Goodings proposal goes to P+Z

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary Planning and Zoning Board will meet tonight. The main item on the agenda is a request for site plan approval for a proposed office/warehouse, submitted by Gooding's Inc. The facility is proposed for 40 acres of land abutting Interstate 4 and Rinehart Road.

The request includes planning for an access road leading to the property. Gooding's is also requesting reduction in the number of required parking spaces from 258 to 170, elimination of the need for sidewalks along the access road, and allowing parking lot lighting to be increased from 25 feet in height, to 40 feet.

The meeting will be held beginning at 7 p.m. tonight, in the commission chambers of Lake Mary City Hall, 100 W. Lake Mary Boulevard.

JACKSONVILLE — Amtrak's coast-to-coast Sunset Limited, connecting Florida's East Coast with Los Angeles, will begin operation in early April and reservations are now being accepted.

Already, the first run on April 4 of the three-runs-a-week train is almost filled to capacity with train buffs, said Howard Robertson, an Amtrak spokesman.

The Sunset Limited closes the 680-mile gap between Jacksonville and New Orleans, completing Amtrak service around the nation's periphery. East Coast passengers can catch the new train by connecting in Jacksonville.

To help start the Amtrak service, Florida pitched in $6.5 million for the project, $3.5 million of which went for track and signal improvement, Robertson said.

"Without the help of Florida officials and CSX (Transportation Inc.), whose track we are using, we wouldn't have been able to get this done," he said.

Amtrak expects the train to carry about 67,000 passengers a year.

Amtrak's transcontinental service now requires passengers to change trains in New Orleans or Chicago.

The new route will make the 58-hour crossing of Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California three times a week.

A double-decker See-Level car will offer passengers feature movies, snacks, games and a hospitality hour, Robertson said.

Witness: Defendant confessed

By GEORGE DUNCAN

SANFORD — A prosecution witness testified Monday that defendant George Bellamy, Jr., told him "that he killed a man," the day after the body of Isiah Cohen was found in a Midway parking lot.

However, Timothy Johnson only made the admission after ordered by Judge Alan Dickey to answer Assistant State Attorney Stewart Stone's question, Johnson, who admitted he was a good friend of Bellamy, initially said nothing even after Stone asked the question three times.

Dickey then ordered the jury to the jury room and told Johnson he must answer the question or face contempt of court charges. Johnson is currently serving a sentence in prison on a matter unrelated to the trial. After Johnson returned, Dickey cleared the courtroom, except for court personnel and media representatives.

Speaking softly and often only in one-word answers, Johnson admitted he had seen both Bellamy and Cohen on the night Cohen was shot and killed. Cohen was driving a friend's car, a green and white Oldsmobile, Johnson testified.

Johnson said Bellamy told him he planned to kill Cohen. See Trial, Page 5A

GOP: Keep condoms out of schools

By VICKI DeSORMIER

The Seminole County Republican executive committee wants the state government to keep out of local schools and refrain from distributing condoms to students.

While a spokesman for Gov. Lawton Chiles said the recommendations of the Red Ribbon Panel on AIDS "made great healthy sense," the governor has not yet studied the recommendations with his staff and is not yet prepared to comment on specific issues.

"We are planning a staff work group to study the panel's recommendations," said Ron Sachs, the governor's communications director.

Meanwhile, Doug Elam, chairman of the Seminole County Republican Executive Committee, said his committee is not only promoting family values by their opposition to condom distribution in schools, but

Residents have access to officials

SANFORD — City leaders will be getting out more to meet residents and listen to their concerns about their neighborhoods since Access 93 won Sanford City Commission approval last night.

The project will take city leaders out for neighborhood meetings.

City Planner Jay Marder brought the concept up for consideration. It would call for scheduled meetings to be held in the various districts of the city, to be hosted by the mayor and commissioner representing the district, as well as department heads and city staff members.

The meetings would not replace any of the regular city commission meetings, but be used to obtain citizen input at the local level.

"We could possibly determine what problems may exist in a particular district before we hold the meeting," he said. "then be certain we have the appropriate department head on hand to respond to questions."

"For example," he added, "if an area has drainage problems, we would have the public works and utilities departments represented."

"This should be an educational process used to obtain input from constituents," he added.

In response to a question regarding how many meetings might be held during the year, Marder projected eight to 10 per year.

Commissioner A.A. McClanahan suggested holding one meeting per district to determine their success. "Let's see how it goes," he said. "If they prove to be beneficial we can schedule more of them."

Power outages only problems from rain

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

Present rainfall in northern Seminole County has not been unusually strong, but it has been rather continuous. The Weather Bureau expects the rain to continue possibly into mid-Wednesday.

The only problems reported by this morning involved some power outages. Joe Coury of Florida Power and Light said, "In the Sanford area this morning, we had 11 customers off line." He added, "Of these, nine were from a transformer outage and the other two were separate incidents."

"In the total area we cover which includes most of Seminole, Brevard and Volusia Counties," he said, "we had 284 customers with outages since this present rainstorm started, and actually, that's a relatively low number."

Florida Power Corporation also serves portions of the same general area. FPC's Bill Warren said this morning, "So far, I haven't had any reports of any major power outages. If there were some small ones, they probably would not cover any major areas, and we'll have them taken care of as soon as possible."

The projected rainfall for the Seminole County area through early or mid-day tomorrow is expected to be three quarter to one and a half inches.

No reports of any excessive flooding problems had been received by this morning in the city

Defender of death row inmates blasts high court

By BILL SPALDING
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The U.S. Supreme Court seemed more worried about ending a case than being sure of the defendant's guilt in a Texas case, a Florida defender of death row inmates said.

The Supreme Court ruled Monday that death row inmates generally may not make new claims of innocence in federal court after exhausting all other appeals.

"I think it is rather ironic that the U.S. Supreme Court, on the same day that newspapers across the country headline the death of Thurgood Marshall, states that it is more important to have procedural finality than it is to implement justice in the face of an innocence claim," Larry Spalding said.

Spalding directs the Capital Collateral Representative office that represents Florida death row inmates.

Executive clemency is the "historic remedy" to protect the truly innocent from being put to death, the justices said.

The court ruled on an appeal by Leonel Herrera, sentenced to death in the 1981 slaying of a police officer. In 1990, he filed a new claim saying his brother, Raul, who was killed in 1984, had killed the officer. Raul's son said he saw his father commit the crime, and Raul's lawyer said his client confessed it.

