It's Clear on What Would You Do In The Event Of An All-Out Attack?

By Michael DeBe
Herald Staff Writer

More than 200,000 people from Orange County are lined up on Interstate 4, State Road 427 and 474 trying to get into Seminole County where they will be sheltering during nuclear attack.

The highway overcrowded by normal two-lane roads, are filled with angry road drivers who have been ordered to leave their homes and drive to "shelter" areas in Seminole County.

Once in Seminole County, the families are assigned to "emergency" shelters—low income, institutions, schools, churches—anything that can be converted into reasonably safe space.

Assigned to their shelters, families have to prepare their temporary homes to withstand an expected nuclear blast from Russian missiles by putting dirt berms around the walls and on their roofs.

Meanwhile, food distribution trucks have been diverted from Orlando to serve the refugees' food as dropped at an area food store but because of a shortage of storage space, portables spoil and food supplies rapidly dwindle.

See related story Page 9A

This is the scenario that Seminole County District Director Henry Robinson envisions if a nuclear alert is ordered. He says the plan, which has Seminole County serving as a hard core, can protect civilians if it isn't too late to evacuate. It's better than what we have now.

"Including on paper, we can't do shelter for three," Robinson said. "But we'd have to use every building, including school and business owners may not want to build to their buildings being used as shelters to house people around their business."

"If there's not an attack, who says the 'doomsday' is said. Of course if there is an attack we won't have to worry about rearming them. We won't have a society any more as we know it.

He said finding shelter isn't the only difficulty with the plan. Just getting the Orange County residents to temporary homes in Seminole County could be a monumental task. Average residential highways would have to be used to move 200,000 people.

"It's 436 not 437, unless ordinary road-legal traffic. Suppose you have one or two breakdowns," Robinson said.

Under revised plans, several city streets in Seminole's problems get worse, Robinson said.

The western part of the county, the area bordering Orange County is now contained in the urgent area because of its proximity to Martin Marietta Corp. and would have to be evacuated as well, including the number of buildings available as shelters.

Robinson said the government has left the job of acting the effectiveness of the procedures open to local civil defense agencies.

"It's an incredible plan but the government has to get us the need," Robinson said. "It's not the greatest plan but it's the best we've got. The only thing you're reading about is that there are no opponents to this plan. The government hasn't tried to conceal that."

Robinson said the people who oppose the plan have made some good points. But some of the things that are being publicized are inaccuracies which will just breed fear among the populace.

The government would do an alert with opposition. He said. "It's not that they could get some ideas."

"Let's say an intercontinental ballistic missile is aimed at Miami-Orlando from somewhere inside Russia. The U.S. government officials are knowing the missiles are on target. I don't think they can track us that far," he said.

City Planning Commission City

Does city of Sanford have to provide water service to a vacant city lot when the owner admits he will pipe it from that lot to property outside the city?

City Attorney Bill Colbert has been instructed to research this issue.

Bob Ball, a Sanford businessman, applied to the city for water service at 5445 French Ave.

City Engineer and Utility Director Mack LaZerby in a memo to City Manager W. E. "Pete" Knowles said that only six-tenths of a foot of the building had waste served in within the city limits, adding that no building permit was ever issued for that building by the city.

Asked exactly what he would build on the property in the city for which he is seeking city water service, Ball replied, "I might build a bird bath."

Commissioner David Farr elicited the information from Ball that he actually intends to pipe the water outside the city.

"I don't want to put a water meter on city property for a bird bath," Farr said.

Commissioner Milton Smith added that the city's water facilities are not designed to serve the lot.

The request was tabled to give Colbert an opportunity to research the issue.

"I am reluctant to provide water service to this lot knowing that it will be used for a building that is outside the city limits," LaZerby's memo said.

Knowles told the City Commission Monday night that Ball requested a water meter for an adjacent lot inside the city, saying he would run a line from the meter to the building outside the city.

Knowles said he explained to Ball the city's policy to "preserve all water to people inside the city."

Knowles also said that Ball told him that he pays taxes on other property within the city and the water will be discriminating by denying him the service requested.

In other action, Monday, the commission instructed Knowles to come up with annexation guidelines under which the city could operate, with each area an example of what might be like the guidelines to include:

If the owner of a 50 by 100-foot lot wanted to annex to the city, Smith said as an example, the city might annex the property if the 100-foot side of the lot was contiguous to the city and deny the request if only the 50-foot side was contiguous.

Knowles said the issue of annexation can become complex.

Knowles said he will prepare guidelines that tell what the city can and cannot do under state law and then pass a report on to Colbert for his comment.

Ball reminded the commissioners that he had spoken to many of them prior to the meeting and heard a lot of comments about rates and regulations. He said that he will file a site plan to develop the property within three to six weeks, and the water connection. As far as annexing the adjacent 60-foot wide property to the building is, Ball said city regulations would require a 10-foot easement on each side, and city utility easements of only 40 feet wide. County requirements are not that strict, he said.

In other action, the City Commission suspended Garret West and Howard Whelchel as neutral members of the city's Public Employees Relations Commission with terms to expire in January 1987.

In recent years through all of our economic troubles no one has suggested price controls as the answer," Johnson said. "The issue today is the elimination of price controls on money."

The commission was established by state laws and is not established by city laws as many people think," said Wray Martin.

The commission will support a staff analysis of the bill would be to increase the availability of credit, particularly when rates are high, for those who are the first and last victims of credit rationing."

Florida banks, the analysis said, were forced to raise interest rates when the 18 percent interest rate limit made the issuance of new cards unprofitable.

In The Hunt

If appears everyone found what they were looking for at the Easter egg hunt held this week at the Seminole County branch library in Sanford. In the photo above is 11-year-old daughter of Richard and Peggy Sherrill of Sanford, sets off on her quest for a goodie, bag full of city bands. Above right, she proudly displays one of the fruits of her search. At right, seven-month-old Rose Harpstrell, daughter of Anne Harpstrell of Lake Mary, having already found an Easter prize, begins to tuck on the gaily colored egg.

