But Carter's Less Optimistic

Sadat: On The Verge Of Signing Treaty

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (UPI) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said today he believes Egypt and Israel are "on the verge" of signing a peace treaty except for "a few words."

But President Carter was more cautious, saying that "there are still some problems" to be resolved before he can predict the outcome.

Both presidents made their comments in interviews on a four-hour, 16-mile whistlestop train trip from Cairo to this beautiful Mediterranean resort which drew tumultuous cheering crowds along the route.

The massive turnout of chanting, clapping, smiling Egyptians appeared to surpass the crowds on a similar train trip by former President Richard Nixon in June 1974.

Sadat told reporters that only "a few words here and there" have kept Egypt and Israel from achieving a peace pact after months of ups and downs in their negotiations.

At another point he said: "There are really no obstacles in the way, there is only a misunderstanding on the main issues. I think it is time now that we can say that the signing of the agreement is not so far ..."

"I think we are on the verge of an agreement," The Egyptian leader said.

Carter, however, took a more subdued approach on the second day of his Middle East peace journey.

"We don't know yet what will happen until we get through with the talks," Carter said. "It's hard to predict what will happen."

He disclosed that Egyptian Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance "are talking about language and specifics. President Sadat and I are in basic agreement on strategic matters that's the situation now."

Carter said it was difficult to predict whether his peace mission would be successful, explaining, "We came on this trip without any assurance if success. What we'll do is take to Israel either an encouraging prospect or one that will require some substantial modification."

Carter said that only after further discussions with their full delegations will all sides know "how close we are together."

"Obviously," Carter said, "we'll go to Israel with some differences still remaining and I'll do my best to resolve those differences."

Carter said he had nothing to report to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin yet because "we're in the process of discussing the specific terms on which there is disagreement still."

Carter said there were no surprises concerning the Egyptian attitude.

As for the question of Palestinian autonomy, Carter said that both Begin and Sadat "have reconfirmed their commitment to me that all the Camp David agreements will be carried out."

"The details obviously will have to be worked out over the period of a year after a peace treaty is signed," Carter added.

He said he did not expect to delay his trip to Israel Saturday night for further negotiations.

In Jerusalem, Israeli leaders expressed cautious optimism about the Carter mission, but expressed fears that Carter will try to bring additional concessions from Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

"The atmosphere in the government is optimistic," Housing Minister David Levy said after a three-hour special session of the Cabinet. Justice Minister Shmuel Tamir said it did not make any decision.

Presidential candidate Rep. Phillip Crane of Illinois with wife, Ariene — all smiles at Seminole County Republican Lincoln Day dinner on Feb. 14.

It's Crane Vs. Reagan As Charges Fly In N.H.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan is denying anyone on his campaign staff was the source of rumors about the sex life and drinking habits of fellow GOP presidential candidate Rep. Phil Crane and his wife Ariene.

The Illinois Republican said Thursday he was "outraged" over the "scurrilous, unfounded rumors" printed in two lengthy articles in the ultra-conservative Manchester, N.H., Union-Leader. Crane said a reporter from the newspaper attributed them to "some Reagan campaign aides and supporters."

Crane sent Reagan a letter demanding he fire the campaign staffers involved.

In response, Reagan said, "I informed Congressman Crane that none of my staff was in any way responsible for 'I am particularly concerned that my six-year-old daughter

Carrie may never understand this' the articles. I told Congressman Crane that if he had any evidence to the contrary it was his responsibility to get it to me personally."

The articles alleged Crane has been involved in numerous extramarital affairs and that he and his wife are heavy drinkers and frequent Washington partygoers. The New Hampshire House unanimously passed a resolution condemning the article and apologizing to the congressman after Crane addressed it personally.

The newspaper's publisher, William Loeb, has endorsed Reagan for president and in the past has editorially lambasted Crane for splitting the conservative vote.

Crane with his wife, Ariene, at his side, was guest speaker at the annual Lincoln Day Dinner sponsored by the Seminole County Republican Executive Committee three weeks ago. The occasion also marked the couple's 25th wedding anniversary.

Crane's father, nationally syndicated marriage and health counseling columnist, Dr. George Crane, during brief remarks prior to his son's speech, blasted the Democratic public officials who have practiced immorality in office, citing particularly those congressmen who hired secretaries that could not type but would grant sexual favors. He pointed with pride to his own son, Phillip, who is a happily married family man with eight children.

Congressman Crane, during his speech, compared President Jimmy Carter's unfulfilled campaign promises to "never lie" to his own service to the people of his Illinois district. "I have never deceived nor glossed over the truth to my constituents," he said. "The people want the same thing I do. They want candor from their representatives."

He said he has heard criticism directed his way on the campaign trail because he and his wife have eight children. He remarked with a laugh that he is "building a good, loyal Republican foundation — nearly my own precinct."

Reagan's supporters launched his 1980 presidential campaign committee only Wednesday. In past campaigns the Californian has spoken of what he calls the 11th commandment of politics — "Thou shalt not speak ill of thy fellow Republican."

In a letter to Reagan, Crane said the reporter's questions went "well beyond the limits of common decency."

In an editorial accompanying the articles on Crane, Loeb denied the stories were printed "solely because we are supporting former Gov. Ronald Reagan for the Republican nomination for the presidency."

Some Reagan supporters and staff "have been involved in the development of a story so shocking, so unfair, and grossly untrue that I felt I must bring it to your attention," Crane wrote Reagan.

"It is distressing enough that I should have to be unjustly and scandalized by unfounded rumors. All of my children will suffer deeply and I hope the scars will heal soon. I am particularly concerned that my 6-year-old daughter Carrie may never understand this."

Armed Man Robs, Flees First Federal

An armed robber fled First Federal Savings and Loan of Sanford this morning with an undisclosed amount of cash after slipping a note to a teller demanding "Your money or your life."

The 10 a.m. robbery was the first in the 46-year history of the Sanford savings and loan institution, Vic Arnett, vice president, said. The institution's three branch offices in Oviedo, Longwood and Winter Park have been robbed in the past.

"The teller is very upset," Arnett said, refusing to reveal her name. "She said a man came in and passed her a note saying it was a robbery and 'Your money or your life.'"

"He did not show the weapon. She gave him the money in her cash drawer. We don't know exactly how much it was, but it was not a substantial amount," Arnett said.

Sanford Police Department detectives described the robber as a black male, 25-28 years old, 120-135 pounds, with short hair, wearing a camel-colored knee length coat and dark pants.

Persons with any information concerning this man were asked to contact Sgt. William Dube of the Sanford Police Department.

Sgt. Bill Bernosky of the Sanford Police Department said at about 10:04 a.m., the man approached the woman teller at First Federal. He told her, "I have a gun in my pocket."

The man had his hand in his pocket and the woman complied with the demand, Bernosky said.

"The subject walked out of the bank. No known vehicle or route of escape is known at this time," Bernosky said.

"The FBI is on the scene," he said.

A message was immediately sent to law enforcement units throughout the county advising them to be on the lookout for the robber.

The FBI from its Orlando office dispatched two or more agents to join the Sanford Police Department in the investigation.

Arnett said film from the saving and loan institution's surveillance cameras is in process of being developed to "see if we got a picture of him."

He expected the film to be developed by late this afternoon.

The savings and loan has been operating at its current location at 312 W. First Street since June 1974.

Local Summer Program Gets Grant For 400 Jobs

By DONNA ESTES Herald Staff Writer

More than 400 jobs will be available to disadvantaged youth in Seminole County this summer with announcement today of a grant in federal money totaling $460,767 from the Department of Labor (DOL) for a summer youth program.

