Wayne Holmes. Court files show the subpoenas were issued Nov. 13 and were served during the following two weeks. The witnesses were ordered to appear for the Kelleys' trial on Dec. 14.

Most of the people subpoenaed were identified as Kelley campaign workers in the State Attorney's charges filed Oct. 23. The 115 charges against the Kelleys' allege Eoghan Kelley paid campaign workers in violation of election laws. The state alleges the Kelleys used their business account to pay high school students and other people to work for Jennifer Kelley's District 5 county commission election bid.

The charges were filed subsequent to a complaint made in April by Art Davis, Jennifer Kelley's opponent in the commission race.

Jennifer Kelley could not be reached for comment.

At least 25 of the people subpoenaed this month were campaign workers who state prosecutors allege had been paid in violation of election laws. Among the campaign workers were the Kelley's son-in-law, Bob Maguire. Maguire said he worked for Eoghan Kelley's computer business, Intel-vest, but occasionally his computer programming responsibilities would "cross

Old Lake Mary City Hall may become museum

By SANDRA BOUCHANINE
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — An historic landmark in the city might receive a major facelift if things go according to plan.

Associate Planner Mark Reggentin said Lake Mary has a "50-50" chance of receiving a $50,000 grant from the State Division of Historical Resources to convert old Lake Mary City Hall into a museum.

Reggentin approached the commission several months ago with the idea of converting the 1920s-era structure into a museum. The building, at 158 North Country Club Road, is now used as the commission chambers and by various civic organizations.

During its heyday, the structure was known as the Chamber of Commerce building. It brimmed with life as couples prouetted across its hardwood floors during social dances, families enjoyed oyster dinners, and children performed in plays on its stage.

Margaret Wesley, who chronicled the city's history in her book, "Lake Mary's Beginnings," wrote that "The Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce was the nucleus around which the town's activities centered. Young and old participated in its meetings and projects."

In 1954 the building was sold and was used for a variety of commercial businesses, including a print shop, general store and frame shop. In 1981, the city purchased it for use as a city hall.

In 1984 the building faced the threat of the bulldozers when a fire destroyed the entire eastern wall. The commission unanimously voted to restore rather than demolish the building and citizens donated 10,000 hours of labor to reconstruct it at a cost of more than $20,000, according to the grant application.

After the city commission moves into the new city hall next summer, the Chamber of Commerce and various church groups will

Defense witness aids prosecution's case

MIAMI — A Hispanic policeman charged in the deaths of two black motorcyclists was in no danger of being hit by them, a hostile defense witness said Monday in testimony that struck at a key portion of the officer's defense.

Officer William Lozano, 31, is charged with two counts of manslaughter in the Jan. 16 deaths of motorcyclist Clement Lloyd, 23, and passenger Allen Blanchard, 24. The deaths prompted three days of racial unrest in Miami's Overtown neighborhood.

The two men were being chased by another officer for reckless driving following a parade celebrating Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday. Lozano, who was involved in another call when he saw the chase, claims the motorcycle was coming at him and he shot in self defense.

Lloyd slammed into Fred Johnson's oncoming Buick after Lozano shot him. In an earlier statement to police, Johnson said, "He was going to run (Lozano) down because the traffic was kind of heavy."

On the witness stand Monday, Johnson told defense lawyer Roy Black that Lloyd was driving on the wrong side of the road when the shot was fired, but was as close to the center line as possible.

He told Assistant State Attorney John Hogan that the motorcycle was not headed for Lozano and that Lloyd did not veer very far into the wrong lane until after he was shot, hitting the Buick head on.

"Did you ever see the motorcycle go toward Officer Lozano?" Hogan asked.

"No," Johnson said.

Fugitive dead, but bond battle continues

MIAMI — A cocaine fugitive missing for nearly three years has finally been tracked down, but the battle over his forfeited $500,000 bond continues because the man is dead.

Carlos Mejia, 44, was buried at Jardines de Paz Cemetery in Cartagena, Colombia, in July. According to U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents in Colombia, he was shot and killed July 9 during an argument with a friend.

The DEA's information vindicates Miami bail bondsman Joel Whittice, who lost $450,000 when Mejia jumped bail on charges of cocaine trafficking and manslaughter.

Whittice said earlier this year that he had evidence Mejia was dead, but Assistant Statewide Prosecutor James Lewis remained skeptical and opposed the bondsman's efforts to recover some of the money lost when Mejia fled.

On Dec. 8, Whittice intends to ask Broward County Circuit Judge Paul Grossman to return most of the money.

Whittice's lawyer, Herb Cohen, said he will ask to recover 65 percent, or $475,000, on the theory that Whittice could have captured Mejia within six months of flight had Lewis not thwarted his efforts.

Study pinpoints oldest, youngest areas

GAINESVILLE — Florida's oldest populations are in the five Gulf coast counties north and south of Tampa Bay, where the median age is double that of the youngest counties, according to a study released Monday.

Not surprisingly, the youngest populations are in Alachua and Leon counties, both of which have major public universities, the University of Florida study said.

Overall, the median age in Florida in 1986 was 36.4 years, according to "The Median Age of Florida's Counties: A Pattern of Diversity." All the figures were compiled for 1984.

Alachua County is Florida's youngest, with a median age of 26.5 years, while Charlotte County is the state's oldest, with a median age of 66.8 years.

"This indicates what great diversity exists among Florida's counties," said Scott Cody of UF's Bureau of Economic and Business Research, who wrote the study with Ravi S. Bayya.

Former candidate pleads guilty to fraud

ORLANDO — As part of a plea bargain agreement, former Tennessee gubernatorial candidate Jake Butcher pleaded guilty in a federal court Monday to charges that he defrauded a Florida bank.

U.S. District Judge G. Kendall Sharp accepted the plea, and scheduled a sentencing hearing March 21, a court official said.

Under the terms of the plea bargain, the former banker admitted to two counts of defrauding the Florida Center Bank of Orlando, said Edward Garland, Butcher's Atlanta-based attorney, in exchange, conspiracy charges linked to the case were dropped.

Butcher admitted to using proceeds from a bank loan for purposes other than those stipulated by him in the loan agreement, Garland said. He was indicted on 19 counts of fraud by an Orlando grand jury Aug. 30.

The indictment charged that Butcher and several others defrauded the bank of about $3 million. Butcher was responsible for two loans equaling little more than $100,000, Garland said.

Women unite to make homes safer

Pilot Club members dedicate new service in Mildred Carver's name

By LORNA L. GUNAWAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A group of local women are working to make living alone less frightening.

Ms. Pawson, project chairman of the Sanford Pilot Club, said the 28-member group is now offering its "buddy-system" program to other women and groups in the community. The Pilot Club, a service club for business and professional women, is working through churches and other community organizations to upgrade the effectiveness of neighborhood watch programs, she said.

"We are working with police to make homes safer for elderly women living alone, not only from robberies, but medical emergencies, too," Pawson said. Members of the group are assigned "buddies" to check on each other. Some members have installed early-warning alarm systems the group hopes neighbors will respond to, Pawson said.

The project is dedicated to Mildred Carver, the former club treasurer who was murdered in her downtown home this summer.

"We want to do this for her. Twenty women can't do it themselves, but they can spearhead it," Pawson said.

The Pilot Club hopes to receive a grant from the International Pilot Club to offer financial assistance for women needing alarm systems, security for jalouse windows or other items for self protection.

Women, civic groups or churches may call Pawson at 323-0543 for more information. Marie Rousche, Pilot Club president, may be reached at 323-0782.

School Board to pay for mental health services

By IVAN BOWERS
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The Seminole County School Board decided last Tuesday to pay $40,000 for student's psychological and psychiatric needs.

The board will pay the money to the Seminole County Mental Health Center as partial reimbursement for the salaries of five employees to work in the school system. The Mental Health Center will pay the remainder of the salaries for those employees.

The Mental Health Center provides care to Seminole County's mentally ill. Under the new agreement, they will work in cooperation with guidance offices at the schools to find help for those students who are having difficulties.

"Sometimes the problem is something the school is not equipped to handle," said Ivan Bowers, district director of student services.

According to Bowers, the district cannot provide long term counseling or family counseling to students. There are also no psychiatrists on staff. "Our counselors cannot (dispense medicine)," Bowers said. Psychiatrists will be able to dispense medicine.

The Mental Health Center will provide low cost mental health care to any student who needs it. "They use a sliding scale to determine what the cost will be," Bowers said. "No one is turned away because they can't afford the care."

Bowers said the Mental Health Center has been working with the Seminole County school system for nearly 12 years, but has gone through a variety of changes before settling into its present working relationship.

"Several years ago," Bowers explained, "they used to come into the schools, but they couldn't be everywhere at once."

The Mental Health Center provides a great deal of drug and alcohol intervention programming that cannot be provided by the schools, Bowers said.

Nieswender's services could cost county up to $78,000

By J. MARK SANFORD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Seminole County taxpayers could pay up to $78,000 if Seminole County commissioners decide today to hire former county administrator Roger Nieswender to act as their consultant.

Combined with the $63,000 previous county manager Ken Hooper will receive in severance pay and his own consulting services, taxpayers could be socked with up to $161,000 in costs until a new county manager is hired by June 1.

Last week, Nieswender offered to assist county officials in the county for $125 per hour up to 24 hours a week. That amount comes to $3,000 per week if he is called on for the full 24 hours each week. A new county manager to replace Ken Hooper isn't expected to be hired until at least June 1, over 26 weeks away.

Commissioners will consider Nieswender's offer today.

Acting County Manager Bob McMillan said while he may not need Nieswender immediately, his services will be come increasingly valuable after the first of the year.

"Right now, we're in kind of a lull time," McMillan said. "But after the first, we'll begin planning the budget and that's the area we were hit the hardest."

When Hooper resigned Oct. 24, his two deputies Jim Beble and Monte Deemer also resigned. Deemer was the deputy in charge of county administration and oversees the operations of the Office of Management and Budget. After Deemer's resignation, OMB director Penny Fleming and two of her top assistants also resigned.

Trial begins in Amtrak waste case

United Press International

PALATKA — Attorneys for Amtrak argued Monday that the state will fail to prove the national passenger rail service has dumped human waste into Florida waters.

"I submit the evidence is going to fall short of that requirement," Jacksonville attorney Ed Booth said during opening arguments in Amtrak's criminal trial.

Amtrak is charged with dumping raw human sewage into the St. Johns River and Rice Creek in Putnam County.

"I think you'll find the state has made no examination of Rice Creek.... There is evidence of human waste on the tracks... (but) the particular charge is that it was discharged into the waterways," said Booth.

Amtrak is charged with four felony counts of commercial littering and a misdemeanor charge of creating a health nuisance in the first-ever criminal trial of a passenger rail service accused of illegally disposing waste.

The charges carry a maximum fine of $20,500 and a 21-year prison sentence.

"Our primary purpose is to seek an injunction against this practice," said State Attorney John Tanner. He said the state also would seek a fine but was not considering imprisonment.

"This is not your normal run-of-the-mill criminal case," Assistant State Attorney Dennis Bayer told the six-member jury of four men and two women. "This is a case involving environmental law, specifically the laws of Florida."

Amtrak has not denied the dumping practice, which has made it the subject of complaints in other states as well. It maintains, however, that the rail service is regulated by federal laws that supersede state environmental laws.

Before the trial recessed for the day, the jury heard two people describe how they had been sprayed with waste on May 18 while fishing on Rice Creek.

