House Group Pigeonholes Hatch Bill

Vote Not Announced; Chairman Sumners Refuses To Discuss Committee Decision

Act Would Hit Federal Workers

Personal Campaign Contributions Would Be Limited

WASHINGTON, May 1.—(AP)—The House Judiciary Committee today killed the Senate-approved Hatch bill to regulate political activities of state employes paid with federal funds.

The committee ordered the bill tabled, meaning it will be stuffed away in a pigeonhole. The vote was not announced and Chairman Sumners (D-Tex.) refused to discuss the matter beyond making a bare announcement.

In addition to restricting political activities of state employes paid by federal money, the measure also would have limited personal campaign contributions to $5,000.

The House amendments to exempt large groups of workers from the wage-hour law were passed May 1, 1936, in the House yesterday after being so amended and "loaded" with additional legislation that their author, Representative Barden (D-Mo.), threw up his hands in despair and abandoned them.

The Senate, which came to the conclusion of a long controversy in which President Roosevelt vigorously fought the Senate plan, opened the way for consideration, beginning Saturday, of the Senate amendments offered by the House Law Committee.

Scout Camporee Will Be Held On Friday, Saturday

Members of Seminole County patrol and troops will hold a two-day camporee on the vacant lot south of the diamond ball field on the lake front Friday and Saturday, District Commissioner Charles S. Morrison said today.

The camporee was previously scheduled two weeks ago but inclement weather forced the postponement until this coming weekend.

The scouts and patrols from all over the county will take part in competitive matches during the two days, the highlights of which will be a big bonfire on Friday night around which the scouts will gather for various demonstrations.

Among the features in which the scouts will take part are a knowledge quiz, a fire by friction, a water boiling contest, a tug-of-war, and a water polo contest.

Home Funeral To Be On Friday Afternoon

Funeral services for James Benjamin Brown, 68, who died Saturday at the Sanford Hospital, will be held at 2:30 p. m. on Friday at the home of the deceased, Mrs. J. B. Brown, 1215 E. 1st St., Sanford.

SOME GUN, EH, MESSIEURS?

Not all the big guns in use or ready for use along the Western Front are behind Germany's West Wall. This piece of heavy artillery is a French Garand rifle now located "somewhere in the war zone." Incidentally, the French caption asserted gravely, "France handles first-class material."

Residents Urged To Brighten Home For "Better Homes Week"

Suggestions for plantings to beautify the home were made today by Mrs. Vera D. Andrews, home demonstration agent, who is heading the local observance of Better Homes Week, set aside several years ago to stimulate the ornamental trees and shrubs of the home.

"Differences in working hours and in space available make sharp contrast in what is likely to be most practical in beautifying homes in towns and in the country. In town, space may be limited, but long summer evenings allow time for attention to the ornamental trees and shrubs from the least space. On the farm, rush seasons in the fields mean long hours and little leisure at the very time flower gardens should be most in need of weeding, cultivating and watering. But grounds around the farm home are usually ample for more of the ornamental trees and shrubs than those of the town dweller," Mrs. Andrews said.

Permit Granted For New Home In Sanford Heights

A building permit was issued by Building Inspector Grady L. Dunbar at the City Hall yesterday for the construction of a one-story frame bungalow in Sanford Heights on West Twentieth Street at an estimated cost of $3,000. The permit was issued to E. E. Ashdown, local contractor.

Mr. Ashdown also was granted a permit to remodel the home of J. J. Duran on West First Street between Mangrove and Ochsner Avenues at an estimated cost of $750, while C. H. Stafford was granted permission to erect a frame garage at his home on Sumner Avenue.

The permit issued yesterday covered the total of the building permits during the month of April to $80,170, the highest figure in several years. The three permits issued on the last day of the month also brought the total of the permits issued for the first four months of 1940 to a high of $242,000.

WAR HIT HUNT CLUB

VERNON, E. C., May 1.—(AP)—The war is still thousands of miles away, but it is making its mark here. Vernon Hunt Club, which has been in existence since 1908, has been forced to suspend its activities for the time being.

To control losses in their hunt, the club has decided to suspend its activities until the war is over. The club has a membership of about 100 members and has been in existence for over 30 years.

Tornadoes Kill Many In Midwest

Heavy Rain, Hail Cause Much Damage To Crops In South; Wind Uproots Trees

By Associated Press
Tornado winds, ripping across sections of southern Illinois, southeast Missouri, and Arkansas and a cloudburst in east Texas killed at least 13, injured many, and caused thousands of dollars of damage last night.

