Bailiff Killed, 3 Wounded In Shooting Spree

By Deane Jordan And

Tom Giordano

ORLANDO - A Winter Park man who walked into the Orange County Courthouse this morning concealing a 12-gauge shotgun, a .45 automatic assault weapon, and a .38 cal. pistol In a knap-sack grabbed a bailiff's gun and opened fire killing one bailiff and critically wounding another balliff and a deputy sheriff. The gunman was also seriously wounded when his gunfire was Details were sketchy at press time but, according to Jack R. Stacey Jr., supervisor of community relations with the Orlando Police Department, the gunman, identified as Thomas Provenzano, 34, of 1510 Miller Ave., walked into the fourthfloor courtroom of Judge Concer about 10:15 a.m. carrying the knap-sack containing the weapons over his shoulders.

Provenzano, Stacey said, was scheduled to appear in court on a misdemeanor charge of having an open container (of an alcoholic beverage) when he was confronted by a bailiff who said he could not enter the courtroom without a "pat down," a body search for weapons.

Stacey said Provenzano was being searched when he grabbed the bailiff's gun from its holster and began firing, wounding the bailiff. A struggle ensued. Stacey sald, and a nearby corrections officer who heard the shots, ran to the balliff's aid, but was shot himself.

Another balliff who went to help was also shot and killed. Investigators said they don't know who wounded Provenzano during the gunfire exchange.

Authorities said they would not release the names of the dead bailiff until later today when the investigation is near complete and relatives have been notified.

Orlando Police Lt. Tom Huriburt said "as we understand it right now we've got one bailtif who was shot In the head and was DOA, another bailiff who was shot in the head and is critical, and the deputy sheriff who was shot in the neck and spine, and who also is in critical condition. We don't know at this point who shot the defendant. I'm sure you can understand the chaos around here. We've got investigators at the scene right now trying to piece this thing together."

One investigator said the defendant apparently had been free on bond pending this morning's initial court appearance on the charge of having an open container. There were also unconfirmed reports he faced a charge of resisting arrest.

The wounded gunman and the wounded officers were transported to Orlando Regional Medical Center in Orlando and Florida Hospital-Orlando and were reported in critical or serious condition. One investigator said the deputy with the neck and spine wound was not expected to live. The wounded bailtiff was identified as Alex Jacobs who was shot in the neck and spine, Provenzano, who was shot in the chest and who is serious condition, and deputy Harry Dalton, 53, also in critical condition.

Supreme Court Gets Seminole Death Appeal

The death sentence appeal of a Seminole County motorcycle gang member convicted of murdering an 18-year-old Orlando girl has reached the U.S. Supreme Court

Joseph R. "Crazy Joe" Spaziano, 38, a Florida death row inmate for eight years, was convicted for the murder of Laura Lynn Harberts in January 1976. Her decomposing body was discovered Aug. 23, 1973 in a dump near Altamonte Springs along with the body of another unidentifled woman.

The high court said it will review the Spaziano case and an Arizona case to determine whether a judge can ignore a jury's recommendation of life imprisonment and instead impose the death sentence

In Florida, once a defendant has been found guilty of first-degree murder, the defense can present aggravating and mitigating circumstances to the jury for their consideration when they recommend a sentence. The jury's suggestion, however, is not binding.

jury has been upheld by the Florida Supreme Court and indirectly approved by the Supreme Court which has allowed death sentences issued by judges who overrode their juries to stand.

According to Spaziano's attorneys, Craig Barnard and Mike Mello, of West Palm Beach, the nation's highest court will review the Seminole County case to determine if Circuit Judge Robert McGregor, who has twice sentenced Spaziano to death, acted within the prerogatives of his office.

McGregor said after the second sentencing that information about a prior conviction for raping and blinding a 16-year-old Orlando high school girl was not available to the jury during Spaziano's trial because the case was being appealed. McGregor said that had the jury had access to that information they may have come back with a recommendation of death.

McGregor issued his death sentence six months after the jury found Spaziano guilty and had recommended the life term.

The case came back to him for resentencing after the Florida Supreme Court ruled that McGregor erred in using a confidential report and improperly considered Spaziano's criminal record.

The court has agreed to review McGregor's discretionary right to overrule a jury and to determine if there was reasonable cause for McGregor to overrule the jury. - Deane Jordan

Senate, House Panels Pass Child Abuse Bill

State Rep. Art Grindle's bill cailing for the death penalty or life imprisonment for persons found guilty of aggravated child abuse that leads to death passed a state House committee Monday and a Senate committee this morning.

"We are well on our way," the Altamonte Springs' Republican said today of the bill he wrote as a result of the torture slaying of an Altamonte Springs five year old, Ursula Sunshine Assaid, by her mother's boyfriend, Donald Glenn McDougall.

McDougall was convicted of the crime by a circuit court jury in September and sentenced to 34 years in prison. Members of the jury said at the time they could not convict McDougall of murder because there was no proof shown of premeditation or intent to kill.

Under Grindle's bill, there is no need to prove premeditation or Intent.

Hold Outs Give Up

By Busan Loden

Herald Staff Writer They held out for six months and one week, but the two finalists in a Seminole County car dealer's promotion stunt reached a compromise and both will drive away pick-up trucks and will leave behind a boat and trailer and $689 in prize money.

Linda Bates and Eric Needle were freed Monday afternoon from the 40-foot ropes that had bound them to a truck and a boat trailer beneath a tarp at Willett Toyota on U.S. Highway 17-92. Longwood.

"I'm going home to shower and have a quiet dinner with the folks," said 18-year-old Needle of Longwood. "I will also drink a bottle of champagne and two six packs of beer." Alcohol, sex and drugs had been prohibited by contest Top on Ms. Bates' list of things to do: "A call to my son in Kentucky and a bubble bath.

Ms. Bates, 30, of Sanford, will also be celebrating her freedom with a party where, she said, "I'm going to tie everyone to a tree for six hours."

The pair said they decided Monday at college.

2 p.m. to give up their quest to be the sole winner of prizes that had an estimated value of $25,000. They will split the certificates for goods and services donated by various contest sponsors, but they made a deal with the dealership and neither contestant will take home the boat and trailer prize.

Willett general manager Jim Wilson said the dealership will keep the boat, trailer and cash. But instead of the single pick-up truck promised to the winner, both contestants will drive away in trucks. Needle gets a 1983 model and Ms. Bates an '84 pick-up. Sales manager Pat Miller valued each truck at $9,289.

In the final months of the contest after Willett bought Citrus Toyota the finalist who had outlasted 17 other contestants began to complain of living conditions at the site, where they slept on cots under an open tarp, washed in cold water from an outdoor garden hose and used portable tollets.

"I'm writing a book called Wasted Days and Wasted Nights," Ms. Bates said. She also wants to pursue a career in television. Needle plans to start

Angry Resident Complains

Leaky Gas Lines Spark Blast Fear

By Jane Casselberry Herald Staff Writer

Clogged and leaky gas lines that had at least one Sanford resident living in fear of an explosion, may be repaired - but similar problems exist with much of the gas lines in his neighborhood, he says. The Sanford Fire Department is in-

In addition to the feeling of danger, Ed Yokley, 72, of 102 Elliott Ave., said Monday he has trouble heating his house because of low gas pressure. Yokley has appealed to Sanford Police and Fire departments, and city and state officials, as well as the gas company, for help in rectifying the situation.

