

Payne Stewart dies in plane mishap

By Bill Kerns
Staff Writer

SANFORD — Payne Stewart, a golf champion who resided in Orlando's Isleworth community, died Monday in a swampy field in South Dakota following a wayward flight chartered out of the Orlando Sanford Airport.

Three other passengers and both pilots are also dead.

Those killed in the crash along with Stewart included two managers of the Orlando-based Leader Enterprises talent agency, identified by the PGA as Van Ardan, 45, and Robert Fraley, 46; pilot Michael Kleig, 43, and co-pilot Stephanie Bellegrigue, 27, both of Orlando.

In addition, golf course designer Bruce Borland, 40, of Jupiter is believed to have boarded the plane in Orlando.

The private Lear 35 aircraft departed from Sanford to the Orlando International Airport, where Stewart and three other passengers boarded the flight destined for Dallas, Texas. The 42-year old Stewart was heading to Texas to prepare for this week's PGA Tour Championship.

The Federal Aviation Administration said the aircraft left Orlando at about 9:20 a.m. bound for Dallas, and the last communication occurred when the plane was over Gainesville.

Investigators said the Learjet flew uncontrolled over five states for several hours, with the crew and passengers apparently incapacitated by a sudden loss of cabin pressure, before crashing at about 1:20 p.m. in a field two miles south of Mina, S.D., a small farm village in the northeast corner of the state. There were no reports of injuries on the ground.

Air Force officials at the Pentagon said the FAA requested that Air Force jets try to communicate with the Learjet shortly after the FAA lost communications.

However, the crew and passengers of the small jet apparently never responded to attempts by the See Stewart, Page 6A

Cop killer gets last-minute, temporary stay by a 6-1 vote

By Joe DeBantis
Staff Writer

STARKE, Fla. — Within hours of his scheduled execution at 7 a.m. today, convicted murderer Terry Melvin Sims received a temporary stay of execution from the Florida Supreme Court. Justice voted 6-1 late Monday to delay Sims' execution until 7

Terry M. Sims
a.m. Nov. 2 at the earliest. Pending the outcome of oral arguments before the Florida Supreme Court today, Gov. Jeb Bush's office said the state will officially reschedule Sims' execution date later this week.

Sims, 57, was convicted during a 1979 trial in Seminole County of the first-degree murder of Seminole County reserve deputy George Pfeil, who, while in uniform, walked into an armed robbery at the Longwood Pharmacy in Longwood Villages the afternoon of Dec. 29, 1977.

Sims and Pfeil engaged in a brief, but bloody gun battle. Pfeil wounded Sims in the hip before Sims killed the deputy with shots to the face and heart.

Sanford moves forward with feasibility study

By Bill Kerns
Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Sanford City Commission on Monday agreed by a 3-2 vote to fund a feasibility study for a proposed hotel and conference center on a portion of Fort Mellon Park on the city's waterfront.

The Commission's decision comes at a time when seven developers have expressed an interest in bidding for the project. Sanford City Manager Tony VanDerworp said the feasibility study will cost between $20,000 to $35,000 to perform, and could be completed in a 45-day period.

"If you want to bring quality development to Sanford, we ought to go for it with gusto," said Mayor Larry Dale.

However, the commission may rescind its action if bids by research companies to perform the study are too high.

"We won't do it if it is too expensive," said Dale. Dale said he has been receiving a number of calls from the companies expressing interest in the project since the City See Study, Page 2A

Henley: Sanford still in the running as county site

By Russ White
Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County Chairman Carlton Henley said he expects opinions and strategies from each of the commissioners today concerning a county conference center/hotel.

The Tourist Development Council has recommended the Board of County Commissioners (BCC) strike Sanford as the preferred or designated site for the center as a result of a Sanford voiding the lease of the projects developer.

"As far as I'm concerned, Sanford's still in the running," Henley said Monday. "What's happened doesn't cut Sanford out at all. It's become more wide-open. We're hearing that Sanford is receiving more proposals."

Sanford Mayor Larry Dale asked Commissioner Dick Van Der Weide on Monday morning not to discount Sanford.

