Seminoles Come From Behind, Upset Barracudas 21-13

Sanford Eleven Captures First Win Of Season

The Sanford Seminole went on the warpath Friday night in New Smyrna Beach and came from 13 points behind to scalp the Barracudas in a 21-13 upset. It was the first, yet very decisive, win of the season for the Seminole. Phil Byrd, Brantley Schirard, and Bob Johnson took turns for scoring chores in breaking the losing jinx for Sanford, while the whole host of Seminole's gridsters came to life to chill New Smyrna Beach's Sophomore workhorse, Bryan Shipman, and outstanding end for the Barracudas, Lindsay Carr.

The first quarter, a rugged defensive test of strength for both teams, early pointed out the dexterity of the Shipman-Carr threat. Late in the first quarter the Seminole were momentarily rattled as Shipman ripped through the line for gains of 10, 11, and another for 10 yards to move the ball down to the Sanford 28 yard line, where the first stanza closed. On the first play of the second quarter, Barracuda quarterback Tommy Jones passed to Carr on a play that carried to the Seminole 12. Again Shipman ripped through the line for 11 yards, and on the next play banged over for the final yard and the initial paydirt. Carr booted true for the additional point, and the Seminole trailed 7-0.

On the return series of plays the Seminole were stunned as a Johnson to Gerald Jones pass was intercepted by Bill King on the Seminole 21 yard line and the Barracudas were on the march again.

Again Shipman sparked the TD drive. He drove 10 yards for a first down on the Seminole's 11 yard line, and, on a draw play through the middle, Jones tossed to Carr in the right flat for the score. Carr's attempted conservation was smothered by the Seminole defense. Before the Seminole could get their feet on the ground, New Smyrna Beach again chilled the Seminole spirit by intercepting a Johnson aerial. The pass, intended for Schirard, was snatched down by Roger Kelly on the Barracuda 39 yard line. The Seminole then called a time out to settle their shattered nerves.

That was the turning point of the game. From then on the Seminole refused to be dumped for another loss. The line chilled Shipman and Carr, or anyone else the Barracudas could throw at them. The Barracudas were forced to punt, and Byrd gathered in the pigskin for a 47 yard flight through the New Smyrna Beach squad and rambled to the Barracuda 28 yard line before he was finally tripped up.

From the 28, Jim Warner raced around left end for 19 yards and a first and goal. Johnson passed to Byrd on the next play, and Byrd went into the end zone untouched. Ronnie Giles made a perfect kick, and the half ended with the Seminole trailing 13-7, but very much the aggressor.

Midway in the third quarter Byrd again set up a Seminole score. On a pass intended for Carr, Byrd leaped high to intercept, without breaking stride, returned it 25 yards to the Barracuda 15 yard line. Four plays later Byrd passed to Schirard, and Schirard, swarmed by defenders, leaped high in the air in a breathtaking completion to tie the score. Giles again booted true, and the Seminole surged into the front to stay.

Late in the third quarter Warner snatched another Barracuda aerial intended for Carr and returned it to the Seminole 40. Johnson sparked a running-passing drive that threatened again. He passed to Byrd, and Byrd crossed the mid-field stripe and down to the NSB 42. Then Johnson, on a roll-out keep around left end, made his most brilliant run of the season, carrying down to the 25. A bad pitch-out set the Seminole back, and they finally lost the ball on downs at the Barracuda 20.

In the final stanza the Seminole put the game on ice with a 60 yard scoring drive sparked by Schirard. Terry Goebel, and Warner. After crossing the mid-field stripe Schirard blasted through the middle for six, Warner circled right end for eight. Johnson passed to Byrd to carry the ball down to the 15. Byrd literally plowed through the stiff Barracuda defensive wall and was finally pulled down at the six-inch line, and Johnson, in a quarter sneak, pushed over for the score. Giles again booted true to make it a perfect evening for his record and put the game on ice for the Seminole.