So far Florida Public Utilities Co., Sanford, has agree to replace only his lines. They informed Yokley Monday

"We've had it," Yokley had said earlier Monday, "I have lighted my furnace seven times since 2 a.m. and I am just getting over pneumonia." He said the cast iron pipe is so clogged with sand, dirt and water that the natural gas is not getting through. He said the pilot lights in the kitchen stove and the furnace often go out and when the gas works its way through it fills the house but the furnace and stove do not turn back on. He said the gas leaks have given his wife an allergy problem.

The Yokley's daughter, who lives in a house on the same property, can't use her furnace while theirs is on - and they can't run their stove and furnace at the same time.

But to Yokley it is more than a personal inconvenience.

"It's a potential bomb," the disabled veteran said of the clogged and leaky natural gas lines serving his home and other homes and businesses in the older sections of Sanford. "And nobody cares. it's covered up."

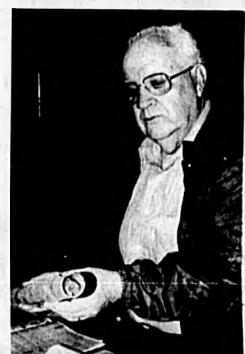

However, Arthur Maheu, manager of the Florida Public Utilities Co. office in Sanford, denied there was any danger of a disaster.

"We do a survey of the complete downtown area each year and we feel there is no danger. We do normal operating procedure monitoring as required by the regulatory laws." But Maheu sald no one has any idea how old the pipes are. "We researched it when our company bought it out in 1965 but there were no records. The gas company here has passed through several ownerships, including the city, and there is no way of knowing."

If there were he would evacuate the area. Neel said he has to wait until he evaluates his findings and talks to his superiors to determine what actions to take. If necessary, he said, he will contact the state fire mashal to look into Maheu said that the utilities company is going to replace the gas lines from the street to the meter at Yokley's house.

"It's a common procedure. When we have a leak we repair it or replace it with new pipe at no charge to the owner. We check pipe on a regular basis for corrosion. There is a lot of moisture in the soil where Yokley lives and moisture causes corrosion." Sanford City Commissioner Ned Yancey, who went out to check on the situation at Yokicy's request, said he also talked to Adrian Hall of 135 N.

2nd Demo To Challenge Christensen

Joy Anderson

A second Democrat - Joy Anderson - has announced an intention to run for the Seminole County Commission seat held by Republican Barbara Christensen.

A political newcomer, Mrs. Anderson, 39, longtime Tanglewood resident and a legal secretary for 15 years, said she was inspired to run due to the "inefficiency" of Mrs. Christensen, who is completing her first four-year term in office. "The people in Tanglewood have been plagued with water and sewer and traffic problems and we have not received any support or assistance from Barbara," said Mrs. Anderson, president of the Tanglewood Homeowners Association.

"My background in law should be a major asset. it's scary taking on an incumbent, but I feel I can win," she said.

Earlier, Carl Patin of Casselberry, a retired military officer, a member of the county's historical commission, announced his candidacy.

With two new wells already under construction in Hidden Lake Park, the Sanford City Commission authorized its staff Monday night to order work to begin on two additional wells in the same location.

The four new wells are being drilled to solve the water shortage the city has suffered with since six of its seven wells at the Mayfair Golf Course became contaminated with ethylene dibromide - EDB - and were shut down.

The need for the additional wells was emphasized over the weekend when owners of one of two irrigation wells - Frank and Mark Stenstrom - demanded payment of $40 daily for its use City Manager W.E. "Pete" Knowles told the city commission Monday night. The wells, near the golf course, were connected to the city system as an emergency and temporary measure a week ago. Owner of the second well, Patricia Stenstrom, did not demand payment, Knowles said.

The city manager told the commission the state Department of Environmental Regulation agreed to negotiate contracta directly with the Stenatroms to pay the daily charges and also to mended and the commission pay the Meridith Corp. of Orlando for the use of its power unit, fuel and operator for operating the agreed to permit the forcing of a new casing into the least contaminated well at Mayfair to seal off the EDB from leeching in. Knowles said the trial test would determine whether the other contaminated wells there can be saved. Estimating the cost of re-casing at $15,000 per well. Knowles warned, however, that a re-casing would reduce the water capacity of a well. He said the recasing may work in removing the EDB because the pesticide and suspected carcinogen is being found in the upper strata of the soil at the wells.

Sanford To Allow Salvage Yards In City

Herald Staff Writer

The Sanford City Commission has reversed a long-standing policy and agreed to allow salvage yards to locate in certain sections of the city.

The immediate beneficiary of the change may be David Redwine of Sanford who plans to build a salvage yard on a tract off Airport Boulevard and Albright Road. across from the Academy Manor subdivision.

Redwine told commissioners Monday night that there is a "big demand for used parts from old cars," adding that there isn't a salvage yard of the type he envisions between DeLand and Orlando.

Commissioners voted unanimously to change two ordinances to permit salvage yards as a "conditional" new salvage yards including requirements that they be use" in medium industrial zoned districts (MI-2) in the city. New salvage yards have been banned in the city for and that no open storage or processing activities be several years. The conditional use would mean that property owners wishing to build salvage yards would have to get approval from the city's planning and zoning

"My salvage yard would fit in the middle to serve the blic," he said.

Before Redwine can begin his project, he must not only get the advisory board's approval, but also must Redwine said that as soon as all useable parts are wait until changes in the new ordinances are adopted

> The commission also approved stiff regulations for completely enclosed with 7-foot wood or masonry fences visible from public streets or nearby property. Burning at the salvage yards is banned, adequate parking must be provided and no salvage yard must be closer than 100 feet to a residential area, the regulations state.

Court Permits System For Promoting Blacks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Detroit Mayor Coleman Young says the Supreme Court's decision to permit a quota system for promoting blacks in the Detroit Police Department means the city can continue to "correct the results" of past discrimination.

The justices refused to review the quota system that a federal judge in Michigan approved as a way to alleviate historical discrimination against black officers on the force, which reaches back to the early 1940s.

The court did agree to review a different discrimination case, giving a boost to women members of the U.S. Jaycees who are challenging a ruling that keeps them from leadership posttions in the business group.

Dismissai Asked in 101 Murder Case

By Deane Jordan Herald Staff Writer

Faced with a January trial date, the attorney for a 15-year-old Winter Park girl charged with the murder of a new-born infant has filed a motion to have the case dismissed.

Stephanie Morgan, of Denise St., is scheduled to be tried as an adult before Circuit Court Judge S. Joseph Davis for second-degree murder in the Oct. 17 death of the child. Davis is scheduled to hear the motion Wednesday.

The Paris High School student was indicted ... v. 8 after a baby was found behind her bed in her parent's home. The infant had been wrapped in a towel, put in a paper bag and stuffed into a County Medical Examiner Dr. Sara Irrgang, the infant was born alive with normal body functions and died of asphyxiation.

Miss Morgan's attorney, Public Defender John Galuzzo, has filed a motion to have the case dismissed based upon sentencing options for juvenile offenders.

Galluzzo declined to comment on the motion, but Assistant State Attorney Kurt Erlenbach said the motion maintains that the Florida statute that affects the Morgan case is unconstitutional, constitutes cruel and unusual punishment, and denies Miss Morgan equal protection under the law.

The motion asserts that according to the statutes, because she was indicted,

According to Assistant Seminole Miss Morgan must be tried and sentenced as an adult.

Miss Morgan was indicted rather than brought before juvenile court authorities because the State Attorney's office generally seeks indictments from a grand jury in murder cases and that trying Miss Morgan as an adult is legally a more clear, shorter process, Erlenbach said.