The funds have been granted for 10-week summer jobs program, beginning in mid-June under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA).

Hank Lewis, director of the Seminole County Manpower Office, said the award of the grant, similar to one approved by the DOL a year ago, will again be sub-granted to the public school system for administration.

Last year's summer CETA job program under the school system received high praise from the DOL, while other summer programs were receiving criticism throughout the nation.

Eliza Smith, counselor-coordinator for the school system's CETA program, said the summer program, titled SPEDY (Summer Program for Economically Disadvantaged Youth) last year would again employ about 470 young people from 14 through 21 in a variety of jobs.

Last year the youth worked at 83 workites throughout the county, including 23 school centers, as building construction aides, and in landscaping, libraries, child care, forest rangers assistants, zoo, road maintenance and youth counseling, Smith said.

"We had an excellent program," Smith said, "and were commended by the DOL and monitors for the smooth-running operation. We are searching for new projects to add to the work experience program."

He said applications will be accepted from students at the end of April or first of May and the program will begin the middle of June.

Youth will be applying at school offices, at the school board CETA office on Pine Street and at the county CETA office in the Roumillat Building.

"After applications are filed, the interviewing process will begin to determine if the youths are eligible. The jobs selected are coordinated to permit them to do some of the things they would like to in relation to available transportation and job location to provide work experience," Smith said.

"We always receive more applications than there are jobs," Smith said.

A total of $27.4 million has been allocated for the program in Florida of the $118.8 million allocated for the eight-state region.

In allocating the funds, U.S. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said he believes this is a good program, one that provides

Graham, State Units Assess Oil Crisis

By MAX BERSHLEVIN Herald Staff Writer

Should an energy emergency be declared in Florida because utility companies cannot get low-cost oil in necessary quantities to provide current levels of electricity?

That's what Gov. Bob Graham's staff and two other state agencies are working on today in assessing data furnished by the utility companies.

The state's energy commission, which is headed by Graham, is also working on the problem.

The utility companies say they are now prohibited from burning high-sulfur content oil for energy because of federal and state anti-pollution laws.

High-sulfur content oil, the utility says, is available, but it would cost up to 10 percent more than the current level of electricity.

supply Sanford's electricity, and it has a contract with Exxon to buy oil. "We would certainly try to buy any low-sulfur oil from any other supplier to prevent brownouts here, but I don't feel certain we'd find any great quantity from another supplier. They have their own customers and their own shortages, I'm sure," said Bob Burns, 77 & 1/2, district manager in Sanford.

He said, however, he would not buy any low-sulfur oil until after April 1. They would be in late February the utility had a 24-hour-a-day supply

He's Doing His Best

With President Carter adopting an old Henry Kissinger shuttle-diplomacy style—the same style he severely criticized during his 1976 election campaign—the prevailing consensus is that Mr. Carter is taking a big gamble.

Most of the pundits have concluded that Mr. Carter could either rise to the heights or fall even further in esteem—depending upon whether he can pull it off, whether he can indeed get Egypt and Israel to sign that elusive peace treaty.

We do not subscribe to that rise or fall theory. Sure, Mr. Carter probably is putting some prestige on the line waging and pursuing Messrs. Begin and Sadat. But surely that is a price to be paid for a world leader—especially by the leader of the greatest nation in the world.

The ambivalence of these two Mideast leaders stems more from the centuries of hostility and antagonism—all of which make that final step all the more difficult. There is pride, tradition, internal and external politics to consider.

We hail Mr. Carter's never-ending search for a solution to the volatile Middle East situation. And we wish him well.

We hope that before he returns home, that treaty will be initiated. Or, at the very least, that a succinct timetable for the final signing will be agreed upon by the parties involved.

Special Handling

The petty thief who spends a year or so in a penitentiary and the lowly clerk imprisoned for embezzling half-a-year's salary from his employer are entitled to wonder at the sentence meted out to the respected influence-peddler and former member of Congress, Joshua Eilberg.

According to federal prosecutors, Eilberg netted at least $24,900 from a scheme that any House page would have known was unethical and illegal.

Eilberg collected his ill-gotten windfall from his law firm in exchange for his services in obtaining a $14.5 million federal grant for a hospital and medical college represented by his legal partners.

After pleading guilty to a federal conflict-of-interest charge as part of a plea-bargaining arrangement, Eilberg was sentenced by U.S. District Court Judge Raymond Broderick to five years probation and fined $10,000.

He was also barred from seeking state or local public office. His guilty plea automatically disqualified him from holding any federal office.

Federal acquiescence to Eilberg's plea-bargaining strategy kept him out of jail. To say the least, this deaconment must be a disappointment to Eilberg's original nemesis, former U.S. attorney David W. Harrison.

Harrison's pursuit of Eilberg led to the ten-congressman's famous telephone call to President Carter demanding that Harrison be fired.

Subsequently, Attorney General Griffin Bell, acting as Mr. Carter's best friend, dismissed Harrison.

In the absence of jail time, Eilberg's sentence represents wrist-restriction at best.

The $10,000 fine leaves him with at least $24,900 in proceeds from his crime. And five years on probation is no punishment to a man who so grossly abused his public trust.

As for his disqualification from holding office, Eilberg had already been defeated in his re-election bid.

The judge did order Eilberg to donate six hours a week to community service work.

Eilberg might use this time to research and compose an essay on equal justice. He probably would have probably insisted on a jail term for him, Eilberg might provide us a dramatic, first-hand account of the usefulness of friends in high places.

ANGLE-WALTERS 'Latch Key' Children Need Help

WASHINGTON (NEA)—You can see them every weekday afternoon, in any city in America, in any type of neighborhood. Kids—little kids—wearing a house key on a string around their necks.

They are the "latch key" children, the youngsters of working mothers who trudge home from school each day to an empty house where a television set and a telephone are the only available "child care" resources.

Nobody knows for sure how many there are, although the Census Bureau estimates at least two million children ages 7 to 13 are left alone each day without supervision.

Millions more youngsters too young to go to school are shuttled about from babysitters to group-care homes to relatives, neighbors and occasionally child care centers as women with and without husbands flood the labor market.

Within the space of a single decade, the child care problem in this country has reached crisis proportions. Whatever the reasons—economic, social or a combination thereof—mothers are leaving home for the work force at an accelerating pace.

By last year, according to the U.S. Department of Labor, 60 percent of all women with school-age children were working, along with almost 44 percent of all mothers with children under 6 years of age.

They left behind them, to be cared for one way or another, close to 30 million children—and in the entire United States, there were only about 1.8 million licensed child care openings.

Policy-makers at all levels of government, but especially federal, have been typically slow to recognize and respond to the obvious need for greater child care support.

Last year, the federal government spent approximately $1.5 billion on child care programs, almost all of which went to families on welfare or at the poverty level. Perhaps $500 million more was provided indirectly through the tax credit which working parents can claim for child care costs.

The last major federal initiative on child care came in 1971, when then-Sen. Walter F. Mondale steered a comprehensive bill through the Congress only to see it vetoed by former President Nixon.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who succeeded Mondale as chairman of the Senate subcommittee on children and youth, is now trying to put together a more modest, limited measure that would establish a system of state grants for a wide variety of child care services, from home-based care to day care centers.

The cost would be relatively small—less than $100 million in the next fiscal year, Cranston estimates. Yet in this "International Year of the Child," the only witness opposing the child care bill—of dozens who have testified so far—was the representative of the Carter administration.