The Seminole dominated the entire second half of the game. After the final Seminole tally the Barracudas went to the two different occasions. Both times the Seminole chilled the attempts. The first attempt ended when Jones passed to Carr. Warden shook the ball loose with a Jarrag tackle, and defensive terror Eddie Barbour was on the spot to pounce on the ball for the Seminole.

The final aerial attempt by New Smyrna Beach met the same fate as Byrd again intercepted a pass intended for Carr as the clock ran out and the Seminole had themselves their first victory of the season.

Schirard and Barbour were again outstanding, but it has been demonstrated in prior games this season that two men couldn't win a game. The Victory Friday night was the result of team unity: the outstanding performance of linemen Bill Tyre, Meredith Scott, Fred Behrens, Charles Pence, Tom Brown, Claude Hittell, John Williams, Gerald Jones, Bob Little, Jack Stotsky, and Virgil Gracev halted New Smyrna's offense and blocked off their defense. The re-vitalization of Johnson, Byrd, and Ronnie Russi, with the blossoming of Al Colling and Warden meant the difference in the backfield.

Crooms Wins Homecoming Tilt 14-0

The Crooms Academy Panthered by the star performance of King. King broke through the line repeatedly to chill Eustis.

In the third quarter the offensive team began rolling for the Panthers. Crooms fullback Eddie Lanier tossed to end Hardy for the initial Panther score. Hardy scooped in the aerial on the Eustis 40 yard line and shook off would-be tacklers all the way to plow down the field for the score. The attempted conversion was no good.

The Panthers went on the prowl again in the fourth quarter, as quarterback Lancaster culminated a 70 yard scoring drive by sweeping right end for 35 yards, behind excellent downfield blocking, for the final Crooms Academy score. Again the conversion was missed.

Panther halfback Grady Robinson was the workhorse for the Crooms attack and the thorn in Eustis' side. He consistently plowed through the Eustis line again in the second quarter to pounce on a Eustis fumble in the end zone for a touchdown. But the eager Panthers were offides and the score was nullified.

The Crooms offensive machine ran smoothly during the entire game, but the penalties of the first half kept the aggressors from crossing the goal line. The half ended with Crooms leading 2-0.

Eustis could never maintain a drive due to the fast charging defensive line of the Panthers, spark-were through the line to keep Eustis on edge.

Eustis never gave Crooms a serious threat throughout the game.

The Panthers will rest for this week before taking on another Big 9 Conference team, Daytona Beach, in two weeks.

GOT HIS STRING BACK BUT NO FISH
BERKEEY SPRINGS, W. Va. (AP)—Police officer A. Brooke Dyche sure had a fine day's fishing. He baited his hook with sweet corn, dropped it in the Cacapon River and came up with six fish, all on a fish stringer.

The stringer had slipped from the hands of J. F. Kidwell and E. W. Van Dyke and they gave up after grappling for it.

In the barber shop the next day Kidwell met Dyche who began talking about his crazy luck. Well, Dyche brought Kidwell back his stringer, but the fish? They were eaten the previous day.

backed into the limelight Friday night with a convincing 14-0 Homecoming win over Eustis. It was the final home game of the season for the Panthers. Lonnie Hardy and Lawrence Lancaster made the scores for Crooms.

