Beautiful Church Wedding

Unusually interesting and beautiful was the evening wedding of Miss Mabel Hand and Mr. Archibald Lucius Betts which took place Wednesday, at half past eight o'clock at the Church of the Holy Cross. The solemn and impressive marriage ceremony of the Episcopal church was performed by Rev. Arthur S. Peck, wearing the handsome sacerdotal vestments of the marriage service. The music of the wedding, pink and white were artistically carried out in the elaborate decorations of the church. The altar was exquisitely beautiful with quantities of white china asters and the soft glow of lighted candles in crystal candelabra; asparagus fern giving a relieving touch of color, while the chancel rail was entwined with vines. Ferns and bamboo adding a charming bit of loveliness. The prie-dieu, upon which the couple knelt was of white satin.

In the nave, amid the tall, spreading branches of bamboo were graceful festoons of Love's wreath. The charming little pink frocks of the bridesmaids and their bouquets of roses and carnations added to the picturesqueness of the scene.

A beautiful program of music preceded the marriage ceremony. Under the master hand of Mrs. Fannie Stenbridge Munson at the organ, accompanied by Miss Margery Boor, on the violin, strains of sweetest melody filled the church. "Love's Old Sweet Song" and "Traumerl" were followed by a vocal solo, "O Promise Me," exquisitely rendered by Miss Lucille Aspinwall. Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" by Mrs. Munson was a beautiful number and at the conclusion of the marriage ceremony Miss Aspinwall sang "I Love You Truly." The bridal party left the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March. As the bridal party entered the church the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin was played by Mrs. Munson and Miss Boor.

The bridesmaids and ushers, Miss Saidee Williams with Mr. F. E. Roumillat, Miss Ruby Betts with Mr. Wm. Hill, Miss Genie Wicker with Mr. Ralph Sauls, Miss Madeline Hill with Mr. Raymond Key, entered first passing up the aisle to the altar steps. They were followed by the maid of honor, Miss Charlotte Hand. Immediately preceding the bride, who entered with her father, Mr. Charles Mooney Hand, by whom she was given in marriage, walked the little flower maiden, Margaret Neal, carrying a basket of rose petals to scatter in the path of the bride. The bride was met at the foot of the altar steps by the groom and his best man, Mr. Ernest Betts. The bride was very sweet and winsome in her graceful wedding gown of charmeuse and silk shadow lace. The bodice was of lace draped in charmeuse, the sleeves of lace gracefully caught on the shoulder front and edged with lace, finished with pearl trimming. Over the train fell the long tulle veil, edged with lace, which was becomingly arranged to fit the head, pleated about the face and caught in place with sprays of lilies of the valley. The bride carried a pretty white prayer book, with markers of lilies of the valley, the gift of the groom. The maid of honor was very lovely in charmeuse confined the soft fullness at the waist and the skirt was gathered in around the hips, a peplum of crepe de chine falling over a lace flounce. She carried an arm bouquet of pink carnations.

The four bridesmaids wore charming little gowns of pink crepe de chine made en traine and draped in shadow lace. The sleeves were caught on the shoulders with ornaments of pearl, while the front of the bodice was held together with a pearl butterfly. They wore a lovely gold pin, fashioned in a crescent and cross of pearls, the gift of the bride and carried bouquets of roses and carnations. The pretty little flower girl was very dainty and sweet in her little dress of white, wearing pink ribbons, her golden ringlets peeping beneath a charmingly pretty cap of lace, blue forget-me-nots and pink rosettes. She carried a basket of rose petals and wore a gold circlet pin, the gift of the bride.

The bride's mother was beautifully gowned in grey crepe de chine garnished in Persian trimmings.

The groom's mother wore a hand some gown of black crepe de chine and net, over white satin.

Mrs. LaRue Bliss was lovely in a gown of pearl crepe de chine trimmed in silver beads and white silk fringe.

Mrs. Margaret Barnes was charming in a gown of yellow charmeuse with overdress of chiffon embroidered in blue and garnished in jeweled trimming.

Mrs. C. O. McLaughlin was lovely in a gown of grey blue satin charmeuse and jeweled trimming.