The American Legion, hardly a group noted for its bleeding heart liberalism, heartily endorsed the Cranston bill. But an assistant secretary of Health, Education and Welfare insisted on new child care program be needed.

Carter's Bungling May Cost Us Saudis

WASHINGTON—In the backrooms of Washington, some military and intelligence analysts are anxiously preparing to write off Saudi Arabia as a U.S. ally.

They are glumly aware that the alienation of Saudi Arabia could be calamitous. For the United States has become dangerously dependent upon Saudi crude.

The strategists don't really blame the Saudi rulers, who have tried faithfully to protect U.S. interests. They have fought to keep oil prices down and the dollar's value up. After the price-drops of the Iranian oil boom, the Saudis stepped up their own production to satisfy U.S. needs.

The U.S. experts, in strict confidence, are more critical of President Carter than of the Saudis. At the lower policymaking levels, the planners simply have lost faith in the president's ability to cope with the Middle East crisis.

His bumbling has plunged Saudi-American relations, and also ours, to the lowest point since World War II. Even during the 1973 Arab oil embargo, the Saudis joined the boycott reluctantly and continued to work on good terms with Washington.

The charming gentleman from the North established roots in Sanford about seven years ago. And it didn't take him long to get the Florida sand in his shoes through the holes in his well-worn sneakers. The yankee seemed to like his new environment including the casual, relaxed, good life in comfortable clothing as opposed to snow country togger.

Yank revelled in his Florida marriage to a southern re-Belle... the girl of his dreams (or so he said). He really doesn't appear anti-social, but he had much rather be attired in a pair of baggy pants splashed with paint and concrete mix designs (and the bagger the better) than to be at a social function.

Last Saturday night Yank decided to accompany his wife to the performance of Ballet Guild of Sanford-Seminole. Yank sponsors two dancers, and he wanted to see his dancers in action.

LIGHTER SIDE Biting The Bullet

By DICK WEST WASHINGTON (UPI)—A book store manager once told me she frequently had customers ask for "a small Bible with large print."

Those specifications, with some modification, pretty well sum up congressional reaction to President Carter's stand-by plans for dealing with the threatened oil shortage.

Judging from statements I have seen, Congress favors gasoline restrictions that don't curtail the use of automobiles.

Since I couldn't begin to quote them all, let us consider the president's proposals through the eyes of Congressman Consensus. (That's Herman Consensus, not the Clyde Consensus you probably were thinking of.)

"If you're talking about a rationing system that conserves vital fuel, helps hold down the price, makes America less dependent on imports and reduces our foreign trade deficit while strengthening the dollar abroad, I'm in favor of it."

"But if you're talking about a rationing program that imposes hardships on commuters, adds to the government paperwork burden, interferes with our traditional freedom of movement and forces poor, elderly widows to walk 10 blocks for their weekly groceries, I'm against it."

"I said, 'I'm glad to see you're on top of the problem, Congressman. How do you feel about the perspective closing of gasoline stations on weekends?'"

Consensus raised a hand to his throat. "If you are talking about closing those that keep family members closer to home, cause people to rediscover the joys of neighborhood gettogethers, reduce the traffic death toll by taking cars off the highways and contribute to the fight against air pollution, I'm in favor of them."

"That's good to hear, sir," I said. Consensus clinched his fist. "But if you're talking about weekend closings that deprive good citizens of much needed recreation, bankrupt amusement parks, create unemployment at resorts and prevent city dwellers from escaping the urban environment to renew their spirits with refreshing drives to the country, I'm against them."

"I said, 'I can see you have thought the problem through. What about the drop-out of commercial lighting?'"

Replied Consensus: "If you are talking about extinguishing garish signs that waste precious energy, turn pleasant vistas into eyesores and dupe the poor consumer, I'm for it."

"But if you're talking about dimming the bright beacons of free enterprise that stimulate business, edify shoppers and discourage evildoers who lurk in the darkness, I'm against it."

"No real big deal," Belle avowed. "I'll just step on my ill 'yaller' truck, tuck it in the corner of a small baggie and tote it to the recycle-center next week."

"Well, I hope to about a suit," Belle said loudly. "A suit with a tie?" Yank questioned.

Yes, a suit with a T-E-E—you know like tying the knot of matrimony," Belle stressed.

"But it's only high school—and not Kennedy Center," Yank rationalized.

"Where it's at has nothing to do with the quality of the performance," Belle spat while the steam from the iron was casting a heavy warm mist in the room (or was the iron the culprit?). "If you were in New York or Chicago, you'd probably wear a tux to such an artistic filing."

"Do I really have to wear a suit and tie?" Yank asked.

"Well, nooo, but if you go with me you do," Belle advised.

"But I have you hemmed in the driveway. What if I won't move to let you out?" Yank teased.

VIEWPOINT New Car Or A Better Car?

By DON GRAFF Anyone for an inflatable car? How about one that relies for power on the sun and the wind?

Farbeek? Possibly, but not so far as to be beyond consideration by automotive specialists in their wide range of responses to a challenge.

The challenge is to "reinvent" the automobile and it comes from Transportation Secretary Brock Adams, who believes development of an alternative to today's energy-demanding vehicle is absolutely essential if, by the later years of this century, Americans are not to forfeit their rights to drive where and when they please.

Adams' first call to the cause, last December, drew a cool response from automakers who saw in an unrealistic demand upon their industry. The reception was considerable more cordial, however, during a recent follow-up symposium of engineers and scientists, to which Adams proposed a joint industry-government developmental effort with Washington handling research in the necessary new technology on the scale of some $100 million annually.

A Washington conference in April bringing together industry leaders and government specialists is the first step in Adams' grand design for an eventual national automobile policy.

Such a cooperative push might well produce the "energy-stretching, life-saving, people-pleasing" car of the future Adams sees as necessary if Americans are to continue to make full use of their highways after 1985.

But the odds are against anything resembling the more imaginative proposals tossed off by the symposium participants. There is, of course, the example of the World War II Manhattan project which produced the atomic bomb—and one scientist has, in fact, suggested a similar massive undertaking in auto development.

Committee efforts, however, no matter how well funded, rarely produce such unique and dramatic new departures in technology. These are more often solitary achievements, the result of a gifted individual's faith in an idea and determination to realize it.

What is more likely is a vast improvement in the existing internal combustion engine and in the fuel it uses. As one symposium participant observed, with all the blue-sky thinking being done, the discussion nevertheless kept returning "to that spark-ignition engine."

But that, if it leads to an energy-efficient vehicle and keeps the automobile mobile in the decades to come, will be all right too.

In And Around Winter Springs Citizens Rally For Post Office

A citizen's rally was held at the Winter Springs Civic Center-City Hall. Its purpose was to discuss the ways and means of obtaining a post office and its own zip code for the city.

Present at the rally were Representative Bobby Brantley, Mayor Troy Piland, Jeanie Roberts, representing Congressman Richard Kelly, and Councilman Bill Jacobs.

Chairing the meeting was former Winter Springs Councilman and one of the coordinators of the movement, John Booth.

Those attending were told of the efforts made to date to obtain a post office for the city. Those included letters written about the situation from President Carter, down through the political and postal service echelon.

It was revealed that, in a first step to eventually obtaining a post office in the city, postal service was considering a consolidation of all mail through the Casselberry post office. At the present time, half measured a long 23 inches at birth. If that seems like quite a large baby, remember that the Hendrix other son, 19-month-old Charles, weighed in at close to 11 pounds!