In a dissent, Justice Harry A. Blackmun called the execution of someone who can show he is innocent "perilously close to simple murder."

The ruling doesn't affect any pending Florida cases, said Spalding and Carolyn Snurkowiak, spokeswoman for the state Attorney General's Office.

Innocence claims weren't part of the unsuccessful efforts to stop the executions last year of Nollie Lee Martin and Edward Dean Kennedy.

Spalding said CCR defenders did raise an innocence claim in the case of Leo Alexander Jones, slated to die in the electric chair in November 1991 for the 1981 sniper shooting of a Jacksonville policeman.

The state Supreme Court stopped the execution and ordered a hearing by a circuit judge. The judge was unconvinced of Jones' claim that another man shot the policeman, and Jones remained on death row. Another death warrant hasn't been issued.

Such cases are rare, Spalding said. "In most death cases they've got the right person. The issue you are arguing is whether the death penalty is appropriate."

Considering clemency claims is the job of the executive branch and isn't related to court appeals, said Mark Schlakman, assistant general counsel to Gov. Lawton Chiles. Chiles and the Cabinet hear Florida clemency appeals.

"The governor will not sign a death warrant until a clemency review has been considered, so those issues hopefully would have been raised," Schlakman said.

Stalking law Six-month-old statute survives challenge

By The Associated Press

LARGO, Fla. — Florida's six-month-old stalking law withstood a challenge when a circuit judge found it both clear and constitutional.

In upholding the law Monday, Circuit Judge W. Douglas Baird denied motions to dismiss three separate stalking cases in which defense lawyers claimed the law was unconstitutionally vague.

It defines stalking as "willfully, maliciously and repeatedly following or harassing another person" and making that person believe she or he will be harmed or killed.

Assistant Public Defender William Leach said the law is so vague people can't know what actions could be prosecuted.

"What we're talking about here is due process," he said. "There are no guidelines for law enforcement, to determine if harassment has occurred."

As written, he said, the law could prohibit activity that should not be considered criminal, such as riding a bicycle in front of someone's house.

But Baird agreed with prosecutor Kathleen Hensinger, who argued that many laws are written somewhat vaguely to cover a variety of situations.

"The whole activity of stalking, as represented in these cases, is not only to deliberately avoid any actual crime, but to create fear and disrupt any well-being or personal interests of the victim," Baird said.

Hensinger argued that not only is the law constitutional, but the cases before the judge were "hard core" and there could be no confusion over the law or the crime.

'Battered neighbor' no defense

By The Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — A jury rejected arguments that a man was suffering from "battered neighbor syndrome" when he shot to death his next-door neighbor in an argument over pets urinating on each other's belongings.

Michael C. DeBeets, 49, of Santa Clara was convicted Monday of murder in the slaying of 33-year-old Martin Mylinski, with whom he had had a feud.

Witnesses testified that DeBeets walked up and shot Mylinski as Mylinski argued with DeBeets' wife at the end of the driveway they shared.

The dispute that day was over whether Mylinski's dog had urinated on the DeBeets' newspaper and whether the DeBeets' cat had urinated on the seats of Mylinski's classic Thunderbird convertible.

During the two-week trial, the jury heard tales of slashed tires, punctured gas tanks, buried pet waste and poison-pen letters.

The defense included a "battered neighbor syndrome" theory. Relatives and a psychologist testified that DeBeets feared Mylinski to the point he thought his neighbor was harassing and stalking his family.

Mylinski's wife, Monica, said the feud was only in DeBeets' mind.

"I know it seems weird, but we really did not hate them," she said after the verdict. "We really didn't think of them that much."

DeBeets faces a maximum of 20 years to life in prison at sentencing March 11.

Teen has baby, concocts subterfuge

By LARRY GREEN
Associated Press Writer

TUSTIN, Calif. — A 17-year-old who was too afraid to tell her parents that she had had a baby helped her boyfriend concoct a story about buying the infant for $10 from a man who offered to sell the child for drugs, police say.

The tale worked for a day before the 18-year-old father, Robert Garcia, confessed on Monday that it was a lie, police said.

"As most young people, they were simply afraid to tell their parents," said Doug Franks, police chief in this community 30 miles south of Los Angeles.

The unidentified girl fooled her parents during her pregnancy by saying she was gaining weight, Franks said. She gave birth Saturday.

The baby was unharmed. Garcia told police he was walking through a shopping center parking lot Saturday night when a man in a car offered to trade the baby for drugs. The baby, he told police, was wrapped in a dirty T-shirt and was crying in the back seat.

Garcia said he offered $10 instead and was given the baby. He took it to a church, and the baby was taken to a children's home.

Social workers were counseling the couple about whether to put the child up for adoption or keep him, Franks said.

Franks said Garcia would probably not be charged with any wrongdoing.

Lake Mary kids should have first choice of fields

The Seminole PONY League will have first choice on the use of Lake Mary's sports complex baseball fields. The City Commission approved the request last week.

The league is pleased, but we question if this judgement is the best way to serve the original intent of the sports complex, to primarily serve the youth of Lake Mary.

In a three-way fight for use of the field between the PONY League, Lake Mary Little League and Babe Ruth League, the main goal was to obtain first choice on the lighted field.

After over an hour of discussion, the commission voted in favor of the PONY League.

The PONY League boasts of having 231 children associated with Lake Mary on its roster. The league has already been actively playing at the Five Points facility, just four miles away, it is a large league, and has long-established playing arrangements at that location.

Children of Lake Mary residents comprise only a small part of the total number of players in the league. Membership is from throughout Seminole County.

The league also charges as high as $99 per player in registration and other fees.

Perhaps a better first choice would have been the Lake Mary Little League, which is attempting to serve mostly Lake Mary youth. It formed just this past December, and has no previous arrangements for fields or practice areas.

The Lake Mary Little League also does not charge fees for all of the children, which allows for low income youth to benefit from its activities.

If the commission believes the PONY League is the best for Lake Mary, it should require the league to form a separate Lake Mary PONY League, and utilize teams comprised mostly of that city's youth.

The sports complex has three baseball fields, and one for softball. Only one baseball field is lit for nighttime use. Eventually, when Phase II of the sports complex is developed, in a year or two, there will be additional lighting to serve more teams at night.

The city should stick to its original goals and give its own people first choice. It should insist Seminole Pony League form a Lake Mary league with Lake Mary Teams consisting of Lake Mary youngsters.

The complex was built in and for Lake Mary. Its residents should be the beneficiaries.