Mrs. Ernest Betts was beautifully gowned in pink crepe de chine charmeuse and pink and green net.

Miss Elizabeth McLaughlin wore a charming gown of black and white embroidered chiffon over white satin.

A brilliant reception followed the church ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. The house was a perfect bower of loveliness. In the parlor an arch of green vines had been erected, from which was suspended a large bell made of the trumpet flowers, from the chandelier entwined in green hung another bell of the same sweet flower. The mantel was banked with trumpet flowers and water lilies, interspersed with sprays of ferns. Beneath the arch stood the young couple to receive congratulations, with the bridal party grouped about them.

In the reception hall quantities of Love's wreath festooned the walls and gracefully drooped from chandeliers. Banks of ferns and pink roses effectively adorned the mantel and fireplace, in one corner beneath an arch was placed the handsome punch bowl, over which Mrs. Margaret Barnes presided, assisted by Mrs. C. O. McLaughlin. Over the steps to the balcony was a beautiful canopy of pink, while the arches and balustrade were entwined with the vine of the white star jessamine. The pink shaded lights cast the glow of the evening sunset. In the dining room, where cake and cream were served the pink and white tones of the wedding colors were used effectively. The table was covered by a handsome tea cloth over pink silk, a basket of pink carnations in the center.

Among those assisting in serving, wearing lovely pink or white gowns were Mrs. Ernest Betts, Mrs. J. B. Lawson, Misses Anna McLaughlin, Essie Purdon, Helen Hand, Helen Rowland, Clarise Hand and Elizabeth McLaughlin. Presiding over the bride's souvenir register were Misses Josie and Junie Stunton, also gowned daintily in pink.

Mrs. LaRue Bliss presented each guest upon leaving with a dream packet of brides cake, individual slices in dainty wrappings of white and pink, tied with ribbons.

The rich and beautiful wedding gifts of silver, cut glass, china and linen, were shown in the music room. A handsome silver berry service was a gift from the officers of the First National Bank and a lovely set of glass berry set was presented by the ushers.

Dancing followed the more formal reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Betts left on the midnight train for Jacksonville, from which point they sail on the Lerape for New York and New Jersey.

The bride's going away gown was a tailored suit of blue wool poplin, with cuffs and collar of Persian brocade and worn with a stylish little toque of blue braid and ribbon.

Mrs. Bett is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mooney Hand and possesses a charming personality. Mr. Betts is the genial assistant cashier of the First National Bank. Both young people are very popular with a large circle of friends who wish them bon voyage.

Out of town guests were Mrs. F. W. Hill of Narcoosee, Mrs. B. E. Beatty, Mrs. Ed. Pilley and Mr. Walter Beatty of Washington, N. C., Mrs. LaRue Bliss of Orlando, Miss Madeline Hill, Mr. Ralph Sauls of Enterprise.

Presbyterian Brotherhood

The Presbyterian Brotherhood held a very enthusiastic meeting Tuesday night in the Brotherhood rooms on Oak avenue.

This is the first meeting of the fall season and was well attended.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Dr. Brownlee, followed by short talks by the members present. Resolutions, that will greatly benefit the town and community were passed and plans made for the fall and winter's work.

Refreshments were served in abundance, prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Gillon.

Present were Dr. E. D. Brownlee, H. R. Stevens, D. L. Thrasher, N. O. Garner, S. Runge, H. W. Grosarth, D. D. Caldwell, D. P. Caldwell, H. J. Minton, E. F. Lane, E. E. Junior Civic's Sale of Seeds

The girls of the Junior Citizens' Department of the Junior Civic League have taken the initiative, preparatory to the City Beautiful Campaign that will be waged in Sanford this winter by offering for sale at reasonable prices, seasonable seeds, i. e., seed that now is the time for planting to insure pretty gardens in the spring. Saturday afternoon the girls will begin a house to house canvass in the effort to sell nasturtium seed, the dwarf or hedge nasturtium and the tall climbing variety. These will grow in any soil with but little attention.

