Gas prices here at pre-war level

LAKE MARY — Gas prices have dropped to where they were when Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, the American Automobile Association reported Thursday.

Subtract the state and federal gasoline tax increases that occurred in recent months, and prices are well below their August levels.

Spot checks made by the AAA's Florida club in several Florida cities on Wednesday showed regular unleaded self-service gas selling for an average of about $1.10 a gallon. In the Sanford and Lake Mary areas, unleaded self-service gasoline was as low as $1.03.9 at several stores.

That's down about 20 cents a gallon since Jan. 17, one day after the U.S.-led coalition began bombing Baghdad. Prices have dropped steadily in the past two months in part because of adequate oil stocks and no major supply disruptions during the war.

Last July, AAA found self-service regular unleaded selling for an average of $1.047.

But in December federal gas taxes rose 5.1 cents a gallon, and in January most Florida counties raised the state gas tax by another 4 cents.

Without those taxes, Florida motorists would be paying about $1 a gallon for self-serve regular unleaded, the most popular type and grade.

Bush sets deadline

U.S. gives Saddam 'til noon Saturday to begin pullback

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Bush, speaking for the coalition that is poised for a ground assault against Iraq, said today that Saddam Hussein has until noon on Saturday to "begin his immediate and unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait."

"We must hear publicly and authoritatively his acceptance of these terms," Bush said. He said of a Moscow peace plan: "Any conditions would be unacceptable to the international coalition."

In a Rose Garden appearance to make public his ultimatum, Bush said that Saddam had "launched a scorched earth policy against Kuwait," even while his foreign minister was discussing peace plans in Moscow.

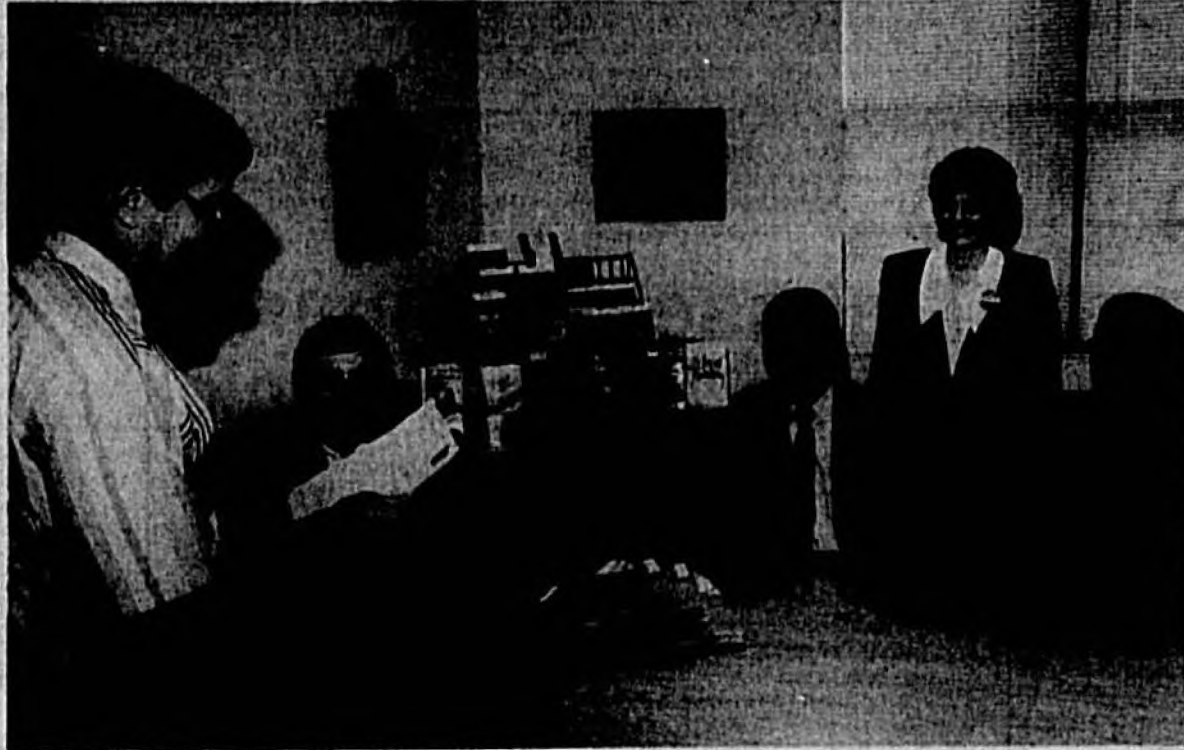

"They are destroying the entire oil production system of Kuwait," the president said of the occupying Iraqi forces.

Bush said he had consulted with Desert Storm coalition leaders and they had agreed to describe their terms for Iraq to withdraw. A ground assault to force this withdrawal is thought otherwise to be imminent.

A Pentagon official said in the meantime that the Persian Gulf War continued unabated.

The president said he appreciated the Soviet peace initiative, but said the statement issued from Moscow had attached conditions to what it said was an unconditional offer of troop withdrawal.

Seminole High School grad seeks alumni serving in Gulf

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Billy Higgins wants the alumni of Seminole High School who are serving in the Persian Gulf to know that they are in the hearts of the SHS graduates back home.

"We want to let them know that we are thinking about them and that we support what they are doing," he said.

Higgins, a 1984 graduate of Seminole High, said that he and the other members of the schools Community and Student Action Committee (COMSAC) group are sending a letter and a copy of the group's alumni newsletter to as many Persian Gulf soldiers as they can find.

Higgins said the group has been having a little difficulty in finding the addresses for many of the alumni who are fighting in the Gulf War.

"It's been a little difficult to track them all down over there," he said.

The COMSAC group has been soliciting the help of the people of Sanford who might know of SHS graduates who are serving in the Middle East.

"We think this kind of mail from the community of Sanford might be good for them," he said, "so we want to mail it out to as many of those men and women as we can."

The letter and alumni news, which will be mailed out to the soldiers already on the mailing list of the group, will be mailed soon.

"We want you to know that we understand the sacrifices you are making," the letter says.

"We appreciate and support you during this

Traffic snarls to worsen in Lake Mary

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — Pete Kelley last night stood before the city commission and an audience of cable TV viewers and warned them of a commuter's worst nightmare: traffic on Interstate-4 is about to — is it possible? — get worse.

And, what's worse, the already-congested Lake Mary Boulevard will be no relief to traffic-weary travelers once work begins in June to widen the road from two to four lanes.

Kelley, Hubbard Construction project manager for the I-4/Lake Mary Boulevard interchange construction, pointed to a three-week period in April when drivers should, when possible, find another way home.

I have no solution, other than to tell people to stay home.

-Pete Kelley

"I have no solution, other than to tell people to stay home," Kelley chided commissioners who relayed questions phoned in from cable viewers of the live broadcast. Viewers also heard about the Lake Mary Boulevard widening project from county engineer Jerry McCollum during the Lake Mary City Commission meeting last night.

The I-4 project, which began last month, is slated by contract to last 480 days, Kelley said, but actual construction may take about three months less than that.

When completed, the project will widen the Lake Mary Boulevard bridge over I-4 from two to nine lanes, creating two lanes in each direction unimpeded by traffic lights. Raymond Link, Hubbard chief financial officer, said the new interchange will be "an enhanced Maitland Boulevard," which is located two exits south of the Lake Mary interchange on I-4.

Link and Kelley outlined the schedule of construction phases:

• The first phase of the project, which is to last about 240 days, involves construction of a new on-ramp from Lake Mary Boulevard to eastbound interstate lanes. Link said. Kelley said that ramp should be open by April 1.

The snafu Kelley predicted will happen during

County considers suits for collecting road fees

By J. MARK BARNFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Dozens of builders and some homeowners may face Seminole County lawsuits to collect road impact fees.

Monday, county commissioners will consider suing 43 builders in Seminole County small claims, county and circuit courts to collect $118,539 owed in 233 unpaid impact fee assessments. Because the fees "run with the land," some homeowners may face the lawsuits if their home builders prove to the county the buyers were notified of the fees. Homebuilders say they're ready to fight.

"I certainly hope they do file their lawsuit," said David Stump, president of Stenstrom-Stump Construction and Development Corp., Sanford. "All the builders will muster together to fight this. What they ought to do is just drop it. The last election ought to sent them a message. The people are tired of this kind of stuff."

Stump said the county shouldn't sue him over the fees because he was issued certificates of occupancy, "C.O.s" for his homes during the 1987 through 1989 when the road fees were challenged by three cities in courts. C.O.s are authorization from the local government the building had been constructed properly and is ready to be occupied.

"I paid all the fees I was legally required to pay or else I wouldn't have been issued a C.O.," Stump said. "I could have notified the buyers about the potential these fees might be collected by the county, but if I did that, I'd have to notify them that their taxes might go up or that some other fee might be charged."

Builders were issued notices when they received C.O.s for their structures during the litigation that the fees will be due if the courts uphold the county's right to collect them.

Larry Palombi, president of TEC Homes, Inc., Lake Mary, said he doesn't owe fees on 18 homes in Tusawilla the county claims he does because home purchase documents signed by homebuyers stated new homes in Winter Springs might be subject to the fees. Palombi said he also verbally notified most buyers the fee might have to be paid by them in the future.

Palombi said Winter Springs officials refused to collect the fees for homes built in their city and advised him not to pay them.

Pam Hastings, county capitol improvements planner, said as recently as September, builders were asked for documentation or even

Tradition continues to help children

By BOB PRUFANK

SANFORD — This Saturday, a long standing tradition continues in the local area as the Sanford Kiwanis Club conducts its 30th annual Pancake Day at the Sanford Civic Center by the lakefront in downtown Sanford.

Serving will begin at 7:30 a.m., and continue until 5 p.m., with a host of additional events planned for those in attendance including a silent auction with items donated by a variety of area business leaders, a bake sale, a merchandise mart, and entertainment all day long by local youth groups. In addition, the club plans to be awarding door prizes every hour during the day. Fresh produce will also be available.