Bush marches in the field of honor

As the public life of George Bush draws to a close, I am reminded of the occasion, 12 years ago, when I first saw the man who would become our 41st president. It was at the commencement ceremonies of Howard University, where I spent part of my young adult life as a student editor.

Throughout the then-vice president's remarks, he was jeered by a gaggle of protesters, who viewed him as an unwelcome representative of the conservative Republican administration. Despite it all, Bush delivered a stirring message. His equanimity in the face of hostility, from critics unworthy to latch the laces on his cordovans, left an indelible impression upon me.

In these waning days of the Bush presidency, there has appeared a spate of articles that presume to assign him a place in history. As Bush was unfazed by the small-minded protesters at Howard a dozen years ago, I suspect he is unconcerned by pointy-headed opinion writers who have omnisciently decided that his term of office will be viewed unfavorably as time goes by.

George Herbert Walker Bush may never have his visage etched upon Mount Rushmore alongside those of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt but he very well may be remembered as one of the most successful internationalist presidents in American history. The historic triumphs that occurred during Bush's watch are so enormous that only the passage of time will enable us to fully appreciate their magnitude.

Consider that, in just the last four years, the Cold War came abruptly to an end, the nuclear arms race was halted and the United States was victorious at war for the first time since World War II.

Bush's critics would minimize his role in these momentous events. But who would argue that without America's influence, without its president's leadership, the collapse of communism in Eastern Europe would have gone swimmingly, the break-up of the former Soviet Union happened as peacefully, the defeat of Iraq accomplished so convincingly?

Despite it all, Bush delivered a stirring message.

Actually, Bush's acuity in the foreign arena may have proved his undoing on the domestic front. Following the triumphant Persian Gulf War, the American people gave their leader the highest approval ratings of any president in history. But when Bush failed to bring the same deft leadership to domestic matters most important, the economy that he so clearly demonstrated abroad, his public turned on him.

In fairness to Bush it must be noted by historians that he presided over a bitterly divided government, unlike such predecessors as Franklin Roosevelt and Lyndon Johnson, who faced only token opposition to their sweeping domestic programs. Bush was able to exercise a relatively free hand only in foreign affairs, and it is not coincidental that it was in that area where he was most successful. Had he a Republican Congress for four years, there is no telling what he might have accomplished at home.

Bush's shortcomings on the domestic front hardly make his presidency a historic bust or Bush himself a personal failure. In fact, Bush shares much in common with another successful internationalist leader, who was turned out of office by his once-supportive public, but who since has been accorded a high place in history. I refer to none other than Winston Churchill.

Difference in child care programs

When asked the difference between Head Start, child day care and public school, Pre-K, most people think they are the same programs. Unfortunately, many child advocates use the three terms interchangeably as well.

In reality, these programs are vastly different and should remain so in the best interest of all concerned. Head Start was designed to reach extremely poor families, saving children from permanent physical damage and from school failure. It enriches the adults in the household and helps enable them to enter the work force. Public school Pre-K has the same purpose as Head Start but does not include the special parent training and parent enrichment programs. Both are part-day programs which operate only on school days.

Neither of these programs exist to provide child day care for working mothers. Child day care is a service to all families who need to hire someone to care for their children while they are away. Day care must operate day or night, seven days a week for 12-hour days, 12 months a year. Fortunately, 75 percent of the families who need child day care services can afford to pay for them. The remaining 25 percent are eligible for state and federal financial assistance. Aid is available with several federal block grants. In the Orlando area, these grants are managed by Community Coordinated Child Care of Central Florida, Inc. (4C).

In Tallahassee, some view the expansion of the public schools to meet the need for child day care. This move circumvents the state's existing program and presents families with a number of drawbacks.

Under the program, working families are removed from the mainstream through the segregation of their children. Additionally, public schools would have to provide service 12 hours a day and 12 months a year, a burden for which they are neither designed nor funded.

The DOE's program is not cost-effective. The parent is required to participate in the cost of the HRS-managed child care subsidy system. The Pre-K program is free to the parent, although the cost per child is more expensive than through the private system.

Therefore, it is necessary that a clarification be made regarding eligibility. The DOE and the child care industry at large must agree upon the clearly identified purpose of each program. The parents' financial responsibility under each program must be clarified. Head Start must be expanded to reach all eligible children for whom it was intended. Expansion of HRS-subsidized child care for all eligible families must occur as well, with technical assistance and resource development of the private industry. In short, the need is for more child care subsidy and collaboration between the three programs to serve the right families. The present confusion results in a significant disincentive to families on the financial borderline and in certain neighborhoods. Some quit their jobs and use the public program instead of maintaining their move toward self-sufficiency. Others stop paying for their own child care and use the public program because it's free. Others rearrange their work schedules to take advantage of the free public school program.

GUEST COMMENTARY

These examples go against the purposes of the public school program as Head Start and Pre-K should be releasing families into the private 4C child care system once they work and need full day care. At that point, the families would pay part or all of the costs, depending upon the parents' financial ability.

The school district continues to add Pre-K classrooms because the legislature for that purpose. Meanwhile, money is urgently needed in the K-12 program. Districts should be allowed to spend the money where they need it while the DOE could construct the lottery Pre-K funds to HRS or directly to local child care coordinating agencies such as 4C to continue and expand the present cost-effective child care subsidy system.

Billie's niece Phoebe Carpenter is president of Community Coordinated Child Care for Central Florida, Inc., a community-based, non-profit children's services coordination agency based in Orlando. 4C is dedicated to improving the quality of life for children in Central Florida by forming linkages between agencies, services and families with young children.

SARAH OVERSTREET

Who cares about Chelsea's school?

When I realized what I was doing, I had to laugh. "Hypocrites 'R' Us," I told my friend over the phone.

The moment I'd heard the news that the Clintons were sending daughter Chelsea to a private school after all Bill's talk of improving public education, I nearly broke my dialing finger punching this friend's number. Seems he'd heard the news on CNN a few minutes earlier and was already halfway to a full head of steam by the time I called. "Yeah, that's how it hit me, too," he said. "That's sure some way to back public education."

We ranted a few minutes until it began to dawn on me just who was decrying this new perfidy — the guy who went to private schools from kindergarten through high school, and the woman who's always comparing her public-school education to his and wondering if she should have taken her dad's offer in fifth grade to send her to a private school. (She didn't go because the nuns scared her and there were no little boys. It wasn't the last time little boys made her take a wrong turn.)