"I told him that we're getting more offers than we ever had," Dale said. "The waterfront is still the most viable site."

Henley said others will argue that Sanford isn't the most viable.

"They say the waterfront area won't be as accessible as other locations," Henley said. "It's a beautiful site, no doubt."

County Manager Kevin Grace said he would include the TDC's findings in his manager's report today. The conference center/hotel is not part of the BCC agenda, however. The BCC met at 9:30 a.m. today and will have additional meetings at 1:30 and 7:30 p.m.

Sanford, Volusia County ink pact to battle midges

By Bill Kerns
Staff Writer

SANFORD — An agreement between Sanford and Volusia County officials gives the city new weapons in the battle against mosquitoes.

The agreement enables Sanford to work with the Volusia County Mosquito Control District for use of larvicides against both biting mosquitoes and midges, the so-called "blind mosquitoes" that can reach epidemic levels along the waterfront during warm weather. The Sanford City Commission approved the agreement on Monday, and the Volusia County Board of Commissioners approved the agreement last week.

"The midges had better get the heck out of town," said Sanford Mayor Larry Dale. "We've got them on the run."

Dale said the city needs to work with the Volusia County Mosquito Control District because Seminole County does not have a Mosquito Control District, and the Department of Agriculture says cities must work with a District to perform the larvicide program.

"We're definitely going to start seeing less mosquitoes, although it might take about a month to actually start spraying," Dale said.

City Manager Tony VanDerworp said areas around Lake Monroe would be monitored for signs of a mosquito or midge outbreak.

"We already have a mosquito spraying program for areas around the lake," VanDerworp said. "If we get an outbreak anywhere in the city, this will allow us to address the problem." Using $100,000 in county funding, entomologist Arshad

All of the University of Florida researched Sanford's midge problem for two years. He recommends combining a larvicide program with attraction lights placed on barges in remote areas of Lake Monroe, as well as the introduction of midge-predatory species See Midges, Page 5A

Thanks, boob tube Jim Gray

Jim Gray, you're a boob. Your NBC-TV interview with Pete Rose Sunday night was disingenuous, distasteful, ill-timed.

For a brief, shining moment baseball fans were enjoying a Camelot moment, and Pete Rose — like it or not — was part of that moment.

Not only was he selected to the All-Century team, Rose had received a genuinely warm reception at Turner Field in the pre-World Series game ceremonies.

Enter Jim Gray, investigative reporter.

"Here's your chance, Pete — admit it, you bet on baseball games," boob-tube Gray persisted. "Show contrition. Apologize."

"I'm surprised you're bombarding me with this," said Rose. "I'm not going to admit something that didn't happen. I'm here to do an interview with you."

America agreed. NBC affiliates reported receiving hundreds of calls complaining about Gray's asinine approach to getting the story he pompously expected to solicit. Roll over Howard Cosell. Jim Gray's in a league of his own, and it reeks.

For all those who considered Pete Rose a punk, even a pariah, millions were willing to forgive him his sins because of the respect and admiration they had for his hustle and skills. Rose was — and remains — Charlie Hustle, All-American, to the vast majority.

Whatever any of us thought about Rose, Sunday's All-Century ceremony was a wonderful moment in our time. Baseball's greatest players were being honored. Sandy, Yogi, Hammerin' Hank, Teddy Ballgame, Pete Rose.

How could anyone dare to take this special occasion to deprive its joy from any of the participants or from any of those viewing it? All eyes were filled with joyous tears as Vin Scully introduced the All-Century All-Stars. When Rose's name was called, he tipped his cap and we tipped ours to him.

Through the years, I've been in a thousand lockerrooms, heard a thousand insipid questions to athletes, but none have been as nauseating as Gray's in-your-face to Pete Rose on Sunday night.

Rose invented his own way of playing and living, exceeding limits and breaking rules. He gambled on and off the field. He womanized. He was a delight at times, a downright jerk at others.

On Sunday night, we wanted to embrace — not embarrass — Pete Rose. Not many of us appreciate the way Jim Gray muddied the moment. Baseball invited Pete to its party. Jim Gray was determined to make him pay.

