Before leaving the table, toasts and good wishes for Mr. and Mrs. Brown were in order and the rest of the evening was pleasantly spent with the game of "500."

GERMANS ARE MARCHING ON TO PARIS

COMMERCIAL CLUB HELD FINE MEETING MUCH ENTHUSIASM WAS SHOWN BY THOSE IN ATTENDANCE

The Commercial Club held a very interesting meeting last Friday night in the city hall that was well attended. Many who would have been present seemed to forget that the club will meet every two weeks and they overslept the date, but about forty members were present and the meeting was a very enthusiastic one throughout.

The club listened to some very able talks along the lines of the members taking a more active interest in the club and the city of Sanford. R. S. Kidder of St. Augustine addressed the club regarding the matter of advertising in the Foster list of magazines and papers and this matter was referred to the committee on advertising.

Had Good Luck E. C. Chittenton, P. M. Elder, G. W. Spencer and several other fishermen have returned from Coronado Beach where they have been enjoying the fishing for several days. They brought back some fine sea bass and say they caught seven fine ones last Friday.

TODAY THE GERMANS ARE BUT SIXTY MILES FROM FRENCH CAPITAL

London, Sept. 1.—According to the Times' St. Petersburg correspondent, Russia's appeal to the Poles to re-unite against the common Teutonic foe has had an extraordinary effect among the Slav soldiers in the German service. Information received in St. Petersburg, it is stated, indicates that the Polish soldiers belonging to the sixth Breslau army corps, serving on the western frontier, mutilated and killed their officers.

St. Petersburg, 2 p. m. Russians continue hold advantage their whole lines. Anwerp, 2 p. m. British forces landed at Ostend are to support Belgians in plan to cut Germans rear.

New York, 2 p. m.—Italian liner Mafelda Hollanders Ryndam, arrived seventeen hundred refugees.

London, England, Sept. 1. The Times correspondent at Ostend records a conversation with a German officer from Brussels who said frantic efforts were being made to inflict a crushing blow on the allies, especially on the English forces. Notwithstanding the success achieved by the German army, the dispatch says, there is a feeling among many German soldiers that they are fighting against too great odds.

Despite all efforts to conceal the news from Prussia, it is stated in formation of a disquieting character regarding events there is beginning to circulate among the German forces and this feeling of anxiety was intensified when two divisions, totalling 80,000 men, passed the Meuse by the bridge of Andenne at Seilles, between Namur and Liege en route for German, Holland.

The German emperor has made it known to every soldier that his orders are to take Paris or die, the dispatch concludes.

Our program Sunday evening was carried out by members of the Missionary Group. Our subject was Modern Missionary Equipment. The following program was rendered: Leader in charge, F. E. Gatchel. Song, Joy to the World, Recited by Miss Jimmie Laing and sung by entire union.

Special Notice

There will be a meeting of the trustees of the Library Association and the Woman's Club committee at the Presbyterian church Friday be submitted for the remodeling of the building.

Rev. F. P. Strong and family have returned from a few weeks at the beach.

We always have these missionary programs every fifth Sunday and they are always enjoyed by all, as this program is a little different from the others. We had quite a good attendance and after a few remarks by our president the meeting was closed by all repeating our Mizpah.

T. C. Tallafiero, the banker from Tampa, Fla., whose car ran over and killed a young lady and seriously wounded her sister last Monday in the White Mountains, was today arrested and held to bail in $20,000, which he readily gave. Mr. Tallafiero claims that he was turning out of the road to avoid another car and did not see the two ladies until his car had struck them. He is prostrated by the accident and his invalid wife, who was with him, is reported in a serious condition resulting from shock and grief.

Every tillable acre of Florida land should be made to produce something the coming season. Farmers from all over the United States should be invited to come here and raise crops while their lands are frozen. Cattle and sheep, hogs and goats should be seen on every acre where there is grass to feed them, or a chance to make forage grow, peaceful America and prolific Florida should be the world's mecca. We have room in Florida for about twenty millions more population.

THE GROWERS ARE ALL BUSY

SEED BEDS ARE DOTTING THE GREAT CELERY DELTA

Visitors to the city at this time are surprised to see the myriad of white tents stretched all along the way through the celery delta and remind one of the armies encamped on the fields of Europe only there are no men sleeping under the tents with warlike weapons in their hands. Under these tents here are sleeping the seeds of celery and lettuce waiting for the flowing water, fertilizer and warm Florida sun to waken them to life and from these thousands of seeds will be germinated the plants that will soon be seen in the many fields of the celery delta that ship the thousands of crates of celery and lettuce.

Regardless of the wars and rumors of war in Europe the growers of Sanford are going forward with their seed beds and are not waiting for the results of carnage and blood on the plains of Europe, for the grower knows that the people of the north must eat and they will eat as much this winter as they did last winter. Not alone will they plant the luxuries, such as celery and lettuce, but they will also go in for the staples that will be in such great demand not only in America but in Europe as well and with the American merchant marines carrying loads of staple crops to Europe and the only competitors in cabbage and potatoes shut off from our markets it is reasonable to suppose that the Florida vegetables will this season find a ready market. Especially should this be true of the Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, onions, etc.

Last season Sanford shipped 225,000 crates of this stuff, not including 25,000 barrels of Irish potatoes, which will give one the idea of the scope of our growers.

There is a question this season ever present with the growers of fancy stuff as to whether the people of the north will feel like buying celery and lettuce, since they are classed among the luxuries but this will be left to the desires of the great American public which has the reputation of usually getting what it wants, regardless of financial conditions or the price.

So the tents of the peaceful army dot the landscape and the Sanford grower tackles the job again, secure in the knowledge that part of his crop of fancy stuff will be sold at a reasonable figure and if the market demands the staples he can fill that demand after the season for celery and lettuce has passed.

With sweet potatoes bringing 60 cents a peck in the market today in the heart of the sweet potato country the grower should not worry about the war in Europe or any other disturbance.

Now With the Movies

The editor of The Herald received a card from Chas. W. Ritchie yesterday in which he states that he and his wife, Mabel Paige are now with the movies, being engaged by the Lubin Company of Jacksonville and that they are doing fine. It is to be hoped that Manager Herndon of the Star Theatre can obtain some of the Lubin films with Mabel and Charlie Ritchie as the stars, for both of them are very popular in Sanford. That other old favorite, Ed Lawrence is also with the movies and it would seem that the day of the smaller companies has passed and all our old favorites have "Jined out" in the movies. At least we can still enjoy the dainty Mabel, the versatile Ed Lawrence and the snappy Charlie Ritchie on the screen, even if we cannot have the pleasure of their living presence.

Congregational Church

Services will be resumed next Sunday morning and it is desired that every member plan to be present. In the evening our second annual Labor Day service will be held at 7:30. The C. E. Society will also begin its regular meetings. Sunday evening, Sept. 13th the theme for consideration will be "Some Reflections on the European War."

KUDZU FOR CATTLE FEED

SEMINOLE COUNTY FARMER WRITES INTERESTING LETTER ON CATTLE AND THE NEW FOOD

I have read with much interest an article published in the Florida Times-Union in Farmer and Poultry Notes by Dr. Andrew M. Soule, President Georgia State College of Agriculture on the very important question of feeding cattle for beef, also for milk, having had considerable experience along those lines agree with him, but would like to make some additional remarks that may be of some benefit to the farmers in general and to the cattle raisers in particular. Distinct to the mind in feeding animals several purposes must be kept in view. If they are young, the development of muscle, bone and tissue is essential. A large framework must be formed before the animal is fattened or else it cannot carry sufficient weight at maturity to prove profitable. This growth of a vigorous body is essential with dairy cattle, as with beef cattle. After an animal has been brought to a certain stage of development, protein will still be necessary to its welfare. This term embraces the materials chiefly valuable in building tissue and repairing the same. It is an essential element, for instance, in the production of lean meat and milk; hence it must be supplied in proper quantities to beef and dairy animals even in the fattening stage of the former, and during the entire lactation of the latter. A dairy cow not properly supplied with protein will tend to dry up. At first she will draw on the tissues of her body, but after these are exhausted she has no other resources. If fed on fattening food, such as corn for instance she lays on flesh and ceases to be a profitable producer of milk. The beef animal, fed on corn alone produces a superabundance of fat meat. The body of such an animal at slaughtering time will frequently be covered with a layer of fat one or two inches thick. This fat is of little service in human nutrition and therefore the carcass is not so valuable as one where the fat and lean are better interblended and the muscles developed to a satisfactory degree.