"Listen to us," I said. "Wasn't it just last week you were quoting some famous old dead coot you'd studied in 11th grade whom I hadn't had in four years of college?"

He started to laugh. "Yeah, by God, those priests were hard, but I sure did learn something."

Our situations weren't much like Bill and Hillary's — my friend's parents were blue-collar Catholics determined their kids should have the best education possible. Church policy and hard work allowed them to do it. When he grew up, my friend chose public school for his children because he liked the school system in his city, and then he became the most devoted member of the PTA.

I was the daughter of parents who had desperately wanted college educations, but the Depression conspired against them. My father even had to leave his small Kansas town and go to work in a larger city to get through public high school. The preciousness of a good education was, no doubt, why he considered sending me to the best school he could afford.

My friend and I have had many conversations about education over the years, and had never seen a conflict between a parent championing our "free public education" and sending a child to whatever school he or she finds appropriate. Yet neither of us support President Bush's education vouchers. We don't think a private-school education is something other taxpayers should subsidize, any more than taxpayers should help a parent send a child to an expensive, out-of-state school instead of the state U. a few miles away.

So why the visceral reactions when we heard the Clintons' decision? We weren't sure. Perhaps it was Clinton's "man of the people" stump demeanor, or the speeches that made voters believe this president cares enough about troubled public schools to truly shove the pendulum in the other direction. To hear that he had chosen a private school for his own daughter stung a little.

In the emotional sting of the moment, I forgot the English teacher in my city who home-schooled her own children until they reached high school. She taught in a public school before they were born, she's back at it again, and she's good. Her kids are wonders to behold. I forgot the legion of parents who are glad our country offers free public education, yet still send their children to private schools. It's a decision they make because they believe it is the best they can do for their children. Many of them teach in public schools.

'Hypocrites 'R' Us,' I told my friend over the phone.

United Tech. to cut jobs

By ANDREW FRASER
Associated Press Writer

HARTFORD, Conn. — United Technologies Corp. today reported a $333 million fourth-quarter loss and said it will eliminate more than 10,500 jobs at its Pratt & Whitney subsidiary.

In a letter to Pratt & Whitney employees, the jet engine-maker's president, Karl J. Krapak, said the division lost about $600 million in 1992 and would have to speed up its previously announced restructuring.

He said Pratt & Whitney now plans to reduce its overall staffing from 40,004 workers at the end of 1992 to no more than 30,000 by the end of 1994. Of the more than 10,000 jobs being cut, he said 6,700 would be in Connecticut and 1,800 in Florida.

"This action is being taken in response to the deepening recession in the aviation industry and strong competitive pressures," Krapak said in the letter. "Our goal is to make ourselves recession-proof."

The fourth-quarter loss posted by United Technologies translates to a per-share loss of $3.77 and was actually down from a loss of $1.25 billion, or $10.33 per share, during the fourth quarter of 1991. For the year, United Technologies reported a net loss of $287 million, or $2.67 per share, an improvement over the loss of $1.02 billion, or $10.33 per share, reported in 1991 when the company took restructuring and environmental charges of $1.83 billion.

The company blamed the fourth-quarter loss in large part on the continued slump of its power systems segment — which includes Pratt & Whitney. Robert F. Daniell, United Technologies' chairman and chief executive officer, said there was still "unprecedented turmoil and financial losses in the commercial airline industry" but Pratt's efforts to become more competitive make him confident that the company will do well in the future.

Besides the layoffs at Pratt & Whitney, UTC said its Hamilton Standard subsidiary will cut 700 jobs over the next two years. Hamilton Standard, which makes space suits and other aerospace equipment, has cut 4,000 jobs since 1990.

Daniell said that UTC eliminated 10,926 jobs in all of its divisions since announcing the restructuring last January.

Pratt & Whitney spokesman Mark Sullivan said about 60 percent of the jobs being cut would be salaried, white-collar positions. He called it "bitterly unfortunate."

of Sanford. Lake Mary Public Works Director Bill Temby said this morning. "The amount of rainfall we've had so far hasn't given us any problems, at least none that have been reported."

A spokesman at the Longwood Public Works department said no reports of any major problems had been reported as of 9 a.m. this morning.

Through this morning, one of the largest downpours was reported in Jupiter, north of West Palm Beach, where some reports have indicated the rainfall yesterday totaled up to six inches.

Sanford City Commissioner A.A. McClanahan was in West Palm Beach early yesterday, but had to drive back to Sanford for last night's City Commission meeting. "I don't think I've ever driven through such continuous rain," he commented.

"When I drove through Jupiter, he added, "one street was so badly flooded from the rain that I saw a couple of young men driving jet skis down the street."

IBM to cut quarterly dividend, hunt for new chief executive

By Associated Press

NEW YORK — IBM announced today it will cut its dividend sharply and begin a search to replace chairman John F. Akers in a sign of the deep troubles at the world's leading computer maker.

The decision by IBM's board of directors to replace Akers comes against a backdrop of a U.S. corporate record $6 billion in losses in 1992 and a continued failure to rebound despite a series of deep restructurings.

In a bid to save billions of dollars, IBM said it would cut its quarterly dividend by more than half to 54 cents from $1.21. The cut was widely expected.

Akers said in a statement the reduction was made "only after careful consideration."

The new dividend is payable March 10 to stockholders as of Feb. 10.

International Business Machines Corp. said Akers would remain as chairman and chief executive while a search committee begins its work, looking at both IBM employees and candidates from outside the company. "Although serious challenges remain ahead for IBM, we are confident that we are on the right path," Akers said. "We are resolved to do whatever is required to improve the company's financial performance." The search should take three months, the company said.

Florida, Hawaii record growth rates below national inflation rate

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Midwestern states, relatively untouched by the commercial real estate bust, show the strongest growth in personal income since the depths of the recession, the government said today.

Meanwhile, states hit by last year's hurricanes, by defense spending cutbacks and by real estate problems dominate the list of areas with slow income growth, the Commerce Department said.

Nationally, incomes grew at an annual rate of 4.4 percent from the first quarter of 1991 — the so-called trough of the recession — to the third quarter of 1992, which marked the point nationally when the production of goods and services by the economy exceeded the pre-recession peak.

The income growth outpaced inflation, which rose at an annual rate of 3.2 percent during the six-quarter recovery period.

Only two states — both hit by hurricanes — had income growth rates below the inflation rate: Hawaii, where incomes fell at an annual rate of 1.3 percent, and Florida, where income grew at a 2 percent rate.