If Miss Morgan had been 18 when she was indicted, the motion asserts, she could be sentenced as either an adult or as a youthful offender. Unlike someone who is 18 when indicted, Miss Morgan is ineligible for youthful offender treatment, which could include a lighter sentence if convicted. Also, she would serve her time in a prison specifically designed for younger defendants. Erlenbach explained

In October, the teenager's mother took the girl to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford after she complained of pains and uncontrollable bleeding. according to Seminole County sheriff's spokesman John Spolski.

A physician at the hospital, who suspected that the girl had given birth. contacted the sheriff's department the next day, though Miss Morgan denied giving birth.

After the girl's parents gave the deputies permission to search their home, the body of a full-term infant was found inside.

Miss Morgan is at her parent's home on bond awaiting trial. If convicted, she faces a life sentence.

Gunman Assaults Fern Park Car Dealer, Employees

The owner of a Fern Park car dealership and four of his employees reported they were threatened by an Irrate man and two accomplices who held them at the point of a gun and knife.

Sheldon Polakoff, the 53-year-old owner of R&S Auto Sales, 1800 U.S. Highway 17-92, said three men entered the rear of his business about 6:10 p.m. Monday.

One of the suspects was identified by the victims as the brother of a man who had jointly owned a car with sales manager Mark F. Collini. Collini said he had sold suspect's brother $1,600 of a $2,800 debt which he was in the process of paying off. Collini said his former pariner's brother confronted him and demanded the money owed his brother, which he said he was now owed to him. Collini told investigators that he referred the man to Polakoff when the man said he would take the title to a 1972 Corvette that he saw parked at the dealership in lieu of the cash. a Seminole County sheriff's report said.

The three men entered Polakoff's office and restated their demands. Polakoff said he ordered them to leave and the former customer hit him in the mouth, knocking him to the floor, pulled a nickel-plated hadgun and ordered Polakoff and three employees into a corner of the office. The victims said a second suspect also threatened them with a knife, the report said.

The trio ran from the business and the victims said they attempted to block the suspects' exit, but the trio drove through a parking lot and made their escape onto U.S. Highway 17-92.

They got neither the cash nor the title to the Corvette. the sheriff's report said.

U.S., Vatican Establish Full Diplomatic Relations

VATICAN CITY (UPI) - The Vatican and the United States established full diplomatic relations today, clearing the way for the naming of the first U.S. ambassador to the Holy See in 116 vears.

The Rev. Romeo Panciroll, the chief Vatican spokesman, issued the 55-word statement at noon Vatican City time. A similar announcement was made in Washington today at 8 a-m.

The White House was expected to follow later in the day with an announcement that President Reagan will nominate William Wilson, now his personal envoy to the Vatican, as the new U.S. ambassador to the Holy See.

All legal obstacles were removed late last year. when Reagan signed legislation that ended a 116-year prohibition against using federal monies to maintain a full-fledged diplomatic mission at the Vatican.

At the time, White House officials were intentionally vague about whether Reagan would go so far as to name a full-fledged ambassador and run the risk of allenating the Rev. Jerry Falwell, a staunch political loyalist. and others who oppose too close a relationship with the Vatican.

'Civil liberties groups criticized the move as a violation of the constitutional principle of a separation between religion and the affairs of

French Soldier Killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Assailants firing automatic weapons and hurling grenades killed one French paratrooper and wounded two others at their observation post in West Beirut.

The latest attack on the multinational peace-keeping force came Monday as Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem returned to Beirut from talks in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, having apparently falled to reach a breakthrough on a security plan for his nation.

Some American officials hope the proposed security plan, calling for separation of warring Lebanese factions and declaring Beirut airport where the Marines are based to be a neutral zone, will allow for the withdrawal of U.S. forces.

The three French paratroopers were hit in a blast of grenade and gunfire from assatlants who attacked the soldiers' observation post on the north wall of the defenses surrounding their headquarters in West Beirut.

The paratrooper killed in the attack was the 85th fatality in the French unit serving in the Beirut multinational force.

Honda To Expand In U.S.

TOKYO (UPI) - Honda Motor Co. today announced plans for the expansion and automation of its U.S. automobile and motorcycle production facilities that could make it the largest Japanese car dealer in America.

Honda this year will spend $240 million to automate its car factory in Marysville, Ohio while doubling the plant's work force.

The automaker hopes the move will increase the plant's annual production rate from 55,000 to 150,000 units by May, Honda President Tadashi Kume told a news conference today.

It is hoped the plant - Honda's only auto manufacturing facility in the United States will step up its production rate to 300,000 units annually by 1988, said Takanori Sonoda, a Honda public relations officer.

In line with Honda's expansion, the company will increase the number of its U.S. auto dealers to 1,000 from the current 820.

FLORIDA

Panel Votes To Ban Drinking While Driving

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - The state's top highway safety official says school children find It difficult to understand why they should not drink and drive while it is legal in Florida to drink while behind the wheel.

That inconsistency prompted Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles Director Bob Butterworth to endorse a bill Monday that would ban the drinking of hard liquor, beer and wine by drivers and their passengers while on the road. The measure (HB 129) by Rep. Larry Shackelford, D.Palmetto, was narrowly approved by a House criminal justice subcommittee. The vote was 5-4. But critics of the bill said it goes too far by applying the ban to passengers. They said this would unfairly penalize, for example, people riding vans en route to football games.

Shackelford said it is necessary to apply the ban to passengers as well as drivers to make the proposed law enforceable because drivers about to be stopped could merely pass their glass, can or bottle to a passenger.

Overtown Trial Delay?

MIAMI (UPI) - Trial is scheduled to begin today for a white former policeman charged with manslaughter in the shooting a young black man, but officials said the trial could be postponed again.

Dade County Circuit Judge David Gersten will decide today whether the trial of Luis Alvarez can begin, an aide said.

The trial had been scheduled to begin last Tuesday but Gersten granted a one-week delay because both defense and prosecution attorneys decided at the last minute to call additional witnesses who were not readily available. Alvarez, 33, is charged with manslaughter in the fatal shooting of Nevell Johnson Jr., 20, on Dec. 28, 1982. The shooting, in a video game parlor in Miami's Overtown ghetto, touched off three days of racial violence and threatened to disrupt Mlami's King Orange New Year's Eve parade.

At Seminole School Board Meeting

Blueprint To Upgrade Education Tops Agenda

Herald Staff Writer

Despite Florida's slip in the national education rankings, Seminole County's public school system is continuing its march toward excellence and school personnel are scheduled at Wednesday's school board meeting to outline how they plan to step up the pace.

The 4 p.m. meeting will be held at the county school office, 1211 Mellonville Ave., Sanford.

In the past decade, the state has fallen in educational pursuits ranging from Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores to teacher salaries, but local school officials say the slippage has not occurred here.

Florida's average SAT score last year was 889. At the same time. Seminole had an average test score of 915, second in the nation only to the state of New Hampshire where a 925 average was recorded.

While Florida's student per teacher ratio was 38th in the nation. Seminole was far above the state average with a ratio of 1 teacher per 25 students in elementary school; 1 teacher per 27 students in middle school and 1 teacher per 29 students in high school. And Seminole school authorities said the teacher-to-student ratio would be much lower if art and music and other specialty instructors were included.

increased from $861 to $2,276 in 1982, advancing from 28th to 27th among the states. The per pupil expenditure in Seminole County at the same time was $2,600.