Pat Epting, chairman of the Kiwanis Pancake Day, is looking for a big turnout. "Last year," he said, "we made about 5,000 pancakes. This year we are expecting to serve between 1,500 and 2,000 people." Those who attend the event will be able to either eat their meal at the Civic Center, or arrange for a take-out.

David Lanier, past president of Kiwanis Club of Sanford, flipped the pancakes last year.

Epting said the money raised in this annual event goes to help in the Kiwanis Underprivileged Youth program. "We help a variety of organizations," Epting reported, "including the Salvation Army, the YMCA, the Boys and Girls Club, and several other groups who work with children who need not only the support of Kiwanis members

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Man convicted of setting girlfriend afire

BRADENTON — A man on trial accused of dousing his girlfriend with rubbing alcohol and setting her on fire testified it was all just a terrible accident, but jurors apparently didn't agree.

Johnny C. Harris said the fire actually was caused when he knocked a cup of alcohol on his girlfriend while trying to grab a crack cocaine pipe.

But the jury convicted Harris 43, of attempted second-degree murder and arson resulting in injury. Judge Peter Dubensky did not set a sentencing date.

Bradenton police said Harris poured alcohol on Deloris Dozier, 21, during a quarrel on Dec. 30, 1989, during which she threatened to leave him. Ms. Dozier was burned over 50 percent of her body.

Land purchase in limbo

TALLAHASSEE — A federal grand jury investigation may hold up Florida's plans to purchase about 620 acres of pristine beaches, dunes, lakes and forest in the Panhandle, a state official says.

Deputy Attorney General Peter Antonacci said Wednesday that he would recommend no action on the proposed $47 million Topsail Hill purchase until a Pensacola grand jury completes its probe.

Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Florida Cabinet already delayed action once in December because of questions about the accuracy of appraisals.

The federal probe apparently is focusing on prior sales of the land that involved complex financial deals with savings and loans in Texas and Pennsylvania, which may have artificially inflated its value.

Carter memorial service to be held

ORANGE CITY — A memorial service for Dr. Gwendolyn M. Carter, a noted professor on African affairs, will be held in this Central Florida community today.

Dr. Carter, 84, died Wednesday at her home after a short illness. She had lived in Orange City for the past 25 years.

Dr. Carter was born in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada. She began a long teaching career at McMaster University in Hamilton in 1932.

She then taught at Wellesley College, Tufts, Smith, Northwestern University, Indiana University and most recently at the University of Florida, from where she retired in 1987.

It was at Smith in 1948 "when I first met South Africa," she once recalled in an interview.

The memorial service will be held at the Lankford Orange City Chapel at 2 p.m. Lankford spokeswoman Diane Marsh said burial would be at a later date in Hamilton.

Study: insured motorists cheat on claims

TALLAHASSEE — Almost one of every seven insured auto owners in Florida are likely to cheat their insurance company, and the whole thing adds up to higher costs for everyone.

A University of Florida study released Thursday estimated that 13 percent of all claims paid in Florida in 1989 represented fraudulent claims totaling $379 million.

"Insurance fraud ... can result in arrest and imprisonment," said Sam Miller, spokesman for a state trade association representing the insurance industry.

However, most consumers are not worried about prosecution.

The study showed consumers felt only a slight risk of punishment because of limited enforcement resources and lax sentencing guidelines.

The study, which was based on an analysis of claims processed in April and May of 1990, revealed that 85 percent of the respondents said they would encourage a repair shop to include damage unrelated to the accident in their bill to the insurance company.

Property tax changes clears hurdle

TALLAHASSEE — A series of changes designed to equalize Florida's property tax system has cleared its first legislative hurdle.

The proposal, based on recommendations of a grand jury that said property is unequally assessed throughout the state, got the unanimous approval of the General Government Subcommittee of the House Finance and Taxation Committee.

The legislation, drafted by the state Department of Revenue, will go to the full panel after Thursday's 13-0 vote. The same proposals were discussed but not acted on by the full Senate Finance, Taxation and Claims Committee Thursday.

One of the changes would require assessment changes be documented after owners complain to county property appraisers. Some counties record such "counter changes" now, and some don't.

Another reform would make confidential the selection of properties the state plans to appraise to monitor county tax rolls.

Orange juice squeeze

Plan to promote Florida product opposed by processors

Associated Press

LAKELAND — A proposed campaign aimed at persuading consumers to buy only 100-percent Florida orange juice is meeting with opposition from three major processing companies.

The processors would rather focus an advertising campaign on boosting declining consumption.

Executives from Coca-Cola Foods division, Lykes Pisco Co. and Procter & Gamble told the Florida Citrus Commission Wednesday that the proposal could backfire.

Surveys indicate that consumers already think the orange juice they drink comes from Florida, even if that is not the case, and that it is of the highest quality, they said in a letter to the commission.

"To make Florida orange juice the solution to a problem, we're going to have to create the problem."

—Tom Floyd, Minute Maid official

"To make Florida orange juice the solution to a problem, we're going to have to create the problem," said Tom Floyd, vice president of marketing for Coca-Cola Foods, maker of Minute Maid juice.

The fourth leading processor, Tropicana Products Inc., wants to bolster the image and value of all-Florida orange juice as a way to compete against Mexico and Brazil.

After freezes in the late 1970s and early 1980s, imported Brazilian juice supplied about half of this country's demand. The level has since fallen to about 23 percent as Florida's crop rebounded, and it is projected to decline to less than 7 percent during the next decade.

The plan before the commission calls for promotion of the all-Florida juice by convincing shoppers that it is worth a premium price because it is better. The campaign is designed to increase profits for Florida growers.

However, the processors opposed to the idea noted that orange juice is losing its dominance at the breakfast table in both restaurants and at home.

Transsexual guard seeks jail job back

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — A jail guard fired six years ago when discovered wearing a woman's swimsuit, false breasts and heavy makeup is seeking reinstatement after having a sex-change operation.

Belinda Joelle Smith, formerly William Harvey Smith, told an administrative hearing officer Wednesday that she deserves her job back.

Ms. Smith, who holds a two-year degree in criminology, was acknowledged by sheriff's officials as having been a good employee, earning at least six letters of commendation.

"I just want to be back in the system, in the capacity I was in. I did nothing illegal. I wasn't arrested or anything. It was purely prejudice," she said.

With a sex-change operation in September, Smith legally became Ms. Smith.

Ms. Smith, 42, said that once her secret was out she was told that she could resign or be fired for "conduct unbecoming an officer." She was fired and the Civil Service board upheld the decision.

In 1986, Ms. Smith's attorneys filed a complaint to state officials that their client was fired because she was handicapped, but her handicap never affected her work.

When Smith was fired, he had worked for 14 years as a corrections officer and was a lieutenant watch commander at Jacksonville Correctional Institution.

At Wednesday's hearing, Jacksonville psychiatrist Daniel Stinson testified that Ms. Smith, as a transsexual, has a medically recognized psychosexual disorder, but said it was not a disorder that would impair her ability to perform her work at a correctional facility.

"Do you not foresee a problem, Dr. Stinson, of a man going out there dressed as a woman?" said Cheryl Peek, a city attorney defending the Sheriff's Office.

"It could pose a problem," he answered.

Police discovered Smith's secret when they stopped to help when he was changing a flat tire. Until that night, she had never appeared in public as a woman, Ms. Smith testified.

Attorneys have said they do not expect a ruling in the case for several months.

Supreme Court wants 22 additional judges

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Supreme Court asked Thursday for 22 new judges next year, but justices noted that the rate of criminal cases reaching the circuit courts has slowed in recent months.

Under the Florida Constitution, the Supreme Court must formally ask the Legislature to approve funding for new judges at all levels. Last year, lawmakers approved 22 new circuit judgeships.

The court, in a request written by Chief Justice Leander Shaw, asked for two additional 1st District Court of Appeal judges, eight circuit court judges and 12 county court judges for the fiscal year that begins July 1.

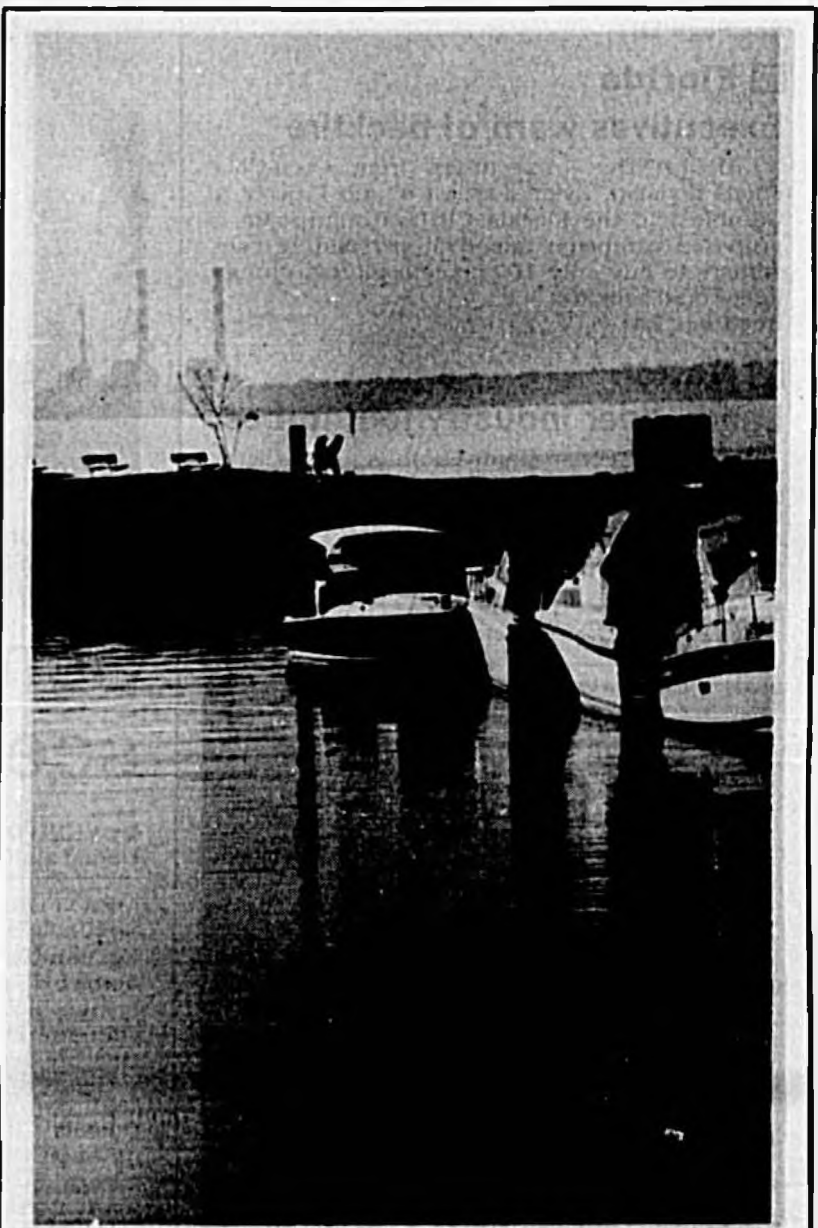

Shaw wrote that the judge ships created last year helped diminish the need for a large number this time.