Longtime residents and former councilman Irwin Hunter was seen attending city council meetings a few weeks ago. Irwin, his wife Beckie, and their two daughters now live in Melbourne.

Whenever Hunter is visiting friends in the city, he makes a point of stopping by and observing the council proceeding.

Mickey Heman, a member of the Winter Springs Ladies Auxiliary to VPW Post 3485, recently moved to Denton, Texas. It was a move that caused problems in her life.

Before she arrived in Texas, Mickey had a heart attack on the plane and was taken to a hospital in Texas. After recuperating from this attack, she then had a stroke. As if that wasn't enough, she had a second stroke which left her paralyzed on her right side.

Her many friends in the city will remember Mickey as a very gutsy lady. She called me from Texas the other evening and although weak, she is still full of fight and said she would conquer this latest tragedy.

She said she plans to spend the winters in Florida and hopes to see her friends in a while—hale and hearty.

Meadowlark's "traveling granny," Bertyl Tate, was back in town last weekend. After living in Winter Springs some years, she recently moved to Pittsburg, Texas with her daughter, Linda, son-in-law, Joe and their four children. The Kiers were also residents of the city for some years.

Bertyl visited with Ruby and Al Kimball, Carol and Whitney Petroff, and Betty Eastham, one at a time, before "traveling" to Homestead to visit with other friends and relatives.

On Saturday, March 17, and Sunday, March 18, Valencia Community College will host Kanne Kaleidoscope III, a weekend for dogs and dog lovers at the West Campus, 300 South Kirkman Road, Orlando.

Starting at 10 a.m. Saturday will be an All Working Fun Match and a Objection Terrier Trial.

Sunday's activities begin at 8 a.m., with a day of something for everyone: tracking, lure coursing, obedience and conformation competition. Also featuring Special Classes for many breeds. An added attraction will be the famous Jacksonville K-9 Drill Team performing precision marching obediency routines at 12:45 p.m.

Food and drink will be available both days, and admission is free. For information on entering any of the events, contact Steve or Marilyn Krejci at 855-4301.

Her Marriage Is Brag! Nag! Rave! Yell! Cuss!

DEAR ABBY: Now I know why God lets the woman outlive her husband by about 10 years. She needs at least that much time to rest and recuperate. Pity the poor woman who's been married 50 years. I've been married 17 years, and if this man of mine doesn't go pretty soon, I pray to God that I will soon be laid to rest. I couldn't take another 33 years of it.

Yell and brag! rant and rave! Yell and cuss! All he has on his mind is eat, sleep and sex (especially sex). A poor woman goes to bed tired and wakes up tired. All a man is good for is his paycheck.

I've heard women talk about how lonely they are after their husbands pass on. Well, here is one who is looking forward to that day.

NO SIG IN GARDEN CITY DEAR NO SIG: Too bad you didn't sign your name. A husband is entitled to know how his wife feels about him. He may want to hire a food taster.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from LIKES IT LEGAL, who complained because her boyfriend told her that the man in his family never married—they just took common-law wives. While your response was sound, you missed a good opportunity to correct a common misconception about common-law marriages.

A common-law marriage is a legal and binding marriage, just as valid as a ceremonial marriage with a license!

A couple who live together, cohabit, and have established a reputation in their community as man and wife, are in the eyes of the law, LEGALLY married.

Furthermore, common-law marriage cannot be ended by one spouse simply moving out. Each party has legal obligations to the other, just as husband and wife have in a so-called "legal" marriage.

Thus, common-law marriage is much more than just

For Saturday, March 10, 1979

YOUR BIRTHDAY
 March 10, 1979
 Joint ventures with persons who share your ideas and interests should turn out quite prosperously for you this coming year. Your outlook is very encouraging but you must maintain high standards.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
 You've been making a lot of points with important persons lately. Because of this, today they may provide you with a large boost in a helpful direction. Find out which signs you are most compatible with by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter, Mail #1 for each Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 400 Radio City Station, NY 10101.

ARIES (March 11-April 10)
 This will contribute to your status as well as allow you to take pride in your accomplishments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 Your artistic qualities are crying for expression today, as you potter around the house, but better not attempt to make changes for another member of your family.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 This may not be one of your better days for fixing things. You're a little careless. Why not lay the tools down for the day and seek other diversions?

CANCER (June 21-July 21)
 You know how to make money or stretch a dollar today, but you don't know how to handle it. Take care, especially if a risk is involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 Because what you do is received by your friends today, you might get a wee bit cocky with the family. Forget it; they won't let you get away with it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 Several opportunities could come your way today. They won't wait for you to make up your mind, so don't hesitate to take advantage of them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
 There isn't anyone you fail to impress today. This, however, could be your downfall. You might unwittingly attract several freeloaders.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
 Concentrate on your more humanitarian projects today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
 As long as you remain optimistic, positive people will be drawn to you. The second you turn negative you'll find yourself standing alone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 A joint venture looks most promising for you, provided you don't try to alter its present course. Move with the flow of events.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
 A philosophical approach is your best way of handling situations today. There are times to get tough, but this isn't one of them.

How To Lose Your Excess Loose Skin

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 17-year-old male and I recently lost a great amount of weight by going on a diet and improving my exercise. I lost between 40 and 50 pounds. However, this great weight loss has left an excessive amount of flab on my abdomen. Please do not suggest sit-ups. I do them three times a day and it does not help. Can you suggest anything?

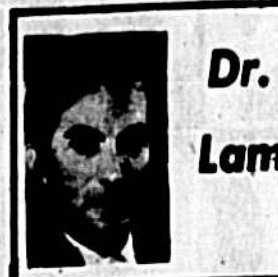

DEAR READER — I am really surprised at how often this question is raised. What to do depends upon what you mean by flab. Also since I don't know how overweight you were to begin with, it's difficult for me to know whether you have still more fat to lose. You should be able to tell by feeling how much fat there is underneath your skin — if any.

Loose skin may never fully contract. That's why people shouldn't get fat in the first place, even if they're very young. If you stretch the skin too much, it will only snap back so far.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-7, Girls Control: Avoiding the Big Middle, even though I suspect you have accomplished a lot of what this issue advises. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1561, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

I am going to advise sit-ups and leg lifts for you. Many people don't realize that sit-ups do not tone up all of the abdomen. They are primarily for the upper abdominal muscles, those above the navel. They have very little effect on the muscles below the navel. These must be tightened up with leg lift exercises. I'd like to add that anyone with back problems should not try doing leg lift exercises without his doctor's approval.

Sit-ups, voluntary contraction of abdominal muscles, leg lifts and eliminating fat under the skin and fat inside the abdomen are the keys to tightening up the waist area. If you still have a lot of loose skin a year after undergoing a fat control program then if you want to get rid of it, you'll have to consider surgical removal.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was reading your column about transplanting an ovum from one woman into another woman's uterus. This set me to thinking. We don't have any children because I had a hysterectomy when I was very young. My ovaries were left intact, so apparently I still ovulate but, of course, since I don't have a uterus I don't have menstrual periods.

Now, there isn't such a thing as uterus transplants yet, but what I'd like to know is if I'm producing normal ova, could one of those be fertilized and developed in some other woman's uterus? That way my husband and I could have a child that has our own genes.

DEAR READER — Theoretically, that would be possible and things very similar to that have been done in animal reproduction. At this particular writing, this hasn't been done in human beings, but most of the basic elements needed to do such procedure have been worked out.