It has been clearly shown that protein fed in proper combinations with other foods helps to increase and maintain the flow of milk in dairy cattle and produces a better mixture of fat and lean in beef cattle which makes a more wholesome and desirable quality of beef for human consumption. Moreover, where animals are fed a reasonable amount of protein they will yield a higher per cent of good meat, therefore the cost of production is lessened, the animals also retain their vigor for a longer period of time in the feeding pens and ship quite as well as when fed solely on a fattening protein. In practically all experiments it has been shown that the costly element in a ration is protein and when it is added in sufficient quantity to corn, better and more economical results are obtained and the choicest quality of meat reduced. Cotton seed meal supplies cheap protein. It is proven that there is no concentrate on the American market today which farmers can use which supplies protein in larger quantity and at a lower relative cost than cotton seed meal. But we have the kudzu that can be planted and raised and fed to cattle that contains more protein than wheat bran by four per cent and the writer from experience has demonstrated the fact that cows will give more and richer milk and butter than any other food or forage plant known. There are thousands of acres of land all over this state of Florida, more especially in this portion of Florida in and about Seminole and Orange counties which is a natural cattle paradise. It abounds in fine water. Lakes of all sizes and also a large growth of native grasses, such as the Piere or Florida clover and the Beggar weed. And if the farmers would plant the kudzu in place of other forage plants they would not alone supply the food for their own cattle, including horses, mules, but export to other counties of the state. It will cut from 12 to 15 tons to the acre above front line and 10 tons to the acre below the front line. It is a legume, also a perennial. It will grow within thirty feet of salt water. It will stand drought better than any other plant. The greatest feed because it makes the heaviest yields of any of the legumes; because it contains a maximum amount of protein as high as 19.24; because it holds its foliage the best of any of the legumes and cures the quickest of any known hay; because it does not have to be cut at any certain period, but may await the convenience of the farmer or for favorable weather; because it can be harvested when weather conditions are unfavorable for other hays and will yield a fine quality of hay, often when continued showers and dampness would mean ruin to any other legume hay; because it is a perennial and does not have to be planted and cultivated every year or every few years, as is the case with others; because it does not have to be limed or fertilized and will succeed on lands too poor and rocky and rough to yield other profitable crops. Because it is not injurious to horses or other stock as is the case with alfalfa and other legumes and stock do not have to be taught or forced to eat it. All stock eat kudzu greedily and clean up the last vestige. Because it does not deplete the soil but builds it up and will succeed on practically any land not water soaked and not in a desert. The greatest need of the south today from an agricultural view is more and better and cheaper feed. Millions of dollars go out annually for feed stuff that could and should be raised here at home. Millions more go out for northern and western meats than can and should be raised in the south and exported instead of imported. Thus the south is losing at both ends of the purse, when every dollar it should be kept at home and a big supply besides. There is no hay that stock will eat more readily, and horses and mules will leave corn for kudzu. No one need have any fears about finding a market for a hay that analyzes more protein than wheat bran and that stock eat so greedily. Kudzu is the alfalfa of the south, with the bad properties of alfalfa left out. To arrive at the relative value of the various commercial feedstuffs the Florida Commissioners of Agriculture have fixed prices on the different food elements. See Bulletin of 1913, using corn as a standard of valuation at the market price of $25.15 per ton or about 75 cents per bushel. Corn analyzes 10.50 per cent protein, 69.60 per cent starch and sugar and 5.40 per cent fat. The protein is valued at 3.4 per pound, the starch and sugar at 11 per pound and the fat at 2.5 per pound. On this basis the mixed feeds in general, as sold on the southern markets and analyzing 10 per cent protein and 31 1/2 per cent fat and 50 to 58 per cent starch and sugar have an actual feeding value of from $19.30 to $21.25 per ton. Yet they retail at $22.00 per 100 pounds or $40 to $45 per ton. On this same basis a ton of kudzu hay with an average analysis of $17.43 per cent protein, $30.20 per cent starch and sugar and 1.67 per cent fat has an actual feeding value of from $19.32. Yet, if sold according to analysis, as compared to that of the best timothy hay it should bring above $30.00 per ton.

Thus, it will be seen that an average sample of kudzu hay contains over one third more of the muscle building element protein than the shipped feed and some samples nearly double that.

The kudzu has been for years ground into meal as alfalfa is done in the west and the writer found that the meal from the kudzu given to milk cows made them give more milk and richer than any feed from wheat bran or other meal. I have no kudzu for sale, but I can give and will furnish any one writing me all information and send for your plants. It is only grown for sale in Chipley, Florida, by C. E. Pleas, but I raised the kudzu in my nurseries from 1876 which was imported from Japan during the Centennial. I have been all over this beloved state from Pensacola in the west, Key West in the south and Jacksonville in the east and I have no other object except to get the farmers of our beloved southland to utilize the plentiful and bountiful resources now lying dormant and instead of spending thousands of dollars in each county importing hay and feed stuffs to raise it, grow it and not alone supply yourselves but export to other counties. This is applicable not alone to feedstuffs but to cattle and other industries laying at your feet, such as the palmetto and the Zappupa Plant.

Will be glad to answer all inquiries and will say in conclusion that there is no better place in the state than this, by the Almighty blessed lake region in and about the Chulucota country. It is, without fear of contradiction, the paradise for cattle industries. Climate, surroundings, no swamps, no malaria, no mosquitoes, fine pur water and high rolling lands and pure air. Will be glad to answer questions. For information address Capt. J. C. Patterson, Chulucota, Fla.

Ostend's capture alarms Britains. People along coast towns realize imminent danger of wholesale slaughter of people by aerial craft. Now that enemy has a base England realizes responsibilities assumed, feared burden of warfare will rest upon shoulders of John Bull. The British navy will be able to prevent a landing of troops in England. But in possession of the Belgian coast the Germans have a splendid base for operations against England with aircrafts.

2,000 REFUGES

New York, Aug. 31st.—The steamer Baltic of the White Star Line arrived here today from Liverpool with the largest number of passengers ever carried across the Atlantic by that boat in its history. #### A USEFUL ACCOMPLISHMENT

Husbands who stay too late at the club are not confined to America, it seems, says the German Der Rekord:

Citizen (At the police station)—I hear that you caught the fellow that broke into our house the other night.

Officer—Would you like to see him?

Citizen—Yes, I would like to ask him how he managed to enter the bed chamber without waking my wife. I have been trying to do it for the last twenty-five years, but have never succeeded.

People, fall into line and go to D. A. Caldwell & Sons for they have declared war on the entire world of high prices. #### WORTH KNOWING

To remove coffee stains mix equal part of yolk of eggs and glycerine, apply to the stain and allow to dry on.

For light silk garments the glycerine should be mixed with water instead of yolk of egg.

To make meat cooked in a gas oven juicy, place a jar half filled with water at the bottom of the oven. The steam arising from the water makes the air moist and prevents the meat from getting hard.

U. S. CAN STOP EUROPEAN WAR

New York, Aug. 31.—The United States government could stop the European war by placing an embargo on food products, it was asserted today as District Attorney Whitman's John Doe investigation into the increased cost of living since the conflict began. James Ward Warner, president of the New York Product Exchange, and George Zabinski, resident manager for Minneapolis flour manufacturers, each said the "part" of warfare abroad must cease if America ceased exporting to the belligerent nations.

There is a big demand for flour in foreign countries, according to these witnesses, with a heavy demand, too, in domestic markets. Mr. Zabinski said there is a shortage of 400,000,000 bushels in the Russian wheat crop. He declared the United States could dispose of its entire flour output to France, England, Greece and Turkey at any reasonable price and receive payment in gold before the staple was put aboard steamships.

Not only would war in Europe end if an embargo was placed on American products, Mr. Zabinski and Mr. Warner agreed, but normal markets would be established at home and the prices here go down.

Mr. Warner said the Grain Exporters' Association of North America did not attempt to fix prices. Ralph L. Carl, assistant New York manager for a Minneapolis Milling company, declared there was no combine to fix prices. He believed there was a possibility of wheat going higher.

MORE MEN STARTING EVERY DAY

All the warring nations have thousands of troops starting to the front every twenty-four hours.

We have hundreds of machineist chauffeurs and workmen in general starting every month to wear Grinnell Work Gloves. They are only one dollar and forty eight cents.

And at the same time right here in America where we enjoy all the freedom and liberty that the heart can desire we find the ladies, in order to enjoy more freedom and ease in dress, are acting very wisely and wearing Scott's Hip Reducing Corsets for uncorrected figures. This is indeed a revolution in Corsets. They are only 49c and 98c each.

Did you know the Butterick Patterns were the only American made patterns that are sold in Paris?

STANDING OF CANDIDATES

The great army of candidates for the Piano, Trip to Washington, D. C., and the 9x12 Art Square are mobilizing votes right and left. Below are enumerated the standing up to 6 p. m. Wednesday, Aug. 26th:

Miss Maude Cameron 166,700; Mrs. C. L. Goodhue did not mobilize this week, she still stands at 15,960. Mrs. I. D. Hart is fortified to the extent of 416,460. Miss Annie J. Howard has mobilized to date 2,222,900. She has, so far, the largest army. Miss Grace Hawkins has 60,300. Mrs. R. C. Sheaffer 39,850. Miss Helen Tate got several recruits this week, she stands 333,700. Miss Mamie Royal has rallied her forces and now has an army of 65,050. Miss Clarece Hand sent more soldiers to the front this week than any one. She has an army of 573,850. Miss Beulah Hutchinson has 766,100. Miss Mae Foster continues to mobilize. She is headed for Washington with 1,487,750. Miss Junie Stumon has 79,150. Mrs. J. B. Atkins has 29,750. Mrs. D. R. Brison 11,850. Mrs. C. A. Owens 28,450. Miss Julia Hodges brought out a few reserves and now has a fighting force of 1,895,150. Miss Emma Proctor has only 10,000.

An old bachelor is only the half of a pair of scissors.

HELPS AND HINTS FOR THE WOMAN WHO SEWS

Just at this time of the year our counters are filled with the most fascinating remnants of Serges, Silks, Poplins, Ginghams, etc. All suitable materials for the autumn costumes. These remnants are of course left over from last year's stock, but this does not detract in any way from their desirability. Fortunately for the woman of small means, materials do not change in style as often as cut, and for this reason fabrics which were smart last year are in many cases just as chic this season.

Serge is always in good style, heavy brocades promise to continue popular and Dewetyn has taken such a strong hold on fickle feminine fancy that it will win fashion's favor for many months to come.

All these materials in dark autumn colors are to be found on the bargain counters now and materials that cost regularly 25c to $1.00 per yard can be bought now for half price.

Therefore, from an economic standpoint it is wise to begin the autumn wardrobe the first two weeks of September.

