Power restored after four days

SEATTLE — Four days after a fire in an underground electrical vault knocked out power to a 55-block section of downtown Seattle, crews spliced together the last main cable and told residents they could turn on their lights.

"The fifth feeder cable (in the vault) was repaired at about 10:40 p.m. and all load restrictions are off," Seattle City Light spokesman Scott Forslund said Sunday night. "We're back to normal."

Forslund said the Westin Hotel towers and several other tall buildings near the vault were the last to receive full power.

He said the sixth feeder cable, primarily a safety cable, should be repaired sometime Tuesday.

Randy Hardy, a City Light superintendent, said Sunday night that one of the causes of the fire may have been an aluminum, Metro (transportation agency) cable that was included in the vault.

Carlucci begins China visit

BEIJING — Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci arrived in China today for a five-day visit that will include meetings with senior leaders and a discussion of Beijing's missile sales to Middle Eastern countries.

Carlucci arrived at Beijing's Capital Airport from Agana, Guam, just after 3 p.m., and was greeted by Chinese military officials. He will be formally welcomed Tuesday and is scheduled to meet with Chinese Defense Minister Qin Jiwei.

The defense secretary is slated to express Washington's concerns over China's missile sales to the Middle East, a major issue raised by Secretary of State George Shultz.

Schroeder's a Raider

The Washington Redskins and Los Angeles Raiders both solved feasting problems today with a deal that sent disgraced quarterback Jay Schroeder from the Super Bowl champions to the Raiders in exchange for Pro Bowl tackle Jim Lachey and future draft picks.

The trade was announced early this morning by Washington General Manager Boboy Beathard after bargaining throughout Sunday with Raiders Managing General Partner Al Davis.

The acquisition of Schroeder apparently solves the Raiders' quarterback dilemma, as Los Angeles — entering the season with untested Steve Beuerlein — sought to return to the playoffs for the first time since 1985.

Reds' Jackson mows 'em down

On a day rain washed away half the National League schedule, Denny Jackson continued to shine bright.

Jackson hurled a six-hitter to become the NL's first 20-game winner and banged out four of the Cincinnati Red's 18 hits Sunday in a 17-0 pelting of the Chicago Cubs.

Jackson endured a 9-18 record and a 4.02 earned run average with Kansas City last season. The left-hander, traded in the offseason, stands 20-6 with a 2.49 ERA.

Denny Jackson

"They score me a lot of runs," said Jackson of his teammates.

That may account for the wins, but not the league's 18th best ERA.

Lotto winner unknown

$54 million ticket sold in Longwood

United Press International

MIAMI BEACH — Someone who purchased a lottery ticket in Longwood is $54 million dollars richer after correctly picking all six numbers in the largest single lottery payoff in North American history.

The lucky player has yet to come forward and local and state officers have been deluged with hundreds of calls since the Saturday night drawing.

Rumors, all of which are unfounded at this point, surfaced in and around the Longwood community the morning after the $54 million dollar drawing was held.

The winning numbers drawn Saturday night were 3, 5, 19, 20, 27, and 35. Most people play birthdates and ages, generally using numbers below 31, and Paul said, "I was very surprised there was only one winner with the popularity of the numbers that were chosen."

To play the Lotto game, players choose six numbers from 1 to 49. The odds of picking all six correctly are one in 13.9 million.

The prize would be paid in 20 annual installments of a little more than $2.1 million — about $5,100 a day, every day for 20 years. But the jackpot will go back into the lottery fund that determines the prize if the winner does not step forward within 180 days of the drawing, officials said.

Frenzied ticket sales pushed the jackpot to $54 million, and depending on interest rates when an annuity is bought Tuesday, the final price could reach $56 million. The annuity is purchased by a bank where the lottery proceeds are placed in an account to generate interest during the 20-year payout.

Paul declined to reveal exactly where or when the ticket was sold, saying the information would be used to verify the winning ticket.

At $1 each, Lotto ticket sales for the week were $45 million, smashing the previous record of $31.3 million of just a week ago when the jackpot grew to an estimated $32 million without a winner.

Florida's other lottery games brought in $15 million, for a weekly total of $60 million, Paul said.

Besides the grand prize winner, 1,098 tickets matched five of the six winning numbers, good for $2,651; 70,778 had four numbers, good for $40; and 1,002,428 matched three numbers, good for $4.

The jackpot for next week was set at $7 million, the highest first-week jackpot in a lotto game, Paul said.

"Sales next week will be higher than they would have been normally," Paul said. "People who've never tried our product before bought tickets this week because of the size of the jackpot. They'll find out they like the product and continue to play."

Lotto hopefuls from across Florida and nearby states braved long lines all week long for a chance at the big prize.

Ticket sales Saturday topped $14.6 million, easily eclipsing the state's daily sales record of nearly $10.5 million set just last week when computerized Lotto machines at times spit out 1 million tickets a minute. Sales hit a peak of $900.

Officials expect heavy voter turnout tomorrow

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — About 35 percent of Seminole County's 101,794 registered voters are expected to turn out tomorrow to select from among 44 candidates for county, circuit court, state and national races. In addition, Republicans can select from 51 names for party offices.

Sandra Goard, supervisor of elections and a candidate for re-election herself, said she predicts up to 35 percent of the voters will participate because of the large number of candidates. Although there is a nearly 50-percent chance of late afternoon rain and about a 20-percent chance of early evening rains, the weather shouldn't deter voters, she said.

"This campaign's been hard to predict," Goard said. "We don't normally have a high turnout in the primaries, but based on the large number of candidates, I'll go out on a limb and predict 35 percent."

Goard said past primaries have seen from 19- to 36 percent turnouts.

Democratic voters won't have as large a choice as the Republicans, who have edged out their political foes in numbers, but they do have choices. They can select from a packed field of six for U.S. Senate to replace the retired Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Lakeland. Democrats also have three choices each for Florida Secretary of State and state treasurer.

Democrats also have one county primary to decide, a Democratic challenge in the District 5 county commission race where Art Davis and Amos Jones are the two candidates.

All three affiliations — Democrats, Republicans and Independents can choose between two judicial candidates for the non-partisan judge's seat in the 18th Circuit, Group 16 race. The additional judge's position was created by the Legislature this year.

"Republicans will spend the longest time in the polling booths Tuesday. They have 28 candidates to choose from, including two candidates for U.S. Senator, three for state treasurer, three for state senator and two for state representative. They will also vote on

Stabbing may have been drug-related

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald Staff Writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A possible drug-related stabbing early Sunday is under investigation today by Seminole County Sheriff's deputies. The 30-year-old victim remains in serious condition today with stab wounds near his heart.

Gerald Lee Florence of 522 Oak St., Altamonte Springs, was stabbed at about 4:35 a.m. Sunday after he approached a man standing outside a car on North St. at Condor Court in rural Altamonte Springs.

Florence's companion, Theodis Jones Jr., 29, of 302 Teakwood Lane, Altamonte Springs, told sheriff's deputies that Florence fell to the ground after the assault and the assailant fled with an accomplice in a 1970 brown and white Ford Granada.

Florence was stabbed twice in his lower left chest.

Sheriff's deputies said the wounds were near his heart.

Jones said he threw a brick at the fleeing car and dented the vehicle.

Florence was transported to Orlando Regional Medical Center, where he is in serious condition in the facility's intensive care unit.

Sheriff's deputies said the stabbing, which occurred in an area known for open narcotics deals, could have been drug-related.

In another weekend incident, Seminole County sheriff's deputies report that a man found floating face-down in the Wekiva River at the Seminole-Lake County line at about 1:30 p.m. Saturday was a possible suicide.

The man has been identified as Edgar Keller, 57, of Seminole County. Deputies said they have received reports that Keller was depressed, and are treating the case as a suicide.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Castor: Lottery money less than expected

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Education Commissioner Betty Castor says Florida's lottery has helped but has not been the major boost for education she hoped it would be.

The lottery gave $328 million to education in its first year, allowing an 8.9 percent increase in per-student spending. But education would have fared far better had legislators not been forced to use lottery funds for existing programs, Castor told the Florida Times-Union/Jacksonville Journal.

"That was a fabulous increase and we are not complaining," Castor said. "You cannot say the lottery did not enhance education, but it didn't do as much as we hoped."

The problem developed, Castor said, when legislators voted to revoke the unpopular sales tax on services. Lawmakers replaced that money with a 1 cent hike in the general sales tax, but only after bowing to Gov. Bob Martinez' demand that half the money raised go to building roads, prisons and bridges.

With that much revenue locked into a specific area, legislators had to look elsewhere for other funds. While they did not directly take lottery money, in many instances they used lottery money to fund existing educational programs, rather than to improve or add programs.

"Had we not had the lottery to fund education needs, the legislators would have had to have broken their promise (to Martinez) and used that money for education," Castor said. "As it is, they didn't have to."

The result — only one of the 30 new programs Castor requested was funded last year. That project, a $23 million pre-kindergarten program, got far less than the $43 million Castor had hoped for.

voters overwhelmingly approved a constitutional amendment allowing the lottery in 1986. Although the amendment could not legally mandate how lottery money would be spent, supporters and most lawmakers agreed it would go to enhance education.

Castor said she would support legislation being prepared by Rep. Jim King, R-Jacksonville, to guarantee that more lottery money go to education.

King's first bill would set a growth rate for education spending. Lottery money could be allocated only after legislators had met the growth rate with traditional funds.

King would also limit lottery jackpots to $50 million or six weeks of sales. If no one won after a jackpot grew to $50 million or there were five weeks without a winner, the prize money would be given to education and a new jackpot begun the following week.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Ernesto drowns in North Atlantic

MIAMI — Ernesto, the fifth named tropical storm of the Atlantic season, sped into cool North Atlantic waters Sunday night and lost its tropical characteristics.

Bob Case, a forecaster with the National Hurricane Center, said Ernesto was absorbed by a much bigger North Atlantic storm north of the Azores islands and could no longer be identified. The storms in the cool North Atlantic are less intense than the tropical storms, he said.

"It's totally out of the tropics," Case said.

At 10:30 p.m. EDT Sunday, Ernesto was centered near latitude 45.0 north, longitude 28.0 west, or about 400 miles north of the Azores.

Ernesto was the fifth named storm of the 1988 Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season.

Tropical storm warnings were issued Saturday from Morgan City, La., east to Apalachicola, Fla., but were lowered when the season's 10th tropical depression fizzled.

However, forecasters said moist tropical air over the Gulf of Mexico and a cold front headed into the northwest gulf could combine to produce extreme weather such as heavy thunderstorms, strong winds and heavy rains.

Hurricane Debby, the first hurricane of the season, fizzled into a tropical storm over the mountains of Mexico Friday, but not before lashing the coastal village of Tuxpan with heavy rains and 75 mph winds earlier in the day. It dissipated eight hours after it formed from a tropical storm.

No injuries or major damage were reported, but Debby's torrential rains continued to pose threats of flash floods and mudslides as its remnants pushed further inland.

Investor lived it up—with clients' money

MIAMI — Fugitive investment adviser Henry Gherman lived in a waterfront mansion with a 100-foot dock, employed a full-time hairdresser and treated his family to $30,000 shopping binges at Macy's and Bloomingdale's.

But the money he so freely tossed around belonged to his clients, a court-appointed receiver charged after Gherman skipped town Aug. 8.

"He seemed like a man who had a million bucks. I didn't realize it was my money," The Miami Herald quoted an unhappy client, Dr. Delores Morgan, as saying Sunday.

Gherman was subsequently charged with defrauding his doctor clients out of $25 million in pension funds. Gherman, 54, told his clients he was putting their money in Certificates of Deposit, and showed them a $100,000 CD.

After he fled, they learned they had all been looking at the same single certificate.

Before his departure, however, Gherman paid his family huge salaries and made generous donations to civil rights projects.

He lived in a $850,000 waterfront mansion with a 100-foot dock, tennis court and a pool. He sailed a 45-foot yacht and employed a full-time hairdresser to style his hair every day in a private barber chair in his office. Hair stylist David Dickson was paid $14,600 a year and even accompanied Gherman on vacations.

On his 25th wedding anniversary, Gherman chartered a jet and flew 200 guests to New York for a surprise banquet with Harry Belafonte and Eddie Fisher. Sometimes he gambled $500 on a single blackjack card at the Paradise Island casino in Nassau.

He took his family to Bloomingdale's and Macy's, giving them 15 minutes to buy anything they could grab, like a TV game show. One trip cost him $30,000.

Survey: Kids good at 'name than booze'

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Educators warn of "something disastrously wrong" when a survey reveals children living around the nation's capital know the names of more alcoholic beverages than of American presidents.

The poll of 180 children in the District of Columbia and suburban Maryland, released Sunday by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, found the average child between the ages of 8 and 12 could name, in statistical terms, 5.2 bottled brands but only 4.8 chief executives.

"This survey indicates the extent to which booze is part of the daily life of children who cannot drink legally for another 10 years," remarked Michael Jacobson, executive director of the non-profit research organization.

"It's not surprising that a recent survey by the Association for the Advancement of Health Education found that one out of four eighth-graders drank five or more alcoholic drinks on a single occasion in the two weeks prior to the survey," Jacobson said.

"There's something disastrously wrong when kids can name as many alcoholic products as presidents," declared Millie Waterman, vice president for legislative activities of the National Parents and Teachers Association.

"We need to work on both ends of the equation," Waterman said. "Alcohol advertising must be curtailed and the quality of education must be improved."

Officials of the Beer Institute and the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States, which represent the nation's liquor industry, could not be reached for comment on the study.

Examples from the survey included:

- A 10-year-old girl who managed to identify 14 alcohol products but only four presidents throughout American history.
- An 11-year-old boy who correctly spelled Matilda Bay, King Cobra and Bud Light but listed two presidents as "Nickson" and Roselvelt."

Phony gas refund forms resurface

United Press International

ORLANDO — Phony state forms promising non-existent gas tax refunds to some Florida drivers have made a mysterious reappearance.

The forms promise gas tax refunds of $75 to motorists who had Florida driver's licenses in 1976, 1977, and 1978, the report said. The forms do not bear an identifying state letterhead.

Attorney General Bob Butterworth's office has received several hundred of the fake forms over the past few weeks. The office has been deluged with phony forms on two prior occasions.

"It's unfortunate, because a disproportionate number appear to be senior citizens and low-income people who, frankly, could probably use the money," said Butterworth aide Tom Hillstrom. "It is unfortunate that they are being misled in that way."

The problem apparently originated in 1982, when then-Attorney General Jim Smith filed an anti-trust suit against 12 independent gasoline companies operating in 32 counties. Those companies were convicted of conspiring to overcharge an average of 1.5 cents per gallon between October 1976 and January 1978.

In 1985, the companies agreed to issue refunds totaling about $1 million to drivers in the affected counties. The refunds came to about $20 each.

Smith advertised the refunds in five major newspapers. The ads noted the appropriate forms had to be sent in no later than March 13, 1986.

Between March 12 and March 17 that year, Smith's office was swamped with 110 bags of mail, most of it from consumers who had mailed in the phony forms. Officials then had to inform about 750,000 hopeful motorists that they had been duped.

Eastern posts bond, will start layoffs

United Press International

MIAMI — Eastern Airlines is prepared to lay off about 4,000 employees by week's end, but had to post a $4.7 million bond in case a federal appeals court eventually decides that the troubled carrier may not proceed with the dismissals.

The bond, ordered to ensure that Eastern can pay a month's wages for 2,200 union workers facing layoffs, was posted late Saturday in Washington, D.C., and on Sunday Eastern management said the layoffs would begin Sept. 10, airline spokeswoman Virginia Sanchez said.

Union contracts require two weeks' notice before a layoff, but because the employees were notified of the cuts in July, that requirement is fulfilled, Sanchez said. Union officials were not available for comment.