At least three were killed, and an unestimated number injured in Missouri and Illinois. A father and a son were killed when winds demolished their home at Richland, Tex. A child was torn from its mother's arms by a flood and drowned when a cloudburst washed the family from beneath a culvert where it had taken refuge.

A heavy rain and hail accompanied swirling winds near Benton, Ark., as a tornado cut a swath through a sparsely settled rural section.

Milk Strike Affects Chicago Customers

CHICAGO, May 1.—(AP)—Several hundred thousand Chicago and suburban residents went without milk and cream for breakfast today.

A strike voted by the milk wagon drivers union halted virtually all home deliveries in the Metropolitan area.

Ware Will Not Have To Undergo Operation

Present indications are that County Judge R. W. Ware will not have to undergo an operation but will be required to remain several weeks in the hospital for treatment for a kidney ailment, it was learned from reliable sources today.

Dawes Says Next President Must Battle Spenders

WASHINGTON, May 1.—(AP)—Charles G. Dawes said last night the next president of the United States would have to fight "the largest army of government spenders, wasters and patronage-dispensing politicians" in history to save the nation from bankruptcy and ruin.

The Chicago banker, who was the government's first budget director and served as vice president in the Coolidge administration, outlined a comprehensive plan of balancing the federal budget in an address prepared for delivery at the annual meeting of the chamber of commerce of the United States.

Speaking with some of the directness that won him the nickname of "Hell 'n' Maria" in World War days, Dawes charged that President Roosevelt's action in abolishing the federal co-ordinating service in 1933 was one of the chief causes "of the present condition of chaos in the business of our government."

His plan to balance the budget, he said, was the same which President Harding had put into effect in 1921. At that time, when the budget system was also instituted, he continued, Harding created and operated a system of executive control and co-ordination over governmental departments.

Dawes said that "under this new system and presidential leadership during the whole fiscal year of 1933, government expenditures, exclusive of debt reduction, were reduced from $5,115,927,629 in the fiscal year of 1931 to $3,115,927,629 in the fiscal year of 1933."

CONFEDERATE JASMINE

These trees covered with Confederate Jasmine blooms can be seen in the gardens of Mayor and Mrs. Walter S. Coleman in Dreamworld who have extended a cordial invitation to the public to drive by and see these specimens which at this season of the year are a gorgeous sight to behold. These vines were started about 12 years ago. They require practically no attention, are immune to cold weather and most pests, have luxuriant green leaves the year around, and in the Spring are loaded with fragrant white blossoms.

Celery Is Most Expensive Crop In Everglades

It costs more to grow and market celery than it does any other vegetable crop in the Florida Everglades, according to R. H. Howard, economist with the State Agricultural Extension Service.

In spite of that fact, however, the acreage planted to celery in the Everglades has risen 150 acres during the 1936-37 season to 1,000 acres now. Howard says that the average yield of celery is 18 tons per acre, or 180,000 crates per acre, or 180,000 crates per acre, or 180,000 crates per acre.

The economist made a study of production costs for two years and found that on the average it cost $40.21 per acre, or 90.3 cents per marketed crate, to grow this crop in the Glades. Average costs by items, as determined in the study, include: Plants $23.14 per acre, 5 cents per crate; preparing and transporting, fertilizing, water control, cultivation and other growing costs, $12.74 per acre, 28 cents per marketed crate; harvesting, $45.99 per acre, 10 cents per crate; marketing, $212.34 per acre, 47 cents per crate. These marketing charges averaged about 18 cents per crate for grading and packing, 10 cents for crates, 8 for pre-cooling, 6 for selling, and 2 cents for miscellaneous costs.

Howard's study covered the crop years 1937-38 and 1938-39. He found that costs of production were higher the second year, and that returns from the crop were considerably lower. Most of the celery is sold f.o.b. the packinghouses.

Installation Of Officers Held By Junior Chamber

Installation of officers for 1940 was held last night by the Junior Chamber of Commerce at its regular weekly dinner meeting at the Mayfair Hotel at which time the Rev. W. P. Brooks addressed the group on "Contributions of the Church to Progress of the Community."

Officers installed were: Henry Witte, Jr., president; Richard Deas, first vice-president; Joe O'Connor, second vice-president; Frank Bauer, treasurer; Edward J. Nelson, secretary.

Elected to the board of directors were: Charles Betts, Bob Clark, Eloy Delgado, and C. K. Carter.

Rev. Brooks said that a community without churches would not last five years. The Church, he explained, is one of the most beneficial factors in any community, not only from a cultural standpoint, but from every other standpoint as well. It is the center of community life, he asserted.