"Our data also shows that the rate of increase in filings in the circuit courts, which had been quite dramatic in recent years, has slowed," Shaw wrote. "This is largely due to lower filing rates in the criminal divisions in many circuits."

The finding mirrors recent reports from both the Department of Law Enforcement and Department of Corrections that the crime rate is dropping in Florida. Prison admissions have slowed in recent months and a 1989 report showed a 2 percent decrease in crime.

Still, Shaw said eight circuits need new judges because caseloads are projected above the 1,865 filings per judge the court deems acceptable. The circuits are: 3rd, 7th, 9th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 19th and 20th.

Stadium's 'bleacher bats' moving to lakefront property

Associated Press

GAINESVILLE — A custom lakefront bat house is the centerpiece in the University of Florida's novel attempt to relocate about 4,000 bats that have become a nuisance at their current home in school athletic facilities.

The University Athletic Association is funding the $30,000 bat house construction and bat relocation project because the nocturnal mammals are making a mess of adopted quarters in the university's track and tennis stadiums. They're not easily seen, but their squeaking and the smell of their droppings leave no doubt about their presence.

"My basic concern is the maintenance and stink that the bats cause," said Danny Sheldon, the association's bat project manager.

POLICE BRIEFS

Violation of parole leads to arrest

Tyrone Eugene Taylor, 23, of 28 Cowan Moughlin Terrace in Sanford, was arrested on Tuesday and charged with violation of his parole on a charge of burglary to a conveyance. According to the report, Taylor was supposed to pay restitution to Sally Newsome, the victim of his crime, as a condition of his parole. Allegedly, he has fallen behind on those payments. He was arrested and transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where no bond was set. The report states that it was recommended that he be released on his own recognizance after his first court appearance.

Warrant brings arrest

James William Brown III, 34, of 1113 Myrtle Ave. in Sanford, was arrested on Wednesday on an outstanding warrant. According to the Sanford Police Department arrest report, Brown was arrested at 401 Magnolia Ave. when officers responded to a call regarding a disturbance. When they arrived on the scene, Brown was allegedly arguing with his landlord. A routine computer check of Brown revealed that he was wanted for failure to appear in court on a previous charge of trespassing after a warning was given. Brown was arrested and transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $200 bond.

Man violates parole, arrested

Wonzel Boyd, 28, of 1114 E. 8th St. in Sanford, was arrested on Wednesday and charged with violating his probation on a previous burglary charge. Boyd, the report stated, was placed on five years probation in May of 1990 in a case where he was allegedly involved in the burglary of a dwelling. According to the report, he had not submitted his monthly written report to the probation officer for the last two months, he had failed to pay $200 toward the cost of his supervision and he had not paid court costs. He had also failed to pay $1,940 in restitution. The report also noted that Boyd had been arrested on Feb. 13 on alleged charges of possession of crack cocaine with intent to distribute and possession of drug paraphernalia. In that case he allegedly failed to pay the county $250 for the services of the public defender. He was arrested Wednesday at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. Bond was set at $6,000.

Burglary arrest

Rodney Lee Dalley, 18, of 2519 Ridgewood Ave. in Sanford, was arrested on Thursday morning and charged with two counts of burglary, one count of conspiracy to commit burglary and one count of being an accessory after the fact. According to the Sanford Police Department report, Dalley was at home when he was arrested for allegedly working with two other individuals in breaking into Altamonte Towing Company, 2734 Orlando Dr. in Sanford. It is alleged in the report that Dalley solicited two young men into acting as look-outs while he cut through the fence on the north side of the company compound and attempted to take a 1988 Mazda. The report stated that when officers arrived on the scene, Dalley fled on foot. The two others involved in the incident alleged that they had been offered $25 each for their services. Details of their arrests are not available. Dalley was being held on $5,000 bond at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Failed road proposal frustrates officials

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — A failed proposal to take over Country Club Road has disappointed city commissioners, but a majority of them last night said they would not let it stand in the way of agreement with Seminole County on funding of Lake Mary Boulevard beautification. The road plan's demise did not end a petition campaign launched by a group of residents angered by the C-15 deal. Several citizens last night spoke out against the city's effort to take over the road, calling their petitions "a quiet ... Boston Tea Party."

The city commission last night agreed to delay a decision on a proposed interlocal agreement between the city and the county until City Manager John Litton can work out a new proposal with Seminole County. Lake Mary and Seminole County have been revising the agreement since December. A motion to deny the county's proposed agreement failed by a 3-2 vote, with Mayor Randy Morris and Commissioners Paul Tremel and Tom Mahoney saying they didn't want to "burn any bridges with the county." Commissioners George Duryea and David Meador voted to deny the proposal. "The agreement, as it stands, is going nowhere," Tremel said, asking for a new proposal to be drafted. "It doesn't serve any purpose to send a rejected agreement back."

The agreement provided that Lake Mary would assume responsibility of C-15 in exchange for the county's $230,000 share of landscaping for Lake Mary Boulevard.

Litton has suggested the city continue in the project without Seminole County's financial help. Litton this week told commissioners the state would not allow the city to take control of Country Club Road, or C-15, as the interlocal agreement had called for. State Department of Transportation officials had told Litton the city could not hold sole control over the road, which extends from U.S. Highway 17-92 at Lake Monroe to County Road 427 near Lake Mary's southern edge, because it is not entirely contained in the city. "They were offering us the responsibility of maintaining the road, but not the privilege of determining its future," Mahoney said.

Morris called the agreement's status "regrettable," echoing Mahoney's comments that the county's offer was not, in fact, what it seemed. "They were handing us the responsibility of the road and, at the same time, dictating to us what to do with it," Morris said. The county had stipulated that the city must straighten a curve on C-15 near CR 427, a project estimated at $160,000, within five years of entering the proposed agreement. City officials, however, had argued that the straightening would amount to unnecessary costs.

Sheila Sawyer, who organized Concerned Citizens for Lake Mary in opposition to the C-15 proposal, said last night she had collected 265 signatures on petitions asking for voter referendum on capital projects, such as acquisition of C-15. The petitions are still in circulation around Lake Mary, she said. As she submitted the signed documents, Sawyer called them "a quiet way of our own Boston Tea Party."

Although the C-15 proposal was abandoned last night, Sawyer criticized the commission for trying to include the road in the Lake Mary Boulevard agreement, which she said was an unrelated issue. "Politics is the art of the possible," Tremel told her. Because the city wants the gateway beautification plan to move forward, he said, Lake Mary was willing to look at alternative ways of securing the county's help in paying for it, including the C-15 deal.

FPL customers will get lower rates

From staff and wire reports

TALLAHASSEE — Florida Power & Light Co. customers will pay less for electricity this summer than they did before the United States went to war in the Persian Gulf.

Florida Power & Light serves about 33,500 utility customers in Sanford, Geneva, Chulohota and the northern 10 percent of Lake Mary.

State regulators Thursday approved FPL's request to reduce the average monthly residential electric bill — 1,000 kilowatt hours — to $75.74 from $80.37 for the six months beginning April 1.

"Everything's backward on this," said FPL spokesman Gary Mehalik. "Oil prices went up before the war, and since hostilities began prices have moved down rather dramatically."

The decrease, approved by the Florida Public Service Commission, will make the average bill 11 cents lower than before FPL's emergency increase in January of $4.52, which was intended to cover higher fuel costs triggered by tension in the Persian Gulf.

The utility said the drop in oil and natural gas prices since fighting began — and the belief that oil supplies will not be interrupted — contributed to its forecast of lower summer fuel costs.

The commission typically approves fuel charges, which are tied to market prices, twice a year based on FPL's six-month projections of costs. Fuel charges usually are higher in summer because FPL burns more oil to provide electricity for air conditioning during longer, hotter days, Mehalik said.