No telling what Gray will do when Pete gets his day at Cooperstown. Perhaps, ask him who he likes in the fifth at Hialeah.

Calamondin: The Miniature Orange

By Al Ferrer
Special to the Herald

Calamondin is a citrus plant introduced from Panama to Florida as an "acid orange" about 1900. Not surprisingly, the calamondin was also called the "Panama orange".

The calamondin is native to China according to some reports but others trace its origin to the Philippine Islands.

The tree: The tree is a small bush, with very few thorns, that can grow up to 10 feet high. Leaves are evergreen, up to 3 inches long; flowers white and small. The fruit is small and round, about 1 3/4 inches wide, with a flattened blossom-end. Mature fruit can be produced year round.

The peel is thin and smooth, easily separable, and yellow-orange in color. There are 5-9 segments around a small, semi-hollow axis, it more closely resembles the mandarin. The flesh is orange, juicy and acid, with a fine lime-orange flavor. Because of this, it is usually grouped with the limes.

The seeds are few, with characteristic green cotyledons.

Uses: Calamondin is widely grown as an ornamental bush in California and Florida. It is grown sometimes as a house plant, and it is quite showy when fruits are ripe.

The trees bloom all year under warm weather and it can have flowers, green fruits, and mature fruits at any given time.

The fruit is used as a substitute for lime. The fruit preserves well, makes good marmalade, its juice is excellent for limeade, pie and ices.

Calamondin can be grown as a dooryard tree throughout the citrus belt and will do very well as a container plant in colder locations in north Florida if protected from cold. It can also be used as a living Christmas tree.

Cold hardiness: Calamondin is harder to cold than any other true citrus specie and only the trifoliate orange and the kumquat are more tolerant to low temperatures.

Propagation: Calamondin is mostly propagated by seeds since little variation has been observed to occur in seedlings produced from seeds.

Cuttings propagated under mist are also available from commercial growers and sold as rooted cuttings in retail stores.

Growing potted citrus: Most varieties of citrus can be grown in containers, such as pots or tube, with a fair degree of success. The calamondin is the most popular variety of citrus offered for sale. The potted citrus trees sold in stores are usually produced from rooted cuttings.

Plants produced in this manner can be adapted to pot culture and will usually flower and produce fruit within a few months to two years.

Most varieties of citrus grown from seeds require much longer to fruit as a potted plant. Budded trees can also be used but they are usually more expensive to produce and require more time to produce than cuttings.

Repotting: Potted citrus can be purchased in various size containers, the most popular container is a two-inch pot. Small containers and plants can be easily handled in the stores or shipped to the clients. These plants can be easily transplanted into six to ten-inch wood or plastic pots as soon as purchased.

Drainage of container is utmost importance since citrus plants can develop root problems if the drainage is not adequate. Citrus can be grown in a mixture of equal parts of peat, perlite, and a good garden loam. A mixture of peat and perlite alone is not recommended because plants tend to blow over and develop nutritional deficiencies when this mixture is used.

When transplanting, do not disturb the soil or roots. Place the plant into the new pot or container that has been partially filled with soil or rooting media.

Care: Citrus plants are not well adapted to the house environment. They grow best outdoors in direct sunlight or half shade. Indoors, they should be placed in a very well lit area. During the warm months, they should be placed outdoors. A temperature range of 70 degrees F to 90 degrees F is adequate.

Citrus trees do not grow well at temperatures below 55 degrees F.

Water plants as needed only, excess or lack of water will kill a tree. Allow the surface inch of soil to become dry before watering. Fertilize sparingly but frequently, about every five weeks. Dusty leaves usually result in mite and scale infections, water the leaves with a sponge frequently to avoid these problems which may cause serious problems in small trees.

Good friends are not afraid to speak the truth

DEAR ABBY I could not disagree with you more strongly regarding your advice to "Worried About My Friend," who doesn't want to be in her friend's wedding. She told you she thought her friend's fiance was abusive, and the marriage would be the biggest mistake of her friend's life. You told her to be there for the bride on her big day and afterward, in case she had to help her pick up the pieces of her broken heart — that's what friends are for.