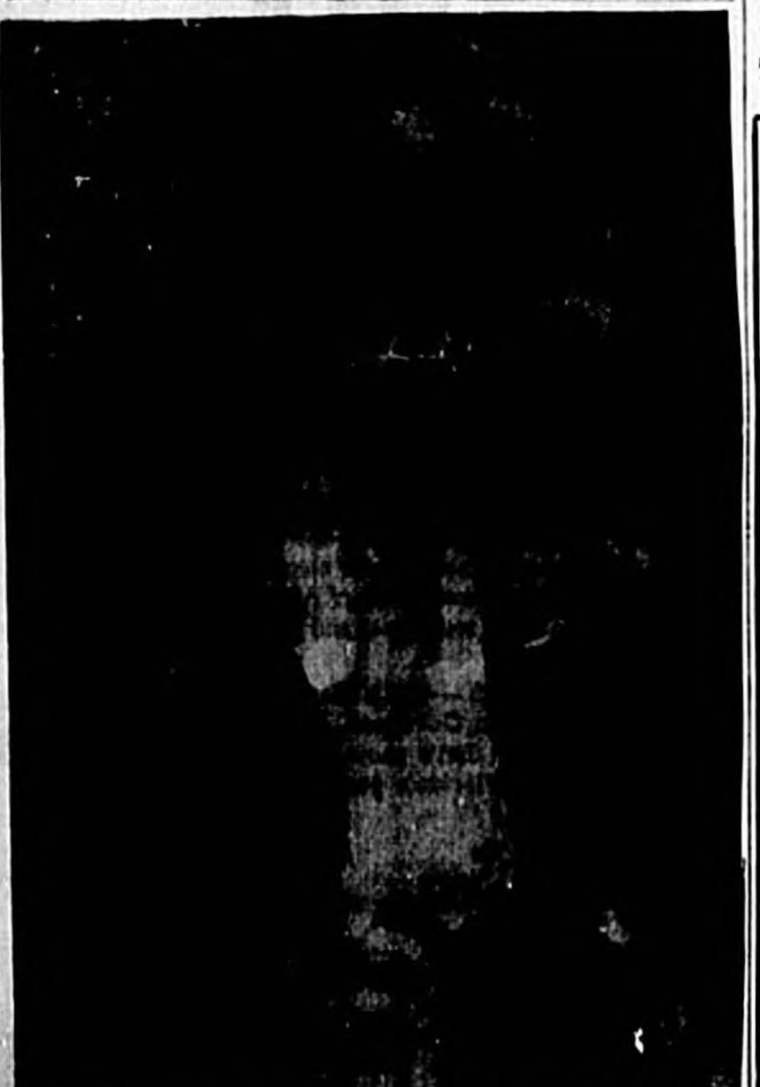

Near the end of the first quarter the Panthers jumped to a lead with a safety. A high Eustis center sent the pigskin rolling into the end zone and hard charging Panther guard, Joe King, was on the spot to drop the Eustis fullback before he could get back on the playing field.

Eustis, kept with their backs to their own goal line for the entire game, was unable to muster a strong attack at any time against the highly spirited Panthers.

King again figured prominently for the Panthers as he ripped through the Eustis line again in the second quarter to pounce on a Eustis fumble in the end zone for a touchdown. But the eager Panthers were offides and the score was nullified.

The Crooms offensive machine ran smoothly during the entire game, but the penalties of the first half kept the aggressors from crossing the goal line. The half ended with Crooms leading 2-0.

CHAPTER 26

"WAB! THE lunch hour and Dirk was standing by the bar alone, smoking a cigarette and sipping a dry Martini, when Val came into the lounge.

"Hello, Val. Just in time for a cocktail before lunch," he said easily and guided her toward a table.

After they had ordered he gave her a faint smile. "I must say I find it interesting to be condemned as a murderer before anyone knows that a murder has been committed."

She touched his arm across the table. "You and I know it's all nonsense."

"I do," he said quietly. "But are you sure, Val?"

"Of course I'm sure, Dirk." "My solicitors in England were in touch with me this morning," he told her quietly. "And my relatives are already beginning to cause trouble. Obviously they are going to dispute the will."

"But on what grounds?"

"Undue influence, or insanity, or anything else their lawyers think up. They've been trying to spread rumors for some time that the old girl wasn't strictly all there."

"The money means a great deal to you, Dirk?"

He looked at her sharply. "What are you suggesting, Val?"

"I just wondered if this money you've inherited means a great deal to you," she persisted quietly.

"I see your point," he said after a pause. He took two cigarettes out of his pocket and threw one across to her. "You mean have I any right to this money, Nurse?"