In response to a letter last August from State Commissioner of Education Ralph Turlington that Seminole County "do its share" to boost Florida education into the top quartile in the nation, the school board is prepared to pledge assistance.

Toward that and, school officials are:

 Rescheduling more than 10,000 students to max-Imize concentration of student effort in academic course work, including a mandatory six-period day for grades 9. 10 and 11 and a requirement that seniors take at least four periods a day.

 Expanding advanced placement classes and writing enhancement program to include grade 9 as well as 10.

 Revising curriculum offerings to eliminate "frill" courses and concentrate on those with more substantive

 Expanding computer assisted instruction capabilities and developing a K-12 course in computer education. The school system is also developing an Inexpensive micro-computer program providing

It was also noted that Florida's expenditures per pupil extensive hands-on experience in an elementary school with a large percentage of minority students.

 Developing a new pupil progression plan and district criteria which will include the infusion of newly adopted state standards of excellence.

Developing a new series of diagnostics tests on state-mandated minimum performance standards at the elementary and secondary levels.

 Expanding in-servive education programs for teachers and administrators, including a summer institute for math and science teachers.

 Developing a new principal evaluation form which concentrates, in part, on classroom observation-

 Enhancing community relations efforts to solicit support for educational programs from private citizens and the business community. To further boost SAT scores, school officials say they plan to counsel college-bound students to take advantage of upper level course offerings; to increase advanced placement (AP) course offerings; to increase the number of students taking AP courses; to take steps to improve the test scores of minority students; to increase administrator and teacher sensitivity to the need for higher performance expectations in all subject

Supreme Court Hearing Florida Voting Challenge

PENSACOLA (UPI) - Attorneys representing a group of Escambia County voters are in Washington today to challenge at-large elections before the U.S. Supreme

The heart of the issue is whether the county's at-large election system prevents blacks from exercising their voting strength as they would in a district election

But whether the Florida Constitution violates the U.S. Constitution also is in question.

The case dates back to 1977 when a group of blacks filed suit against the county claiming the at-large system consistently gave white candidates a better chance of winning because whites outnumber blacks in the

in the at-large system, all county residents vote on all five commissioners. In the district system, each commissioner is elected by the voters in the district in which he resides.

In handing down his decision on the case in 1978, U.S. District Judge Winston Arnow reasoned the state of Florida adopted at-large commission elections in 1901 with the intent of leaving blacks out of the electoral process.

Previous cases prevented Arnow from using that reasoning as anything more than background in deciding Escambia County's at-large elections should be done away with.

Lawyers James Blacksher and Larry Menefee, who will represent the plaintiffs in the hearing in Washington, are expected to point to that reasoning in their case. Washington attorney Charles Rhyne represents a coalition of two current commissioners who oppose the plaintiffs. The coalition has said the at-large system is mandated by the state constitution.

The coalition contends the suit should have been filed against the state of Florida and a ruling on the current case could leave the state with a constitutional provision that does not apply in Florida.

...Blast Fear Sparked By Old, Leaky Gas Lines In City

Elliott Avc., who is also having a problem getting enough heat because of low gas pressure. Yancey said Maheu assured him that his crews would be replacing the gas lines on Yokley's property as soon as possible - today weather permitting.

Nothing was said about those at the Hall residence.

Yokley said he is concerned for the safety of his grandchildren because the pipe runs under his daughter's house, which he said is against federal plumbing codes.

He pointed out a section of pipe with splits in it, which was removed by the gas company when temporary repairs were made and to the dirt clogging it up.

The Yokleys bought the property in 1979 along with their daughter and son-in-law Sharon and Richard Racine, of 100 Ellioit Ave. The Racines and their three children live in the main house and the Yokleys live in the apartment in back of the house.

Water leaks into the line from artesian wells in the Celery Avenue area, Yokley said, pointing to the water running down the gutter in front of his daughter's house. He said it was coming from a leak in the gas pipe. He said there has been a problem for four years with the gas system. Gas coming up from leaky pipes has killed the grass in several spots. There were several places in the yard where the gas company had dug up the pipe to make temporary repairs and replaced the sod. 'I'm a layman, but I'm not a nut," said Yokley, "I want a new high pressure line back to my meter to replace the old

The matter came to a head just three days before Christmas when a new furnace was installed in his house to replace one damaged by lightning. The installer noticed some problems with the connections previously made by the gas company, Mrs. Yokley said.

He said he is particularly concerned about gas leaks because 20 years ogo he was living in Wilmington, Dela., when five blocks were wiped out because of a gas explosion caused by "rotten" pipes.

Yokley called Clyde Stephens, consumer affairs specialist, Public Service

Commission, in Tallahassee Friday. Stephens said it was the only complaint he has received so far concerning the area. "He (Yokley) complained about the condition of the gas lines, which appeared to be deteriating," he said. "I refered it to my electrical and gas department and they will look into it. I really couldn't say when. I can either send the complaint to the company or refer to my department."

"Just from the call I've received from the customer, from what he's told me, there is a problem and we'll investigate that, we'll look into it. He did not indicate that it was very severe, he didn't Indicate that nature."

Mayor Lee P. Moore, who was also contacted by Yokley, when interviewed by the Herald explained that natural gas lines are low pressure with about one-quarter pound of pressure per Yokley's home is in an area with a high water table.

"A break is easy to detect because gas coming up through the soil will kill the grass. I told Yokley the city does not have regulatary control over a natural gas utility and if his pipeline had a hole the water in the soil was going to get into it," Moore said.

"In digging up the pipe if it were hit by a shovel the line would have to be replaced. Leaking gas could be a cause for alarm, but it actually is not dangerous. If it were a pipe with 40-to-50 pounds of pressure going through, the line would probably be dangerous." Moore said.

Moore said manufactured gas with a high moisture content was distributed through the gas line when it was installed. About 20 years ago, it was switched to natural gas and the inside of the pipes had to dry out and thus there was flaking in the lines. Periodically furnaces have to be cleaned out, but it is not as dangerous as some might think,

Commissioner Milton Smith who visited with Yokley and talked with Maheu yesterday said Maheu has agreed to put in a new service from main to meters on Yokley property and this should eliminate his problem.

Synthetic Fuels, Synthetic Profits

The federal Synthetic Fuels Corp. has come to another one of those heads-you-win, tails-I-lose crossroads that are the legacy of a poorly designed federal program. This time it's the Great Plains Coal Gasification Project that's hanging in the balance — a 90 percent completed facility for mining coal and converting it into synthetic natural gas. The government has already invested close to $1 billion in the Great Plains venture, and now the private companies involved in the project have threatened to shut it down if the SFC doesn't cough up $2 billion more.

The Great Plains companies have calculated that once their project is operating, it will cost them far more to produce synthetic gas than anyone will be willing to pay for it. The companies say they will lose $800 million in the project's first decade of operation, and they'd rather just quit now — unless the SFC guarantees their profitability by agreeing to pay them the difference between their production costs and the market price for gas.

At first, the SFC considered this a bluff, and rejected the companies' price support proposal out of hand. But under White House pressure, the SFC agreed in November to reconsider it. Since then, most of the congressional and public criticism has focused on the SFC's inability to face down the other side in what one critic called "a giant game of chicken." The SFC's acquiescence in the price support scheme, said the Democratic chairman of the House SFC oversight committee, was "based on little more than veiled corporate threats and back room arm-twisting."

