

Ortiz' Sacking: A Revealing Move

The sacking of Frank V. Ortiz Jr., the highest ranking Hispanic-American in the Foreign Service, as U.S. ambassador to Guatemala is bad news because it agitates the incoherent Carter administration policies that are hastening the nationalization of Central America.

Indeed, it was Ortiz' attempt to bring some coherence to the State Department's policy in Guatemala that apparently led to his removal after only 11 months in Guatemala City.

But because Guatemala ordinarily has difficulty competing for the attention of preoccupied Americans, the Ortiz affair could serve to spark a bit of public interest.

Indeed, it was Ortiz' attempt to bring some coherence to the State Department's policy in Guatemala that apparently led to his removal after only 11 months in Guatemala City.

Taking the latest developments from the top: Ayatollah Khomeini has given the back of his hand to Iran's governmental authorities for not getting on with the establishment of the new revolutionary order.

— President Bani-Sadr, who could tell comedian Rodney Dangerfield a thing or two about getting no respect, complains in response that he is burdened with all of the responsibility for providing one of the tools with which to do the job of governing.

— Preferences in stationery may soon be academic in many of those same ministries, however, because there will be precious few around to do any official writing.

— And the United States is being accused of stirring up trouble in Iran.

— The answer must be firmly negative. Once their origin became known, and there is little chance that it could be concealed for long — they could only be headfiers, providing evidence for Khomeini that the United States is indeed hostile as charged to the revolution and rallying wavering Iranians to his cause.

Mao's Widow Among Defendants China Preparing People For Trial Of 'Gang Of 4'

PEKING (UPI) — China leaders are preparing the people for the country's most sensational courtroom drama since the 1949 communist revolution. It is the trial of Jiang Qing, widow of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung, who wielded immense power as a refuge for wildlife displaced by surrounding development, provides for water storage during most of the year and provides flood hazard reduction.

Care will be taken to see that no mud splatters them, or the reputation of Mao himself, though his wife often may have acted with the approval of the "Great Helmsman."

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Suggestions for stopping the eruptions of Mount St. Helens volcano are like hiccup cures. Everyboathas one. Ticking Bomb For George?

George Bush is a leading contender for the vice presidential nomination — and a thoroughly admirable man — but a potentially serious problem has arisen for him.

It seems that in July 1976, a couple of months before Letelier was murdered in Washington, high officials of the CIA and the State Department were aware that DINA, the Chilean CIA, had an undercover agent under the name of "Embassy Row."

Headed ones, the radio station, called the Voice of Hope, to broadcast inflammatory diatribes against the embattled Lebanese government and United Nations peacekeeping troops. His broadcasts led to an official report from Lebanon to the State Department.

Padre's Manager Coleman May Get Booted, Upstairs

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The man who may succeed Bob Fontaine as "terrible" about the whole situation. Jerry Coleman, currently in his first year as manager of the San Diego Padres, may be named to succeed Fontaine, who was fired as vice president and general manager by club President Ballard Smith Monday. Smith has called a 9 p.m. EDT press conference today to announce his new general manager.

Los Angeles Dodger scout Ed Libertore, Texas Ranger Executive Vice President Eddie Robinson and Dodger General Manager Al Campanis. Whatever happens, Coleman's appeal. He feels responsible for Fontaine's firing. "I feel terrible, just terrible," said Coleman, who was a broadcaster last season before Fontaine gave him his first managing job. "I feel if I had done a better job, it might not have happened. I (Fontaine) never finished higher than fourth (84-78 in 1976) in the National League West. They are 34-37 this year, trailing the first-place Houston Astros by 12 1/2 games. Last year, the Padres slumped to 68-93 and fired Roger Craig as manager. They named former major-league and Craig broadcaster Coleman to replace Craig last Oct. 1. Despite the club's failures, Fontaine was surprised by the move. "I've gone 38 years without this ever happening and I never expected it to happen here," he said. "I met yesterday with Ballard Smith in Los Angeles and he told me I was being relieved of my duties and that's the way it was."

Milwaukee's Greater Open Looks A Little Dry

FRANKLIN, Wis. (UPI)—Unless Mother Nature comes to the rescue with high winds and hail, most observers predict another record-breaking assault on Tuckaway Country Club's vulnerable young course this week in the $100,000 Greater Milwaukee Open. For the second straight year, hot, dry weather has hardened Tuckaway's wide-open fairways and stunted the growth of its rough. As a result, even defending champion Calvin Peete's course record of 269, 19 under par, may be challenged. Peete, one of the tour's straightest hitters, will defend his title against an unusually strong field that includes Hale Irwin, a two-time U.S. Open champion, Johnny Miller, Ray Floyd and Andy North, the former U.S. Open champion from Madison who remains the meet's biggest booster. It also includes Scott Simpson, last week's Western Open winner, who will be chasing the GMO's first prize of $80,000—plus a $100,000 bonus for winning both the Western and the GMO. Simpson, 24, won two NCAA titles at Stanford, but is relatively unknown on the tour. Nonetheless, GMO sponsors are hoping his pursuit of the bonus money will make up for the absence of Lee Trevino, normally the meet's No. 1 drawing card, who decided to bypass this year's tournament.