It is hoped to see Sanford a blaze of glory in the spring, with its gardens of these beautiful, vari-colored flowers. The girls will also have sweet pea seed and will take orders for these and gladiolus bulbs. It is believed that the personal work of the girls will conduce to the making of gardens and taking care of the lawns and parkways that are now but neglected and unsightly. They will continue the good work as the season advances and when they call and offer their seed for sale, the purchasers may know the time is ripe for planting. Encourage the girls in their effort to work for a Sanford Beautiful and you will reap the reward of having pretty grounds of your own that will bring joy and pleasure.

Junior Civic League

Attention is called to the meeting of the Junior Civic League, Bees and Junior Citizens, at the band stand in central park Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. A full attendance is desired as plans for the winter's work will be discussed and plans considered for disposing of the money made in July. Members of both departments are requested to bring their dues for the unpaid months.

A Howl and a Hint. The manner in which those genteel guffmen, who deal in printers' supplies have whooped up the prices on everything used around a newspaper office is simply klosteroous. The ink factories have shot the price of news ink up to a point that makes Gilderoy's justly famed kite look like a sunken submarine. The paper barons act as if they thought their wood pulp product ought to bring as much as India Bible stock. And type! Why you'd think that type metal was composed of two parts of radium and one part aurora borealis. Even Aunt Mandy Jackson, in her sealed bid for washing our towel, quotes a figure 50 per cent higher than that quoted when we were thinking of having it washed last year. At that, we could manage to ease through this month if some of our valued subscribers would kick in with a little of that emergency currency. Even a few old-fashioned dollar bills would do. —Ex.

BRYAN FAILED IN APPOINTMENT

SENATOR WILL NOT DON THE ERMINE ROBE OF JUDGE

Washington, D. C., Oct. 5.—In response to the plea of members of the Florida congressional delegation that he appoint United States Senator Nathan P. Bryan as judge of the court of appeals for the fifth circuit, which sits at New Orleans, President Woodrow Wilson practically stated that he would appoint Judge Walker of Alabama to the position.

President Wilson intimated that he had already promised the place to Judge Walker and that he wished Senator Bryan to remain among the progressive Democrats in the senate. It is, therefore, practically certain that the Alabama jurist will get the judgeship.

This announcement ends the general belief in Florida that the junior senator would become one of the United States judges, and ends a great deal of speculation as to who would succeed to Senator Bryan's toga. Also it shows that a large number of Florida politicians have been counting chickens before they were hatched.

Senator Bryan will remain in his seat till the end of his term, and will undoubtedly be a candidate to succeed himself. It is generally conceded that he will be opposed by Gov. Park Trammell, and intimations have been received from Washington that Congressman Frank Clark may also hurl his "hat in the ring." Ex-Gov. Albert W. Gilchrist may also enter the contest, and other aspirants will be found feeling the public pulse before the next senatorial primary and election is held in 1916.

Fernald Memorial Concert. The Sanford Band will on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock give a special memorial concert in the park. This concert is inspired by the wish of the Band to pay honor to the memory of Mr. Fernald, who was so prominent a member of the Sanford Band throughout its existence.

- Following is the program: Nearer My God to Thee, Brooks March from Bocaccio, Bernard Seligsons from Il Trovatore, Verdi March, "De Molay" Commandery Hall Melodies from Faust, Gounod La Sorella, Marche Espagnole, Gallini Selection Martha, Flatow Ye Boston Tea Party, Pryor Star Spangled Banner.

A Factory on the Farm. A silo is a factory on the farm and therefore lends itself to cooperation of the commercial and agricultural interests. The farmer gets the profit of both producer and consumer. We need more of these twin agencies of prosperity on the farms of Florida and business men cannot render a better service to their communities than by encouraging the building of silos. The silo is a great business educator. It arouses the spirit of enterprise, develops business ingenuity and awakens the joy of ownership.

A farmer can build a silo for two or three hundred dollars, and it will under ordinary conditions pay a dividend of 40 per cent where it is run to capacity.

A "Get-Together" Social. This coming Friday night at the Congregational church a "Get-Together" social and good fellowship time is to be enjoyed by the members and friends—and anyone indeed who would desire to get in touch with the church and enlarge their horizon of privilege and opportunity. Music, light refreshments and an enjoyable evening are for those who come.