Churches Observing Holy Week

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

Many area churches are observing Holy Week — so named as it refers to the week leading up to the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus Christ — with special services.

Thursday is known as Maundy Thursday. The day commemorates Christ's washing of the feet of his disciples and the sharing of the Last Supper with them on the Jewish Passover.

The name maundy probably comes from the Latin mandatum, or commandment referring in Christ's words to the disciples. "A new commandment I give unto you. That ye love one another."

Solemn Good Friday services mark the anniversary of the Crucifixion of Christ. There are some of the churches planning special services.

Law Repeat could Send Rates Sky-High

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — A House subcommittee approved a bill Tuesday which would allow banks to raise interest rates that would virtually eliminate Florida's interest rate ceiling on most loans.

The bill was approved by the House Committee's subcommittee on banking and finance. It would allow banks to raise interest rates and finance charges without the current felony penalty of 45 percent.

A similar effort to raise or eliminate the usury rate was killed in committee last year.

Harold Johnson, a Barnett Bank executive and a spokesman for major lending institutions, said the bill would retain the state's 18 percent usury law as "voluntarily agreed to" by lenders and borrowers, but would allow banks to raise interest rates on new loans to consumers.

Opponents said the usury law should be done in a general skyrocketing interest rates for consumers.

The bill would apply to interest rates and finance charges on all consumer loans with the exception of certain credit cards. The bill would also remove the present 85 cap on delinquent payment penalties.

In recent years through all of our economic troubles no one has suggested price controls as the answer," Johnson said. "The issue today is the elimination of price controls on money."

The commission was established by state laws and is not established by city laws as many people think," said Wray Martin.

The commission will support a staff analysis of the bill would be to increase the availability of credit, particularly when rates are high, for those who are the first and last victims of credit rationing."

Spraying Program Considered Buds This Year May Be Bad

By Donna Kates
Herald Staff Writer

Mosquitoes could become a big problem in Sanford considering the high amount of rainfall over the past few months.

Mayor Lee P. Moore has urged his colleagues to begin thinking now about whether they want to initiate a mosquito control program in the city.

"If you are going to do anything about mosquitoes, except lanes to the people, but you must think about now," Moore said Monday night.

He noted that the heavy rains over the past few months even before the regular rainy season has begun will result in more of the biting insects than ever in the months ahead.

The mayor also noted that City Manager W. E. "Pete" Knowles has made no bones about his opposition to such a program.

When the city considered last year initiating a new mosquito control program discontinued by the city several years ago for economic reasons, he insisted that an interpretive program does nothing to alleviate the mosquito problem.

Knowles then said bug spraying only provides psychological relief.

Knowles said at the time the only effective type program would require spraying lanes and other water holding or retention areas with a larvicide to kill mosquito eggs before they hatch as well as spraying for the adult bugs.

Knowles noted that since mosquitoes do not recognize city boundaries, a program could not be effective unless a citywide mosquito control program was undertaken.

After talks with the county about a cooperative program and the county's refusal to initiate such a program, the idea was abandoned.

Moore also urged city staff members to look into building soccer fields for the city's youth in the development of city parks.

Moore said although there are hundreds of Sanford youths involved in soccer, he has been told that a soccer field is not available for their games within the city.

He said if the choice is between building baseball fields and soccer fields, that soccer ought to be given major consideration.

Moore added that it appears that more youngsters involved in a soccer team get to actually playing during competitions than children involved in baseball.

Knowles said a soccer field is planned in the development of the Marshall Avenue Park, now underway.

Good News, But Tentative

The good news on the economic front, where so much heartache and happiness abide to modern society, is that the nation's economy is showing a healthy 4 percent annual rate as of the first quarter of this year.

This preliminary "flash" report from the Commerce Department, indicating the best report in two years, is the broadest evidence to date that the economy is really getting going.

Additional good evidence on the quarter's performance was that unemployment fell to 6.3 percent, the lowest in 13 years.

Such heartening economic developments being added to the fact that the had news is that the 4 percent figure is well below the 7 percent average increase in gross national product in the first four quarters of the six post-war business cycles in other words, this recovery is not as rapid as some prominent economists have been predicting. It is a recovery, but it is tentative.

Still, it's a hard winter and signs abound that spring really is on the way. For an idea of what the last four months of the year in 40 years has been, we need not look beyond last year's aileron corporate profits, which were down 10 percent from the last year's level in 1965. Even if after-tax profits grow by 25 percent this year, it would amount to George J. Perry of the Bridgeville Institute predicting that the economy will only be regaining lost ground. This factor obviously contributed to the high unemployment.

Some economic forecasts indicate that the recovery will gain strength as it goes along, swelling to 6 percent by year's end. This optimism is based on the necessity for business to rebuild its inventories, now depleted. There is a dramatic pickup in capital investment, mostly in the electronic, plastic, electronic, and high technology equipment — not so much in steel mills and manufacturing plants.

But the real expansion will be fueled by consumers. Those buying power has been bolstered by the flattened inflation rate, by the Reaganites tax refunds, by falling energy costs, and by surging stock and bond markets that have increased consumer net worth by an astonishing $500 billion during recent months.

Despite interest rates, still high by historical standards, the housing industry is rebounding beyond expectations from an annual rate of 1.3 million housing starts in last year's fourth quarter to 1.7 million in January alone. And automobile sales have increased by half a million to a 6-million-a-year pace, a new plateau.

Interest rates must be seen as the big wild card in the recovery outlook. Mortgage rates have declined about four percentage points from 17 percent last year, and the prime rate's recent cut to 10.5 percent is at the lowest level in four years. Consumer lending rates, which lag behind those in business, are expected to decline soon and stimulate consumer spending.

A renewed surge in interest rates would probably shoo the economy back into another recession. High interest rates will continue to endanger the recovery and the economy itself unless Congress and the administration can reduce the budget deficits, which they appear unwilling and unable to do. The chief hope here is that the recovery will come to the budget's rescue, saving $25 billion with every point gain in unemployment and bringing in uncounted billions in windfall revenues from a prospering country.