"I don't know, Val," she said. "I've tried to branch out and do something on my own. That's why I flew out to Fiji and wrote that book last year. Incidentally, my solicitors told me this morning that my agent had written Dad that the book had been accepted."

"Oh, I'm so glad, Dirk. I do congratulate you," she said in a warm, pleased voice.

"I'm pretty pleased myself," he said soberly. "You see, it's something I've done entirely in my own way."

After a hurried lunch, Val went to her cabin, but she was too restless to stay there. She knew now she must see Bruce. It took a great deal of courage finally to go down to his surgery and knock on the door and to stand there with a throbbing heart while she waited for him to open the door.

"You wanted to see me? Come in, Nurse," he said finally, and opened the door wider.

"I thought you might have wanted to see me," she murmured when she was inside the surgery and he had closed the door.

"That would matter so much?" she asked softly.

"I must remember you don't think much of tradition and traditional places even if they have a great historical value," he said curtly. "It hasn't been bred into me."

He gave her a slight smile. "I thought you might be pretty angry with me."

She glanced up into his face and suddenly her love for him was mixed with a great sense of pity.

"Bruce, need you have done it?" she asked quietly.

He looked sharply away from her. "I felt it was the only thing I could do, Val."

"But surely you don't think that Dirk actually poisoned Mrs. Featherstone?"

"I didn't know what to think. I felt the circumstances of her death were peculiar."

"But she'd drunk too much champagne and was in a furious rage."

"But she might have meant to stick to her threat. After all, why shouldn't she?" he insisted harshly. "I believed you'd promised you would let me know."

"Hanson had told Mrs. Featherstone you were going to marry him."

"That isn't true, Bruce," she said quickly. "Dirk told Mrs. Featherstone he was in love with me and that he wanted to marry me. It was as much a surprise to me as unfortunately it was to her."

"You ask me to believe that?" he exclaimed sharply. "A man doesn't make a statement of that sort unless he has some reason to believe that his proposal will be acceptable." He added hoarsely. "I thought you were mine, Val, but it seems you're been playing with both of us."

She was too angry to know quite what she was saying. "That night of the ball, Bruce, I meant it when I said I'd give up my friendship with Dirk since it seemed to upset you so much. But now—now you've made it impossible."

He looked away from her deliberately again. "Hanson is coming into a little and it still may be proved he had nothing to do with Mrs. Featherstone's death. Then he will inherit all her money," he said.

She turned without a word, opened the surgery door and went out.

South Carolina Girls Bringing Glory To Dixie

COLUMBIA, S. C.—The pretty girls of South Carolina, like the fleet race horses of Kentucky, are bringing glory to Dixie and world-wide recognition to their state.

On their beautiful heads rest five of the world's top beauty crowns—no other state can make that claim.

Little South Carolina—ranking 26th in the nation in population—has produced a Miss Universe, the current Miss America, a Mrs. America, two Miss U. S. A.'s for the Miss World contest and a national maid of cotton.

Five of her six entries in the Miss America contest have been among the 20 finalists.

Judging a state beauty contest in this magnolia land of pulchritude is an exercise in ecstasitic frustration. For example, Marian Ann McKnight, the Manning, S. C., beauty who charmed the nation and the judge in Atlantic City when she won Miss America honors this year, has been defeated in local competition by her roommate.

The room Marian and Martha Dean Chestnut shared at little Coker College in Hartsville probably had more beauty a square foot than any other in the country.

Martha Dean, a stunning brunette, was Miss South Carolina last year. The judges deliberated in an agony of indecision before selecting her over Marian.

The search for an answer to the beauty contests leads first to the obvious conclusion that the state is simply overrun with pretty women.

One also discovers the tradition that compels Southern girls to consider it their duty to develop charm—a factor that is given equal attention along with a well-turned calf or a classic profile in most beauty contests.

But more important, South Carolina girls are usually veterans of beauty contests by the time they reach the Miss America or some other contest.