GOVERNMENT SAFE DESPITE REVENUE CUT

VESSELS ARE NOW TRANSPORTING STUFF TO FOREIGN SHORES

Washington, D. C., Oct. 5.—Although the government revenues from customs fell off about $9,500,000 during September, compared with the same month in 1913, treasury officials today found some comfort in figures showing recent exports in grain and cotton. There was encouragement, too, in the announcement that, for September, the ordinary revenue receipts were almost $6,000,000 above those for last September, although this increase is said to be due to unusual causes not likely to figure in future months.

Despite the help from increased internal revenue, the total receipts for the month from all sources were nearly $6,000,000 under last September, and the excess of disbursements for the month was nearly $9,500,000, while in September, 1913, the excess of disbursements were about $4,000,000. During the week ending yesterday 55,514 bales of cotton were exported and yesterday's grain exports aggregated 1,936,000 bushels. Of the cotton, Galveston shipped more than 36,259 bales; New York 6,650 bales; New Orleans, 2,800; Savannah 2,250; Charleston 1,000; Boston 80; and Philadelphia 75. The cotton went to England, the Netherlands, Italy, Spain, Mexico, Sweden, Portugal and other countries. Of the grain, 718,000 bushels went from New Orleans, 599,000 from Baltimore, 538,000 from Galveston, 79,000 from Philadelphia, and 2,000 from New York. The grain went chiefly to England, Holland and Norway.

The treasury statement showed the government's total assets to be $1,895,484,011, including gold coin amounting to $777,712,501, bullion $246,065,368, and about $195,000,000 in silver dollars.

ORANGE CO. SUBSCRIBES FOR PAPER

The county commissioners today authorized the three thousand copies of the Orlando papers to be sent out to persons whose names and addresses shall be furnished from all sections of the county and by the Orlando board of trade to induce immigration to and investment in Orange county.

The committee from the board of trade composed of President Seth Woodruff, Messrs. John M. Cheney, S. S. Griffin, N. P. Yowell, J. N. Bradshaw and S. A. Johnson, appeared before the commissioners and strongly urged that this form of publicity be given a trial for six months. President Woodruff stated that a special price had been secured from the local papers which were anxious to cooperate with the commissioners in this enterprise.

Other members of the committee gave their personal views of the matter and all approved the idea heartily. Mr. S. S. Griffin stated that he could testify to the benefit that came from this kind of advertising because he knew of people who had been brought to Orange county through the advertising of this character that had been done in the Kissimmee papers. Ocala county has had this system in effect for several years, and it has proved profitable. The conclusion was that the commissioners would have discontinued it if it hadn't been so.

J. H. Reese, who was present on behalf of the newspapers, stated that it was the desire of the local papers to make the experiment as successful as possible, by printing matter that would be of especial interest to parties seeking information about Orange county, and that all portions of the county would be represented. This statement was made in answer to a question from Commissioner Dillard, who said that he approved the plan, but thought the county should secure all the benefit possible from it. There was no dissenting vote on the proposition, and Chairman Overstreet was directed to act for the board in seeing the contract performed.—Orlando Reporter-Star.

THE WAR HAS NOT ENDED IN EUROPE ALREADY YET

THE VERY LATEST DESPATCHES FROM THE SEAT OF WAR SAY THAT IF THE GERMANS WIN THAT THE ALLIES ARE BOUND TO LOSE

Berlin, Germany, Oct. 6.—By wireless to Sayville, L. I.—An official report from the German army headquarters says that in the siege of the fort of the Meuse, the Germans and Koenigsboeket and the intermediate redoubts with thirty guns have been taken.

"Thus a breach has been made in the outer circle of forts," the report adds, "rendering an attack on the inner circle of forts and the town itself possible."

"Near Augustowa the Third Siberian and parts of the Twenty-second Russian army corps, composing the left wing of the Russian army, on crossing the Niemen river, were defeated after a furious battle lasting two days. More than 2,000 un wounded Russians were made prisoners and a large quantity of guns and machine guns were captured."