With all of its problems, the American economy is still the principal engine of the free world and American consumers will continue to dominate markets in nearly every land. Economic recovery in Japan and Western Europe will follow in the wake of the United States. The only real danger, indeed, we are witness to the marvel of the free enterprise system, which having done so much for us, is that it will be so successful that it will eventually engulf the world around us and continue to flourish.

JACK ANDERSON Pension Brass Fly High

WASHINGTON — While millions of Americans have been struggling to make ends meet, the privileged few in the Pentagon have been flying high — literally — at the taxpayer's expense.

The Defense Department's generals, admirals and high-ranking civilians have a fleet of 8,000 aircraft available to chauffeur them around the country wherever they get the itch to travel.

According to an internal report prepared by the Pentagon's new inspector general, these planes and helicopters have become an "on-demand aerial service" for brass hats who are too busy to see to it that their commercial flights to their destinations.

This abuse of rank's privileges is reported to cost about $800 a month for a flight in a T-39, the military's smallest transport plane, and $1,000 a hour, the big, boosted-up transport plane, the B-47 $2,000 an hour.

The 10,000 seats in Air Force wings are actually encouraged to travel, which led the investigators to observe that while 100 seats may be accepted interpretation of the DoD guideline, we do not believe that is within the spirit of what DoD intended.

Helicopters are routinely used by the brass whose wings will do the job more cheaply. The Army, for example, uses choppers to transport blankets and other supplies to troops in the mountains. 32 — 32 miles apart. A one-way trip takes 45 minutes.

One thing really working in Graham's favor, however, is that both Peterson and Moffitt are committed to the education improvement drive and each has a budget.

And modest increases on carefully worked-out plans for the next year probably could be passed without enhancing the chances for ratification of the new education plan.

DICK WEST Bankrupt: Next to Godliness

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If social reform, as opposed to prosperity, is your bag, be thankful for an occasional Dick West.

It was reported last week that the divinity school he founded in 1963 for the first time in 20 years, mainly because of the economic slump.

Modern statistics lend credence to the notion that the same rationale can be used to explain a dip in the crime rate. "People can't afford deviance in a recession," says one criminologist.

But what the whole thing really boils down to is this: the family that sustains the serious habit of adultery is the one that shows a prodigious son who is forced by economic reverses to fight for his life.

What striking in a boom to market the national debt is to be expected. England's late Lord Churchill once identified three major deterrents to bankruptcy: a large family, a large wife, this being a family newspaper.

In other words, a shortage of scratch money is a major deterrent to full-scale depression and our divorce courts would be virtually empty.

Excuse, heretic and that sort of stuff isn't cheap. You know a potential for bankruptcy is not a bad thing. The relative affluence of postwar years has made it a bad thing.

Dream Of Liberation

VIETNAMESE REFUGEES: THIS MORNING MARKS THE 10th anniversary of the U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam. The following story associates the current plight of some of those who fled the Communist takeover and settled in the U.S.

By Tom Lide

WASHINGTON (AP)—"Tom Phung Lich was a school teacher in Saigon when the Communists took over Vietnam. He bitterly remembers what happened. The new government changed his curriculum, soldiers often disrupted his classes, and he lost control of his students and his way of life.

Then, starved and dispirited, he decided to get out of the country. He boarded a 14-foot boat, with 36 other people and fled on a perilous journey (likely) to the South China Sea. He says the boat drifted for 52 days, in storms and near communist patrols, before the passengers were rescued.

Now Lich works in a camera shop in a Washington suburb. And he continues to be angry. He says his old school has become a propaganda camp, and his students have been poisoned with lies. He gets letters from his parents, but they are all propaganda, too. He has no news of his relatives in Hanoi.

He wants to go back and get them. He says he is tired with a hate that won't die. "My nation has been destroyed. My home has been destroyed. I dream sometimes of taking a gun, getting a big bag of ammunition, and going back to Saigon to chase the communists out of my land."

He wouldn't do that, however. He says there are others who'd go with him. And he is probably right. Thousands of Vietnamese in America are planning to go back. Some are going back to work in the communes. A few of them are already organized liberation forces in that end, and are now conducting various types of military training.

Some of the risk may be excessive, of course. O. W. Miller, who is in Saigon, says he is an officer with the U.S. Army. He says he is not sure he would actually say so, but he would be the last chance to see his parents.

On the other hand, some refugees are not so sure. He says they have been saying war for some time now. Nguyen Cao Ky, who was the president and later the premier of South Vietnam, says that he is "not going to give up my life, certainly, to be back in my country."

Therefore, Ky has been giving speeches to raise money for the effort, had requests for help and to bring those of paralytic grade. Phung Van Lam, one of the leaders of the liberation forces, said that, eventually, some 300,000 Vietnamese could be repatriated.

The United States has no authority agreement to take it in out of line as a potential. Scientists at the United Nations think there are more than 2 million Vietnamese living in exile from the communes, one fourth of them, or about 625,000, are residing in the United States.

Most of the exiles living here have adapted fairly well. Nine in 10 of the adult men have jobs, and so most of the adult women. But they have had time to become completely Americanized. Many still say they hope to return to Southeast Asia, and they hold sentimentally to their old ways.

For instance, they have not spread individually through the nation. Instead, they have for the most part gathered in Oriental pockets. Vietnamese fishermen have formed a community on the Texas Gulf Coast. Among tribespeople have clustered in areas enclaves in Minnesota and Rhode Island.

The refugees have established their own newspapers and magazines. They hold concerts with their own constraints. They now produce a weekly Vietnamese program on the National Public Radio network, and they have opened up thousands of stores that are just like the ones back home.

Some of the stores are located in what is called the "Hocking Shopping Center" in Arlington, Va., across the Potomac River from Washington. Lich's camera store is there. So is a tailor, a furniture place, a pool hall, an art travel service, and several markets, including a Vietnamese food store.