They were followed by Connecticut, 3.3 percent; Massachusetts, 3.4 percent; Maryland, 3.5 percent; Virginia, 3.6 percent; Delaware, 3.7 percent, and California, Iowa and New Jersey, all 3.8 percent.

Facility last night. His mother was with him at the time of the arrest," he said, "and we are now waiting for what we hope will be further arrests in the near future."

Rotundo said it has been determined, based on evidence gathered by investigator Arthur Barnes, that robbery was the motive for the South Park Avenue murder, although police originally ruled out robbery. When Marsh's body was found, his identification cards and money were with him.

Acting Chief Russell said there was evidence of a struggle at the scene, just north of 35th Street. Police theorize the shotgun in the youth's hands went off, mortally wounding Marsh. The robbers were frightened and ran off without taking any of Marsh's possessions, Russell said.

A poster flagged down a policeman at about 12:30 a.m. Police found Marsh's body along the roadside — with a shotgun blast in his chest. Marsh was taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital, but was already dead.

Steve Harriett, who was Sanford Police Chief at the time of the shooting said this morning. "This points to the fact that we need to be seriously concerned with increasing juvenile crime."

Harriett, now second in command at the Seminole County Sheriff's department commented, "I believe there are many ways in which we can help reduce juvenile crime, by an improved suitable home life, and through programs such as the Sheriff's department is working on including the Police Athletic League, working through school resource officers and community oriented policing."

Mayor Betty Smith expressed concern about how to prevent the meetings from being adversarial.

"We should emphasize that they aren't gripe sessions," said City Manager Bill Simmons. "The focus should be on things of general interest rather than personal situations."

"We should also stress that we would be there to listen," McClanahan said, "but that we don't set policies by ourselves. It takes action by the entire commission to do that."

In making his suggestion, Marder observed, "Many local governments are recognizing the need to communicate with, listen to and respond to citizen needs in a more proactive manner than ever before." "Holding open house meetings in neighborhoods provides an opportunity for citizens to overcome a natural reluctance to travel to city hall and attend a formal meeting," he added.

Prior to each meeting, Marder suggested forms be circulated to enable persons attending the neighborhood meetings to bring up specific items, and have them directed to the department head that may be able to provide the best response.

The members of the commission gave a unanimous consensus vote to approve the project during the city commission workshop meeting last night. The date of the first meeting and location remain to be determined.

Trial

"Jack up" or rob Cohen. Bellamy asked his friend to come along but Johnson declined. Johnson testified he saw Bellamy the next day and Bellamy said that "something had — up" and that "Wally (Cohen) was gone."

At that time he also saw a gun in Bellamy's pants, Johnson testified.

Under questioning from Defense Attorney James Figgatt, Johnson testified he had been drinking during the night in question and was slightly intoxicated when he met Bellamy and Cohen.

During his opening argument, Stone said the green and white Oldsmobile was pivotal in the case.

"That's what the case is all about," Stone said.

The prosecution contends that Bellamy liked the stereo speakers in the car and planned to steal them from Cohen. However, something went wrong during the robbery attempt and Cohen was killed, the state contends.

Figgatt maintained his client was guilty of nothing but excessive drinking.

"At best my client was a very intoxicated individual but he had nothing to do with the death of Leah Cohen," Figgatt told the jury.

The trial was delayed Monday morning when Judge Dickey was informed that, during the long Friday session, one juror had suggested how to speed up the hearings.

The juror allegedly said, "We could just burn him (the defendant) now."

Dickey questioned each individual juror about whether they had heard the statement but all said they hadn't. The juror who allegedly made the statement denied it.

Figgatt requested a mistrial but Dickey denied the motion. However, using an "abundance of caution" he did dismiss the juror who allegedly made the remark.

The state is seeking the death penalty in the case. Until the courtroom was cleared by Dickey, the trial was watched by approximately two dozen spectators.

they are also supporting the national Republican party platform which calls for less government intervention in local affairs.

"We don't like them to shove things down our throats," Eiam said. "We have people here in Seminole County that we elected who know how we feel."

The Seminole County school board is expected to pass a similar resolution calling for Chile to reject the panel's recommendation at tonight's meeting.

Eiam lauded the school board for working with the PTA and other community groups and speaking for how the people feel on this issue.

He noted that in other areas where condoms have been distributed, the rates of both AIDS and pregnancy among students have increased.

"In New York City for example, the number of teen pregnancies has increased more than 40 percent since they began distributing condoms," he said. "In one city in California where they teach only abstinence, the pregnancy rate has dropped by 16 percent. The rates are similar for AIDS cases.

Eiam said that the condoms that have been distributed in New York, for example, are of the "animal skin" variety, which he said are contraceptives and do nothing to prevent AIDS.

He noted that the Republican Executive Committee's resolution was drafted by three people on the committee.

"They were conservative and moderate," he said. "There were no special interest groups who presented this resolution."

Eiam said that copies of the resolution had been faxed to the national Republican party, to the state department of education and to Chile.

While Sachs said the governor had not yet seen the resolution, he did note that Chile would take it and other public re-

Children of rape in Bosnia face uncertain future

By TEDDIE WEYR
Associated Press Writer

ZAGREB, Croatia — No one knows how many there may be.

Outwardly, they will carry no scarlet letter. But a fear they may be stigmatized by their horrible secret has sparked a scramble to save innocents from the sins of their fathers.

They are the babies of victims of rape — living reminders of its use as a tool of war in Bosnia. Publicity has touched a nerve and led to adoption offers from across the world. With the first few of these children already born and many more on the way, much is left to be decided.

But it is clear many of their mothers never want to lay eyes on them.

"This crime has horrible implications, psychological to existential," Martin Raguz, the social services minister of the Muslim-led Bosnian government. "I think we can project that a lot of these children will be up for adoption."

Estimates of the number of women raped range from 20,000 to 50,000, and it is uncertain how many became pregnant and how many might have been able to obtain an abortion. Despite making a special study, the European Community says it cannot predict how many children will be born.

Many of the women are afraid to talk about their ordeals, and still live in war zones or as refugees in foreign countries.

One Muslim woman interviewed in a Zagreb hospital acknowledged her unborn child was guilty of nothing, but added, "When I think of it, I remember everything and blood comes to my eyes."

There are three known cases in Croatia of babies abandoned by rape victims. But Dr. Veselko Grizelj, chief obstetrician at Zagreb's Petrova Hospital, believes there will be many more. The fighting in Bosnia began 10 months ago.

"We are just seeing the tip of the iceberg," he said.