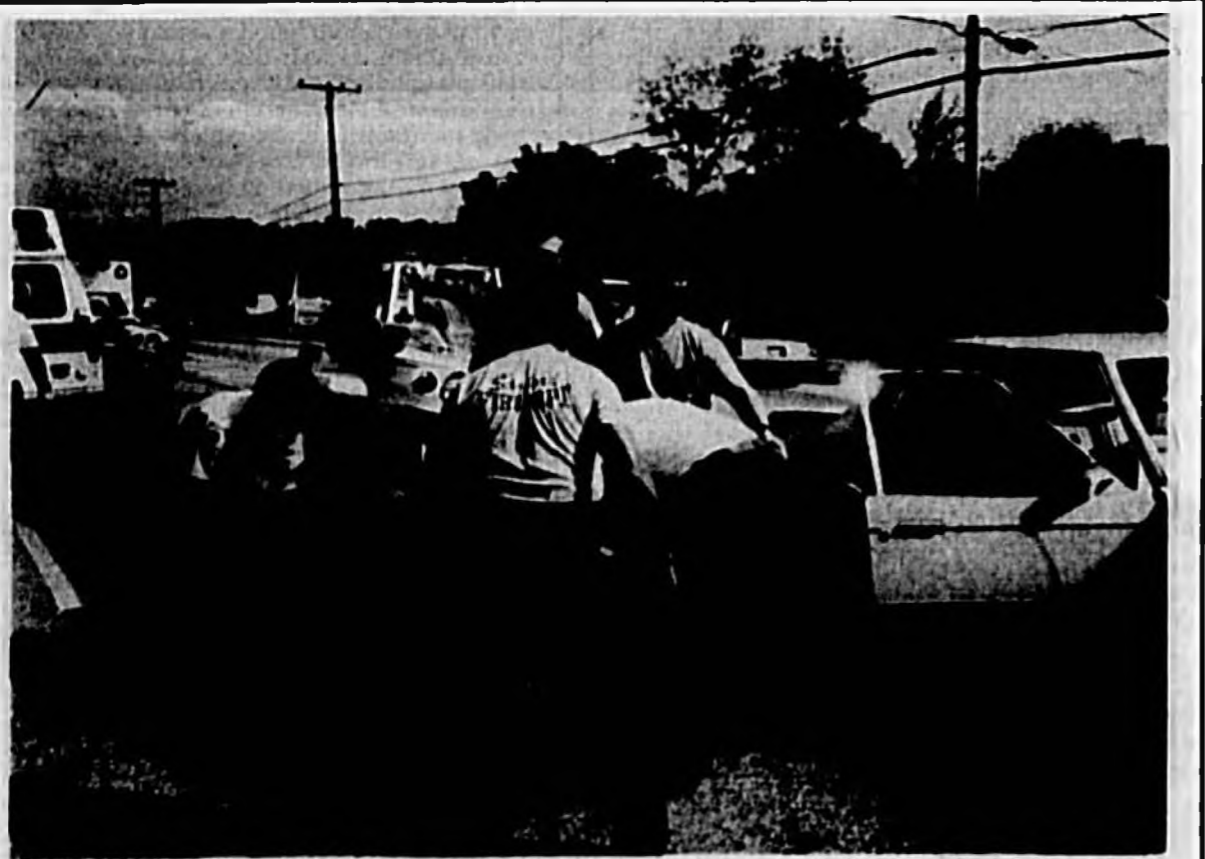

In addition, FPL is burning more oil than usual because oil-fired plants are being used to replace power from the Turkey Point nuclear plant, which is shut down for improvements.

Nevertheless, this summer's average bill will be 8 cents lower than last summer's average, which rose to $75.82 in July because of the increase in the state's gross receipts tax.

"No one can ascribe any logic to it," said Assistant Public Counsel Roger Howe, who represents utility ratepayers. "The price of oil has fallen significantly, and it seems to be happening almost in spite of the war."

Also figured into this summer's average rate is a proposed refund that amounts to 80 cents a month on a typical power bill. The refund, which the commission is expected to approve March 5, reflects a tax break FPL received from the Internal Revenue Service for increasing depreciation rates on equipment that helps the utility reduce its dependency on oil.

Armageddon agenda

The Environmental Protection Agency is trying to set some priorities for itself because EPA administrator William Reilly rightly thinks that that would be better than lurching from one crisis to another, as in the past. The problem is that the issues Reilly wants to pursue aren't necessarily the ones that the public and Congress think are most important.

Reilly told a Senate committee the other day that his own scientific advisers think that EPA's top priority ought to be global warming, a controversial theory that Reilly has endorsed far more vigorously than either the White House or the scientific evidence would support.

Public opinion surveys, however, reveal that most people ascribe little urgency to the problem of global warming. They are more concerned with the risk of oil spills, hazardous wastes, radiation leakage and poisoned groundwater — all problems that Reilly's advisers assign the lowest priority of all.

It's easy to understand the disparity. Many of the pollution problems that worry the public are recurrent, inevitable and often dismissed by theoretical scientists as the sort of thing that should be solved by engineers. Certainly they don't lend themselves to the kind of speculative debate — or the lucrative research grants and book contracts — that global warming does.

Then, too, the way Reilly posed the question may have skewed the results. He didn't ask his advisers to rank problems on the basis of how much damage they actually do or even whether they are likely to occur at all. Instead, the panel was told to set priorities on the basis of how many people and how broad a geographic area might theoretically be affected. Those criteria virtually guaranteed that global warming, as the most sweeping doomsday scenario around at the moment, would head the list.

But while the United States has an important role to play in reducing the kind of pollution on which the global warming theory has been postulated, Reilly's approach makes poor public policy. It would divert EPA's attention from the domestic environmental issues that the agency was created to address and where it has considerable regulatory authority. And it would focus the agency's efforts instead on an international front in which it has no real powers other than those of persuasion.

Worse, Reilly's priorities invite the kind of exaggeration that has often marred the advocacy of global warming, nuclear winter and other doomsday theories in the past. Governing by catastrophe scenarios may be no better a guide than running from crisis to crisis, especially if it means that some of the immediate problems of disease, contamination and public safety get short shrift. The trick is to strike a balance.

Rights panel regains voice

The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights has finally entered the fray over the Bush administration's lukewarm support for college scholarship programs for minorities. The panel has asked the president to support these programs and to make clear the government's policies regarding race-specific grants.

The commission's action shows that it is once again taking seriously its federal mandate to study important civil rights issues and offer the president and Congress recommendations on how to address them. This stance is a far cry from the panel's inactivity during the Reagan presidency, when the agency became a mere mouthpiece for White House policies even though the policies set back progress in the area of civil rights.

The shift in the commission's attitude is due partly to the leadership of its new chairman, Arthur A. Fletcher. Previously, he urged President Bush to sign the Civil Rights Act of 1990. Although Mr. Bush vetoed that bill, he at least knows that this rights panel will exercise its independence and won't be as compliant as the panel was under the Reagan administration. That's good news.

The panel's persuasive arguments recall its efforts over time to lend the voice of reason to controversial civil rights issues and to persuade the president and the Congress to do what's morally right even if they are under political pressure to do otherwise. On the important issue of college scholarships for minorities, the president should pay more attention to the recommendations of the rights agency than to the polls.

Split government is a U.S. blunder

As we all know, the United States is a democracy. (I know, I know — there are those who argue that it isn't a democracy, it's a republic; but spare me such pointless chop-logic, which leads nowhere and proves nothing.) So we defer, at least in many cases, to the wishes of the majority.

Being aware of this principle, thoughtless people sometimes make the mistake of assuming that the majority is always right. But that, of course, is nonsense. Although it is nowhere so stated, our political system seems to be based on the proposition that, while the majority isn't always right, it has a better right than anyone else to call the shots anyway. Since everybody makes mistakes, at least let ours be the mistakes of the majority.

That is about the only consolation I can dig up for a blunder that the American people have been making for most of the last 50 years: electing a Congress of one party and a president of the other. That was the state of affairs from 1948 to 1948, when the Congress was Republican and the president was a Democrat. And it was the case again (with the parties' roles reversed) from 1952 to 1960, from 1968 to 1976, and from 1980 right down to date (with the exception that from 1980 to 1986 the Democrats controlled only the House, not the Senate, under a Republican president). That adds up to 29 years of divided government.

It isn't altogether fair to conclude that the American people have deliberately made this state of affairs the chronic condition of the federal government. Shrewd gerrymandering by Democrat-controlled legislatures, back in the party's heyday, has made it all but impossible for the Republicans to win control of the House, even when the political tide is going their way. But there is recent and dismaying evidence that most people think that dividing the executive and legislative branches of the federal government between the Republicans and the Democrats is actually a pretty clever idea.

Even allowing for the tendency of many people to think that the status quo — even, in this case, divided government — is always best, those are appalling figures. Apparently a great many people have, stored away in the backs of their minds, a fuzzy recollection, acquired in some high-school civics course, that this country is constitutionally based on something called "the separation of powers." If so, then giving Congress and the presidency to rival political parties is a pretty nifty contribution to that high principle, isn't it?

No, it isn't. Instead, for nearly half a century we have repeatedly hurled the two parties at each other like ancient gladiators, differently but equally armed: the Republicans with the presidential sword and shield, the Democrats with Congress' net and trident.

Then we sit around and bellyache at each other because they can't (or won't) agree on a budget, or much of anything else. My friends, we are asking for chaos — and, since this is (remember?) a democracy, we will probably get it.

A blunder the American people have been making for 50 years.

Nuke talk: where will it end?

BOSTON — If you are looking for bleak testimony to escalation in the war of words, search no further. In barely one month America has gone from debating whether we should fight the Iraqis at all to talking about whether we should nuke them.

Nuke 'em — the call of the wild hawk — has long been standard fare for the armchair warriors who phone in to radio talk shows. But it's been heard now from some right-wing commentators who moved from believing in apocalypse to advocating it. It's been heard as well from the chairman of the Young Americans for Freedom. And this week, it was a wake-up call from a congressman.

On Monday's "Good Morning America," Dan Burton, a Republican representative from Indiana, said that if conventional bombing didn't do the job of knocking out Iraqi troops, we should go nuke. "If we use tactical nuclear weapons, I think it can be effective in getting this war over in a hurry," he said.

So it goes on the Western word front. A war, justified in part by the fear that Saddam Hussein might get the bomb, now becomes a justification for talking about using the bomb.

To a certain degree, nuketalk is another dialect of tough talk. It's rather like the appalling sight of Defense Secretary Dick Cheney autographing a bomb to the enemy. But the chilling fact is the nuke-appeal to the public.

In a Gallup poll taken Jan. 23-30, a full 45 percent of Americans favored using nuclear weapons — "if it might save the lives of U.S. troops." Another 45 percent were opposed. At the height of the Vietnam War, only a quarter of Americans joined the nuke 'em brigade. One week into this war, and we were up to dead even.

William Arkin, a military expert with Greenpeace, pronounces himself "flabbergasted" at the emergence of the nuke 'em. He regards it as failure to understand what nuclear bombs are and especially what they aren't: a magic bullet.