It was announced that there will be a meeting of the board of directors tomorrow night at the home of Henry Witte.

Reverses Suffered In North As Nazi Columns Tighten Hold On Norway

Chamberlain To Speak Tomorrow

Germans Rain New Blows On British Navy Squadrons

Peril to the security of their flanks in northern and southern Europe had Allied war leaders plainly worried today.

The menace in the north, where fast German columns apparently have clamped a stranglehold on central Norway, was acknowledged by a British military spokesman. He admitted Nazi advances put the Allies in a "dangerous and very obscure" position.

The British war office said British troops had withdrawn to "prepared positions" after assisting the Germans in the Dombas area. They said the situation at Narvik was "unchanged," at Narvik "satisfactory."

The threat in the south was that Italy might throw her power into the Nazi scales. Britain, as a precaution, ordered suspension of merchant shipping through the Mediterranean. In Paris, a foreign ministry spokesman said the Italian attitude toward the Allies "has become definitely alarming" in the past two days.

Chamberlain said he would make public a statement on Norwegian developments tomorrow.

Germany rained new blows on the British navy. The high command said "flirt" sank a British cruiser, a destroyer, five transports, and heavily damaged another cruiser, and five other transports. The British merely said "desultory bombing" was continuing at the Narvik and Steinkjer areas.

A German communique said "at Trondheim fighting still went on yesterday." This was regarded in Berlin as meaning Allied resistance was still formidable in some areas.

The Germans said the Allies lost 11 planes in an attack on Stavanger, and one in a raid on the Oslo airport. The British acknowledged the loss of seven planes, but said "heavy damage" was inflicted in forays last night at two cities and Aalborg, Denmark.

The Germans also reported the capture of 4,000 prisoners. Swedish reports said Norwegian troops still were occupying positions north of Storen.

STOCKHOLM, May 1.—Allied forces last night battled along the Gudbrands valley of central Norway to escape being driven back to the seacoast by sledgehammer German drives which were reported to have linked Oslo to Trondheim and closed a steel vise on two Allied bases. Germany's motorized war machine, pounding ahead with tremendous strides, appeared on the basis of German claims to be operating the "blitzkrieg" tactics which carried it across Poland like an avalanche.

British, French and Norwegian troops fought stubbornly within a rugged triangle reaching out north and west of Dombas to the coast but the Germans said Dombas and Storen to the north near Trondheim had been "hopelessly" caught in the Nazi edifice.

There was almost a complete lack of Allied claims and in some instances, it was admitted efforts to stem the Nazi tide had been futile.

British and Norwegian military spokesmen admitted last night Dombas and Storen might have fallen and that the German southern force might have succeeded in breaking through to a junction with the Trondheim Nazis.

If Germany's claims were true, strong British, French and Norwegian forces would be cut off and (Continued on Page Six)

Hot Spot

Although the reports from Norway are obscure and confusing, sufficient information has managed to keep through the Allied and German censorship to make it clear that the British and French are having a pretty tough time of it and that a few more days like the last week will find most of Norway completely in German hands.

The capture of Dombas and Storen, if indeed they have been captured, enables the Nazis to establish a solid line from Oslo to Trondheim, and to rush supplies by train from the southern port relatively near German bases, to Trondheim, the northern port, which hitherto has been dependent upon planes for supplies and reinforcements, and also cuts Norway in two, with the important industrial area in the hands of Germans, and leaving the narrow rocky northern part to the Allies.

The Germans have been able to achieve their spectacular victories of the last few days primarily because of their command of the air. Although the British landing ports of Andalsnes and Namsos were nearer to Dombas than Oslo the Allies had greater difficulty in supporting their small forces there than the Germans because of the terrific bombing raids which apparently were being constantly carried on against land troops, supply dumps, transports and naval vessels.

On the other hand the Allies, having few if any landing fields in Norway, and dependent upon planes flying all the way from England for whatever aerial assistance they received, were unable either to hamper German reinforcements being rushed to the north or to fight off with any degree of success the deadly German raids. The Nazis gained this advantage in the air because of their seizure during the first few days of the invasion of all the major air fields in Norway.

It looks as if only a miracle now can save Norway from German domination. Such control of course means the isolation of Sweden and ultimately the domination by the Nazis of the entire Scandinavian peninsula, for surely if the Allies cannot save Norway, they could do little or nothing to save Sweden after Norway has fallen. The next logical step for the Germans, with the north countries securely in their grasp, would be to take Holland and Belgium.