Abby, a friend should speak up when a friend is about to make a terrible mistake. Most of us need help when making important choices. We may not see ourselves — or people with whom we are in love — as others do. We lack objectivity. In my opinion, a true friend values the friend over the friendship. Risking the friendship for the sake of the friend can be an act of great love. Anyone considering giving this kind of advice takes the risk of rejection, embarrassment or error. When making a decision to offer advice, one should ask: "Is my decision made to help my friend? Is it motivated by love?" You may be right, Abby, that it's unlikely anyone with wedding plans will listen to such advice, but it's not impossible. Some may listen. For the sake of those, I hope you will publish my letter. Friends are not just for picking up the pieces of a broken heart. They are also for trying to catch that heart before it shatters on the hard pavement of a poor discernment process.

(REV.) RICHARD G. FRANCESCO, PASTOR, ST. BENEDICT CHURCH, NEWARK, N.J.

DEAR FR. FRANCESCO: You are a wise and caring religious adviser, and I'm pleased to print your letter. However, I think your timing is off.

While it is never pleasant to hear that one's friends think the object of our affections is an unworthy jerk, the time to speak up is while the two are dating.

By the time the wedding plans are being made, most brides are deaf to anything beyond the sound of wedding bells and will probably react defensively to criticism of their intended — preferring instead to believe the friend is jealous, overly judgmental or has ulterior motives.

Furthermore, many young women would be reluctant to face the potential embarrassment of calling off a wedding once the announcement has been made.

In a rare Sunday hearing, the court ruled just two days ago against another motion by Sims' attorneys who claimed Sims was never in the Longwood Pharmacy. Their contentions are built upon the premise that a look-a-like of Sims was involved in the robbery, part of a group law enforcement officials dubbed "the Drug Store Cowboys."

His attorneys filed an appeal to Eaton's Sunday ruling before the Florida Supreme Court Monday.

Monday afternoon, Chief Justice Major Harding, justices Leander Shaw, Harry Lee Anstead, Barbara Pariente and R. Fred Lewis voted in favor of the one-week stay of execution. Justice Peggy Quince voted for a stay until Friday, while Justice Charles Wells dissented.

Sims' attorneys have also filed a motion before the U.S. Supreme Court, claiming Florida's use of the electric chair constitutes cruel and unusual punishment.

A month ago the state Supreme Court upheld the use of the electric chair by a vote of 4-3.

Sims' attorney cited the bloody execution of Allen "Tiny" Davis in July in their challenge to the electric chair. Davis suffered a bloody nose shortly before the current was applied. He was executed for the 1982 murders of a pregnant Jacksonville woman and her two young children.

The state Supreme Court justices also voted Monday to temporarily stay the Wednesday execution of Anthony Bryan. Bryan was convicted of the 1986 abduction and murder of a 60-year old night watchman from Pascagoula, Miss.

Bryan's attorneys will likewise present oral arguments before Florida's Supreme Court today. They will contend Bryan's original defense attorney was impaired by an alcohol problem.

Gov. Bush signed Sims' first death warrant Sept. 23, touching off more appeals in a conviction previously upheld by the Florida Supreme Court in 1984, and later by the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals.

military jets to communicate.
An Air Force spokesman said that two F-15s from Eglin Air Force Base intercepted the plane shortly after it lost contact with aircraft controllers, and followed it to Missouri.

Pilots reported the plane's crew did not respond, and that the cockpit windows were obscured by condensation or frost, an indication that the aircraft may have lost cabin pressure and that its occupants were all dead even as the flight continued at altitudes as high as 45,000 feet.

Four F-16s took over the escort mission over Missouri, and stayed with the plane until it crashed.

Sunjet Aviation, Inc., a jet charter operator based at the Orlando Sanford Airport, handled arrangements for the flight. Sunjet reported that the aircraft was manufactured in 1976. It was fully certified for operation, and all required maintenance was current. It had about 10,025 hours and 7,500 landings.

Klieg, the 43-year old pilot of the aircraft, was a former U.S. Air Force pilot with more than 4,000 total flight hours in jet aircraft. He held an Airline Transport Pilot's certificate and was type-rated in Lear 35.