PRESENT WAR SITUATION

FROM THE VIEWPOINT OF AN ENGLISH OFFICER
NOW RETIRED

WRITTEN FOR THE HERALD

The week has seen some clearing of the situation in the main theater of the war. Events have emphasized the questionability of Germany's flagrant and ruthless violation of Belgian neutrality. It is pretty evident that if Germany on the outbreak of the war had hurled her whole available strength on the French frontier and had treated Belgium as she has done Holland, the position of the French army would by this time have been if not desperate, serious in the extreme. For after nearly four weeks of fighting, what is the position? Merely that the French are holding their frontier line which for years has been prepared for this one thing, that this line is still intact, but instead of having to make head alone against the numerically superior German troops of invasion, she has the support of both England and Belgium, that above all else she has by grace of England command of the sea. Germany is in fact already alone to all intents. With Russia pressing on her eastern boundaries, with Serbia victorious on another field, with Italy restless, if still neutral, Austria's power is largely neutralized, for any serious help she can render her ally. And in both Austria and Germany the economic pressure must steadily grow. Time in fact is on the side of the allies.

Whatever be the whole truth about the engagements which have already taken place, this may be said. If the allies had succeeded in the counter attacks with which they attempted to break up Germany's advance, the decisive battle would by now have been fought. As it is the first French line is still intact, and every day gained on the French frontier must increase the difficulties which the Germans must ultimately face.

Lord Kitchener put the case in a nutshell in his speech last night. If it is to be a fight to the finish the British empire can and will send to the front an army comparable in size with Germany's huge force. But this huge force is now at its maximum while reinforcements can and will be continually poured in. That is one meaning of the command of the sea which Germany deliberately handed over to France when she forced England to intervene. What the other meaning will be felt when the question of food supplies becomes acute in Austria and Germany. Time therefore is everything to the allies, and on the other side everything must be ventured on one stroke for they cannot afford to wait. Cut off from the whole world the markets whence she draws her supplies closed to her, rapid victory or national death are the alternatives which Germany has to face. She is making a bold, a magnificent bid for the former, but are not the odds too great?

It will be intensely interesting later to know what actually happened at Namur to necessitate the abandonment of the advanced position which the allies first occupied. It is quite evident that in their part of the field at any rate, the retreat was anything but a rout, was in fact merely a change in position ably carried out. What a rally happened in Lorraine and Alsace is yet uncertain, except that the French retreat appears to have been made in some disorder. The importance of the failure in these two fields will only be capable of measurement when we know whether the morals of the French troops has suffered.

Foreign military officers attending the German and French maneuvers year after year have noted their observations, and of late it has come to be the general opinion among these critics that the French soldier was at least as well armed, and trained, and led as the Germans and were inspired by an equal military spirit. And not a few rated the French troops as at least as good as those of their powerful neighbor. The question, however, sometimes comes to the mind whether the moral effect of their crushing defeat in '70 still unconsciously persists. It is impossible yet to know. We have only French accounts to go by. Those from England are laudatory in the extreme and avoid the flowery phrase. If however the morale of the French troops is not seriously affected either by tradition or by recent events, the allies can face the future calmly as regards the ultimate outcome. Meanwhile both sides must already have suffered heavily but the losses of the Germans should be the greater for they have to take the offensive.

Attention is riveted on the battle grounds on the French and Belgian frontiers, but news of a steady Russian advance comes through with however few details. That the threat of the bear's hug is becoming imminent is evidenced by Austria's naive declaration that she will reserve the spanking of Serbia to a more opportune moment. This declaration is the one touch of comic relief to the grisly horror of the situation.

In the far east Japan's entrance into the field will have been viewed with mixed feelings, even by those in whose cause she has taken up arms. As affecting the main operations her action has no bearing in particular.

Charges have been made that the Germans are using dum-dum or expanding bullets, contrary to the Hague convention. Such charges have been made in every modern war, and should not be accepted without overwhelming proof. In the present case the reports of several of the French wounded are conclusive that they at any rate were not hit by expanding bullets. For no man could, for instance, receive eleven wounds from such a bullet and look forward to a long and happy life. The small, long hard bullet travelling at immense speed and rotating rapidly on its major axis, drills a clean and merciful hole in a soft skinned animal such as man, if however, owing to a ricochet, a spin on some other axis be imparted to it, the wound it makes is a ghastly one, but quite distinguishable from that made by an expanding bullet. Rumors of German atrocities and of the provoked slaughter of defenceless and unoffending peasants may also be discounted as born of panicky imagination. In war unfortunately non-combatants are not bullet proof, and it is unavoidable that some should meet with misfortune. The Germans must have altered strangely in forty years if the stories of their brutalities be true.

Letters from England now appearing in the papers convey a graphic picture of the state of the country ten days ago. Mobilization seems to have gone like clockwork, troops were moved to the ports whence they were to embark by night, and with such secrecy that not even the families of the soldiers knew where their men had gone. The public parks present a strange appearance covered with squads of men of all classes being taught the rudiments of drill. Families and households have been broken up at a moment's notice, yet the country seems to have settled down to the new conditions with equanimity and without visible excitement. One lady in advertising for a coachman, groom, gardener and under gardener to replace servants who had been called to the colors, added "no able-bodied man capable of bearing a rifle need apply." On the result of the battle now raging along a front of two hundred miles depends the length of the war. If the allies beat back the German attack and are able to take the offensive, it will come near being decisive. Otherwise the call to arms in England will have to continue till the whole strength of the nation has been trained and poured into line. "God of Battles, was ever a battle like this in the world before?"

HEALTH BOARD

Every good citizen, whether native or imported, whether of Florida or whatever state presumably has the highest welfare of his community at heart. Presumably also he will be an active supporter of whatever makes for its upbuilding and, presumably again, he will not knowingly or willingly become a destroyer or a "knocker."

These several presumptions are not violent stretches of the normal imagination nor are they unreasonable; indeed, they are so extremely probable as to be the basis for sound argument.

Florida's Board of Health has been working twenty-five years and more for the good of the state. What it has accomplished is a matter of voluminous record, which has been often reported and repeated to the people of the state. The not results of this quarter century of consistent scientific work have been to raise the great peninsula from the popular suspicion of being one of the most unhealthy sections of the country to the positive knowledge that it is one of the most healthful, with a death rate probably as low as the lowest.

This work has been wrought against natural difficulties and obstacles and against the constantly diminishing opposition of ignorance, for as positive benefits have become plainly apparent, the per capita annual expenditure of ten cents for each resident of the state, white and black, old and young, has been seen to be at least worth while. As a wider knowledge of the plans and accomplishments of the board has been disseminated, the approval of the taxpayers has been given more and more freely, for criticism has come through ignorance.

Every honest man who is working in dead earnest along some particular line for his own advancement and his own betterment, and this personal advance adds to that of the state. Each is an authority in his own line and he rightly claims recognition as such. He accords such recognition to others who are as sincere and earnest as himself. No one can be a specialist, an expert, in all departments of human endeavor; the sum total of all practical working knowledge is too vast, too exhaustive.

It is on this ground that the State Board of Health claims for itself the support, moral and physical, of every citizen of Florida. It is doing and has done a great work, and its usefulness was never greater, and its activity never greater than today. The importance of this work in the upbuilding of the state is being recognized, and naturally this recognition comes from those physicians and laymen who are best acquainted with this work.

Its critics—and no successful man or organization is ever free from them—are of two classes: Those who are ignorant, and those who assume to themselves the wisdom to supervise human endeavor in every direction.

None of us has the right or the wisdom to criticize the acts of another until he knows the reason, the motive for those acts. None of us, being human, is above the possibility of error, but each of us has the right to be recognized as honest in his error. And each of us has a right to the confidence of the community, with the conclusion that with increasing years of experience make such errors fewer and less important.

Florida's Health Board is profoundly grateful for the confidence in the past. It asks that this be continued as the larger and more important problems of the future shall tax its wisdom.

THE MORATORIUM PLAN

Many people inquire what a moratorium is. After that comes the question as to whether it is expedient. The latter is made a matter of doubt in an article by the editor of Commerce and Finance...

The first question is, then, what is a moratorium? In a word, it is a method of deferring payment on debts, public or private. The word probably is derived from the idea that while a moratorium exists in a country, things are in doubt...

The reason for that opinion is that American securities held in Europe to the extent of several billions of dollars and are the most salable thing that Europe has now...

Because of the vast amount of offerings for sale at almost any price that could be got, those who held the same kind of securities in this country felt that by depressing them below their actual value...

It is useless to tell people that a security is good in fact without regard for its market value. They will not believe it, for generally market value and real value closely correspond...

Sometimes a stay law, in the nature of a moratorium, has been found useful, although it must be handled with care lest it lead to abuses. On the whole, we are greatly in doubt as to whether a moratorium will be ever in favor with our people...

AN UNCERTAIN GAME

The war seems to be putting the kibosh on Florida newspapers and whether the editors are going to Europe to join the armies or whether war has raised the price of paper or has thrown men out of employment in turpentine and phosphate resulting in hard times it would appear that the newspapers are suffering and suspending every week or two...

In this issue is an article on the war by an English officer and it gives a clear insight into conditions written without bias. The first hand knowledge of the warring nations is timely.

Women and Gowns And now the women of America are up against it. They must design their own gowns France is ridden and the masters of fashion in Paris can no longer supply the demand. France has our sympathy in its troubles, but we hail the day when American women must depend upon their own initiative...

newspaper man and you cannot get away from it if you so wished.

PASSING THE HAT

Florida is already making an exhibition of herself in advance of the Panama phantasmagoria to be put on at Frisco in 1915. She is going to sell punk dollars to help raise the money for an exhibit to discredit herself with the big show. What the girls lack in raising this way they boys will perhaps be called upon to raise by hunting racoons and 'possums and peddling the hides. Maybe we will put the blind and maimed on the street corners to sell pencils and shoestrings to make up the deficiency. As a last resort ladies' aid societies will probably be organized to sell ice cream and old clothes to raise the rhino. It reminds us of the plan to advertise Florida by selling coupons printed in New York.—Arcadia Enterprise.