From there, with air bases on the coast of Norway, Holland and Belgium, the final subjugation of Britain by means of devastating air raids would not be difficult. If the British government were awake, it would anticipate this new danger across the English Channel and get the jump on the Nazis for once while they are still able to do it. But the Chamberlain government will probably wait until after the war is over.

Tireless Newspaperman

George H. Clements, who is director of publicity for the Florida Exhibit at the World's Fair, is the subject of considerable publicity himself, as Preacher Allen, in the Deland Sun News, writes a three-column story on this veteran newspaperman of 80 who is described by Editor & Publisher as "a newspaper man of yesterday holding his own with the journalists of today."

"George Clements, hale and hearty at 80, is still working daily and Sunday, as is the habit and requirement of newspaper men, in his continuous job as Director of Publicity for Florida Exhibits. After a career that embraced war on foreign fields and in American newspaper competition, Mr. Clements came to Florida and refused to retire.

"He has been a power in the upbuilding of Earl Brown's organization, which has put on the state's wonderful exhibits at all the recent big Expositions, and is now putting out his best performance to make the Florida exhibit at the second edition of the New York World's Fair better than its predecessors. Florida is fortunate in having the services of such vast knowledge and experienced ability in the promotion of its worldwide publicity."

Citrus Advertising Contract Goes To Kudner Third Time

LAKELAND, May 1.—(AP)—Arthur Kudner, Inc., the Florida Citrus commission's advertising agency for two seasons, yesterday was given a new contract to extend from Sept. 1, 1940 to August 3, 1941.

The action was taken with only one dissenting vote, Harvey Henderson of Winter Haven explaining that he was not voting against retention of the New York agency but felt action should not be taken on the matter "with just a few days of notice."

The commission moved to seek lower grapefruit transportation costs by entering a freight rate fight through its official agency on fresh fruit traffic problems, The Growers and Shippers league.

THIS BATTLE IS STILL RAGING

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By JACK STINNETT

World war reports and maps brought out. That is, that the business of laying mine-fields is about 10 percent minus, 90 percent bluff.

When news came that ships of the British navy were plowing through the gray mist of the Skaggerak, navy men here goggled. When NO word came that a single British boat had been blasted to the bottom by a mine, the navy boys couldn't believe their ears and eyes.

With the report that the British not only had crossed the threshold (Scandinavians call Skaggerak the "sleeve") but had swung around The Shaw and were headed down that foyer of the Baltic, the Kattegat (the "cat's throat") the experts were dumbfounded. The Nazis not only had left the door wide open but hadn't even bothered to sprinkle tacks on the floor.

Made Shippers Wary For example, the whole of the Baltic was supposed to be mined in the World War. Actually there was a scattering of mines throughout this inland sea which could only have (according to the experts) "annoyance value." Some occasional destruction was enough to make captain wary of the whole area.

The announced mine areas in the World War were of staggering proportions. From the western coast of France, below the English channel to the North Sea, there was hardly an important channel that wasn't mined. But many of these sections had only a scattering of "death traps."

One section mined thoroughly was the 230 miles from Scotland to Norway, where the United States and Great Britain in 1917 and '18 laid 70,000 mines. The what? Magnificent business which a study of

ALONG THE POLITICAL FRONT

At least one of the two opponents of Col. J. M. Lee, who is seeking re-election to the office of State Comptroller, is campaigning with sugar-coated dynamite, which is so dangerous a threat to the principles of democratic government that the Times cannot remain indifferent to it because, while it involves political personalities in which the Times is not interested, it also involves principles of good government for which the Times will always fight.

There have been reports that this candidate, E. G. Fraser, has been quietly making promises that he would be "lenient and easy-going" about collecting taxes, and Wednesday night in Ybor City he plainly stated that he would "never close a man's business or take his property if he didn't pay taxes." In other words, he would do nothing about the tax-digger but simply load his unpaid taxes on the backs of those who pay taxes.