Congress Adjourns Next Week. Washington, D. C., Oct. 5. October 15 has been agreed upon by Democratic leaders as a tentative adjournment date for the present session of congress, and the senate steering committee quickly framed a legislative program designed to conclude pending legislation by that date.

House leaders agreed that work on their side of the capitol would be finished well before October 15, and it is probable an agreement will be reached whereby members generally will leave Washington by the middle of next week, leaving the party leaders on guard until adjournment.

At the white house October 10 was mentioned as a date for adjournment, but when the Democratic leaders returned to the capitol last evening after a conference with the President, it was determined that at least two weeks would be necessary to allow the senate to finish pending legislation.

The steering committee after an hour of discussion, agreed that legislation should be confined to the pending war revenue bill and measures now in conference.

It is expected the Clayton bill conference will be disposed of by the end of this week, and that the war revenue bill will be brought in on Monday.

There was some talk of extended Republican opposition to the war tax bill, but it is generally believed less than two weeks will be needed to pass the measure after it comes from the finance committee.

Indications are now that the plan to have congress take up the administration bill for government purchase and operation of ships at a special session in November following the elections will be abandoned with an understanding that the measure will be taken up at the opening of the regular December session. The President indicated that this would be left to the party leaders who in turn said "if it were necessary" congress would meet in November.

Commercial Club. The regular meeting of the Commercial Club will be held next Friday night in the City Hall at eight o'clock and a full attendance is desired as there will be business of importance to transact.

Paris, France, Oct. 6.—While the French realize that the battle of the Aisne has not yet been won it does not seem to many of them that it can now be lost. If the allies win for it, the sacrifice on both sides already being great. The tone of the official communications has furnished the best reasons for the hope of the French.

Lieutenant Colonel Rousset declares that the battle still can last for some time. In the furious fighting now going on, Lieutenant Colonel Rousset says, neither adversary can claim what Napoleon called "the result."

With the shifting of the battle scene the railroads are resuming traffic through a number of cities which have been occupied by the Germans. From Epernay the news comes that the Germans respected the vines of Epernay in the important champagne district.

Red Cross Contributions

At the close of the union meeting of prayer for peace last Sunday, the suggestion was made that a practical manifestation of our sympathy for the cause of peace would be a contribution for the Red Cross Society which is doing so much to alleviate suffering in the present war. An offering was received from a few who heard the appeal as the audience was leaving. I am now holding this offering for a day or two for the benefit of those who might desire to have a further share in the same. All those who wish to contribute to the American Red Cross Society, please leave contributions at our house. I shall for ward same in two days.

Information About Florida Farms

From last Federal Census Reports: Florida has 50,916 farms, of this number 46,674 are operated by owners and managers and 4,242 by tenants.

The farm home owners and managers of Florida cultivate 1,363,000 acres of land and the tenants till 442,107 acres in this state.

The value of the land and the buildings of the tenant farms of this state is $12,198,000, that of the home owners and managers is $105,915,000.

The Undertaker a Developer

There are in many communities successful business men and farmers who stand like stumps in the highways of progress and in such a situation the undertaker is an important factor in development. Scarcely a day passes that they do not add a new terror to death by refusing to work with public spirited citizens in a movement for the upbuilding of their community or by their indifference snag an industrial enterprise.

It takes live men to build up a community and there is no sadder sight in life than a few noble spirited citizens staggering under a load of dead timber. The undertaker is oftentimes a developer.

RURAL CARRIERS HAVE BETTER PAY

EXTRA SERVICE FOR PARCEL POST MATTER IS TO BE PAID

Washington, Oct. 6.—Star route carriers in the state of Florida will have their pay readjusted so as to provide compensation for the extra service caused by the parcel post.

The Postal Department which is now taking steps to ascertain what would be a fair basis upon which to estimate the increase of pay. This increase will be granted on contracts that are now in existence and which were entered into before the parcel-post became an established institution.

As a result of competitive bidding the star carriers at beat are among the poorest paid employees in the government service. Thousands of contracts throughout the country now in force were awarded before the parcel post came into existence and as a result the carrier is doing three or four times as much work as he agreed to do. It is pointed out that this is manifestly unfair.