So, I can't tell you that you could have such a thing done now, but I think it's entirely possible for a woman in your situation to have that done at some date in the future, if she chooses to do so. Of course, that would entail finding another woman who was willing to go through the pregnancy for your child.

WIN AT BRIDGE

East leads a club to him. South plays two rounds of trumps and is delighted to find that trumps have broken two-two. Now he can work an end play against East.

He leads a diamond to dummy's ace. Back to his king and then a ruff of his last diamond. Now he leads the last heart from dummy. East wins and South discards a club.

If East leads the last heart, South discards his last low club and ruffs in dummy. If East leads a club, South lets it ride around to his queen. Either way, South makes his contract.

Ask the Experts
 The bidding has gone: one heart-double-two hearts.
 You hold:
 ♠ K Q 7
 ♥ 10 9
 ♦ A 8 4 2
 ♣ K J 9 7

An Alabama reader wants to know your correct bid. This is easy. You should raise three hearts. Make your partner pick the suit. You can raise whichever one he would prefer.

A munching Harold Dellenger samples a self-created treat...other Milwee 7th graders are also whipping them up. Story, Page 2

Milwee 7th Graders Whip Them Up

If you're 12 and want peanut butter cookies, you usually have to wait for your mother to bring some back from the store or whip up a batch in the kitchen.

Harold Dellenger doesn't have to wait. He bakes his own.

Harold is a 7th grader at Milwee Middle School and for the past 12 weeks his class has studied home economics, followed by industrial arts. Business education occupies the final 12 weeks of the year.

"For most 7th graders this is their first exposure to home economics," explained Linda Tuttle, who teaches Orientation to Home Economics Occupations.

She started off with the basics, such as measuring ingredients and kitchen safety and before the end of the course both boys and girls had tried their hand at sewing, baking cookies, pizza, doughnuts — and even fondue.

In addition to cooking and sewing the class is exposed to career-related information. Restaurant operations were discussed including information on how to become chefs and cooks. Child care, clothing, fashion and consumer education were also included.

"The problem at first," explained Mrs. Tuttle, "was that the boys were not open-minded about it and we had several fathers complaining. It was a real macho thing. But they (the boys) are really getting into it now."

Harold Dellenger has found the class to be quite useful since he puts to use at his Altamonte Springs home what he has learned in class.

His mother, Dimitria, and younger brother, Robert, have been treated to chocolate chip cookies, peanut butter cookies and pigs-in-a-blanket (wieners baked inside biscuit dough).

He claims he has eaten everything he has made, never burned anything, and had no failures in his brief cooking career.

At school he was also instructed to clean up all his mess.

Does he do the same at home? Harold cringed a little, laughed, "Well ...", he said.

The TV Ads And Kids

NEW YORK (UPI) — Is the FTC attempting to be a "national nanny" or is it trying to fulfill its obligation to protect the most vulnerable portion of the television audience — children — from deceptive advertising?

FTC hearings on proposals to limit and in some cases ban television advertising aimed at children began in Washington, D.C., March 5 and will continue for about a month.

The battle will seesaw back and forth as representatives of sugared cereal manufacturers testify on one side, dentists on the other; groups opposed to children's advertising such as Action for Children's Television on one side, ad agencies and networks on the other.

No matter what the FTC eventually decides, somebody's going to sue. General Mills already has indicated it will appeal a ban against advertising its products, and Peggy Charren, president of ACT, says her group will go to court if the FTC evades what ACT considers its responsibilities to children.

Mrs. Charren and her group — no longer referred to condescendingly by network officials as "the ladies from Boston" (where ACT was founded) — generally are credited with stirring up the present federal furor. Not only is the FTC looking into advertising aimed at children, but so is the FCC.

While ACT supports eliminating all advertising aimed at children under 12 years of age, the FCC seems more inclined at this time to consider limits on ads designed to sell goods to the 2-7 age group.

Advertisers, their agencies and the networks all contend that attempts to limit or ban children's advertising might be infringements of free speech rights and constitute an attempt to shift responsibility from parents to the federal government.

Mrs. Charren has other ideas. She would like to see a ban on all advertising aimed at children under 12 because she says they need protection from deceptive advertising.

Hope Beats Hunger For 'Galactica' Star

One of Hollywood's most romantic images is the picture of the poor, dedicated young actor whose devotion to his craft overrules the growling hunger in the pit of his stomach.

For most, it's nothing more than good material for a movie script; for Richard Hatch, the talented young actor who star as Captain Apollo in ABC's "Battlestar Galactica" series, it was a reality.

After attending Harbor College in nearby San Pedro, Richard joined a Los Angeles repertory company in 1967, and the troupe of 30 headed for New York with high hopes, dedication and very little money. An empty ballet theater became home and workshop to the troupe, sleeping on the tiny stage floor and existing on a tiresome diet of soup and tuna fish commandeered by one of the more enterprising members.

But they were eating — and acting — doing "Song of Walt Whitman," "Young Rebels" and a production called "Exercise," which Richard directed. It was a showpiece for the company, successful enough to transport the entire troupe to Rome — all except Richard. New York was for him.

Richard's decision to remain in the Big Apple paid off when he was cast for a running part in ABC's daytime serial "All My Children."

His exposure in this daytime drama also landed him a major role in "Love Me, Love My Children," an off-Broadway production that won an Obie.

In June, 1972, Richard returned permanently to Los Angeles where a guest appearance on Quinn Martin's "Cannon" series became the first of a growing list of television credits which now include "Barnaby Jones," a two-hour episode of "The Waltons," several appearances on "Hawaii Five-O," "The Hatfields and the McCoy's," "Addy and the King of Hearts"

'Camp Runamuck' Crudity, No Charm

By David Handler

ABC has taken the funniest movie of 1978 and turned it into the most unwatchable TV series of 1979 (although to be totally fair to the 4,391 readers who sent me telegrams after NBC debuted its Friday night comedy lineup, I have not yet seen "Hello, Larry").

Part of the problem with the transformation of "Animal House" into "Delta House" is conceptual.

ABC bought an anti-social college comedy propelled by a strong sense of intelligence.

In adapting it for a younger target audience, the

Bruce McGill, John Vernon and Stephen Furst are three stars of "Animal House."

REVIEW

network has turned it into "Camp Runamuck."

Part of the problem is in the execution. Somehow, someone somewhere decided that a show that takes place in 1962 should look like a sitcom that was shot in 1962.

"Delta House" pre-dates the "All in the Family" technical revolution.

Since that show's success in 1970, virtually all sitcoms have been shot on videotape before a live audience. No exteriors, very little background score and above all no laugh track.

"Delta House" represents a conspicuous return to the days of "McHale's Navy" and "F Troop."

To top it off, "Delta

House" climaxes with dreadful, badly faked physical comedy.

In case you were wondering what happened to the guy who did the special effects for "Son of Flubber" — I think he's found another job.

A prize for the first episode of this show which doesn't have a "boing" on the soundtrack.

The end result is that "Delta House" preserves the crudity of "Animal House" without any of its charm, its characters minus their personalities, their pranks without the edge of anarchy.

The film drew on the formula of the service comedy: take a bunch of disruptive, quick-witted zanies and turn them loose in a humorless, inefficient bureaucracy.

The army has always been a great home for this (it still is, in "M.A.S.H.") and so has college life. One of the Marx Brothers funniest movies, "Horsefeathers," was a college comedy.

The dividing line between the zanies and the straights is vital.