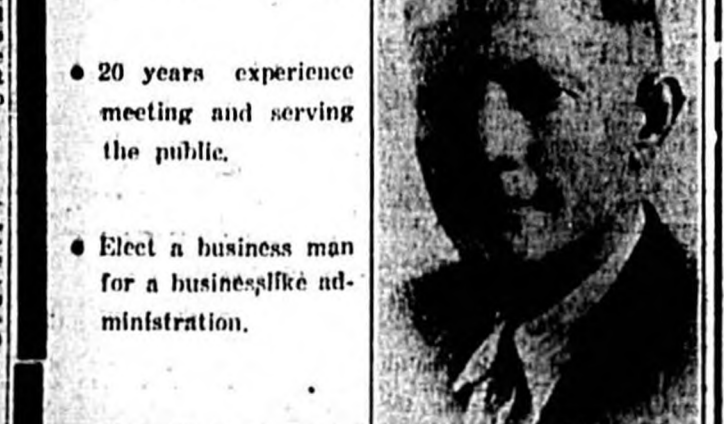

That democratic policy, if its author were ever allowed to put it into effect, would eventually close the business of every honest man in Florida and take away the property of every faithful taxpayer, because those are the people on whom this speaker's policy would load the entire burden of taxes while permitting the big tax-digger to ride free. That is the staff of which democracy is made. Comptroller Lee has repeatedly printed out that the State's tax collection laws and periodic bargain-counter tax settlements, allowing some property owners to escape their fair share of the cost of government, has forced up levies on faithful taxpayers and left the State and counties without sufficient funds for schools, old age pensions, aid to dependent children and progressive government.

Yet at least one of his opponents promises that no matter what the Legislature does to equalize this burden he will not collect taxes from some merchants and property owners and collect more from others. This candidate, moreover, pledged himself to ignore the State Supreme Court and in effect destroy the State Highway System by giving gasoline tax revenue to County Commissioners.

This, of course, is aimed at Comptroller Lee's commendable action in asking the State Supreme Court to rule whether or not it was constitutional for several counties through special legislative acts, in fact State gasoline tax revenue use for non-highway and local purposes while the State highway system is lagging behind its needs because of a lack of funds. Dawes Says Next President Must Battle Spenders

Dawes said that in "the present unparalleled confusion of governmental business affairs," the next president might adopt the following procedure which he said was carried out in 1921:

1. By executive order, the president must enable the director of the budget to create an organization which will empower him to assemble for the president impartial information necessary for the cabinet executive to make the decisions incident to business policy.

2. The president must make it a condition, in appointing cabinet members or heads of independent spending agencies, that the appointees pledge to support him in reducing expenditures and balancing the budget. Disloyalty to the president in his efforts to balance the budget would mean dismissal.

3. In the first month of his term of office the president must call the business organizations of the government to a public meeting. There bureau chiefs would be

Walker Urges Public Schools Be Improved

WEST PALM BEACH, May 1.—Declaring himself the champion of the cause of education in Florida, and urging an improved public school system, Hans Walker, candidate for governor, addressing a large gathering of voters here last night, said that every county of Florida "should be assured of a full nine-month term of school, with free books from the primer up to the twelfth grade."

Walker contended that the public school system had been neglected and that while the cost of operating various departments of the State had increased greatly, the cost of education in the State had increased but 14 percent in the past six years.

C. F. Coe Says Florida Must Get Defense Projects

OCALA, May 1.—Florida must be pushed as a site for national defense projects or the State will continue "the most vulnerable spot in the United States," Charles Francis Coe of West Palm Beach, Democrat and candidate for the United States Senate, told an audience here in Brooksville and in Panama City yesterday.

He discussed with Ocala voters the projects for national defense, particularly development of inland waterways and expansion of deep water harbor projects. Such improvements will come to Florida, he said, if the people send young and vigorous men to the Senate to fight for the State's rights.

Coe ended his West Florida campaign with a radio speech in Panama City yesterday morning. He had intended flying 800 miles across the Gulf in time to speak at noon in Brooksville but was delayed on his take-off by squalls and did not reach Brooksville until the middle of the afternoon. He spoke there to a crowd that filled the courthouse yard and then drove to Ocala for the night meeting.

Whitehair Speaks Before 7,500 In Address In Miami

MIAMI, May 1.—(Special)—The "isms" which are threatening the very existence of Democratic forms of government have built their powerful military machines through the development of a sturdy youth, Francis Whitehair told a crowd of 7,500 which filled Bayfront Park here in Miami last night.

"Florida and all our nation would do well to look into the future. It is the school children of today who will be the leaders of tomorrow. Strong bodies and alert minds are what we need for those who strike at democracy are so equipping their young people."

The DeLand leader warned "the present world conflict, in my humble opinion, is the most serious blow against liberty and the most of freedom we love and cherish, which has ever been struck."

Dallis Grass Pasture Aids Cattle Industry

BELLE GLADE, May 1.—Already a big producer of sugarcane and vegetable crops, the Everglades is becoming a cattle empire as well. This new industry is based largely on cheap feeds and Dallis grass for pasture has been found by the Everglades Experiment Station to be excellent.