THE PLACE TO LIVE

The Sanford Herald says that with everything needed to sustain life the Sanford section could stand a siege for a year. Celery is fine, but as a staple diet it would not suit our stomach.—Apalachicola Times.

Such ignorance is truly refreshing. Don't you know, Bro. Johnson, that Sanford shipped the past season 225,000 crates of vegetables aside from celery and lettuce and 25,000 barrels of Irish potatoes. As to sweet potatoes, cattle, hogs, sheep and chickens we have them all, the rivers are full of fish, the woods full of game and we couldn't starve if Europe was wiped off the map.

Those Florida papers which have shown a disposition to disparage the state tax commission and depreciate its value to the taxpayers would do well to remember that this same commission has succeeded in increasing the valuation of taxable property by more than $60,000,000. Nothing is more notorious than the persistent and outrageous under valuation by of property by many people when rendering it for taxes. Much land given in at $2.50 and $5.00 per acre for taxes is held on the market for ten times that value, and this evil has become chronic over the whole state, thereby working a great hardship upon such property owners as were conscientious in rendering their property. The work of the tax commission in increasing values $60,000,000 shows that a good start has been made in repairing a weak and inefficient system which works grave injustice to those people who render their property fairly for taxes and are thus made to assume the burden resulting from the failure of others to do so.—Lakeland Telegram.

Potatoes, either sweet or Irish, are going to be a big money crop this year and none equal the Florida product. The man who has lived north and eaten the lumpy potatoes from some of the most famous potato fields of America appreciates the Florida product more highly than the man who has been raised on the Cracker variety of spuds. They are the most consistently mealy potatoes grown anywhere in this country. We haven't eaten any of the European or British brands, though we have hopes sometimes.—Tampa Tribune.

The Herald is giving the people of Sanford the best news service that has ever been offered before in the city. We are getting the war news fresh from the wires and right from the wireless station at Sayville, Long Island and we expect the people to reciprocate by subscribing for The Herald. We are not getting out this expensive service for our health. If you are a subscriber, you are perfectly welcome to the daily bulletin service in front of the Herald office on Herald Square.

In this issue is an article on the war by an English officer and it gives a clear insight into conditions written without bias. The first hand knowledge of the warring nations is timely.

The Sanford Herald is a public institution but it is not a free library as we would like to call attention of those who expect to get the paper without paying for it.

Women and Gowns And now the women of America are up against it. They must design their own gowns France is ridden and the masters of fashion in Paris can no longer supply the demand. France has our sympathy in its troubles, but we hail the day when American women must depend upon their own initiative in the matter of dress, for when American women undertake to do a thing IT IS DONE. We have depended upon Paris too long. We have accepted the hideous creations that have been handed us without a murmur, simply because they bore the French label. This is an opportune time for the women of this country to use their own brains, and use them to good purpose. They need no coaching from other countries.

It is safe to predict that when they do begin the designing of their gowns we will have a revelation in the matter of feminine attire.

Common sense and decency will return, and it will not be at the expense of personal appearance or style.

The future gowns to be designed by American women will be just as smart and just as stylish as any they have ever worn, with the added advantage of radiating refinement and gentility.

American women are the most beautiful on earth, are noted for their intellectual attainments, and are possessed of an indomitable spirit which knows no failure.

The designing of their own gowns will be but an incident in their brilliant careers, for even now the world is prostrate at the feet of American womanhood.

Citrus Seminar

The largest number of replies received to the announcement that the Citrus Seminar would be held this year if there was sufficient demand assures the holding of this meeting and indicates that the attendance will be larger than that of last year. The meeting will therefore be held from September 22nd to the 24th inclusive. A preliminary program will be issued soon.

A review of the replies shows the greatest demand to be for information on citrus diseases. Other subjects called for are fertilizers, cultivation, the use of dynamite in the groves, fruit maturity, orchard heating and the marketing of fruits.

In view of the seriousness of the citrus canker situation in the state, this disease will receive special attention in the program. Mr. Lloyd Tenny of the Growers and Shippers League and Mr. Frank Stirling, who are in charge of the citrus canker eradication work on the lower East Coast are expected to be present and tell of this work and its future. Dr. E. W. Berger, the state nursery inspector will tell of the work his office is doing in the control of this disease. Prof. H. E. Stevens of the Experiment Station, who has discovered the cause of this disease to be a fungus will demonstrate the fungus and exhibit specimens of the disease, showing its different stages of development. He has isolated the fungus and has it growing in pure culture. By inoculating it into healthy trees he has been able to produce the disease readily, proving that he has the right organism. FLA. Christian Endeavor Notes

In the list of teachers for the winter term of the city school of Kissimmee were several listed who are either Endeavorers of the Presbyterian or Christian church societies. Perhaps the editor of the Kissimmee Valley Gazette did not know this but we did. One of them is Miss Ruth, daughter of Mrs. J. W. Miller, who is to be the Kindergarten teacher. Mrs. Miller was formerly a state and district officer, and is hostess for Secretary Grace when she goes to Kissimmee.

It was the Miami Metropolis which told of the three active Endeavorers from that many societies, of its city, who were to represent their churches in the first convention for Southeastern district meeting in West Palm Beach this week. Miami has more denominations represented in Christian Endeavor than any place in the state but St. Petersburg and Tampa.

In one of our press exchanges were figures showing how great in territory was DeSoto county. As far as we know we have not for our white union a single society within its boundaries. Field work is the problem not yet solved for such parts of the state.

It is good to see the interest taken in temperance, especially that of the W. C. T. U.; division of the good work, by Florida papers. The Lakeland News last week gave much space to a plea for "the white ribbon," as a favor to the good women of the Temperance Union.

Could savages who never heard of the gospel of love act more savage than some members of the great, strong white race, now in Europe? What must the converted people of the islands and other missionary lands think of such an example?

Under a large heading, "The California Endeavorer" for August calls for "Tithing Week," Sept. 6-13, for the raising of money to help make California dry. They will have a special field secretary to aid in this great battle for righteousness. What sacrifices of any kind have Florida Endeavorers made in efforts to make our state "go dry"?

Some splendid news came from

Mrs. R. C. Maxwell, in the Presbyterian society of Sanford. It was organized this spring and has forty members, with prospects for more. They expect to help in state union finances this fall, and get more literature from Boston to help keep-up interest.

State President Curry of Jacksonville has taken a trip off to Montreat, N. C., but expected to return home this week. We appreciate the workers writing our office when away on their summer vacations.

GRACE A. TOWNSEND, Interlachen, Sept. 1st.

SALAMAGUNDI

Fifteen women have been tried in Chicago upon the charge of murder for killing their husbands, and not one convicted, though the evidence of the facts was convincing. The conclusion is inevitable that the killing of a husband is justifiable or excusable homicide.

If the Germans are continually being "driven back" isn't it rather remarkable that they were in positions this morning that are in advance of those held yesterday? It is somewhat enlightening to study these war telegrams with a war map in front of you.

A big delegation of convict leas-ees appeared today before the board on state institutions and prayed for relief under their contracts with the state because of the acute condition of the naval stores market. Many of them claim they cannot continue to use their leases. The matter is still under consideration.

Florida shipped nearly 45,000 car-loads of produce from the state during the last trucking season, and yet her agricultural possibilities have scarcely been guessed at.

Dad's Thought.

We don't know what articles of belief are in the minds of the Christians who are so busy making our state "go dry."

Frocks for the Small Girl

IN THE restless realm of fashion one finds greater stability and uniformity in the styles created for little girls than in any other direction. In fact, a very large proportion of all frocks for young misses show variations of a single model. The long waist, or blouse, joined to the short skirt, as pictured here, is developed in all sorts of fabrics and is followed closely in line in the simplest as well as the most elaborate of children's dresses.

There is nothing finer or more elegant than a dress of embroidered or gandy or swiss or batiste, trimmed with one or two of the several durable laces that will stand any amount of cleaning. Cluny and the fllet laces, with the best German or French val, will last as long as the fabric of the dress, and in fact cluny and fllet laces will outwear strong fabrics. Val is somewhat less durable, and also less expensive.

In the picture a straight panel extends down the front of the dress from neck to hem. The required fullness is introduced into the waist by groups of tiny hand-run tucks in the material at each side of the panel. The front, including panels and sides, to the underarm seams, is in one piece and an extra length at the bottom provides the ruffle. The fullness in the back is provided by tiny tucks, as at the sides.

The ruffle is set on to the body of the dress by means of an insertion of fllet lace. There is a cape collar edged with a fllet edging, which in turn is finished with a val ruffle of very scant fullness. The short puffed sleeves are finished in the same way.

The bottom of the skirt is finished with the fllet edging. After the French fashion, dainty patterns in hand embroidery (nearly always in flower form) are put in after the lace and material have been sewed together. Sprays of flowers extend over the gandy and lace. The pattern, in graceful lines, is repeated on the front panel and about the sleeves.

As a finishing touch crochet buttons in groups of three simulate a fastening of the panel to the dress at each side. There is a folded sash of light blue ribbon in which an end hangs from the simplest of knots to the edge of the ruffle at the left side.

These dresses for young girls are worn very short. In fact, the impression is that they are a trifle small for the wearers. But there is ample room across the shoulders, and careful mothers usually see to it that there is a chance of lengthening the skirt by letting out tucks placed in the ruffle or by adding a second lace edging. The softness of the material allows more fullness than is really needed, and these little dresses last out two or three seasons' wear, in this way making the hand work well worth doing. Battleship Conqueror's Mighty Broadside

MIGHTY among King George's warships, the battleship Conqueror, member of the second battle squadron, has a displacement of 22,500 tons and mounts ten 13.5 inch guns. The bow view of the vessel shows how a mighty broadside can be delivered against an enemy from either side of the Conqueror. She is driven by turbine engines and carries a crew of 1000 men.