The only thing the center doesn't have is wealthy shoppers. And that's one of the reasons there is talk of going back home. Most of the refugees to America have come from the middle class, and they have still been the majority of the United States.

Once Premier of South Vietnam, Nguyen Cao Ky today runs a liquor store in America. He says that he and others are now holding military training exercises with an eye toward an invasion of Vietnam.

One study suggests that only 18 percent of the refugees have found professional work here. Sixty percent are in other occupations, and 27 percent are in clerical or unskilled work. In their opinion, this study of Vietnam's ground old norms have been retained in substantial form.

By age, now runs a liquor store in California. He quit a university for a man who used to control the "North" and purchases of 30 million Vietnamese. He would be in a "line the gate," he says, because "we are not going back and ask the administration."

Lich is another. He was a member of the Vietnamese military. Today he says he is financially paying his bills. He has created a group called the United Front for the Liberation of Vietnam, and he insists that "we are going to remain in the next few years, and take what belongs to us."

By and large both they possess ambition. "I'll, the liberalists do about a common goal. They all agree that commercial Vietnam need be fulfilled. Further, they consider that the time to do it is passing. They say the Hanoi government has failed so completely in the South that it is increasingly in a weakened and vulnerable position."

And there is evidence to support their optimism. Last year the International Monetary Fund reported that Vietnam has become a financial basket case. The nation's debt has grown $600 million a year. Its foreign reserves have shrunk to $10 million, and it won't need to request more assistance.

But Washington's critics say the odds are not large. It is, in fact, Pentagon sources who have heard of the recent plans say the Vietnamese do not have the funds, or access to the funds, to invade Vietnam. The average income for refugee families in the United States is less than $10,000 a year.

Finally, the invasion would likely be deemed if it did take place. Pentagon people say it would be no control. For all of its problems, commercial Vietnam still has one of the most powerful standing armies in the world, it did, after all, defeat Ky and the others the first time around.

And there is one other consideration. When everything is said and done the refugees may lack the will to return.

On the contrary, the indication is that most headstrong refugees are organizing for something beyond the land. That's why they build the houses in the Hocking Shopping Center. They may be nervous, they may want to go back, but as a practical matter they are probably now "home" in America.

Photographer Is Taking Potshots At James Watt

James Watt

United Press International

BOUNDING UP: Ansel Adams, the 81-year-old best-selling photographer who has been active for years as an environmentalist, is taking on Secretary of Interior James Watt in an interview in the current Playboy magazine.

Adams, who lives in Carmel, Calif., described Watt as "our worst enemy," adding, "No wonder it is a monumental battle.... (Watt) is, in my mind, an incredibly slimy character."

"I am convinced the entire administration is determined to destroying the integrity of those areas. Those people have the same concept of land use that the Russians have, that national parks are forests and the enjoyment of nature are bourgeois indulgences.... Thank God, we have people fighting to protect our future." President Jimmy Carter awarded Adams the Presidential Medal of Freedom for his environmental work and photography in 1980.

Resistance Work

WHO WAS JULIA? Lillian Hellman has never revealed who was the model for the title character of her novel, "Julia," an account of how the novelist playwright helped an American friend active in the Austrian resistance to Hitler. Now, Yale University Press is planning to publish "Code Name 'Mary,'" the memoirs of Muriel Gardner, an American who was active in Vienna in the underground anti-Nazi movement from 1954 until the outbreak of war in 1939. In the underground to the book, Miss Gardner says she never met Miss Hellman but had a close friend who knew her well, which probably accounts for Miss Hellman knowing about Miss Gardner's activities. Miss Gardner was the only American known to Austrian authorities to have been involved in Austrian anti-Nazi resistance work.

HOW IT CAN BE: YOU can be the upcoming St. Martin's press autobiography, "Das Lanchester Heer," the widow of actor Charles Laughton accuses the late Henry Fonda of being a cruel, difficult man. Miss Lanchester, a famous actress in her own right, said producer Paul Gregory told her during the filming of "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial." Fonda, then 50, turned on Laughton before the whole cast and asked him, "What do you know about men, you fat, ugly, homosexual?"

Lanchester said Fonda acted "as though he were Christ on the cross suffering" when any of his scenes were shot and was furious that many minor characters were handsome young men.

Gas Prices

Friday's 5-Cent Tax Hike, Other Causes To Increase Costs

Average vehicle efficiency, as measured in miles traveled for each gallon of gasoline consumed, has taken a sharp turn upward in recent years. Based on an Energy Department index set at 100 for 1967 travel and consumption averages, efficiency declined to a low point in 1973, the year of the OPEC embargo. If then began to move up, reaching the 1967 level of efficiency again in 1978 and continuing the upward trend subsequently.

NEW YORK (UPI) — U.S. pump prices have declined steadily since July 1981, but motorists soon may pay more for gasoline despite OPEC's recent decision to lower world oil prices by $5 to $2.5 a barrel.

Q. How could gasoline prices go up if crude oil prices are coming down?

A. The average U.S. pump price dropped 17 cents to $1.12 a gallon in mid-March from $1.29 a gallon last July as oil companies offered discounts for cash, honored competitors' credit cards and reacted to other marketing ploys to stimulate weak demand, according to the Los Angeles-based Lundberg Survey.

The war at the pump for customers has driven gasoline prices below the level equivalent to OPEC's new $20 price for a 42-gallon barrel of crude oil, which means motorists are not likely to reap additional savings. In fact, several major marketers have raised wholesale gasoline prices by several cents a gallon on a regional basis since the OPEC price break two weeks ago in an attempt to increase badly eroded profit margins.

If these wholesale price moves stick, the rest of the industry could follow suit even though demand remains sluggish. Some of companies cut prices in the aftermath of the OPEC decision and a clear trend has not yet emerged.

Q. What impact will the nickel-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax have on pump prices?

A. The rise in the federal gasoline tax to 9 cents a gallon starts Friday (UPI). Large industrial users, such as bottling plants, are filling their storage tanks in heat. The tax will raise the nation's gasoline inventory.

