Stenstrom hospitalized

SANFORD — The scheduled meeting of the Old Time Baseball fans Wednesday at noon at the Sanford Shoney's has been canceled due to the hospitalization of Julian Stenstrom.

Stenstrom is a weekly columnist for the Sanford Herald.

Stenstrom was admitted to South Seminole Community Hospital, Longwood, Saturday and is in the intensive care unit. He has pneumonia. Stenstrom's wife, Louise, said this morning her husband's condition is not good. He is on life support.

Stenstrom's brother, Douglas, said Buddy Lake, who helped Stenstrom organize the baseball fans meeting, decided it would be inappropriate to hold the session at this time.

Land purchased to protect bears

A tract of unspoiled Central Florida land once owned by the failed Lincoln Savings and Loan Association has been bought by a conservation group to help protect the endangered Florida black bear.

The federal Resolution Trust Corporation sold The Plantation, a 573-acre parcel adjacent to Rock Springs Run State Preserve in Seminole County, to The Nature Conservancy of Florida for $6.7 million, or 64 percent of the property's book value, the RTC and the conservation group announced.

The land, which includes 117 acres of wetlands on the floodplain of the Wekiva River 20 miles northwest of Orlando, contains a path regularly used by the dwindling population of Florida black bears, according to a statement released here Monday.

The Nature Conservancy said it intends to resell the land, which also is a habitat for the endangered Florida scrub jay, to the state of Florida to expand the Rock Springs Run State Preserve.

Robbed at gunpoint

Targets: 3 Sanford businesses, 1 mom

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Sanford police report four armed robberies were committed this past weekend.

Two were reported in separate incidents Sunday. Two others were reported Saturday.

Sanford Police Chief Ralph Russell said none of the four appears to be related.

Two men reportedly robbed Sunshine Liquors, 1610 W. 13th Street near closing time Sunday night. After taking an undetermined amount of money from the cash register, police reported a shot was fired before the robbers fled from the building.

Earlier Sunday, one masked man reportedly robbed a 7-11 Store at 2700 W. 25th Street. Police said the man was armed with a rifle, and took $50 in cash from the register, as well as the plastic container from the Seminole County Humane Society, containing an estimated $100 in donations. The man was described as black, approximately 6 feet 2 inches tall, and slim. He was said to be wearing a green fatigue shirt, and blue jeans, and using a white cloth as a mask.

Saturday, police said a 30-year old Sanford woman exiting from a store with her small child was accosted at gunpoint in the parking lot of the Seminole Centre, 3600 S. Orlando Drive. They said two men, one of whom had a handgun, forced the woman into the car and stole her jewelry. Police said they then demanded the woman drive to a bank, where they waited in the car with the child while she exited at the bank, and withdrew $500 from her account. After

Ire is raised over task force appointments

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — Seminole County's post-midnight appointments to the state's Geneva Bubble task force have raised the ire of Geneva residents and the task force's creator.

"They kind of broadsided me," said Rep. Marvin Couch, R-Oviedo, who drafted the "Bubble Bill" that passed the Legislature this year.

"I don't think the county board is an entity unto itself," said Don Crabtree, leader of a Geneva Bubble protectionist group. "Save Our Bubble." "They represent the people and we should have had a chance to be heard."

At about 12:30 a.m. last Wednesday, commissioners, standing to leave from a meeting that began at 9:30 a.m. the day before, were reminded they needed to make

Longwood passes on road widening

By SANDRA ELLIOTT

LONGWOOD — The $800,000 Seminole County has earmarked for improvements on Rangeline Road maybe used for drainage upgrades and repaving the present surface, but Longwood City Commissioners said Monday night if widening the road is a requirement for getting the money they will pass. The money designated for engineering and traffic study was collected through the additional penny sales tax okayed by the county a year or two ago.

"Everytime the city gets involved with the county," deputy mayor Harvey Smerison said. "We end up getting the short end of the stick."

Expressway on schedule despite some delays

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — The Seminole County expressway may be complete this year, but don't count on it.

Muck deposits, rain and dirt wars have all contributed to months of delays, according to information provided by expressway officials and contractors. According to the latest provided by the state, the last work on the 12-mile tollroad will be wrapped up by Jan. 24 of next year.

That date can change. The senior officials overseeing the $200 million project holds fast to the original pledge of completing the roadway sometime in February 1994.

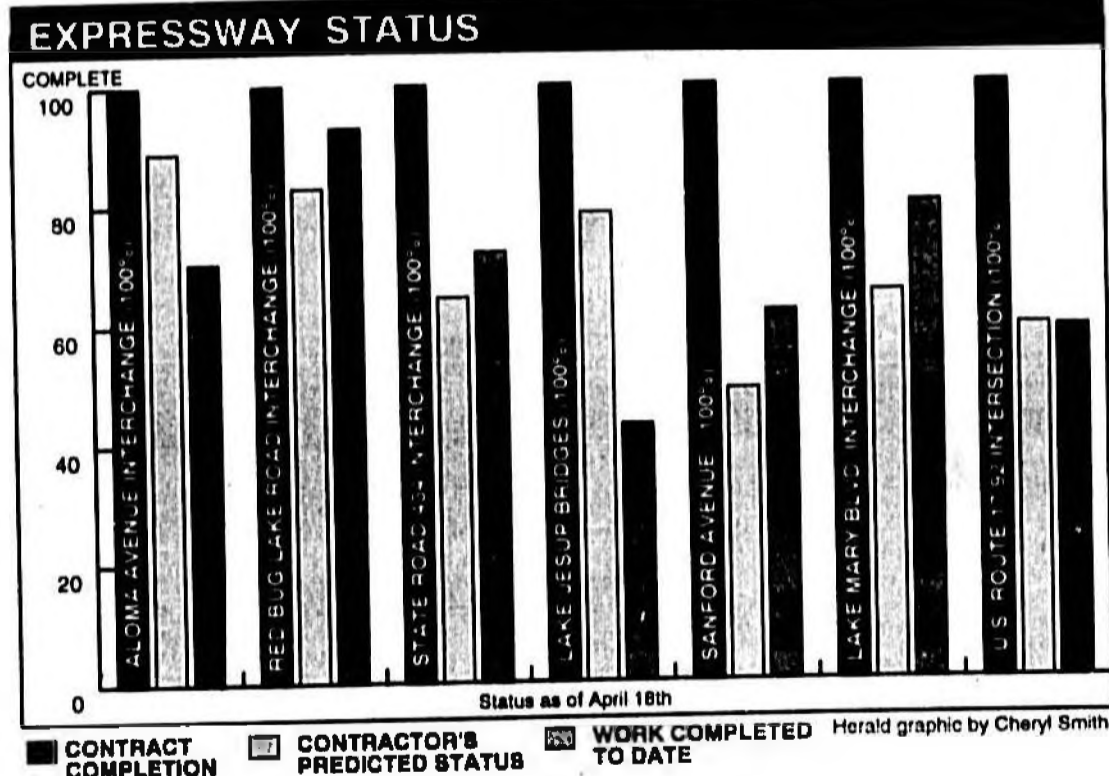

"We are still confident it can be done by that date," says Gary Geddes, program manager for the Seminole County expressway. Geddes is an engineer for the Turnpike Construction Office of the Florida Department of Transportation.