"We regret Doug's decision to leave our football staff at this time," said Crowder, but he's accepting a high level management position with a

Other key members of the team include Mike Edwards, probable starter at second base, and Reginald Hayes, who plays both infield and outfield and is also one of the top pitchers. Hayes made two relief appearances on the mound during the sub-district tournament and allowed only one base runner in about three innings, and that came on an intentional pass. "I don't feel like I let him down. You know, when your team gets this close to winning and continually falls short, something is wrong, someone is to blame. Maybe it's me." The Padres have been in a study in frustration since they were founded in 1969, never finishing higher than fourth (84-78 in 1976) in the National League West. They are 34-37 this year, trailing the first-place Houston Astros by 12 1/2 games. Last year, the Padres slumped to 68-93 and fired Roger Craig as manager. Home Sales Rocket; Mortgage Rates Dive

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The housing industry has received a double dose of good news — sales of new single-family homes posted a record increase for May and mortgage interest rates had a record decline from early May to early June. The government said Wednesday home sales increased 39.4 percent in May, and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported the interest rate on a conventional loan for a single home fell for the first time in more than three years to 13.16 percent in June. The board's statistics tend to lag behind the marketplace, and some lenders are now offering mortgages at slightly above 12 percent. If the trends continue, it could mean a resurgence in home building that would put people back to work. The drop in mortgage rates marked the first time they have fallen since April 1977. "There's a very strong possibility we will see another major drop next month," predicted Bob Sheehan, director of economic research for the National Association of Homebuilders. "This shows that we're beginning to come out of it. But euphoria is still a way away."

I'LL GET YOU, MISTER
 Harry Duncan of 2416 Key Ave., Sanford, was unaware of the impending "attack" by this Redwing Blackbird as he headed for the county-courthouse's N. Park Avenue entrance...

HEY, WHAT GOES HERE?
 Duncan realizes the blackbird's up to no good, and decides to retreat to Sanford City Hall parking lot...

OUCH
 Too late! The blackbird made good his attack and gave Duncan two stolid pecks to the back of the head.

I'M GETTIN' OUT OF HERE
 Convinced the blackbird isn't kidding around, Duncan beats a hasty retreat for the safety of his car in city hall parking lot, while the bird returned to his outpost atop a palm tree and wuffed for his next victim.

A Trip To Sanford City Hall Is Strictly For The Birds

For several days now visitors to Sanford City Hall and the N. Park Avenue entrance to the county courthouse have been under siege by a Redwing Blackbird who selects his victims then swoop down and pecks them soundly on the head. Speculation is the bird is protecting a nest hidden somewhere in the bushes in city hall parking lot. The sly bird generally is perched atop several palm trees fronting the west entrance to the courthouse and can be readily heard as it sings out constantly. But, as soon as someone walks in the vicinity of the parking lot bushes, the bird goes silent, then a few seconds later speedily wings its way toward the human intruder and begins pecking away until his surprised victim waves his arms frantically. Even at that, the bird generally only flies off a short distance to rest atop a palm tree in the vicinity of the parking lot bushes as possible. Once the intruder is a safe distance from the bushes, the blackbird returns to its palm tree outpost and the loud chirping resumes. What can be done to stop the attacks? Not much, say animal control officials. Especially since the bird is protected by federal and state laws, according to Marcia Kuntz of the Florida Audubon Society's Maitland office. She explains the Redwing Blackbird can be aggressive in protecting a nest the three or four weeks it takes the eggs to hatch and before the fledglings fly away. She pointed out the birds do not ordinarily nest in areas such as parking lots, but in marshy areas among cattails and reeds. The male of the species is black with distinguishing red feathers on its wings, while the female is a duller brownish color. She suggests those under attack by the overzealous bird wave whatever they have in their hands to scare it away. "There's not much else you can do, catching it is impossible, and shooting is illegal as the bird is protected by state and federal laws," she added.