The company announced plans in July to trim expenses by laying off about 4,000 employees including managers, eliminating 204 flights and cutting service to 14 cities, most of them in the West.

The airline's unions challenged the plan in federal court. U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker in Washington issued an injunction Aug. 30 preventing the layoff of any union employees but permitting the airline to eliminate the flights.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia overturned Parker's decision Friday, allowing the troubled carrier to proceed with its plan while it pleads its case.

The appellate panel ordered Eastern to post a $4.7 million bond, however, to protect the fired workers in the event that the court eventually rules against the company.

Although it dissolved Parker's injunction, the appeals court has yet to make a final decision on the cost-cutting plan. The justices retained jurisdiction and were expected to announce a hearing schedule Tuesday.

Eastern, a subsidiary of Texas Air, has been embroiled in legal battles with the International Association of Machinists, the Air Line Pilots Association and the Transport Workers Union, which together represent 9,000 of Eastern's 32,500 employees.

Union leaders said they were disappointed with the appellate court's ruling, but added that they expected the unions eventually would prevail.

"I still feel confident that we will be proven right," said Bob Taylor, head of the machinists in Atlanta. "Our legal people think we are still ahead. This is not the end of the world."

On July 22, Eastern President Phil Hakes announced a cutback to six daily departures from the airline's hub in Kansas City, Mo., effective Aug. 31, and the termination of service to Albuquerque, N.M.; Dallas; Las Vegas, Nev.; Minneapolis-St. Paul; Oklahoma City; Omaha;

Holiday death toll hits 25

TALLAHASSEE — The death of an unborn child has boosted the Labor Day weekend death toll on Florida's streets and highways to 25, the Florida Highway Patrol said Monday.

Patrol duty officer Eugene Davis in Tallahassee said officials counted the child, who would have been named Vincent McGowan, because he was full term and would have survived out of his mother's womb had he not been injured in the accident.

The accident occurred 3 miles east of Mount Dora Sunday night when Michael McGowan, 29, of Sorrento pulled his pickup truck into the left lane to pass slow-moving traffic, said Duane Clark, the FHP duty officer in Leesburg.

At the same time, a 1965 Mustang driven by Robert West, 16, of Mount Dora pulled into the lane, causing both cars to go out of control and crash.

McGowan and his wife, Vera, 24, both suffered internal injuries and were listed in stable condition Monday at Waterman Medical Center at Eustis. But the unborn baby did not make it to the hospital.

West, who was not seriously hurt, was charged with making an improper lane change.

The patrol has predicted 31 people would die in Florida during the three-day weekend which ends at midnight Monday. Of the 25 deaths, the Patrol said at least 11 were alcohol related.

Man accused of bashing roommate

WINTER SPRINGS — A 21-year-old Winter Springs man was arrested after his roommate was battered after he allegedly tried to stop the smashing of items at their home.

Charles E. Bruce, of 412 David St., was arrested after his roommate told Winter Springs police he tried to stop the destruction, but was pushed by Bruce and had objects thrown at him, before fleeing at about 5:25 a.m. Saturday.

The victim met police who went to the house and arrested Bruce on a complaint of battery. Bond was set at $500.

Victim finds his stolen furniture

CASSELBERRY — A man who moved from 1054 Princess Gate Blvd., Winter Park, Aug. 26, reported visiting a man Friday night and seeing his own furniture, which had been stolen from that Winter Park location, in the other man's Casselberry house.

That led to the arrest of Brian Lee Emmert, 21, of 2008 Lake Drive, Casselberry, on complaints of charges of burglary and grand theft. The victim told Seminole County sheriff's deputies he recognized his stolen table, chairs and bar stools in Emmert's house when he visited him Friday. Emmert allegedly said he had bought the items at a garage sale.

A boy, who allegedly accompanied Emmert to the burglarized house Aug. 26, reportedly told police he thought the items they took had been abandoned. The boy told deputies Emmert gave him a radio and television set taken from the house. Saturday. He is held in lieu of $2,000 bond.

Suspect captured at burglary scene

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Seminole County sheriff's deputies responded to a burglary in progress call at 326 DePugh St., rural Altamonte Springs. Sunday arrested a man there on a complaint of burglary.

Eddie Lee Calloway, 26, of 393 Longwood Ave., Altamonte Springs, is accused of stealing several items from the burglarized house. Bond for Calloway is $1,000.

Man accused of slapping wife

SANFORD — A man who allegedly slapped his wife about 20 times, chipping her tooth and causing her nose to bleed, is accused of battery spouse abuse.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies arrested Augustus Daniel, 40, of 925 E. Michigan St., Sanford, at his house at 11:40 p.m. Saturday. Bond was set at $500.

Accident results in theft charge

MIDWAY — The driver of a stolen car involved in a traffic accident at Midway and Sipes avenues, Midway, at about 8:50 p.m. Saturday was accused of grand theft auto and leaving the scene of an accident.

Tomeka Camille Thomas, 19, of 78 Lake Monroe Terrace, Sanford, is was arrested and bond was set at $1,000. The car stolen is a 1978 Pontiac.

Seminole County sheriff's deputies report determining that a car involved in the accident had been reported stolen. The driver had reportedly left the scene, but returned during the investigation, a sheriff's report said.

Man accused of concealing knives

SANFORD — A man who reportedly told Sanford police he was looking for someone who threw rocks at his car was allegedly found to be armed with two knives and was arrested on a complaint of carrying a concealed weapon.

Police reported spotting the 10-inch butcher knife and 6-inch boot knife in the possession of Geoff Kenneth Swift, 22, of Geneva, Swift was arrested at 11:40 a.m. Sunday on Seventh Street at Cypress Avenue. Bond was set at $500.

Man arrested after cursing officers

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Altamonte Springs police, who confronted a man outside closed businesses at the 701 Building State Road 436 at about 1:32 a.m. today, reported the man cursed and threatened them before running away.

Police chased the suspect and found him injured after a fall behind the Handway convenience store, Maitland Boulevard.

Lydelle LeRoy Neal, 24, of no address, was booked into jail after his injury from the fall was treated at Florida Hospital-Altamonte Springs. He is accused of assault.

Drunken driving arrests made

SANFORD — The following persons were arrested in Seminole County on counts of driving under the influence.

• John Adrian Shersly, 36, of Delray Beach, was arrested at 2:03 a.m. Sunday after he erratically drove from behind Scotty's, State Road, 436, Altamonte Springs. He allegedly had held his wife against her will and hit her, in addition to allegedly threatening with a knife a man who tried to aid Shersly's wife, an Altamonte Springs police report said. Shersly is also accused of aggravated assault, battery and driving with and possession of a suspended driver's license.

Woman reports rape

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A 24-year-old Altamonte Springs woman reported to Seminole County sheriff's deputies she was held against her will and raped when she visited a 25-year-old man at his Leon Street house in Altamonte Springs.

The woman gave deputies the name of the man, who she said held her captive between 11:30 p.m. Saturday and 5 a.m. Sunday.

Police find drugs in stolen car

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Altamonte Springs police who arrested two occupants of a stolen car on complaints of grand theft auto also booked the pair on counts of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute after contraband was found in the car.

Jacques Winfred Durham, 23, of 339 Longwood Ave., Altamonte Springs, and Dexter Johnson, 18, of 296 Ford Drive, Altamonte Springs, were arrested on Maitland Avenue at 6:13 p.m. Saturday.

Police reported finding four cocaine rocks and several small pieces of cocaine in the car, along with cigarette rolling papers. Police reported finding a bag of white powder believed to be cocaine and 15 foil packets of white powder, believed to have been discarded by the suspects in a police car used to transport the pair. Johnson, the driver of the car, also reportedly had $425 in cash, which was confiscated. Bond was set at $2,000 for each of the men.

Longwood attorney faces reprimand

By JANE CASSELBERRY
Herald staff writer

LONGWOOD — Longwood attorney Walter J. Belleville is slated to receive a public reprimand and be fined by order of the Florida Supreme Court following action brought by The Florida Bar in a conflict of interest case.

Belleville, 42, of 550 Crown Oak Center Drive, will be required to receive his reprimand in person before the bar's Board of Governors. He was found guilty of violating attorney disciplinary rules relating to conflict of interest.

According to the bar association, a client of Belleville's was interested in investing in a real estate development in Jamaica, of which Belleville was a shareholder. The client purchased $24,000 worth of shares from the development corporation. The client received Belleville's personal shares in the development and the money from the shares was received by the attorney, according to the bar association. The client claims he did not know he was buying Belleville's personal shares.

A referee assigned to hear the case concluded that the materials Belleville gave to his client failed to advise the client of the conflict and make clear in writing the source of the stock. The attorney also did not insist his client seek independent counsel prior to investing, the report says.

In addition to the reprimand, Belleville, who was admitted to the bar in 1983, is required to refund the client's $24,000 investment plus 12 percent interest and any appreciation in the value of the stock in excess of 12 percent interest. The payment is to be made within one year. The court also ordered Belleville to pay a disciplinary fine of $1,750.79.

The reprimand is not final until time expires to file a rehearing motion and, if filed, a determination of the appeal is made.

As an official agency of the Supreme Court of Florida, The Florida Bar and its Department of Lawyer Regulation are charged with the administration of a statewide disciplinary system to enforce Supreme Court rules of professional conduct for all lawyers.

When final, the order will be published in the Southern Reporter, a legal publication which contains appeals court decisions from Florida and nearby states.

Belleville was represented before the court by Dennis F. Fountain of Longwood.

Police investigate thefts of jewelry

SANFORD — A $1,000 gold necklace and a $400 pearl necklace were stolen between Aug. 31 and Saturday from the house of Peggy Cole, of 232 Portsmouth Cove, Longwood, a sheriff's report said.

Other burglaries and thefts reported in Seminole county were:

• Ron Barton of 7549 Dockside Drive, Winter Park, gave sheriff's deputies the name of a suspect who may have stolen a $250 ring, a $850 bracelet, a $300 watch and a $200 watch from his house Friday.

• Sheriff's deputies report six brass vases valued at $100 each were stolen between July 1 and Thursday from graves at Highland Memory Garden, 3329 E. Semoran Blvd., Apopka.

• Ronnie Wood, 615 S. Park Ave., Sanford, reported to Sanford police the theft of a stereo set, television set, video cassette recorder, camera, microwave oven and a gold ring with total value of $1,032 from her residence sometime Thursday. According to the police report, the thief entered the residence by breaking a window, and left through a door.

• Charles LeRoy Hall, 107 Weeping Elm Lane, reported to sheriff's deputies a $100 wet suit, two scuba vests valued at $800 and other items were stolen from his house Aug. 27 or 28. The loss was reported Friday.

• Sheriff's deputies report 3,000 square feet of ceramic tile valued at $3,000 was stolen between Aug. 1 and 25 from a Flea World construction site on U.S. Highway 17-92 in south Sanford.

• Warren Diehl of 1401 Snowhill Road,

Chuluota, reported to sheriff's deputies a chain saw and a staple gun, each valued at $400, were among several items stolen from his house Friday or Saturday.

A $200 chain saw and a $50 hammock were stolen between Aug. 20 and 27 from the house of Brenda K. Kelks, of 906 Wintergreen Blvd., Fern Park, a sheriff's report said.

• Eric Menegat, of 2500 Howell Branch Road #75, Winter Park, reported to sheriff's deputies a $160 gun and $150 were among items stolen from his house Friday.

• Howard W. Carter, of 1809 Southwest Road, Sanford, gave sheriff's deputies the nickname of a woman who may have stolen his 1978 Pontiac while he slept Saturday. The car is valued at $500.

Details of Dallas crash coming out

United Press International

GRAPEVINE, Texas — The wind cried and the sun shone redly over the funnel of flame and death known as Delta Flight 1141.

It was 9:03 Wednesday morning, a few brief moments after pilot Larry Davis, 48, shoved the three throttles of his Boeing 727-200 forward and his big bird cut into the air.

It rose 60 feet, making maybe 130 nauts before the stall. Then it yawed like a seagull, careering tailfirst to the ground. It poured metal, sparks and liquid flame over a quarter mile.

"The miracle was not that this plane landed, because it was incinerated," says Joe Dealey, spokesman for the world's fourth busiest air complex. "The miracle was that so many walked away."

Ninety-five, in fact, saw death up close and lived to tell about it.

Pilot Davis stayed to the end, his leg embraced in twisted steel, his spine bent. "Slow down, watch your step," he told passengers. And all but 13 made it to safety. Most of the dead were found huddled behind a jammed rear exit.

Sewing a flag fit for a president

United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — Betsy Ross reputedly stitched the first American flag in her Philadelphia home, so it is only fitting that 17 Philadelphia seamstresses carry on the tradition by making the presidential flag.

Instead of stitching before a cozy hearth, the embroiderers carefully perform their colorful task in an air-conditioned factory called the Defense Personnel Support System, which for some 100 years has churned out military flags and uniforms.

The flag shop is the only place in the country that makes presidential flags, and 10 will be used in the Jan. 16 inauguration ceremonies and by the new president throughout his term. At least four presidential flags are made each year at the embroidery shop but more are needed when a new president takes office.

"I probably have the best hand embroidery room in the entire world," said Col. Victor Fernandez, who is in charge of the factory. "They were selected one by one. Several learned right here, others were taught by aunts or mothers."

"Generally speaking, the shop is ethnic. There are Hispanic, Portuguese, Italian, Korean, Japanese, and blacks. Many of them are first-generation Americans."

It takes about six weeks for one person to hand embroider and finish the 4-foot-4 by 5-foot-6 presidential flag. Cost, $4,800 each.

"I love it, everybody does," said Stella Crispin, who has made flags for 14 years. "When you see it starting to take shape and you put in the red and white stitches and the gold arrows, it's really beautiful."

Even though it is an election year, no partisan feelings emerge from the embroiderers, several of whom are immigrants and many of whom learned their craft from their grandmothers while practicing on handkerchiefs.

"No matter which one, you feel proud, it's like an art. I've been making them since President Nixon was elected," Crispin said.

The flag bears the presidential coat of arms, an exclusive heraldic design that also is on the presidential seal. It also displays a blue shield with 13 white and red stripes on the breast of an American Bald Eagle.

The eagle holds an olive branch in its left talon and a bundle of arrows in its right.

Candidates hold key to future

During recent weeks Seminole County citizens have experienced a blitz of pleadings, admonishments, representations and promises from an array of candidates for political office. If there is one theme consistent throughout all campaigns it is the plea to vote. Political parties wage telephone campaigns to "get out the vote." Civic organizations offer rides to the polls. All are designed in hopes of increasing the voter turnout.

Collectively, citizens support the democratic method of elections in the Republic. All affirm the value of the vote and will defend that right to the uttermost. But the uttermost does not include the voting booth.

Tomorrow 44 candidates will vie in 12 races ranging from county, state and national posts. Four of the races will determine the officeholder without necessity of a run-off. Additionally, party offices will also be determined. These decisions, and the resulting affects on this county during the next four years, will be made by about 35 percent of the registered voters. If the turnout prediction of elections supervisor Sandra Goard prove accurate.

Less than 40 thousand people will determine policies and programs during the very important period immediately ahead, a period in time which may affect the destiny of all within the county. This is a sad commentary on the citizens of this county.

Voting will begin at 7 a.m. at 95 polling places tomorrow morning. There are 101,794 registered voters. On a similar morning in November, approximately 65 percent will cast their ballots in the general election which will include the race for president of the United States. This would mean nearly double the voter turnout, yet the elections tomorrow, and subsequent run-off on October 4, will have a more direct effect on this county and its citizens than the national races.

There is still sufficient time to become familiar with the candidates, their positions, and the issues involved. There is still sufficient time for each individual to become motivated to vote. The exercise of the right to vote is a cherished part of the heritage of this nation. The experiences of those who have been disenfranchised bear testimony to the value of the right of freedom of choice in elections.

Make yourself a committee of one to get out your own vote. Maybe many others will follow your example.