"We were fishing near the bridge. It was a nice and sunny day," said Mary Trammell. "I first noticed the train when I first started getting wet. It was like water, but it wasn't water. It was brown like chocolate."

Her husband, William Trammell, said, "There was some type of moisture that came down on us, but I did not see it come out of the train because I was facing away from it."

The Trammells' complaint to the state Game and Fresh Water Commission prompted the filing of the charges against Amtrak.

A new guardian for the FDA

The troubled Federal Drug Administration is certainly high on the list of agencies in need of an administrative — and an ethical — overhaul.

In the past, it has been under fire for foot-dragging on its approvals of new medications for AIDS sufferers and others with terminal illnesses. Some generic drugs received the FDA's approval fairly quickly, but that apparently had more to do with bribery than with bureaucratic efficiency.

Now, Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan has decided it's time for change. FDA Commissioner Frank Young has been transferred to a new job as deputy assistant secretary of health and science. Young reportedly wasn't happy with his career switch, and some of his Capitol Hill allies claimed he was a scapegoat for FDA problems he didn't cause.

That may be true. But Sullivan certainly cannot be faulted for assigning a new leader to perform the surgery needed to restore the health and respect of this important federal regulatory agency.

The real issue is whether he will provide the next commissioner with the instruments to correct the FDA's shortcomings — and whether Congress will provide enough funding to staff it properly.

Few federal agencies have as much power over the life and death of ordinary Americans as the FDA. If it becomes vulnerable to the pressures of drug companies, patients begin to take medications that do them more harm than good.

If the FDA lags behind in its drug testing and certification programs, sick people may be denied medicines that could save their lives, cure them or suppress crippling symptoms.

That is why the FDA's credibility is paramount. The public must trust that science, not bribery or special-interest lobbying, determines which drugs can be marketed safely in the United States.

Young deserves credit for some of his positive contributions to the FDA. For example, he took steps to speed up the testing of drugs for AIDS victims. He did so without totally sacrificing acceptable scientific procedures.

But the generic drug scandal, which besmirched FDA's image, occurred during Young's tenure. The agency needed a new commissioner untainted by the FDA's past turmoil. But that won't be enough. The new FDA chief must reinvigorate a demoralized staff. Let's make sure the agency functions as an important consumer ally.

There's gold on that cheap land

DENVER — Near Colorado's Keystone ski resort 60 miles west of here, federal officials in 1983 were required by law to relinquish ownership of a 180-acre tract of public land in return for a nominal payment of $2.50 per acre.

Today, that land — including choice sites for those planning to build second homes — is available for resale at $11,000 per acre. The parcel the government sold for $400 six years ago now is valued at $1.8 million.

Near Breckenridge, another Colorado ski resort 80 miles southwest of Denver, the government may be forced to sell 80 acres for about a total of $200 — even though the land's fair market value is approximately $12 million.

These examples, cited by the General Accounting Office in a report issued earlier this year, illustrate the astounding inequities being perpetrated by the Mining Law of 1872, a federal statute actually enacted in 1896 but amended and titled six years later.

Designed to promote the exploration, development and settlement of the West, the law's most important provisions authorize anyone who finds a valuable mineral deposit on the public lands to remove it without submitting any royalties, fees or other payments in return.

Those who want to acquire title to both the land and its minerals can register, stake or patent a claim for either $2.50 or $5.00 per acre, depending upon the type of claim. To preserve their right to the land, they must perform $100 worth of mining work on the land annually — but that requirement is seldom enforced.

The law was amended in 1980 to remove land with oil, gas, coal, phosphate, sodium and potassium from its claim provisions and place them under a leasing system. Additional amendments in 1947 and 1955 made sand, stone and gravel subject to sale instead of patenting.

But property containing gold, silver, copper, lead, iron, zinc, titanium, uranium, tungsten and other "hard rock" minerals remains subject to mining law mandates — and preposterously low fees — that have remained unchanged since the days when grizzled prospectors with mules, picks, shovels and pans scoured the West for valuable metals.

As he prepared to leave office in 1986, Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall told Congress:

"The most important piece of unfinished business on the nation's natural resource agenda is the complete replacement of the Mining Law of 1872. This outdated law has become the major obstacle to the wise conservation and effective management of the natural resources of our public lands."

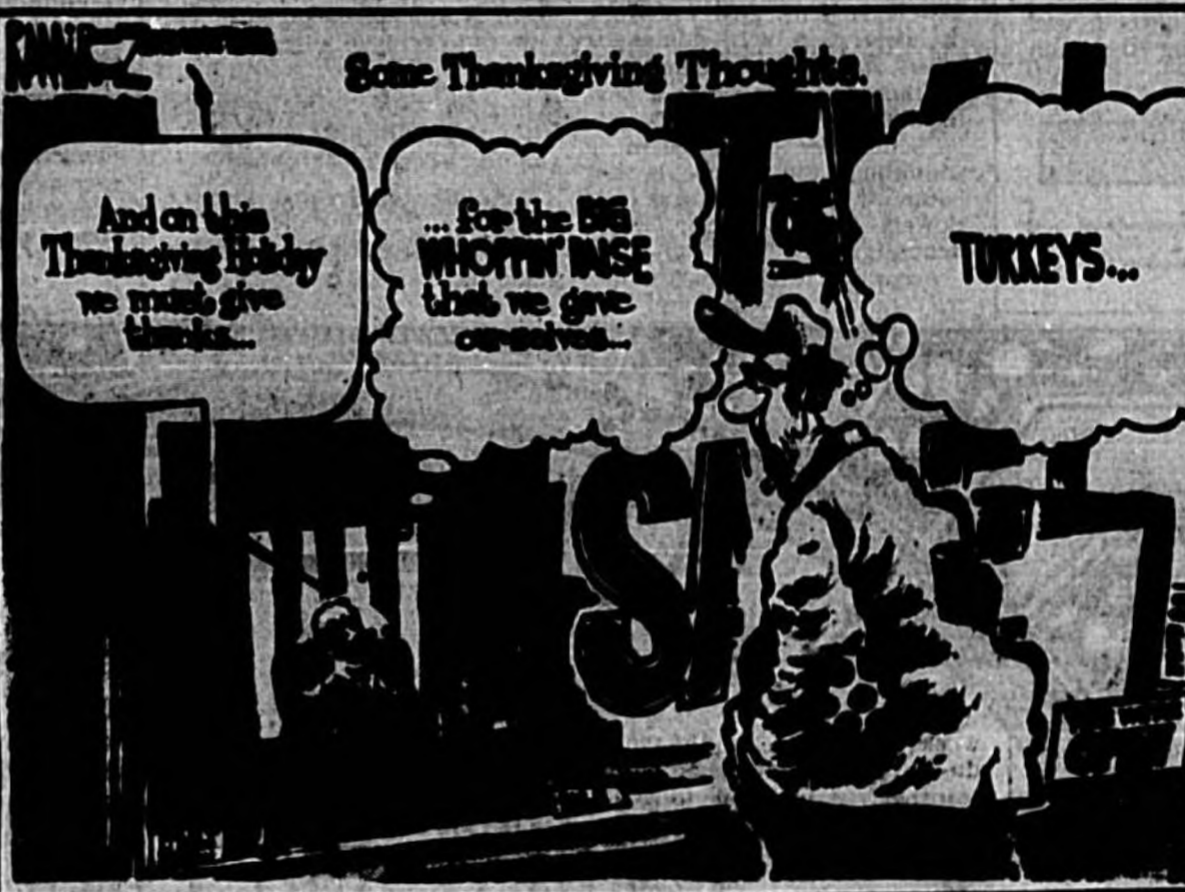

In the ensuing eight years, no action was taken to implement Udall's suggestion. In 1977, however, his brother, Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., the newly installed chairman of the House Interior Committee, proposed comprehensive reform of the law.

The American Mining Congress and other industry organizations fervently opposed Udall's initiative. Copper miners in his home state of Arizona initiated an aggressive and extraordinary petition campaign to recall him from Congress.

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., is leading a new campaign to revise an archaic law that he notes "not only allows the sale of federal land at scandalously low prices (but) also allows minerals to be sold without any royalties paid to the federal government."

Stunning inequities being perpetuated.

Czechs: appeasement specter

WASHINGTON — Again we are witnessing (in Neville Chamberlain's words on the eve of Munich) "a quarrel in a faraway country between people of whom we know little." But in today's wired world, Czechoslovakia is a neighbor about which we know much; and it is our quarrel, too, just as the quarrel really was ours in 1938.

Today, at exactly the right moment, Czechoslovakia has lurched to center stage. Doing so, it summons back to mind the specter of appeasement, which is a contemporary temptation for Western Policymakers.

Czechoslovakia's western tip is west of Berlin and Rome; its eastern border is east of Warsaw. It has been a bloody crossroad. Hitler was wrong; Czechoslovakia has never been a dagger pointed at Germany, or anything else. It has been Europe's football.

In October, 1938, it lost the Sudetenland and acquired an ominous hypen (Czecho-Slovakia), a harbinger of further dismemberment. During the "phony war" winter of 1939-1940, British peace-feelers to Germany intimated readiness to accept German dominance not only of Austria but of Czechoslovakia. Czech resistance — probably the largest in Europe; the Gestapo killed 38,000 — accomplished the most electrifying single act of defiance, the assassination of Hitler's favorite SS officer, Reinhard Heydrich. The massacred town of Lidice paid the price.

Soviet postwar policy was crudest in Prague. Stalin forced the coalition government to rescind its acceptance of the Marshall Plan. The body of Foreign Minister Masaryk was found beneath the window from which Soviet agents had thrown him. In 1968 Czechoslovakia was perhaps the last victim of direct military oppression among Soviet satellites.

In "The Unbearable Lightness of Being," Czech novelist Milan Kundera, writing in Paris about Czech exiles there, has a character muse, dyspeptically, about what unites Czechs. Is it great men such as John Hus, the martyred Christian reformer? The emigres knew nothing of him other than "the glory of the flames when he was burned at the stake, the glory of the ashes, so for them the essence of being Czech came down to ashes and nothing more. The only things that held them together were their defeats and the reproaches they addressed to one another."

Perhaps that was the way it was among emigres in Paris a decade ago. However, today's crowds in Prague, like those in Leipzig and the Baltics and elsewhere, demonstrate that a hard history can conduce to splendid nationalisms, to a recovery of Europe's particularities—native flowers in native soils blooming.

Czechoslovakia, a name forever linked with appeasement, has now become prominent when that disreputable impulse is enjoying a new vogue. Western, not least some American, policymakers are discomfited by the fact (they consider it an impertinence) that the Baltic states are serious about recovering the sovereignty that was stripped from them 50 years ago by Nazi-Soviet collaboration, sovereignty the U.S. government ringingly endorsed until it became a possibility.

Speaking of impertinence, Western diplomats are ostentatiously worrying about whether to accept German reunification. As Carlyle said when a woman exclaimed, "I accept the universe!" — "Gad, she'd better." It is the arrogance of the illusion of power that causes others to think they can operate some controlling rheostat on German national feeling.

And for impertinence on stilts, consider Mikhail Gorbachev, the Russian reactionary. He cannot even provide soap to his suffering people — people now nostalgic for the good old days of the "Brezhnev stagnation," the living standards of which are today a receding aspiration. Gorbachev warns the West against "exporting capitalism." And drawing upon his intimate acquaintance (from within the thick walls of the Kremlin) with "the opinions and moods of the workers" ("I myself am from that environment, and I cannot help myself"), he says the Soviet Union is not ready for private property or competing parties. "No matter what you do with me, I am not going to forsake this position."