There are many pockets of Muslim resistance throughout Bosnia where decent medical care and access to the outside world are impossible.

There are chilling allegations of rape camps set up by Serb irregulars. There also are reports of Serb women having been raped, but most of the blame has been placed on rebel Serb forces.

Many experts fear that women carrying these children will not come forward. In patriarchal Muslim society in Bosnia, there is almost nothing more shameful.

There are nearly 300,000 Bosnian refugees in Croatia, most of them Muslims who fled Serb attacks. Some are women who were raped.

Ivica Simunovic, Croatia's minister of labor and social services, says the children are legally Bosnian, and their government must make the decisions about their future.

One thing it could do in the meantime would be to authorize Croatia to arrange adoptions for the duration of the war, he said.

The primary concern, said Raguz, the Bosnian minister who has two small children of his own, is to ensure all Bosnian children survive, not only those born to rape victims.

Raguz acknowledged that dealing with the babies of rape victims is a "special issue ... (which) can't be regulated by the existing legal procedure. We're talking about an unprecedented war crime."

Nevertheless, he said laws cannot be ignored. That is problematic. Both Bosnian and Croatian law require the signature of both parents for adoption.

Many women don't even know where their husbands are, or if they are still alive. In any case, few want their husbands to know they were raped, let alone pregnant.

Raguz said his ministry must give its approval to foreign adoptions because priority is given to Bosnian couples.

He suggested babies could be temporarily placed with families wishing to adopt them and the legal details sorted out later.

The Bosnian and Croatian governments have set up crisis teams, but already adoption offers are flooding in.

"Almost no day goes by when people from the whole world don't call," said Jelena Brajsa, head of the Roman Catholic organization Caritas in Zagreb. "What can I say, when the politicians don't know?"

"My hands are completely tied. I can't do anything," said Brajsa, who for 25 years has taken in abandoned children, many laid at her doorstep. "It's terrible, how long will there be such chaos?"

Brajsa said it is better that the children be given immediately to adoptive parents to give them a good start "after nine months in the womb under such hate."

But she raised another troubling question: what to do with women who choose to keep the babies? She plans to open a home for them soon and two or three women already have asked to be taken in, she said.

Some women activists say that only hides the problems.

Karin Landgren of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Zagreb said that in communities where rape is considered worse than death, "removing them doesn't help, it reinforces" those attitudes.

Counselors should focus on educating the community, she said, because "this is something that will be a problem for years."

"I'll go to the market!
I'll stay home!
I'll have roast beef."

Mrs. Clinton gets an assignment, draws flak

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Clinton has come up with a major job for his wife — heading a task force to draft an overhaul of the health-care system — but some experts say he may be inviting trouble.

The president announced the appointment Monday at the end of an hour-long meeting with health advisers. First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton sat a few feet away, but made no public statement.

She won't get paid as chairman of the Task Force on National Health Care Reform, but she'll be the first president's wife to hold such a key policy job.

"I am certain that, in the coming months, the American people will learn — as the people of Arkansas did — just what a great first lady they have," Clinton said.

Experts in the health care field welcomed the appointment as certain to give priority to their issue.

"She's smart and her record with the Children's Defense Fund suggests she's very caring," said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the Health Research Group in Ralph Nader's Public Citizen.

And Jayne Brady, program manager for Health Care for America, representing about 60 reform-minded health organizations, said Mrs. Clinton's successes as her husband's adviser on education reform in Arkansas "is a perfect example of what she can do."

But Gary Bauer, who was domestic policy adviser in Ronald Reagan's White House, said Mrs. Clinton's very prominence may hurt her — and him.

"How does a secretary of health and human services or a budget director tell a president that his wife's idea is half-baked?" he asked.

Bruce Smith, who taught public administration at Columbia University for many years, said it is always a mistake to give such prominence to a team trying to devise policy in so difficult an area.

"You have to grind through the options and make tough choices and that's hard to do at a high-political level," he said, especially since any health reform plan is likely to hurt many people — cutting benefits and increasing costs for some, raising deductibles, limiting Medicare payments, reducing doctors' incomes.

Burton Pines, a conservative analyst, said Clinton is entitled to appoint whomever he wants; but, from a political point of view, he is taking a risk.

"The American public up to now has never looked favorably on first ladies who get involved in policy," Pines said. "The most favored first ladies have been Bess Truman and Barbara Bush. They did nothing; they were not threatening to other American women. The others — Eleanor Roosevelt, Jackie Kennedy, Lady Bird Johnson, Rosalynn Carter, Nancy Reagan — somehow by their activity antagonized the public."

The activist first ladies have been informal advisers; none had a formal title or such a specific assignment on a priority issue.

Bauer, now president of the Family Research Council, a conservative lobbying group, said the appointment showed Clinton was "disingenuous during the campaign" when he played down suggestions his wife would have a prominent role. "The truth obviously was closer to what she said, 'Vote for him, get me too,'" Bauer said.

In his announcement, Clinton called his wife "a first lady of many talents" with a unique gift for cutting through complex issues and forging consensus.

He said the task force would work in the Old Executive Office Building in a crash effort to meet his goal of sending his health reform legislation to Capitol Hill in his first 100 days.

Serving under Mrs. Clinton will be Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala and the secretaries of Treasury, Commerce, Defense, Veterans Affairs and Labor, as well as the head of the Office of Management and Budget and senior White House aides.

Clinton faces a wary Congress over ending military ban of gays

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Clinton still vows to end the ban on homosexuals in the military, but he faces congressional heat that could prove even more troublesome than the unanimous reluctance of his military chiefs.

Clinton was to discuss the issue today with congressional leaders of both parties.

On Monday, several influential senators, including Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., criticized Clinton's plan. Nunn said he will conduct hearings on the issue in March.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said there was strong bipartisan support for the ban and expressed doubt that Clinton could overcome it now or in the future.

The chiefs of the four main military services and Joint Chiefs Chairman Gen. Colin Powell told the president in a nearly two-hour meeting at the White House on Monday that they opposed ending the ban, but would respect his decision.

George Stephanopoulos, the White House communications director, said Clinton told the chiefs he would take steps within a week to end the 50-year-old prohibition.

"It's the president's decision."

Stephanopoulos said. Clinton "reiterated his commitment to ending discrimination against homosexuals in the military solely on the basis of status and to maintaining morale and cohesion in the military," the spokesman told reporters after the meeting.

"The Joint Chiefs expressed their concerns and difficulties with the president's commitment but also expressed their respect for his decision-making power as commander in chief," Stephanopoulos said.