Darwin's Regret.

If I had to live my life over again, I would have made a rule to read some poetry and listen to some music every week, for perhaps the parts of my brain now atrophied would thus have been kept alive through use. The loss of those tastes is a loss of happiness, and may possibly be fatal to the intellect, and, more generally, to the moral character, by vitiating the emotional part.

And the Clerk Smiled.

There recently went into a fashionable shoe shop the daughter of a man whose wealth has been acquired within very recent years. The young woman was disposed to patronize the clerk and rejected a number of "classy" slippers he produced for her approval. Finally she said: "I think, perhaps, I shall take these two pairs. But Louis XV heels are too high for me. Give me a size lower—or, stay—perhaps Louis XIII will be high enough."

Star's Program for Thursday

Indianapolis, May 30th, 1914, at eleven o'clock and 100,000 speed fanatics are awaiting the next thrill of a sensation-gutted day.

A green car, with sharp, pointed hood and bearing the number 49, passes the stands. It is Gilhooley's Isotta, Italy's lone challenger in the international speed battle and an added starter whose eleventh hour entry has been made possible by the withdrawal of De Palma's Mercedes. Compared with the five fleet blue challengers of France that thunder by with gatling-gun detonation, the Isotta seems to crawl and its smoky exhausts lack the bark of defiance.

Far down the home stretch there is a blur of yellow and white. It is the Marmon and Stutz. Joe Dawson and Gil Anderson are driving desperately in pursuit of the Delages and Peugeot's. They are favorites among America's defenders. Much depends upon their skill and daring. Almost hood to hood and wheel to wheel, the Marmon and Stutz flash across the wire as Gilhooley swings into the turn, hitting it high and hugging the concrete wall but with throttle wide open. A rear tire explodes. Brakes drag. The green car has mastered its drives. It skids, careens like a drunken monster, turns over and rattles down the embankment to end its uncertain journey in the marshes of the infield. It has tossed both the driver and his mechanic from their seats. Gilhooley lies unconscious near the mass of silent steel. His helper, Lino Bonini is stretched out on the bricks of the track, bruised, battered and dazed.

Bonini groans and raises his head. He hears the roar of the onrushing cars. He sees them bearing down upon him. On his hands and knees he starts to crawl up the slippery embankment. A curse and a prayer are on his lips. He crumples in a faint. Hurling over the bricks at an 80-mile an hour speed, Dawson almost is on top of the prostrate man before he sees him. A fraction of a second and the Marmon will crush him. Dawson thinks fast. With almost superhuman strength, Joe wrenches the steering wheel. The yellow car shoots down the embankment, its burning tires grazing the helpless Bonini. It jumps the track, strikes the sand at the inside edge of the brick oval and then turns over twice to claim two victims, Dawson and his mechanic, Vera Barnes, who are buried under the twisted, wrecked mechanism of speed.

Dawson is taken to the field hospital with a broken collar bone, twisted back, internal injuries and body blackened by bruises, a wreck of the big hearted boy who won the 500-mile race in 1912. He risked his life that the life of another might be saved. "Did I hit him," he asks of a nurse and then sinks into a coma.

The triumph of Thomas is nothing compared with the self sacrifice of Joe Dawson, nobleman of speed, a bruised and lacerated martyr. He wears no laurels of victory, but each bandage on his twisted and torn body is a far more priceless token of his greatness.

Mr. Herndon will exhibit two reels showing the Indianapolis race of last May and patrons of the Star will be introduced to the fastest, greatest and most daring drivers of the day showing them in their speedy creations just as they looked during the race. Thursday, Sept. 3rd is the day and date.

Soft Soap Used With Concrete.
A solution of soft soap instead of water was used in making a water-proof concrete in building the foundation of a grain elevator on a river bank in the west.

Exclusive.
A young man had decided to join the Episcopal church, but his family were all Baptists, so he thought he should be immersed when baptized, and on going to the rector of the Episcopal church he made a request for such a baptism. The rector decided that it could be quite easily accomplished and said he would speak to the Baptist minister about it.

The Baptist minister, on hearing this, was quite delighted and readily agreed to baptize and take the young man into the church the following Sunday morning, but said the rector: "He just wants you to baptize him and he wants to join my church."

The good Baptist minister then replied by saying: "We do all our own washing, but we don't take in other people's washing."—Exchange.

Might Wed a Bachelor.

A little girl of six sat looking thoughtfully out the window of her home the other day. Her mother asked the cause of her seriousness.

"Oh," she replied, "I was just thinking that when I grow up to be a big lady I'm a-goin' to get married and have three children."

The parent was surprised and amused.

"Well, you will be very fortunate, indeed," she said.

Then the little girl again looked into thought. Finally she said:

"But you can never tell, mother. I might marry a bachelor."

Hagar or Flight.

Hagar, which in Hebrew means "flight," was the handmaiden of Sarah and mother of Abraham's eldest son Ishmael. She was of Egyptian origin. Her flight, as recorded in Genesis 16 and her expulsion, chapter 21, are from the Jahvist and Elohist sources respectively, and present interesting points of comparison. She was regarded as the ancestress of the Hagarenes or Hagarites, described in I Chronicles, 5:10, and Paul uses her as a type of the old covenant (Galatians, 4:25).

Gordon Craig

Soldier of Fortune—By Randall Parrish

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Craig is hired by two men, Vall and Neale, for $10,000 to go south and impersonate Philip Henley, ostensibly to save an estate for Henley, who, they say, is in prison. Craig is to take with him a woman to impersonate Mrs. Henley.

Suspected of burglary, Craig is cleared by a young woman wandering in the street. She is out of work and hungry. They talk in a restaurant.

She is an actress, deserted by her wealthy, drunken husband. She consents to go south with Craig.

Mrs. Bernard is a good woman and will play the part of Mrs. Henley to help Craig. They arrive at the rundown Henley plantation and are greeted by a rough looking overseer.

Coomba, the overseer, and a mysterious negro, Ballie, seem to be the only persons on the plantation. Craig is awakened by a shot and finds a man murdered.

Broussard, a creole friend of Coomba, appears. Probing the murder, Craig finds the corpse missing. Mrs. Bernard is really Mrs. Henley. She and Craig determine to fight for her missing husband's estate. She believes Henley dead.

Coomba denies Henley is dead and tells Craig, although the latter reveals Mrs. Henley's identity to the overseer. The latter says Henley himself put him in charge of the plantation.

Mrs. Henley and Craig find Philip Henley's seal ring in the garden. Exploring the house alone, Craig finds a secret basement room.

He is trapped and discovers two dead bodies. One is the missing corpse, and the other is Coomba. Craig is struck down and is made prisoner by a dark young man, another named Herman and Broussard. Mrs. Henley is also caught.

Craig and the woman are taken aboard a yacht, which sails. The owner and master, the dark young man, calls himself Philip Henley. He tries to win Craig, and the latter feigns friendship for him in order to help the woman.

Mrs. Henley denies the man is her husband. She is locked up in a stateroom, and "Henley" produces papers which seemingly support his claim "Craig pretends to join in his filibustering expedition.

Craig plans to escape with Mrs. Henley in a small boat and provisions it secretly. Going to summon her, he finds her cabin unoccupied, but in good order.

"Henley" forces his attention on Mrs. Henley, and Craig saves her, making the captain a prisoner in his own cabin. "Henley's" men have orders from him not to disturb him. Craig lunches with Broussard.

The creole, angry with "Henley," tells Craig that "Henley" is Philip Henley's half brother, son of Ballie, and that Philip is dead. The half breed is trying to seize the estate. Craig prepares to leave the yacht.

At night Craig and Mrs. Henley embark in the small boat, taking to the gulf of Mexico. They decide Vall and Neale were two crooks trying to grab the Henley estate.

CHAPTER XVI

The Open Boat.

W hen I struggled, I made it, rolling over the low gunwale, the water draining from me into a pool at the bottom.

"You are a fine, brave girl," I said sincerely, unable to restrain my admiration.

She dropped her head and began to sob.

"Oh, no, no! I am not," she replied tremblingly. "I am such a coward. You cannot know the terror I have felt."

"Of course. But my being here makes a difference?"

"Always," she confessed frankly. "Somehow I can never be afraid with you. But—but what shall we do now?"

"I hardly know what to put you at. Oh, yes! Here is a tin, and you can ball out this water sloshing about in the bottom. That will be valuable service."

"What will you do?"

"Rig up the sail the best I can in the dark. There is breeze enough to give us some headway and ship the rudder."

"Do you know which direction to steer?"

"Not now, but I have a compass in my pocket. A northeast course would be sure to bring us to the coast, and towns are scattered along. I found that out from Broussard yesterday."

"God pity us if we ever fell into Henley's clutches again. There was in my mind, now I had leisure to consider, no doubt as to what those on board that vessel would do after they discovered him. They would realize we were somewhat astern, and, in the hope of sighting up at daylight, would cruise back and forth in those immediate waters. Any moment the Sea Gull's sharp prow might loom up out of the black wall. As she carried no lights there would be no warning. It occurred to me that they would be more apt to take a course well in toward shore, anticipating I would endeavor to reach the protection of the coast under cover of darkness. Some one would discover the loss of the tell-tale compass, which would naturally confirm that suspicion. Convinced of this I steered more to the eastward, feeling of the face of the compass again to assure myself of the direction. I brought a tin of biscuit from the bow locker, more as an excuse for opening conversation than from any feeling of hunger."

"It must be pretty close to midnight," I said finally. "Are you hungry?"

The shapeless form in the oilskin straightened slightly, and I knew she had turned her face toward me.

"Hungry? Oh, no! I had not thought of that."

"You have been crying?"

"Yes; it is so foolish; but I am so frightened out here in this little boat. The darkness and that awful water has got upon my nerves. You you mustn't scold me."