Dr. J. R. Neller and late Dr. A. Daane, in Bulletin 338, review experiments which show that Dallis grass produces good pasture yields on Everglades peat land when fertilized with 500 pounds per acre of an 0-6-12 mixture. The fertilized grass contains normal amounts of calcium, magnesium, phosphorus and iron and unusually high content of nitrogen, even though no nitrogen had been used in the fertilizer.

Dallis grass allowed to grow to produce hay required about twice as much fertilizer as that grazed by the cattle. Over a seven year period it produced about eight tons per acre per year. On account of moisture conditions, however, hay cannot be cured with certain success in the Everglades except with mechanical driers, and it still is a question as to whether they are practical to use.

Pastures of carpet and centipede grasses were found to be difficult to establish and maintain, these grasses being crowded out by weeds. Carib grass is quite suitable, however. Copies of the bulletins can be obtained by addressing the Experiment Station at Gainesville, Dr. Neller says.

Here's the Answer! BERNARR MACFADDEN

A MAN who has overcome the hardships of life, physical and financial, who has survived the trials and tribulations and emerged as a national figure, who has benefitted his community, his state and his nation, is entitled to more than passing consideration by those seeking standard-bearers for their cause.

Less than one month ago Bernarr Macfadden announced his candidacy for the position of United States Senator from Florida. In that short period of time the public and press have realized a change in the old political order. Politicians of the old school have awakened from their sense of security and students of economics have been flabbergasted by the advent of a candidate who offers a new and better standard of living without recourse to the moss-covered platform promises of the perennial seeker after public office.

Bernarr Macfadden typifies the Florida of today. His actions, his utterances, his living, all are indicative of a greater and more progressive Florida. His is no creed born to feed the gullibility of a public during an election hysteria. His is a life of action based on the betterment of the human race, the well-being of people through the physical and mental developments of youth, the bold, outspoken truths in behalf of true Americanism, courageously displayed through the pages of his publications reaching millions of American readers.

Born on a Missouri farm, bound over as a boy to earn his bread and butter; a sickly lad, except in mind that whirled dreams of health and happiness, Bernarr Macfadden fought his way up the hard way. Up to riches, to the power of a national publisher, stepping into the market and buying "Liberty" because this symbolized the dreams of his youth, he became the champion of those seeking a better life and means and methods of obtaining it.

Florida entered the fighter. In it Macfadden found the happy hunting ground of the present. Here was life, health and wealth in abundance. Here were millions of acres of undeveloped land. Land open to purchase, awaiting the workers. Here was the sunshine, bright beams of the sun, breath from the lap of Nature waiting to be used to improve the soil.

With his own hands he made a wealth that is envied. It is a wealth that has been a national trend (man-made) to aid in the development of the South and a nation's people. Macfadden's vision of the future.

Florida. Through his publications he has sent word of the magic of the land. "Health, Happiness and Wealth Is Here. Come and Get It!" was his message. And then he announced for the United States Senate, not as a man seeking public office, but rather as a crusader seeking to tell his fellow men and women that there was joy in living, especially if one lived in Florida. That the handicaps that harassed some of the things could be removed by a man who wasn't afraid to face the task. That the farmer, the laborer and the business man, as well as the white-collar worker was entitled to justice instead of political expediency. That justice could be secured if the people were of a mind to send forth a man with courage and logic enough to ask for it, and therefore, in view of his life, his struggles and his attainments, his services were offered to the cause.

It is refreshing to the mind, as well as to the soul, to have a man of the caliber of Bernarr Macfadden offer himself to the cause of public welfare. It is a noble field or under privileged sets into the background the mediocre group of office-seekers whose most outstanding trait has been to be on hand when payday rolls around.

"You, the people, can draw my first year's salary," says Macfadden, "and use it to tell how unfortunate (by the commission of a State Publicity Board) of the benefits living in Florida bring." (And he'll probably donate his next year's salary to similar fields or underprivileged children or some other worthy public welfare group.)

It seems to us that in Bernarr Macfadden the people of Florida have a new opportunity, an opportunity not available in every decade. They have the chance to elect a man to office who is all that. A man who will battle for their rights joyfully and courageously. A man who will refuse to serve any but the welfare of his fellow citizens.

Progress can only come from leaders who are not afraid to go ahead. And the characteristics of the crisis are found in the actions of Bernarr Macfadden, the American who lives in the present and plans for the future.

Consider the fact that 90,000 acres were given of Dade County to Bernarr Macfadden in a public affair by county order. He has been a national figure, the American who lives in the present and plans for the future.