Bellegarrigue, the 27-year old Co-pilot, was a type rated jet pilot with about 1,700 total flight hours. She held a commercial Pilots certificate, and was a graduate of Embry Riddle Aeronautical University in Daytona Beach.

The National Transportation Safety Board and the FAA are investigating the cause of the accident.

"We look forward to answers as to why a fully certified and maintained Lear 35, piloted by two professional pilots, would crash in the manner we understand occurred," said James Watkins, President of Sunjet Aviation.

Sunjet also operates a repair station at Sanford's airport specializing in Learjets and Citation jets. The company currently operates six jets in charter operations.

The FAA said the plane was owned by McMillin Aircraft Inc. of Dover, Del. Sunjet said Stewart did not own the plane.

The plane was equipped with oxygen masks and a cockpit voice recorder. However, when there is a pressurization problem or if an aircraft breaks a door or window seal, those aboard the aircraft could lose consciousness, and perish in seconds from oxygen deficiency.

Sanford Mayor Larry Dale, a licensed pilot, said that he met co-pilot Bellegarrigue while preparing for his own flights.

"She was a very cheerful and dynamic young lady," Dale said. "I'm told that she was a great pilot, and she was a very pleasing person to be around."

Dale said that he is still in disbelief about the accident.

"It's very strange how this occurred," Dale said. "It's just a terrible tragedy. It brought tears to my eyes when I was told about it."

Stewart leaves his wife, Tracey Ferguson, daughter Chelsea, 13, and son Aaron, 10.

Born in Springfield, Mo., on Jan. 30, 1957, Stewart lived in Texas before moving to Orlando.

Stewart's career seemed on the rise this year following the U.S. Open victory in June and his role in helping the United States win the Ryder Cup against Europe.

Ranked No. 6 in the world, Stewart had 11 PGA victories and earned more than $11 million during a career that began in 1980. He had his own clothing line that included variations on his outfits and knickerbockers worn in tournaments.

Stewart: A champion with style and class

By Russ White
Staff Writer

He was the golfer who wore the stylish knickers and touring caps, a congenial and charitable chap, good husband, father, and all-around nice guy. Everyone knew his name: Payne Stewart.

By mid-afternoon Monday, America knew of Stewart's death.

Details of how the 42-year-old golfer died were broadcast piecemeal for more than 10 hours. He and four others died on a Lear Jet that left Orlando at 9:20 a.m. and flew a ghostly four hours on auto pilot, crashing on marshland near Mina, S.D.

Authorities suspect the plane was depressurized shortly after takeoff, the occupants probably dying onboard long before the uncontrolled plane ran out of fuel and fell.

Stewart had been a favorite of golf fans for nearly 20 years. His first tournament victory was in 1982. He won the 1989 PGA championship and two U.S. Opens. He made the cut in 15 of 19 events this year, winning his second Open at Pinehurst in June. His $2,077,950 in earnings for 1999 was Stewart's career best.

A few years ago, Seminole County Commissioner Randy Morris found himself drawn to Payne Stewart at a tournament at Bay Hill.

"He always has a sizable gallery," Morris said. "To begin with, he was one of the best. He was also enjoyable to watch."

"Payne Stewart was such a sweetheart," said Barbara Fabian, a Bayhill resident who was stunned by Monday's news. "The Stewarts are our neighbors. Very nice neighbors."

When Stewart won the 1987 Hertz Bay Hill Classic, he donated the money to the Florida Hospital Golden Circle of Friends in memory of his father, Bill, who had died of cancer. Bill Stewart was also an accomplished golfer who played in the 1955 U.S. Open.

Born in Springfield, Mo., on Jan. 30, 1957, Payne Stewart was a 1979 graduate of Southern Methodist University (business degree) and joined the PGA Tour that same year. He won in each of his first two full seasons on the tour and then went four years without another victory.