"I have in mind," said a member of congress, "a carrier in my district who has accepted a contract at ninety-nine cents a day when the task required only the services of one horse and a boy. Now it requires two horses and a man and still the contract price of ninety-nine cents a day remains the same. There are hundreds of cases even more glaring than this one. I am informed by the department that it is now making computations with a view to awarding the carriers more pay than they are getting."

CONFIDENCE IS GROWING DAILY

New York, Oct. 6. Despite the probability that the European war will continue indefinitely, it is now agreed that commercial conditions in this country are rapidly improving and that the outlook for business generally is very bright.

Very much greater confidence is felt here than in Washington, according to the New York Journal of Commerce, in the prospect regarding the rectification of the general commercial situation. The one thing which, more than any other, is deemed to show a return of normal conditions is the resumption of cotton exports actually in progress or about to go. The movement already amounts to more than 200,000 bales, according to statements transmitted to foreign trade authorities here. That this movement, if continued, will result in enlarging the balances in favor of the United States, and will consequently greatly alleviate the foreign exchange situation, is fully believed and predicted.

It is probable that within a short time, according to the best informed men, the exchange situation will thus become very much more nearly normal, and as a result, one phase of the present difficulties will be eliminated from further consideration.

Improvement in the near future is predicted not only in cotton but also in a number of other lines on the strength of the information which has been received here during the past day or two. The reports from the northeast seem to show that conditions there are most satisfactory and that the sales of grain are already realizing active cash returns much beyond the expectations of growers earlier in the season. Manufactured exports and imports are expected to continue small for a good while, although if the beginning of peace negotiations can be hastened it is believed that an almost immediate revival of trade will be enjoyed.

In New York foreign exchange is steadily dropping. The exchange market is now being regulated by the natural order of supply and demand and that the former exceeds the latter. The payment this week of approximately $8,250,000 New York city obligations relieved the exchange market from a buying power that might have carried the rate above $5. Sentiment is running so strongly in favor of a closer approach to normal conditions that uptown importers of fabrics and downtown importers of

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR FLORIDA GROWERS

SEASON PROMISES GOOD RETURNS FOR FLORIDA PRODUCTS

The Arcadia Enterprise has the following article:

Vegetable growers throughout Florida have every reason to feel encouraged and should not hesitate to go their full length in producing the various crops known to the trucking interests of the state. The organization of the Florida Vegetable Marketing Bureau in Jacksonville last week will, we feel sure, remove the stumps in the road between the grower and the market.

The new organization, headed by prominent and influential men of the state—men who have the interest of the truckers at heart—is going to prove an awakening to the vegetable interests and it is to be hoped and expected that all growers both large and small will promptly align themselves in the movement to bring about lower express rates and a more vigorous market. The success of the organization means the success of growers, hence cooperation is the only thing needful.

The bureau is getting results now, although in existence less than a week, and it is going to get still greater results when its machinery gets in full working order. If the vegetable growers will line up as one man they can quickly remove every obstacle and win a victory that will put them on the pinnacle of independence, and instead of bowing to railroads and commission men they will have the railroad and commission men bowing to them.

The reduction of the express rates on vegetables cut to 15 or 20 per cent, that is promised to J. D. Hockaday, general manager of the Southern Express Company, and the proffer of the express company of 5,000 agents in as many small towns about the country, to solicit and take orders for shipments of vegetables, is reason enough to look to the future optimistically.

The growers have suffered long on account of not being able to get beyond the walls of the commission concerns into small markets, now "undiscovered" territory, because of the shipping of vegetables to the larger markets, overstocking them and congesting and thereby losing the smaller markets that they are now ready to get together and stay together.

With the express agents throughout the country taking orders for delivery of less than carload lots, in the smallest towns, and sending these into the central bureau, they can be promptly filled and a wide distribution of the vegetables be secured. As it is and has been, the vegetables are sent to the large cities where the market is flooded, while on the other hand, the smaller towns cannot get vegetables.