The state, which is financing the construction through bonds, told investors the road would be done by February. If the road is delayed substantially, the sale of future state turnpike construction bonds might be affected.

When construction began on the roadway two years ago, the state declared the work would officially be done by February 1994. So far as that goes, the work is on time, according to a current state progress report.

But local construction officials said two years ago they

Commission issuing permits for 'gator huntin' season

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Now that spring has sprung, 'gator huntin' season is almost here.

The Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission is now accepting applications for an estimated 500 alligator trapper permits for 33 locations throughout the state. This year's harvest will be split into two hunts, Sept. 1 through 15 and Sept. 16 through 30. The applications must be returned by June 1 to be included in the permit drawing.

To allow more trappers to participate this year, the fish commission has lowered the lake limit from 15 alligators to five. As a result, the commission expects to issue 500 permits this year. Last year, 176 permits were issued. Licensed trappers may each have three "agents" to assist them, but the agents may not hunt without a trapper.

Last season, 84 alligators were caught along the St. Johns River in Seminole County by nine trappers. The river is divided into two segments for trapping purposes at Lake Harney. Most, 52, were caught between Lakes Monroe and Harney, said Nick Wiley, state Alligator Management Section biologist.

Wiley said Lake Jesup won't be included in the hunt this year because it is an alligator breeding research site.

Those names selected from the applications must take a three-hour course and pay $250 for the permit. Out-of-state trappers must pay a $1,000 permit fee. The payments must be made by July 15 or their permits will be assigned to

The $1 million gift was announced in a statement Monday by the brothers. It is the largest in the university's 21-year history and will provide about $26,000 per student over four years for each Pajcic Scholar. The brothers, who own the Pajcic and Pajcic law firm, are graduates of the westside Jacksonville high school. Steve Pajcic ran an unsuccessful campaign for governor in 1986. To be eligible for a Pajcic scholarship, students must be Paxton graduates, beginning with the class of 1994, and accepted as a freshman at UNF. Scholarship recipients must carry a minimum course load of 12 hours at UNF and maintain a 2.0 grade point average as a freshman and sophomore and 2.5 grade point average as a junior and senior.

Murder trial site split evenly on abortion

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Residents of Escambia County, where Michael F. Griffin will be tried next month for allegedly murdering an abortionist, is split almost evenly on abortion. A public opinion poll of 408 registered voters showed 48 percent said abortion should be outlawed although exceptions should be considered to save the mother's life and in cases of rape or incest. Forty-nine percent said abortion should be legal and the decision left to the woman without government interference. Only 3 percent were undecided. The poll was taken for the Pensacola News Journal, which published the results Sunday, by Mason-Dixon Political/Media Research Inc. of Columbus, Md. It has a 5 percent margin of error. Griffin, 31, a former Pensacola chemical plant worker, is accused of shooting Dr. David Gunn, 47, of Eufaula, Ala., three times in the back March 10 when the physician arrived for work at Pensacola Women's Medical Services during an anti-abortion protest. His trial is set for June 21.

Genetic tests may cause harm

GAINESVILLE — A University of Florida research team has drafted a list of health policy recommendations dealing with rapidly emerging genetic tests. "We're concerned about the current development (through the national Human Genome Project) of tests that will indicate our individual risks for more common diseases like cancer and diabetes," said University of Florida medical ethicist Dr. Ray Moseley. "Making these genetic tests a part of routine medical practice can produce serious harms from denial of life insurance or lost employment opportunities to problems of breaching confidentiality of patient information," Moseley said. A research team at the UF College of Medicine is releasing this week a list of 67 specific health policy recommendations. The group's report of the potential problems and proposed corrections is being sent to members of Hillary Clinton's Health Reform Task Force, as well as to leaders of the National Institutes of Health (NIH), who funded the study.

Appeal of veteran's execution denied

TALLAHASSEE — With less than 24 hours to go until his scheduled execution, Vietnam veteran Larry Joe Johnson waited to find out the fate of his appeal before a federal judge. Johnson's electrocution at Florida State Prison outside of Starke was set for 7 a.m. Wednesday. The U.S. Supreme Court refused Monday afternoon to overturn a state Supreme Court ruling against Johnson. But defense attorneys had a separate motion filed in federal district court in Tallahassee. U.S. District Judge Maurice Paul did not act on the appeal by late Monday. Johnson, 49, is condemned for the 1979 sawed-off shotgun murder of James Hadden, a 67-year-old service station attendant in the North Florida town of Lee. Johnson's defense attorneys and some veteran advocates argue that his life should be spared because he suffers from post-traumatic stress disorder. Some 30 people gathered Monday in the Capitol to urge Gov. Lawton Chiles to reduce Johnson's sentence to life in prison. "Please don't kill a disabled combat veteran for behavior induced by physical and psychological wounds he received in defense of and service to his country," said Steven J. Bentley of Scarborough, Maine. Bentley, a two-tour Vietnam veteran, chairs the special committee on post-traumatic stress disorder of the Vietnam Veterans of America. Craig Harris, vice president of the Big Bend chapter of the Vietnam Veterans of America, said he didn't think any justice would be served by executing Johnson. "Vietnam is about to open its doors 20 years in the past and reach out and take another victim," Harris said.

Lake Mary committee proposes possible bus service

LAKE MARY — "We want a way to get around our city," says Paulee Stevens. She is chairperson for Lake Mary's Elderly Affairs Commission, looking into a possible bus service. "Lake Mary is growing rapidly," she said, "and we have many seniors as well as other people who live in the various apartments and residential areas with absolutely no way to get to the store or into other areas." The Elderly Affairs Commission will be holding a public meeting Thursday morning, to discuss the possibility with officials from the Lynx bus transportation service.

"Lake Mary is growing rapidly and we have many seniors as well as other people who live in the various apartments and residential areas with absolutely no way to get to the store or into other areas."

-Paulee Stevens

"What we are proposing," Stevens said, "is possibly a shuttle-size bus going from Highway 17-92 near Seminole Community College, making a loop through the downtown area of the city, then going out toward Interstate 4, making stops at the various shopping centers." She added, "This will also allow us to ride to 17-92, where we would then be able to get on more of a mass-transit bus and go to Sanford, Orlando, the airport, or some other mall." Although the meeting is being held in the morning on a work-day, Stevens said she hopes as many people possible might turn out for the meeting. "The more people we can get to show up," she said, "the more we will be able to convince the Lynx people that this would be a good and worthwhile shuttle bus route for them to operate." The meeting is scheduled for Thursday, May 6, beginning at 10 a.m., in the commission chambers of the Lake Mary City Hall.