Relative to other reformers in the East Bloc, Gorbachev is rapidly becoming a retrograde force. Timidity at the top was apparent last week when the Soviet government took a significant step in the wrong direction. It reversed some of the small movement toward a market economy.

This is no time for Western, and least of all American, reticence about national aspirations in Czechoslovakia or the Baltics or even deeper within the Soviet empire, or reticence about the stark necessity for the Soviet Union to import capitalism, quickly. Reticence is President Bush's political philosophy, but now, particularly in light of Gorbachev's reactionary impertinence, reticence resembles appeasement.

For impertinence on stilts, consider Gorbachev.

Navy rail system deemed unsafe

WASHINGTON — The Navy recently called a 48-hour stand down — a timeout to contemplate the spate of more than 100 accidental deaths on duty this year.

During that reflection, the Navy should have examined its five weapons stations where rickety boxcars crammed with explosives may be rolling along old railroad tracks toward another peacetime disaster.

The Navy totes tons of missiles, mines and other munitions on private railroad lines every day, taking them to ships or warehouses. Internal Navy reports reveal that these railroad systems are not safe, even by commercial railroad standards.

Rail workers at the Earle Weapons Station in Coits Neck, N.J., describe an atmosphere of fear and chaos. They recount harrowing close calls and a chilling lack of safety precautions that they fear will kill them.

And they stress that the public is at risk because the Navy's railroad tracks pass through towns and over public roads.

The Navy apparently didn't give its weapons on wheels much scrutiny until Sept. 1, 1987, when one of its trains at the Concord Weapons Station in California plowed into a peace demonstration and severed a man's leg.

A Navy investigation of the weapons transport system followed that incident. Our associate Jim Lynch obtained a copy of the report. It shows a neglected mess of outdated equipment and shoddy oversight.

• Most naval rail cars are at least 35 years old.

• Most of the rail cars roll on cast iron wheels, despite the fact that the Association of American Railroads declared in 1957 that such wheels could fail under heavy loads.

• The rail cars are equipped with old-style bearings that can overheat and trigger fires.

• The rail crews often work longer than 12-hour shifts. Our sources told us some crews have been on the job for 30 hours straight.

• Existing railroad operation manuals are inadequate. Two of the Navy's stations with rail systems did not even have operating manuals.

The Navy claims that more than half of the 42 recommendations in that report have been implemented. A Navy spokesman told us that the Navy had been steadily upgrading its railroad equipment since 1980.

But our sources at the Earle Weapons Station say the improvements are just on paper. One rail worker said he and others are rarely allowed time to test the brakes and other vital train functions. After a long day on the Earle railroad on Sept. 20, one weary engineer filed a report saying, "Stop rushing us before somebody gets killed."

Confidential incident reports from Earle describe some close calls, including the fact that two trains were dispatched toward each other on the same track. Another spine tingler occurred on July 31 when a train with 15 cars — some packed with explosives — nearly rammed a construction truck straddling the tracks at a public crossing.

The construction crew had clearance to replace sections of rail, but the train crew was never told. The track was disconnected when the train barreled toward the truck on a blind curve.

The rail workers' report said the truck had a 10-gallon gas tank and the train was carrying explosives. The crew stopped the train 25 feet from the truck.

We talked to Capt. Walter Migrale, the new commanding officer at the Earle Weapons Station. He told us he was aware of a "couple of complaints" but added that the station had never had an "explosive incident."

Chilling lack of safety precautions they fear will kill them.

First Union building may be auctioned

SANFORD — The First Union Bank Building could be auctioned on the Seminole County Courthouse steps in December to settle a remodeling debt a Seminole County judge says is owed by the building's owners.

Waltree Construction Inc. of Casselberry sued the building's owners, General Land Development Corp. of Tampa, in July saying they still owed them $52,542 of a $170,388 remodeling contract. According to court files, General Land hired Waltree to remodel the building's third and fourth floors for the Florida Department of Corrections parole and probation offices.

Court files indicate Waltree was paid most of the money, but never received the final payment after the work was completed in March.

General Land did not respond to the suit. Seminole Circuit Judge S. Joseph Davis awarded Waltree a total of $38,688 in the unpaid amount and legal costs Nov. 16.

First Union Bank officials in Sanford and Jacksonville said they were unaware of the litigation and are tenants, not owners, of the building. Bruce Walrick, Waltree president, said he would be reluctant to take over ownership of the building and its mortgage payments.

Tax-Aide helps older tax filers

SANFORD — The Internal Revenue Service and the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) have begun a program called Tax-Aide. The program that uses volunteers to help older taxpayers file their returns. The volunteers are retirees from all walks of life who have been trained by the IRS. For more information, call Mary Jo Howell at 323-8388.

MADD, 7-Eleven join forces

SANFORD — Mothers Against Drunk Driving and 7-Eleven stores have joined forces to fight drunk driving. MADD's nationwide Project Red Ribbon has given this year's collaboration the title "The One On For Safety." 7-Eleven patrons will be asked to tie a red ribbon to their cars as a symbol of the driver's commitment to not drink and drive. The program will begin Dec. 4.

Post office: Mail packages early

SANFORD — The Postal Service urges all customers to do themselves a favor and avoid the Christmas season package crunch at the post office. They advise people to mail their Christmas packages early to avoid any possible delays.

Altamonte Springs has reclaimed water

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — On Nov. 29 at 11 a.m., some Altamonte Springs residents will begin receiving reclaimed water. The reclaimed water project, called A Prototype Realistic Innovative Community of Today (APRICOT), will sponsor a celebration in Merrill Park at 11 a.m., where reclaimed water will now irrigate the softball field. The project was begun in 1982 in an attempt to stave off future water problems.

Sanford raises fire pension benefits

SANFORD — The city commission Monday approved an increase in monthly Fire Pension Plan benefits.

The commission approved on second reading an increase from 2 percent to 2.1 percent. The increase went into effect upon adoption.

Eagles granted conditional property use

SANFORD — The Fraternal Order of the Eagles, a local club, received city commission approval Monday for conditional use of property at 2673 Orlando Dr.

The commission approved sale of alcoholic beverages at the site. The city planning and zoning commission approved the conditional use Nov. 16.

Gramkow appointed to cemetery board

SANFORD — The city commission Monday appointed Betty Gramkow to the Cemetery Advisory Board.

Gramkow is owner of Gramkow Funeral Home in Sanford. She now fills a slot created when a member resigned last month.

The Cemetery Advisory Board was created this year to oversee improvements to the city cemetery on 25th Street. The city received private donations to add ten brick columns, brick roadways and landscaping to the cemetery.

Ordinance

another Mr. Allen from being killed.

Darlene McPherson, who manages a local convenience store with her husband Mike, sobbed after voicing support of the ordinance.

"I know a lot of people say this isn't going to stop the killing. But it will cut down on the killing," McPherson said.

Sylvester Chang, Sanford Motel Service owner and vice president of Service Station Dealers of Florida, has lobbied for the regulations in Seminole County and across the state since February. He had spoken to the commission during a Nov. 6 work session on the ordinance.

"I asked the question at that work session, 'Do we need to wait until somebody dies before we consider this ordinance?'" Chang said last night.

John Pearson, Retail Grocers Association of Florida president, cautioned the commission against adopting the measure in response to Allen's death.

"The tragic incident of a week ago should not cloud the issue with emotion," Pearson said.

While security cameras, drop safety and other safety measures are effective in reducing crime, Pearson said, the two-clerk mandate is not.

"The number of persons present in a store does not deter crime," he said.

Curtis Donahue of DLN Research Labs said he opposed the ordinance, although his company, a Sanford-based manufacturer of security cameras, stands to gain from its passage.

"We have found these ordinances to be profitable, although not fair or effective," Donahue said. DLN Research Labs manufactures 35-mm and video cameras for stores in Florida and Georgia cities where the convenience store regulations have been adopted, he said.

"Robbers will rob anyone or anything until they are in jail," Donahue said. Most stores have already invested in his company's security equipment to no avail, he said.

Police Chief Steve Harriett said about half of the dozen convenience stores in Sanford have security cameras. Circle K, where Herbert Allen was killed while working alone, had no security camera, he said.

Tom Miller, president of the Handy Way stores parent company, Miller Enterprises, said staffing his stores with multiple clerks led to "frightening" casualties on at least two occasions when a second clerk walked in on a robbery in progress, starting the robbery.

Voluntary crime prevention techniques, such as training for store employees, are more effective in reducing robbery and violence than restrictive ordinances, Miller said.

But Commissioner Whitey Eckstein challenged Miller's statements that crime prevention training courses are offered for all Handy Way employees every 30 days. Eckstein said Police Chief Steve Harriett found in a survey of employees that no courses were offered to supplement an employee handbook, nor had any of them met the corporate "security director" who was to conduct the courses.

"There is no training at this point. That is the problem I have with your enterprise," Eckstein said.

Eckstein argued that, while the ordinance places controls on private enterprise, it would serve the same purpose as laws governing mine safety and child labor. Also, he said, improving store safety would serve as "a good P.R. measure for convenience stores," reduce shoplifting and minimize employee turnover.

Commissioner A.A. McClanahan, who had opposed the ordinance in early discussions based on the mandates it places on private business, last night voted in favor of the regulations without comment. He said this morning, "When you get a public outcry like we did for that, it seems to be what the public wants."

The commission last night agreed to extend the hours when two clerks would be required in stores from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m.

Commissioner Lon Howell, who made the motion to extend the hours from 4 a.m., said he realized the extension is necessary after riding on police patrols.

"People are out on the streets all the time. If you are going to do it, do it right," Howell said.

Discovery lands; Columbia readied for next mission

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — With the shuttle Discovery back on the ground in California, technicians began hauling the veteran spaceplane Columbia to the launch pad Tuesday for blastoff around Dec. 20 on a 10-day Christmas mission.

Carried by a ponderous crawler-transporter, Columbia began the six-hour, 3.5-mile trip from NASA's Vehicle Assembly Building to launch pad 39A at 2:32 a.m. EST, 2.5 hours behind schedule because of minor last-minute snags.

If all goes well, the shuttle's three-man, two-woman crew will strap in Friday for the final hours of a dress-rehearsal countdown that will set the stage for blastoff on the year's sixth shuttle mission, a record surpassed only once in the eight-year history of the program.

At Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., meanwhile, engineers were readying Discovery for a weekend flight back to the Florida shuttleport, also a NASA transport jet following its day-late Mojave Desert landing Monday to close out an apparently successful five-day flight to launch a military satellite.

"We had a spectacular time," shuttle skipper Frederick Gregory, 48, told well-wishers about four hours after Discovery's 4:30 p.m. PST landing. "We've got one hell of a great space program."

Dressed in dark blue flight suits and NASA baseball caps, Gregory, co-pilot John Blaha, 47 — both Air Force colonels — Navy Capt. Manley "Sonny" Carter, 42, physician Story Musgrave, 54, and physicist Kathryn Thornton, 37, then boarded two NASA jets for flights back to their homes in Houston.

Discovery's landing came one day later than planned because of gusty crosswinds Sunday, but Gregory said the crew put the bonus day in space to good use "just relaxing and taking pictures."

"To have seen us, it would be hard to believe we were getting paid for it," he quipped. "We were just lying at the windows looking at the world go by."

over" into campaign work.