This artificial surge in demand could induce more oil companies to boost wholesale gasoline prices and might create temporary spot shortages. But once the tax is in place, demand will fall off again and supplies will be ample.

In most states, the federal tax is incorporated into the price that dealers pay the oil companies for gasoline deliveries. The oil companies are expected to pass the tax hike through to dealers.

Some dealers, desperate to hang on to business, may not charge motorists the full 5-cent increase. But the Internal Revenue Service is requiring dealers to pay the higher tax on the gasoline in storage tanks as of April 1 to prevent a windfall before new deliveries are received.

In the unlikely event wholesale and retail gasoline prices continue to decline, motorists could be spared some — and perhaps all — of the new tax. However, motorists may be faced with both rising gasoline prices and the nickel tax increase, which could further depress demand.

If prices settle at current levels, the higher federal tax will mean a nickel-a-gallon increase. The average U.S. weighted tax on gasoline — including federal, state and local taxes — will jump to 20.4 cents a gallon.

Q. Have state gasoline taxes gone up?

A. Most states have not changed gasoline tax structures since October 1981. Only five states have raised their rates since then. The average gasoline tax for this year, according to Lundberg Survey, added 10 states are cutting state gasoline taxes.

On Jan. 1 California lifted its state gasoline tax by 3 cents to 9 cents a gallon. Mississippi added up to 2 to 13 cents a gallon. On March 1 Ohio's tax rose to 12 cents from 11.7 cents. On April 1, Idaho and Nebraska's tax is declining for the second time this year to 13.7 cents from 14 cents in 1981.

Q. How would OPEC's fall in oil prices affect the crude price by $5 a barrel?

A. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was forced to lower its oil price this summer because demand had been caused gasoline and other refined petroleum product prices to fall below their crude prices. The OPEC — the largest of-consuming nations — said it would not raise its price to help OPEC prevent another drop in world oil prices.

Gasoline can be bought for less than $1-a-gallon in many states, a survey shows, but a steady drop in prices will likely be cut short Friday when the new 5-cent tax increases starts.

A random sampling by United Press International showed gasoline can be bought for less than $1 in 22 states. The lowest price is in Oklahoma, West Virginia and South Carolina. One American in five is selling regular gasoline at 90 cents a gallon. The average price is 95 cents, only about a 2-cent-per-gallon profit, but had a big business.

One American in five is selling regular gasoline at 90 cents a gallon. The average price is 95 cents, only about a 2-cent-per-gallon profit, but had a big business.

In addition to paying the new nickel-a-gallon federal tax, West Virginia motorists will also pay the state's 4.5-cent tax increase, gas dealers with the tax in different ways," he said. "They are not required to pass the tax along. Some dealers may increase prices by 5 cents. Some may not raise prices at all. Some may fall behind in raising the pump price from 1 cent to 5 cents."

Oil companies were divided on whether the tax increase will be automatically passed onto the consumer. Jack Hallock, spokesman for Exxon USA in Houston, said that effective April 1 Exxon will add the whole 5-cent excise tax without any change in the price. An Amoco spokesman said Amoco dealers will credit 100 cents new tax along to customers.

But Jerry Murray, spokesman for Shell Oil Co., said that the new tax is not a factor in the price it charges. He said that California imposed a 2-cent tax increase and 1 price still went down at the pumps.

A Sohio spokesman said, "No decision has been made on what will happen and we don't speculate on future prices."

Failed Bank Just Ignored Bad Checks

HAZEN, ARK. (UPI) — The 85-year-old founder of a bank that failed yesterday said the bank might have gotten into trouble by projecting financially strapped farmers and the unscrupulous from housing checks.

The people were out there dependent for money and we couldn't lend them anything because it cost us too much," Jerry Screeton said. "The people didn't need it, they didn't want it and they needed it."

Consequently, the only bank in Hazen open, 1456, allowed "cutting back a simply setting aside a check that was drawn on insufficient funds, he said.

"Normally, the customer could make good on the checks within 48 hours," Screeton said.

But under banking regulations, the bank becomes responsible for any check held more than 24 hours. The First Branch bank apparently ended up holding a bundle of worthless checks, A. A. Bickel, a local banker, said.

Arkansas Bank Commissioner Beverly Lamb would say only that investigators had found "initial transactions not reflected on the books."

Columbia paved the way for tomorrow's shuttles Space Shuttle Faces Most Complex Trip

By AL ROBBERTS JR.
UPI Science Editor

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — There will be a lot of crossed fingers Monday when the space shuttle Challenger launches the largest and most powerful communications satellite ever built.

The concern is not so much the sand, silt, silica dust and metal chips that contaminated the spacecraft; in the shuttle's big cargo bay after a storm Feb. 28, but the overall complexity of launching, checking out and unfolding the satellite in orbit.

"The amount of risk that's associated with the remaining contamination in my opinion is very, very small," said Robert Alvar, head of NASA's tracking and data relay satellite program. "If listed my concerns on the mission, that would be way, way down on the list."

"The top of the list is the integrated operation of all the elements of the hardware, the whole mission," he said in an interview. "I can't point to any one item. When you put all these things together it makes a very complex mission in total."

After said the Challenger's systems, the satellite and the new two-stage rocket that will propel it from a low orbit to a stationary parking spot 22,300 miles high must work together, along with ground centers in Houston, White Sands, N.M., and Sunnyvale, Calif.

"All three of those ground systems as well as three of the area of hardware have to work in an integrated fashion."

"Of course, we're flying new vehicles across the board and that always makes for an interesting first time mission."

The five layer of particles on the satellite force NASA to remove it from Challenger's payload bay for cleaning and inspection, adding a few more days to a two-month-plus delay resulting from a series of troubles with Challenger's main engines.

There is a bad landing on this satellite. It costs tens of millions of dollars and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is counting on it to listen to radio messages from stations and unmanned satellites, relay them to ground stations and send reports back to the spacecraft.

Once a second satellite is carried up next August on the eighth shuttle flight, the two-satellite system will be able to handle six times as much data as today's ground stations. Each satellite can transmit 37 million characters a second.