Early on, he signed one of golf's all-time lucrative endorsement deals with Spalding. Reportedly, he received $10 million for seven years to play Spalding's perimeter-weighted, cavity-back irons and golf ball. Some golf experts said that the new clubs caused Stewart difficulties. He had been using forged irons, and was getting the same shot trajectory and distances with the new equipment.

Through it all, Stewart refused to blame the new clubs. Finally, Spalding made him feel sorry for myself." Then, Stewart told golf writer Larry Dorman, "I got to liking the time at home, which was great for Tracy (his wife) and the kids." Stewart's survivors include Tracey Ferguson Stewart and the couple's children, Chelsea, who'll soon be 14, and Aaron, 10.

The Stewarts lived in a 12,500-square-foot, $2-million mansion on Pocket Lake near Orlando.

"I never envisioned a little Missouri boy living in something like this," he said four years ago.

During the 1980s, Stewart and Ryder Cup teammate Peter Jacobson were two of the PGA's zaniest cutups. They and a couple of other players formed a musical group known as Jake Trout and the Flounders. Jacobson was lead singer and Stewart played the harmonica. They had the golf world — if not the music world — at their feet. They made an album that had modest sales.

For awhile, Stewart chewed tobacco but was able to kick the habit. He apologized to writers and broadcasters whom he may have offended during the cranky days he had while kicking the tobacco habit.

At the time of his death, Stewart didn't seem to have an enemy in the world. "I admired the guy," said Seminole County Manager Kevin Grace, a golf enthusiast. "He never seemed to think he was above everyone else. Everyone loved Payne Stewart."

Lake Mary boys romp to seventh VolleyFest Championship crown

By Dean Smith
SPORTS EDITOR

LAKE MARY - After a two year absence, coach Jeannie Fisher's Lake Mary Rams are back in a familiar place this morning, on top of the boys volleyball world.

Saturday afternoon at Lake Mary High School the Rams claimed their seventh VolleyFest championship trophy, but first since 1996, posting a perfect 4-0 record in the tournament that matches the best teams in Central Florida to cap off an impressive 27-2 season, the best during Fisher's four years reign as head coach.

On Friday, Lake Mary had trounced Colonial, 15-5 and 15-1, and was joined in the Winner's Bracket by Edgewater (15-8 and 15-11) over Lake Brantley, Dr. Phillips (15-7 and 15-8 over Winter Park) and University (18-16, 11-15 and 15-8 over Lyman).

Lyman had stayed alive by returning to eliminate Lake Brantley, 16-14 and 15-8, and Winter Park also survived, ousting Colonial, 9-15, 17-15 and 15-11.

On Saturday, the Rams knocked off the 1998 VolleyFest champions, Dr. Phillips, in three games, 15-9, 9-15 and 15-5 and were joined in the Winner's Bracket final by Edgewater, which downed University in a marathon three-game match, 3-15, 15-12 and 21-19.

Lake Mary then earned its spot in the finals, whipping Edgewater, 15-6 and 15-13.

In elimination matches, University eliminated Lyman, Dr. Phillips topped Winter Park, 10-15, 15-8 and 15-12, and University did in Dr. Phillips, 15-10 and 15-10.

Edgewater then took out University, 1-15, 15-12 and 15-5 to earn a second shot at the Rams.

The Eagles gave the host squad a battle, but Lake Mary would not be denied, edging the Orlando school in straight games, 15-13 and 15-12.

Matt Main, who is also a star baseball player at Lake Mary, finished off a big week to lead the Rams to the championship ending with 30 kills, 18 digs, 18 blocks and had a 95-percent serving efficiency as Lake Mary finished the week with a 6-0 record, adding wins over Father Lopez and West Orange to the four wins in the tournament.

This was the 11th annual VolleyFest and the champions have been: Lake Mary (1989-90, 1992, 1994-96, 1998), Kissimmee-Oceola (1991), Lake Howell (1993), Oviedo (1997) and Dr. Phillips (1998).

Hampton, Bears get past Silver Hawks in overtime

By Dean Smith
SPORTS EDITOR

WINTER SPRINGS - Winter Springs head coach Mick Harris must have been a Mississippi riverboat gambler in a past life.