Floridians challenge military

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Members of the Base Closure Commission will "keep an open mind" about plans to close military facilities in Orlando, Jacksonville and Homestead, the powerful panel's chairman says. Jim Courter said commission members "will use our best judgment" in weighing strong presentations made by representatives from those areas. Florida officials urged reversals Monday of decisions made by the Navy and Air Force to close Cecil Field, Orlando's Naval Training Center and hospital, and Homestead Air Force Base. They harshly criticized the military's plans, contending that analysts for the Navy, Air Force and Department of Defense had used faulty facts and figures and reached erroneous conclusions.

Courter said the commission, which has until July 1 to submit its recommendations to President Clinton, would consider all the information at nine regional hearings, plus "reams of other materials" in reaching its decisions.

And he said "no base, really, is out of harm's way" — whether it's on the base-closing list or not. The officials did not mince words.

If a paramount concern of the Department of Defense is to save taxpayers' dollars and to effectively and efficiently train military personnel, then the evidence clearly indicates that the Orlando NTC must remain open," said Orlando Mayor Glenda Hood. Economist Hank Fishkind said there had been "significant errors in judgment in scoring the military value" of both Cecil Field and the Orlando boot camp.

Arguing that the military value of Homestead had not been changed by Hurricane Andrew, former U.S. Rep. Dante Fascell headed a group of about 900 people who came to Orlando by bus to argue against "pencil pushers trying to justify their conclusions."

Consumer confidence stays unchanged during April

GAINESVILLE — Florida's consumer confidence remained unchanged in April, held steady by concern among older Floridians about national economic policies, according to University of Florida economists. "In February, many older Floridians questioned President Clinton's economic proposals. Their concern about his program persisted through March and April," Dave Denslow, of the university's Bureau of Economic and Business Research, said Monday. After peaking at 91 in December and January, the Florida Consumer Confidence Index dropped to 84 in February, then stabilized at 82 in March and April. Among consumers questioned in April, those 55 and older were most pessimistic. Only 15 percent said they believe their personal finances will improve in the coming year, while 30 percent said their finances would take a turn for the worse.

Optimism among consumers under 55 countered that gloomy view, with 50 percent saying they would be better off. Only 12 percent said they expected their finances to worsen. "April registered the largest gap between Florida's young and old in the 10-year history of the survey," Denslow said. The overall index, at 82, confirms the view that Florida's economy will grow slowly in 1993, restrained by sluggish hiring but boosted by lower mortgage rates, Denslow said. House-buying plans are up by 40 percent from a year ago. The share contemplating buying a house was 9.1 percent, up from 6.4 percent in April 1992, Denslow said. Respondents contemplating buying a car were only slightly more the April 1992 figure, 16 percent instead of 14.8 percent. The Florida survey is conducted monthly by UF economists. Respondents are 18 or older and live in households telephoned through random digit dialing. In April, 500 households participated.

Chiles stumps for juvenile justice reform

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A juvenile detention center that's overcrowded and understaffed just two months after opening shows why lawmakers should enact juvenile justice reform. Gov. Lawton Chiles said.

While the number of children from 10 to 17 years old has risen 7 percent in the last 10 years, juvenile crime has increased 92 percent. Chiles told a news conference Monday at the Leon County Regional Detention Center.

Violent crimes by juveniles have risen 91 percent, and there has been more than a 1,000 percent jump in attempted murders, Chiles said.

"The state has remained essentially idle," he said. Chiles has said he'll call a special legislative session in the next few weeks to try to enact his proposed five-year, 21,000-bed prison construction program. Republican lawmakers have opposed a 25-cent-a-pack cigarette tax increase to pay for the program, and saw a 7,000-bed plan passed earlier this year is adequate.

Chiles said his "safe streets" proposals include 1,028 beds for juvenile offenders over the next five years. More than 1,100 juvenile offenders are at large while on waiting lists for detention facilities, he said.

"They're continuing to steal the cars, burglarize the stores, rob homes, assault people, and at the same time maturing into tougher criminals," Chiles said. "If we leave them on the streets, we'll all pay a price far greater than the cost of more facilities."

Chiles' program would add 20 staff members at the Leon County center, enough to handle the 80 juveniles it was designed for. Because of budget cuts, it opened in March with enough staff members to handle 30 inmates, and now has 40.

supervised by 30 permanent staff members.

As Chiles toured the facility, about a dozen youths played basketball on an outdoor court with cinder-block walls and a concrete floor. Another group worked in a classroom with three computers programmed with games and exercises aimed at improving their math and spelling skills.

Superintendent George Brown showed Chiles one of the 8-by-10 foot cubicles where inmates sleep, with cinder block walls, a concrete floor, two narrow horizontal slots high on the wall for a window, a mattress on a concrete slab, a sink and a seatless toilet.

The inmates are as young as 11. More than half have drug problems. Seventy to 80 percent have been detained previously, Brown said.

"These resources are the least expensive and they are the most effective," said Leon County Circuit Judge Phillip Padovano, who endorsed Chiles' proposals. "For every person that we can resolve perhaps a drug problem or something of that nature, we can potentially prevent 20 or 30 other adult criminal offenses by that same person."

Chiles said he was willing to consider suggestions other than a cigarette tax to pay for his program.

"I find a lot of people who are disturbed about the cigarette tax. I don't find a lot of people who want to give me other options," he said.

Cult children tell of abuse

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Children who left the Branch Davidian cult compound said David Koresh gave girls as young as 11 plastic Stars of David that signified they were ready to have sex with him. The New York Times reported today.

The children, who left the compound during the 51-day siege that began Feb. 28, also told social workers that Koresh told them to call their parents "dogs" and refer only to him as their father.

The Times quoted from the report of a team headed by Dr. Bruce D. Perry, chief of psychiatry at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. The team interviewed 19 of the 21 surviving children of the cult, ages 4 to 11.

Perry told the Times that the children were reluctant to divulge the cult's secrets at first. "Over the course of two months, the kids became increasingly open about 11- and 12-year-old girls being David's wives," he said.

The Stars of David indicated that girls had "the light" and were ready to have sex with the cult leader. None of the girls who left said they actually had been sexually abused by Koresh.

Perry said several of the girls had circular marks on their buttocks that probably were caused by paddling. He said the children told of being struck with a paddle called "the helper" for offenses as minor as spilling milk.

Karen Eells, regional director of the Texas Child's Protective Services division, said previously that the children had shown no signs of physical abuse. The Associated Press was unable to reach Ms. Eells late Monday.