Mental Health Board Mulls McClanahan Case Options

The Seminole County Mental Health Center Inc. may or may not consider approving or rejecting a decision by a grievance committee this week upholding the center's new director in firing Personnel Director, A.A. "Mac" McClanahan. If the center does not consider the action or upholds the firing by new Director Dr. George Lindenfeld, the issue could end up in court. A.A. McClanahan Jr., attorney for his father, said today: "My father's integrity has been attacked. The failure of the grievance committee to make findings or give a rationale for upholding the firing leaves a frontal assault on my father's integrity, something we will not allow to remain unchallenged." The decision by the center's board of directors on whether to consider the matter at its July 24 meeting may hinge on an opinion from attorney Bill Fernandez, described by board member Tom Bowers as legal counsel for the board, is also a member of the board of directors, in charge of its finance committee, and chaired the grievance committee hearing. Bowers said today Fernandez will be asked for an interpretation of the center's bylaws to determine on whether the board has to take any action on the grievance committee's report. Fernandez earlier this week said he is not the center's legal counsel and that the center has no legal counsel. He was not available for a comment today. Two weeks ago, after being on the job 2½ days, Dr. Lindenfeld fired McClanahan for attempting to tape record a staff meeting, saying it was unethical conduct. McClanahan said he attempted to tape the meeting at the request of a secretary who normally takes minutes of the meetings. The tape was also to be used and to give other staff members an opportunity to hear the views of the director and the policy statements he was to make. McClanahan said there were only 30 staff members of the center's 83 employees at the staff meeting. The meeting was in fact no taped, McClanahan said because he set the recorder on rewind rather than record. Lindenfeld said the taping should not have been attempted without his prior permission and the attempted taping violated the center's code of ethics. McClanahan demanded a hearing before a grievance committee. At a hearing before the grievance committee Tuesday night, the public and press were barred even though McClanahan had asked that the gathering be open. McClanahan Jr. said the public and press had been assured the meeting would be open. He added that his father has requested the presence of seven or eight witnesses in accordance with the center's personnel manual, but only one showed up. "A person or persons working at the center told the others they did not have to attend," he said. He added that the grievance committee was asked to place all witnesses under oath, but the committee refrained from requiring the oath. "The only witness who didn't testify under oath was Dr. Lindenfeld and there were some discrepancies between his testimony and the sworn testimony," McClanahan Jr. said. He said two of the members of the grievance committee made statements prior to the closing of the session that a major concern was what effect a decision against the director would have on his ability to control the center. McClanahan Jr. said the director's ability to control the center could not be a consideration. McClanahan Jr. said he would prefer that the board consider the grievance committee report at its August meeting, rather than July, to allow time for the new board and officers, who assumed their offices in June, time to settle down. McClanahan Jr. objected to the board's contention that the center is a private organization and not subject to state requirements of open meetings. "It claims to be a private organization yet it is treated as a state agency by certain manufacturers," McClanahan Jr. said. "It pays its accounts under state guidance. It uses state bid prices for purchases. It receives supervision from boards of the state, supervision from the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS) and operates under controls from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). The center during the fiscal year which ended June 30 received approximately $650,000 from HEW, $135,000 from the State of Florida, $15,000 from the Seminole County School Board, $62,000 from the Seminole County Commission, $15,000 from HRS, $60,000 in state funds for alcoholism, and about $300,000 from Federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act funds. Fees from clients totaled about $100,000.—DONNA ESTES

Kelly: Carter Dangerous; Tax Cut A Sham

U.S. Rep. Richard Kelly, R-New Port Richey, in a campaign swing through Seminole County, said, "No one should consider Ronald Reagan elected."

"I don't think it will be a shoo-in for Reagan," Kelly said, adding President Jimmy Carter is an inspired politician and "capable of doing the things to be elected." Florida's fifth district congressman said, however, he believes "Carter is a dangerous president."

He cited ways Carter has been dangerous as the "gateway of the Panama Canal," and the president's attitude toward Nicaragua and Taiwan. "He has abandoned the defenses of the United States," he said. Pointing to the Iranian situation, Kelly said the taking and keeping of the hostages is the best the U.S. could have hoped for under Carter. He said the president plotted the course he took because he judges that Americans have lost their resolve to fight.

At a town hall meeting at the Altamonte Springs city hall his fourth such meeting in his current swing through the district, which includes Seminole County, Kelly told an audience of less than 50 persons that the major concerns in Washington are a balanced budget and tax credit.

Of the proposed balanced budget, Kelly said, "We are now dealing with the president's fourth budget submittal. There is a great deal of smoke on a balanced budget. But no one was ever serious about balancing the budget." He said that a $130 billion package on financing with loans and loan guarantees are not even included in the current unbalanced budget and there is no move on to cut spending.

Of proposed tax cuts, Kelly said he would vote against them, unless they are accompanied by a similar reduction in spending. To do otherwise, he said, would be inflationary.

He said the government is printing up more money to make up the difference between its income and spending and this can only lead to inflation.

"It's all a sham," he said. "There is no practical way the government can give a tax cut to the people while maintaining the current spending level. They are putting money in one pocket and taking it out of the other with inflation."

"If you are getting ready to spend the money from a tax cut," he said, "cool it. If the tax cut is for 1981, you won't get the money until April, 1982. It's all a monstrous piece of nonsense."

He said the American public has been "snookered by its political leadership for 50 years. It's all a fraud about a tax cut," he said.

Kelly also said he would vote against continuing Saturday mail delivery; would vote for the draft; is opposed to the equal rights amendment; is opposed to drafting women into the armed forces; and believes the pay of new military recruits should be reduced to $300 monthly.