Upon returning to his Pentagon office after the White House meeting, Powell, who is Clinton's top military adviser, declined to comment directly. Through his spokesman, Col. William Smullen, Powell described the session as "very productive."

The spokesman said none of the individual service chiefs would comment publicly on the meeting.

Military officials have raised concerns about housing, spousal benefits, discipline and requests for same-sex marriages. They also have warned of the potential of violence against homosexuals in the military.

Clinton thus is presented with the delicate challenge of fulfilling a major campaign pledge while preventing a backlash from Congress and the Defense Department.

Sears catalog, 50,000 jobs, history

By DAVID DISHNEAU
AP Business Writer

CHICAGO — It took an outsider to do what many believe had to be done at Sears, Roebuck and Co. — kill the Sears catalog.

For generations, the Sears "big book" had a place next to the Bible in many American homes. But its all-things-to-all-people approach has become a money-loser. Sears has decided the spring catalog will be the last in 97 years.

In a drive to halt a decade-long decline in its retail business, Sears also announced Monday that it will eliminate about 50,000 jobs by early 1994 and close 113 stores. Some 2,000 catalog stores also will close.

Arthur C. Martinez, a former Saks Fifth Avenue executive hired by Sears in August to revitalize its retailing unit, made the tough choice to get rid of the catalog.

"I don't think that decision could have been made by a Sears person," said analyst Philip Abbenhaus of A.G. Edwards in St. Louis.

Although it had annual revenue of $3.3 billion, Sears' U.S. catalog business had after-tax losses of more than $135 million in each of the past three years, Martinez said.

"A lot of older people like the catalog rather than go fight the crowds, sure," said Kenneth Neibarger, 72, who was shopping at a soon-to-close catalog store in Tuscola, Ill. "But it's going to be a thing of the past. We've got to change with change, I guess."

Many retail analysts have long advocated shedding the catalog business, but Sears Chairman Edward Brennan resisted when he doubled as chief of the merchandise group from 1990 to 1992.

"Brennan felt he had to bring someone in from the outside to effect such changes," said analyst Thomas Tashjian of First Manhattan Co. in New York. "Martinez historically has been successful at such moves and is a smart man who probably wouldn't have accepted the job without the ability to walk in with a hatchet."

Sears said it would cut 16,000 full-time jobs and 34,000 part-time jobs within the merchandise group, which runs the company's 859 American stores, its catalog business and Sears' credit operations. The unit employs nearly 350,000 of Sears' 435,000 workers.

The nation's third-largest retailer said the cuts would save it an estimated $300 million a year.

The first edition of the catalog came out in 1886 but featured only jewelry and watches. The first general merchandise catalog came 10 years later.

For much of its early history, the catalog had a clear mission to deliver merchandise to millions of mainly rural Americans living far away from stores. Its role lessened as retailers started springing up all over the country.

"The strategy of being all things to all people has become obsolete," said Denise Keane-Gillette, vice president of marketing at Hammacher Schlemmer & Co. of Chicago, which sells electronic toys and other gadgets by catalog.

The elimination of the Sears catalog will lead to the closing of most Sears catalog stores.

Declaration no joke

Coach glad he listened to preseason boast

By TONY DESORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

LONGWOOD — Even though he's the coach and she's a sophomore, when Danya Harris spoke, Lyman High School girls' soccer coach Gary Barnett listened.

"At the beginning of the season, she declared herself the backup goalkeeper (to starter Cheryl Roberts)," recalled Barnett. "She came up to me and said, 'I'm your back-up goalie, Coach.'"

"Who was I to disagree?"
Had any other girls' soccer coaches in the area or around the state heard the exchange, they would have thought the whole thing a put-on or that Barnett was crazy. After all, Harris is one of the most dangerous offensive players on the two-time defending Class 4A state champions.

But when Roberts was lost, possibly for the season, to mononucleosis, it was no joke. Barnett turned to Harris, who backstopped the Greyhounds to wins over Lake Mary and Lake Brantley — perhaps the two next best Class 4A teams in Central Florida — in her first two starts in goal.

Not bad for someone who's never really played the position before.

"I've played goal for a few minutes in other games when we have a big lead," said Harris, who is second among the Greyhounds in scoring with 12 goals and nine assists. "In practice, I'll stand in goal and take some shots, but that's it."

You wouldn't have known it by the way she handled Lake Brantley. After giving up three goals in her goalkeeping debut against Lake Mary, Harris was nothing short of brilliant in a 2-1 win over the Patriots at Lake Brantley that clinched the Seminole Athletic Conference championship for Lyman.

"I thought that taking her off the field would be in our favor, but she gave a tremendous effort," said Lake Brantley coach John Schaefer of Harris. "I can't ask my team for much more than they gave tonight."

What had Schaefer and Barnett both shaking their heads was a sequence during the second half when the Patriots mounted a relentless onslaught, only to be frustrated by Harris. Despite her diminutive size, Harris punched away two shots headed for the upper left corner and made a kick save of another shot.

According to Harris, she mentally prepares herself to defend the goal the same way she SANFORD — Running roughshod again.

Nothing seems to be able to slow the rebuilt T.R.C. (Tim Raines Connection) in the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Super C Polar Bear Slowpitch Softball League.

Not rain, not wind and certainly not its opposition.

For the third straight time this season T.R.C. (which has reformed after taking off last year) cruised to an easy victory, trouncing Cafe Sorrento 10-2 at rain-swept Chase Park Monday night.

The game was the only one of the three scheduled games that was actually played. The first game was declared a double forfeit after neither Mudfish or Ken Rummel Chevrolet had enough players show up for the game. The other game ended up a 7-0 forfeit win for Coaches Locker Room when Sunchase Homes did not field a team.

T.R.C. is now 3-0 on the season, while Mudfish, Ken Rummel Chevrolet and Coaches Locker Room are all 1-1, Cafe Sorrento 0-2 and Sunchase Homes 0-3.

Next week, Coaches Locker Room and Mudfish play at 8:30 p.m., Cafe Sorrento takes on Sunchase Homes at 7:30 p.m. and Ken Rummel Chevrolet challenges T.R.C. at 8:30 p.m.

The T.R.C. defense set the tone for the game in the top of the first inning as after Cafe Sorrento's Craig Split and John Dunn both singled to open the game, T.R.C. pitcher Tommy Gracey induced a short to second to first to third triple play to squelch the threat.