THE SCARLET LETTER — 1988

The Republican's 'third-man theme'

The joke is going around that Jesse Jackson got from Mike Dukakis what every terrorist wants: $10 million and a plane. Jackson will tour the country in his own plane, and with his own entourage, ostensibly campaigning for the national ticket, but of course campaigning for himself and for his own agenda.

The Republicans correctly sense this as an opportunity. They will say plausibly, that the Democratic ticket really has three men on it — Dukakis, Bentsen and Jackson. Jackson's dwelling redistributionist and third-world politics will not play well in many swing states if the Republicans can make this theme tick. This will be the Republicans' "third man theme." You can hear it going, as in the old Joseph Cotton & Orson Welles movie, plink-de plink on the zither.

But Jackson also represents a tactical asset to Dukakis. His very prominence assures liberal Democrats that the heart of the party is in the right — that is, the left — place. Meanwhile, protected by the Bentsen fig-leaf and the Atlanta "centerist" costume ball, Dukakis can pretend that he is running as a "centerist" or a "technocrat."

In a recent interview Dukakis disavowed the term "technocrat," but his reiterated slogan since the Atlanta convention has been "This election isn't about ideology, it's about competence."

In other words, Dukakis wants to run as a manager and not as the proponent of a point of view, not, shhh, as a liberal. Friends of mine at the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard tell me that when someone walked into a faculty lounge there and reported that Dukakis had selected Bentsen, everyone thought he was kidding, that he was making a bad joke. But Dukakis was a smarter politician than his former liberal colleagues on the faculty there. He knew that he had to distance himself from the liberal agenda. He had absorbed the baleful lesson of Dukakis can pretend that he is running as a "centerist" or a "technocrat."

McGovern and Mondale, each of whom ran as a true liberal, and each of whom carried one state. Dukakis' selection of Bentsen was the first step in the cover-up. The toned-down and disciplined Atlanta convention was the next step. The "competence not ideology" theme continues the game plan.

But there really are fundamental differences between the two parties. As my colleague Joe Sobran recently put it, "Republicans believe government should treat citizens alike, whereas Democrats believe it should make them alike — by treating them differently." It follows that Democrats therefore yearn for redistributive taxation, quotas and busing, special set-asides in contract allocation and hiring, re-structuring neighborhoods, and all of the other coercive measures that are so dear to their hearts, and not dear to the voters.

The more intelligent Democratic theorists recognize fully that raising taxes for the purpose of redistribution puts a brake on the productive energies of the economy, but they are willing to pay the price in the name of making people, at least eventually, and hopefully, sometime, more equal.

Much ado about doing nothing

CASCO BAY, Maine—The tide has come in and filled up the cove. A fat, fuzzy bee has worked the last rose-hip flower in front of the cottage. I have been sitting on the porch all morning, sitting and watching.

It has taken me days to come down to this speed, to this morning of utter inefficiency. Only now am I finally, truly, totally unproductive. Able to just sit and watch.

This has been a rushed, high-priority, overnight express, FAX-it sort of summer. It has been scheduled as the airline timetable I carried in my pocketbook. By the time I left the city and office, I had reached a peak of impatience. The money machine at the bank seemed tortuously slow. The traffic was impossible. The long-distance number that I had to re-dial was an ajoying. Too many digits.

Without actually knowing it, I had upped the quota on my own production schedule. It had begun to seem important to do two things at once. To return calls while unloading the dishwasher. To ask for the check with coffee. To read a magazine in the checkout line. To use rather than waste time. The pace of work had taken over the rest of my life.

Now I look at newspaper photographs of Michael Dukakis speed-walking with reporters at his side, accomplishing two tasks at once— aerobic interviews—and I am amused. Somewhere, surely, there is a commuter learning Japanese on the way to work. A child is being car-pooled from one lesson to another by a parent worried about being late for gymnastics.

Sitting here, idle at last, I am finally conscious of the gap between being productive and simply being. At the wonderful, sensual luxury of being useless. And its rareness. Do we need vacations now to learn how to do nothing, rather than something?

In front of me, the sides of an orchid-like wildflower open and close in the breeze like some cartoon mouth from a Disney character. I am amazed at the orange freckles that line its yellow throat. It is a wonderfully complex creation. I remember the line that accompanied that lush exhibit of Georgia O'Keeffe's paintings last winter. She wrote once: "It's in a way—nobody sees a flower—really it is so small—we haven't time—and to see takes time, like to have a friend takes time."

Time. It is the priority and the missing element in our world of one-minute managers and stress clinics. But the artist knew it wasn't possible to sandwich in an appointment for awareness (from two to three this afternoon I will pay attention to the poppies) or to make friendship more efficient. They usually lose in the race of workaday life.

Not long ago, I read a report from Pittsburgh about how much time Americans waste in their lives. Five years waiting in lines. Six months at traffic lights. Eight months opening junk mail. The average married couple spends only four minutes a day in meaningful conversation. If only our tasks could be accomplished more quickly, the researchers suggested, we would have more hours for the things and people we loved.

Perhaps. But I am not convinced that inefficiency is our problem. Instead, it may be the passion for efficiency. The solution to the time crunch is not to move at a higher speed. It is too hard to shift out of that list-making, speed-thinking, full-throttle life into idle, the gear of human beings. The faster we try to move, the further we get from the rhythms of friendship and flowers.

When we rush through errands to clear a small block of free time for ourselves or families, we may end up rushing through that "leisure" time as well. In our most productive mode we are the least open to that slow, subtle pace of caring.

The great myth of our work-intense era is "quality time." We believe that we can make up for the loss of days or hours, especially with each other, by concentrated minutes. But ultimately there is no way to do one-minute mothering. There is no way to pay attention in a hurry. Seeing, as Georgia O'Keeffe said, takes time. Friendship takes time. So does family. So does arriving at a sense of well-being.

This is what I have learned on my summer vacation...slowly. On a porch in Maine, one American is carefully lowering the national productivity. And raising the absolute value of doing nothing.

Do we need vacations now to learn how to do nothing, rather than something?

NRA sinks to new low

WASHINGTON — The National Rifle Association sank to new lows of hyperbole last month and may have shot itself in the foot.

Just ask conservative Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner, R-Wis. He wandered into the crosshairs of the NRA when he voted for a bill requiring handgun buyers to wait seven days between the time they place their orders and pick up their pistols. His vote triggered a mass mailing from the NRA to a number of Sensenbrenner's constituents in Shelbygan. The gist of the letter was that Sensenbrenner had voted "to impose total, strict gun control on all America..."

Conspicuously absent from the letter is any acknowledgment that the NRA itself, up until the mid 1970s, had supported a waiting period for gun buyers.

The seven-day delay that Sensenbrenner approved is called the Brady Amendment, after the White House press secretary who was shot by John Hinckley during Hinckley's attempt to assassinate President Reagan in 1981. If it passes Congress this fall, when it is expected to appear as an amendment to an anti-drug bill, law enforcement officials will get a chance to make sure the buyer is legally entitled to own a handgun. (In most cases felons are forbidden to own guns.) Dealers who violate the provision could be thrown in jail for a year and fined $1,000.

The NRA read much more between the lines: "This bill won't touch criminals or stop crime, but will spend millions and billions of your tax dollars investigating you and other honest citizens while criminals roam free and untouched," the letter to Wisconsin voters said.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates that the bill will cost from $5 million to $10 million and spread over so many local police departments that none will feel a dent in their budgets.

NRA Director Wayne LaPierre told our associate, Stewart Harris, how the NRA came up with the "millions and billions" estimate. He figured each investigation would cost from $10 to $20, and "millions of guns are sold every year."

The NRA knows how to play fast and loose with the facts. The letter notes that "Murder, rape and robbery are not even federal crimes, yet the Brady amendment would make it a federal crime for you to buy a gun without first obtaining government permission."

Murder, rape and robbery are in the federal criminal code. And the Brady amendment punishes only the gun dealers, not the gun buyers.

When confronted with the federal code, LaPierre admitted to us that those crimes were indeed listed, but, he said, only when they occur on federal property, so he believes that part of his letter is true.

Asked about the claim that gun owners will be held accountable under the Brady Amendment, LaPierre said, "I think you can read that letter either way."

The NRA may have gone too far with this letter that can be read either way. Conservatives such as Sensenbrenner who were stung by the letter read it as a cheap shot. Sensenbrenner is now writing some letters of his own urging other members of Congress to support the Brady Amendment.

A similar NRA letter to constituents (led Rep. Herbert Bateman, R-Va., also a gun-ownership supporter.

OPEC oil production on the rise

United Press International

NEW YORK — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' crude oil production, which has risen steadily for most of this year, will increase further in September, a New York-based oil industry publication reported Monday.

Petroleum Intelligence Weekly said data on tanker loadings indicates the United Arab Emirates' output is likely to amount to 1.9 million barrels a day this month, up 235,000 barrels a day from August and nearly a million barrels a day above the UAE's 948,000 barrel-a-day OPEC-mandated production quota.

The 13-nation cartel's overall production rose to 19.5 million barrels a day in August as its members moved to stake claims to larger shares of total output in the wake of the Iran-Iraq ceasefire, PIW said.

In June 12 of OPEC's 13 members agreed to maintain their official production ceiling at 15.06 million barrels a day in an accord that excluded majority member Iraq, which has been pumping around 2.5 million barrels a day.

While the increased output reflected strong demand from refiners, PIW said added, key OPEC producers such as Saudi Arabia and Iran are building stocks at sea.

"The surprising surge in Saudi production this summer to well over its quota indicates the kingdom is building stocks at a rapid rate," the publication said.

Mazda's U.S. plant marks first birthday

United Press International

DETROIT — The sprawling $550 million car assembly plant built by Japanese carmaker Mazda Motor Corp. within the shadow of America's Big Three automakers celebrates its first birthday this month — but not without growing pains.

The task of melding rigid standards that have earned Japan a bulletproof reputation for quality, with unionized American workers — most of whom have never worked inside an auto assembly plant — has not been without problems.

Moreover, blending the high expectations among Japanese managers of unfailing worker obedience with the more relaxed American work ethic has been a monumental undertaking.

The turnover among Mazda's 3,300 "team members" at the Flat Rock plant, about 30 miles southwest of Detroit, has been higher than expected, leading to new hires being put on the job with little experience.

But the carmaker insists the "Mazda Experiment," as some call it, is working and that progress is being made in key areas.

"We are up and going in a year, which is phenomenal considering we've added a second culture and a second model in that time," company spokesman Jim Gill said. "The problems are being resolved, and have not been unexpected."

The 2.7 million-square-foot plant, operated by Mazda Motor Manufacturing Corp. (USA), has indeed come a long way since September 1987, when it started building cars at a rate of 400 a month.

It is now assembling 22,000 cars a month, although production will slow to match the plant's annual capacity of 240,000 cars on two workshifts.

About 70 percent of the plant's output to date has been the hot-selling Probe, a sports coupe powered and built by Mazda but designed and in 25 percent of Mazda. The remaining 40 percent is Mazda's MX6 coupe, which will be joined by the 626 sedan in the fall of 1989, requiring an additional $150 million investment.

"We are now filling the pipeline for Ford, and the mix will eventually be 60 percent Ford and 40 percent Mazda," Gill said.

The last year has also seen Mazda steadily increase its use of North American suppliers for materials and parts — not surprising given the sharp rise in the value of the Japanese yen, which has made it more profitable to source components and build cars here than in Japan.

Currently, Mazda's Flat Rock cars have a 50 percent domestic content level. "We hope to bring that up to 75 percent by the next major model change, which is in 1991," Gill said.

Mazda has had its share of problems on the labor front, despite a three-year contract signed with the United Auto Workers last March which now pays assemblers $10.98 an hour plus a 91 cent-an-hour cost of living adjustment.

But the work is hard and the week is 50 hours long, which has caused some to quit their jobs — something quite rare in Japanese car factories.

Gill concedes there have been problems. "There are those who are not used to working in an auto plant, so the turnover has been a couple percentage points higher than expected. People have found this not to be Nirvana. Some have discovered the work is physically tiring."

That has created a temporary but unexpected worker shortage despite 96,500 job applications that flooded Mazda when it began hiring in February, 1986.

Soviets raise toasts in Kabul

United Press International

KABUL, Afghanistan — The nervous security situation in the Afghan capital can lead to long nights in private residences where Soviet officials, over a few vodkas, unwind about the war.

In private homes and hotel rooms, the city's Soviet residents gather around a remarkable array of foodstuffs and vodka that are inexplicably available in the remote, landlocked city, now peppered with rebel rocket attacks.

Russian caviar, Danish ham and Ukrainian pickles are mainstays, and the fare is washed down with Bulgarian beer and vodka.

One recent night, a visitor gathered with a small group of Kabul's Soviet residents as they tossed back rapid shots of the white firewater with a touching series of toasts.

The first two drinks invoked a clinking of glasses to rather prosaic themes — our mutual hopes that "glasnost" would continue and wishes that all would again soon see absent girlfriends and wives.

But solemnly surrounded the third shot, an obligatory salute to Soviet soldiers killed fighting Moslem rebels during Moscow's bloody eight year war to subjugate the Afghan resistance.

All stood as the tribute was spoken, and in silence downed the vodka.

"After Afghanistan," muttered one pensive Soviet. "I understand that leaving a friend behind is a terrible thing. But the awfullest thing is sitting beside their mothers and wives."

The pensive mood evaporated as quickly as it had descended, however, and the glasses were quickly refilled for a fourth toast.

"And now," said the toastmaster. "We drink so that nobody will ever be able to drink about us — as the subjects of the third shot." The magnitude of the Afghanistan war can be felt at the "hill of martyrs," a vast mound in the center of Kabul topped with the graves of an estimated 20,000 Afghans killed while fighting for the Soviet-backed regime during the past decade of civil strife.

The shallow graves and burial sites are topped with stone mounds and fluttering red and green banners, giving the cemetery the atmosphere of a medieval battlefield.

The air was filled with the sounds of wailing women and elderly men chanting verses from the Koran last week over the steady drone of Soviet transport aircraft spiraling down to land at the Kabul air base. Water and wheat were cast over the graves to purify the resting places of the dead.

"God has only anger for Afghanistan," said Nafes Gul, who from beneath her brown veil told how her two sons-in-law had fallen in combat just since the Soviet troop pullout began in May.

"Everywhere, people are dying," she said.

Many of the humble graves were unmarked, but pictures on numerous tombstones showed the faces of young men snatched in their prime by a fratricidal conflict expected to rage long after the last Kremlin troops depart.

A man at the graveyard entrance offered free food and water to the mourners.

Former president's brother convicted

United Press International

SEOUL, South Korea — The brother of former president Chun Doo Hwan was sentenced to seven years in prison and fined nearly $4.4 million for his conviction today on corruption charges, officials of the Seoul District Court said.

The conviction of the former president's younger brother was the first against Chun's inner circle of family members and associates who are targets of a wide-ranging corruption investigation spearheaded by the opposition-dominated National Assembly.

Chun Kyung Hwan, 46, was arrested March 31, a little more than one month after Chun Doo Hwan stepped down from the presidency. Chun rose to power through a 1979 military coup and placed close associates and relatives in powerful positions.

The younger Chun was appointed head of the Saemaul Undong, a rural development movement. Most of the charges against him stemmed from bribery and corruption committed while he ran the movement.

Chun was convicted of nine counts of bribery, embezzlement and tax evasion. Besides the jail term he was fined $4.38 million and assessed $1.35 million for tax evasion.

"Chun had been engaged in a variety of social welfare businesses like the Saemaul Movement and the Foundation for Cultivation of Korean Leaders," said Judge Park Young mu.

"Nevertheless, he committed many wrongdoings by making use of them. In this regard, he must be given a heavy penalty despite his status as a brother of the former president."