The military is living in the post-nuclear age, he says, but much of the American public is still living in the 1950s. "They regard the bomb as more bang for the buck, more firepower on the battlefield." But in fact, they are essentially unusable: "There is no nuclear option."

In cold military terms, we don't "need" nuclear weapons. We have the same firepower without them. The "Big Blue 82s" we dropped last week each have 12,600 pounds of explosives, as much as a small nuclear weapon without the radiation.

In tactical terms, they have no special value against enemy troops either. We couldn't wipe out Iraqi soldiers with a single nuke unless Saddam convened his army in one place so we could drop a bomb on them. It might take hundreds to decimate the 400 battalions stretched along the front, which would become a nuclear wasteland.

As for political goals, we can't liberate

Kuwait by nuking it. Drop the Big One on Baghdad? There are 4.1 million civilians living there. So much for the moral victory. So much for a stable New World Order.

I don't think the nuke 'em sentiment comes out of some bloodthirsty American war rage. Indeed, it may come from the opposite: the public fear and abhorrence of a ground war in which vast numbers of American soldiers could die.

It may also be a byproduct of the real dread about the possible Iraqi use of the "poor man's nuclear bomb," chemical weapons. One horrifying thought seems to provoke and justify the next. One moral wrong gives permission to another.

As Randall Forsberg of the Institute for Defense and Disarmament Studies suggests, thinking about chemical weapons has made it easier to think about the unthinkable, nuclear weapons. "There's a subtle erosion of taboos and norms," he says.

Yet this erosion of taboos is precisely what has to be resisted. "Nuclear weapons," says Forsberg, "have rightly come to represent weapons of utter immorality." She restates the obvious that has become debatable: "An America that used nuclear weapons would be vilified in the world to a degree we can't imagine." We would set a precedent for nuclear war.

Americans were taught to believe that nuclear weapons had value, that there was a reason for the cost of building them and the expense of cleaning up after them. To this day, our government on principle won't rule out the nuclear option.

But we also know that nuclear weapons, like radiation in a fickle wind, carry lethal dangers across borders and generations. An America that broke the taboo in one war could be the victim in the next. The last.

So it is a sad tribute to the brutalizing effect of war. How quickly talk in America has gone ballistic.

It may come from the public fear and abhorrence of a ground war.

Indian land wanted for dumping waste

WASHINGTON — As the nation's landfills overflow, waste merchants are looking for ways to dump unwanted garbage on the land where America once dumped its unwanted people — Indian reservations.

Indian tribes have been bombarded with slick proposals and tempted with big advance payments, and all they have to do is turn their cherished land into dumps for household trash, and in some cases, toxic waste.

Some trash firms offer as much as $500,000 up front. The money stokes conflict on the reservations where unemployment runs higher than 50 percent.

Indian land appeals to the waste merchants because the environmental regulations are less rigid. Indian land is usually exempt from state law, and federal oversight is minimal.

The garbage gold rush on Indian lands has even interested multi-national heavyweights like Bechtel Enterprises Inc., the San Francisco-based engineering and construction firm. Our associate Jim Lynch has seen internal Bechtel memos spelling out the company's interest. In one memo, Bechtel asked a Washington, D.C., law firm to sound out some Indian tribes on the notion of some joint ventures.

Bechtel's interest was conveyed to an official of the Bureau of Indian Affairs along with a memo that listed some potential joint ventures on reservations — hazardous waste disposal facility, nuclear waste disposal facility and a solid waste disposal facility.

A Bechtel spokesman said the list came from the Washington law firm and did not reflect what Bechtel had in mind for the reservations. He said the only deal Bechtel has discussed so far on Indian land is a water diversion project with a South Dakota tribe.

Other companies have been less cautious in their pitches to tribal leaders. Mervyn Tano of the Council of Energy Resource Tribes has studied many waste disposal deals offered to the Indians. One included a clause that would have made the Indians waive their future rights to the land. "Some of them are so ludicrous you just don't feel like dignifying them with a comment," Tano told us.

And that's exactly the way many tribes have responded. Although impoverished, they are snubbing the offers of big money. In the past month, multimillion-dollar hazardous waste incinerator projects have been rejected by the Kaibab Paiutes in Arizona and the Kaws in Oklahoma. And a growing environmental movement also threatens to kill tentative deals in Southern California and South Dakota.

A pattern of resistance is emerging. "People should not be surprised that once they find out the truth, they are not interested in poisoning their land," says Bradley Angel of Greenpeace. "Indians are the original environmentalists."

But the onslaught of waste purveyors will not stop. A firm looking to build a 483-acre landfill on Choctaw land in Mississippi has reportedly already paid the tribe $500,000, and the tribal council has voted to go ahead with the project. The Mississippi state government is leery, as is a growing portion of the tribe.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs is none too pleased about the trend. A BIA spokesman told us that the agency would have to approve any dump, and that the Environmental Protection Agency would review it. But even the EPA admits it has limited power on Indian land.

The Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs is planning to look at environmental problems on reservations, and the waste merchants will likely be scrutinized at the same time.

Other companies have been less cautious in their pitches to tribal leaders.

New laws protect Reservists, Guardsmen

WASHINGTON — The Senate Thursday night passed legislation protecting members of the National Guard and other armed forces reserve units serving in the Persian Gulf from mortgage foreclosure and a host of other legal problems.

The chamber passed the measure, an amendment to the Soldiers and Sailors Relief Act of 1940, on a voice vote without dissent and sent it to the House.

"Passage today is the only way to assure these citizen soldiers and sailors that their country will not fail to match their commitment to duty," said Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee.

"Let the word go out that America has nothing but uncompromising support for each and every reservist, wherever they serve, whenever they serve and however they serve," he said.

Land war alternative bloodless

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Like it or not, the Bush administration was presented Thursday with a bloodless alternative to a land assault against Iraq, just as it appeared poised to launch that major new phase of the war.

Rep. Lee Hamilton captured the hope and skepticism that followed the Soviet-Iraq proposal to end the Persian Gulf War. "I don't think we can lightly dismiss it," he said, "but I also think it's unacceptable in some of its terms and probably needs further negotiation."

A senior administration official disclosed early Friday that the White House considered the proposal "unacceptable to the United States" because of the conditions it set. Bush administration officials have repeatedly said that nothing short of total, unconditional and immediate withdrawal from Kuwait is acceptable.

Still, the proposal was viewed as a serious one, which if not sufficient to meet President Bush's demands could at least force the administration to put off a massive land invasion while its potential is explored.

Hamilton, D-Ind., a senior member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said he thought "the ground war probably should not go forward at this point."

While the Soviet-Iraqi plan includes conditions the administration has resisted, it

'We don't want to go into the individual points. The United States will consult with its coalition partners on the proposal.'

—Marlin Fitzwater

notably does not include any demand that withdrawal be linked to a settlement of Palestinian issues — a key demand Iraq has apparently dropped.

"We don't want to go into the individual points," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater. "The United States will consult with its coalition partners on the proposal."

Reaction on Capitol Hill was understandably divided.

Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said, "It sounds like this may be what we're looking for," particularly if economic sanctions are kept in place.

But Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., a member of the same panel, said: "It isn't a question of whether the Soviets accept it but whether the president of the United States accepts it. My guess is he will not."

Bush and his administration clearly have been pointing toward an enormous land invasion. Increasingly active probes across the Saudi Arabian border in recent days have been seen as preludes to the next phase of the war.

From the Pentagon's perspective, the tentative Iraqi-Soviet peace plan would be one of the worst of alternatives.

Military planners, sensing that their ground attack could lead to a decisive victory, fear any pause in their 35-day-long bombing assault would give Iraqi troops the opportunity to dig out of their trenches and refortify their supplies.

"After all," Hamilton said, "Iraq is on the run in the military sense, so this proposal comes at a very difficult time for us."

Only a day earlier, House Speaker Thomas Foley, the highest ranking Democrat in Congress, said that if Iraq appears willing to withdraw from Kuwait, Bush would face "a very difficult choice." Even though Iraq's peace terms may not meet those demanded by Bush, he said, it would be difficult for the president to move ahead with an invasion.

Should Saddam Hussein agree to an unconditional withdrawal, Foley said on Wednesday, "I don't know how he could fail to accept it."

Following the announcement in Moscow, Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said on the Senate floor, "Let's be very cautious. Let's remember that the United States has only been an observer in the process. ... And let's remember that Saddam Hussein might be playing a game."

Americans are doubtful about peace proposal

Associated Press

Once again, Americans around the country walked a tightrope between hopes for peace and a need to brace for a bloody ground battle as they heard that Iraq agreed to a Soviet plan for ending the Persian Gulf War.

Many in this country were skeptical. And early today, the Bush administration called the Soviet-brokered proposal "unacceptable."

Even before then, Don Dittsworth had his mind made up.

"I don't think in any shape or form that we should leave Saddam Hussein in power, no matter what," said Dittsworth, whose wife, Army Spec. Cristal Dittsworth, serves with the 233rd Transportation Co. 70th Ordnance, based at Fort Bliss, Texas.

"I'm not a war monger, but I'm not an idiot," Dittsworth said. "This guy needs to be taken out. I'm the person who keeps remembering what Saddam did in the first place."

For others it was one more ride on an emotional teeter-totter.

The price of war on home front

Americans also feeling the pinch

By LESLIE DREYFOUS
AP National Writer

Sometimes lost amid the billions spent arming and outfitting U.S. troops abroad is the daily price also being paid much closer to home.

Take H.D. Phillips, a veteran skydiver who figures 70 percent of his salary in tips. "This is the emptiest I have ever seen this airport in 18 years," he said after surveying Denver's Stapleton Airport. "People are scared to fly."

Those willing to travel have found curbside luggage check-in banned. To airport officials, it's a practical anti-terrorist tactic. To skydivers, it's a war cost that has nothing to do with armaments.

Many Americans have made sacrifices and adjustments to keep things going smoothly on the home front. Profit margins are narrower, security tighter, budgets somewhat looser and shifts often long.