Can you imagine "M.A.S.H." without Hot Lips? But here it has been erased, and the humor has gone right down the kazooty with it.

Everyone in the show is an idiot. Otter is now just a cute hustler instead of a sharp guy who belongs to "Animal House" — because he recognizes it's the only way he can survive the insanity of college life.

Bluto, the lunatic slob, is now his likeable, bespectacled brother Blotto, part Oscar Madison and part Herman Munster. D-Day the silent biker, now talks and jokes along with the guys. Flounder, the sweating, giggling - what's, has been beached.

Niedermayer, the film's most conspicuous nerd, blends right into the wallpaper (as do most of the other characters).

Dean Wormer, the key figure of authority, has blossomed into a full scale buffoon.

But the biggest problem is the pranks. No longer are they designed solely for the joy of disrupting college life. Now they are harmless, kiddie pranks.

McLean Stevenson and Kim Richards in "Hello, Larry"

Somebody Up There Likes Him

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — McLean Stevenson's odyssey of four TV series in as many years is like no other in recent Hollywood memory.

Stevenson, an eminently likeable man off-screen and on, is a personality in search of a viable vehicle.

The tall, lean McLean, a relative of late presidential aspirant Adlai Stevenson, came to acting relatively late in life after dropping out of Northwestern Law School and becoming assistant director of Athletics at that university. He was also a hospital supply house salesman.

He studied acting in New York's Music Theatre Academy and worked as an understudy at Manhattan's famed Upstairs at the Downstairs club. Stevenson put in time in summer stock, TV commercials and guest spots.

After moving to Hollywood he did some comedy writing for the Smothers Brothers and became a regular on "The Doris Day Show" and "The Tim Conway Comedy Hour."

Viewers discovered Stevenson in "M-A-S-H" playing Lt. Col. Henry Blake, the laconic commander of the fouled-up hospital unit.

In actuality, "M-A-S-H" was Stevenson's third series and was followed in quick succession by three more — an unsuccessful variety show, "The McLean Stevenson" sitcom in which he played the head of a family and "In The Beginning," portraying a Roman Catholic priest.

Currently McLean stars in the title role of "Hello, Larry," another sitcom in which he plays a divorced father of two daughters trying to raise the girls as a single parent.

He joined "Hello, Larry" a scant 10 days after receiving word that "In The Beginning" was canceled.

Obviously, somebody up there loves McLean Stevenson, who is now in his sixth series. At the moment that somebody is Fred Silverman who, as president and chief executive officer of NBC, is one of the most powerful men in television.

Silverman personally telephoned Stevenson when "In The Beginning" was canceled by CBS to say that NBC had a first-rate series for him.

The merry-go-round effect of one series after another has left Stevenson somewhat shaken. Since leaving "M-A-S-H" he has been a square peg in a round hole.

Television executives and producers like him. The public has demonstrated a fondness for his low-key style of comedy. But Stevenson hasn't really caught on with a hit.

"Hello, Larry" so far has a spotty Nielsen record. Sometimes it is respectably rated, sometimes it isn't. "I've worked harder on this show than any of the others. I've contributed to the concepts and writing. Fred Silverman is convinced we'll get a large family following for the show."

Lillie Langtry Very Real

Lillie Langtry's life sounds like a fairy tale—beauty, royal mistress, actress—but she was a very real person. And that created problems for the staff of London Weekend Television when they began work on the new 13-part series, "Lillie," to begin on PBS's "Masterpiece Theatre" Sunday, March 11.

The series covers 50 years of Lillie's eventful life, which lasted from 1853 to 1929.

Daughter of a clergyman on the Isle of Jersey, young Lillie longed for the bright lights of London. When she married the wealthy Edward Langtry, she persuaded him to take her there.

Lillie's classical beauty soon took the city by storm. Artists vied to paint her, and she sat for several, including John Everett Millais, who immortalized her as "The Jersey Lily." Oscar Wilde wrote a poem about her.

She soon captured the heart of the heir to the throne, Albert, Prince of Wales, and became his first publicly acknowledged (though certainly not his only) mistress.

When the affair ended and "Bertie" succeeded to the throne as Edward VII, Lillie embarked on a flamboyant career as an actress in both Britain and America.

To play Lillie, Wharmby chose Britain's Francesca Annis, last seen in America on "Masterpiece Theatre" as Madame Bovary.

"Francesca Annis is a great beauty and a superb actress," says Wharmby. "She is already a star in Britain, but this will make her a star in America as well."

The job of recreating Lillie's world fell to set designer Richard Dunn. "Our biggest problem," he comments, "was research." Lillie was a real person, so we're not dealing with a fictional story or fictional places.

Each set has to be an exact copy of the place it represents, because the accuracy of our sets can be checked by looking at photographs.

Dunn created 74 main sets and 72 smaller sets, including the childhood home Lillie longed to leave; Marlborough House, the home of her lover, the Prince of Wales, and his wife; and hotels and theaters in America.

About 20 minutes of each episode were shot on location and 35-40 in the studio.

In Episode Five, Lillie, already one of London's reigning beauties, is introduced to Albert, the Prince of Wales, when he is out riding on Hyde Park's Rotten Row. (Despite its name, Rotten Row has for centuries been the place where London's "best people" have gone riding.)

The fateful encounter leads to their tempestuous affair.

For this five-minute scene, Dunn studied three locations before choosing an estate 20 miles outside London.

"The real Rotten Row," he explains, "would be impossible now with the level of traffic and noise. Here at Ashridge Estate, it's very light and woody as Rotten Row was then. And it's quiet, though there's an airport nearby, and we lose about an hour a day waiting for planes to pass over."

To recreate a section of Rotten Row's riding track, 16 tons of peat were needed. After that was in place, Dunn installed authentic railings and lamps.

As background for the scene, he brought in 70 extras "to give the flavor of Hyde Park 100 years ago": riders, picnickers, nannies pushing prams, elegant ladies and gentlemen strolling with their dogs, and children rolling hoops across the grass.

Besides the extras, there were four Irish setters, five horses and a carriage.

Recreating Lillie's world wasn't cheap. "We've had to reproduce four or five ballrooms," says Dunn, "and that is expensive. You can't make glamor for nothing. The ballroom at Marlborough House, Bertie's London home, has been turned into a conference center and completely changed. So we rebuilt it in a studio as it was when the

"Francesca Annis is a great beauty and a superb actress" is a great beauty and a superb actress

Prince of Wales lived there—with tile floors and greenery everywhere.

The same painstaking research has gone into the costumes designed by Frances Tempest and Linda Mattock.

When Lillie first conquered London with her classical beauty, she wore the same black dress to parties, evening after evening. (She didn't have the money to buy new clothes and had the excuse that she was in mourning for her brother.)

But later, in her role as royal mistress, she began to appear in expensive finery.

By the end of the series, Lillie had worn 200 different outfits, about 50 of which are ballgowns.

She also wears theatrical costumes for her tours of America, including one for the appropriate role of Cleopatra.

The total wardrobe for the series numbers 3,000 costumes, and even the extras' outfits have been made with scrupulous attention to detail.

Despite the tightly corseted waspwaist look, star Francesca Annis did not find the costumes uncomfortable.

"In fact, in a way they're good because everything goes into the right place. It's much more painful to pull your belt tight than to wear a corset. With the corset, everything is held together so it isn't uncomfortable, and you adapt your movements to it."