State law states that campaign expenses are to be paid from a candidate's campaign account. State prosecutors allege the Kelley's paid workers from their business account without reporting the payments on campaign contribution reports. Most of the workers were not listed in Jennifer Kelley's campaign contribution reports.

Two of the people subpoenaed, Fred and Stanley Vihnen, were included in several of Jennifer Kelley's campaign contribution reports. They were paid to make signs and perform other activities for the campaign, according to Jennifer Kelley's campaign expense reports.

When asked why the Vihens were subpoenaed, Holmes responded "if you want to demonstrate someone had intentionally done something illegal, it helps to show that they had intentionally done something illegal."

State Attorney's prosecutors also subpoenaed officials from three banks to testify. Holmes said bank records and cancelled checks were obtained during the state's investigation into Jennifer Kelley's campaign.

The banks include American Pioneer Savings Bank, which Jennifer Kelley declared as her campaign bank, and the Seminole County Teacher's Federal Credit Union, which Jennifer Kelley has said was her personal bank. Officials from Southeast Bank were also subpoenaed.

Holmes said Jennifer Kelley's personal account records were obtained in an effort to demonstrate that campaign workers allegedly were paid using personal and business bank accounts, as well as her campaign freshwater fishery resource." Bob Wattendorf, assistant director of the commission's division of fisheries, said, "It is appropriate that a major portion of these monies (from fishing license sales) be directed to lake restoration projects."

Williams said Lake Monroe has already seen some restoration efforts in the last year, with 980,000 aquatic plants added to the water. Natural aquatic plants, which filter out pollutants, had been present in the lake 50 or 60 years ago and were choked out by water hyacinth or killed by chemical runoff from the land, he said.

Funds for that project came from a $50,000 settlement the Department of Environmental Regulations received because of pollution of one of Lake Monroe's tributaries, Williams said. Lake Monroe may be sowed with more plants through the new project, Williams said. Lake Jesup and three other lakes in other areas are next on the restoration list, after Lake Monroe.

Over the past 20 years, Williams said, the commission has carried out a number of successful lake restoration projects and has developed

OPEC deadlocks on quotas

United Press International

VIENNA, Austria — OPEC oil ministers reported progress Monday on boosting the cartel's official — but widely disregarded — production ceiling.

The 13 members, however, remained deadlocked on the third day of their year-end conference on the allocation of individual output quotas.

Several ministers said privately that the only possible outcome may be a minority agreement on a 10 percent hike in the OPEC ceiling to 22.5 million barrels a day for the first half of 1990.

There would then be only a nominal quota for the United Arab Emirates and possibly Kuwait with each pumping as much as it wants, as the two have been doing all year, the ministers said.

Another plan being considered by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries Monday night was a 7.3 percent increase in the cartel's ceiling to 22 million barrels daily. According to delegates, it would freeze the UAE quota at its current percentage share.

Current actual OPEC production is estimated at 23.5 million barrels a day — 3 million above the official 20.5 million ceiling.

"We have made some progress but there is much work ahead to reach agreement," Algerian Oil Minister Sadek Bousena told reporters.

A UAE report said there had been "confirmed promises from some members to cede part of their quotas for those demanding higher quotas."

An Iranian delegate, however, said "the main obstacle is the distribution of quotas in a manner to keep all 13 members satisfied."

Countries with low production capacities, the Iranian said, "insist that quotas be increased in such a way as to guarantee an OPEC price of $18 per barrel."

Libyan Oil Minister Fawzi Shakshuki demanded a higher percentage share as well if others got more, although that was considered a political statement because Libya already is at capacity output.

There again was no plenary meeting Monday — the only one held so far was the formal opening session Saturday — and bargaining took place in small groups and bilateral sessions.

Kuwait and the UAE demand increases of up to 100 percent in their percentage shares of OPEC output because of vast unused capacity.

continue to use the building for community and social events.

The city is hoping for the state grant so almost $95,000 of rehabilitation and restoration work can be done to the building. The state offers up to $250,000 for rehabilitation or renovation of historical or archaeological structures that are used for a public purpose, according to Reggentin. It has $10 million in grants to give away.

The application sent to the historical resources division states the building is one of the last to retain its historic qualities and the renovation of the old city hall will "serve as the cornerstone of our proposed downtown redevelopment project."

The Division of Historical Resources staff reviewed approximately 121 "Grants-in-Aid Special Category Applications" and recommended the city's project as a "medium-level of priority with a funding level of $50,000." Reggentin learned last week after spending two days in Tallahassee.

The historical preservation council will rate the applications next and send them off to an appropriations committee. Regentin said he expects an answer in a few months.

The building was not placed on a high priority level because the state doesn't consider it a threatened structure because it is owned by the city.

Reggentin said the chance of receiving the state grant is a "50-50 shot. The cutoff point is halfway," he said.

The application states that the city will take responsibility for maintaining and protecting the property and the Lake Mary Historic Commission and city staff will jointly be responsible for the curation of artifacts.

Two die when train hits bus

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — A speeding commuter train slammed into an ABC-TV charter bus trapped at a crossing in rush-hour traffic Monday, killing two passengers and injuring six others, officials said.

Kurt Michael Bauer, sports marketing director for ABC-TV, and Adele Ruffin, a San Francisco Bay Area account executive for the network, were killed as the bus headed for the Monday Night Football game between the San Francisco 49ers and the New York Giants.

The nearly empty bus was one of four chartered by ABC Sports to ferry employees to Candlestick Park for the game. One passenger was hospitalized in stable condition after the accident, and five others were treated for minor injuries and released.

Paul Cong, 55, was hospitalized at nearby Peninsula Hospital in Burlingame with trauma injuries, including a possible concussion. He was listed in stable condition in the intensive care unit early Tuesday morning.

School gets 'Bounty' letter

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — A 181-year-old letter about the crew that ventured against the 1789 Bounty adds little to the famous tale but should delight fans of the South Pacific adventure story.

The University of Michigan received the letter as a gift and anticipates great interest from hobbyists who devour every detail of the famed 1789 mutiny. John Dunn, director of the campus's William Clements Library, said Monday.

The letter was written in 1808 by Samuel Coster, a prominent Philadelphia merchant who met Matthew Folger, the captain of the American whaling ship that stumbled on Pitcairn Island several years after the mutiny.

Until Folger's discovery, it was believed that Bounty first mate Fletcher Christian and the other mutineers sought tyrannical Capt. William Bligh near Tahiti had perished at sea.

Instead, Folger learned the mutineers reached tiny, uninhabited Pitcairn Island and formed a colony with their Polynesian wives. The mutineers' descendants still comprise most of Pitcairn's population.

Honduras opposition claims victory

TBUCUCALPA, Honduras — Opposition candidate Rafael Leonardo Calleja declared himself the winner Monday of Honduras's presidential elections and Washington recognized his victory even before the release of official results.

Unofficial results showed the conservative National Party candidate leading his Liberal Party rival, Carlos Flores Facussé. Calleja was expected to maintain his lead.

A seven-hour failure of telecommunications equipment early Monday forced the election tribunal to delay release of official results, tribunal member Mario Arnaldo Ballesteros said.

Mexicans seize 6 tons of cocaine

MEXICO CITY — Mexico's attorney general Monday displayed more than 6 tons of pure cocaine seized in nationwide raids, saying the narcotics were supplied by Colombian drug lords and had a street value of $6.4 billion.

In one raid, police seized 10,043 pounds of cocaine after a 2-hour shootout with 20 suspected traffickers in San Carlos Yautepac, 330 miles southeast of the capital. Attorney General Enrique Alvarez del Castillo told reporters.

The prosecutor said six suspects were killed in the gunbattle and two police officers were wounded.

Police planned a raid on the drug gang's hideout after the Nov. 23 of one associate, who officials said offered the arresting officers $100,000 in exchange for his freedom. During his interrogation the suspect told police of a large stash of cocaine near San Carlos Yautepac.

Solar Max satellite falls to earth Friday

United Press International

WASHINGTON — NASA's doomed Solar Max satellite will plunge into the atmosphere around Friday, and while chunks of the spacecraft likely will survive the fiery re-entry, the risk to the public is "very small," officials said.

The 5,000-pound sun-watching observatory, which cost $60 million to build in 1978, had been expected to fall to Earth on Wednesday, but the North American Aerospace Defense Command, which is tracking the craft during its final days, revised its estimate of the satellite's trajectory.

"It'll be the first of December plus or minus a day," a NORAD spokesman said Monday from Colorado Springs, Colo.

When it finally meets its fiery fate, Solar Max will break apart somewhere between 28 degrees north and 28 degrees south of the equator, a swath that is mostly ocean but includes large parts of Florida, Texas, Mexico, Central and South America and Africa.

"We feel there will be debris, but we don't know how big the pieces will be," said Rande Exler, a spokeswoman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "We feel the risk to people is very small."

The highly successful science satellite could have been boosted to a higher, more stable orbit by a space shuttle, but tight budgets and an equally tight shuttle launch schedule precluded such a rescue mission.

In any case, Solar Max has been steadily losing altitude because of the increasing friction, or "drag," produced by the outer reaches of Earth's atmosphere.

Bush to propose deeper troop cuts

President prepares for meeting with Gorbachev

United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Bush plans to talk about deeper mutual troop cuts in Europe than previously proposed when he meets with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, a White House spokesman said.

Press secretary Martin Fitzwater said Monday that the president, driven by dramatic changes in Eastern Europe and the mounting budget deficit, believes "it is only logical that any reduction in Soviet forces would lead to changes" in NATO's military posture.

But Fitzwater made it clear that U.S. allies would be consulted before any agreements are reached on reductions. He said any cuts would be made in the context of conventional arms talks under way in Vienna.

"As the United States considers future resource needs, President Bush must consider them in context of ongoing arms control talks and of budgetary restraints,"

Fitzwater said. "Certainly the two presidents will talk about arms control and military force structure. These discussions will bear on future discussions about changes in our own military posture."

In preparation, the president and his top advisers are considering a wide range of military options, involving a number of different force levels and a number of different scenarios of budgetary reduction.

In May the United States offered and NATO submitted at the Vienna talks a proposal for reducing U.S. and Soviet troops to a level of 275,000 in Europe.

"This means cutting Soviet forces by 200,000 and U.S. troops by 50,000," Fitzwater said.

Bush leaves Thursday for the Dec. 2-3 summit off the coast of Malta in the Mediterranean Sea.

The president has stepped up the number of his briefings in preparation for the summit. He conferred Monday with Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan on the chairman's recent trip to Moscow.

Bush summoned government experts to the White House Monday to discuss issues he expects to encounter with Gorbachev. High on the agenda will be Soviet military support for Nicaragua and Cuba. Continuing military aid to the government of Afghanistan and the treatment of the Middle East also will be discussed, Fitzwater said.

Bush has invited Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney to the White House on Wednesday, the eve of Bush's departure, to discuss the Canadian's opinion of Gorbachev. Mulroney returned recently from a week's visit to Moscow.

Regarding military spending, Fitzwater would neither confirm nor deny speculation on the extent of U.S. military budget cuts, which Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said could range from $150 billion to $180 billion.

The Washington Post reported today that the U.S. armed forces plan to reduce military personnel by more than 800,000 and cut scores of battleships and aircraft by 1994.

Quoting anonymous Pentagon sources, the Post said the biggest manpower reductions would come from the Army and Air Force, especially in Europe.

Kohl proposes confederation of East and West Germanies

United Press International

BONN, West Germany — Chancellor Helmut Kohl called today for the uniting of East and West Germany under a "confederative structure" as a step toward the eventual reunification of the two states.