With a two-game winning streak and a possible playoff spot on the line, the Bears' head man went for a risky two-point conversion in overtime and came up smelling like roses as sophomore running back Chauncey Hampton got across the goal line to give the hosts a 28-23 Homecoming victory over Lake Howell in a Class 5A-District 4 football game Friday.

Hampton scored all of the Winter Springs points except one as the Bears improved to 3-4 overall and 2-2 in 5A-District 4. For the Silver Hawks it was another disappointing loss as they fell to 0-7 overall and 0-4 in district play.

Winter Springs will be going for its fourth straight victory this Friday in a monster Class 5A-District 4 matchup with Lyman (3-3 overall, 3-2 in district) at the Carlton Henley Sports Complex at 7:30 p.m.

A Lyman victory would guarantee the Greyhounds of at least a third place finish in the district, while a Bears win would keep the Winter Springs playoff hopes alive with a game left against Seminole in two weeks.

Lake Howell could still have a say in the district race also as it hosts undefeated Spruce Creek this Friday at Richard L. Evans Field at 7:30 p.m.

In other games this Friday, Lake Mary (6-1 overall, 5-0 in Class 6A-District 2) travels to Lake Brantley's Tom Story Field to take on the Patriots (6-1 overall, 4-0 in district play) with the district championship. Please see Football, Page 2B.

on the line. A Rams victory secures the 6A-2 title and homefield advantage for Lake Mary (which will be in the playoffs win or lose) in the playoffs, while a Patriots win this week and next week against DeLand would give them the title and home-field advantage. Seminole (6-2 overall) will host perennially tough Merritt Island (5-2) at Thomas E. Whitham Stadium at 7:30 p.m. in a non-conference game that Fighting Seminoles coach Jim Worthington hopes to use to build momentum for next week's battle with Winter Springs and future playoff games.

Oviedo (4-3 overall, 1-3 in 6A-2) travels to Orlando to take on quarterback Brandon Blake and the Colonial Grenadiers (0-7 overall, 0-4 in district) at 7:30 p.m.

Hampton put Winter Springs on the board early in the game with a six-yard touchdown run and Jason Ruedlinger kicked the extra point, giving the Bears a 7-0 lead.

The hosts made the score stand up until Lake Howell's John Williams returned a punt 60-yards for the touchdown and G.J. Wilson added the tying extra point with 3:09 left and the game went to overtime tied at 7-7.

SHUPE'S SCOOP
Bird hunting is great for young people as it usually provides a lot of action and keeps up their interest level.

FISHING FORECAST

The river continues to rise and bass are becoming more difficult to locate. Fish newly flooded areas or spots where the bass are confined. Buzzbaits and spinnerbaits work well and they can be used to cover a lot of water in search of fish. Action has been good off the seawall in Sanford on Lake Monroe.

Sebastian Inlet has had steady action with snook, redfish, trout and a few flounder. Large live shrimp or small baitfish are the top offerings. Most anglers prefer an outgoing tide, as gamefish tend to congregate at the mouth of the inlet waiting for bait to be swept out to them.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral has little to report in the way of offshore action. High seas have kept boats in Port. Dolphin and wahoo will be scattered, and king mackerel will be on Pelican Flats. Inside the Port, look for a few snook around docks and pilings and also sheepshead and flounder, trout and redfish are rated as fair on the flats of the Banana and Indian rivers.

Action at Ponce Inlet has been fast on either live or dead shrimp with sheepshead, drum, redfish, bluefish and jack crevalle. A few flounder are hitting finger mullet around the south jetty. Trout and redfish are rated as good in Mosquito Lagoon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might not feel too lucky today when a comes to dealings with your co-workers, but you could be extremely fortunate in matters that are meaningful to you financially.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Don't step outside your own ballpark today where you could encounter complications you might not be able to handle. Stay put in your sphere of influence and you'll do fine.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Should you find yourself in the company of someone who is experiencing a bad time today, refrain from boasting about your recent accomplishments or successes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) An invitation to participate in a fun activity shared with friends today might pop up out of the blue. Join in, but just be sure you allocate time to still get your work done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't push your family to participate in that about which they're reluctant. Ideas you conceive may be well suited for you, but not necessarily good for them. Keep an open mind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You might be the lucky recipient of something good today, but it could irritate someone who feels she or he should have been given what you received. Don't let this person's jealousy upset you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It might be tempting to treat a new pal more cordially than your old ones in an effort to forge the bonds, but it is wiser to treat everyone equally where everyone wins.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If conditions at work have you stymied, experiment with new methods and procedures. Imagination and daring could save the day, as well as the assignment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) When it comes to getting involved in social interests with friends, the day could be a rather pleasant one for you. It'll be a different story, however, when dealing in the world of commerce.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Give him a losing opportunity