Six others were also convicted today and sentenced to terms ranging from one to two years. Some of the defendants had their sentences suspended.

Besides Chun, the other defendants included Kim Seung-wong, the brother-in-law of Lee Soon-ja, who is the wife of former President Chun.

In closing arguments at his trial Aug. 23, prosecutors asked for a sentence of 15 years in prison, a fine of $2.9 million and a penalty tax of $1.87 million for "Baby Chun," as he is sometimes known.

At that time, Chun said "I didn't know what's going on. All matters concerned with my businesses were carried out by the other staff of the Saemaul Movement Headquarters."

Both the defense and prosecution said they would appeal the sentence to a higher court, according to court officials quoted by the national Yonhap News Agency.

President Roh Tae-woo, a former military ally who helped bring Chun to power, promised to clean up corruption during his campaign for the presidency.

However, the real pressure for investigations against officials of the former regime began after April 26 when three opposition parties won enough seats to dominate the ruling Democratic Justice Party in the one house legislature.

While the three opposition parties have not formed a coalition and are not always ideologically compatible, they have agreed to an aggressive investigation of Chun's regime.

Chun, however, has not yet become a target of direct attack and political analysts wonder about the reaction of powerful military leaders if one of their own came under attack from the opposition.

These questions have been put on hold at least for one month, however, as the ruling and opposition parties agreed to a political truce during the Summer Olympics, which run from Sept. 17 through Oct. 2.

Teachers strike school districts in four states

United Press International

More than 2,500 school teachers were on strike in Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania and Louisiana during the Labor Day weekend, affecting at least 42,000 students in the four states.

No talks to end the walkouts were scheduled for the weekend. Classes in two Illinois districts were to start last week but strikes were under way in the Blue Ridge School District of central Illinois and one is to begin Tuesday in Granite City in southern Illinois.

Blue Ridge officials plan to hold classes Wednesday with substitute teachers and half-day classes. Sixty teachers rejected a school board proposal and walked off the job Aug. 22, one day before classes were to begin for 950 students in six schools.

No new talks were scheduled.

In Southern Illinois, about 450 teachers in the Granite City school district plan to strike Tuesday after rejecting a 4 percent pay increase. Schools have not opened for the year.

Shirley Stoll, president of the Granite City Teachers' Association, said teachers wanted a 10 percent pay increase annually for two years. The district has about 8,300 students and school officials said there would be no attempt to hold classes if teachers strike.

Michigan's second strike of the school year began Friday when 33 teachers walked out of Baraga schools in the Upper Peninsula District, giving a recess to 653 students. A strike by Stockbridge teachers ended its first week Friday, affecting 1,893 students in the central lower Michigan district.

Stockbridge school officials were considering court action or hiring replacement teachers so classes may be conducted. Interim Stockbridge Superintendent Don Pobuda said.

In Pennsylvania, teachers from Spring Ford School District in Montgomery County and Pennridge in Bucks County picketed Friday, raising to six the number of school systems in the state affected by strikes. Classes in the two districts had not begun.

The 208 teachers represented by the Spring Ford Education Association want a shorter salary schedule so teachers can reach top pay sooner, said union president Virginia Nelson.

Representatives of Pennridge's 335 teachers said the members voted to strike after negotiations on salary and other matters broke down Wednesday.

'Where are the buyers,' asks entrepreneur

United Press International

PITTSBURGH — It must have sounded like a good idea at the time — during the Democratic National Convention Atlanta was ringing with choruses of "Where was George?" — so Ken "K.C." Simpson printed 1,000 bumper stickers bearing the motto.

But the 67-year-old entrepreneur has sold virtually none of the stickers seeking to improve the Democrats' fortunes at the expense of Vice President George Bush, and Simpson figures maybe the Party should come to his aid.

"I think the Democratic Party was very remiss in not capitalizing more on 'Where was George?'" Simpson said Sunday. "They haven't followed up on it."

"I just feel that has dropped by the wayside," he complained. "George Bush has supposedly been vice president, but when anybody questioned him about anything, he didn't know anything about it. What more issue do we need?"

The phrase was coined at the Democratic National Convention in July by Sen. Edward Kenedy, D-Mass., who was taunting the Republican presidential nominee for his contention that he was not involved in many key decisions that later embarrassed the Reagan administration.

"I may take a bumper on the whole damn thing," Simpson said. "I guess I would be happy just to break even. I would also like to think there would be some people who would challenge me for a volume discount. I'm talking about the Democrats," he said.

One ship free from polar ice

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — A Coast Guard icebreaker turned its attention from a cruise ship that managed to free itself from arctic ice, and headed for an oil company research vessel that remained trapped near the northernmost point in the United States.

The 236-foot Society Explorer, icebound for four days with 80 crewmembers and 98 passengers who paid up to $19,450 for the cruise, "is in open water and is no longer in need of Coast Guard assistance," Lt. Geoff Merrell of the Rescue Coordination Center in Juneau, Alaska, said Sunday.

The 399-foot icebreaker Polar Star was 80 miles west of the Society Explorer when the ship's crew radioed that they had eased their way through the Beaufort Sea ice north of Alaska and had reached open water.

The Society Explorer called for help Wednesday when strong north winds blew in the arctic pack ice, surrounding the vessel with huge ice floes 15 feet thick as far as he could see, the skipper said.

Chlorine spill forces more from homes

COMMERCE, Calif. — Residents complained of two straight days of evacuations forced by spills of toxic chlorine from a chemical company that had been cited for a similar accident last month.

A crew cleaning up rubble from a fire and spill that on Saturday had routed 20,000 people from their homes in Commerce and neighboring Montebello spilled some of the chemical again, and the resulting cloud forced the brief evacuation of 1,500 people Sunday.

"It's the same thing all over again," said a Los Angeles County Fire dispatcher of Sunday's new spill. "Apparently someone botched up the cleanup."

"We've had enough," Montebello police Lt. Joe Julliano said. "The (county) Health Department will be holding hearings, but our city has been bearing the brunt of these incidents and we'll be holding our own investigation."

West sizzles while East drizzles

The West sizzled in a September heat wave, closing the Los Angeles Zoo and causing an exodus to beaches for relief, while rain spoiled Labor Day across much of the East.

Temperatures were as much as 25 degrees above normal across the West Sunday, and records were reached in 10 cities in California, Montana, Nevada and Washington.

It was 110 degrees in Los Angeles, 109 in Bakersfield and 115 in Redding, Calif. Power use soared to all-time highs, and nearly 1 million people flocked to beaches in Los Angeles County alone, officials said.

"I'm outta here. I can't stand it," said screenwriter Jack Weinstein as he loaded a car outside his West Hollywood home. "I'm going to drive to Santa Barbara, or Laguna, or anywhere."

The California Highway Patrol said highways were jammed and many cars broke down in the heat.

Hostage released after 24 hours

United Press International

ST. LOUIS — A policeman who held a member of the board of police commissioners hostage for more than 24 hours before surrendering says he did it to publicize what he called his "raw deal" conviction for corruption.

"I'm doing this to show the government it can't do this to people. I have insurmountable evidence to prove my innocence," police officer Anthony J. Daniele, 39, said before his arrest Sunday.

"I'm 100 percent innocent. I'm not 80 percent innocent. I'm stupid and unintelligent, but I'm innocent," he told United Press International by telephone.

Daniele, a marksman and member of the police hostage negotiating team, was sentenced to eight years in prison and ordered to pay $200,000 in restitution Friday for his conviction in a scheme involving kickbacks and bribery in the police department pension fund.

Daniele, head of the pension fund, was convicted in June of fraud charges in the conspiracy, which had been uncovered by John J. Frank, vice president of the board of police commissioners.

Saturday, Daniele confronted Frank in his 18th-floor law office, pulled a .38-caliber snub-nosed revolver and told everyone else to leave. Police cordoned off four blocks in downtown St. Louis and decided to wait out Daniele.

He released Frank about 1:45 a.m. Sunday, saying he was afraid Frank had become ill, then gave up the gun about 11 a.m. and surrendered.

Daniele phoned police negotiators about 9 a.m. and said, "I'm tired. Come get me," police Maj. George Hydar said.

Daniele met with his brother, his ex-wife and their son and daughters in the office before he was taken away by police. "He apologized to each and every officer there. He cried and apologized to his family," his lawyer, Donald Wolff, said.

"His relatives, including his brother, talked to him and said it's best to end this," Hydar said. "He told us all along he did not want to hurt anyone, including himself. He just felt he had gotten a raw deal."

Wolff said that he negotiated the ending to the standoff with police.

"There will be no prosecution, state or federal," Wolff said. "He has surrendered himself to federal marshals and will begin serving his sentence in a medical facility immediately."

But FBI agent Julian De-LaRosa said no deal was made. "That is a wrong assumption to make at this time," he said. "The U.S. attorney will decide. Some other charges are possible."

Wolff said Daniele took the hostage in an act of desperation to get his story told. Daniele said he tried to give prosecutors evidence that would exonerate him, but they turned him down.

Thirteen die in weekend small plane crashes

United Press International

Three light plane crashes in two states killed 13 people, including four victims on an excursion at the Grand Canyon in Arizona, during the Labor Day weekend.

Five died in the crash of a twin-engine airplane Saturday in a wooded area near Carthage, about 20 miles from the Louisiana border in east Texas. The wreckage was spotted by a search plane at 8 a.m. Sunday.

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Fort Worth said the plane left Starkville, Miss., shortly before 10 p.m. Saturday en route to Carthage.

The victims were the pilot, Marcus Butler, 62, of Carthage and passengers Billy Don Griffin, 43, Linda Brewster Griffin, 42, and Ann Liston Apple, 48, all of Carthage, and Christina Bell, 14, of Marshall.

The other Texas crash, which took four lives, occurred between 3 p.m. and 4 p.m. Saturday in a desert area about 5 miles north of Horizon City east of El Paso.

Two economic studies, one conclusion

United Press International

WASHINGTON — One grim general conclusion was shared by two studies of the U.S. economy this Labor Day: The American Dream is fading for many people, especially young couples, as the rich get richer and the poor get poorer.

Though President Reagan's administration has accented the nation's 68-month economic expansion, the Economic Policy Institute and the Children's Defense Fund both noted common administration data in their separate conclusions.

The research and advocacy organizations found the situation for young couples particularly tough, with the EPI saying that the average family in 1987 led by someone between age 25 and 34 had an income 9 percent lower than counterparts in 1973 — and the CDF reporting that the poverty rate for young families rose from 12 percent in 1973 to 22 percent in 1986.

Three-fourths of that poverty increase came during the 1980s, according to the CDF report prepared jointly with the Center for Labor Market Studies at Northeastern University in Boston.

"The fact that a much smaller proportion of young families have been able to buy homes (recently) is symbolic of their diminished economic well-being and opportunities," said the EPI study.

"This new poverty reflects the expansion of low-wage jobs, cutbacks in government cash assistance to the poor, the collapse of the purchasing power of the minimum wage and continued race and sex discrimination," it charged.

Despite the liberal leanings of both organizations, the non-partisan numbers they used could provide ammunition for the Democratic presidential campaign of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, who has appealed to those hit by what some analysts call "a rolling depression" in the U.S. economy.

The administration was not bolstered last week when the Census Bureau issued an annual report showing increased inequity in the spread of income across the nation. The bureau found that while 1987 median family income was up 1 percent from 1986 to $30,850, the wealthiest 20 percent of America watched its share increase significantly while the other 80 percent received a thinner slice.

Issues I'LL FIGHT FOR

- Killing all highway tolls, as an enormously expensive way of paying for highway construction bonds!
- Putting the brakes on our runaway state tax increases.
- More severe penalties for pushers and dealers of illegal drugs.
- More anti-drug abuse education by schools, parents, and employers.
- Clean-up of our rivers, lakes, and lagoons.
- No fees to use our public parks and beaches. Support them through sales and tourist tax income.
- No license requirement to fish in salt water rivers and lagoons.
- An option allowing certified low-income retirees to defer ad valorem tax increases, to be repaid with interest when the home is sold or inherited.
- More severe penalties for drunk driving, and legal clarification of the difference between being drunk and driving "under the influence."
- Increased penalties and stepped up enforcement of anti-littering laws.

Educating and motivating residents (through breaks on trash collection fees), to separate hard or polluting trash from their biodegradable garbage.

• Improvement in education through the establishment of objective learning goals based on student readiness, and measured through the use of pre- and post-testing.

Barbara Christensen has always been honest and upfront. Also, she has worked for full public disclosure, even when it concerned herself. Barbara believes that anyone can make a mistake; however, they should never try to cover it up. Honesty is the best policy. Specifically, Barbara has never been afraid to bring something to light if something is wrong.

OPPOSED YANKEE LAKE

Barbara Christensen opposed the purchase of the Yankee Lake sewage treatment plant. The reasons were obvious: no public hearing, no public notice, no appraisals, enormous benefits to special interests, 2:00 A.M. vote, and elimination of the City of Sanford's wastewater plan by Federal grant. Barbara felt that the procedures were both morally and ethically wrong. To be sure, because of the county's action, utility rates in Sanford will unfortunately go up.

WORLD BRIEFS

Shamir denies loosening regulations

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir denied during a Cabinet meeting argument that he supported a proposal that would allow Israeli civilians to fire their weapons at stone-throwing Arab youths.

Shamir, the leader of the right-wing Likud bloc, became embroiled in a loud, emotional argument Sunday over the issue with Energy Minister Moshe Shahal, government sources said.

Shahal, a Labor Party minister, charged the proposed measure would turn Israel into a "wild West." Shamir denied he advocated such a change in policy, the sources said.

Shamir's aides said last week he would seek an easing of regulations that would permit Israeli settlers as well as soldiers to fire in self-defense at Palestinian stone-throwers. Current guidelines allow settlers to shoot only when attacked by protesters using gasoline bombs or firing guns.

Walesa holds talks with government

GDANSK, Poland — Saying "they cheated us in the past," Solidarity leader Lech Walesa warned the government to keep its promise to hold serious talks on reviving the outlawed trade union.

"We cannot allow this chance to be thwarted because this may be the last chance for Poland," Walesa told a crowd of about 5,000 Solidarity supporters Sunday in the Baltic port city of Gdansk in his first speech since helping end a 20-day wave of work stoppages throughout Poland.

The Nobel peace prize winner used his influence to halt the string of strikes by coal miners and shipyard, port and transportation workers in return for a pledge by the Polish government to hold negotiations on reviving Solidarity.

While hinting that if agreement were not reached on Solidarity's revival, strikes would erupt again, Walesa said he was convinced the government would not renege on its promises.

Son-in-law of Brezhnev stands trial

MOSCOW — The son-in-law of former Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev stood trial today along with eight other former policemen on charges of mass bribe-taking that carry possible death sentences.

The trial promises to be a broad indictment of the deceased Soviet leader's era and is the closest yet that scandals of the Brezhnev era have come to inditing the Brezhnev family.

The first four days of the proceedings are open to the press.

Yuri Churbanov's defense lawyer, Andrei Makarov, said last week he will try to keep the trial from passing judgement on Brezhnev's 18 years in power. "It is inadmissible to try and judge Brezhnev under Churbanov's name," he told the official Tass news agency.

Since his death in November 1982, Brezhnev's name has been removed from every area that once bore it and the press refers to his 1964-1982 rule as the "period of stagnation." News accounts also openly mock him for his checkered decorations and awards.

Tutu calls for election boycott

United Press International

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The government sought to secure a text of Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu's speech calling for an illegal boycott of next month's municipal election, but it was unclear if the Nobel laureate would face prosecution.

Tutu and other dissident church leaders in the South African Council of Churches called Sunday for a boycott of the Oct. 26 municipal elections in brazen defiance of security laws and demanded that the government negotiate with jailed black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela on an end to apartheid.

Brig. Leon Mellet, spokesman for the Law and Order Ministry, said efforts were under way to secure a text of Tutu's speech but he declined to say whether the archbishop would face prosecution for calling a boycott, state-run television reported.