"Of course not. I feel the weight myself," I replied kindly. "This experience is almost as new to me as to yourself. You must remember I am no sailor."

Then I described the change in my plans. She listened quietly, asking a question now and then.

"What papers did you find in the desk?"

"Letters mostly, establishing the identity of the captain."

"Who is he—really?"

"Charles Henley—Philip Henley's half brother by a negro mother. Did you ever hear of him?"

"No; I was never told there was such a man."

"I doubt if any one outside those immediately interested ever knew the circumstances. Of course, I kept it a close secret. This is where the man had all the money. As you are the judge, I had determined to represent himself as Philip and claim the property."

"As Philip had been absent so long, no one could dispute successfully his claim to be that individual. He possessed ample evidence that he was the son of Judge Henley."

"But surely he would anticipate that my husband—Philip—would hear of his father's death?"

"He took the chance of getting the property into his hands first. As I understand the matter, he possessed no knowledge that the judge was in communication with Philip. He believed the latter had disappeared utterly and would only learn of his inheritance through accident. To prevent this he dispatched a man north to discover him, if possible, and keep him under surveillance. He thought he had every avenue guarded."

"How did you learn all this?"

"From Broussard first. He talked more freely than he intended to do, and later I verified all he said by the letters found."

"Then, strange as it sounds, it is true?"

"Without doubt. Moreover," I lowered my voice in sudden embarrassment—"within the last two weeks the captain had received news from his agent in the north which gave him fresh confidence. The man reported that he had found trace of Philip Henley; he told of the life the man was leading and where he lived. I think all this must have been immediately after your separation, as he mentioned no wife. However, he described something even more important."

"You must tell me," she burst forth as I hesitated. "Don't be afraid to trust me with all you know."

"I am not afraid," I returned stoutly enough, "not in the sense you mean at least, yet it is never easy to be the bearer of evil news."

"Is it evil?"

"Misfortune, certainly. The man reported the death of your husband."

"His death? You are sure? Tell me now what he said, how it happened."

"The report was specific and would seem to be true. He says that Philip Henley while intoxicated was struck and killed by an automobile. The date given was after you left him. His body was found by the police, and there were no marks of identification on his clothes. He was buried unknown, but the informant claimed to have visited the morgue, viewed the body and stated positively the dead man was Philip."

"And—and you think—tell me what you believe, Gordon Craig?"

"There is but one conclusion to my mind. I have no doubt as to the entire truth of the story. The silence and disappearance of your husband is evidence that he is either dead or in some other way helpless."

"I—really I have thought this all the time. But about those others?"

"Vall and Neale, you mean? It seems to me they fit in exactly with the story. Everything had been removed from Philip's pockets and all ordinary means of identification destroyed. There must have been a purpose in this, and it must have been done by a second party, as there is no suggestion of suicide. My theory is this—the body was either found by others before the police arrived or else the automobile party which killed him paused long enough to ascertain the extent of his injuries. In either case his pockets were searched and all contents removed. Do you comprehend what that would mean?"

"I—I think so, but tell me yourself."

"He certainly had papers with him dealing with his inheritance. To a shrewd, criminal mind they would be suggestive. He also undoubtedly had keys to his apartments. Then there would be nothing more needed except a man capable of passing himself off as Philip Henley."

"And Vall was not a lawyer," she asked breathlessly. "nor Neale one of the executors?"

"In my judgment the fellows merely took those names to impose upon me, to help bolster up their story and make it appear probable. They were simply two crooks, willing to take a chance for a pot of money. I happened to be the one selected to pull their chestnuts out of the fire."

"I saw her head sink into the support of her hands and knew she was sobbing silently."

"You think my conclusions must be correct?" I could not refrain from asking.

"Yes, even without seeing the letter;

but," and she glanced up quickly, "the ring—Philip's ring—we found?"

"You believe, then, he is dead?"

"I am sure of it as though I had seen his body. I feel it to be true. Do you understand now why because of the fact we can no longer remain friends?"

"Yes," I burst forth, "because you know how I have grown to feel toward you. You—you resent?"

"Have I said so?"

"No, not in words. That was not necessary, but I understand."

"Do you indeed?"

I stared toward her, puzzled, bewildered, yet conscious that the hot blood was surging through my veins.

"You cannot mean the other?" I questioned. "That—that you love me?"

"And why not? Am I so different from other women?"

I held the tiller still with one hand, but the other arm was free, and I reached out and drew her toward me. There was no resistance, no effort to break away. I could see her face uplifted, the wide open eyes.

"Are you afraid to speak to me?" she asked, pleadingly.

on the tiller. Suddenly, with a swift thrill which sent my blood leaping, I felt the soft touch of her fingers.

"Are you afraid to speak to me?" she asked pleadingly. "Surely I have said nothing to anger you?"

"No, it is not that." I returned in confusion, not knowing how to express the cause of my hesitancy.

"I am sorry—yes," very slowly, "but perhaps not as you suppose. It is hard to think of him as dead—killed so suddenly, without opportunity to think or make any preparation. He—he was my husband under the law. That was all. He was no more. I do not believe I ever loved him. My marriage was but the adventure of a romantic girl, but if I once did his subsequent abuse of me, his life of dissipation, dull, unending long since every recollection of that love. He is to me scarcely more than a name, an unhappy memory. I told you that frankly when I believed him still alive. We were friends then, you and I, and I cannot conceive why his death should sever our friendship."

"Don't," I burst forth impetuously. "You talk of friendship when all my hope centers about another term. Surely you understand. I am a man sorely tempted and dare not yield to temptation."

She drew her hand away from my clasp, yet the very movement seemed to express regret.

"And we are to be friends no longer? Is that your meaning?"

"You must answer that question," I replied gravely, "for it is beyond my power to decide."

Her hand was again uplifted, and I knew she was endeavoring to see my face through the gloom.

"I am a woman," she said, "and we like to pretend to misunderstand, but I am not going to yield to that inclination. I do understand and will answer frankly. We can never be friends as we were before."

My heart sank, and I felt a choke in my voice difficult to overcome.

"I was afraid it would be so."

"Yes," and both her hands were upon mine. "In our position we cannot afford to play at cross purposes. You have been loyal to me even when every inducement was offered elsewhere. I permitted myself to come south with you, knowing your purpose to be an illegal one. I placed myself in a false position. In doing this I was actuated by two purposes. One was to save this property which had been willed to my husband by his father. Do you guess the other?"

"No," I said, impressed by the earnestness with which she was speaking. "You will tell me?"

"I mean to; the time has come when I should. It was that I might save you from a crime. You had been kind to me, sympathetic. I—I liked you very much, and I knew you did not understand; that you were being misled. I could not determine then where the fraud was, but I knew there was fraud, and that you would eventually become its victim."

"You cared that much for me?"

"Yes," she confessed frankly, "I did. I would never have told you so under ordinary conditions. But I can now, here, where we are—alone together—in this boat." She paused, as though endeavoring to choose the proper words. "We both realize the changed relations between us."

I drew a quick, startled breath.

"That—that I love you!" the exclamation left my lips before I was aware.

"Yes," she said calmly. "I could not help that. At first I never deemed such a result of our friendship possible. I was Philip Henley's wife, and I gave this possible danger scarcely a thought. Indeed, it did not seem a danger. While it is true he was husband in name only, yet I was wife forever. That is my religion. Now the conditions are all changed. Instantly changed, by his death."

"You believe, then, he is dead?"

"I am sure of it as though I had seen his body. I feel it to be true. Do you understand now why because of the fact we can no longer remain friends?"

"Yes," I burst forth, "because you know how I have grown to feel toward you. You—you resent?"

BUDGET OF OPINION "JUST BETWEEN YOU AND ME."

EVEN THE GATE POST NOT IN IT

A CHIEF IS AMONG YE TAKING NOTES AND FAITH, "HE'LL PRENT 'EM"—SO SAYS SAUNTERER.

There is one matter that I would like to call to the attention of the city council and that is the bulkhead. Before the entire lake front is bulkheaded there should be some provision made for the harbor of motor boats. We have long talked about the shelter that we would make for the protection of boats in Sanford and how nice it would be to protect the boats not only of the Sanford people but those that come to our docks in the winter and summer. As it is now if a strong blow comes up the owners of boats have to beat it for the rivets to protect their boats and we have never had an adequate harbor for boats of any kind. It is only a question of time after Sanford gets a real hotel that many boats will be anchored here all winter, for this city offers more to the man with the pleasure boat than any other section of the state and when the hotel is built there should be some provision made for the boats to tie up here. And the council should do this before any more bulkheading is done, because they may decide to take the end of Park avenue or some other street for the basin or harbor and after the bulkheading is done there will be no way to make it. The people who are doing the bulkheading would be glad to make this harbor as it would lessen the expense of dredging and they could probably be induced to make the harbor in the original contract and let it go at that. Will the citizens of Sanford please take this matter up with the city council and see if they cannot get action on it before it is too late.

She could not have been over thirty-three years of age, fair and in good health. About her were her children, five of them. The oldest must have been about eleven. The youngest was three or four. As robust a nest of fledglings as ever mother-bird protected with her wing. The mother had her brood out to the park, away from the rest of the people who came and went; out where the flickering leaves upon the trees above them checked the little folks with sunshine and shadow.

She was out for a few hours—all she could spare from home. She had taken the children for an airing, as she called it, for she was a mother who understands that heated houses of the city are not the best places for the young. And so she sat under a tree out in the park and watched her brood as only mothers watch. This one ventured too near a tiny pond, another found a dangerous plaything in the shape of a broken glass, and the mother had to take the thing away from the child. Still another of the youngsters sought more than his share of food that had been brought along, and that demanded the mother's attention.