We're Off Again—It's 'Airport '79 Concorde'

By DICK KLEINER
HOLLYWOOD (NEA)—Up in the air! Is it a bird? Is it Superman? No, by golly—this time it's a plane. We're off again, with the next "Airport" adventure currently shooting at Universal.

After all the other airborne disasters—a bomb on the plane in the original "Airport," a mid-air collision in "Airport '75" and a sunken airplane in "Airport '77"—what more can happen to air travelers?

Well, just wait and see. But the main gimmick in the new one is that it happens on board the SST, Concorde. And so the film is being called "Airport '79 Concorde."

They've built a reproduction of the Concorde

"There are 3,800 instruments on the flight panel" on the Universal lot. The only thing different about it is that the aisles are a bit wider—the Concorde's are notoriously narrow—to accommodate the passage of a film camera dolly.

"There are 3,800 instruments on the flight panel," special effects man Peter Albiez said. "And 95 percent of them are authentic." Albiez says they worked from original blueprints in building the mock-up of the plane and its flight deck. The flight deck looks small, compared to, say, the flight deck of a 747.

But Albiez says it is actually six feet wider and four feet higher than the real one, to give them room to maneuver the cameras.

It took the Universal technicians more than two months to build the replica of the Concorde.

To make sure it was all in exact scale, Albiez says, they had somebody ride the real Concorde, and took a picture of his hand holding a pre-measured pen, and turning on cabin lights and doing other things so they could have a true gauge of all the real sizes.

The plot of the film is, so far, something of a well-guarded secret, but a few facts can be leaked.

It is a plane with an international crew (Alain Delon, David Warner and George Kennedy, representing France, Great Britain and the U.S. are in the cockpit,) and it is enroute from Washington to Moscow.

It is heading to the '80 Olympics, and it has some U.S. and some Russian athletes among its passengers. And, for some reason, it is attacked, but what the attack is and why, are not yet for publication.

As I watched, the crew was reacting to one phase of the attack, radioing for help.

"I'm not sure," said the director David Lowell Rich, "if this attack is an explosion or a missile attack or a drone attack."

Presumably, then, there are several attacks. There is also another subplot, which producer Jennings Lang told me about.

"This picture was designed for the Concorde," Lang says.

"The story only fits the 'They wanted to make sure the crews were not made to look like jerks' Concorde. We've got a heart in New York and we've got a woman who's got a kid in Paris and the only way you can get that heart to that kid in time is by the Concorde."

So there's a race against time, too, in addition to the story of the attack, and whatever else they are planning to throw into the heartstopping hopper.

The biggest problem, however, won't be seen on the screen.

SOAP Jessica chooses between Chester and Det. Donahue; Danny finds Elaine's killer, and Billy is kidnapped by Sun Cult members.

Ask Dick Kleiner

DEAR DICK: I heard that Mary Tyler Moore smokes pot, and has done so for years. Is this true? She doesn't seem like that type. L.B., Tucson, Ariz.

That "type" includes a lot of pretty famous people, but I know what you mean. The story stems from an article in a recent issue of Ladies' Home Journal, in which Mary admitted that she had smoked marijuana. She went on to say that she disapproves of hard drugs completely. She said that she found pot no more dangerous than a pre-dinner martini. And there are many experts who agree with her.

DEAR DICK: Could you tell me why Radar is quitting the "MASH" show. What will happen to him on the show? GREG KUCHMEK, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Bob Cristal, who manages Gary Burghoff, alias Radar, says that "quitting" is the wrong word. He insists that Burghoff's contract expired, after seven years, and he simply chose not to renew it. The actor wants to spend more time with his family—he has a 3-year-old daughter he wants to get to know—and he wants to do some other things, professionally, such as resuming his stage career. Producer Burt Merz says he tells me they have not yet decided on how to write Radar out. Mostly, that depends on whether Burghoff will agree to do one more show. If he does, then they'll write an episode eliminating him in some way. If he doesn't, they may simply not mention him next season.

DEAR DICK: I'd like to know what happened to the beautiful little singer on "Name That Tune." She was on just before the girl they have now. Boy, she could sing and dress and was so lovely. MRS. F.G., Unlontown, Pa.

That was (and still is) Kathie Lee Johnson, who got bumped when ABC bought the show and brought in a lot of their own people. You can see Kathie Lee on a new syndicated show, "Hee Haw Honeys," if you're up to it.

DEAR DICK: I wonder if you could let me have the full theme song of "All In The Family." I have listened to the program for years and still cannot make out the words. Only words I know are "Those were the days." MRS. A. PICKARD, Vancouver, B.C., Can.

OK. Once and for all. Over the years, I must have given these words, in bits and pieces, dozens of times. Here, then, is the entire lyric, so cut it out, paste it up, make it into a sampler, but never again. (The song, incidentally, was written by Ted Adams and Charles Strouse, and is copyrighted by New Tandem Music Co.)

Boy, the way Glenn Miller played. Songs that made the Hit Parade! Guys like us, we had it made—Those were the days!

And you knew where you were then Girls were girls and men were men Mister, we could use a man Like Herbert Hoover again! Didn't need no welfare state Everybody pulled his weight Gee, our old LaSalle ran great! Those were the days!

DEAR DICK: I was wondering what ever happened to actor Jeff Hunter. I recently saw him in some mid-1960s movies. H.A., Springfield, Mo.

Dying is what happened to him. Jeff died in 1969; he was only 44.

DEAR DICK: My brother and I are having an argument. He said that Robin Williams who plays Mork on "Mork and Mindy" was killed in a car accident just recently, and I say he isn't dead at all. Who is right? UNSIGNED, Calgary, Alta., Can.

You are. Robin is positively alive.

IN CONCERT Sarah Vaughan's incomparable versatility is featured.

Carter To Israel

Breakthrough In Mideast Talks

CAIRO (UPI) — In an apparent breakthrough toward an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, President Carter told the Egyptian Parliament today he has a commitment from both countries that the pact will be linked to a comprehensive Middle East settlement.

Egyptian officials said they are making tentative plans for a possible signing of a peace treaty Tuesday at Mena House in the shadow of the Great Pyramids just outside Cairo.

But on the occupied West Bank, only hours before Carter's scheduled arrival in Israel, government troops intercepted and killed a four-man Palestinian death squad trying to cross the Jordan, marring the peace mood and the president's announced breakthrough on linking the treaty to Palestinian self rule.

Carter unveiled the breakthrough on linkage to a special session of Egypt's People's Assembly in Cairo at the end of the first leg of his unprecedented open-ended peace mission aimed at securing the first pact ever between Israel and an Arab state.

"There can be little doubt that the two agreements reached at Camp David — negotiated together and signed together — are related, and that a comprehensive peace remains a common objective," Carter said.

"Just in recent days, both Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat have again pledged to carry out every commitment made at Camp David. Both leaders have also reaffirmed that they do not want a separate peace between their nations."

That affirmation, announced by Carter on the third day of his tumultuous reception by hundreds of thousands in Egypt, appears to answer Cairo's demand for a firm, visible link between the two Camp David frameworks. The linkage question has snagged negotiations on the treaty since mid-November.

The Assembly speech revealed officially and publicly for the first time that the Israelis have accepted that idea of linkage as well as American officials had long insisted on.

letters attached to the peace treaty.

Carter also appealed to the Palestinians to join the peace process and said he was still committed to bringing about negotiations between Jordan and Israel and Syria and Israel, as was implied in the second framework for peace worked out at the Camp David Summit. The first document outlined the Israeli-Egyptian treaty.

In another key point, Carter seemed to rule out the possibility of any formal defense alliance with either Egypt or Israel.