In Cape Town, Tutu delivered a strongly worded sermon calling on both black and white voters to boycott the Oct. 26 elections, the first town council polls since bloody rioting swept black townships between 1984 and 1986.

He acknowledged that security laws impose tough penalties for campaigning for a boycott, but said, "I am not defying the government. I am obeying God."

"The government is guilty of intimidation in wanting to force participation, placing heavy penalties for calling for a boycott, which is a non-violent way of expressing our opposition to the evil and injustice of apartheid," Tutu said.

The Rev. Frans Chikane, secretary-general of the SACC, also reaffirmed the call for a boycott of the elections and government negotiations with Mandela on ending apartheid.

Winnie Mandela, the wife of the jailed-for-life black nationalist, endorsed the church leaders' stand that her husband's freedom would be meaningless without such negotiations and appealed for unity among the nation's 26 million black majority against minority rule.

"A friend of mine once said, 'Apartheid is too strong to be fought by a divided nation,'" said Mrs. Mandela, making her first comments since her husband's hospitalization last month for treatment of tuberculosis fueled rumors of his release.

"We would like to emphasize that we should close ranks amongst us," she said. "We look forward to the day when we shall sit at a negotiating table in a climate that will have been made possible by your efforts."

Mrs. Mandela spoke before a crowd of about 300 people, including a number of foreign diplomats, at a gathering publicizing a new biography about her husband's role in the outlawed African National Congress before his incarceration in 1962.

She praised the West German Embassy, which provided a $15,000 grant to finance publication of the biography "Higher Than Hope," for having "stood by us ... through very difficult times."

Police battle youths after Chilean rally

United Press International

SANTIAGO, Chile — The largest anti-government rally in 15 years ended in violence when thousands of stone-throwing demonstrators opposed to Gen. Augusto Pinochet's quest for eight more years in office battled police firing tear gas and water cannon.

Organizers said Sunday's rally was attended by more than 200,000 people, the largest protest since the Sept. 11, 1973, coup that swept Pinochet to power. It was the first massive show of opposition force since Pinochet, 72, was named the sole candidate last week by the ruling junta for an Oct. 5 plebiscite.

A "Yes" vote in the plebiscite will give Pinochet eight more years as president, while a "No" vote would lead to an open election in 1989. The most reliable polls show the vote about even but with a large block of voters undecided or not declared.

Sunday's rally, attended by youths and many middle-age people who brought along children, ended peacefully. But some 15,000 marchers then moved toward the central part of the city, about 3 miles away, where the battles began when some youths refused to disperse from an intersection.

Police using mobile water cannon sprayed streams of water at the protesters, while pickup trucks, known locally as "skunks," spread clouds of tear gas within a block of the presidential palace.

The battles then spread up a main avenue, where the protesters, most of them teenagers who appeared too young to vote, tried unsuccessfully to set fire to a large pro-Pinochet display.

Crowds of young people threw rocks and clumps of dirt at police, then ran when the water cannon and tear gas trucks approached. At one point, a water cannon struck a curb and broke an axle, bringing jeers and a hail of stones from the protesters. They dispersed when threatened with more tear gas.

Police reported nine people, including one policeman, were wounded in the clashes, five of them seriously. They said 262 people were arrested for carrying arms, causing damage to property or "general disorder."

At the peaceful rally — organized by a coalition of union, professional and other groups — thousands of people chanted "He's going to fall" and waved banners urging the ouster of Pinochet.

"All the people of Chile have been witnesses and victims of an implacable dictatorial process that has corroded the fundamental bases of our society," said Hector Moya, a leader of the coalition named "Social Accord for the No."

"We have been the witnesses, as has the world, of the institutional violence, of the permanent trampling of human rights," Moya said.

France lowers presence in Persian Gulf

United Press International

PARIS — In the largest single reduction of Western forces in the Persian Gulf region since the military vessels were ordered in, France announced the return to base of the aircraft carrier Clemenceau and two other ships.

French Defense Minister Pierre Chevènement informed the emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmed Al-Sabah, of the decision during an official visit to the emirate, a Defense Ministry statement said Sunday.

Other nations affected by the decision Saturday were informed later that day.

On a stopover in Guam on his way to China, U.S. Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci implied Monday that the threat in the Persian Gulf, beset by eight years of war between Iran and Iraq, has not ended despite the U.N.-mediated cease-fire that took effect Aug. 20.

He said the withdrawal of the U.S. warship Vincennes, which mistakenly shot down an Iranian civilian airliner, killing 290, in July, should not be taken as a sign that the United States is reducing its influence in the area.

"The Vincennes was specifically committed to the gulf to handle a specific threat — the Silkworm missile," Carlucci said.

David Knickerbocker offers the most in qualifications and foresight for the county commission race in District 1. He has proven himself in the business arena, in community service, in studying the growth issues and in serving on county committees that are related to them.

While Pat Warren's service to some charities and to the League of Women Voters is commendable, her work experience has been chiefly that of a bureaucrat, rather than one who must make policy decisions and live with the results.

Knickerbocker is acutely aware of the benefits and liabilities of growth, having experienced a taste of it in Oviedo and having served on the county land planning agency. He will balance growth with government services.

Outlook recommends voting for David Knickerbocker for the Seminole County Commission, District 1.

Gang members use submachine gun to slay police officer

United Press International

LOS ANGELES — An angry Police Chief Daryl Gates said three gang members "knew who they were shooting at" when they opened fire with a submachine gun on an unmarked car carrying a plainclothes officer who was hit in the face and killed.

Gates, his voice rising and his fist pounding the table, told a news conference Sunday afternoon that even though Officer Daniel Pratt and his partner were in civilian clothes and in an unmarked car, "they (the suspects) knew who they were shooting at."

"It (police force) is a family and when you have a young man like this who is a member of the family and who has a family of his own and who is killed by no-good, miserable sons of bitches who are allowed to roam the streets, it's a tragedy."

Pratt, 30, who had three children and a pregnant wife, was shot Saturday night, police spokesman Cmdr. William Booth said, by gang members in a car that the officers were tailing after a drive-by shooting that left three people wounded.

Three gang members, including a 17-year-old girl identified as the driver of the suspects' car, were arrested Sunday and held on suspicion of murder, Gates said. Another 17-year-old girl was arrested on unspecified charges.

The adults arrested were Anthony Brown, 20, the suspected triggerman and a gang member with a lengthy police record, and Donald Hill, 21, a passenger in the car. Brown was arrested earlier this month on auto theft charges.

Pratt, a six-year veteran, was the second Los Angeles policeman killed on duty this year and the 81st since 1907. Officer James Beyea was killed in North Hollywood investigating a burglary call June 7.

In another weekend gang killing, two gang members who police said were angered that people were sitting at a bus bench in their "territory" beat a woman to death with a baseball bat and a pipe when she did not run away quickly enough.

Carmen Sofia Leon, 32, never regained consciousness after the beating Friday night and she died Saturday night at County-USC Medical Center, Sgt. Richard Roach said.

Gang members Martin Avila,

19, and Carlos Lovos, 21, were arrested on suspicion of murder, Roach said, and Lovos's 15-year-old brother, whose name was withheld, was arrested on suspicion of harboring a fugitive — his brother.

Witnesses told police the elder Lovos and Avila approached a bus bench near the Convention Center southwest of downtown, "saying they were going to run them away because it was in their gang's territory," Roach said.

Three other people waiting at the bus stop fled, but Leon stayed a moment too long and then fell.

"She probably wasn't as streetwise," Roach said. "When they started beating on the bench she got up and ran through traffic, but she was wearing high heels and fell in the street."

Lovos walked into the street and began hitting Leon in the head with a bat, then Avila followed with a pipe, Roach said.

In the fatal shooting of the police officer, Pratt and his partner, Veronica DeLao, heard a radio report of a drive-by shooting in which three people were wounded, Gates said.

Among the wounded was Suzanne Stewart, 29, who was walking by the scene with her laundry. She was in good condition Sunday with gunshot wounds to her legs.

Anthony Simpkins, 17, and Gregory McCoy, both identified as gang members, were also shot in the legs during the drive-by, Gates said.

The plainclothes officers spotted a car matching the description of the drive-by shooting vehicle and began tailing it, Booth said.

The car pulled into a gas station, made a U-turn, and sped past the unmarked car as one of the passengers opened fire with a submachine gun, Gates said.

Pratt, a former Marine Corps sergeant, was wearing a bullet-proof vest, but the shots hit him in the face, Gates said. DeLao was not injured. Both officers managed to fire back at the assailants, but Pratt was dead on arrival at Daniel Freeman Memorial Hospital.

An attendant at the gas station, Jose Cuadrado, said, "I heard a lot of shooting and I hit the ground. I thought it was safe and I looked up and there was more shooting."

Police found the suspects at a house early Sunday.

Wildfires force Montana residents to evacuate

United Press International

Firefighters kept a close watch today on a 45-square-mile "back-burn" they set in hopes of heading off a giant wildfire edging out of Yellowstone National Park toward two Montana towns that were evacuated during the weekend.

"The evacuation went off without a hitch, not that evacuating 100 to 150 people from their homes is easy," Bob Fry, disaster and emergency services coordinator for Park County, Mont., said Sunday after residents of Cooke City and Silver Gate were told to leave their homes.

"The reason we decided to do a back-burn was the forecast is for gusting westerly winds and the fire was going to walk up there on its own and rather than waiting for a fire storm we decided to do it. There have been no problems so far, but with unpredictable winds we are watching it closely."

None of the buildings in Silver Gate and Cooke City, which are 4 miles apart, had burned and none was immediately threatened, but Fry said the residents will not be allowed back for several days.

Wildfires were burning in several Western states, and near Salt Lake City, a 4,000-acre brush fire caused officials to order 80 homes evacuated as a precaution. In Southern California, firefighters labored in gusty winds and sweltering heat that reached 110 degrees Sunday to battle a 1,900-acre brushfire that "exploded and spread incredibly quickly" in Riverside County and caused about $163,000 damage to eight buildings.

In Montana, officials went door-to-door in Cooke City and Silver Gate, at the northeast gateway to Yellowstone, and asked about 300 people to leave the area in anticipation of the burnout and the possibility it might backfire.

A spokeswoman said 35 crews, helped by 57 engines, nine bulldozers, seven helicopters and seven other aircraft were involved in the back-burn and the battle against the blaze.

The tactic was being tried in order to create a fire line to hold back the Storm Creek fire, which was 5 miles away and moving north out of Yellowstone, said national fire center spokesman Don Jackson.

He described a burnout as a controlled fire set within established containment lines.

The 233,700-acre Storm Creek fire was one of a series that have charred nearly 600,000 acres in and around Yellowstone National Park since mid-summer. The other fires remained active but were generally stable.

A 1,900-acre blaze burning in heavy vegetation about 7 miles southeast of Perris in California's Riverside County caused about $163,000 damage to eight homes in a rural subdivision, said California Department of Forestry spokeswoman Joanne Evans.

"It just exploded and spread incredibly quickly," Evans said. "It's more than 100 degrees out there, so we have to watch out for heat exhaustion ... and try to protect homes and the people who live in the area."

Near San Juan Capistrano, a 2,200-acre brush fire raged out of control in 103 degree heat Sunday along the Ortega Highway. Officials said the fire started when arcing powerlines set a tree ablaze.

Firefighters said a funnel cloud was visible near the fire, a swirling effect apparently caused by the rising heat coming in contact with the cooler ocean breeze.

In San Diego, smoke from a 500-acre brush fire and temperatures above 100 degrees probably were to blame for a mysterious outbreak of nausea and coughing that sent 119 Naval Training Center recruits to the hospital Saturday. All but two were released by Sunday.

Firefighters in northeastern Oregon, meanwhile, waited for the state's largest blaze of the year to reach containment lines they dug last week.

U.S. Forest Service spokesman Don Bilyeu said those lines were designed to hold the lightning-caused blaze at 59,000 acres. He expected official containment to be declared late today.

In Washington, a high-elevation forest fire that jumped Highway 20 forcing closure of Sherman Pass crept northward Sunday toward the town of Republic as firefighters tried to keep the flames from reaching high-voltage power lines in the Colville National Forest.

West gets a close look at Soviet aircraft

United Press International

FARNBOROUGH, England — Western aviation enthusiasts got their first close look at the Soviet MIG-29 jetfighter during the Farnborough air show, where safety was a major concern following the air disaster last week in West Germany.

While organizers say the estimated 700 companies participating in the 40th annual exposition make it one of the best in the West, safety precautions were tightened after the tragedy in Ramstein, West Germany, where 51 people died when a flaming plane plunged into spectators in the worst air show disaster.

"To compare to what happened at Ramstein a week ago, we would not contemplate or permit a crossover maneuver with a third aircraft flying at a right angle ... toward the crowd," said Dan Honley, spokesman for the show. "That certainly would be against our regulations."

Farnborough International '88, sponsored by the Society of British Aerospace Companies, opens to potential buyers today and to the public Thursday. After the last show, exhibitors said they took orders for their products totaling well over $1.7 billion.

Most of Sunday's flights appeared to go picture perfect. The only flaw came when a Soviet Antonov An-124, the world's largest cargo carrier, encountered engine problems and shut down before taking off.

A flight by an F-16 jetfighter from the United States' General Dynamics was followed by a flight of what has become one of the stars of Farnborough — a Soviet MIG-29.

The twin-engine fighter was deployed in 1985 and resembles the F-15 jetfighter used by the U.S. Air Force.

Honley said the two MIG-29s at Farnborough were one of the highlights of the show and offered aviation enthusiasts with their first close look at one of the finest fighters in the Soviet military.

The Soviet MIGs' participation in the show reflected Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or openness, as well as Moscow's interest in finding more buyers for the sophisticated war plane.

The Warsaw Pact allies were not the first export customers for the MIG Fulcrum. India, Iraq and Syria all took delivery of MIG-29s in 1987, while the first Yugoslav air force squadron was operational by May of this year.

The Soviets need to export their manufacturing, Honley said. "They do need to earn hard currency in foreign markets and the MIG-29 is aimed at, I would think, the Middle East and Third World countries."

The heightened safety regulations brought on by Ramstein were imposed Sunday at Dinar and Roanne, France, where about 32,000 people two air shows.

The aircraft in the French shows flew at minimum altitudes of 500 feet instead of the regulation 330 feet, and the Patrouille de France (Patrol of France) air force stunt team modified its program at Dinar to eliminate more risky crossover maneuvers.

Honley said the safety regulations at Farnborough were last modified in 1986 and in-flight precautions have been constantly reviewed since the shows began in 1948.

All maneuvers conducted at Farnborough must be "fail-safe," which means pilots are required to fly parallel to or away from the crowd, he said.

"We do limit the pilots quite stringently here. They can only fly no lower than 100 feet if they have their wings level, straight and parallel to the crowd," he said.

Candidates begin stretch run for the White House

United Press International

With fresh polls confirming a close race and a disaffected electorate, Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis followed tradition in setting up Labor Day as the start of the autumn presidential campaign.

The vice president and the Massachusetts governor each arranged an ambitious day on the stump, with Bush flying to the key electoral state of California and Dukakis bound for strongholds in Philadelphia, Detroit and St. Louis.

Both also encouraged their running mates to seize the holiday opportunity, so Sens. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., and Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, were expected in cities from New York to Atlanta to Washington, D.C.

Dukakis told reporters before the weekend that the campaign was entering "the bang phase," in which the would-be White House occupants could be counted on to escalate their criticism of each other. Political observers said such an approach would amount to a bid to blunt Bush's apparent momentum, which has brought him from a double-digit deficit in the polls to just about even.