In fact, a mother's attention is demanded at all times with a brood of children—and the demand is supplied. Across from the mother, unseen by her, unnoticed by the children, sat a philosopher. He watched the mother and her young—and meditated upon the sweetness of life. He looked into the future and saw the woman ten years hence, at forty-three, in the prime of womanhood, the center of a group of young men and women, the companion of her girls, the comforter of her boys. And the philosopher made a mental note of the glories of creation, and thought about how good it is to thus be mated early, and to bear the children in the youthful days, that the parents may have them and their society while yet in the vigor of life.

And the philosopher who has no children of his own, contrasted the happy mother with the women with whom he associates, with the frivolous, flighty things he meets in society, and with the heart-cold people who are married but who have no children. And he went about his way rejoicing that there are such mothers, for while he might count his own life a failure, he was philosopher enough to know that the world cannot be destroyed, nor the goodness of God wane, while there are such mothers. At least that is the way he talked to the Saunterer, and the sun shone brightly as he spoke.

The World Peace Foundation movement has received a terrific setback through the outbreak of the European war. But mayhap when the carnage is over and the sorrowing millions bend their aching backs to pay the enormous debt which will have accrued they may be in a state of mind to consider more seriously the beneficent value of a universal peace movement.

In discussing the question "What does the European war mean to the peace movement?" it is asserted that "it means that democracy should, as a result, be expected to increase in Europe, as democracy always has increased when bureaucratic government has overplayed its hand; that government policies of friction should consequently give way to other policies of conciliation, honesty and fair dealing among nations."

It means that there will at the end be called a European conference—a new conference of Vienna—or a new peace of Westphalia—from which we may hope that a new Europe will emerge, a Europe as different from the old as the Europe remade after Waterloo differed from the Europe of the days before the French revolution. But the new Europe is not likely to be changed so much in its geography as in its ideas of government. Even in Napoleon's time "the nations were too firmly set" for even that transcendent military genius.

In view of the fact that Sanford is to have a chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy and having so many questions asked about the Daughters by interested parties I give below the history of this great organization of southern ladies and repeat that every lady in Sanford who is eligible should join the Sanford chapter:

"We light on ruined shrines our sacred fires."

This organization is one of the most unique in the annals of the world.

"A great section of a great country," engaged in preserving a history without a parallel among nations.

It is one of the largest organizations of women in the United States and is still growing.

The objects of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, as stated in the constitution of the society, are "social, literary, historical and benevolent in every degree, without any political signification whatever." The duties are manifold and in the phraseology of the constitution, are to fulfill the duties of Christian charity to survivors of the war between the states and those dependent upon them; to collect and preserve the material for a truthful history of the war; to protect historic places of the Confederacy; to record the part taken by the southern women as well as in unifying efforts after the war as in patient endurance of hardships and patriotic devotion during the struggle; to honor the memory of those who served and those who fell in the service of the Confederate States and to cherish the ties of friendship among members of the society.

The organization has now 1,380 chapters in the United States, north and south, and one chapter in the City of Mexico. The organization has 80,000 members.

The present officers are: Mrs. Daisy McLauren, president; Brandon, Miss; Mrs. B. B. Ross, first vice president, Auburn, Ala.; Mrs. W. T. Colbertson, second vice president, Kiowa, Okla.; Mrs. L. W. Falson, third vice president, Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. F. M. Williams, recording secretary, Newton, N. C.; Mrs. Edward C. Schnabel, corresponding secretary, New Orleans, La.; Mrs. C. B. Tate, treasurer, Pulaski, Va.; Mrs. Orlando Halliburton, registrar, Little Rock, Ark.; Miss Mildred Rutherford, historian, Athens, Ga.; Mrs. John W. Tench, custodian of Cross of Honor, Gainesville, Fla.; Mrs. Frank A. Walke, custodian of Flags and Pennants, Norfolk, Va.

The history of the United States of the Confederacy, briefly stated, is this: 1862 Mrs. M. C. Goodlet, of Nashville, suggested a union of all the organizations of women throughout the south, the united organization to be known under the name and style of "Daughters of the Confederacy," and steps were immediately taken by her and others looking toward that end. A meeting of these various women's organizations of the southern states was held in Nashville in September, 1894 and from the gathering grew the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

To Mrs. M. C. Goodlet, a venerable and remarkable woman, belongs the honor of the inspiration and work that united in a body the scattered workers of a well loved and sacred cause.

There is one thing that I wish to bring to the attention of the people of Sanford who love their dogs better than they do their fellow men and also wish to bring it to the attention of Manager Herndon of the Star Theater and that is the practice of some people who bring all their dogs to the show every night and let them bother everybody in the theater as well as scratch their fleas off on the floors.

I have noticed this time and again until it has become the veriest nuisance and all that one can do now is to scratch fleas and you have no time to watch the pictures. There are many places now that will not allow dogs to be brought into their house. They are not allowed on the trains any more and many offices have signs that keep the dogs on the outside. If there is one thing more than any other that gives me a pain it is to see a bunch of dogs loitering around in every public place. It certainly shows that the owners are oblivious to the convenience and rights of the general public when they force their attentions of the kennels upon the people at every turn. It is a certain cinch that these dogs could just as well be left at home and it is up to the managers of the theaters to see that they are not allowed in the same room with the patrons of the house. If the owners of dogs have no respect for the rights of others they should be taught those rights by the managers of theaters, by the churches, by the proprietors of stores and every other public place where the allow the canines to run loose and bother everybody around them.

Birthday Parties

Albert P. Connelly, Jr., was the happy little host to twenty-five of his young friends last Wednesday afternoon in honor of his sixth birthday. Upon the playground at the back of his house many delightful games were enjoyed, in addition to the swings, horizontal bar and other playground devices for making little folks happy. The table with its beautiful birthday cake, decorated with white icing and pink tangles, upon which was inscribed Albert's name and age in pink was placed upon the lawn. Pink and white roses were used effectively among green ferns, giving a charming touch of color to the decorations.

Many lovely gifts testified to the popularity of the young host. Assisting Mrs. Connelly were Mesdames Claude Herndon, R. R. Deas and W. E. Housholder.

Another charming affair in children's circles last week was the birthday of Miss Margaret Zachary Friday afternoon.

The beautiful Zachary home was very lovely in its decorations of pink and white cut flowers and green ferns, the finishings of cherry and white of the wood work blending harmoniously with the color scheme of the decorations.

The dining table with its snowy cover was centered by a large vase of pink roses and ferns.

The dainty favors were pink and white baskets of candies.

In the progressive games Sidney Kennedy won the prize, a box of fine bon-bons.

Margaret was the recipient of many presents.

Those present were Margaret and Leander Berner, Dorothy and Edward Rumph, Lila and Sam Murrell, Gladys, John and George Wilson, Katherine Symes, Nina and Roy Howard, Corinne Stejneger, Addie and Ruth Marshall, Sidney Kennedy, Kinchin Powers, Eunice Devane, May, Julia, Arthur and Margaret Zachary.

In Honor of Robt. Morris

A most enjoyable and social affair was the celebration of the anniversary of the birth of Robert Morris, founder of the order of the Eastern Star, at the Robbins Nest Monday afternoon.

There was a large gathering of the Eastern Stars and their friends to enjoy the fine program of music and readings, rendered by the various members present. An informal address was made by Worthy Patron Haskins. The parlors were very attractive in their decorations of cut flowers and ferns, pink being the prevailing color.

Delicious punch and cake were served by the hostesses, Mesdames Robbins, Parker, Renfro and Biggers.

Out of town guests were Mesdames H. W. Clay of Tampa and Mrs. Thomas of Sefer.

GERMANS ARE WITHIN SIGHT OF PARIS

GOVERNOR TO THE FARMERS

ADVOCATES PLANTING OF FALL CROPS IN FLORIDA TO MEET DEMAND

Tallahassee, Sept. 4.—Governor Park Trammell has issued the following address to the farmers of Florida:

State of Florida Executive Chamber, Tallahassee, August 31, 1914. To the Farmers of Florida:

The great European war has furnished the people of Florida a lesson to which I ask the privilege of calling your attention.

The whole world is now suffering from the inflated price of foodstuffs resulting from the demoralization of the war.

The people of Florida have in their hands all the facilities necessary for supplying all of their own needs and the needs of many hundreds of thousands of other people in almost all articles of food and in meat products.

Florida has unsurpassed facilities for supplying the nation with fruits and vegetables, and our people, it is true, are annually improving these opportunities.

On the other hand Florida has vast undeveloped advantages and resources which ought to be turned to profitable account in the production of enormous staple crops and in furnishing a very large portion of our nation's meat supply.

Florida's industries are in their infancy as compared with what they will be when our people fully develop the state's possibilities.

We have the climate and the soil and the labor. We have the transportation facilities and the markets and could produce sufficient for our needs and a surplus for other markets. Yet the people of Florida annually pay to other sections hundreds of thousands of dollars for foodstuffs for man and beast.

The European war has aggravated and emphasized this situation. Our people are paying exorbitant prices for provisions which they can grow at home. The war may be indefinitely prolonged and prices continue to advance.

The wealth of the state of Florida will be increased by many millions of dollars and the independence and welfare of our farmers will be vastly enhanced if they will profit by the lesson now so forcibly before them and begin as soon as possible to cultivate food crops on a much larger scale, and to take advantage of Florida's unsurpassed advantages as a stock raising and meat producing state.

I hope that it will not be considered improper for me to suggest and urge upon the people of Florida who own or control land that they proceed at once to arrange for the planting and cultivation of as extensive fall food crops as their circumstances will permit, to the end that regardless of the duration of the great European war, there may be an abundance of such produce raised by our own people for home consumption and for sale in other markets. Such activity is bound to redound to the material, financial advantage of our farmers and to be of great benefit to all our citizens.