He's probably right. The General Accounting Office's periodic studies of the Great Plains project make it clear that the $800 million the companies say they will lose without price supports is something of an accounting fiction. If one adds in the tax benefits for which the Great Plains project makes its parent companies eligible, the more likely result is that they will see a positive annual cash flow for the first several years of the project's operation — and earn an average annual return on their investment of 13 percent over the next 20 years. They could, indeed, make as much as a 26 percent return each year, if energy prices rise as much as the Energy Department has predicted in its most favorable 20-year price projection.

The likelihood of such after-tax profits—although they are far from certain—suggests that the Great Plains companies have more incentive to keep the project going than they are letting on. Moreover, almost all their tax benefits would be lost, and those already taken would have to be repaid, if the project were abandoned. Calling the Great Plains companies' bluff would probably have been a good gamble.

But that is not what the SFC's critics ought to be most upset about. The far more serious problem with the nation's synthetic fuels program is that such large amounts of the taxpayers' money are being spent to induce private companies to undertake projects that, without such federal help, are hopelessly uneconomic. Under these circumstances, the government will always have more at stake in the projects' success than the private companies for which it is trying to create synthetic profits, and thus the SFC will always be vulnerable to one or another kind of "arm-twisting."

If Congress had determined that, for security purposes, the nation needs a synthetic gas facility, no matter how uneconomic, it would have been cheaper to simply build it. If the idea was to get a head start on a new energy technology that won't be needed for many more years, it would have made more sense to put money into research and development than into targe-scale commercialization of a product that doesn't yet have any commercial viability. But Congress chose neither course, and the result has been a series of no-win decisions.

"Does your mommy let you stay out and play in the snow for a LONG TIME?"

If the recent freeze has left your plants a disaster, imagine what it's like at Walt Disney World and Epcot where, according to Uday Yadav, commercial horticulturist for Semirfole and Orange counties, the temperature dropped as low as 12 degrees on the Christmas weekend and snow fell on the New Year's weekend.

With the real world intruding on the fantasy of Disney's ever blooming, ever green tropic wonderland, their gardeners have been kept busy replacing all of the acres of flower beds.

Yadav said that plant nurseries in Seminole County recorded a low of 17 degrees and even the hardiest shrubs such as ligustrum, podacarpus, and piracantha were hurt. Also killed were the usually hardy annuals, such as snapdragons, petunias, and calendulas.

Many azaleas, which are sensitive to cold, had their stems split from the freeze.

Palms, punk tree, silk oak, bottlebrush, eucalyptus and Australian pines were all hit, he said.

Yadav has some advice for those wondering what to do with their frozen plants. Don't prune those shrubs yet, he said, wait until the weather is warmer. If pruned now they may start to sprout with a few warm days and the new growth will be vulnerable to the next cold spell. If I hard at this point to tell how much of the bush is permanently damaged and also if the dead growth is left on it will protect the live growth to some extent in the event of another freeze.

The important commercial plant industry in Seminole County was severely damaged, but at this point Yadav doesn't know how much.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

The Real Cost Of Ideology

The biggest change that Americans may experience in 1984 is in telephone service. The new year brings the split up of American Telephone & Telegraph from its local operating units. The changeover to a different system may produce a lot of public unhappiness.

For as long as this writer can remember. Ma Bell has provided the finest telephone service in the world. One could use a coin phone in a hamlet and quickly reach out and contact someone across the country or halfway across the world. This is not the case in most countries. Even in the advanced countries of Western Europe, placing a long distance call can be a nightmare.

They why has Ma Bell been treated this way? Who is unhappy? Well, Ma Bell was a victim of its success. It grew to a size that aroused the ire of those who regard bigness as a social crime. Liberals don't like bigness. Let's see how they like a fragmented telephone system. And purist conservative advocates of deregulation also wanted the breakup. They too may be very unhappy with the results.

Various press reports suggest that grand confusion lies ahead. These who have telephones in their homes may find that they will receive not one but several bills each month for different services. They will have to pick and choose among the services, though they may lack the expertise to make an intelligent judgment.

No one is suggesting that the breakup will lead to lower rates. On the contrary, there is general agreement that the cost of phone service will rise for most users. The increases are likely to be substantial. Already there are demands that public agencies step in and provide subsidies for citizens with low incomes.

And what happens when one's phone goes dead? No longer will one be able to contact the phone company and get a repairman in short order. The trouble may be in a long distance line, and the person to contact about phone trouble may be in a city hundreds of miles away. Syndicated columnist Jack Kilpatrick recently told a horror story about his phone trouble in Woodville, Va., and his discussions with a repair center in Baltimore, Md.

How much better off we would be if in 1981 a federal court had accepted AT&T's motion to dismiss the antitrust suit that led to the breakup.

The impending problem with phone service in this country is a reminder of the period in ideology, whether liberal or conservative. A real conservative, to be sure operates not on the basis of ideology but of leaving well enough alone. Or, to quote Bert Lance, with his homespun humor, "Don't fix it if it ain't broke." And phone service under Ma Bell definitely wasn't out of order. It was a wonder.

A measure of deregulation makes good sense, as in the case of the railroads, but it isn't applicable everywhere. When the phone bills soar in 1984 and the repairs prove difficult, the American people will have occasion to think about the real cost of ideology.

Taylor On The Media

NEW YORK (NEA) — The debate over the media's coverage of American military operations is heating up, and the media will be surprised to learn that there are very definitely two sides to the question. The latest well-known figure to wade into the fray is Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, a former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff who served as our ambassador to South Vietnam in 1964 and 1965.

In an interview with the New York Times, Gen. Taylor — now a spry 82 and appropriately equipped with frank opinions — listed as one of the three major lessons of the Vietnam War the proposition that "you should never let TV on the battlefield." In the case of Vietnam, he said, television "brought the war into the living rooms, highly damaging the national morale and the support for the war."

The media's response to that isn't hard to imagine. A television camera is, after all, a morally neutral piece of equipment: It can only transmit or record what is there to be seen. If the American people don't like what they see on their TV screens, why shouldn't they have a right to bring it to a halt?

To which Gen. Taylor would presumably respond by pointing out that, while a television camera may be morally neutral, television cameramen often aren't. As he said to the Times. "In World War II the press was admirable because they felt they were American citizens and that their country was sacred. In Vietnam there was the feeling on the part of some of the press that their task was to destroy the American command and work against what was being done."

Manifestly, how a television cameraman (or his field producer, not to mention the editors back home) feels about a particular war is going to influence what his camera transmits or records, and what appears on TV screens across America. In the course of protesting the media's exclusion from the Grenada operation the Times itself actually reprinted the famous World War II still photo of U.S. soldiers raising Old Glory atop Iwo Jima's Mount Suribacht — the suggestion being that this was the sort of uplifting reportage America would be denying itself if it excluded reporters and photographers from future battlefields. But that isn't quite what the media have actually been delivering lately.

Not long ago one of the TV networks - apparently with Syrian cooperation - treated its audience to a look at the results of some recent U.S. military operations. First there were some dramatic close-ups of the twisted wreckage of Lt. Robert O. Goodman Jr.'s plane, downed by Syrian anti-aircraft missiles while on a reconnaissance mission over Lebanon. Then we were treated to shots of an American correspondent walking through a crater left by one of the 16-inch shells fired at Syrian positions by the battleship New Jersey. According to U.S. government reports, 11 such shells were fired that day, and you can be sure the Syrians didn't invite American television to photograph the damage done by the ones that hit their targets. But this one landed harmlessly in a field, and the newsman's commentary, as he strolled along tossing shell fragments aside, deftly suggested the futility (or worse) of the whole U.S. effort in Lebanon.