"The least we can do is work around our small problem," said Police Chief James Hutchinson, who has been juggling schedules since six members of his Dover, Del., force were called to duty in the Persian Gulf.

Most people don't seem to mind tightening their belts or working a swing shift. It's a way of contributing to the war effort, supporting the 513,000 U.S. troops pitted against Saddam Hussein.

But city and town officials, already battling budget cuts, are also familiar with the bottom line. They know the costs of overtime and special security. And they know how little money there is to spend.

Demonstrations during the conflict's first week cost San Francisco $1.5 million — more than the 1989 earthquake cost — in police overtime. Public works had graffiti to whitewash and trash-can fires to extinguish. The legal system is still processing 1,900 arrests.

Debt-burdened New York City has spent $704,682 in overtime to police war demonstrations and another $118,350 to monitor more than 1,800 bomb scares and other terrorist threats.

The Odessa City Council created a $250,000 emergency fund last month just in case Gulf War-related costs crop up in the West Texas oil city.

Airlines, too, have taken precautions. U.S. carriers will likely spend $750 million to $1 billion this year on security, the Air Transport Association in Washington, D.C., said.

Northwest Airline, for example, cited increased security costs in reporting a $121 million fourth-quarter loss, which may also have been exacerbated by war-related fuel hikes and a slump in overseas travel.

Ask Lacey Donohue of Travel Consultants Inc. in New York. She's seen business fall off by about 30 percent since the war started.

USDA approved Iraqi farm loan despite problem

By RUTH SIMAI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Agriculture Department officials approved $500 million in farm aid to Iraq in 1989, despite being told that Baghdad may have diverted earlier loans to development of a nuclear-tipped missile, congressional sources say.

At the same time it approved the funds, the department began its own investigation and decided against granting a second $500 million installment six months later, USDA officials said.

The department was concerned about the consequences of an August 1989 raid on an Italian-owned bank in Atlanta, the Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, or BNL.

through which many federal farm export guarantees were provided to Iraq. Federal investigators are probing whether the bank made $3 billion in illegal loans to Iraq, possibly backing them with USDA guarantees.

"In the worst-case scenario, investigators would find a direct link to financing Iraqi military expenditures, particularly the Condor missiles," said a memo to senior USDA officials from F. Paul Dickerson, associate administrator of the Foreign Agricultural Service.

Two congressional sources, requesting anonymity, said a USDA official was informed in early fall of 1989 of suspicions that some of BNL's alleged off-the-record loans may have bought components for Iraq's Condor missile.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

New killer-bee swarms expected

HARLINGEN, Texas — New swarms of Africanized "killer" bees are expected to cross into Texas from Mexico as soon as next month, officials said.

The first and only confirmed invasion of the bees into the United States was discovered last Oct. 15. A plunger swarm of 3,000 bees was caught and destroyed near the border city of Hidalgo in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

The USDA has estimated that the harder-to-manage Africanized bee could cause a 5 percent to 10 percent reduction in bee-pollinated crops. That would mean a cost to beekeepers of up to $58 million and a cost to farmers of more than $40 million.

Census added millions on hearsay

WASHINGTON — Population counters added 7.3 million people to the 1990 census based on secondhand information from neighbors, postal carriers and building superintendents, congressional investigators say.

But the counters went to secondary sources only after six unsuccessful attempts to interview members of a household. Barbara Everitt Bryant, the census director, told the House census and population subcommittee on Thursday.

AIDS tests for doctors said unneeded

ATLANTA — Mandating AIDS tests for health-care workers would be unfair and is unwarranted considering the low infection risk to patients, medical and civil rights advocates told the national Centers for Disease Control.

However, one group that supports mandatory tests said doctors and dentists could not be trusted to protect their patients.

Lead plan falls short, critics say

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Senate Democrats welcome the Bush administration's new efforts to reduce lead poisoning but say the plan falls short of protecting millions of children from mental and physical problems.

The private Alliance to End Childhood Lead Poisoning says the strategy offers promise but is "doomed to collect dust on a shelf" unless the government puts more money into the effort.

Administration officials outlined the $974 million, five-year plan Thursday before the Senate Environment and Public Works subcommittee on toxic substances.

"Childhood lead poisoning is entirely preventable," Dr. James Mason, assistant secretary for health at the Department of Health and Human Services, told the panel. "We believe that a concerted, society-wide effort could eliminate this disease in the U.S. in the next 20 years."

The cost of the plan would be shared by government and the private sector, "and the overall benefit to society, in terms of human productivity, will be incontrovertible," Mason said.

MADD co-founder takes new tack in campaign

Beer industry now focus of crusader

By BARRY MASSEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — More than a decade after helping found MADD, Cindi Lamb is joining with a new partner in her crusade against drunk driving: the beer industry.

Is she going over to the enemy? No. She says she's just using another medium — beer industry-funded public service announcements — to get her message across to the driving public.

"I know I'll probably be criticized for this," says Lamb, who lives in Baltimore. "But I feel very strong about what I'm doing ... I feel this way: Any help is good help."

Lamb, a co-founder of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, began work this month as a paid "adviser on alcohol education programs" for the National Beer Wholesalers' Association and will appear in several public service ads planned for television and radio.

She also is developing a community-based program against drunken driving that can be implemented by local beer distributors.

She believes it's wrong to take a head-in-the-sand approach to drinking.

"We can't just say no and expect it to all go away. Beer is not going away. Alcohol is not going away," Lamb, 36, said in an interview this week.

Contrary to the approach taken by MADD, beer wholesalers contend that people can drink moderately and still drive safely.

Lamb agrees, to a point. She says her message is moderation and responsibility — "If you can't just say no, you have to say, no, I've had enough."

"I always have drunk beer and I still drink beer. Not a barrel a day or anything. But occasionally, I have a couple of beers."

In one of her spots for the beer industry, she says "I helped launch Mothers Against Drunk Driving but I'm no Carry Nation."

Lamb has not worked actively with MADD for about seven years. She dropped out to "get on with her life" and spend more time with her daughter, Laura, who was paralyzed as an infant because of a 1979 car accident involving a drunken driver.

It was that head-on collision, which confined Lamb to a wheelchair for six months, that caused her to join with Candy Lightner of Fair Oaks, Calif., to form MADD in 1980.

Laura died in 1986, and Lamb returned to school. She hopes to receive a degree in health science education at the end of this year from Towson State University.

Private colleges curbing tuition increases next fall

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

Private colleges and universities are announcing some of the smallest tuition increases in years for next fall.

One, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, in Worcester, Mass., has announced no increase at all. A check of private four-year institutions around the country found increases in the 4-7 percent range for next fall, within a percentage point or so of the nation's 1990 inflation rate of 6.1 percent.

That's a far cry from a decade in which the annual private college increases averaged nearly 10 percent. The average for 1980-91 was 8 percent, according to the College Board.

College officials say they are trying to act responsibly and control costs at a time when the economy is weak, state and federal student aid is dwindling, and middle-class families are struggling.

"Middle-income students are doubly squeezed. Their parents earn too much for them to qualify for many kinds of need-based financial aid, but not enough for them to pay for their children's education at a private college," said Thomas A. Manton, president of St. Norbert College, in De Pere, Wis., which announced a 7 percent tuition and fee rise for next fall.

But some also believe that next fall's lower percentage increases may be signaling an end to what those in higher education circles call the "Chivas Regal" syndrome — the widely held, though rarely stated belief among private college officials that, as with fine Scotch, students will gravitate to schools that charge the most.

The recession and a decade of soaring tuitions have changed all that.

Increasingly cost-conscious students are flooding to less pricey public colleges. Even community colleges once sneered at by the academically able are seeing huge enrollment gains.

IN BRIEF

COLLEGE HOOPS

SCC caps season at home

SANFORD — With two major goals accomplished the other night, the Seminole Community College men's basketball team now turns its attention to this Saturday's regular season finale and next week's Mid-Florida Conference tournament.

With their 75-65 win over the Santa Fe Community College Saints on Wednesday night, the Raiders both gave Coach Bill Payne his 200th victory since taking over the program and assured themselves of a 25th consecutive winning season.

This Saturday, SCC will host the Daytona Beach Community College Scots in a 7:30 p.m. contest at the Health and Physical Education Center on the SCC campus. A win would assure the Raiders of at least one home game in the conference tournament next week.

Admission is free.

New Orleans drops UCF

ORLANDO — Tank Collins had 24 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead New Orleans to a 77-65 win over the University of Central Florida in the American South Conference Thursday.

There were six lead changes in the first half before Sydney Rice put New Orleans (21-6, 9-3) ahead for good, 25-24, with 5:23 left in the half.

Ken Leeks led UCF (10-14, 3-8) with 18 points and pulled down 12 rebounds. Sima Phillips and Tommy Tormohlen each added 14 points.

Hatters fall to Centenary

SHREVEPORT, La. — Centenary, down by 14 points at halftime, rallied behind Patrick Greer's 30 points and 24 more by John Buckwalter to beat Stetson, 94-87, in the Trans America Athletic Conference Thursday.

The win boosted Centenary to 14-10 overall and 8-3 against TAAC opponents and left Stetson at 13-13 and 7-4.

Mark Brister with 27 points and Donnell Sampson with 20 led Stetson scorers. Jim Horn also contributed a game-high 12 rebounds.

FSU begins stretch run

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State basketball coach Pat Kennedy is optimistic his sophomore-laden club is destined for a fast finish, particularly after disposing of longtime nemesis Memphis State.

Douglas Edwards scored 20 points and Rodney Dobard added a career-high 18 as Florida State avenged an earlier Metro Conference setback with a 76-64 victory Thursday.

"We're moving in the right direction," said Kennedy, who watched his team improve to 14-10 overall and 6-5 in the Metro. "All we have to do is keep it going."

Old Dominion bests USF

TAMPA — Chris Gatling scored 20 points, including 16 in the final 10 minutes, and had 10 rebounds to lead Old Dominion to a 74-61 win over the University of South Florida Thursday.