This very important matter is submitted for the serious consideration of all Floridians interested, directly or indirectly, in farming or fruit growing, in the confident belief that it opens the surest and easiest way to an increased prosperity and happiness.

PARK TRAMMELL, Governor.

Another New Railway

A special from Kissimmee says: C. H. Armstrong, president and engineer in chief of the South Florida and Gulf railroad, which will connect Keenanville and Bassenger, has returned from St. Paul.

He stated that engines and steel rails have been ordered, and were always on the way, and that work should be recommenced at once, and that he expected to complete the line by the end of the year.

This road when completed will open up a tremendous tract of virgin territory. The road is connected with the Kissimmee Valley Extension of the East Coast Extension, which runs straight south from Maytown to Okeechobee.

WANT THE CITY TO SURRENDER OR BE DESTROYED

Another Bank Closes

Pensacola, Fla., Sept. 4.—The American National Bank of Pensacola closed its doors Tuesday after a run lasting about an hour. Aroused by sensational reports circulated last night depositors flocked to the bank this morning. For some time after the banks were closed streets in front of the bank's ten story building were crowded. Officials of the bank have made no statement.

The bank had deposits of $1,715,000, according to the last annual statement. The capitalization is $300,000 and the surplus $35,000. On last January 1st its loans and discounts amounted to $2,000,000. C. W. Lamar is president of the institution and M. E. Clark cashier. The American National successfully weathered a severe financial storm a few months ago when the First National Bank closed its doors.

HARDWICK WON OUT FOR SENATE

WAS NOMINATED FOR THE SHORT TERM FROM GEORGIA

Macon, Ga., Sept. 4. Congressman Thomas W. Hardwick was nominated for the short term in the United States Senate to succeed the late Senator A. O. Bacon. A decisive vote was not cast until the fourteenth ballot.

After an all night session of the Georgia State Democratic convention which lasted for seventeen hours continuously the convention adjourned Tuesday night to meet again at noon.

Thirteen ballots were taken during the night, the last ballot before adjournment giving Hardwick 164; Slaton 112, Felder 93, Hutchens 4. Necessary to nominate, 188. Hardwick showed a gain from the beginning. The fourth ballot stood: Felder 1, Hardwick 146, Slaton 136, W. W. L. 1, Hardwick 136, Slaton 114 and Hutchens 11. From that time Hardwick's strength grew until he gathered in the necessary majority shortly after the convention met at noon today.

The convention was one of the most interesting political bodies to assemble in Georgia in many a day. Senator Hoke Smith was renominated to succeed himself, and Judge N. E. Harris was nominated by acclamation for Governor. Senator Smith's presence is believed to have had great influence in securing Hardwick's nomination. He was openly a supporter of the congressman against Governor Slaton and the other candidates for the short term to succeed Senator Bacon.

Hardwick was born December 9, 1872. His home is at Sandersville. He was twice a member of the Georgia legislature and is serving sixteenth successive term as a member of the lower house.

Carson May Enter Race

Kissimmee, Sept. 4.—The friends of the Hon. C. A. Carson of this city are strongly urging him to become a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Senator Bryan, provided the latter is appointed United States Judge.

It is believed here that ex-Senator Carson would make a strong race before the people because he has so many friends and acquaintances both personal and political throughout the state, who are enthusiastic for him. This together with the fact that Senator Carson is the father of the present Railroad Commission bill having succeeded in having it put through both branches of the legislature in 1897, and having been chairman of the committee which perfected it in 1899, to conform to the constitutional amendment adopted in 1898, would make him very strong before the people. He also introduced in 1897 the primary election bill which became the first primary introduced in 1897 the primary election bill which became the first primary election law ever enacted in Florida.

RUSSIANS LAND IN GREAT BRITAIN TO FLANK GERMANS IN BELGIUM

NEXT FEW DAYS WILL BE FULL OF SURPRISES IN THE GREAT GAME OF WAR

London, Sept. 4, 10 a. m. Germans now at Senlis, twenty-five miles from Paris and threaten destruction of city unless ultimatum complied with.

Russian force of seventy two thousand landed Aberdeen from Archangel passed through England for Belgium other troops on way via same route.

Copenhagen, Sept. 4, 10 a. m. Czar promises repayment of Belgian indemnity with interest when exacted from Germany.

Petrograde (St. Petersburg), Sept. 4, 10 a. m. Russian reverses at Osterode not affecting advance, which continues flanking the great German force north of Vistula.

Paris, Sept. 4, 10 a. m. City guarded at night by fleet of aeroplanes.

London, England, Sept. 4.—In spite of the fact that the French capital has been removed to Bordeaux and that the German army of the west is within thirty miles of the outer fortifications of Paris, a strange air of confidence prevails today among the allies. The general feeling seems to be that the German attack is wearing itself out in hammering away at the allied lines which give but do not break.

A dispatch from Amiens, France, to the Daily Mail dated Tuesday, September 1, declares that the Germans have taken possession of Amiens after three days' fighting.

Amiens is the capital of the department of Somme. It is seventy miles directly north of Paris. It is a manufacturing city, and has a population of 90,000. It is on the line of the railroad to Boulogne, and about fifty miles to the west of LaFere and other points in the department of Aisne, where there has been fighting during the past few days.

A daily News correspondent dispatch from Gourmay En Bray, near Reims says:

The German advance is amazing. A great battle is raging, with what result I know not, but I do know that the French and British armies are intact and still confident of ultimate success.

Incredible as it seems the tremendous masses of men that the Germans have hurled at the allies have not overwhelmed them. It seems that while the Germans have the weight the allies certainly have the wit and science and these, with reinforcements, will eventually win.

FERTILIZERS ARE AWAY UP

GERMANY CONTROLS POTASH WHICH IS NECESSARY FOR THE LAND

The closing of the German manufacturers of potash fertilizer farmers are all at sea in regard to the future. Germany has control of the potash of the world, and all manufacturers of fertilizer depend upon it for this ingredient. No fertilizer for fruits and generally vegetables is of much value without a quota of potash. One of the leading manufacturers here stated that it would be impossible now to put more than three per cent of potash in what is known as ammonia fertilizer and two per cent in the alkali.

In Florida and all southern potato sections potash is very essential to a good crop. Hastings potato operators do not know what to expect for next season's planting. Not one of the leading fertilizer agencies in this city would give the News any direct information as to what to expect for next year. As a rule they claim that all their contracts for 1914 delivery were completed or the stock on hand for their completion, and up to this time they had not made contracts for 1915. Porto Rico depends largely upon fertilizer. From the Porto Rico Journal of Aug. 19 the following concerning fertilizers is taken:

"Prices of fertilizers, particularly anything with potash in it, are now on a war footing.

"Fruit growers and others who are large purchasers of fertilizers have been advised by local dealers that prices have been advanced, following instructions from the manufacturers in the states, and it is said to be doubtful whether any potash fertilizers will long be obtainable at any price.

"Germany has a monopoly on the commercial potash deposits of the world, and with the present war on, exports of potash from Germany are wholly suspended.

"One fertilizer representative in San Juan has received instructions from the manufacturer not to offer any fertilizers for sale that contain more than five units of potash.

"Potash fertilizers are used extensively by the fruit growers of the Island, and particularly by the pineapple planters, to harden the fruit and add to its shipping and keeping qualities. It is also used by the citrus fruit growers for the same purpose.

"One fertilizer formula, applied to pineapples just before marketing, calls for thirteen units of potash. From now on, it is said, it will be next to impossible to buy this mixture, at least after present local stocks have been exhausted. And the price quoted by one dealer on this formula has jumped from approximately $45 per ton to $80.

"Small potash deposits recently have been discovered in Colorado and Idaho, but these deposits have not yet yielded a product suitable for commercial purposes.

"Recently another source of potash has been found in Kemp, or seaweed, and there is one small factory in California now making fertilizer potash from this source." — Produce News.

NEW RAILROAD COMMISSIONER

THE PRESENT BOARD DOES NOT GET RESULTS FOR THE SHIPPERS

From time to time the Reporter-Star has brought to the attention of the public the fact that the Florida Railroad Commission was responsible for the failure of the long and short haul act, passed by the legislature of 1913, to be put into effect. Although hearings were conducted at several points in the state several months ago the commission has never rendered a decision. The act remains on the statute books a dead letter. In its efforts to ascertain what's the matter the Reporter-Star asked Hon. Edwin Spencer, Jr., some time ago to tell what he knew about the disposition of the case. Mr. Spencer was the author of the long and short haul act and represented the Marion County Board of Trade before the commission when hearing on the act was held at Ocala. In a letter received today, Mr. Spencer says:

Lakeland, Fla., Aug. 28, '14 Mr. J. H. Reese, Editor, Orlando, Florida:

Friend Reese Your letter received. I have been waiting for the board of trade of Marion county to furnish me with a transcript of the record of the testimony taken at the Ocala hearing before I made an effort to write anything for publication on the long and short haul matter. They have promised to do so. This testimony would furnish you with a most interesting insight into the situation. I do not understand how any body of men in the world could have heard the testimony introduced at Ocala, even on the side of the railroad companies, without making some effort to afford relief under the long and short haul act; furthermore, there is absolutely no reasonable excuse why the railroad commissioners should not act upon the question one way or the other. It is one of those impenetrable mysteries which I cannot fathom. I imagine that the only way to ever get relief is to elect new commissioners.

Whenever I am furnished the testimony I spoke of I will make the entire matter public through your paper and you can rest assured that it will make some interesting reading.

Hoping that you are making a great success of your newspaper, I beg to remain,

Your friend, EDWIN SPENCER.

Reporter-Star.

"Our waiting fortune in South American trade" is the way they are referring to the big opportunities for commercial expansion that are at hand. With an adequate merchant marine, we can bring abundant treasures from South America and, what is better still, establish a strong federation between the United States and the South American republics.