Indeed, a Time magazine survey published Sunday found Bush ahead of Dukakis 47 percent to 42 percent among 1,474 registered voters and 1,103 likely voters questioned Monday and Tuesday of last week. But the poll carried an error margin of 3 percentage points.

and Time said the Republican's lead hardly seemed secure: one-fifth of those supporting each ticket said they might change their minds before Election Day, and many voters said they still know too little about what kind of president either would be.

Asked if they knew "a lot of things, some things or not much at all" about the nominees, Time said a full 50 percent knew "not much" about Dukakis and, despite Bush's long career in public office, 29 percent complained that they know little about him as potential chief executive.

Moreover, the magazine found an electorate dissatisfied with the "pit-bull negativism" of recent weeks, with 49 percent saying Bush avoids real issues vs. 43 percent who credit him with talking substance. The ratio for Dukakis was only slightly better, 41 percent to 44 percent, according to the poll.

"So long as they avoid the serious issues, neither candidate will inspire much deep conviction," Time remarked, a judgment shared by many analysts.

Still, the change in campaign momentum also turned up Sunday in the release by The Des Moines Register of the latest Iowa Poll, which showed a sharp drop in statewide support for Dukakis.

Among likely Iowa voters surveyed Aug. 23 through Wednesday, Dukakis was the first choice of 47 percent compared with 42 percent for Bush. In a poll issued June 19, Dukakis had 60 percent support compared with Bush's 28 percent.

Both men took Sunday off from the campaign trail, with Dukakis in Boston and Bush in the nation's capital, but surrogates and partisans remained active.

In a television interview on NBC's "Meet the Press," outgoing Education Secretary William Bennett indicated the accent on rhetoric rather than real issues might continue for some time, as he charged that Dukakis revealed a "disdain" for basic patriotism by vetoing Pledge of Allegiance legislation.

Experts: Pledge of allegiance not a campaign issue

United Press International

NEW YORK — Some experts in education and law say requiring students to recite the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag should not be an issue in this year's presidential campaign since the Supreme Court ruled it unconstitutional 45 years ago.

Some 40 million public school students and their 2.3 million teachers starting the new school year this week will recite the Pledge of Allegiance voluntarily and without incident, but a very few will not, for religious or other reasons.

The National School Boards Association says no one should make the Pledge mandatory in schools, as the Supreme Court of the United States in 1943 held, declaring it unconstitutional for government at any level to require anyone to say the pledge.

As the 1988-89 academic year opened, United Press International asked the association's executive director, Thomas Shannon, and other authorities to comment on the Pledge of Allegiance dispute between presidential nominees George Bush, the Republican candidate, and Democrat Michael Dukakis.

The issue became prominent in the campaign after Bush criticized Dukakis for a 1977 veto of a bill requiring Massachusetts school teachers to lead students in the Pledge of Allegiance each day.

Dukakis said he vetoed the bill after the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court and state attorney general advised him it was unconstitutional.

Outgoing Education Secretary

William Bennett, appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," said Sunday that Dukakis showed "disdain" for basic patriotism by vetoing the Pledge bill. Bennett said the Pledge is an appropriate classroom activity because it is the "ABCs of civics."

Shannon, who also is a lawyer, said of the Pledge dispute: "This is the great non-issue of the presidential campaign. We think the preponderant majority of teachers and students see the Pledge of Allegiance as a beneficial, unifying exercise. And they do it willingly and enthusiastically."

"Universally, it is a general practice across the country, in grade and high schools," Shannon said. "We think of a Pledge of Allegiance as a positive thing. It is a public expression of commitment to the United States as a nation and as a free society."

"One of the attributes of a free society is that no one should be required to make declarations of fealty," Shannon said. "It is voluntary. So we don't advocate requiring people who don't want to make declarations to make them."

"There is a minuscule minority of Americans who feel that way," he said. "We respect their right to feel that way. In less than two-dollar words, the statement of the law is that they need not be required to pledge to the flag."

The association also does not support mandatory school prayer in public schools. "It is illegal," Shannon said. "We do not support any state-sponsored mandatory prayer. We think it is unconstitutional."

Another authority, Robert L. Maddox, a Baptist minister and executive director of Americans United for Separation of Church and State, declared in a statement on the Pledge dispute in the presidential campaign, "The pledge to the flag speaks of a nation that provides liberty and justice for all."

"In 1943, the Supreme Court rightly ruled that to compel any citizen to recite the pledge violates the very freedoms those words guarantee. I certainly believe in the Pledge of Allegiance, but for it to mean anything it must be backed by solid action. The court's action guarantees freedom of conscience to all Americans, especially those who may espouse views seen as unpopular by the majority."

"Public officials have an obligation to uphold religious freedom and the court decisions designed to protect it. It is very unfortunate that such a sensitive religious liberty issue had become a political football in the presidential campaign," Maddox said.

The case the U.S. Supreme Court ruled on in 1943 was West Virginia State Board of Education vs. Barnette. The case was brought before the nation's highest court by a group of Jehovah's Witnesses, whose members do not believe in saluting flags or participating in civil government.

The Jehovah's Witnesses cited a passage from Exodus 20:4-5, which forbids the production of graven images or idols.

Elliott wins Southern 500

DARLINGTON, S.C. — With just under 40 laps remaining in the Southern 500, the leaders pitted for tires and fuel and winner Bill Elliott cited that final stop as his key to victory.

"I beat Dale (Earnhardt) and Rusty (Wallace) out and I was able to get away from them," Elliott said Sunday after his second Southern 500 victory at the 1.366-mile Darlington Raceway. "Rusty was the last car (of the three) so he had to work Dale and then he had to catch me."

"Rusty was better than Dale today. I felt it was to my advantage to have Dale behind me and then Rusty because I knew if they got to running together, that would hold them up and Rusty would have to run harder to catch me."

Green takes 3-shot lead

OAKVILLE, Ontario — Ken Green plans on making Monday's conclusion to the $750,000 Canadian Open as boring as possible.

"I like excitement, but I'd just as soon walk away with it," said Green, who holds a three-stroke lead with seven holes to play when the final round concludes Monday. Electrical storms forced postponement of the conclusion Sunday.

"You'll either see an interesting, or hopefully a boring tournament," Green said.

Green led the event at 15-under par, three better than Larry Rinker when rain and lightning forced a postponement at about 4:00 p.m. The rain stopped 90 minutes later, but that wasn't enough time to remove the accumulated water from the 12th, 13th and 15th greens.

The 22 players who were on the course at the start of the delay will complete their final rounds Monday, while the scores of the 49 players who finished will stand.

Gallagher runs personal best

LOS ANGELES — Kim Gallagher, running on a sizzling track without a pace setter, tuned up for Seoul with a personal best effort in the 1,500 meters Saturday during a pre-Olympic meet at UCLA's Drake Stadium.

Gallagher, who will compete for the United States in the 800 and 1,500 at the Summer Games in South Korea, ran the longer distance in 4 minutes, 3.29 seconds to better her previous best of 4:05.41 despite temperature reaching 100 degrees.

Other winners of the meet billed as "Gold Rush '88" included U.S. Olympians Steve Scott in the 1,500; Gail Devers-Roberts in the 100 meters and 100-meter hurdles; Henry Marsh in a shortened steeplechase; and relay member Mike Marsh in the 100 and 200 meters.

Tyson injured in car crash

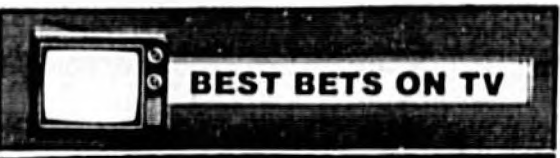

NEW YORK — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson suffered a head and chest injury when his car crashed on a rain-slicked road near his upstate training camp Sunday. He was hospitalized overnight for observation, officials said.

Dr. Carolyn Britton, a neurologist at The Presbyterian Hospital at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, issued a statement Sunday night saying, "Mr. Tyson sustained minor injuries to his head and chest wall. He is in stable condition and was admitted for observation and diagnostic tests. He is asymptomatic and neurologically normal."

Hospital spokeswoman Janet Davitt said Tyson would be held overnight and was in stable condition.

The 22-year-old champion was moved to New York from Columbia-Greene Medical Center in Catskill, about 20 miles south of Albany. The boxer's wife, actress Robin Givens, and mother-in-law Ruth Roper requested the transfer, according to the fighter's manager, Bill Cayton.

Eagles embarrass Bucs

United Press International

TAMPA — Anyone playing defense against Randall Cunningham should ask for overtime pay.

Philadelphia's exciting fourth-year quarterback proved again Sunday why he's one of the most improved players in the NFL. Exerting tremendous pressure against an inexperienced Tampa Bay defense, Cunningham sparked the Eagles to a 41-14 triumph, leading six scoring drives in seven first-half possessions before earning a seat on the bench.

Cunningham hit on 7 of 12 passes for 158 yards, continually frustrating the Buccaneers with his mobility and ability to throw on the run. The former Nevada-Las Vegas standout also rushed for 21 yards before yielding to Matt Cavanaugh after two periods. Cunningham has now thrown at least one TD pass in 13 consecutive games.

The Eagle defense intercepted Vinny Testaverde five times in a season-opening rout that had Coach Buddy Ryan feeling schizophrenic.

A terrible feeling of embarrassment and rejection.

— Vinny Testaverde

"It was the greatest first half of football that I've ever been associated with," said Ryan, "but it was the sorriest second half I've ever seen. Cunningham did it all, but we could have given out 100 game balls."

Former Buccaneer tackle Ron Heller, who labored through four miserable seasons here since being drafted out of Penn State in 1984, was traded to Seattle and then Philadelphia this summer. He started Sunday and enjoyed the view from the visitor's bench.

"It was weird seeing something bad happen to the Bucs and be glad for it," Heller said. "I have nothing personally against Tampa Bay, but one thing I noticed about the Eagles is they have a tight-knit group. Not that the Bucs have a negative attitude, but there's a lot of self-doubt over there. I came out of this game in the third quarter although I felt fine. That's a good feeling ... a strange feeling."

The Buccaneers have lost nine straight regular-season games dating back to the mid-point of the 1987 season and have dropped 64 of their last 80 games since 1983. The Eagles, 7-8 a year ago, won their first opener since '83 and capitalized on critical Buccaneer mistakes. Many in the crowd of 43,502 booed Testaverde before the first quarter was even completed.

"I don't think we're as bad as all the embarrassment that was shown today," said Tampa Bay Coach Ray Perkins. "I think the Eagles are a good football team — I question whether they are great. Today we just didn't exhibit the type of play that even gives us the right to call ourselves a football team."

Brantley hopes high for 1988

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

ALTAMONTE — Lake Brantley's girls and boys cross country teams will be heading into the 1988 cross country season with a new look, but an old commitment.

The Lady Patriots are currently ranked as Florida's second best class 4A team and should they pull together at the right time they could very easily make a run at the state title.

Lake Brantley, though, has down played the ranking and has its sights set on just making the state meet, something it has not done for three years, then concentrate on the rankings.

"I'm not real sure how accurate the rankings are at this point," Lake Brantley coach Charlie Harris said. "We haven't made it to the state meet in three years and that's our main concern, we have the front runners this year, our concern is our depth."

Brantley has one the finest one-two punches in the Central Florida area in senior captain Heather Camino and sophomore sensation Joyce Tullis. Camino placed in both the mile and two mile at last year's state track meet while Tullis qualified and ran in both events. Tullis also competed in the National Junior Olympics over the summer and turned in a fine performance of 11:36 for 3,000 meters.

"Both Heather (Camino) and Joyce (Tullis) have been working hard," Harris said. "It's hard to say which one will lead us, they both work very hard and are very equal in their talents."

Backing Tullis and Camino will be sophomore Amy Ginnette who turned in an impressive track season for the Lady Patriots last year. Chelsey Trotter will also be

Raiders trade for Schroeder

The Washington Redskins and Los Angeles Raiders both solved festering problems today with a deal that sent disgruntled quarterback Jay Schroeder from the Super Bowl champions to the Raiders in exchange for Pro Bowl tackle Jim Lachey and future draft picks.

The trade was announced early this morning by Washington General Manager Bobby Beathard after bargaining throughout Sunday with Raiders Managing General Partner Al Davis.

The acquisition of Schroeder apparently solves the Raiders' quarterback dilemma, as Los Angeles — entering the season with untested Steve Beuerlein — sought to return to the playoffs for the first time since 1985.

Schroeder, a 1986 Pro Bowl selection who expressed his unwillingness to sit on the bench behind starter Doug Williams, had fallen out of grace with Coach Joe Gibbs after repeatedly demanding to be traded this summer. Lachey, acquired just last month by the Raiders from San Diego, provided the Redskins with a versatile and massive offensive lineman to add to an already excellent line.

Graf rolls — Wilander tops Pernfors

United Press International

NEW YORK — A rather bored Steffi Graf closed within four victories of completing the Grand Slam Saturday when she toyed with another outclassed opponent for her 31st consecutive triumph.

Graf, still improving on the game that has no equal, required 45 minutes to dispose of Nathalie Herremen, 6-0, 6-1, to gain the fourth round of the U.S. Open.

The 19-year-old West German has covered four games in three matches, running her record for 1988 to 57-2.

"Surely, I want to have a tougher match, that is definite," Graf said. "I just keep hoping that the next one will be tougher."

All play on Sunday in the U.S. Open was suspended because of rain.

In the round of 16, Graf will play Patty Fendick, a 6-7 (4-7), 6-3, 7-5 upset winner over 15th seed Sylvia Hanika, who is Graf's Olympic teammate.

Six-time women's champion Chris Evert reached the fourth round for the 18th year in a row, beating Michelle Torres, 6-3, 6-3.

"I played better in the first two matches," said Evert, charged with 35 unforced errors. "Today I was sluggish. I can't win the tournament playing the way I played today."

Second seed Mats Wilander and No. 3 Stefan Edberg, who between them have captured the first three legs of the Grand Slam, both reached the fourth round with straight sets victories against fellow Swedes.

Wilander, playing close friend Mikael Pernfors for the first time, registered a 6-4, 6-0, 7-5 victory, and in a night match Edberg beat Johan Carlsson, 6-0, 7-5, 6-2. Carlsson, ranked No. 238, managed merely seven points in the opening set, two of them on his serve.

Four more seeded players in addition to Hanika were eliminated on another sunny afternoon at Flushing Meadow, bringing the number of fallen seeds to 14 for three rounds. The latest victims included 1986 finalist Miloslav Mecir and American Lori McNeil, who took Graf to three sets before losing in the 1987 semifinals.

Mecir fell to Spaniard Emilio Sanchez, 6-3, 3-6, 7-6 (7-3), 6-1, and McNeil, the ninth seed, was upset by Austrian Judith Wiesner, 7-6 (7-3), 3-6, 6-4. Wiesner next plays Evert.

Prep season set to start

The 1988 prep athletic season begins this week with action in volleyball, cross country, football and swimming.

In volleyball, Seminole High plays at Deltona on Tuesday afternoon (JV 4:30, varsity 5:30) in the first ever sporting event for the new Deltona High School. Also this week, boys varsity volleyball makes its debut when DeLand plays at Lake Mary and Lyman at Oviedo on Wednesday (both matches begin at 5 p.m.).

The cross country season begins Thursday afternoon as the Astronaut Invitational will be held at Dunn Airport in Titusville. Also Thursday, Deltona High has its first football game as it hosts the Mainland JV at Spec. Martin Stadium in DeLand.

Seminole County football teams begin their season with a full slate of games on Friday night.

The swimming season begins Saturday with the Dr. Phillips Relays at the Justus Center.

Miami still reigns

United Press International

The Miami Hurricanes showed they will be a tough team to overtake as national champion Saturday, opening the defense of their title with a 31-0 victory over top-ranked Florida State.

The triumph by 10th-ranked Miami will quickly send the national rankings into a scramble. Third-rated Nebraska and No. 4 Clemson built massive halftime leads Saturday en route to crushing victories on the college football season's first full weekend. No. 2 Oklahoma was idle.