"That's like taking 10 sets of a 14-volume encyclopedia and taking all that data and passing it through that system in one second," said Neville Butler of TRW Inc., Redondo Beach, Calif., the company that built the spacecraft.

The two satellites will replace most of the ground tracking stations now used to communicate with space shuttles and unmanned satellites.

NASA plans to phase out ground stations next year at Guam, Hawaii, Ascension Island in the South Atlantic, Santiago, Chile; Dakar, Senegal in Africa; Yarragadee, Australia; and Air Force Ocala, Florida.

"We're putting our tracking stations in other areas," Alvar said.

Once both of the new satellites are working, astronauts will be in constant contact with mission control 89 percent of the time. Now, shuttles can only talk to the ground about 15 percent of the time, when they are passing over ground stations.

The first satellite will weigh nearly 2.5 tons in orbit. It now is stowed away in Challenger's cargo bay, with its six large glassy solar panels folded snugly against its sides. Its twin gold foil-covered antennas are folded like closed umbrellas.

When it gets into its final orbit, its solar wings will unfold like a butterfly coming out of a chrysalis, spanning 57 feet from tip to tip, his two 16-foot diameter antennas will reach 43 feet to the other direction.

The satellites are owned by Space Communications Co., which is half owned by Western Union, Fairchild Industries Inc., and Continental Telephone Corp., each have 25 percent interests in the company.

It is launching the two satellites from Spaceport at a cost of $250 million a year for 10 years.

Cat Reviews UAW Proposal

BRIDGE TON, Mo. (UPI) — Negotiators for Caterpillar Corp. and UAW union members reviewed a UAW proposal to end the longest UAW strike against a major American company.

Ed McMahon, a federal mediator in a room in Washington, said the UAW proposal met briefly Monday to discuss the "counter proposal" and whether the UAW would accept the offer.

McMahon declined to discuss the details of either package or the loss of negotiations at a suburban St. Louis hotel. About 20,400 UAW members have been on strike against Caterpillar since Oct. 1.

The union's proposal was the first in several months. The UAW early in contract discussions had made some requests, but after the company completed financial proposals, the union said it wanted to review the 1979 agreement.

Boston Herald Says NBA Strike Vote A 'Formality'

NEW YORK (UPI) — The NBA and Players Association have gone almost silent in recent days. It could be even more quiet Sunday.

Representatives for the league and its players met for close to four hours Tuesday, seeking to reach agreement on a collective bargaining pact that would avert a threatened Saturday night walkout by the NBAFA.

The Boston Herald, in a Wednesday morning edition, reported that both sides have reached an agreement in principle, including several provisions to schedule, to ensure playoff action will go on as scheduled.

The Herald said there was an agreement in principle reached and the governors' vote will be a formality.

The newspaper said there are three major sections to the compromise:

- A maximum annual salary cap per team that would be between $3.5 and $3.7 million.
- A minimum salary level of between $3.2 and $3.5 million per team.
- Teams would be able to match free agent offers made by their own players by other clubs unless the contract figure affect its salary cap.

Ruling May KO Pryor Bout

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Three days before World Boxing Association junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor was scheduled to defend his title, no one seemed certain whether the bout would come off.

Pryor's fight Saturday in Atlantic City, N.J., against No. 1 ranked challenger Sang Hyun Kim of Korea was put in doubt Tuesday, when an AUSA appeals court ruled the bout couldn't proceed without approval from Pryor's manager.

Pryor's manager, Donald "Buddy" LaRosa, who has been feuding with the boxer over their six-year contract for several months, so far has refused to accept the terms for the fight.

Israel Arrests Arabs In Land Day Violence

By United Press International
Israeli soldiers arrested 30 Arabs and tightened their control over the violence in the northern Galilee region, Israeli radio said Monday.

The arrests Tuesday were said to relate to incidents in which Israeli soldiers shot and killed a young Arab woman in the village of Khirbat al-Sams, near the village of Kalfarna.

Racial Tensions Mounting

By United Press International
Zimbabwe President Robert Mugabe is sending a message to President Reagan today that South Africa is nearing a racial explosion which will make the French revolution look like a Sunday morning in the park.

Reagan has said South Africa is important to United States' interests and it cannot be abandoned despite its policy of racial integration. Mugabe, however, is warning that a racial explosion may erupt in South Africa within four years, but that Washington, with its influence in Pretoria, has the opportunity to prevent it to cause a racial barrier.

Mugabe is a leader in the efforts to arrange independence for Namibia, the mineral-rich former territory of South West Africa ruled by South Africa in defiance of the United Nations.

Reagan and officials of South Africa are concerned about the presence of 17,000 to 20,000 Cuban soldiers in Angola and the threat of destabilizing south central Africa. Reagan has supported South Africa's demand that the Cubans pull out as part of an agreement for independence for Namibia.

Bulgaria Had Nothing To Do With Pope Plot

ROME (UPI) - A Bulgarian embassy official says "before God" Tuesday that his nation's intelligence service had nothing to do with the attempt to kill Pope John Paul II.

The official, chief of state Ljudov Pirov, says his country has no connection with the plot because the pope's assassin and the chief architect in the case, is a pope.

Pirov made the assertion in a news conference called to dispel the baseless rumor of Bulgarian involvement in the assassination attempt that broke in Rome several days ago.

"There is no one thing on which we are certain - that is that Bulgaria did not do it," said Pirov. "We have no connections with the assassin, the pope's assassin and the chief architect in the case, is a pope."

"I am a believer, I believe in God, and I mean by God here makes that Bulgaria is innocent," Pirov said.

"Now it seems that Agca is a lone operation and that the Bulgarians are not planned against the pope. So former Polish Solidarity union leader Jerzy Lukaszewicz said.

The Bulgarian's Italian lawyer, Giuseppe Conza and Agca last week by allegedly told Italian court that the plot was planned by Agca's associates in 1981.

Agca also said he wanted the pope May 13, 1981 and was serving a life sentence in an Italian prison.