Federal officials, including Attorney General Janet Reno, cited reports of child abuse as justification for the raid that began hours before a fire April 19 that destroyed the compound.

A time to speak out

With a workable and beneficial plan, city-appointed committees can accomplish things. To do so, they also require support from the citizens.

In Lake Mary, the Elderly Affairs Commission is working on a project. A meeting is scheduled for Thursday to hear public input.

The Commission is proposing a shuttle bus to travel through the city allowing mass-transportation access to the various shopping centers in the community.

We commend Chairwoman Paulette Stevens and the members of the commission for pursuing this concept.

There are many residential areas within the city containing large numbers of seniors. Other apartment complexes have not only retirees, but non-working parents with children and others who may not have access to transportation during the day.

The areas along Greenwood Boulevard and immediately south on Lake Emma Road, Longwood-Lake Mary Road and Country Club Road have additional residents in need of transportation. Some of the complexes are just outside the city limits.

The Elderly Affairs Commission is seeking a way to travel to its own shopping areas.

Several communities such as neighborhoods around the Altamonte Mall already have this service, provided by Lynx Buses. The medium size brightly-decorated busses are easily recognizable.

In order to successfully obtain similar service in Lake Mary, people must turn out in numbers at this Elderly Affairs meeting, express their feelings, and indicate that they would use the busses.

The meeting will be held at 10 a.m. this Thursday, May 6, in the commission chambers of Lake Mary City Hall.

LETTERS

From the president

My Fellow Americans,

This is the season of America's renewal.

Already, in the first few months of this new Administration, we have restored an active purpose to the presidency and renewed America's commitment to change and progress.

After twelve years of national drift and economic decline, we have begun to chart a clear path to growth with my New Directions economic plan designed to create jobs, boost incomes, move our economy from consumption to investment and reduce our deficit dramatically.

The investments in my economic plan embrace priorities that will raise the living standards and profits of workers and businesses for the long-term: rebuild America's infrastructure; commit resources and attention to the education and training needs of our students and workers; and restore vital incentives that reward productivity, profits, innovation and investment.

The Clinton budget — the outline of my economic plan for New Directions — passed the Congress in record setting time. It reduces deficit spending by over $500 billion; a plan so credible that the markets continue to reduce interest rates on the American people. These interest rate reductions, coupled with steps taken by my Administration to deal with the credit crunch, mean American businesses, farms and consumers have money to save, spend, invest and grow.

I want to be the President who helps the American people realize their call for change.

Enormous changes are sweeping our economy. Inevitable defense cutbacks are forcing military bases to close, causing defense manufacturers to lose markets and cut jobs. Problems in the airline industry have caused massive lay-offs in aerospace firms and among the domestic carriers. America's economic partners abroad are beating American companies in the race for markets in the former Soviet Union.

That's why my economic program will help the American people turn these changes into real economic progress. I have offered a $20 billion, five-year initiative to reinvest in workers, communities and companies affected by cuts in military spending. I have formed a commission to recommend real changes in federal policy to help restart our aviation and aerospace industry. And I have provided an enterprise-oriented aid initiative to save the Russian Democracy and spur American economic growth.

Beyond growth, Americans want a return to responsibility in our schools, our communities and our economy. And in that spirit, this Administration is leading the way: by reforming welfare to make it a second chance, not a way of life; by reforming the health care system to provide health security to every American and bring rising costs under control; by making national service opportunities available to students so that they can exchange opportunities for education with community service.

President Bill Clinton

King case shows selective outrage

No one slept in on the Saturday morning the verdict was returned in the Rodney King beating trial. Not since Neil Armstrong became the first man to set foot on the moon have so many Americans sat so anxiously by their television sets.

It should have been an open-and-shut police brutality case, handled in the manner of the dozen or so excessive force complaints that the Los Angeles Police Department logs every year. But once the racial element was introduced, the case took on a life all its own. The first trial ended in acquittals, which touched off last spring's riots. A similar verdict the second time around was expected to ignite no less than a race war.

I do not know whether the savage beating Rodney King received at the hands of four white police officers was motivated by his complexion. But what I do know is that if the black motorist had been similarly beaten by black officers, we would not have heard the same hue and cry.

It just would have been four black cops who roughed up a fleeing felon.

This selective outrage is one of the great hypocrisies of the black community. When white victimizes black there is protest. The churches are packed. The streets are filled. But when black victimizes black there is silence. The pews are empty. The streets vacant.

The explanation of this phenomenon is that black-on-black crime has no political currency. It cannot be traded upon the way that white-on-black crime can.

As long as black Americans can be portrayed as victims of societal or institutional injustice, we can make claims on the system. So it was that the Rodney King case became a pretext for the black community to mau-mau for more government aid and private philanthropy.

To listen to Jesse Jackson, Benjamin Chavis and other prominent black leaders in the wake of the King verdict, one almost came away with the impression that America had returned to the days when black lynchings were commonplace.

"It makes me weep to think that we have to always continually go through this much drama to get some justice," said a misty-eyed Jackson. "We've learned when you get some justice, you have to fight for the rest," said a defiant Chavis.

But here's the dirty little secret that the black leadership is unwilling to speak about: The prospect of a black being physically attacked by a white is far less likely than a black being killed — not just assaulted — by a person of his own race.

Consider that in 1992, the FBI reported 1,689 racially motivated attacks against blacks. This number is troubling, but not nearly so profoundly as the 8,000 or so black homicides last year, roughly 85 percent of which were committed by other blacks.

Whenever there is a so-called hate crime against a black person, it is treated as front-page news. If it is sensational enough, maybe Jesse and Ben will come to town. But when there is a black-on-black murder, the story is relegated to the back pages, if that. It is too routine an occurrence to rate more than a passing notice.

But once the racial element was introduced, the case took on a life all its own.

On sexual values, teens need help

A group of high-school boys in Lakewood, Calif., recently gained national attention for holding a contest to see who could have sex with the most girls.

Amid the controversy, one of the boys complained: "They pass out condoms, teach sex education and pregnancy this and pregnancy that. But they don't teach us any rules."

Just what message are we giving them?

Public school sex-education teachers walk a fine line in choosing what they can tell students. Since parents have widely varying moral concepts, teachers have to stick basically to biological facts and their consequences.

Bussie Newton, curriculum supervisor for all health and physical education teachers in Springfield, Mo., says sex-ed teachers have to guide students to look to their parents for sexual moral values: "If those values are never discussed, kids are going to be kind of lost."

Are the kids getting the message at home? Newton fears that in a lot of cases they're not.

Parents in my social circle most often have great intentions, but they assume a lot. They assume their kids are getting most of what they need to know in sex-education classes. The parents assume they always have a little more time before their kids need more information.

Do parents even know how much their kids learn in sex-ed classes? None of the people I asked did.