But, as the Times thereupon asked Gen. Taylor, what then ought to be the role of the press during a military conflict?

"Reporting what they see," he replied — but then went on: "And in most cases it should take some clearance from senior people that that information (is) not damaging to the waging of the war,"

FARMING WORLD Farmers Idling Worst Land

By Sonja Hillgren UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although it is both well known and accepted that farm program participants idle their worst land and increase output on their best land, federal auditors have criticized adherence to that practice last year.

An audit by the Agriculture Department's Office of the Inspector General estimated that 10,442 farms in 20 key states idled 975,000 acres of land that was generally less productive than the farm's average. Although the practice was legal, auditors had reservations about it.

"This created PIK (payment-in-kind) entitlements that were substantially higher than what the government received in decreased production of commodities," said the audit released last week.

The audit, based on a sample of 1,157 farms, concluded that the 10,442 farmers would have received $47.7 million less in surplus crops they got for cutting acreage had their benefits been adjusted downward to reflect the actual productivity of their idled acreage.

The producers on those farms are scheduled to receive $259.8 million in program payments.

Under most recent farm programs, producers were required to idle land to qualify for price supports for crops they produced.

But they got no payments that would directly replace crops not produced as they did in the 1983 payment-in-kind program. It was designed to reduce price-depressing surpluses by giving those surpluses to farmers who idled acreage.

Officials winked at the idling of the worst land under former programs and often have said that it is a good way to take out of production land that should not be farmed. But the auditors said another consideration was involved when farmers got benefits worth more than crops they would have produced on idled land.

A Texas farmer, for example, combined an irrigated farm in one county and a dryland farm in another county as a unit for purposes of payment-in-kind accounting. He bought the dryland farm in February 1983, which happened to be after the program was announced.

Then he planted most of his crops on the irrigated farm, where yields are higher and more reliable than on his dryland farm.

He planted all his feed grains on irrigated land and 335.5 acres of irrigated wheat and 56 acres of dryland wheat. His idled acreage included 359 acres of irrigated land and 1,132 dryland acres.

Under future farm programs, the auditors said, idled acreage on farms with both irrigated and dry land should be as productive as land planted with crops. Or payments in future programs could be adjusted to reflect productivity of idled acreage.

Program administrators said such provisions would create administrative problems.

KAL Tragedy Question Need For B-1

WASHINGTON — The Soviets' air defense forces in the Far East are surprisingly incompetent. This is the conclusion of intelligence analysts who have studied the circumstances surrounding the destruction of a Korean airliner last September after it violated Soviet air space.

The incident has convinced some former advocates of the B-1 bomber that this $30 billion program may no longer be needed. The whole purpose of the B-1 is to give the United States the ability to penetrate Soviet air defenses.

The tragic odyssey of Flight 007 showed that an unarmed civilian airliner — its lights on and its radio sending out a frequent signal, flying at a sitting-duck 35,000 feet — was able to penetrate Soviet air space for more than two hours before it was finally tracked down and destroyed.

According to top-secret intelligence analyses, the Russians never even succeeded in identifying what kind of plane they were chasing over some of their most vital military areas.

The best of the Soviet interceptor forces never got within 20 miles of the Korean airliner as it flew over the Kamchatka Peninsula, which is home base for the Soviet Pacific Fieet's ballistic missile submarines. The airliner continued in a straight line over the Sea of Okhotsk and Sakhalin Island, heading toward the Soviets' principal base of Vladivostok.

The Soviets scrambled eight fighters, which could fly twice as fast as the lumbering airliner. Yet only one fighter even came close to the intruder — and then only as it was leaving Soviet air space for a second time.

Intelligence sources, citing top-secret reports on the tragedy, described the Soviet failure to my associate Dale Van Atta. There was an abysmal lack of coordination, they said, between the Soviet radar facilities on Kamchatka and Sakhalin.

After first confusing the Korean 7A7 with a U.S. reconnaissance plane that had been in the area earlier, the Kamchatka radar controllers failed to "hand over" the intruder to their comrades on Sakhalin. Crucial time was lost before anyone realized it was the same plane.

When the single Su-15 fighter finally locked onto the airliner and fired two missiles at it, only one hit the target.

The Su-15's heat-seeking missile found the airliner; its radar-guided missile missed.

What does all this have to do with the B-1 bomber? Simply this: The Soviets' inept performance against a civillan airliner was dramatic evidence that they would do even worse against U.S. B-52 bombers.

These old bombers were considered virtually obsolete. But they emit no radio signal or blinking light, can fly low and take evasive action to avoid radar and interceptors, and have supersophisticated electronic equipment to foil Soviet radar.

It now seems certain in light of the September incident that our B-52s are capable of penetrating Soviet airspace. Then why spend $30 billion on a new plane designed to do the same thing?

Instead of wasting time and money on the B-1, some defense analysts recommend concentrating on the Stealth bomber. One secret Pentagon report says the Stealth could be ready by 1991. Meanwhile, the United States can safely depend on its B-52s, with their airlaunched cruise missiles — each of which is 1,000 times harder for even competent air-defense forces to spot nan a 747.

DRUG UPDATE: Both Johnson & Johnson and the Food and Drug Administraton have mishandled the controversy over the painkiller Zomax. I've already reported misleading statements the drug firm made in a "briefing paper" it circulated on Capitol Hill and inside the FDA.

Now investigators for an FDA oversight subcommittee, headed by Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., suspect that the company misrepresented several FDA positions on the drug's cancer-causing potential. The investigators also found that seven months after Zomax was OK'd for general use, the FDA had failed to analyze adverse data on the drug, which has been linked to at least 15 deaths and 2,200 allergic reactions, 500 of which were life-threatening.

The subcommittee sleuths analyzed the FDA data and found that only 14 percent of the patients, who had mild-to-serious allergic reactions to Zomax, had experienced similar reactions from taking the drug earlier. This means a doctor usually has no clue that the drug being prescribed could cause problems.

Tom Olson's Profile In Athletic Courage

Big brother's shadows are tough to elude. Sometimes the shadow helps, but more times than not it's just a painful reminder of something you have to live up to.

Lake Mary sophomore Tom Olson has been in a shadow for several years now. It belongs to his senior brother Bob, one of the top 141-pound wrestlers in Central Florida for the past three

When you're a 122-pound wrestler like Tom, you always seem to run into the competition's best. The lower weight classes are consistently dominated by four-year varsity performers. The going is tough, especially when Bob is consistently having his hand raised in victory and Tom is expected to follow the family pattern.

There was a time last year when a particularly tough loss reduced the younger Olson to tears. Lake Mary coach Frank Schwartz remembers the occasion and he also recalls that older brother Bob was not too sympathetic. Upon seeing his brother Tom in tears, Bob jumped all over his case and told him to grow up.

Well, Saturday night at Lake Mary High School against Ocala Forest, Tom Olson grew up. Putting on one of the most courageous performances in prep wrestling history. Tom battled back from an 8-0 deficit - and a broken foot - to pin Dexter Johnson with just two seconds left in the match.

"That won us the match," raved Schwartz about his tough 121-pounder. "I've never seen such guts. We knew his foot was hurt, but we couldn't get Tom to come off the mat. He just kept saying, 'one more period. Just one more period."

As far as Schwartz and assistant coach Doug Peters could tell, the break probably occured in the second period. Olson fell behind, 4-0, after one period and then slipped back to an 8-0 deficit entering the third period.