"It's too early to worry about the rankings," Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson said.

It wasn't too early for Johnson's Hurricanes to look like an elite team. At Miami, Steve Walsh threw two touchdown passes and Miami forced six turnovers and shut down Florida State's heralded offensive attack.

Miami, which lost 13 starters and both kickers from last year's 12-0 team, intercepted five passes and recovered one of three Florida State fumbles.

Miami garnered its 33rd straight regular-season victory. The Hurricanes are 6-0 in the 1980s against top-ranked teams. Miami has beaten Florida State four consecutive games.

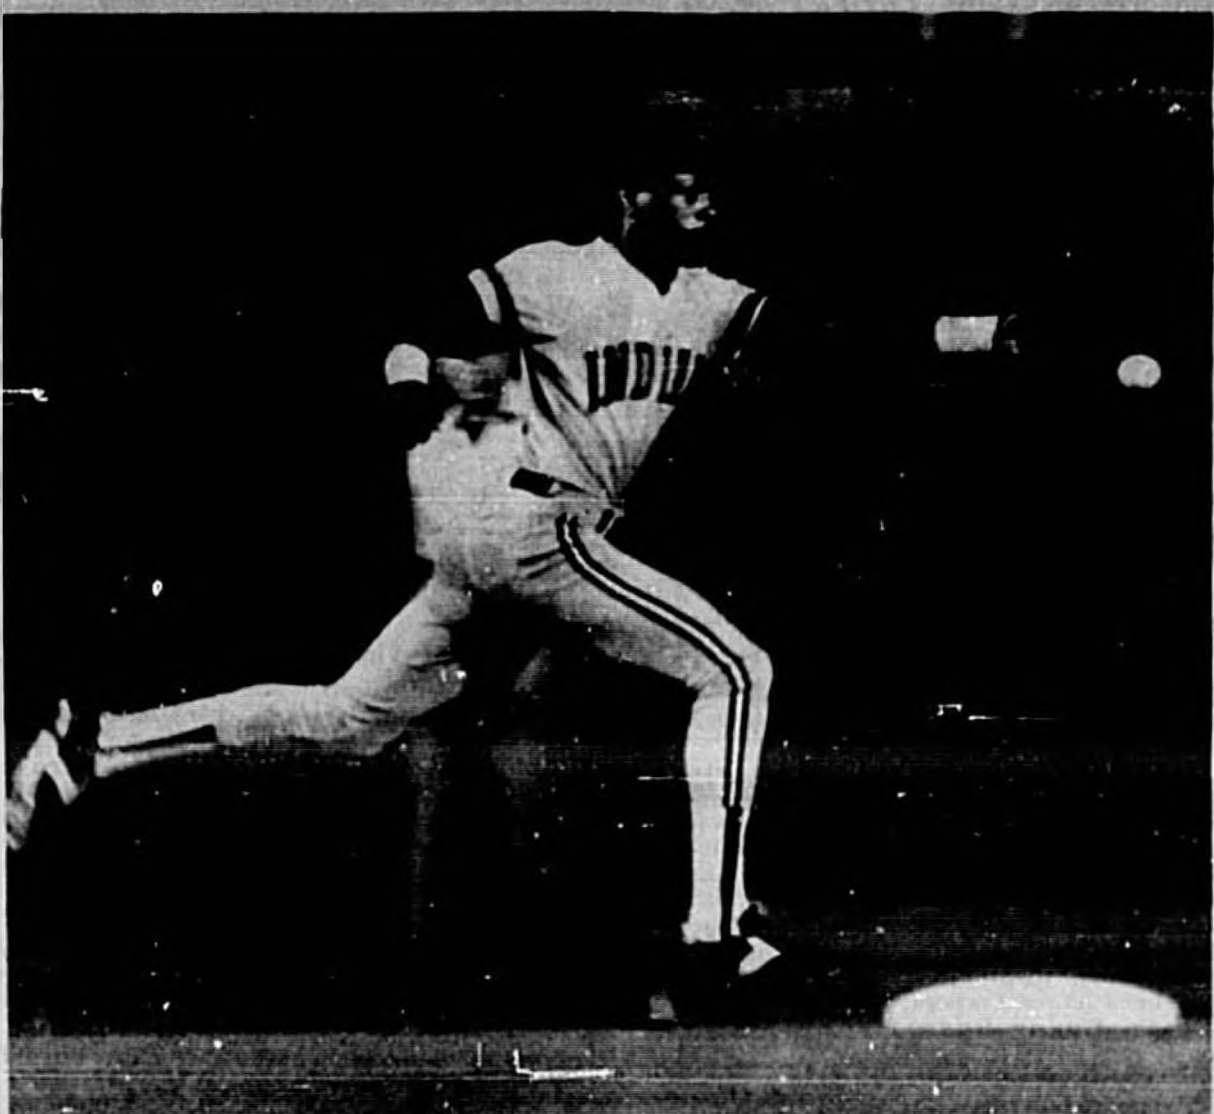

The Hurricanes completely dominated the game, holding Heisman Trophy hopeful Sammie Smith to 6 yards on 10 carries and chasing starting quarterback Chip Ferguson from the game in the third quarter.

Ferguson completed 10 of 16 passes for 121 yards with two interceptions before leaving in favor of Peter Tom Willis. Walsh completed 18 of 37 passes for 235 yards.

Miami scored on a 30-yard Carlos Huerta field goal. Walsh passes of 19 yards to Rob Chudzinski and 5 yards to Leonard Conley.

Julie Franco goes up the middle to field a Chicago White Sox on Sunday. Cleveland split a doubleheader with the

AL East wide open

United Press International

All of a sudden, the American League East pennant race is wide open. The next thing you know, the Indians will move into contention.

Going into Labor Day, the traditional starting point for the pennant drive, 6 1/2 games separate the top five teams in the AL East. Had Cleveland not blown the second game of its double-header, the Indians would have been within eight games.

The Boston Red Sox beat California 6-5 on Larry Parrish's 10th inning homer and moved into a tie for first with the Tigers, but Milwaukee and Toronto emerged from the weekend as viable candidates to win the division.

The Brewers completed a four-game sweep Sunday at Detroit by defeating the Tigers 6-1. Milwaukee, which tied New York for third place, is four games behind the leaders.

"Our concern is still that we've played so many more games than anybody else," Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "If with those games in hand the other teams lose, we're all right. But if they split them, we've still got problems."

"I think it's going to take 90 games to win. We've played 4-6 games more than the other teams. If Boston or Detroit gets very, very hot then we're in trouble."

The Brewers have completed their intra-divisional schedule for the season and will play AL West clubs over the final month. Milwaukee is 36-26 against AL West competition.

"People talk about the West like it will be easy or something," Trebelhorn said. "That's ridiculous. Right now I'd like to have not played more games in Boston or New York — because we did and we lost them."

Toronto, which a month ago was trying to salvage a lost season, moved to within 6 1/2 games when George Bell hit a grand slam with one out in the ninth inning to rally the Blue Jays to a 9-7 triumph over the Texas Rangers and a sweep of their four-game series.

"George is really starting to swing the bat," Toronto pitcher John Cerutti said. "He carried us last season and we'll need his hot bat if we expect to make a move."

The Tigers and the Red Sox have been struggling recently and injuries could hurt their chances down the stretch. Detroit, which has lost 11 of 13 games, has pitchers Jeff Robinson, Frank Tanana and Doyle Alexander and infielders Alan Trammell and Lou Whitaker hurt.

Roger Clemens is pitching, but he's not 100 percent, and that could spell trouble for the Red Sox.

"I still have a problem with a flareup in the shoulder," Clemens said. "It's going to be hard work, but this is no time for me to miss a bunch of starts."

The Yankees, the other team in the pack, have been horrendous the last month and unless their pitching picks up, they could conceivably finish fifth or sixth. New York, however, could pick up some ground because it has seven games remaining against Detroit and four against Boston.

"I'm not trying to be funny, but we just don't have enough guys getting them out," New York pitching coach said after Oakland trounced the Yankees 11-2. "It seems like everybody we send out there has not been able to hold 'em."

The Yankees wrapped up a 2-8 road trip in which they were outscored 63-18. At one point, they had surrendered 32 unanswered runs over 26 innings. In the last 26 games, New York pitchers have a 6.55 ERA. Opponents have picked up at least 10 hits in 18 of those 26 games.

The Indians, who are nine games out, split its double-header with Chicago. Harold Baines tripled home the go-ahead run to highlight a four-run ninth inning, rallying the White Sox to a 5-2 victory in the nightcap. Dave Clark hit a bases-empty home run with one out in the ninth of the opener to boost Cleveland to a 3-2 triumph.

Orioles 6, Mariners 4
At Seattle, Billy Ripken and Joe Orsulak each hit a two-run homer to power Baltimore.

Royals 3, Twins 2
At Minneapolis, reliever Israel Sanchez retired 13 straight batters and George Brett hit a tie-breaking double in the fifth inning to pace Kansas City.

Reds' Jackson gets 20th win

United Press International

On a day rain washed away half the National League schedule, Danny Jackson continued to shine bright.

Jackson hurled a six-hitter to become the NL's first 20-game winner and banded out four of the Cincinnati Red's 18 hits Sunday in a 17-0 pelting of the Chicago Cubs.

Jackson endured a 9-18 record and a 4.02 earned run average with Kansas City last season. The left-hander, traded in the offseason, stands 20-6 with a 2.49 ERA.

"They score me a lot of runs," said Jackson of his teammates.

That may account for the wins, but not the league's fifth-best ERA.

"You have to pitch well, have good defense behind you, get runs scored and have a few breaks. I've had all that this year," he said.

And Jackson had it all Sunday at Wrigley Field, throwing his sixth shutout and 13th complete game, and going 4 for 5 with four runs scored and one batted in.

The Cy Young Award candidate became the NL's first 20-game winner since Los Angeles' Fernando Valenzuela and San Francisco's Mike Krukow in 1986.

"I expected it (some year)," Jackson said. "I knew I had the talent."

Jackson's counterparts Sunday were Calvin Schiraldi (8-10, eight runs in 4 1/3 innings), Frank DiPino (five runs in 3 2/3) and Mike Capel (three runs in one).

Cincinnati was quite efficient against the trio, converting 18 hits and six walks into 17 runs, all in two hours and 39 minutes in an age when three-hour games are the norm even for low-scoring contests.

"I thought we would outscore the (Cincinnati) Bengals but they had four more," Reds Manager Pete Rose said. "But we both won. That's what counts."

The Bengals defeated the Phoenix Cardinals 21-14 Sunday in their NFL opener.

The Reds won their season-high fifth straight to move within 6 1/2 games of the front-running Los Angeles Dodgers in the West.

Cincinnati tallied four runs in the third, nine in the fifth and four in the ninth.

"We haven't had many of these," Chicago Manager Don Zimmer said. "When you're down 4-0 or 5-0 you still think you have a chance. Then..."

At Montreal, Andres Galarraga stroked a two-run double in a three-run fourth off Rick Reuschel, 17-8, helping Montreal win its fourth straight and complete a three-game sweep of San Francisco. Brian Holman, 3-6, started in place of injured Dennis Martinez.

Astros 4, Cardinals 3
At Houston, Kevin Bass hit a two-run homer and Billy Hatcher added two RBI off Greg Mathews, 3-5, helping Houston move with five games of first-place Los Angeles in the West. Astro Bob Kuepper, 13-4, returned after missing three starts with a strained groin.

A's continue to roll

OAKLAND — Oakland's 11-2 victory over the New York Yankees Sunday gave the Athletics an 86-51 record, the best in the major leagues.

With the victory, the Athletics reduced their magic number to 17 and extended their lead over the Minnesota Twins to 9 1/2 games in the American League West and became the first Oakland team since 1971 to go 35 games over .500.

The A's won three consecutive world championships from 1972-74, but none of those teams finished higher than 26 games over .500. The 1971 Oakland team posted a 101-60 record but lost the AL playoff series to Baltimore in three straight games.

The 1988 A's are on pace to finish 102-60.

The San Francisco Giants, struggling to stay in contention in the NL West, will have four newcomers for Tuesday's game against Montreal.

from Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League.

The four will remain with Phoenix for the PCL season finale on Monday. The Giants have made 77 transactions this year.

Pascual Perez doesn't have many hits but he runs the bases quite often.

The Expos right-hander delivered his first hit of the season Saturday night, coming in his 43rd at bat. Perez is 1 for 58 since last Sept. 7.

Perez, however, is the team's key pinch runner. He has made 14 appearances, scored six runs and been caught stealing once.

Bad as Detroit's problems are, they are likely to get no better against the two left-handers Toronto will throw in the first two games of their upcoming series.

The Tigers started a lineup against southpaw Ted Higuera Sunday that was batting .205 since the All-Star break.

Chet Lemon's sacrifice fly in the ninth was his third RBI since the All-Star break. Ray Knight is 3-35; Larry Herndon is 4-42; Gary Pettis is 19-116.

running this season along with newcomer Pam Powers, a freshman who did a little running at Rock Lake Middle School. Carrie Larson and Daniel Kilens will added depth for Brantley this season.

The boys will have a new look this coming season as the Patriots could have one of their strongest teams in some time. With the aid of two transfers and a good crop of young runners, Harris is hoping his team can stay healthy and run competitively throughout the season.

"We have a real solid group this year," Harris said. "Darrin Tugman has been our leader and he's been impressive so far in practice."

Tugman, a junior, has been one of Brantley's top distance runners since entering the school as a freshman. Tugman has also shown he can run up front as he has strong competition from within the county.

"If he (Tugman) stays healthy he'll have a great year," Harris said. "He has a few injuries slow him down in the past and we're hoping he's over them."

Backing Tugman will be another junior Matt Jewell, a transfer from Colorado. Jewell has been pushing Tugman in practice so far and promises to be a tough competitor.

Senior Ron Gordon is returning for his fourth season on the Patriot cross country team and is looked upon as the team leader. Gordon will solidify the Lake Brantley attack with his experience.

"Ron (Gordon) will have to be our leader," Harris said. "This is a young team and he's the only one whose been around for four years."

Two more sophomores will round out the top five runners as both Craig Streetman and John Feloe have looked good in the early going. Rounding out the varsity should be Pat Eason, an all-around athlete that scored 4,900 points in the decathlon. Andy Ogilvie and Jason Hobbs are staging a battle for the final spot on the varsity roster and have been pushing each other hard in practice.

"This group works hard and they are very dedicated," Harris said. "They have quite a bit of talent and if they continue to improve they will be very successful."

Improved Lions rip Falcons, 31-17

United Press International

PONTIAC, Mich. — Victories have been few and far between for the Detroit Lions, but they're not letting themselves get carried away by the euphoria of their first 1988 triumph.

"The only thing we're happy about is having a 'W' that counts," said Detroit coach Darryl Rogers Sunday after the Lions beat the Atlanta Falcons 31-17 in their regular-season opener.

"This is much better than winning four pre-season games and losing the opener, but we have to keep in mind this is one victory in a 16-game season — nothing more," Rogers insisted.

"Nobody's good or bad until they've played a number of games," added Rogers, whose team was 0-4 during the pre-season.

Just as Rogers wasn't getting too excited about Detroit's victory, Atlanta coach Marion Campbell wasn't ready to throw in the towel after losing.

"We started well, moved the ball, stopped them ... but the turnovers killed us," Campbell said. "I don't care how well you play, you can't win with four turnovers."

"We're not going to let this bog us down," he continued. "We're gonna keep moving forward."

The Lions got strong performances from quarterback Chuck Long, who completed 13 of 19 passes for 107 yards and two touchdowns, and running backs Garry James and Tony Paige. James had 96 yards in 24 carries and Paige, filling in for the injured James Jones, had 42 in nine attempts and also caught five passes for 35 yards.

"It's a lot easier to pass when you've got a good running game," Long said.