Old Dominion (11-17 and 4-9 in the Sun Belt Conference) held the USF Bulls to 38 percent shooting and grabbed 27 defensive rebounds.

For USF (17-8, 7-6), Radenko Dobras scored 28 points, including 14 in the first half.

BASKETBALL

Heats win on the road

LANDOVER — Miami won its second road game in 1991 and fifth of the season Thursday night, getting 27 points from Glenn Rice in a 104-90 victory over the Washington Bullets.

Rice scored 12 points in the third quarter to give the Heat the lead, then scored seven in the final 5:08 to help Miami hold off the Bullets.

Seikaly scored 24 points and Sherman Douglas had 20 for the Heat, who are 5-21 on the road. Miami's only previous road victory this year was on Feb. 6 against New Jersey.

Dolphins, McKyer still at odds

MIAMI — The Miami Dolphins, seeking to trade unhappy and unsigned cornerback Tim McKyer, have thus far declined to offer him a new contract.

"I'm milled at the treatment," said Steve Weinburg, McKyer's agent. "I have not received the first phone call from the Dolphins regarding a new contract, and I've requested a proposal. It leads me to believe they're not interested."

McKyer earlier told reporters he seeks a trade nearer his home in Arlington, Texas.

"He's said he wants out," Dolphins president Tim Robbie said. "My feeling is, if a player doesn't want to be here, we should accommodate his request."

County sending 29 wrestlers to state tourney

After his team had pulled out the 4A-Region I wrestling championship last weekend in Jacksonville, Lake Brantley coach Kevin Carpenger was asked to assess the chances of Seminole County athletes in this weekend's Class 4A state wrestling tournament.

"There's a big step in the level of competition between the regional and state level," said Carpenger, weighing his words carefully. "There have been times when the champion from our region will go and be beaten by a fourth-place finisher from another region."

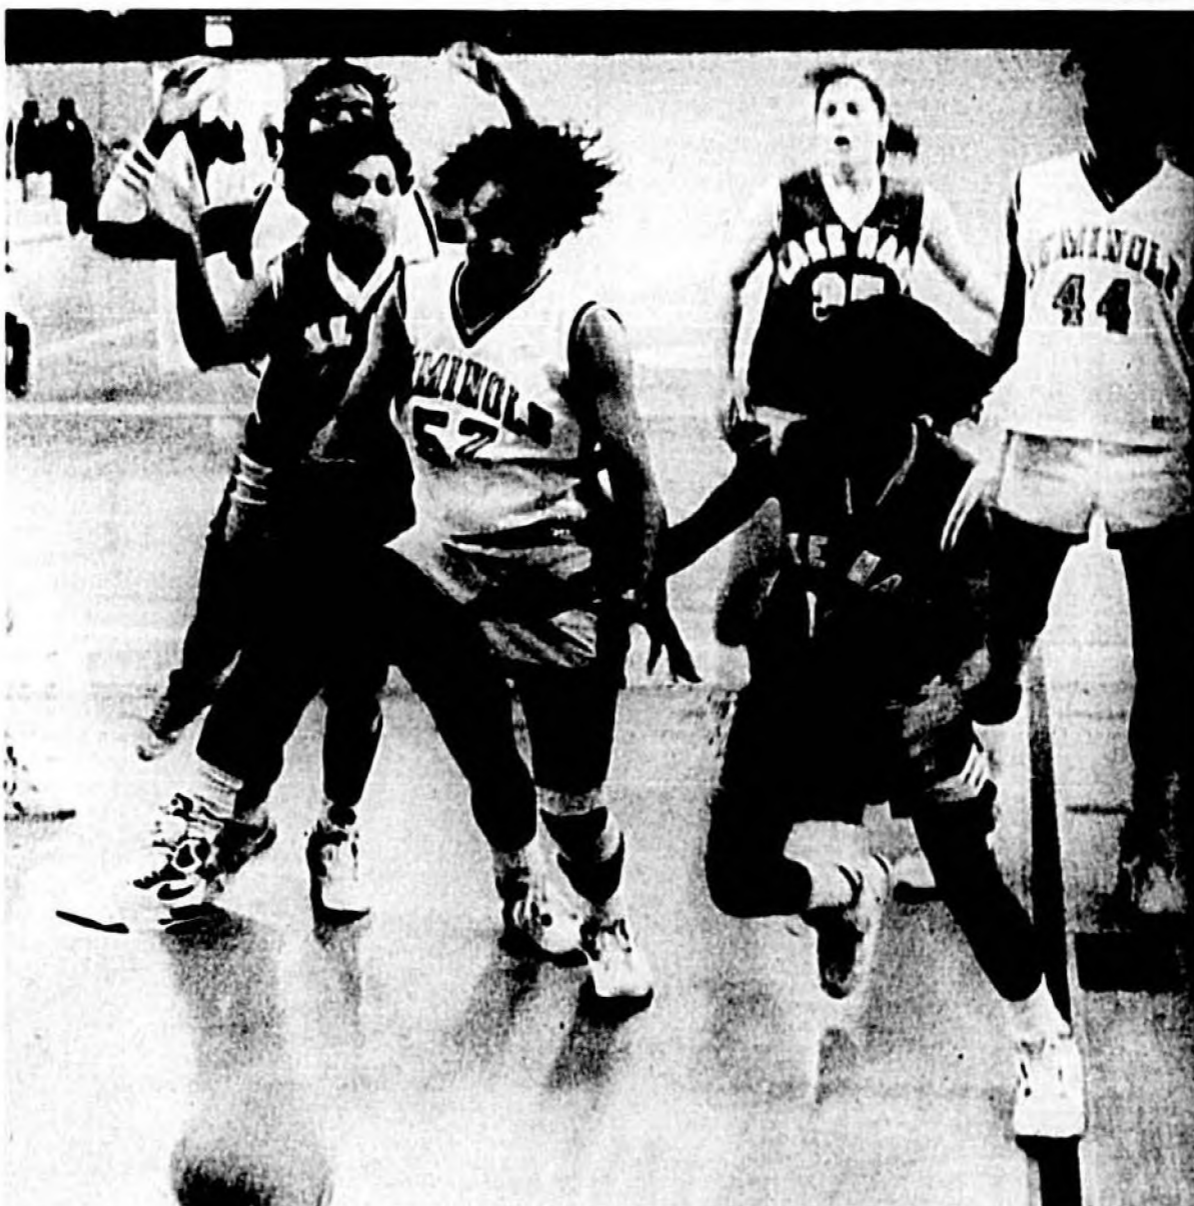

In the past, county wrestlers have been competitive but not really dominating at the state meet, the consensus being that this region — which covers the northeast corner

LAKE MARY — Sixth-seeded Lake Howell provided the only surprise of the first round of the 4A-District 9 girls' basketball tournament, upsetting third-seeded Oviedo 57-51 on Thursday evening at Lake Mary High School.

In Thursday's nightcap, the No. 4 Spruce Creek Hawks disposed of the injury-riddled Lake Mary Rams, 54-32.

This evening at Lake Mary High School, No. 1 Mainland and Spruce Creek will play for the fourth time this season at 6 p.m. while No. 2 Lyman takes on Lake Howell at 8 p.m.

The championship game is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Elizabeth Mills led the Lake Howell Silver Hawks with 28 points, including three-of-five from three-point range. Lake Howell also benefitted from strong rebounding from Lynette Barreras and Cathedra Winston, each pulling down 12 rebounds.

The Silver Hawks raced out to a 17-10 lead at the end of the first quarter behind Mills' seven first-quarter points plus six rebounds from Winston and five from Barreras.

Betsy Hughes, who led the Lions with eight assists and nine rebounds in addition to her 10 points, guided a third-quarter rally that saw Oviedo hit seven of its first 10 shots from the field, igniting a 16-2 run that gave the Lions a 39-30 lead with 3:17 remaining in the third quarter.

However, Barreras, Winston and Quiya Hawkins reasserted themselves on defense, harassing the Lions into making just three of 23 shots from the field during the last 11:17.

"That was the best defensive game we've

Patriots beat pesky Tribe

By TONY DeSORMIER
 Herald Sports Editor

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Sometimes you have take your victories where you can.

That's basically the mindset that the Seminole High School softball team used to approach its season-opening game with the Lake Brantley Patriots, ranked among the top 10 in the pre-season Class 4A state poll.

While the Tribe did suffer a 13-1 defeat, they did accomplish the two goals they had set for themselves: don't let the game be stopped because of the 15-run mercy rule and don't get shut out.

"We're taking it one step at a time," said second-year Seminole Coach Greg Register. "With a team like Lake Brantley that has championship calibre written all over it, you do the best you can. You always hope to win but you need to get some positive results each time out."

Seminole had a chance to show how much it progressed since

Blanton tosses one-hitter

From staff reports

OVIDEO — Senior David Blanton struck out 13 and walked two in throwing a one-hit shutout to help the Oviedo Lions to a 4-0 win over Mountain View of California in a high school baseball game played Thursday evening.

The only Mountain View hit was a clean single to left in the fifth inning.

Blanton retired the first nine batters he faced before opening the top of the fourth inning with a walk. For the game, he faced just 25 batters, four over the minimum of 21 for a seven-inning game.

Mountain View didn't have a runner reach third base until there were two out in the sixth inning.

"David went into the season with a tender arm," said Oviedo Coach Mike Farrell. "He didn't start any of games in the Lyman tournament last week. But against Seminole, he came in, pitched the last two innings and the got save. That was a real surprise because I wasn't sure he was ready."

"Then on Saturday, he got the save against Lyman. His arm is back. All he needs is rest between starts. As long as he has plenty of rest between starts, he's a good last year in the first inning. Stinging the ball all over their home park, the Lake Brantley Patriots erupted for nine first-inning runs.