"Our policy is that each country should have the ability to defend itself, so that it does not have to depend on external alliances," he said. "The United States does not seek a special position for itself."

American officials said the president decided on this dramatic personal attempt to negotiate a peace treaty because he believed time was running out and it was "now or never" for peace in the Middle East.

Egyptian officials, planning for a treaty signing Tuesday, are hoping that Carter will get Israel's agreement to the proposals that were put together in Egypt between Carter and President Anwar Sadat, and that Carter will return for the signing with Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

American officials believe that in the light of the often painful experience in these negotiations the Egyptian hopes are excessively optimistic and overlook some of the complex detail that has yet to be negotiated.

But the Americans believe there is a good chance that the main issues can be dealt with by Carter and he will leave Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to clean up the details.

Health Advice Is Just A Telephone Call Away

By JANE CARRELLERY
 Herald Staff Writer

Do you have a problem with drinking, drugs or smoking? Do you have an unwanted pregnancy or want to know about family planning and birth control? Do you have bad breath, nagging, lumpy sores or sores? Or are you concerned about the more serious problems of cancer, heart disease, arthritis, diabetes and venereal disease? Practical advice and factual information on these and many problems of mental and physical health, safety and family life are as near as a Seminole County's telephone.

By calling 688-3000 — the number for Florida Hospital's Tel-Health Service — you can get tips on how to remain healthy through preventive health, how to recognize signs of illness, when to consult your doctor and how to adjust to a serious illness.

By giving the Hospital Auxiliary volunteer on duty the number of the tapes in the Tel-Health Library to which you wish to listen, you can anonymously learn what you always wanted to know but were afraid to ask on more than 200 health-related subjects.

A brochure listing all of the tapes by subject and number is available free to anyone calling the Tel-Health number to request one. The free tape service is funded by the Florida Hospital Auxiliary and through private donations.

Orlando was the third area in the state to obtain this service which began here April 24, 1978. Since that time more than 100,000 calls have been logged.

According to Kathy Henson, director of Health Education for Florida Hospital, they receive from 300 to 1,500 calls a day — mostly from women, but also from men and children.

"When we first started tapes on sex related problems used to be the most popular, but now it has broadened out and we get genuine requests for all sorts of subjects across the board," she said. "We get a lot of inquiries on drugs and alcohol, there's also a lot of interest in dental tapes."

Many physicians and dentists now refer their patients to the tape library for factual information on various subjects.

The library has tapes on the care of the patient as nurse, nutrition, health education programs offered by Florida Hospital, ways to cut your medical costs, medical insurance, Medicaid and Medicare, prescriptions, and Social Security.

There are tapes on child rearing from care of the newborn to teen rebellion, including ones on "Where did I come from, Mama?" "Under Physical Fitness there are 'Sport Tips for Youngsters,'" "Little League Elbows" and "Exercising — Warm Up Slowly."

Another service soon to be available through Tel-Health will be Tel-Hospital. This will be available through a physician's recommendation and to the patient in the hospital and will center on hospital procedures.

"Many grateful people call to thank us for the help the tapes have given them," said Miss Henson. "One man whose child was in the hospital with meningitis called to say the information he received on the subject had relieved some of the anxiety he was feeling."

"One woman said her husband had listened to a tape on emphysema and as a result quit smoking and his health had improved," she said.

Boy May Have Fallen In Tub Drowning Deaths

Sanford Police today were continuing their investigation into the bathtub drowning deaths of two children in an effort to determine how the accident happened.

An autopsy completed Friday afternoon revealed the older of two boys who drowned in the bathtub of their 100 Lake Monroe Terrace home, in Sanford, Thursday had sustained a bump on the head.

Dr. G. V. Garay, Seminole County medical examiner, said 3 1/2-year-old Tully Kelt had a bump on his head which could have occurred as the result of a fall. Tully and his eight-month-old brother Terry were first found face down in about six inches of water in the bathtub of their home between 5 and 5:30 p.m. Thursday by their mother, Bluette Kelt, 38.

The two boys had been dead about 30 minutes to an hour when they were discovered, according to Dr. Garay.

"I had just put down my packages when I came into the house, and Bluette came running to me, screaming and sobbing," Mrs. Kelt said.

"She said her daughter yelled, 'Mom, Mom, the boys are dead. They're in the bathtub,'" Mrs. Kelt said she ran into the bathroom and saw the children floating face down in the water.

"I couldn't believe it. I was in such a state of shock, about the only thing I remember is pulling one of the boys out and trying to revive him. I don't even remember who pulled the other child out," the boys' grandmother said.

"I feel so sad today. I just don't know why this had to happen," the grandmother said.

Efforts to revive the children by emergency crews at the scene and later by medical staff at Seminole Memorial Hospital were unsuccessful.

Carol Hoffman with fellow firefighters

State Certified Woman

Lake Mary Firefighter A First

By BOGGER ROY
 Herald Correspondent
 Carol Hoffman joins the Lake Mary Volunteer Fire Department in 1972.

Two years later she became the first woman in Florida to complete the 200-hour firefighter's training course and become state-certified as a firefighter.

Michelle Davis, a 28-year-old ambulance attendant, became a member of the Canaberry Fire Department about a year ago. She has also completed the firefighter's course.

Both serve as volunteers and both are married — to spouses of spouses.

"Why did they become firefighters?" Michelle said she would like to know. "Just not being able to do anything else, so I went in to see for myself. I was surprised."

Carol became a volunteer because she could "see the need of the people."

Michelle said she and all the Lake Mary volunteers were men, most of them working during the day, so fire protection wasn't sufficient during those hours.

"I could see they were short-handed during the day," she said, so she and four other women joined the department.

The other four have since moved or dropped out of the department.

Carol insists that her husband, Wayne, who is also a member of the department, was the "instigator" in her joining the department.

"I started out just taking pictures and doing some other little things for the department. Since my husband was a member, he finally talked me into joining." She adds that while going through the 200-hour training program "I never would have made it without my husband."

Michelle met her husband, Robert, also a Canaberry firefighter, while she was attending an emergency medical technician (EMT) training program in which he was also certified.

Unlike Carol, Michelle would like to be a paid, full-time firefighter, however her eyesight does not meet the state requirements.

The state also requires that firefighters pass a rigid "physical agility" test in which the applicant must run 1 1/2 miles in 12 minutes or less, do push-ups, and perform other agility tests of strength and agility.

"I could do most of the stuff except for the push-ups," she said, "so I started working at the time 'my husband and I and another couple went out to dinner for our anniversary. We were almost at the restaurant when we had a call of a cardiac. We turned around and went to the scene and there I was, giving CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation) in my evening gown."

Both women claim the public seems to accept them, although Michelle does admit that people are sometimes "a little amazed" when she shows up.

Michelle concedes, however, that at first the firemen didn't seem sure a woman could do the job.

"When I first joined, I had to work at it to show them I could do it, but after I proved I could do the job they all seemed to learn to drive the trucks," she said. "It just seemed like any other part of my training."

Of course, being a woman in the fire service is sure to cause some peculiar circumstances. Carol will "never forget" the time "my husband and I and another couple went out to dinner for our anniversary. We were almost at the restaurant when we had a call of a cardiac. We turned around and went to the scene and there I was, giving CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation) in my evening gown."

Michelle concedes, however, that at first the firemen didn't seem sure a woman could do the job.

"When I first joined, I had to work at it to show them I could do it, but after I proved I could do the job they all seemed to