Most adults are somewhat aware of what our kids see on TV, because we watch TV, too. But many of us have little idea what's in the music kids listen to, because we don't listen to it.

Here's what I found in about 20 hours of watching and listening to televised music videos and borrowed CDs:

First, the good news. There's touching and powerful social commentary in some of the music, wonderfully witty and creative ideas.

Now the bad: Some of the music promotes sex so blatantly that condom manufacturers should give them a percentage of the take.

Videos feature herds of not-quite-dressed women bumping and grinding around one man, or at best only a handful of men. One of the staples of video school must be the classic "close-up of wriggling woman's backside" shot, because there are thousands.

New York Times music critic Jon Pareles writes that hip-hop "has shaken up the way songs talk about sex." I guess that's a gentler way of saying that some rap artists are faking sex and orgasms, because they certainly are.

Some rap and non-rap videos feature young men and women doing as much sexually as a camera can imply without setting itself on fire.

Here are just two examples of lyrics by different artists:

"Let me lick you up and down (till you say stop, let me play with your body, baby, make you feel hot. I wanta lick you up and down and then I want to lay you down."

"Let's take it to the floor, lady, and let's move up and down."

Rapper Ice T appeals for racial brotherhood, yet here's what he says about racial tolerance and women in one of his songs: He doesn't care what race she is, or even if she's from Mars, he'll have sex with her. He uses the crudest word for that, by the way.

To intervene between kids and their music is especially distasteful to baby boomers, because we hated it so when our elders castigated our music. But in an age when children can die from having unprotected sex and studies show young girls still suffer greatly from low self-esteem, how can we sit by while our kids' music promotes sex and demeans women?

Just what message are we giving them?

Babbitt tests new initiative

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt has seized upon a rarely used provision of the law to begin averting what he calls "train wrecks" between endangered species and the economy.

How well he fares will mark a substantial part of the Clinton administration's record to link economic and environmental progress together. Babbitt's initiative is sorely overdue. It has real prospects for success. It must not, however, be mistaken for a panacea.

When two powerful forces are hurtling toward collision, Babbitt reasons, the sensible thing to do is intervene to prevent a pileup. In the case of the Endangered Species Act, this approach is called ecosystem management. The idea is to work with everybody involved to plan a mutually acceptable way to head-off a crisis before it occurs. In practice that means protecting enough of an ecosystem so that the species within it can recover from the brink of extinction, or better yet, never reach that precipice.

The Pacific Northwest is suffering from the worst example of not heeding this approach. The federal government knew 10 years ago that the northern spotted owl was headed toward extinction as its ancient forest habitat was being fragmented into oblivion by wholesale timber clearcuts. But nothing was done. A federal court has cited the top echelons of the Reagan and Bush administrations for refusing to enforce laws meant to keep the old growth forests from being shredded into eviscerated ecosystems. The Clinton administration began unsnarling the inherited wreckage by convening the recent Pacific Northwest Forest Conference.

Babbitt wants a better record on his watch. He's read the Endangered Species Act. In it he's found the authority, clearly stated but hardly ever used, to plan ways to avert disasters. He wants to infuse energy into what are termed the consultative provisions of Sections 7 and 10. The provisions allow the interior secretary to work with landowners, government agencies and other interested parties to balance species conservation and development demands in working to get species off the endangered list.

And Babbitt wants to go a step further by using that authority proactively. He's suggesting that people negotiate solutions to an oncoming problem before it's full-blown rather than after it's in their laps.

The fate of a diminutive songbird, the California gnatcatcher, is the premier example of Babbitt's new approach. The gnatcatcher's habitat is also prime near-shore real estate targeted for development between Los Angeles and San Diego. On the same day, Babbitt approved listing the gnatcatcher as a threatened species (on its way to becoming endangered), he approved an experimental plan to allow some development to proceed if landowners join in setting aside enough habitat to assure the bird's survival. The plan was drafted by Californians representing all sides of the issue at the impetus of Republican Gov. Pete Wilson.

If it works, the gnatcatcher and other species living within the same ecosystem will be protected. Developers will be able to plan investments into the future with confidence. The specter of acrimonious and lengthy lawsuits may be dispelled.

Other tests of this approach are being tried in the Austin, Texas, area to protect 43 listed and candidate species and near Las Vegas, Nev., involving the endangered desert tortoise. In some cases voters are approving public bonds to raise money to buy habitat. In others, habitat is purchased with money developers put up in return for being able to proceed with projects on land that previously would have been off-limits.

Placing new emphasis on early consultations and habitat protection serves two aims. Train wrecks are avoided. Functioning ecosystems are also kept intact that can sustain the needs of many species.

There are dangers, of course. One is that the compromises can be so trimmed in favor of accommodating development that the remaining protected habitat is a functioning ecosystem in name only. Another is that people won't get serious about striking a workable compromise unless faced with the imminent threat of strict enforcement of endangered species protection. But the approach deserves a fair chance.

A good place to apply it is in our national forests, which provide habitat to a third of all endangered and threatened species in this country. Maintaining our forests as viable ecosystems can prevent many conflicts with development down the line.

"If we live a little more lightly on the land," Babbitt advises, "it will be better for all of us in the long run."

The sensible thing to do is intervene to prevent a pileup.

Judge rules for Stetson in 3-school fight over estate

By The Associated Press

DELAND — Stetson University is entitled to the $8 million estate of eccentric millionaire Archie Greenberg, said a judge who rejected arguments from other schools seeking the money.

Attorneys for Brandeis University and Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University argued in a three-day trial last month that Greenberg was suffering from "insane delusions" when he cut the schools from his will and named Stetson as beneficiary in 1981.

In a ruling released late Friday, Circuit Judge Robert Rawlins said Greenberg, who died from Alzheimer's disease last year at age 92, was able to understand the nature and extent of his actions.

"We are grateful that Mr. Greenberg's wishes, as expressed in his will, are to be followed," H. Douglas Lee, Stetson president, said in a Monday news release.

He said it was the largest single bequest in Stetson's history. Greenberg's ashes are spread over the 117-acre campus.

Brandeis, in Waltham, Mass., and Embry-Riddle, in Daytona Beach, claimed they had a right to the estate based on earlier wills. Clark University in Worcester, Mass., also named in an earlier will, had agreed to a settlement with the other two universities if they were successful in nullifying Greenberg's will to Stetson.

Peter Winders of Tampa, the lead attorney for the three universities, said Monday the next step will be to ask Rawlins for a rehearing.

Clark, Brandeis, and Embry-Riddle, also have a civil suit pending against Stetson. It claims Stetson obtained a will when Greenberg's faculties were impaired, received $1 million from Greenberg after he was declared incompetent and people associated with Stetson prepared Greenberg's will and acted as his guardian when he was declared incompetent in 1985.

Greenberg made his fortune when he sold the Bancroft Hotel in Miami Beach's art-deco section in the 1960s. He retired and began a life of travel.