Kohl, in a speech to the West German parliament, outlined a 10-point plan for creating a loose confederation between the two Germanys, with a common legislative body and consultative committees that would make decisions on economic, environmental and transportation matters.

The end goal, he said, would be the creation of a single democratic German state.

"What a reunited Germany ultimately will look like no one today knows. But unification will come when the German people want it — of that I am certain," Kohl said.

The creation of what Kohl termed a German "confederative structure" could come only after democratic elections to choose a legitimate East German leadership, the chancellor said.

Kohl said his plan also includes immediate measures, including additional medical and humanitarian relief, for East Germany.

The idea of one Germany gained momentum with East Germany's easing of travel restrictions this month and the opening of its borders with the West, most dramatically, the Berlin Wall.

East Germany and its chief backer, the Soviet Union, have consistently rejected calls for a reunited Germany, which was divided and drawn into opposing military blocs following its defeat in World War II.

But Kohl said East German Prime Minister Hans Modrow had raised the subject of increased cooperation with West Germany during talks last week with West German envoy Rudolf Seiters, proposing at one point that joint committees be established to decide matters of mutual interest.

Kohl stressed, however, that substantial political change — including free elections and the release of political prisoners — must accompany improved ties.

"The change in the system is necessary ... The centrally planned economy must be abolished," Kohl said. "There can only be progress if East Germany opens up to foreign investment."

To thundering applause, Kohl declared "reunification — that is, making Germany one state again — remains the political aim of the West German government."

Liver transplant is successful

United Press International

CHICAGO — Doctors who completed the landmark transplant of a living woman's liver tissue into her infant daughter said the 13 1/2 hours of surgery appeared successful and the organ match was "as good as you can get."

"We're quite confident that this organ will work," said Dr. Cristoph Broelsch, chief of liver surgery at University of Chicago Hospital, who emerged from surgery at 8:15 p.m. Monday.

The operation began in the morning with the removal of the left lobe of the liver of Terri Smith, 29, of Schertz, Texas, which later was transplanted into her 21-month-old daughter, Alyssa. The infant suffers from biliary atresia, a blockage of the bile ducts that eventually can be fatal.

Czech Communists agree to share power

United Press International

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Communist Party leaders agreed today to proposals that would end their monopoly on power in Czechoslovakia and allow for a coalition government including other political parties.

The dramatic move followed a two-hour meeting between Prime Minister Ladislav Adamec and the Civic Forum, the 9-day-old opposition organization led by renowned playwright Vaclav Havel.

The announcement, the latest step in a series of surprising reforms in Eastern Europe, came a day after millions of Czechoslovaks walked off their jobs for a two-hour general strike to oppose one-party rule — another dramatic manifestation of a peaceful revolution interrupted 21 years ago when Warsaw Pact tanks snuffed out the reform-minded Prague Spring.

"By December 3, we will propose to the president of the republic (Gustav Husak) to appoint a government with a new composition," said Marian Calfa, a minister without portfolio representing legal affairs.

"It is expected it will be a government with a broad coalition base, which will include representatives of non-partisan character, other political parties and at the same time, of course, the Communist Party."

Calfa made the announcement at a five-minute news conference. He did not take questions. Calfa issued a statement to reporters saying the government would be composed primarily of "experts and professionals."

Up to now, many high-level government officials were trained only in party work and had no expertise in the field they administered.

Calfa also said the government would ask parliament to eliminate three articles in the constitution, including parts guaranteeing the Communist Party the leading role in political affairs and requiring a Marxist-Leninist-based education.

"This concept will be replaced by the concept that education is being carried out in harmony with scientific knowledge," Calfa said.

The third article to be dropped outlaws groups not allied with the National Front, a pro-government umbrella organization for political activities. In the past, non-Communist groups have been allowed to join the National Front but such groups had to be allied with the Communist Party.

Calfa, answering another key demand of the Civic Forum, said Adamec would ask Prague authorities to provide premises for activities of the opposition group.

Referring to the past week of rallies and Monday's two-hour general strike, Calfa said.

Schrempf, Pacers down Bucks

MILWAUKEE — Daryl Schrempf scored 10 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter, including the go-ahead three-point play with 25 seconds left, to rally the Indiana Pacers to a 101-97 victory Monday night over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Milwaukee, which led by as many as 15 points in the third quarter, took a 91-88 lead on two free throws by Alvin Robertson with 4:16 left in the game, but the Pacers came back to forge a 95-88 tie on a pair of free throws by Vern Fleming with 1:41 remaining.

Schrempf's two free throws gave the Pacers their first lead since the opening period at 95-88, but Jay Humphries' jumper tied it at 95-88 with 1:15 left.

Fleming made the first of two free throw attempts with 1:04 left to put the Pacers on top 96-88. Humphries' jumper from the left side of the key put Milwaukee on top 97-88 with 42 seconds left.

In other NBA action Monday night New York downed Charlotte 119-108 and Utah hammered New Jersey 108-88.

1990 list set for Hall of Fame

NEW YORK — Jim Palmer, a three-time Cy Young Award winner, and Joe Morgan, a two-time Most Valuable Player, lead a list of 21 first-time candidates appearing on the 1990 Hall of Fame ballot.

The ballot was mailed Monday to 10-year members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America. Results will be announced in early January.

Palmer, who posted a 268-152 record in 19 years with the Baltimore Orioles, was a 20-game winner eight times. He won the American League Cy Young Award in 1973, 1975 and 1978.

Morgan, a lifetime .271 hitter, holds National League career records for most games played at second base (2,437) along with numerous other fielding records. In addition, he hit 299 career homers and stole 688 bases in a 22-year career. He was NL MVP in 1975 and 1976.

Michigan State tops in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Steve Smith scored 17 points Monday night to push Michigan State past Kansas State 73-68 for the championship of the Great Alaska Shootout.

Smith, voted the tournament's Most Valuable Player, entered the game leading the tournament in assists with 16 and chalked up another 11.

Earlier, Chris Gaines scored 24 points to bring Hawaii back in the second half for a 75-71 victory over Texas A&M 75-71, giving the Rainbow Warriors third place.

The Spartans led 50-29 at the half and increased their lead to 52-30 on a pair of free throws by Smith. Michigan State pushed its lead to 65-49 with 5:18 remaining before the Wildcats rallied.

Within four minutes, Kansas State had narrowed the gap to 65-60 behind Billy Ray Smith and Steve Hanson, who led the Wildcats with 14 points. However, Kansas State could get no closer.

Wilson signs deal with Jays

TORONTO — The Toronto Blue Jays Monday announced the signing of popular veteran outfielder Mookie Wilson to a 3-year contract.

Financial terms of the year deal, two years plus an option year, were not disclosed.

Wilson, 33, reportedly was earning about $1 million a year when he was acquired Aug. 1 from the New York Mets as the player to be named in the trade which sent pitcher Jeff Musselman to the Mets.

Wilson became a free agent after the season. Wilson's spirited play made him an instant fan favorite, and his arrival is credited with sparking the Blue Jays' drive to the American League East title.

Wilson, a switch-hitter who broke into the majors in 1980, batted .298 for the Blue Jays in 54 games with two home runs, 17 RBI, and 12 stolen bases. He batted .205 in 80 games with the Mets last season, with three home runs and 18 RBI.

Hawks bank on defense

Lake Howell's defense (shown here burying Oviedo's Chris Witherspoon) has been devastating this year, allowing opponents less than nine points per game. The Silver Hawk "D" will look for another impressive performance this Friday when they host Pensacola Washington.

By MARK SLYVIA
Herald sports writer

For most of the 1989 season it has been the Lake Howell offense that has helped pave the way to this Friday's Sectional matchup against Pensacola Washington. Last Friday night against Lake City-Columbia, though, proved that the Silver Hawks also have a force on defense.

Lake Howell, 10-1, will host Washington, 10-1, who defeated Middleburg 31-26 last week.

The Silver Hawks offense is led by All-State candidate tailback Marquette Smith, who is unquestionably one of the state's top running backs.

Even with all this on offense, the defense would not have been enough to beat a team like Columbia, who has a collection of great athletes.

"There's no doubt about we have a tough defensive squad," Lake Howell coach Mike Biacchia said. "When all 11 are healthy and playing there are no weak links, they are very solid."

The defense, which held Columbia to 14 points, has given up just 84 points in 11 games this year (8.5 ppg), has held and only had one bad performance all season.

The poor performance came in the final game of the regular season when the Silver Hawks dropped their only game, 31-28, at the hands of DeLand.

"The defense went into the playoffs with something to prove," Biacchia said. "The fact that they did not play well against DeLand made them hungry. They wanted to prove to themselves and everyone else that they are a tough unit."

Columbia has little doubt. The Tiger offense managed just eight first downs and 231 yards of total offense. Columbia had been averaging just over 300 yards of total offense per game.

The defense has been led by a number of players, with All-State candidate Ken Times being the standout at nose guard. Times, a 6-foot 200 pound sophomore, has been a fierce lineman all year and uses his quickness to get around blockers.

Times has been slowed the past month with a fracture on his right leg but played against Columbia.

"Ken (Times) just being on the field was an inspiration to the rest of the defense," Biacchia said. "He did real well, he wasn't 100 percent but he'll be better this week. He managed to get in on a few plays and disrupted their (Columbia's) passing game."

Linebackers Ken Spearman, 6-foot 195, and Dave Collins, 6-foot 200 pounds, are two feared hitters in the secondary along with cornerback Frank Sales. Sales is just 5-7 and 135 pounds but has held his ground against every receiver that has come his way.

"(Frank) Sales does a tremendous job," Biacchia said. "Everyone comes at him because of his size, by the end of the night, though, they

Seminole plays host to Polk

By SEAN SMITH
Herald correspondent

The Seminole Community College women's basketball team looks to go back over the 500 mark Tuesday night when they play host to the Vikings of Polk Community College from Winter Haven.

Game time is set for 7:00 p.m. at the Health and Physical Education Center on the Seminole campus and admission is free.

The Raiders, under coach Neanna Gallagher, are 2-2 on the season and will be making its first appearance since suffering a 60-58 loss at the hands of the Brevard Community College Titans last Tuesday.

Seminole fell behind by as many as 18 points in the second half in its game with Brevard before guards Shari Siegrist, from Lyman, and Dana Carr led a comeback that gave the Raiders a chance to win the contest at the buzzer. Carr scored 17 second half points and Siegrist had eight. Freshman forward Debbie Olson also contributed four big second half points off the bench.

SANFORD HERALD PLAYER OF THE WEEK

McCloud adds to Seminole's arsenal

By MARK SLYVIA
Herald sports writer

Seminole's Willie McCloud's patience is paying off, after watching the first eight weeks of the season the talented senior has put together some impressive numbers over the past three weeks, for his performance against Tarpon Springs Friday night, where he rushed for in Seminole's 14-7 win, he has been named the Sanford Herald Player of the Week.

McCloud was academically ineligible for the first two months of the football season but was able to stay in shape and enter into the Tribe offense ready for the playoffs.

Others considered for Player of the Week honors were Lake Howell nose Ken Times, who turned in an inspirational effort to key a tough defensive performance by the Silver Hawks; Oviedo's Frank Diaz who rushed for 104 yards and two touchdowns in a 42-23 loss to Oak Ridge in the Rotary Bowl; and Lake Mary's Chip Leister who caught eight passes for 90 yards in a 42-14 loss to Apopka.