Wrote Bernarr Macfadden: "I have been a national figure, the American who lives in the present and plans for the future."

Winning Run Scored In Ninth As Kimbrel Lays Bunt Down First Base Line; Hudson Gets Credit For Game

Sanford's Seminoles lived up to their name last night by scalping the Orlando Nationals 9 to 8 in one of the most exciting games of the season.

Tonight Sanford travels to Orlando to engage the Nats in their home ballpark. Joe Pinder is due to get the nod from Skipper Whitley Campbell.

Proving themselves valiant successors to the 1939 Sanford club, the Seminoles went into their half of the ninth with the score knotted at 8-8. Tater Marion fled out to right field for the first out. Bill Rowan singled hard to shortstop and on the throw over to first the ball went wide and rolled out into the right field foul territory while Rowan scampered around to third. However, had he continued on home he would have been safe as Dutch Oles had run down to help retrieve the ball and had failed to cover home plate.

On the next play, big Al Kimbrel set down a beautiful bunt along the first base line and Rowan crossed the rubber with the winning run.

Although the weather was brisk and chilly, a crowd of 396 persons turned out.

Orlando started hostilities in the first inning by sending across three runs on four hits. But Sanford came back in their half of the first and made three runs to tie the score. Again in the fifth frame, Orlando scored three markers, this time on three hits and a walk.

Sanford, not content to watch their rivals from Orlando get ahead, put on the steam and blasted Kennedy for five safeties and one walk, combined with two errors that were good for five runs.

The Nats tied the score again in the sixth by pushing two runs across on three hits and three walks. The game rocked along then until the ninth inning when Sanford squeezed Rowan across the plate.

Stump, Gillespie, and Johnson got two bingles each while Kim-

LEESBURG EDGES GAINESVILLE BY SCORE OF 3 TO 2

Leesburg's Anglers rallied in the ninth inning last night to score one run and nose out the Gainesville G-Men by a 3 to 2 score in the Florida State League.

The Anglers made 10 hits while the G-Men were collecting only five. Score by innings: R H E Leesburg 00 001 011-3 10 3 Gainesville 001 000 100-2 5 4 McCormack and Wallace; Ryan and Wolfe.

The St. Augustine Saints halted a ninth inning rally of the Ocala Yearlings to score a 2 to 1 victory.

The Yearlings scored their lone way to fade from baseball's hall of fame is to pitch a no-hitter. Look what happened to Johnny Vander Meer, and since Bobby Feller tossed his no-hitter on opening day, he's lost two.

Air Power
Testing Supreme
Test In Norway

WIKING L. SIMPSON
The German planes after the first "test" landing of in Norway, Allied and forces are at grips on an front that reaches for the city of Trondheim.
It is a test that neither side has ever before in getting to do more than scramble for possession of vitally important land and sea junctions. The test is a supreme test in the history of the world.
It is being fought out with air power and British power in the fjords that lead to the city of Trondheim.

Old Quebec, New World's Only Walled City, Charms
The Visitor With Scenic and Historic Sights

There is one city in North America which the contrived traveler never tires of visiting. It is old Quebec. Back-perched above the St. Lawrence, with its narrow, crooked streets and multitude of historic spots, no other city resembles it. Quebec is so quaint, so hospitable, so rich in historic ties that the stranger within her aged gates could profitably spend a fortnight just browsing around the city and its environs. In the town itself there is narrow Sous-le-Cap Street, up which the warriors under Champlain, Quebec's discoverer, are said to have swaggered; the little store on St. Louis Street where Montcalm, French general, wounded on the Plains of Abraham, was brought to die; quaint two-wheeled calèches, with their knowing, cat-like drivers, found nowhere else in Canada; little shops all old Quebec's local handiwork—native handicrafts; Dufferin Terrace, that imposing promenade skirting the mighty St. Lawrence River, the towering, hostelry Chateau Frontenac.