But the pain - nor Johnson - was too much to bear. Even though he was down, 8-0, he wasn't out. Definitely a profile in courage. The gritty sophomore used a switch for a reversal in the closing minute to pull within 8-2, then took Johnson down with a half-nelson in the final 30

He maintained the half-nelson for 15 seconds before driving Johnson's shoulders to the mat. As the clock ticked down, so did the emotion of the match as the crowd cheered on Olson exuberantly. Finally with just two seconds to go in the match and Oison still trailing. 8-5, the referee's hand slapped the mat for a Lake Mary pin and Tom was mobbed by his appreciative teammates.

Lake Mary went on to win the match, 34-27, to extend its unbeaten record to 7-0. Schwartz and Peters both pointed to Olson's victory as the turning point in the match.

"Tom just went nuts that last period," said Peters. "He went animal on him (Johnson). He wouldn't quit because he knew how important it was too us.

Although Tom broke loose from a long shadow Saturday, he also received the other break, too. That one came in a small bone at the top part of his foot, which will sideline the young phenom for four to aix weeks, according to the doctor.

Considering Saturday's performance, however, don't put too much stock in that prognosis. Sounds like young Olson may be a quick healer - shadow or no shadow.

Alzado Nervously Awaits Showdown With Johnny

LOS ANGELES (UPI) - Without as much as putting on a pair of shoulder pads, Johnny Carson has done what the Washington Redakina' famed "Hogs" have been unable to do - scare Lyle Alzado.

While his Los Angeles Raiders' teammates were to take today off in their preparation for the Jan. 22 Super Bowl against the Redskins, the 6-foot-3, 260-pound Alzado was to spend a nervous day preparing for late-night television.

"Two of my dreams have been to be on a Super Bowl championship team and to guest on the 'Tonight Show' with Johnny Carson," Alzado said Monday. "I'd rather face eleven broken nose, teeth-missing, helmet-wearing Redskin gorillas than to face Johnny Carson. I hope I can handle the pressure."

Alzado and his teammates have been handling the football-field pressure. Playoff victories over the Pittsburgh Steelers and Seattle Scahawks gave the Raiders a berth in Super Bowl XVIII Jan. 22 at Tampa, Fla.

In fact, the Blue Demons, ranked No. 3 in the country, nearly had their bell rung in the rolling hills of Moraga, Calif., Monday night - escaping 76-74 against St. Mary's College thanks to a tip-in of a missed foul shot by Marty Embry with 20 seconds left.

St. Mary's? Well, the Gaels were not given much of a chance in their own conference, the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. And with good reason. They entered Monday night's game having lost 10 of 13.

"We went in thinking we had it won before we started," Meyer said. "We knew St. Mary's record wasn't indicative of the team they had. But that's no excuse for us not getting back on defense.

Super Bowl Isn't Super For Majority Of Players

NEW YORK (UPI) - You probably can't even remember where you were five days ago, but you already know for sure where you'll be on Jan. 22.

Miss the Super Bowl? Never. But would you believe there are people in the NFL, so called big people and plenty of players, too, who do not attend or even bother watching the game? It's true.

Joe Montana, who had a pretty good workout against the Redskins in Washington Sunday, told me he probably won't watch them against the Raiders on TV.

When I asked him why not, he shrugged.

The San Francisco 49ers' brainy quarterback didn't say where he intends to be, but this is to let him know that if he really wants to see the game on the tube, he can be relaxing in any of more than 35 countries, including Canada, Mexico, Italy, Japan, Venezuela, West Germany, Spain, South Korea, the Philippines, Panama or Brazil, and still catch it by satellite.

If he likes, Montana can even go to Diego Garcia, a tiny island in the middle of the Indian Ocean 2,000 miles from the nearest other piece of land, and see the game on TV there. He isn't likely to,

Professional football players aren't that different than professional baseball players. The majority of baseball players figure if they aren't playing in the World Series, who wants to watch it? The same with a great many pro football players with regard to the Super Bowl. They'll let you watch it and then tell them all about it. They couldn't care less about the game.

"I'll bet I don't watch it," 49ers coach Bill Walsh predicted after Sunday's 24-21 beating by the Redskins. "Certainly not the whole game, anyway. I'll probably be too busy doing other things around the house.'

It didn't strike me as if there were any sour grapes to what Walsh was saying. Had the 49ers beaten the Redskins, you can bet Super Bowl XVIII would've been uppermost on his mind right now. But with his team out of it, what's he going to do - sit in front of his set and cheer himself hoarse for the Redskins?

How about that, sports fans?

Here's a man who never leaves his home without that little green credit card of his, but doesn't think anything of passing up the Super Bowl game.

The Dallas Cowboys weren't in It. so why should he bother watching two other teams he had already seen. He wasn't going to learn a while lot, was he? Besides, for him and his Cowboys, the scason was all over.

A noteworthy aspect about that game Landry missed seeing — Super Bowl XVI in which the 49ers defeated the Bengals 26-21 — is the fact it resulted in the most watched live program in the history of television. It had an audience of 110.2 million. CBS did that one also.

Possibly one of the reasons that viewing record was set two years ago was because the game featured two relatively unknown teams, the 49ers and the Bengals, both of whom excited a lot of non-dyed-in-the-wool football types by the way they got to the Super Bowl.

The 49ers captured everyone's imagination with their 28-27 win over the Cowboys in the NFC title contest, a game which still is remembered for "The Catch" by Dwight Clark. He made it in the final minute and that was what put the 49ers in the Super Bowl. No wonder Landry had other things to do besides watching Clark two weeks later.

The Bengals first beat Buffalo 27-21 in a white-knuckler playoff contest, then won the AFC title in 9-below temperatures by downing San Diego 27.7 in Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium.

Naturally, every player will tell you he'd love to get to the Super Bowl some day. As a participant, not a spectator. The $36,000 for each winning player and $18,000 for each loser doesn't make it that bad an experience, either.

When things began looking a little dark for the Redskins Sunday after the 49ers tied the score 21-21 in the fourth quarter, some of the Washington players got the feeling Super Bowl XVIII might be slipping away from them.

"We could tell San Francisco had the momentum and could easily score again." said Redskins tight end Clint Didler. "It was a case of us either getting

Moody, Lions Win 1st

Rob Moody booted home one goal and assisted on another as the Oviedo Lions blanked Jones. 3-0, Monday to win their first soccer match of the season.

Sophomore Pete Kinsley opened the scoring for the Lions in the first half when he kicked in an assisted goal for a 1-0 lead. Moody, a senior, then took a pass from Iven Padilla and drilled it home for a 2-0 halftime advantage.

In the second half. Moody fed Michael O'Riley for the final Oviedo score. Goalkeeper Gordon King needed to make just three saves as the Lions kept Jones on its half of the field most of the afternoon. Oviedo, 1-3, plays at Bishop Moore at 4 p.m.

Improved Harvey Takes Late-Model

NEW SMYRNA BEACH - Showing a hundred percent improvement since he regularly raced here at New Smyrna Speedway over a year ago, Billie Harvey drove the Auto Supply of Armuchee (GA) Firebird to victory in the 25-lap late model feature on a cool Saturday night.

Co-sponsored by United Automotive Radiators of

cu. in., 9 to 1, Prototype engine, was shod with four Hoosier tires. As per Hoosier Racing Tire (Lakeville, IN.) president Robert L. Newton, these same tires are currently being developed for the coming (Feb. 10-18) World Series of Asphalt Stock Car Racing, and on Friday night, Jan. 16, tests were conducted on the high banked, half-miler of pavement with none other than Gary "Hot Shoe" Balough, at the wheel of Harvey's light bluc No. 31.