"We have concrete, indisputable, documented evidence that Agca was in Rome," Conza said.

The accused reported photographs of a Yugoslav by registration showing that Agca's wife in Rome, left Italy on May 8, 1981 - two days before Pirov reportedly told prosecutors he had met with Agca and his wife in Bulgaria earlier than officials at Agca's apartment.

The lawyer said he could prove with Bulgarian documents that Romania visited the Bulgarian capital of Sofia on May 9 for a summit visit.

He said Agca had about 200 associates at Agca's wife at the meeting. "In order to establish contacts," he said.

Conza also said he would like to see a list of names for lack of contacts. An ID card or other means have been taken down by Italian officials who ruled there is sufficient evidence to hold Bulgarians.

'Mata Hari Of Bern' Gets Off Light On Spy Charge

BERN, Switzerland (UPI) - Alexander Louis, an 80-year-old Swiss woman, was charged with the "Mata Hari of Bern" for allegedly spying for the Soviets. She has been given a sentence of 18 months for espionage, her Swiss attorney said Tuesday.

Lawyer Hans Wild said Miss Louis, 80, was sentenced at a closed trial in Bern Monday.

"The sentence was minimal and shows that this whole affair was simply a bureaucratic comedy," Wild said.

He said he had not desired whether it should be made the ruling by Judge Joerg Huber.

"The sentence will be made public, but I expect a final decision in appeal," Wild said, refusing to elaborate further.

Swiss newspapers described Miss Louis as the "Mata Hari of Bern" in reference to the famous Russian woman who spied for the Germans in France during World War II.

Miss Louis was charged with gathering information from Swiss parliamentarians for her boyfriend, Italian diplomat Mohamed Melek.

She had had intimate relations with some members of Parliament who frequented a bar at the luxury Bellevue Palace hotel, where she worked.

Government officials later played down the case, saying that Miss Louis had heard nothing of importance.

Melek was asked to leave Switzerland and has since left the country.

"I was for a trial closed to the public and before the planned date at the end of April because of the marital strain on Miss Louis due to all the publicity," Wild said.

Wild said Miss Louis, born in New York to an American father and Swiss mother, "is more Swiss than American."

Oil Slick Cleanup Efforts Could Temporarily Halt War

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Iran, seeking to counter an oil slick threatening Persian Gulf water supplies, has appealed for help in pressuring Iraq to stop bombing Iran's offshore oil wells.

Iran's November 27 deal, with a capacity of 100,000 barrels per day, started pouring into oil fields last week after being hit by Iraqi bombers.

Reports from Abu Dhabi said militiamen expected the slick to reach United Arab Emirates' territorial waters within two weeks if eastern winds continue to push it towards the coast of Bahrain.

The slick poses a direct threat to desalination plants and water supplies for irrigation and drinking water supplies to gulf nations.

Iranian officials have frequently hit Iraqi oil installations since the Iraq-Iraq war started in September 1980.

Man's Name Change Costs Widow Fortune

DEAR ABBY: I had to write after reading the letter from the "Trustful Orphan." I was surprised when she married a woman named Betty and he changed his name to Betty instead of thinking that she changed her name to Orin.

In my two grandchildren, I have $200,000 each. And in my daughter-in-law, Mrs. Edward Moore, I have $1,000,000 - the other $800,000 she got from some money by the name of Betty.

I hope you are this. Don't worry about what anybody says. I've changed all the names. But the wife is the wife.

DEAR OLGA: Be a bear! It bears a man who takes the woman's name in this name-changing world.

DEAR ABBY: The "Trustful Orphan," did his first name was abandoned his parents when he changed his name to Betty.

I ask you, when should the grand mother? Why should the woman be accepted to change her name to her own's last because of her husband's name?

A man who changes his name to his wife's name is not changed his family name more than she would be had she changed her name.

The fact her name was an English name, did it - there's a person, with the same old name.

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column a few weeks ago from a daughter whose father had developed a relationship with a lady shortly after the death of his wife, who had lost a young boy with cancer. He had a horse with her because his father very kindly allowed my grandfather through all years of cancer before he died. His father was mentioned in mine for over 30 years - and especially loved her.

About two weeks after Mom's death, Dad got a lovely lady. There were some shared moments here.

They have a very caring relationship, neither one is ready for marriage, but they find it mutually advantageous to live together. Now they're getting pressure from family members who want them to get married.

I support my father in his decision as long as he is happy and comfortable with the relationship. My point: Where do family members get off judging and putting pressure on a man who has lost a beloved wife, and now has a second chance at happiness? He's not well and Dad's got me in a living hell.

I hope you're the same, so others won't suffer a situation closer to my own.

Beer, Pretzels Star In Burgers

If you're a pretzel fan, you'll love this American National Choice. It's delicious, economical and fortuitously versatile. Even the best beef burger can be served in a variety of interesting ways.

For a most unique approach to beef burgers, the National Line Bread and Beer Board suggests flavoring the ground beef with two slices of American National beer and pretzels. These and pickle relish are also added to the beef for flavor and texture interest. Once the burgers are shaped, they need only be broiled and they're ready to enjoy.

- 3 pounds ground beef
- 1 1/2 cup beer
- 1/2 cup minced onion
- 3 tablespoons (suggested) salt
- 2 tablespoons drained pickle relish

Recipe Source: National Beer Board, March 25, 1983

Beefsteak
Combine ground beef, onion, pickle relish and salt, season lightly and ingredients are evenly distributed. Shape into 8 patties. 4 to 6 inch thick. Broil on rack of broiler pan, broiler low heat. Broil 5 to 8 minutes on first side, turn and broil 5 to 6 minutes, 14 degrees of doneness desired. 8 servings.

Cookbook For Buffs Of Bubby

NEW YORK (UPI) — Family style cooking in France's Champagne region would be haute cuisine almost anywhere else.

The main course at a recent lunch in New York given by a well-known champagne producer was fllet of beef, and both the fllet course and the dessert contained champagne as an ingredient.