After the big play, Cafe Sorrento only had one runner get as far as second base until the sixth inning.

With Cafe Sorrento still in shock.

Moorefield, defense paces Patriots win

From Staff Reports

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Lyaa Moorefield scored a game-high 17 points Monday night to lead the Lake Brantley Patriots to a 63-38 win over the visiting Deltona Wolves in a 4A-District 9 girls' basketball game.

Deltona earned a split of the evening's activities, winning the junior varsity contest 45-40.

Moorefield also had eight rebounds and four blocked shots to anchor the Patriot defense, which limited Deltona to eight first-quarter points and four in the third quarter.

"We played pretty tough defense and that really sparked our offense," said Lake Brantley coach Karen Szcwcyk.

Leighann Penny added 14 points and nine assists for the Patriots. Jenn Vander Weide scored 10 points on 4-for-5 shooting from the floor and a 2-for-2 effort from the free throw line. Vander Weide also had four rebounds. For Deltona, Karen Owen scored 14 points and Vickie Abato netted 10.

Now 10-6, the Patriots will play again tonight, hosting the Lyman Greyhounds in a Seminole Athletic Conference contest scheduled to tip off at 7:30 p.m. The junior varsity contest is scheduled to start at 6 p.m.

Lake Howell girls get votes in 4A state poll

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — And then there was one.

In the high school basketball poll released in Tallahassee on Monday only Lake Howell's girls' team was receiving votes.

But even with a 20-3 record and two victories over Seminole and one victory each over Lake Mary, Lyman and Lake Brantley in the tough Seminole Athletic Conference, the Silver Hawks are still getting just five votes, the same number that they have gotten the last three weeks, and would be ranked just 13th in the 4A poll, if it went that high.

The only area boys' team that received votes was Class 4A-District 9 competitor Daytona Beach-Mainland, which got two votes. The Buccaneers will be at Sanford's Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium tonight to take on improving Seminole starting at 7:30 p.m. and will also make an appearance at defending district champ Oviedo on Wednesday.

'From Sun to Sun'

Play to highlight Zora Neale Hurston annual festival

By MARVA HAWKINS
Herald Correspondent

Zora Neale Hurston's "From Sun to Sun," the Hurston play of a day in a railroad camp in the early 1930s. is a story of folk tales and work songs she heard as she worked as an anthropologist around her native Florida.

The production is under the direction of Elizabeth Van Dyke, a New York-based actress and director who is pulling together local talent from Sanford and throughout central Florida. This play was first performed at Rollins College in 1933 and then in 1938 at the New York School for Social Research. "From Sun to Sun" has been adapted for the modern audiences, a more conventional play, which combines Hurston's collection of folklore with a plot.

This material is not to be reviewed as just a song and dance revue; the audience will get a sense of the real people as defined by Hurston. Van Dyke was indeed a natural to direct this production as she has directed a one-woman show called "Zora." Van Dyke has immersed herself in Hurston's work. She has a very deep interest in the Eatonville writer who had ties with the Sanford community. Hurston's family lived in Sanford for many years and their home still stands at the corner of Sixth Street and Hickory Avenue where the Joneses, Walkers and Franceses live.

Zora Neale Hurston's ties to Sanford will live on because of having the talent needed to become a part of this production put on by the Fourth Annual Zora Neale Hurston Festival of the Arts and Humanities and the Association to Preserve the Eatonville Community, Inc. Talented people from Sanford auditioned for parts in the play. Sanfordites in the production are Patricia Hitchmon, stage manager, founder and director of

Kindness paid off for hotel clerk

DEAR ABBY: I read your reply to "Front Desk Clerk," who wanted the public to know that a front desk clerk is not a maintenance man who will fix television sets, break into someone's automobile when the keys are locked inside, change light bulbs and unplug toilets. The prevalent attitude of "It's not my job" is one of the reasons America is having trouble competing globally.

That letter reminded me of a story I once heard: A businessman arrived at a hotel late one night without a reservation. The night clerk on duty indicated that all the rooms were booked, but the businessman was welcome to sleep in the other twin bed in his small room. The weary businessman accepted the night clerk's invitation without hesitation. The next morning, the businessman thanked the clerk, and before departing, said: "If I ever own a hotel one day, I would like you to run it."

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Some years later, the clerk was contacted by this businessman, asking him if he would like to come to New York and run his new hotel. The businessman was John Jacob Astor. The hotel, the Waldorf Astoria. True story!

CHICAGO TRIBUNE READER
DEAR READER: An interesting aside: John Jacob Astor, the great-grandson of the family's founder, was one of 2,200 passengers aboard the Titanic in 1912. He went down with the ship.

P.S. I wonder who the "clerk" was.

DEAR ABBY: The controversy in your column concerning wind chimes prompted me to write to you about my pet peeve. I live in the country, and I used to like to sit on my back porch and watch the moonlight shimmering on our pond.

Now when city folks move to the country, the first thing they do is buy a couple of Dobermans and put up searchlights in their yard.

These searchlights glare into the neighboring properties whether the neighbor wants the light or not.

I maintain that people who are afraid of the dark should stay in the city. The glare of my neighbor's searchlights is polluting my property as it shines through my bedroom blinds and draperies and lights up my porch — where I used to sit and enjoy the stars.

Abby, shouldn't there be a law that these lights be hooded in such a way as to shine only on the owner's property? Sign me...
NOT AFRAID OF THE DARK

DEAR NOT AFRAID: If you haven't spoken to your neighbors about this, you should. Many people light up their properties as an effective security measure. (Our across-the-street neighbor lights up his property like Times Square on New Year's Eve, but nobody complains because his lights provide added security for everyone on the block.)

DEAR ABBY: I had silicone breast implants in May of 1980. I have read quite a bit regarding this subject, and the problems that may occur. One question I would like answered is: Can I get pregnant while I have these implants?

I have a 4-year-old daughter and I am not considering another child, but only if there is no risk to the child and myself. The question was never really addressed when I met with the plastic surgeon.

There is a lot of discussion about the health of women who have implants. Right now, I am not having any health problems, but I am concerned about the future. How should I go about researching this matter, and whom should I consult? Thank you so much for your response.
ANDREA M.

DEAR ANDREA: It is safe to get pregnant with silicone implants. However, because of possible gel bleed, you should not breast-feed the baby. The silicone could leak into the milk and be ingested by the child. For further information, contact the doctor who gave you the implants, and/or La Leche League International, P.O. Box 1200, Franklin Park, Ill. 60131-8206. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.