"(Willie) McCloud enters our organization at the right time," Seminole coach Emory Blake said. "He's fresh, he's hungry, he's ready to play football. He knows this isn't a one man show, he respects the kids that have been out there since August 15th. They've played a full season and taken a lot of bumps and bruises while he had to watch." While watching from the sidelines McCloud learned from other players in what and what not to do.

"He learned from watching other people's mistakes," Blake said.

"From being on the sideline every week, and being a part of the team, he knew what we expected from him when he became eligible."

McCloud gives Seminole a well rounded squad as he give the team the one thing it lacked for most of the regular season, a running game.

WILLIE McCloud

"With McCloud and Julie Bennett in the backfield it gives us a (Larry) Coonka-(Jim) Kieck type running game," Blake said. "We have two big backs that can get you good yardage."

"Bennett can pick up 3-5 yards per carry and he opens it up for McCloud," Blake added. "He's like a tank, when people are baying on McCloud here comes Julius (Bennett) through the hole and putting lineman and linebackers on the ground, he loves to hit people."

Stromberg Carlson upsets Sunniland in C league play

By SEAN SMITH
Herald correspondent

Stromberg-Carlson pulled the upset of the league, Harcar Aluminum Products continued its win streak, and Ken Rummel Chevrolet picked up a win the easy way in Sanford Recreation Department Class C Slowpitch Softball action at Chase Park Monday night.

Stromberg did what no other team has been able to do all season when it handed the Sunniland Corporation its first loss of the season 15-11. Harcar won its third consecutive game with a 12-7 victory over RMC, and Rummel clinched at least a tie for second with a 7-0 forfeit win over the Barn Burners. The Burners only had eight players show for their contest.

The standings, with one week left to play, show Sunniland at 8-1, Rummel at 6-3, Stromberg at 5-4, the Barn at 4-5, Harcar at 3-5-1, and RMC at 0-8-1.

Harcar opened the night's action with its victory over RMC. Harcar scored at least two runs in five of its seven at bats. It was not easy for Harcar however, they fell behind 4-2 after two innings before scoring seven runs over their next three at bats to take control of the game.

Contributing to the 14 hit Harcar attack were Demetree Delancy (triple, single, two runs scored, two RBI), winning pitcher Jim Arnold (two singles, two runs scored, three RBI), John Adams (two singles, three runs scored), Tom Nye (two singles, two runs scored), Jack Eltonhead (two singles, run scored, three RBI), Terry Roscoe (two singles, run scored), Mark Steffes (double, two RBI), Larry Duquette (single, run scored, RBI), and Robert Jones (RBI).

RMC, which collected 11 hits, was led by Mike D'Amico who went 4-4 with a home run, three runs scored, and two RBI. Others adding to the offense were Mike Chandler (two singles, RBI), Brian Taylor (two singles), Randy Covell (single, two runs scored, RBI), Tim Bybee and Delton McCormick (one single each), Tom Tewes (run scored, RBI), and Jay Casto (run scored).

The final game of the night saw Stromberg use a five run third inning and a six run sixth inning to pull the upset of Sunniland. The game also saw a fog rise out of the soggy grass that at times hid the outfielders from the view of the batters. It reminded spectators of the fog bowl in Chicago during the football playoffs. But despite the

Hornets continue to roll with 11-0 route

From staff reports

ORLANDO — Amy Gels, established a state record for goals in a season last year, picked up where she left off as she netted four goals in the opening half.

Stephanie Gringer, who led the team in goals coming into the game, added two with Jole Lowland, Erin Sutherland, Shearon Welch, and Stephanie Feulner all adding a goal.

Defense

Jamie Furbach, Jon Smith and George Winicki add strong support in the secondary with defensive ends Mark Sneed and Thomas Demps adding strength to the line.

Demps and Sneed both had spectacular games against Columbia and Staccato hopes for more of the same this week.

"Sneed had seven tackles and five assists, with three tackles being for losses," Staccato said. "Demps had a number of tackles and should have been credited with a blocked field goal."

This week's game with Washington will be an interesting meeting as both teams have strong defenses.

"When building a program you strive to have an all-around team," Staccato said. "I feel that's what we have. We have a good offense, a good defense, and a good kicking game."

"If you have a weakness that's what your opponents will try to expose," Staccato added. "This week will be very interesting, from what I've seen on film we'll be tested on both offense and defense."

Softball

Continued from 1B conditions the outfielders did not seem to have any trouble picking up the ball off the bat.

The game started like Sunland meant to stay undefeated. The first four batters reached safely and scored to give Sunland a 4-0 lead. But Stromberg came back with three runs of its own in the bottom of the first.

Both teams scored a run in the second before Stromberg had its first big inning. Singles by Glen Coleman, Mike Hill, and Gary Schattschneider loaded the bases with no one out before winning pitcher Willie Cummings lofted a sacrifice fly to left. Tom Elliot singled in a run and Jeff Madsen got home run number three of the inning with a single. Madsen and his brother

Tony, who reached on a fielder's choice, advanced to second and third on an error and both scored when Thad Brooks reached on an error.

Sunland closed the gap in the fifth and two runs in the sixth, but Stromberg pulled back into a comfortable lead with its second big inning of the game. The next eleven men to the plate and collected six hits during the at bat. Six singles, two fielder's choices, and one error accounted for the six runs, and was more than enough advantage for Stromberg to withstand a three run seventh by Sunland.

Accounting for the 15 runs and 20 hits of Stromberg were J. Madsen (four singles, two runs scored, two RBI), Elliot (four singles, run scored, two RBI),

Bridal showers draining her

DEAR ABBY: I am a 52-year-old working woman and thought I knew what was going on in the world, but I guess I must have missed something.

I had always assumed that bridal showers were given for brides who were just starting out. This year, I was expected to attend several bridal showers and give a wedding gift to a niece who had married three years ago—and was divorced last year. I had already attended three bridal showers, and had given her an expensive wedding gift for her first marriage. She wore a white gown again (a different one) and had a big fancy church wedding that topped her first one.

A friend invited me to a baby shower for her daughter who is pregnant with her second child. This mother-to-be has a 2-year-old daughter. The sonogram showed that she was carrying another girl. In my day, we saved our baby's clothes for the next child, so why a shower to get more little girl's clothes? Also, I thought showers were given by friends—not relatives. And certainly not by a mother for her own daughter.

A girl at work is finally marrying the man she's been living with for eight years, and I am invited to a shower for her. Abby, after eight years together, what can they need to get started?

Wait, there's more: My nephew was married four years ago and was divorced 14 months ago. Last week, his ex-wife had a baby boy out of wedlock by someone unknown to us. This baby has our family's last name, but he's not related to anyone in our family.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Either the mother doesn't know who the baby's father is, or the father wants nothing to do with them. She sent me a birth announcement with a list of items the baby could use. How could I refuse?

Is all this commonplace, Abby, or is it just the people I know?

CONFUSED IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR CONFUSED: I regret to say it's not very unusual. When a bride permits a shower after a shower to be given for her with the same guests invited, one must assume she doesn't mind soaking her friends and family.

As for the baby whose birth announcement you acknowledged with a gift, you showed genuine generosity and sensitivity, for which I commend you.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter works very hard as a part-time waitress. She's putting herself through college, and we are very proud of her. We were very upset to learn that she bought her boyfriend a matched set of golf clubs for his birthday. She used most of her savings on this expensive gift and now she's practically broke.

How can we get through to this stupid girl?

HER PARENTS IN NEBRASKA

DEAR PARENTS: It's her money and her choice, and if she goes broke, it will be her problem. I know you mean well, but back off, folks.

DEAR ABBY: The story about the 33-year-old woman driver applying mascara, missing sturn, hitting a curb and turning over, killing herself, breaking her son's arm and leaving four young children without their mother, reminded me of two incidents I witnessed on a trip to San Francisco.

Driving down Highway 101 near Sausalito, a woman in a car ahead of me was combing her hair, applying lipstick and eye shadow while driving 60 miles an hour!

The next day, on Redwood Avenue in Sausalito, I came upon a woman in a car parked in the traffic lane of the street. I stopped behind her and saw her take off her bra without removing her blouse, put the car in gear and move down the street!

CALIFORNIA OBSERVER

DEAR ABBY: Right after I announced my engagement, the girls at the office gave me a shower, and someone gave me your book, "Dear Abby on Planning Your Wedding." I don't know what I would have done without it. It really helped me a lot. First, it encouraged me to have the kind of wedding I wanted—not the kind my mother or future mother-in-law thought I should have.

Surprise, surprise! When I told my future mother-in-law I wanted to get married in a suit, I thought she'd have a fit, but instead she said, "I wanted to get married in a suit, too, but my mother wouldn't let me!"

Thanks, Abby!

—LOVE, NEIDA

Who's cooking?

The Sanford Herald welcomes suggestions for cooks of the week.

Do you know someone whose food is always the highlight of company picnics, church potlucks, receptions or covered-dish luncheons? It might be an acquaintance who has won a cooking contest or invented a new twist to the peanut-butter-and-jelly sandwich.

Novice cooks and ethnic cooks, as well as experienced cooks and master chefs, add a different dimension to dining. Who is your choice? Maybe it's your mother, father, brother, sister, son, daughter, spouse, friend or boss.

Submit your nomination for Cook of the Week to the Herald People editor at 322-2611, ext. 34.

The Cook of the Week feature is published in this section each Wednesday.

Vietnamese voters elect communists

United Press International

BANGKOK, Thailand - Communist Party candidates in Vietnam breezed to victory in parliamentary by-elections, reinforcing the party's recent hard line against political liberalization.

Official Hanoi radio said party officials raked up more than 90 percent of the votes in five of the nine races for seats in the National Assembly.

A National Assembly communiqué on the Nov. 19 polls showed at least seven of the nine winners were senior officials at the provincial or national level. It did not say whether the other two successful candidates belonged to the Communist Party. One was an army general and the other the director of a state enterprise.

The Communist Party is the only legal party in Vietnam and party leaders have rejected calls for any change in the party's power monopoly.

The election communiqué was unclear about how many of the seats were contested in the by-elections, but the vote totals indicated there were significant changes in only four of the nine races. The communiqué did not name the losing candidates.

The party reacted with angry alarm to the Polish Communist Party's loss of power, and has kept quiet about events in East Germany, Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

A party plenum in August announced "a very high level of unanimity in not accepting bourgeois liberalization, pluralism, political plurality and multi-opposition parties."

The pronouncement hinted what was seen as a gradual movement toward a more democratic system, diplomatic analysts said.

In 1987, party leader Nguyen Van Linh pushed for increased democracy in the party. Parliamentary elections that year were marked by an expansion in the number of contested seats. An increased number of independent candidates won election, although they were not allowed to organize an opposition party.

Vietnamese sources said Linh has been won over by a conservative faction opposed to further reform. The 73-year-old leader has been reported in poor health.

The most hotly contested races appeared to come in Ho Chi Minh City, the heart of business activity under recent economic reforms that allow increased private enterprise.

Nguyen Vinh Nghiep, chairman of the Ho Chi Minh City People's Council, won election with 76.8 percent of the vote, while Nguyen Van Tu, the country's top labor union official and the president of the General Federation of Labor Unions, won a bare majority with 53.5 percent of the vote.

Aoun supported by protesters

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Thousands of supporters of Christian military leader Gen. Michel Aoun began a sit-in around his headquarters early Tuesday to demonstrate solidarity with the general against newly elected, Syrian-backed President Elias Hrawi.