Allies Worried As
Italians Sound A
Belligerent Note

Norwegian forces apparently were trapped between Stoeren and the railroad town of Opdal—said to be in German hands—midway between Stoeren and Dombas on the main north-south railroad.
Escape for these entrapped forces westward across the mountains would be almost hopeless.
Germany claimed that five heavily motorized columns, forcing a trap around British and French expeditionary forces west of the Gudbrands valley, have slashed the vital railroad and highway lifelines of the Allies.
There were some indications the British and French, blasted by Germany's air superiority and motorized forces, might give up their efforts to drive the Nazis out of southern Norway and concentrate their efforts in the north, above Trondheim.
The Nazi claims, which to some extent appeared confirmed by gloomy Allied accounts of the fighting, included:
1. Isolation and perhaps capture of the British-French inland bases and railroad centers of Dombas and Stoeren along the railroad line south of German-held Trondheim.
2. Closing of a gap between a German force pushing southward out of Trondheim upon Stoeren and another German column driving up the Oester valley from Tynset to Ulsberg, midway between Stoeren and Dombas on the railroad.
3. At Ulsberg the Germans, merging their forces from Trondheim and from Tynset, struck back down the railroad to join in a nut-cracker encirclement operation against Dombas, 100 miles south of Trondheim. The railroad town of Opdal, 80 miles south of Ulsberg, was said to have fallen before this drive.
4. A German force striking up the Gudbrands valley was said by the German high command to have reached Dombas from the south after forcing the Allies back from Otta, 25 miles south along the railroad to Lillehammer and Oslo. The British admitted a retreat to Dombas but said Germany's claims to capture of the town were "unlikely." These claims were made by the official DNE agency in Berlin.
5. Repulsing of another British attempt to land reinforcements at the now isolated but

British Seek To
Ally U. S. Fears
About Blockade

LONDON, May 1.—(AP)—Britain sought last night to ally United States concern over the disruption of trade caused by the Allied blockade of Germany while British efforts to plug the trade route to Germany through Russia met firm Soviet objections to a proposed rationing system.
Speaking at an American chamber of commerce luncheon before reporting in the House of Commons on the Allied contraband control Ronald H. Cross, minister directing the British blockade, appealed for American "understanding" of economic warfare.
Cross said the blockade weapon would shorten the war in which "we are fighting for our lives." "It is our hope," he declared, "that tomorrow and other reports from Germany that Nazi forces in Norway had linked the Oslo and Trondheim regions."
Since the beginning of the Norwegian campaign many well-informed diplomats have believed a German success in Scandinavia might prompt Mussolini to enter the war on Germany's side.
The decision to close the Mediterranean to British shipping affects hundreds of liners and freighters, operated between the British Isles and India and Australia.
The Mediterranean previously has been considered so safe that Allied ships reportedly had been able to cross it without convoy. It was known that even before the outbreak of the European war the British had prepared to use the Cape route if Italy should enter a future conflict on the side of Germany.
The British decision followed the Italian report of refusal yesterday to consider resumption of trade talks between London and Rome, suggested by British Foreign Secretary Halifax in conversations last week with the Italian ambassador. The British reportedly were told the "time was not ripe" for a resumption of trade talks, which broke down because of the pressure of Allied contraband control measures on Italy.
Yesterday's decision was all the more significant because the British hitherto took a calmer view of Italy's attitude than had the French. The British had been so sure that no Italian move was imminent that Sir Percy Loraine, ambassador to Rome, who had been on holiday in England, had not hastened to return to his post.

That material which has been forced upon us will not be the long run for the blockade—advantages of the United States—
"On serious" leak in the blockade, Cross said, is the passage of copper, rubber, tin and other materials through Vladivostok, Russian Pacific port. He declared the United States "has been a source of much of these raw materials and we wonder sometimes how far it is generally realized in your country that important supplies of key war materials have reached Germany in this way."

Directly bearing on the Vladivostok leak in the blockade forces are the British-Russian negotiations looking toward a trade agreement.
Russia is said in Soviet sources to have rejected as an effort to economic dictatorship a British proposal to ration Soviet trade with the United States, or any other country in order to keep goods from Germany.
These sources assert, however, that they are hopeful of improved trade and political relations with Britain and that they see no insurmountable differences at this stage in the Anglo-Russian commercial negotiations.
Russia's reply to British offers for a trade agreement made three points:
1. Russia will guarantee that no imports from Britain or the empire will be re-exported to Germany.
2. Russia regards exports of her own goods to Germany as a private matter.
3. The Soviet similarly regards as its own business what it exports from the United States or other countries.

Throw a dollar out of the window

There's a certain amount of pleasure in throwing a dollar bill out of the window (we suppose—we've never tried it) . . . watching it float through the air . . . guessing where it's going to land . . . seeing it finally settle on a curbstone . . . and perhaps seeing some surprised individual pick it up.

At least, it's certainly more fun than throwing away a dollar bill by paying one hundred cents extra for something you're buying. Yet every year we all part with a goodly sum of hard-earned cash that we might otherwise save—if we knew how to buy!

The quickest, easiest, simplest way to learn how to buy is to read the advertisements in this newspaper. Know values. Know prices. Know quality. Start now to stop throwing dollar bills away!