The express company, of course, expects to get increased business on the part of their agents, and by the cutting of express rates on vegetables. The express business is a large one last season about 25,000 carloads were shipped out of the state. This does not include the produce shipped by express, a large item made up of many small shipments of a few packages.

Shipping vegetables by express has the strong point of getting the produce to market quicker and in better condition, and while the rate is higher, it oftentimes is more than worth the difference. But the main benefit from the express company's move to benefit the vegetable grower is that the agents, if they display any activity, will maintain a more constant demand for vegetables from all over the Southern Express Company's lines.

At present the truckers are getting their seed beds ready for the new crops. Shipments begin in November and December, and are heaviest in January and February. Florida's principal vegetable crops are tomatoes, celery, lettuce, potatoes and strawberries, with many other vegetables that can be raised and are raised each year in increasing numbers and quantity. To the strawberry grower the new movement and the reduced rates prove particularly valuable, as most of the strawberries shipped out of the state go by express.

sugar, coffee and other commodities in New York City are practically out of the market.

PLANTING NATAL GLASS

OCTOBER 8th WILL BE OBSERVED AS NATAL HAY DAY— FARMERS CAN SAVE MILLIONS BY THIS CROP

Tampa, Oct. 6.—Natal Grass Day, October 8 gives promise of being widely observed by the farmers throughout the state, and every indication is that hundreds of acres of natal grass seed will be sown to give an impetus to the growth of the grass in Florida. Natal grass enthusiasts favor the substitution of this product for hay throughout the state, it being claimed that the product can be easily grown and that millions of dollars now sent to other markets for hay will be retained in Florida when the movement reaches its proper proportions.

The following points are advanced in favor of a proper observance of the day:

Florida expends annually more money for forage than the value of the state's entire citrus crop.

This vast sum of money should be kept in the state; and there are numbers of valuable grasses suited to Florida, with high feeding value, which, if properly exploited, will solve the forage problem and save as many millions annually.

Florida can be made one of the greatest live stock producing states in the Union.

We realize fully that the greatest obstacle in raising forage for the market is the difficulty in curing it to a bright color, but while our harvested crop may lack color, the feeding value is there, and it is the object of this association to encourage the growing, marketing and harvesting of our own forage for home and foreign consumption.

During the past two years the Merchants' Association of Tampa has been watching experiments with natal hay, has caused many acres to be sown in the state with gratifying results, and we believe we can now recommend natal hay as the one forage crop for the high pine lands on light sandy soil of the state, where other forage crops will not prosper.

Many acres have been sown in this hay, on poor land, with no fertilizer used, and good results obtained, and as much as three tons per acre produced, in three cuttings, per season.

Natal hay analyzes 7 1/2 per cent protein, as compared with 6 per cent protein for timothy, is of bright color, as bright as timothy, and we believe, if it can be demonstrated that it will do well in large tracts on our light sandy soils, that we can arrange a proper method for curing it, rain or shine, which will be satisfactory and profitable.

Fertilizer is good for almost anything, but for the purpose of this test we prefer that you do not use it. We are confident that it will grow profitably on $30 land and pay for the land each year, without the use of fertilizer.

Points in Brief

Natal does not impoverish the soil, it sends down tap roots many feet into the earth in search of moisture, and is therefore a benefit to the soil.

Natal makes excellent pasture.

Natal will not grow on rich, low lands.

Natal grows best on high pine lands.

Natal produces from two to three tons per acre of hay, better in quality than timothy.

Prepare seed bed from four to six inches deep, well pulverized.

Get up before day, when there is no wind, and sow it mixed with slightly flamp seed. Sow three to five pounds to the acre.

Imported seed can be purchased at $1 per pound. We recommend imported seed for the purpose of this test. If you cannot procure seed, send cash to this association and we will forward you seed at $1 per pound.

There is a division of opinion as to the best time of year to sow, but we believe October 8, or as near that date as weather will permit, is proper.

If planted in October you may get three cuttings the following summer. To sow in the spring, April or May.

Natal reseeds itself, also comes from the root. Natal will crowd out sandspur and other objectionable grasses. Plow natal under one time, and it is destroyed; positively no danger of it taking the place.