The sparkling beverage the rest of the world reserves for special celebrations is used liberally in cooking in the area of France where the real art is produced.

His host, Henri Perrier, almost upstaged the food with his after-lunch demonstration of a custom dated from Napoleonic times.

"I am going to sever a bottle of champagne," he said. He then pushed the traditional mushroom-shaped cork at the table in front of him grimaced and ducked.

Earlier he had said, "We always go into the garden" for such goings-on.

Perrier said the tradition was established by Napoleon's army, whose members had no time to open bottles the conventional way.

The lunch was given by Mirel & Chandon to mark the introduction in the United States of "Recipes from a Chateau in Champagne," a cookbook containing recipes from the Chateau de Saran, the company's official guest house, and two other dining rooms where the firm entertains visitors. They are the Truismen in nearby Sperryan, and the Hotel Royal Champagne, at Champagne, 9 miles away.

The book was published in London in 1982 to commemorate the silver jubilee of the chateau as the company's guest house.

Salmon with champagne sauce and sorrel was the fish course, followed a creme of eelery root soup. Desert was fresh strawberries and raspberries in a creamy Sauternes sauce lightly glazed under a broiler.

The meal was a simulation of lunch at the chateau, where Perrier is the official host.

He said he is often asked about his name, which most people associate with a widely promoted brand of French mineral water.

"The only resemblance is the bubbles," Perrier said, adding that his is a common family name in France.

He described the book's contents as boujoure cooking. Authors Robin McDouall and Shiraz Khan say it is a classic French country-house cookbook.

Many of the recipes are surprisingly simple and, in quite a few cases, less expensive than one would expect. One is "Maitre d'Hotel Omelette au Prosciutto and lots of pork with apples, as examples.

The first two are first courses. One consists of individual ring-top steaks searried on bread and ham bases, the other chopped hard-cooked eggs in a tomato-mushroom sauce on fried bread with a grilled cheese topcoat.

The book contains both American and British ingredient lists, use with metric measurements and the other, U.S.-standard. The U.S. list is easily distinguishable because it is set in Italian typeface.

A note for North American readers by New York-based food expert Barbara Schneiderman suggests substitutes for French ingredients that are unavailable or expensive on this side of the Atlantic.

Seafood, Fresh Citrus Complement Each Other

Seafood and fresh citrus are combined in many different cuisines, but are especially suited for each other in Oriental cookery. In this increasingly popular style of cooking, there is a skillful blending of colors, textures and flavors to simulate the senses. The food is generally not too heavy, suiting today's trend toward lighter, healthier foods. Seafood and fresh citrus truly complement each other, producing dishes that are not only look attractive but taste great!

In Oriental cookery it is important to use only the best quality ingredients. Thanks to advancements in freezing and transportation choice fish and shellfish from the Alaskan waters are available year-round for an infinite number of tasty Oriental dishes.

Delightfully different, yet easy to prepare, are Orange Baked Salmon Steaks and Sesame Orange Rice. Both the delicately flavored fresh/frozen Alaskan salmon steaks and the accompanying rice dish are accented with fresh orange flavor.

Salmon Grapefruit Salad highlights the importance of color, texture and taste, by combining this convenient seafood with crisp/rice sticks and bright-salted greens. Juicy cartwheel slices of western-grown grapefruit and a fresh citrus dressing add a tangy, fresh flavor to the salad.

Tender chunks of Alaska halibut are fried until delicately browned, then combined with colorful fresh vegetables in Oriental Halibut Saute. The peel and juice of fresh lemons add an zest to this attractive dish that's as delicious as it is easy to prepare.

Too many cooks do not spot the truth in an Oriental hot pot dinner, a festive one-dish meal that lets guests cook their own food in a pot of simmering chicken broth, flavored with fresh lemons cartwheel slices. Guests choose from succulent, sweet Shrimp orbits in the shell and tender cubes of cod, both from Alaska waters, as well as assorted fresh vegetables. Once cooked, these foods are dipped into a choice of sauces. The fresh peel and juice of western lemons and oranges add pizzazz to Lemon-Soy Dipping Sauce and Creamy Orange Dipping Sauce. A chilling dish or fondue pot can be used if a hot pot is not available.

For delicious taste and nutritious eating, go Oriental with seafood and fresh citrus.

Microwave Magic

Eggs Need Extra Care In Cooking

Eggs, one of our good sources of protein, can be conveniently and quickly prepared in the microwave if you follow a few simple guidelines and techniques for special handling. Microwave egg cooking presents two special concerns. Because of the yolk of an egg contains fat and the white does not, the yolk cooks faster. Also, an egg may explode as it cooks because internal pressure will build up very quickly during the fast heating. Using 50% or 30% power usually solves both these problems. Covering with plastic wrap or wax paper as it cooks also provides more even cooking. There are exceptions to this rule: soft-boiled eggs, which are cooked in water, and scrambled cook well on 100% power. Almost all other dishes containing eggs are more successful if a reduced setting is used.

It is different in give exact cooking times because there are so many variables: weight, stage of your oven, temperature of the food to be cooked, and cooking pattern of a particular oven.

Always understand the minimum times, overcooking is irreparable.

Vegetable dish offers variety to family meals. Microwave Combo Of Vegetables

Who can resist an elegant presentation of vegetables, lightly sauced with a hint of nutmeg and cheese?

The secret of success in preparing several vegetables together is the arrangement and cutting techniques used. Fresh slices of broccoli are cut through the thick stem end so they will cook quickly and the tender flowers are placed toward the center. Yellow squash is cut in thick slices, so it won't be overcooked and placed between the broccoli spears.

An oiled steel plate in microwave cooking, to ensure good results, is covering foods. For large serving platters, cover with plastic wrap, turning back one edge to vent. The plastic wrap traps heat to provide tender vegetables and speeds cooking.

Lightly steamed vegetables are cooking during the standing time the sauce can be micro-cooked in minutes. A good alternative, nutmeg-cheese sauce is the perfect gourmet touch for this vegetable combination.