He settled in Daytona Beach in 1975, when he was 77, and lived in what Thomas Dolan, a Clark University official who knew Greenberg for 25 years, called "an absolute flop house."

Greenberg valued his privacy, wore Salvation Army handouts and walked everywhere, spending much of his time in the public library reading financial publications and newspapers, Dolan said.

Inventor: Peppery paint can drive away barnacles

By ALYSSA GASSAY
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH — Talk about a hot product. A new, experimental marine paint made with red peppers is so fiery it will blister fingers. More important, it will prevent mussels and barnacles from attaching themselves to boats, buoys and intake pipes, says Ken Fischer.

The Navy is now testing the idea, which the 69-year-old Pittsburgh inventor came up with two years ago. Fischer wanted to buy a used sailboat but got discouraged by the cost of removing the barnacles — about $1,000. At a party not long afterward, he hit into a deviled egg doused with Tabasco sauce.

"I swore my mouth was on fire. I had tears and everything," Fischer said. "I got to thinking this is what I'm looking for."

To make Barnacle Ban, Fischer mixed oil from cayenne peppers with an epoxy-based paint. The oil is about six times hotter than red pepper found in the grocery store — so hot that a drop diluted 250,000 times with water will still set your mouth on fire.

Fischer, who has applied for a patent, also is experimenting with an unmixable adaptation — sprinkling dry cayenne on a surface covered with wet adhesive or paint. Both versions worked when tested on linoleum tiles.

After dramatic spurt, economy slows down

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — After ending 1992 on an upswing, the economy and the statistics that measure it are slowing back to earth.

During the final three months of the year, the economy grew at a 4.7 percent annual rate, as measured by the gross domestic product, the sum of all goods and services produced in the United States.

But so far this year it's running at less than half that. It grew at only an anemic 1.8 percent annual rate during the first quarter and few analysts expect it to climb back up to the fourth-quarter rate anytime soon.

"The story remains we're in a very subdued economy," said Laurence H. Meyer, a St. Louis-based economic consultant. "There's nothing very buoyant going on."

Another statistic, designed to predict the economy's future rather than measure current activity, is showing a similar pattern. The Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators shot up 1.7 percent in December, the best showing in 10 years. But it remained unchanged in January and rose only 0.5 percent in February.

The department was releasing the March indicators report today. In advance, economists were looking for a 0.9 percent drop, which would be the worst decline since November 1990 in the middle of the recession.

The index is designed to forecast economic activity six to nine months in advance. Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen blames the severe winter storm that swept up the East Coast in mid-March for much of the first quarter's weakness.

"My feeling is our economy is stronger than what the 1.8 percent figure suggests. I believe our March storm had something to do with it. The number ... is a winter pothole in our road to recovery, but it's not going to give us a flat," Bentsen said in a speech Monday.

He conceded, however, that growth this year will probably fall slightly short of the Clinton administration's 3.1 percent forecast.

Economist Sung Won Sohn of Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis said the weather can explain only part of the first-quarter slowdown.

"All In A Mother's Day" A poem By Neat-N-Tidy All Clean

Fix lunches, hair, buttons and bows
Make Little Susie blow her nose
Scout all the kids out the door
Here comes the school bus, blowing its horn
Iron dresses, ties, shirts and slacks
Get your hubby on the tracks
Grab a bite on the go, can't be late
Time's running out, snag your hose on the gate
Bumper to bumper, stuck in gridlock
Breakfast sitting like a rock

Get to work - who appreciates you there?
You smile at your boss - who imitates a bear
Push and pull, get back home
To find that your pet has decided to roam

With all of your duties, who has time to "Spring Clean"?
When you hear those words you just want to scream
Little dust bunnies hopping about
Who has the time to clean them all out

Call NEAT-N-TIDY, we'll do all it for you
Lasso those dust bunnies, scrub, mop and wax too
We can do it all so you don't have to

We'll take good care of you and not be in the way

There's nothing like coming home to a clean place
Being able to just relax, recoup from the race
So give us a call - you'll be glad you did
We do everything - except clean the kid!

Seeing ghost of Vietnam in debates about Bosnia

By WALTER R. MEARS
An AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON — When teen-ager Bill Clinton met John F. Kennedy in the Rose Garden 30 years ago, the youthful Democratic president was embroiled in policy debates and decisions that led to the long, lost war in Vietnam. Now Clinton's White House is dealing with Bosnian intervention questions no less difficult and potentially divisive.

For all that has changed since 1963, the dilemmas that faced Clinton's first political hero are not unlike those he faces in deciding how to wield American force abroad, in this case in the Balkans, where strife has been historically habitual.

So far, the policy has been one of warnings, backed by U.S. pressure on European allies for a policy of force if necessary, presumably to include air strikes and an end to the United Nations arms embargo that has left Bosnian Muslims outgunned by Serbian forces in the year-old civil war.

And so far, it has gained at least the stature of agreement by Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic to a peace plan accepted earlier by Muslims and Croats. The administration is skeptical, shellfire in Bosnia continued on Monday and Clinton said what is needed is action, not only Serbian agreement on words.

Until that happens, Clinton has said, he will continue planning on military moves against the Serbs, who have occupied about 70 percent of Bosnia-Herzegovina in a year of bloody civil war and so-called ethnic cleansing.

When, or if, there is a cease-fire and peace accord, the president said Monday, the United States would be prepared to join a United Nations peacekeeping force "heavily engaged in by the Europeans" to make it stick.

But he said he is not "interested in sending our soldiers in there into combat, into a fighting situation...."

There has, however, been talk of assigning Americans as spot-ters on the ground in the event the peace settlement fails and U.S. air strikes are ordered. In fact, there are reports those troops already are there.

Either way, the Balkans are perilous territory. Clinton said he would explain his policy to the people "before I agree to put one American soldier there...."

"I would not make any such decision without a further consultation with the Congress and discussing it directly with the American people," he said.

In Kennedy's time, the forces in Vietnam were advisers, about 900 when he took office in 1961, some 16,000 by the summer of 1963. They were fighting forces, and about 75 had been killed, but it was early 1965 before President Lyndon B. Johnson sent the first designated American combat troops to Vietnam. By then, the United States was bombing North Vietnam in an air campaign that lasted for eight years.

A divisive decade and two presidents later, the United States surrendered South Vietnam to the communist North.

The echoes of that traumatic conflict, of the war Clinton opposed and avoided, now haunt the debate over efforts to stop the ethnic killing in what was Yugoslavia. Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., sees the Balkan conflict as another Vietnam, where he served, and said he'd told Clinton to "stay the hell out of there." The bombing option has its detractors in part because of the futility of that policy in Vietnam.

In far different circumstances and situations, the basic issue remains the same: how and when to send American troops abroad to face at least the threat of hostile action.