By Phillip Alder

You probably know what George Bernard Shaw said to explain marriage's popularity: It combines the maximum of temptation with the minimum of opportunity.

Well, at the bridge table, if you can see that the declarer will make the contract if he works out the lie of the cards, give him the maximum opportunity to misspice. Try to paint a false picture of the true distribution. This deal features a well-known defensive smokescreen. How should the play go in six spades?

After winning with dummy's club ace — the honor from the shorter side first — and drawing trumps ending in the dummy, South could play on hearts. The right percentage line is first a heart to the nine. South plans to ruff the heart 10 on the second round, eventually discarding his diamond loser on dummy's ace. Here, that works fine. However, there is an alternative approach.

After pulling trumps, cash the other two club tricks, discarding a diamond from the dummy. Then cut with the ace and another diamond.

Now, East must win the trick. If he returns a diamond or a club, you discard a heart from hand and ruff in the dummy. So, East must switch to a heart, preferably the queen, trying to look like someone holding both the queen and jack.

It shouldn't work, but it might. If declarer thinks that East has both honors, he will win with dummy's ace, then play a heart to his 10 going on down. However, the odds favor "split honors." It is much more likely that East will have one honor and West the other, rather than East's holding both. South should win with the heart king, then ruff the 10 through West.

ASK DR. GOTT

Whooping cough was common in '20s

DEAR DR. GOTT: My parents use to regale friends about my whooping cough in 1926. The whole neighborhood went around whooping all winter. My doctor says that I could have had the disease because I would have died. Antibiotics were not invented in the 1920s. He also said that I had a tumor on my liver in 1919. Is he right?

DEAR READER: I doubt it.

Although precise diagnoses were often difficult to make in 1926, whooping cough was a common infection in children during the early part of the century, before pertussis vaccine became widely available. Whooping cough was rampant but not usually fatal. In those days, physicians very quite adept at diagnosing common ailments based on "clinical presentation" (what the patient looked and behaved), so you probably did have whooping cough. However, whether you did or not is a moot point now; there are more important things to argue with your doctor about. Tumors, for instance.

I doubt that you had a tumor (location as early as 1919; the vaccine was not widely used for children until the 1950s and '60s). So you should probably have an initial cancer scare if you have not had this, followed by a booster shot every 10 years. A standard recommendation for all adults.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What are the symptoms of malabsorption?

DEAR READER: Malabsorption syndrome includes a group of symptoms resulting from the intestine's inability to absorb nutrients from food. Many conditions can cause malabsorption; these include bowel inflammation, cystic fibrosis, celiac disease of the pancreas, celiac disease, intestinal surgery, liver disease and a lack of pancreatic secretions.

Malabsorption is commonly associated with loss of appetite and weight, muscle weakness, loss of hair, abnormal swelling, diarrhea, and excess fat in the stool. If chronic and severely untreated, malabsorption can result in malnourishment, weakness and anemia.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm overweight, but in shape. Does my level of fitness give me health benefits that outweigh my obesity?

DEAR READER: Psychologically, yes. In a report that appeared recently, doctors studied 20,000 men between the ages of 50 and 60. During the After your follow-up period, the fit participants had lower death rates from all causes. This relation held true irrespective of body weight. In fact, the men who had higher mortality rates were the fit men. Thus, the study provided clear evidence that maintaining a healthy weight is protective health maintenance. The message? The overweight guys have to get that extra 20 pounds off if they're going to maintain an over-weight.