"I ran faster tonight than they did yesterday while testing." Harvey said after the race which he led from wire to wire, after turning quickest time and winning

"We worked on the car all week and it paid off. It's the best this car has ever run," concluded Harvey who will now be a New Smyrna Speedway regular and who also plans to compete in the World Series.

LeRoy Porter was second, closely followed by Mike McCrary, rookie Greg Froemming and 1982 track champion Joe Middleton.

When the green flag was waived over the thunder car field, previous week's feature winner Mike Goldberg crossed the start/finish line down in the damp infield grass, trying to squeeze inside of the front runners. He then lost control, spun and hit the wall.

But after a quick pit stop, Goldberg was back out on the track on time for the restart. Fourteen laps later, Goldberg had the Med-Equip Camaro back on the point and went on to win, besting Tom Balmer, Buddy Teed. Eddie Perry and "Tiger" Tom Patterson.

The "Battle of the Fords" was on again in the street stock division, with Wild Bill Kinley's Cougar besting Pat Weaver's Torino by inches. Third to fifth were hard charging newcomer Jim Passino, Joey Warmack and Ben Booth, W.G. Watts, Milo Vidic, Ike Roland, Glenn Palmer and Eddie Tovat were the top four cylinder

The Longwood/Lake Mary Lioness Club members have been working throughout the past holidays, according to regional director Lois put to good use. Workman.

Aside from the club members marching in both the Winter Park and Pine Castle Christmas Parades. they've sought out ways to reach out into the community.

The club had adopted (so to speak) a Winter Springs family for Christmas, and brought them over several bags full of food, plus a satchel of gifts.

Another project they took on was In making a special visit to the Russell Children's Home. Members dressed up as clowns and passed out balloons, cookies and punch.

Lois Workman and Helen Meadows have been going into Seminole and Orange county schools to help teach other youngsters about the special needs of the handicapped. and to make them more aware of how to relate and respond to blind people.

The Longwood/Lake Mary Lioness Club meets on the fourth Tuesday of each month, at the Quality Inn North. Special guest speaker for the Jan. 24 meeting will be Gladys Wilson, Seminole County social worker. Gladys will speak on how the contributions she receives are

The Sweetwater Oaks Woman's Club will hold a luncheon on Jan. 11 at the Imperial House Restaurant in Winter Park. Cocktails will be served at 11:00 a.m., the luncheon will start at 12 noon. For reservation information, please call Pam Hartman at 862-6538.

During the meeting, a local attorney will speak to those present on the benefits and purpose of having a personal "will" drawn up.

Weapons Programs Cuts Could Hurt Nuclear Industry

ingly dependent on orders for atomic weapons, could be threatened by the possibility of cuts in weapons itself as providing "the first comprehensive look at the deployed in Europe. programs fostered in part by public concern about leading corporations that build the American weapons nuclear war.

A new study says orders for nuclear weapons and related equipment in the United States totaled at least $30 billion during 1983, increasing the atomic industry's dependence on weaponry.

* "The nuclear weapons industry is poised for growth but threatened with disappointment," the study said, surveying the effects of a possible nuclear weapons freeze and calls to curb the military budget.

The 405-page report said the possibility of cuts in nuclear weapons programs, fostered both by pressure to reduce spending and growing public concern about atomic war, could mean disappointing growth in the years ahead for contractors heavily involved in the production of such weapons.

The study, compiled over 18 months, was produced by the Investor Responsibility Research Center Inc., a non-profit, independent institute that reviews social and corporations and institutional investors. The report bills weapons, such as the Pershing-2 missile now being and equipment that would be used in a nuclear war.'

The Boeing Co., based in Scattle, received $1.3 billion in government contracts for primary nuclear weapons systems during fiscal year 1981, heading the list of 20 defense contractors that secured more than $100 million in such contracts during the year, the report said.

The problem for the defense industry, the report said. is that its greater reliance today on contracts for nuclear weapons exposes it to greater economic hardships in the event of cutbacks in those weapons programs because of a nuclear freeze or budgetary reductions.

'Now that the buildup is in full swing, the potential severity of a nuclear weapons freeze is increasing. whereas as recently as 1981, a freeze would have caused relatively limited economic hardship," the report said.

For example, if a nuclear freeze had gone into effect in said. 1981, the top 19 defense contractors would have lost 10 percent of their business, or $3.2 billion.

Primary systems include strategic nuclear weapons it difficult to build all the weapons currently planned,"

"Orders for nuclear weapons and related equipment reached at least $30 billion in 1983," the study said.

In large part, the increase in orders is a result of the administration's $180 billion strategic nuclear modernization program that includes building the B-1B bomber, the MX missile, the Trident submarinelaunched missile and support systems such as a new command, control and communications apparatus.

"Even though the United States and the Soviet Union profess a desire to curb the arms race, there is a high probability that no arms control agreement will be negotiated in the near future," the study said.

"Thus, it is fairly certain that the new generation of nuclear weapons will cease to be paper bargaining chips and the production lines will begin to roll forward," It

Civilian's Shot At Astronaut Nearly 1 In 400

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Nearly 5,000 civiltans have applied to the space agency to fill 12 openings in the space shuttle astronaut corps. And as if that wasn't enough, the military services are planning to nominate another 150 candidates.

The National Aeronauties and Space Administration accepted astronaut applications in October and November for the first time since 1980 when 3,465 civilians and military personnel competed for 19 vacancies.

A NASA official said the agency is sifting through 4,760 applications from civilians and expects the military nominations within the NASA said it had an affirmative action goal of including qualified minorities and women among the new candidates, but Ms. Gomez said the number of women and minority applicants has not yet been determined.

A committee consisting of some veteran astronauts and officials at the Johnson center are now screening the civilian applicants and expects to invite the top 120 candidates for interviews at the space center in February and March.

The final selections will be announced by the end of April, Ms. Gomez said.

NASA has scheduled 10 shuttle flights this year, 12 for next year and 17 in 1986. The shuttle can carry as many as seven people at

Drug Timolol Reduces Heart Attack Damage

BOSTON (UPI) - Damage to heart muscle due to heart attacks can be reduced by a drug given immediately after the attack occurs. doctors say.

The drug timolol reduces the heart's oxygen requirements, which allows much of the heart muscle deprived of blood due to a clot to survive while the heart re-establishes blood flow to the damaged area.

An international medical research group reporting in the New England Journal of Medicine said when it tested 144 patients with the drug it found a "significant" decrease in the amount of heart muscle that because it shows we can save what I call the twilight zone - that's the part of the heart that can either die or survive during a heart attack." Dr. Eugene Braunwald, chief of medicine at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, said in commenting on the Timolol, marketed as Blocadren, was the first of a class of drugs known as beta blockers approved by the Food and Drug Administration for use in heart attack survivors to prevent repeat heart attacks.

A Norwegian study demonstrated in 1981 that timolol was benefitting heart attack survivors.

The new study, reported by the International Collaborative Study Group, is believed to be the first to demonstrate that the drug decreases damage to the heart muscle.

When a clot blocks blood flow to an area of the heart, the muscle of that area begins to die. The larger the area of dead muscle, which produces a scar, the less efficiently the heart pumps after the heart attack.

The drug reduces the heart muscle's oxygen requirements. Meanwhile, the heart muscle forms new artery links that bring fresh blood to the muscle. The process of artery reformation takes between 24 and 48

"Taken together, these studies support the use of timolol for the early and late treatment of patients with this disease," the report said.