Marian Ann was one of the few Miss Americas who didn't burst into tears of confusion when her name was announced to the nation as the winner. Why should she? By then, little Marian was a confident winner of nine previous beauty contests with all the polish of an archbishop at a church picnic.

The rural communities of this state delight in annual festivals to promote watermelons, tobacco, cotton, timber or just to have a good time.

And almost invariably, a beauty contest is a principal feature of the goings. The pretty girls begin to compete in these affairs as soon as they are old enough to walk in high heels without breaking an ankle.

They become accustomed to the appraising eyes of judges and spectators; they learn to smile and to walk gracefully, and above all, to relax and be their charming selves.

Marching bands are also a part of these festivals, so it is no surprise that Carolyn Willis of Chesterfield has been crowned Miss Majorette of the U. S. A. of 1934.

South Carolinians have been paying homage to their fairest for many years. The old Confederate veterans organizations frequently picked a "sponsor," a lively and charming young woman to be borne along with them on parades.

But the first actual state-wide beauty contest was an American Legion sponsored affair on the lawn of the state house in Columbia 26 years ago. Since then, the movement has spread far and wide throughout Palmetto Land.

It began to bloom in 1947 when Mrs. Freda Acker of Anderson became Mrs. America. She was followed by Elizabeth McGee of Spartanburg, now Mrs. G. Robert Richardson who became Maid of Columbia in competition with Dixie beauties from the 18 cotton growing states in 1959.

Mary Kemp Griffin of Florence won state beauty honors in 1952, then went on to become Miss U. S. A. and runnerup for the Miss World title. She is now Mrs. William Stag, wife of an Air Force jet pilot stationed near Victorville, Calif.

Rankin Subert of Waltmore came close with a third place showing in the Miss America contest in 1954 and then along came a freckle-faced beauty from Winnsboro named Miriam Stevenson.

Miriam, an unspoiled farmer's daughter, designed and made the evening gown she wore when she won Miss Universe honors in 1954. The world's reigning beauty gave Hollywood a half-hearted fling, then fled the movie capital for home and a return to her home economics courses at Lander College in Greenwood.

Today, as Mrs. Donald Upton of Columbia, curvaceous Miriam has a television show and still scorns heavy makeup to hide her freckles.

Miss McKnight added the icing to South Carolina's beauty cake with her Atlantic City victory a few months after roommate Martha was picked in Daytona Beach, Fla., as Miss Dixie.

Betty Lane Cherry of Orangeburg completed this year's South Carolina beauty triumph by earning the right to compete as Miss U. S. A. in the Miss World contest in London. She, like Mary Kemp Griffin in 1932, placed second in the world competition.

Automatic Climate Station Planted At South Pole

OVER THE SOUTH POLE (delayed) — American airmen planted an automatic weather station at the South Pole Friday.

The device, a six-foot-long equipment-filled container nicknamed the "Grasshopper," was dropped by parachute from an Air Force Globemaster in the first airdrop ever made at the pole.

Made of stainless steel, the Grasshopper has legs that automatically hoisted it upright after it touched the ice plateau. It will transmit weather data every six hours for the benefit of fliers participating in Operation Deepfreeze in Antarctica.

Ours was believed to be the seventh flight ever made over the pole. There were 43 persons aboard the giant 93-ton troop carrier, probably as many as there were aboard all the previous flights combined. Adm. Richard E. Byrd, pilot Bert Halchen and two others made the first polar flight Nov. 28, 1922.

DRAWER REFLEX

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — A burglar used a physician's reflex hammer—the little one he taps your knee with to make your leg bounce—at the office of Dr. Jacob Weis. The thief tapped the desk drawer. It bounced open and he took the $200 inside.

ALLADIN WAS HERE

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Donald W. Wray wanted to know the thief from his home of a lamp he had fashioned out of an old jug. What did make him mad, he told city police, was that $250 he kept hidden in the jug was missing, too.