 But rather than roll over like past Seminole teams, the Tribe kept in the game, forcing Lake Brantley to play the full seven scheduled innings. The change wasn't lost on Patriot Coach Remy Betris.
 "I'm impressed with Seminole," said Betris. "They're going to play a lot better as the season comes on. Their team reminds me of when I started coaching here. It takes a little bit of time."

played all season long," said Lake Howell Coach Dennis Codrey. "Our defense turned the game around for us and set up our offense."
 Mills scored 18 points over the last 10:01, including 4-of-4 from the foul line, to send the Silver Hawks into the semifinals.
 "In this county, everybody is very close, talent-wise. Whoever is up the most will win that contest," said Oviedo Coach John Thomas. "We had our chances and held a nine-point lead after trailing most of the game. We have a lot of young kids who will be back next year and we'll be ready."

Course in manners prescribed for staff

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from the woman who was insulted because she was addressed by her first name at her doctor's office while the men were called "Mister," I wish to relate the following incident:

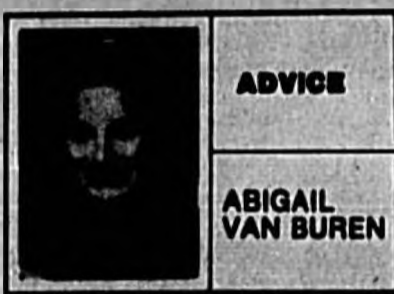

After being kept waiting for more than 30 minutes in my doctor's examining room (I was there for a breast examination following my second mammogram within four months), I heard the nurse say to the doctor, "The 'ear' is in room nine, and the 'boobs' are in here!"

I could write pages on how that made me feel in an already stressful situation. I addressed her remark the minute the nurse and doctor entered the room. From the nurse, who first denied saying it, I got a mumbled, "Sorry." From my doctor I received, "I'm sure she didn't mean anything by it."

I'm not a prude, Abby, and I'm not naive. But to be referred to as a body part — in a crude slang term — does not elicit a lot of faith in that group of so-called professionals. I am finding it difficult to go back there, although our insurance dictates whom we see.

FUMING IN TUCSON
DEAR ABBY: The nurse was insensitive and unprofessional, and the doctor was no bargain either. Contact your insurance company and ask if there is another physician's group you may consult for a "second opinion." With nine examination rooms, a 30-minute backlog, and a nurse with the hide of a rhinoceros and a limited medical vocabulary, your physician already has more problems than he can handle.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I purchased a home in a rural community. Our house in the city has not yet sold. We borrowed money from both our parents to purchase our new home, promising to repay them when our old house sells. Last Christmas, my husband's parents presented us with our gift — a note that showed our loan status to the penny, of which they deducted $1,000. Other family members who did not owe them money received $1,000 per family.

We are grateful for the reduction of our loan, but after receiving the note, we didn't feel much like celebrating.

What do you think of this kind of present? So far, my parents have never reminded us of how much we owe.

L.O.U. IN IOWA
DEAR L.O.U.: No matter how you look at it, you received a gift worth $1,000, so as I see it, you have no reason to complain.

DEAR ABBY: I am 27 years old. When I was in the second semester of my senior year of high school, I was raped. I couldn't face my classmates, so I dropped out of school.

I returned the following year to graduate in 1982, although I was ready to graduate in 1981. My picture was already in the 1981 yearbook, and my name had even been printed in the 1981 graduation booklet. All of my friends graduated in 1981.

The Class of '81 is now planning its 10th reunion, and I feel that this is the gathering I should attend. However, technically, I didn't graduate until 1982.

Should I go to the party with all of the classmates with whom I should have graduated? Or should I wait a year and probably not attend because I don't know any people from that class? Please don't use my name.

UNDECIDED
DEAR UNDECIDED: Go with the Class of '81. (Would I lie to you on George Washington's birthday?)

Telephone Pioneers distribute ditty bags

OSTEEN — Norman E. Maberry, president of the Semoran Life Member Club, part of the Telephone Pioneers of America, said the club recently supplied 57 ditty bags to veterans.

The Telephone Pioneers of America is a non-profit organization consisting of telecommunication workers. The organization was established in 1911 by a group of telephone workers who wanted to help their neighborhood. This concept has continued throughout the years and has expanded to community service and environmental work.

One of the community services began in 1985 and is known today as "A Ditty Bag for a Veteran". These bags contain items that many veterans may find themselves without either because they were admitted to a Veterans Administration Hospital on an emergency basis or can not afford items such as brushes, combs, pens, deodorant, stamps and toothbrushes.

In Florida, there are five V.A. Hospitals and four clinics. Each year during the National Salute to Hospitalized Veterans Week, February 11-15, these ditty bags, which have taken all year to prepare, are given out at these hospitals and clinics. Pioneers from all over North and Central Florida gather together to personally hand out these bags. Maberry said a In North and Central Florida, a total of 3,000 bags were distributed to veterans who deserve at least basic necessities.

MAKING WAY FOR SPRING

"I can hardly wait till February is over and spring is here. Certainly not an unusual statement! The snow, which was novel in November and welcomed in December, is merely tolerated in January, and declared a nuisance by February. Thanksgiving and Christmas are captured on film and New Year's Eve is but a memory. Still, we must bear the ice and freezing temperatures, at least through February. Yet, toward the end of February there may be a most unusual day when the air is not quite so cold, and the sun seems to touch the earth with teasing, tantalizing fingertips of warmth melting the winter snow and making way for spring. Does it sometimes seem that you have more than your share of trouble and sorrow? Learn to know God. Psalm 48:1 promises us that God is "... a very present help in trouble." Accept Him and let His love touch your life like the revitalizing warmth of an "earlier than spring" day.

Isotope scanning seen as safe to the organs

DEAR DR. GOTT: On a "20/20" segment shown last June they talked about radioactive dye injected into patients for X-ray purposes that caused liver cancer and resulted in death. Would a myelogram use that kind of dye and would a radioactive capsule used for taking pictures of a thyroid use the same dye?

scanning does require a "radioactive capsule" of isotope material. However, the isotope is quickly released from the thyroid gland and passes out of the body. In certain circumstances, when doctors want to treat an overactive thyroid gland, they administer much larger quantities of isotope, which depress thyroid function and usually cure the condition without the necessity of surgery.

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

Again, these therapeutic amounts are far in excess of the small quantities used for scanning.
(C)1989 NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

DEAR READER: I did not see the "20/20" segment you refer to, but I am aware that certain isotopes (radioactive materials) that were popular many years ago for liver scanning have been suspected of causing liver tumors that show up much later. Isotope scanning is considered safer today because newer, less hazardous materials are used. Isotopes produce a "reverse" X-ray. When tiny amounts are injected or drunk in a beverage, the radioactive material is temporarily concentrated in an organ—such as bone, liver or thyroid gland.

By measuring the concentration and distribution of the isotope, technicians can determine if the organ absorbs a uniform amount. This produces a silhouette of the organ on an X-ray film and is a useful way of assessing whether the organ is functioning normally. The isotopes used for modern scanning are excreted by the body in a matter of hours; hence, the risk of damage is markedly reduced. A myelogram is an X-ray test of the spinal canal. During the examination, a non-radioactive liquid compound—not an isotope—is injected into the spine. This material shows up as a shadow when X-rayed. Thus, pinched nerves can be highlighted because the "dye" fills the spaces around the nerves and provides a contrast enabling doctors to identify the location and extent of the ailment. Once the myelogram has been completed, the "dye" is withdrawn; any residual usually causes no consequences. You are correct that thyroid

WHAT?

By James Jacoby
Imagine yourself in five diamonds after an opening bid of one spade from East. With a spade lead, you would not like your chances. For opening-bid values, East must hold the king of hearts, and it would seem that the defenders cannot be denied three tricks if that is the case. Ordinary declarers would shrug their shoulders and hope against hope that the king of hearts was with West. Not Benito Garoszo. As a declarer, he ducked the opening spade lead, letting East win the king. A spade was returned to South's ace. He then drew a few rounds of trump and led a low club from dummy. East played low and South won the king. The rest of the trumps were played out, and in the end position North held A-J of hearts and the queen of clubs. Declarer had Q-9 of hearts and 10 of clubs. What should East keep? In fact, East came down to K-10 of hearts and the club ace. So declarer played a club, and East had to lead away from the king of hearts to give up the last two tricks and the contract. East might have a chance if very early he threw the 10 and then 8 of hearts, as though he had started with K-10-8-x of hearts. In that scenario he would keep the A-5 of clubs, and hope that declarer would still throw him in with a club to lead away from the presumed K-x of hearts. (C)1991, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Feb. 23, 1991

You might be drawn into an exciting new social group in the year ahead. There is a possibility you may initially feel that you don't fit in, however, you'll soon turn out to be one of the leading players.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you are presently involved in an enterprise you feel you understand better than your associates, don't let the control of this endeavor slip from your hands. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail #2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Family matters you've been unable to resolve can be worked out amicably today — if you bring all the parties together for a frank discussion. Reason will take precedence over emotions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be complimentary to a person who truly deserves it today, even though this individual might never have patted you on the back when you did something worthy of acknowledgment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Improvements could be in the offing where your financial affairs are concerned. Several situations that were a drain on your resources may undergo constructive changes at this time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't neglect your immediate concerns. But, by the same token, start implementing plans now that could help fulfill your future intentions. Both can be done effectively.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Adjustments you engineer today might produce only nominal benefits, but you could be quite lucky through alterations instigated by someone else.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your judgment is reasonably good today, but it might not be quite as astute as your mate's. Listen to your partner's views regarding a matter of mutual concern.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Sometimes when we attempt to do too much, it can turn out to be self-defeating. However, you could be successful in juggling several objectives simultaneously today. Give it a try.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone who doesn't usually seek advice from others might come to you for counsel today. You have a right to feel flattered; it indicates the esteem in which you're held by your peers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Instead of assuming that something is factual just because another says so, check things out for yourself. Your evaluations of the situation could be much more accurate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A partnership arrangement in which you're presently involved may initially appear to be more heavily weighted to your side. Later, however, you'll discover it's equally balanced.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you feel your work truly warrants it, this is a good day to have a friendly chat with your supervisor about a raise or bonus. The boss may actually be of a like mind.