Witnesses said thousands of youths began marching at midnight to Aoun's war-damaged headquarters at the suburban district of Bsharri, 5 miles southeast of Beirut. Carrying banners backing the Christian Maronite general, they then began a sit-in at the traditional palace that Aoun has refused to relinquish to the new president.

"We will never surrender," said one banner. "The presidential palace will never fall except on our dead bodies," another said.

The majority of Lebanon's 72-member parliament elected Hrawi, also a Maronite, Friday after predecessor Rene Moawad was killed Wednesday in a bomb blast in Syrian-policed Moslem west Beirut.

Aoun, named to head an interim government by outgoing President Amin Gemayel in 1988, has refused to step down and has called the elections of Hrawi and Moawad illegal. The general has rebuffed an Arab League-brokered peace agreement reached Oct. 23 in Taif, Saudi Arabia.

Hrawi warned Sunday he would order a limited military operation to oust Aoun if he did not step down within 48 hours.

Witnesses said dozens of Christian youths were seen lining up at several barracks of Aoun's 15,000-strong army in the Christian enclave, registering their names to join the force in line of a call by Aoun Tuesday for volunteers.

They said that Hrawi's warning and Aoun's call for mobilization prompted panic among civilians in the Christian region.

Fearing a new cycle of bloody warfare, many shops and supermarkets in east Beirut were crowded with people stocking up on powder milk, grains, flour and other essentials, the witnesses said.

Aoun charged Hrawi and the newly formed 14-member Cabinet of Sunni Moslem Prime Minister Salim Hoss were puppets for Syria and a cover for its operations in Lebanon.

The military leader, during a news conference at his bunker Tuesday, called on the youth to join the army and defend their country and said "threats will not terrify us ... and we will not give up our country voluntarily."

"This is the last battle to recover Lebanon," Aoun said, adding, "All the barracks are open for the youth who want to defend the country. We are at a crossroads and the Lebanese are invited to resist and defend their basic principles despite all the threats of death exerted on us."

Asked whether he believed the United States would support a Syrian-supported military thrust into the Christian region, the Christian commander said, "I have to defend myself and I don't care about the international stance."

He said Syria has recently dispatched more troops into Lebanon.

Syria maintains 35,000 troops in Lebanon. Aoun rejected the Taif accord in part because it called for a phased withdrawal of the Syrian troops, rather than an immediate and complete one.

Parliamentary sources said local, regional and international contacts were underway to avoid a bloody confrontation.

More than 50 deputies elected Hrawi Nov. 24 in the Syrian-patrolled town of Chitaura in eastern Lebanon and gave a vote of confidence for the Hoss government. Most of the deputies have remained in Chitaura to follow up on the developments.

Blair Insurance Agency serves customer needs

The Blair Insurance Agency has been in operation in Sanford for 30 years.

On June 30, 1989, long-time Seminole County resident Warren Moore purchased the operation, which he runs with his son Steven.

The elder Moore had been an associate at other agencies throughout the area for many years.

Jay Stokes, formerly of Stokes and Whigham Insurance, and George Kennis, formerly of Kennis Insurance Agency, have joined the Blair Agency and can now handle all your insurance needs.

Deborah Phillips is the manager of the life, health and group brokerage division of the Blair Insurance Agency.

Blake Murray is the financial planner and manager of the Lake Mary-Heathrow office of the Blair Insurance Agency.

Roger G. Doughty Jr. handles the commercial lines division of the Blair Insurance Agency. He has 30 years of experience in the insurance industry.

"We're a full-service agency," Moore said. "We're your one stop for all your insurance and financial protection."

The new owners of the Blair Insurance Agency put an emphasis on the service they can offer, rather than on business expansion. They want to offer the best possible service to all their customers.

The Blair Insurance Agency specializes in both commercial and personal accounts, offering well-balanced service for everyone, big or small.

If the Blair Insurance Agency feels that another agency might better be able to serve a specific need of one of their clients, they will not hesitate to refer them to that other agency.

Moore feels that he can better serve his clients by servicing all their insurance needs.

The Blair Insurance Agency remains at the same location at 2510 Oak Ave. (near the corner of Park Ave. and 25th St.).

Hungarian voters narrowly defeat early election idea

United Press International

BUDAPEST, Hungary - Voting freely for the first time in 42 years, Hungarians apparently defeated a Communist Party-backed referendum Monday that would have called for early presidential elections.

National Electoral Committee member Andras Keri said with virtually 100 percent of the vote counted, unofficial returns showed a 6,618-vote margin of victory for the non-communist opposition. He said 2,152,036 votes were cast in favor of delaying the presidential election versus 2,145,418 against.

Keri said because of the closeness of the vote, ballots would be recounted and official results announced Tuesday.

He said 58.3 percent of Hungary's 7.5 million eligible voters had gone to the polls Sunday for the nation's first free voting since 1947. The communists took over a year later following rigged balloting.

"It is a very great victory - the first success, which turned subservient Hungarians into proper citizens," said Free Democrats spokesman Peter Tolgyessy. It was the Free Democrats who forced a national referendum on the issue by collecting more than double the 100,000 signatures necessary to bring it to a vote.

"The referendum condemned the (Communist) Party states and said 'No' to the Communist aspirations," said Tolgyessy, who drank champagne with fellow party members to celebrate the victory.

The Hungarian Socialist party which is how the communist party is now formally known had urged voters to approve a plan to hold elections on Jan. 7, well ahead of new parliamentary elections this spring.

Earlier direct elections would have given the Hungarian Socialist candidate, Imre Pozsgay, a better chance of victory than an election by a new coalition parliament that is sure to be dominated by non-communists, political observers said.

The issue of when to hold the presidential elections was one of four referendum questions on Sunday's ballot. The other three, all embarrassing to the communists, were overwhelmingly approved by the electorate reconforming earlier decisions by parliament.

Pozsgay conceded defeat at a news conference Monday afternoon.

He said the delay in presidential elections will "delay the establishment of solid institutions and make the road to stabilization much rougher."

"My chances would be weakened if parliament elects a president because the post of the president will be arrived at through political bargaining within parliament," Pozsgay said.

But he said he took the defeat in stride and that the voting had a positive side because it gave a lesson in "practicing free elections."

Separatists elected in India

United Press International

AMRITSAR, India — Six Sikhs linked to the separatist movement in Punjab were declared victorious today in parliamentary races, dealing a blow to the ruling party and prompting hopes for an end to bloody political fighting.

Voters in the Sikh-dominated state delivered a negative judgment on more than two years of direct rule by the central government, dismissing the ruling Congress (I) Party from all but two of the six seats it had held.

"It is a qualitative change which will create peace," Sant Singh, a 45-year-old businessman, said as he watched young Sikhs waving swords and beating drums in street celebrations in the Sikh holy city of Amritsar, 250 miles north of New Delhi.

"Youths who earlier had craved for guns, with this verdict from the public, will now run for power in politics," he added.

Many observers said the candidates' success in peaceful politics could be a turning point for Punjab and could help quell the political fighting that has left more than 5,000 people dead in the northern state.

"The public in general has voted for change as many supporters for militants have won the elections," said H.L. Bagga, a police official. "Now they are bound to restore peace in the area they represent, which will ultimately lead to restoring normalcy in the state."

Most experts agreed the elections Sunday for Punjab's 13 seats allowed Sikhs to vent their anger at Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi over many grievances, including his inability to fully implement a July 1985 accord that was intended to end the insurgency by radicals fighting to create a theocratic nation of "Khalistan," or "Land of the Pure."

Anti-Gandhi sentiment was also rooted in his failure to prosecute Hindus involved in the massacre of thousands of Sikhs during riots ignited by the Oct. 31, 1984, slaying of his mother and predecessor, Indira Gandhi, by two of her Sikh security guards.

Finally, the government has earned the wrath of many Punjabis because of alleged excesses and atrocities committed by security personnel fighting to crush the extremist groups.

Voters overwhelmingly gave two Punjab seats to Bimal Khalsa and Suresh Singh, the widow and father of Beant Singh, a former New Delhi police officer and one of Mrs. Gandhi's assassins. Final returns showed Tuesday.

Beant Singh is revered as a hero by many Sikhs across Punjab for slaying the former prime minister who ordered a July 1984 army assault against radicals based in Amritsar's Golden Temple. More than 600 people, many of them innocent Sikh pilgrims, were killed.

Among the other victors were four Sikhs also linked to the separatist cause, including Atinderpal Singh, the leader of the Khalistan Liberation Organization, who is in jail awaiting trial on charges of hatching the conspiracy to kill Indira Gandhi and other charges stemming from the Sikh insurrection.

Simranjit Singh Mann, a former police officer and Atinderpal Singh's co-defendant, defeated his Congress (I) Party rival by a massive 480,000 votes in the Tarn Taran district, a hotbed of radical activity, results showed.

Kirpal Singh, an independent, won the Amritsar seat with the backing of a militant Sikh students group. The other extremist-linked candidates who won election were B.P. Rajinder Kaur, elected from Ludhiana, and Raj Dev Singh, who was returned from Sangrur.

Driftnet ban supported

United Press International

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — The United States gave its support Tuesday to the recently approved ban in the South Pacific on driftnetting, the "wall of death" fishing technique that threatens marine life in the region.

"The ban must take place immediately ... until the management regime comes into place," said Edward Wolfe, State Department deputy assistant secretary for oceans and science, while stating the U.S. position on last week's ban on driftnet fishing imposed at a conference of 20 South Pacific nations.

The Wellington conference was called to negotiate an agreement within the next two days with the distant fishing nations — Japan, the United States and South Korea.

The ban covers an area of 3 million square miles, but cannot be enforced in international waters.

Driftnets are fine, mesh nylon nets up to 37 miles long and nearly 50 feet wide that are allowed to drift overnight and form a "wall of death." They snare commercial fish species but also randomly trap birds, marine mammals and other fish, including the bluefin tuna, already threatened due to overfishing.

New Zealand Prime Minister Geoffrey Palmer warned the conference at its opening last week that driftnet fishing is taking up to five times the sustainable yield of albacore tuna in the South Pacific.

The United States does not engage in driftnet fishing in the South Pacific, but has vessels pursuing albacore tuna with long lines and trolling techniques.

Wolfe told the conference that "the issue we are dealing with, driftnets, is as much political as it is substance."

"Yes, there is a conservation problem, yet we are concerned. But it is a very political issue," he said.