James had a bigger role in the Lions' offense with Jones sidelined by bruised ribs and the former Louisiana State star enjoyed it.

"It made me feel like I was in college, getting 24 carries, then standing there cheering the defense and special teams," James said.

Atlanta jumped out to a 3-0 lead on Greg Davis' 19-yard field goal in the first quarter, but that was about all the Falcons had to cheer about.

Jerry Holmes' 32-yard interception return set up a seven-yard scoring strike from Long to Pete Mandley early in the second quarter and Eddie Murray booted a 37-yard field goal with 21 seconds left in the half to give Detroit a 10-3 halftime advantage.

Rams 34, Packers 7

At Green Bay, Wis., Los Angeles Coach John Robinson expressed sympathy at the way his Rams hammered Green Bay 34-7 Sunday, ruining the debut of Packer Coach Lindy Infante.

"Green Bay had to have every bad break they could possibly have had in an opener," Robinson said. "You don't want that to happen in your first game like that. I was disappointed for Lindy but I think he'll do a great job here."

Chuck Long had a good day for the Detroit Lions Sunday as he completed 13 of 19 passes for 107 yards and two touchdowns in the Lions' 31-17 victory over the Atlanta Falcons.

49ers 34, Saints 33

At New Orleans, Joe Montana threw three third-quarter touchdown passes Sunday to lead the San Francisco 49ers to a 34-33 victory over the New Orleans Saints.

Bears maul Miami; Hawks top Denver

United Press International

The opening day of the 1988 NFL season was also the beginning of open season on the league's quarterbacks.

Dan Marino and John Elway were each harrassed into one of their poorest games since they began tearing up the league in 1983. Marino completed 9 of 22 passes for 113 yards in Miami's 34-7 loss to Chicago and Elway threw two interceptions and was sacked three times in a 21-14 Denver loss to Seattle.

Three other passers, Joe Montana of San Francisco, Bernie Kosar of Cleveland and Warren Moon of Houston, failed to complete their teams' victories.

Even the winning quarterbacks were mostly mediocre Sunday. Vinny Testaverde had the only 300 yard passing game, and he threw five interceptions in Tampa Bay's 41-14 loss to Philadelphia.

Marino had one of the worst performances of his career, completing just 9 of 22 passes for 113 yards. That ranks as the lowest number of completions and second lowest yardage total in Marino's 70 starts.

"It's both disappointing and embarrassing," Marino said after his career low in completions and second lowest passing yardage game. "We didn't seem to have any rhythm on offense. We had our chances to control the ball ourselves but didn't do it."

Bears quarterback Jim McMahon and running back Neal Anderson each ran for two TDs to fuel the rout at Chicago.

Bills 13, Vikings 10

At Orchard Park, N.Y., Scott Norwood's 26-yard fourth-quarter field goal and a stingy Buffalo defense lifted the Bills, who had six sacks to highlight their first opening day victory since 1982.

Steelers 24, Cowboys 21

Bengals 21, Cardinals 14

At Cincinnati, Boomer Esiason's third touchdown pass, a 15-yarder to Mike Martin in the fourth quarter, snapped a 14-14 tie and lifted the Bengals. The game was the Cardinals' first since they moved to Phoenix after 28 years in St. Louis.

Patriots 28, Jets 3

At Foxboro, Mass., Steve Grogan threw two touchdown passes to Irving Fryar and rookie Teddy Garcia kicked three field goals to lead New England.

Raiders 24, Chargers 13

At Los Angeles, rookie Tim Brown returned a kickoff 97 yards for a touchdown and Marcus Allen rushed for two scores, helping the Raiders win in temperatures that reached 110 degrees in Mike Shanahan's debut as Los Angeles coach.

professional football." Beathard said early today from New York, where the Super Bowl champions were preparing to meet the New York Giants tonight at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J.

"Jay has provided the Redskins with some great moments and we wish him the very best. In Jim Lachey, we have a Pro Bowl offensive lineman capable of playing either guard or tackle and he should be a dominant force in the NFL for many years," Beathard added.

Redskins spokesman Marty Hurney said the "future draft choices" were conditional upon the Raiders' finish during the 1988 season.

Schroeder, 27, entering his fifth NFL season, leaves the Redskins with an extraordinary record as starter (24-7) and has amassed 7,445 passing yards in only 31 games. His team records include: most passing yardage in a season (4,109 in 1986) most pass attempts in a season (541) and game (58) and lowest career interception rate (3.64 percent).

Schroeder, who played collegiately in Los Angeles at UCLA and grew up in Pacific Palisades, Calif., has two years remaining on a contract that pays him a reported $900,000 per season in base salary.

Schroeder did not accompany the Redskins to New York and was set to fly to Los Angeles today.

Safety Terry Hoage intercepted Testaverde twice and also scored off a fake punt to key Philadelphia's swarming defense and special teams. Cunningham opened the scoring with a 37-yard strike to Mike Quick 2:30 into the game and added an 8-yard TD flip to first-round draft choice Keith Jackson late in the first quarter.

A 2-yard scoring run by Cunningham with just 30 seconds left in the half — set up by Testaverde's third interception — put the Eagles ahead 34-0.

Cunningham's 53-yard pass to Quick midway through the opening period led to Anthony Toney's 2-yard TD run and a 14-0 lead.

Dean Dorsey added field goals of 23 and 26 yards before the Eagles scored a special teams touchdown midway through the third quarter. Hoage took a short snap off a fake punt attempt and dashed 38 yards to make it 41-7.

Hoage also set up Jackson's scoring catch by returning an interception 24 yards to the 5-yard line.

Testaverde, completed 21 of 45 passes for 324 yards.

Tonight: Giants vs. Redskins

United Press International

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Doug Williams, who survived a quarterback controversy he said was mostly in the minds of the media, will face the New York Giants tonight for the first time since joining Washington.

Williams was supposed to start against the Giants in the 11th game of last season, but sprained his back three days before the game. Jay Schroeder played instead, leading the Redskins to a 23-19 victory with three touchdown passes.

Williams came back in the playoffs, however, and was the MVP of Washington's 42-10 Super Bowl XXII victory over Denver.

Williams came to the Redskins in 1986. Since then, he has not played against the Giants, who helped make and break his two immediate predecessors.

Joe Theismann helped the Redskins win eight of nine over the Giants from 1980-84, but his career ended Nov. 18, 1985 when he suffered a broken leg on a sack by Lawrence Taylor and Jim Burt on a Monday night game. J Schroeder took over, led the Redskins to victory the night and passed for 420 yards against New York in a 27-20 loss the next year.

But the Giants caught up to him, too, intercepting six passes in the second game that year and blanking the Redskins 17-0 in the NFC title game for their third triumph over Washington of the 1986 season.

Menswear message for fall: Relax

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Come fall, one of the major trends in menswear will be an overall feeling of relaxed styling and ease of movement. Whether for boardroom or ballgames, fall styles will lack the just-so look of years past.

At the recent press showing of men's fall collections hosted by the Men's Fashion Association (MFA), more than 50 manufacturers and designers showcased their newest collections. And while changes in menswear are hardly ever dramatic, there was an overall shift to more subtle and relaxed dressing.

The flexibility of mixing pieces and moods is another key component in the fall mix. According to industry leaders, retailers are responding to October's stock-market crash by insisting on men's clothing that offers value and versatility as well as style. Whatever the reason, stores are providing more and more options for their male customers this fall.

Chip Tolbert, MFA fashion director, observed, "We know that we cannot 'force-feed' fashion to men, so fall wardrobes concentrate on flexibility, longer life spans and mixing items from one area to another."

In outerwear, ease of movement is particularly apparent. Last fall, men endorsed the notion of longer topcoats by purchasing lengths of up to 48 inches, well over the calves. This fall, designers have dropped lengths another two to four inches. That means fuller coats, frequently with swing backs, raglan shoulders or wrapped styling. Brushed wools and cashmere blends are popular fabrics for more traditional topcoats, while nylons and water-repellent cottons are frequently show for new, fuller trench styles.

From sweaters to double-breasted suits, black, brown and gray are front-runner colors. This dark, neutral palette lends a subtle sophistication to the new choices, as well as maximum mixability. Brown, more vicuna than the reddish "Reagan brown" of seasons past, looks rich. Gray ranges from the palest shades of putty to rich charcoal. Black becomes a pivotal color that is eminently mixable.

One of the biggest surprises of the fall collections was the return of the white shirt. Banished for the last few years, it now looks refreshingly crisp and elegant. Look for new treatments like the increasingly popular spread collar or stripe-on-stripe monotone fabrics. For men who still like color in their shirts, the newest choices are in those grays, browns and black.

For off-hour dressing, the most weekend jackets continue the aviator theme started last fall. The "Top Gun" jackets are restyled this year, usually in black leather, and sometimes with longer lengths and distressed or mixed leathers. Sophisticated alternatives are beefy wool pullovers and sweater jackets. Even knits have moved into jackets, and here, layering knits, particularly the turtleneck with just about anything else, is the most "fashionable" look for casual attire.

At the office, the overlap of sportswear and tailored clothing styles is the newest movement in menswear. This means more color, more mixing of pieces, more knits and looser fits—all of which are abundantly available this season. Matched three-piece suits are not the corporate answer for fall. "The 'uniform' has started breaking up," noted designer Jeff Sayre. "That's the trend for the late '80s. This means a reinterpretation of business attire and what we present to the world."

Bill Robinson, this year's Cutty Sark menswear award-winner as Outstanding U.S. Designer, endorses this same trend for adding comfort and individuality to office dressing. "The idea of the rigid, more formal business attire suddenly having a little wit—say, with a fun tie, but a little dressed up—will be continuing," he observed.

Courses offered on stress, writing

The Leisure Time/Lifelong Learning Programs at Seminole Community College in Sanford announces that the following classes will be offered during the week of Sept. 12.

Charcoal Drawing — Emphasis on fundamentals of charcoal sketching in preparation for painting and working in color. Students will work from still life and landscapes and will furnish their own supplies. (Sept. 15 to Oct. 20, Thursdays, 7-9 p.m., $25/person)

Coping with Stress — Looks at common conceptions of what stress is, stress reduction techniques and how stress can be used as a stimulus rather than a depressant. Instructor recommends that spouses, parent/children and very close friends not take this course together. (Sept. 14 to Oct. 5, Wednesdays, 7-10 p.m., $5/person)

Home Landscape Gardening — Students will learn proper planning of home landscaping, how to select proper plant materials, how to care for them, maintenance of lawns, and efficient use of water, fertilizers, mulches, pruning and pest control. (Sept. 12 to Nov. 28, Mondays, 7-9:30 p.m., $5/person)

Pet Care Basics (How to Save Money on Vet Bills and Have a Healthier Pet) — Learn how to keep dogs and cats in good health. Includes information about vaccinations, parasites, diet, common illnesses and emergencies. (Sept. 15-29, Thursdays, 8-9 p.m., $10/person)

Writers' Workshop — For the advanced student who has either taken a course on short story writing or has already done some writing. The instructor gives advice, edits and revises manuscripts. This course is not for the student who cannot take constructive criticism. (Sept. 14 to Oct. 9, Wednesdays, 10 to noon, $5/person)

Man prefers balding pate to thin disguise

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter about baldness in men. I'm almost bald, and I refuse to let 10 strands of hair grow to the length of 3 feet and then swirl them around my head in an absurd attempt to cover my baldness.

I wouldn't get a hair transplant even if I could afford one, and if I were to get a wig, I'm afraid I'd keep checking to see if the darned thing was on straight, or about to fall in my soup.

What you see is what you get! And now, ladies, how about those foam rubber falsies? If you wear them to attract me, don't bother. If that's all he can see in you, you don't need this bozo! Sure, some men are hooked on big bosoms—but there are plenty like me who are more interested in the whole package, which includes personality and brains.

I have never heard a man express anything but disappointment and annoyance when what he sees isn't what he gets!
RAY HOOD, SAN DIEGO

DEAR RAY: Nobody enjoys being "hoodwinked." (Sorry!) But most women wear falsies because they look better in clothes—not necessarily to attract a man.

DEAR READERS: In celebration of its 100th birthday, the National Geographic Society commissioned Gallup—the Rolls Royce of pollsters—to find out how much the average American knows about geography.

The results were startling. One in five of those polled could not name one country in Europe. Three out of four could not find the Persian Gulf on a map. One in four could not find the Pacific Ocean. One in two could not locate South Africa. Worse yet, 50 percent could not find New York State on a map, and 14 percent could not even find the United States!

Compared with a similar poll taken 40 years ago, the results show a steady decrease of geographical knowledge. The reason: Only 25 percent of the schools in the USA include geography in their curriculum.

ADVICE

Even though there are more Americans traveling today than ever before, there seems to be a diminishing interest in geography. This brings to mind the story about the well-traveled American who called a friend to say that she had just returned from Majorca. "Where is it?" the friend asked. "I don't know," she replied. "We flew."

DEAR ABBY: I am a Hogg by marriage and I am not ashamed of the name. When my husband was in the military, there was a Pigg in his squadron. How about that?

And just what do you have against hogs, Abby? Being a native Iowa girl, you should be especially fond of hogs. They helped make Iowa the great farm state it is today. Shame on you! If you decide to print this letter (at chance), you may use my name, such as it is.

VIRGINIA A. HOGG VINGHAMTON, N.Y.

DEAR VIRGINIA: If my readers can stand one more letter about the Hoggs, here it is:

DEAR ABBY: It is an established fact that there was an "Ira Hogg" in Texas, but she did not have a sister named "Ura." However, there was a Ura Hogg.

As proof, I am sending you a copy of my family tree. As you can see, my uncle, Hymie Aronson, of Salem, Mass., married Ura Hogg in 1930.

RUTH ARONSON YONIS, PEABODY, MASS.

DEAR ABBY: I'm chairman of our 30th high school reunion. Yes, we will have a photographer there! One of your letters concerned a reunion organizer in Torrington, Conn., who decided to skip the class picture because the spouses would be bored while the class members were having their picture taken.

That's a pretty dumb excuse—I think most spouses would be bored regardless. I know I'm bored at my spouse's reunions. In my opinion, spouses should not be allowed to attend. We all had our high school sweethearts, and it would be nice to reminisce and have a dance or two—but there sits the spouse, bored and slightly jealous, watching every move Abby, is there a tactful way to tell my spouse to get lost that night? Please don't suggest I make a deal and say, "I won't attend yours if you won't attend mine." My spouse insists that I attend hers!

REMINISCING

DEAR REMINISCING: Some spouses wouldn't go to a class reunion if you paid them. Others wouldn't dream of staying away. It takes all kinds. But I know of no "tactful" way to tell a spouse to "get lost" without starting World War III.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me how old a person is supposed to be before he's considered a "senior citizen"? I was in a health food store paying for my purchases when the checkout man asked me if I was entitled to a senior citizen's discount. I am 55 and did not consider myself a senior citizen, so I asked him how old must I be to get one. He replied "55." I was surprised, but gladly took the discount. I always believed 65 was the age!

HAPPILY 55

DEAR HAPPILY: Senior citizenship can be anywhere from 50 on up. When in doubt, ask!

DEAR ABBY: You recently ran a letter from a Carlton R. Epperson (retired), First Class Petty Officer, who said he believes that his 11 months at sea without setting foot on land is a record. I am writing this letter to you for my uncle, who is still laughing so hard he can't write.

He served from 1942 to 1946 on the USS Minneapolis CA36 heavy cruiser and spent three years and nine months at open sea. (He has 11 battle stars.)

My uncle, who was both a shellback and a polar bear, has gone around the world seven and a half times in water mileage, and engaged in surface battle with the Japanese fleet at Corregidor, the turning point of World War II—so maybe Mr. Epperson owes my uncle a right hand salute. I'm sure you'll be hearing from many of the other 2,000 men who served on the USS Minneapolis during that time. Any one of them can verify this.