George Bush decided to do it in Somalia to bring order for famine relief, but avoided involvement in the Balkans. Candidate Clinton had advocated a tougher U.S. policy, and had talked of using air power against the Serbs.

When Kennedy succeeded Dwight D. Eisenhower, who had avoided U.S. combat involvement in Southeast Asia, the outgoing Republican president told the new one that American troops probably would have to be sent, unilaterally if U.S. allies would not help.

Yielding office to Clinton, Bush said the use of military force abroad makes sense when the stakes warrant, when intervention can be effective, and "where its application can be limited in scope and time...."

Christopher pledges U.S. troops to help enforce peace agreement

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

PARIS — Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher promised European leaders today that U.S. troops would be dispatched to the Balkans to help enforce a "good-faith" peace agreement among rival ethnic factions.

He said the Clinton administration would explain the move to the American people as "one of the principal, important peacekeeping efforts in Europe, probably ever."

The agreement to halt the bloodshed in Bosnia-Herzegovina was signed last Sunday in Athens by Radovan Karadzic, the Serb leader in the former Yugoslav republic. But the head of the country's hard-line nationalist party, Vojislav Seselj, questioned Karadzic's patriotism on Monday and said the supporters of the United Nations peace plan were guilty of betrayal.

The plan, which would end the fighting, set up a provisional government in Sarajevo and divide Bosnia into 10 largely ethnic cantons, will be considered by the self-styled Bosnian Serb assembly on Wednesday.

Christopher, on a six-day trip to Western Europe and Russia to try to gather support for President Clinton's tentative decision to launch allied air attacks on Bosnian Serb artillery and to ease the arms embargo against Muslims, has said previously he was skeptical that the peace agreement would hold up.

NBC News on Monday night reported without attribution that U.S. special-force troops already were on the ground in Bosnia gathering intelligence and selecting targets. Asked for comment, Pentagon spokesman Lt. Col. Steve Evans said, "I have nothing on that."

ahead, but eager to map out a peacekeeping force should the peace plan be approved.

"There is no question that the United States is committed to helping in the enforcement of a viable, good-faith agreement," Christopher said as he began meetings with French leaders. "We realize that will involve United States forces, United States troops, as well as those of our allies. I'll be talking about those implementation plans as I move around."

Diplomatic sources said some 2,000 U.S. troops would be sent to the Balkans in the first phase. Overall, more than 10,000 U.S. troops are expected to be involved in trying to keep feuding Muslims, Serbs and Croats at a distance from each other.

Christopher said he did not want "to talk about a specific number." But, he said, "We are committed to helping enforce that agreement if it is a viable, good-faith agreement."

Pentagon officials said contingency plans call for the eventual deployment of possibly as many as 25,000 American troops as part of a multinational peacekeeping force.

The Washington Post reported today that NATO has drafted a peacekeeping plan that would begin with U.S. Marines landing at Adriatic ports and U.S. Army paratroopers taking control of Sarajevo airport. About 12,000 troops from the 1st Armored Division in Germany would follow quickly, the Post said, citing unidentified U.S. military sources.

The NATO plan has not been approved by Clinton or other NATO political leaders, the Post said.

"Basically, you are trying to establish order first and then help them establish a situation where justice can prevail," U.S. Adm. Jeremy Michael Boorda was quoted in today's editions of

The New York Times. Boorda, the Naples, Italy-based commander of NATO forces in southern Europe, was expected to head the peacekeeping effort, the newspaper said.

Christopher over the weekend ruled out the use of large numbers of ground forces as part of any allied military operation to achieve peace in the former Yugoslavia. But U.S. officials said that did not exclude the possibility of small numbers of special-operations forces on the ground to direct air attacks on Serb artillery and to make bomb damage assessments.

The Paris stop is vital for the success of Christopher's six-day mission. He is meeting with French President Francois Mitterrand, Prime Minister Edouard Balladur, Defense Minister Francois Leotard and Foreign Minister Alain Juppe.

Mice trapped

CASSELBERRY — Now it's a three-team race. A week after pounding Salent Witness 21-0, the Paddy McGee Mice from Ovidio suddenly lost their hitting touch, getting edged 2-1 by the Ball Busters in Seminole County Recreation Women's Monday Night Slowpitch Softball League action at Red Bug Lake Park.

The Mice out-hit the Ball Busters 1-3, but two errors after two were out in the fourth inning doomed the Mice.

The lone run came in the first inning when Jackie Janowiak singled, took second on a wild throw, third on fly to right by Teresa Wallburger and scored on sacrifice fly by Kathy Johnson.

The locals had a chance to tie the score in the sixth inning as Lou Fango and Phyllis Baynes both singled, but the rally died after that.

Caselleberry pitched a good game, allowing only three hits and striking out three.

In last week's game with Salent Witness Debbie Leigh tossed a four-inning no-hitter while Johnson 13 for 41, Janowiak two hits, four runs and Terry Mann, Karen Kofis and Baynes two hits each helping the offense.

The Mice are now tied for second with the Ball Busters at 1-1, two games behind Most Wanted who is 2-1. Next week, the Mice play at 6:30 p.m. against Magic Business Linnies.

Fleming stars, but Suns lose

JACKSONVILLE — Jacksonville's Dave Fleming, making his first start of the season Monday on a rehabilitation assignment from Seattle, gave up a three-run homer to Ron Reams in a 1-3 loss to Knoxville.

These were the only runs allowed by Fleming, who pitched three innings, allowed four hits, one walk and struck out two. Fleming, who went 17-10 as a rookie for the Mariners last year, has been out with tendinitis in his elbow.

Shawn Green's RBI double broke a 3-3 tie in the eighth. Bubba Smith drove in two runs for Jacksonville with a single and double.

Winner Kyle Ducey (2-1) pitched 2-1-3 innings of scoreless relief. Chuck Flemer earned his second save. Greg Bicknell (1-3) gave up one run in 5-2-3 innings and took the loss.

ball was recovered before Tillman could score and he was teamed with the ball above left. He got to his feet only to find himself again being chased down and eventually tagged out by the Blue Jays, Jason Turner.

Rotary into the playoffs

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — The Rotary Club Royals clinched a playoff spot, and the Kory USA Expos remained in playoff contention to highlight play in the Sanford Recreation Department Babe Ruth Softball League Monday afternoon.

Terrance Ponce dropped a home run and three runs and Brian Ayala committed an error, but the Royals doubled the score in the 3-1. Templeton's low Blue Jays 12-6 on Zane Beck's hit to join the Royals Club. Ovidio is the American Division representative in next week's playoffs.

The Expos, meanwhile, only got one hit but took advantage of a walk and six errors to hand the Blue Jays a 12-4 victory at night at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

The victory was the fifth straight for the Royals, and eliminated the Woodmen of the World As from any playoff hopes. The Orioles still lead the American Division with a 6-4 record, but the Royals are right behind at 6-3. The As (2-8) and the Blue Jays (1-9) complete the standings.