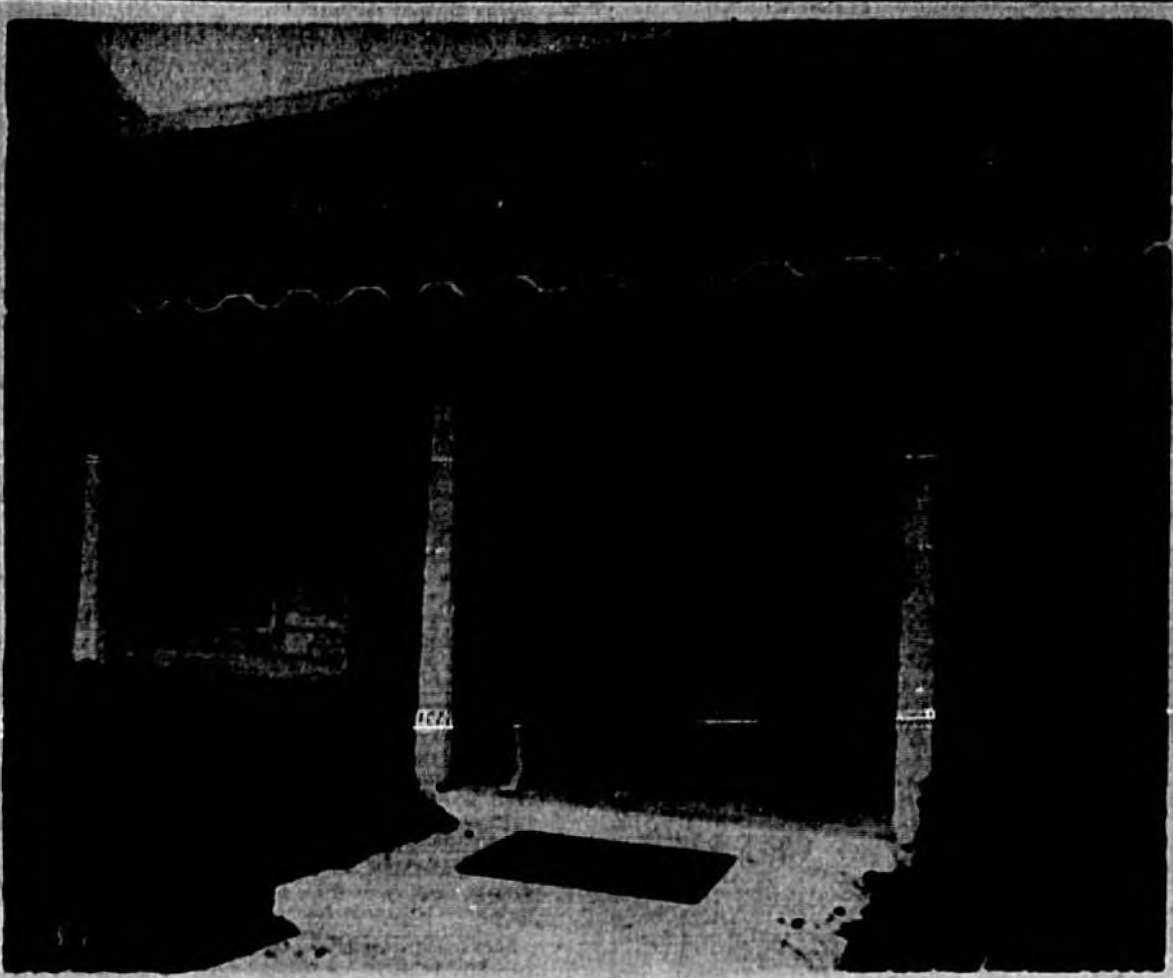

Koji Imamura, leader of the seven-member Japanese delegation, said his country opposes the ban, stressing Japan wanted more research into driftnetting.

"I deeply regret that these actions have already been taken without any formal consultations with driftnet fishing nations," said Imamura, whose nation has reduced its driftnet fleet in the South Pacific by two-thirds to 20 vessels.

Taiwan last week promised to similarly reduce its fleet, but Taiwan has refused to accept an opportunity to be represented at the conference.

A conference official said Taiwan had been told it could only be represented by fishing industry executives at the conference because many South Pacific countries did not recognize Taiwan.

"It was made clear to them before they came that they could not present themselves as a government delegation," the official said.

Drunk driving bus crash trial underway in Kentucky

United Press International

CARROLLTON, Ky. — Two truckers testified the man charged in the worst drunken driving accident in U.S. history was driving his pickup the wrong way on a highway and nearly hit their rigs before he slammed into a church bus.

Larry Mahoney, 36, of Worthville, Ky., sat quietly in Carroll County Circuit Court Monday as the witnesses in his murder trial testified about the fiery collision that killed 27 people on the night of May 14, 1986.

"I watched the pickup truck hit either the front or the side of the bus and saw flames on impact," said James Weiss, a truck driver from Pittsburgh. "It started out as a small explosion. Then it looked like the whole front of the bus engulfed itself immediately."

Just before the accident, Weiss said, a swerving pickup truck passed him while going the wrong way on Interstate 71 near Carrollton.

107 killed when plane explodes

BOGOTA, Colombia - An anonymous telephone caller claimed drug traffickers, targeting five "antichas," bombed a Colombian passenger jet that crashed outside Bogota, killing all 107 people aboard.

The Avianca Airlines Boeing 727 crashed Monday, about 5 minutes after leaving Bogota's El Dorado International Airport en route to the western city of Cali. Civil Aeronautics operations chief Jorge Gonzalez said.

There were no survivors among the 101 passengers and six crew, Gonzalez said.

Hours after the crash, a man claiming to represent a cocaine cartel hit squad called the Extraterritorial telephone Bogota's Radio Caracol to take responsibility for downing the plane.

The anonymous caller said the jet was bombed because five of the people aboard had informed against Colombian drug traffickers. "There were five snitches on the plane," he said.

It was not known which of those aboard were the targets of the Extraterritorial, who are so named because they are sought for extradition, mainly to the United States, to face drug trafficking charges.

The International Red Cross recovered 98 bodies from the charred wreckage, but relatives could identify only 25 victims because many bodies were burned beyond recognition.

Authorities said they hoped the sealed "black box" flight recorders recovered from the wreckage would provide vital flight information and clues as to what caused the crash.

"We are gathering all the information to begin an investigation that will permit us to establish the cause of the explosion," said Cundinamarca state police Chief Gustavo Leal. "I can't anticipate anything. We don't know if it was a terrorist act, but we cannot discount that possibility."

Several people were arrested by police for looting the bodies of the victims, authorities reported.

Police said they were investigating the possibility drug traffickers had downed the plane bound for Cali - home to one of Colombia's main cocaine cartels.

The cocaine cartels, which declared war on the nation last August, have been blamed for setting off more than 280 bombs in the past three months.

Officials said among the passengers aboard Flight HK 1803 were three World Bank consultants - Miguel Diaz of El Salvador and Colombian Norma Triana and Roberto Rodriguez. They were en route to Cali to work on an electrical line construction project, officials said.

Pieces of the Boeing 727 were spread over a 3-mile radius outside Soacha, 9 miles south of Bogota.

It was the worst plane crash in Colombia since March 1988, when another Avianca airliner, a Boeing 727-100, crashed into a mountain in North Santander state, killing 141 people.

Baltics obtain economic freedom

MOSCOW - Parliament passed a landmark law giving the three Baltic republics economic independence, making their test cases in Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's reform drive.

The new law, to take effect Jan. 1, is aimed at accelerating Gorbachev's bid to decentralize the crippled state-run economy and calming the nationalist fervor that has engulfed Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia in recent months.

The sweeping measure passed Monday lets the republics regulate virtually all economic activity in their territories, decide questions of land ownership and use and control most of their natural resources.

The law also authorizes them to make separate business deals with foreign countries, among one another and with the Soviet Union's other 12 republics.

"The parliament took a decisive step toward giving the Soviet federation new content," the official Tass news agency said.

"The experience of the Baltic republics will help the movement toward economic independence for all the republics," Deputy Premier Leonid Abalkin told lawmakers. "It will help create rational relations between the republics and the union."

Abalkin, in charge of Gorbachev's economic reforms, said: "This law means that the republics have full responsibility for their social and economic development."

The measure leaves under central control all military forces based in the Baltic region and the main oil and gas pipelines.

In a separate vote, lawmakers also tentatively approved a draft measure encoding Gorbachev's glasnost campaign of increased openness in provisions guaranteeing freedom of the press and providing legal safeguards for journalists.

The press freedom measure will be published in national newspapers, further elaborated in legislative committees and considered again by the parliament for final passage.

In addition to yoking the stalled national economy to the relatively prosperous Baltic republics, Gorbachev and other Soviet officials hope that giving them more freedom will appease growing nationalist sentiment in the region.

Calls for secession have increased in the Baltics since Aug. 23 when 1 million people formed a 375-mile chain across Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania on the 50th anniversary of the 1939 Hitler-Stalin "secret protocol" that led to the formerly free nations' absorption by the Soviet Union.

Post-polio syndrome weakens like polio

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had polio, and my doctor says I'm now experiencing PPS (post-polio syndrome). The leg muscles are deteriorating, and I can hardly walk anymore. Is there anything I can do to rejuvenate them?

DEAR READER: Some people who have had polio, a virus infection of the spinal nerves that causes weakness, appear to maintain good muscle function for many years, only to enter a period of progressive decline in middle age. Called "post-polio syndrome," it is a somewhat baffling ailment. Authorities have yet to agree on what causes it.

According to one theory, the polio virus causes muscle weakness to which young people appear to adapt. However, when they enter middle age, these patients suffer increasing weakness in the affected muscles; although normal muscles weaken with age, muscles that are already weak seem to deteriorate faster.

Proponents of a second theory believe that the age-related deterioration is due to a late infection with the original polio viruses.

Regardless of cause, the end result is the same: progressive loss of motor function, particularly in the legs and lower body.

Treatment consists of a program of intensive rehabilitation and physical therapy. Polio patients may, in a sense, have to return to square one: regular exercise under the supervision of physiatrists and trained therapists. For more information, I suggest you contact the International Polio Network at 4502 Maryland Avenue, St. Louis, MO 63108.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Please give your opinion on the use of Enkaid for the treatment of irregular heartbeat. I have a normal blood pressure, weigh 125 pounds and have never had a heart attack. I'm concerned the medication will cause cardiac arrest in the future.

DEAR READER: Enkaid is a relatively new drug to prevent life-threatening, cardiac irregularities. Such irregularities consist primarily of ventricular tachycardia, bursts of rapid and ineffective heart beats that can, if untreated, progress to heart standstill.

Unfortunately, like many similar medications, Enkaid was found to cause cardiac irregularities in some patients. Therefore, specialists have revised their prescribing practices and use the drug only when its benefits clearly outweigh its disadvantages—for example, in a heart patient with repeated attacks of ventricular tachycardia that cannot be controlled with other drugs.

If you have no history of heart disease and are taking Enkaid simply for an irregular pulse, I believe your doctor will want to change you to a safer drug.

By James Jacoby

There are subtle nuances in showing strength after an opponent's weak pre-emptive bid. After West's weak two-heart bid, North could bid three no-trump immediately, but that would suggest that he did not wish to be taken out to a suit contract. When he doubled first, he implied some support for spades. Then he cue-bid three hearts. When South bid three spades, it was correct for North to raise to four. After all, perhaps South held six little spades and nothing else. There might then be 10 tricks in spades when there was no play for three no-trump. West properly led hearts. (With four trumps, it is almost always better to set up your own suit tricks, keeping your length in the trump suit to inconvenience declarer.) Declarer won the heart ace, then played A-Q-J of spades. Once again (see yesterday's deal) the problem was how to make 10 tricks without being depleted of trumps. The solution to the problem was to now play a low heart. West won and switched to a club. Declarer won dummy's ace, ruffed the third heart with his nine of spades, and picked up West's spade 10 with his king. Now a diamond up to dummy's king established the 10th trick.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Nov. 28, 1966

In the year ahead you may make a concerted effort to upgrade your relationships. People who do not match or meet your standards could be weeded out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll function best today if you feel you have freedom of action and mobility. Don't get involved in situations that can tie you down or slow you up. Sagittarius, treat your self to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Not what you do for yourself, but what you do for others will be the things that give you the greatest gratification today. Let your compassionate inclinations establish your priorities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Close, personal relationships should prove to be extremely significant today. Friends could do constructive things for you and you could be rather helpful to them.