The Expos, who moved them into sole possession of second place in the three-way battle for the second National Division spot in the playoffs. The Panthers of Columbus (4-10) have already clinched the division crown. The Expos (4-4) and the Moose Lodge Pirates (4-1) and the Cubs (0-6) are all still alive for the playoff berth.

Wallace to be released today, expects to race in two weeks

By PAUL NEWBERRY
AP Sports Writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Winston Cup points leader Rusty Wallace, laid up in a hospital bed with a broken wrist and concussion, joked about the frightening crash at the end of the Winston 500 and pointed toward his return to the track.

NASCAR officials, meanwhile, defended their decision to put out the green flag with only two laps remaining, which some drivers said paved the way for the bumper-car conditions that may have contributed to Wallace's wreck at Talladega Superspeedway.

Wallace was in good condition at Carraway Methodist Medical Center in Birmingham, where he was taken by helicopter after Sunday's race. He was expected to be released today.

Wallace, who has an 86-point lead over Dale Earnhardt, has every intention of maintaining his lead by driving in next race, May 16 at Sonoma, Calif. But Roberts said it was too early to decide whether Wallace will be healthy enough in 12 days to drive on grueling Sears Point road course.

He did point out that the break in Wallace's left wrist is not severe, and he doesn't use that hand to shift gears. Also, all Wallace has to do is start the race to qualify for whatever points his Pontiac earns — even if he turned the car over to a substitute driver.

Ironically, Davey Allison used that same tactic last year to race in the DieHard 500 at Talladega just a week after he was seriously injured in a similarly spectacular crash

See a specialist about pain in ear

DEAR DR. GOTT: I feel as though I have a nest of wiggling, squirming worms in my ears that drive me crazy most of my waking hours. My doctor has given me a prescription. In spite of the fact he cannot see anything, can you give me a clue what this condition is?

DEAR READER: Yours is indeed a puzzling symptom. This is not an indication of any ear disorder of which I am aware. However, before assuming that your peculiar ear sensations are caused by stress and anxiety, I believe you should be examined by an ear, nose and throat specialist, who should be able to sort matters out.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Ear Infections and Disorders."

DEAR DR. GOTT: My daughter has been diagnosed with primary pulmonary hypertension. Do you know of any specialists who concentrate in this area?

DEAR READER: Primary pulmonary hypertension is a rare disorder of unknown cause, marked by high blood pressure in the arteries of the lungs. The disease is much more likely to affect women and usually appears in the early 30s.

The most common symptom is breathlessness on exertion, often associated with joint pains, circulatory disturbances in the extremities, fainting and chest pain. The disorder is progressive, producing increasing difficulty breathing and eventually - heart failure.

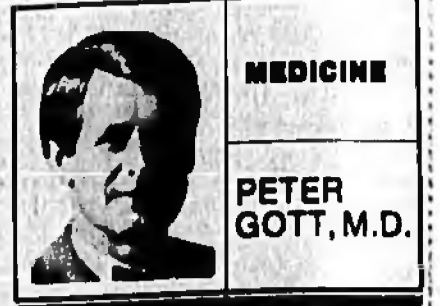

The condition is diagnosed by a series of tests, including cardiac ultrasound, lung scan, analysis of breathing mechanics, and cardiac catheterization (during which pressures in the heart chambers and pulmonary circulation are measured).

Some patients respond to anti-hypertensive drugs, such as nifedipine, but, regrettably, the effects are inconsistent. I am not aware of any specialists who concentrate solely on primary pulmonary hypertension. However, most pulmonologists (lung specialists) are qualified to provide treatment and advice, using super-specialists in teaching centers when necessary.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a torn cartilage in my wrist. Can this be repaired?

DEAR READER: Many types of cartilage injury can be repaired by an orthopedic surgeon who is familiar with arthroscopy. This is a technique during which a thin lighted tube is inserted into a joint.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
 "The Loner-on-Loner Play" and "Endplays" are the titles of two of Mike Lawrence's "Topics on Bridge." (The latest 15 booklets in the series are available for $42 postage paid from the author at 131 Alvarado Road, Berkeley, CA 94705.) Lawrence points out that the topics of these two booklets are techniques that overlap — as in today's deal.

How should the play proceed in four hearts, West leading the spade king and switching to the diamond 10? With any missing minor-suit honors likely to be with West, South knew he wasn't bidding a guaranteed game. But what else could he do with such a promising hand? West's take-out double marked him with the club ace. So there was no point in leading a club to the king. The opening lead marked West with the A-K of spades. So he was easy prey to a loser-on-loser endplay. After carefully winning the diamond switch in hand with the ace, declarer drew trumps and crossed to the dummy with a diamond to the jack. He ruffed dummy's spade eight and returned to dummy by overtaking his diamond queen with the king. Now came the coup de grace: dummy's spade queen was led and a club was thrown from the South hand. West won with the spade ace, but what could he do next? Whether he cashed the club ace or conceded a ruff-and-discard, declarer lost only one club trick. As Lawrence points out, you should play the hand this way even if East shows you the club ace. He suggests that your vision might be impaired. But perhaps a sly East has removed the card from another deck.

Knowledge is power that you can use to profitable advantage in the year ahead. Don't stop learning all you can about things that are useful in your field of endeavor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to be a peacemaker instead of a provoker in discussions with your mate today. Both of you might have a low kindling point that could be readily ignited. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Responsibilities which you should personally attend to shouldn't be cast off on others today. Conversely, also protect yourself from the "patay" role.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be sure you know what you're talking about if you offer a friend financial or business advice today. If anything goes wrong, you might be held accountable.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you're too assertive today in dealing with others, it could produce an undesirable reaction. Try to be a booster, not a self-appointed boss.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If a close associate does something you dislike today, bring the matter out into the open so that it can be resolved. Don't suffer in silence and spoil your day.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Something you're involved in has profitable potential, but it might not come about as quickly as you anticipate, nor produce the types of returns for which you're hoping.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Partnership arrangements aren't apt to work out to anyone's satisfaction today if both parties have targeted different objectives. There must be a collective purpose.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Anything you do out of spite today could have a boomerang effect, and you could be hurt more than the party that you're trying to penalize.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions in general are rather touchy today. Something you'll want to change to your benefit could turn out to be detrimental to another person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you and your mate have a disagreement today, try to resolve it privately. If you air it in the presence of others, resolution could become very complicated.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Problems with co-workers could erupt today over methods and procedures. Each must try to promote the general good instead of gratifying his or her own ego.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In your commercial affairs today, be prepared for things to be a bit tougher than usual, regardless of whether you're the buyer or the seller. Each condition must be handled skillfully.