A freeze will destroy it but frost will not. One field at Gainesville has been constantly producing since 1908—there it is colder than here.

EDUCATION NEGLECTED

YOUNG MEN WHO DROPPED SCHOOL WILL LIVE TO REGRET THEIR ACTION

A word to the young men and boys who have dropped out of school. 'Tis sad to see so many young men and boys leave school before they have finished high school. As a friend, I beg you to read these few lines and be admonished before it is too late.

These figures are taken from the most reliable sources, and should have great weight with the parents of these young people, as well as with the young men themselves. If these young people stop school now they will be crippled all through life.

It had a friend who was employed on a railroad, and had been promoted from one position to another until at last he was offered the superintendency of his road. At every one's astonishment he refused the place. At last he told why he refused. He said, "I quit school too soon."

For want of a high school education he had to refuse a position that would have given him a salary of $5,000.00 per year, and continue as supervisor on a salary of $1,800.00. Perhaps many of you young men, who are throwing away your chances for an education will have the same sad experience.

Here are some statistics from the U. S. Bureau of Education. These are sad truths; read them, and after reading them give up your money making and your dislike of study and return to school. Now for the statistics:

1st. More than two-thirds of our boys quit school before the end of the grammar school.

2nd. Less than 1 boy in 4 completes the eighth grade, and only 1 in 8 ever goes any higher.

Here is another way to express the sad fact:

3rd. Out of 100 boys that enter the first grade, only 55 get to the fifth grade; and but 27 get into the eighth grade, and only 6 go to the high school, and but 1 enters college.

From Sage's Foundations I have gathered these facts: 1st. That only 5 per cent of the young men, now trying to fill occupations are fitted to fill them with credit to themselves and satisfaction to their employers. That leaves 95 per cent of incompetents. Do you not want to shun that large number of failures? Some facts from the U. S. Bureau of Education, showing the value of an education:

1st. A grammar school certificate increases a young man's earning capacity 50 per cent; a high school certificate 100 per cent, and a college diploma 300 per cent.

2nd. Boys and men with but little or no education have to fill the "blind alley jobs" and can't earn more than $300 per annum; whilst those who have finished the grammar school course can easily earn from $450 to $600. In 40 years this latter class will have saved the $5,000 to $6,000 more than the first class. As they spent 1,000 days more in school than the first class, that will give them from $5 to $6 per day, for every day spent in school more than those who quit at the fifth grade.

In what other way can a boy, or a parent put $5 per day as an investment, which can never be taken away from him?

3rd. The cash value of a high school education. The man who has but a smattering of an education can earn $1.50 per day, and in forty years he may earn $1,800, whilst one who has spent twelve years in earnest study, or has gone through the eight grades of the grammar school and the four grades of the high school can earn a minimum of $1,000 per year, and in forty years will earn $40,000. Now, the difference between the two is $22,000. This then is the cash value of an education; and it took 2200 days in school to secure it; therefore one day in school has been worth $10. A pretty good value for one day's study in school, is it not?

Now, all of the foregoing are truths, are solid facts presented by the U. S. Bureau of Education and Sage's Foundations.

O that our young men could be made to see and realize the great importance of securing an education while they can.

O that parents and guardians might also see the same truths and keep their children in school every day and every term until their children are fitted to take their part of life.

Demonstrating Korker

Messrs. B. J. Reed, J. E. Spurling and G. C. Chamberlain of Sanford spent a few hours in Orlando yesterday demonstrating "Kok-Ker Puncture Cure" for automobile tires. One of the interesting tests given was driving their machine, the tires of which were charged with a new remedy, over a board, sending two nails to the inner tube, and making two punctures; but a drive around the square revealed the fact that the tire had lost no air by the operation. Ordinarily with such punctures the wheel would have gone down to the rim in a few minutes.

So sure are these gentlemen that they have a remedy worth the while, a case of Kor-Ker Cure was left with Mr. I. W. Phillips, of the Orlando Auto and Supply Co., which he will sell on its merits—"no cure no pay," which Mr. Phillips considers a most fair proposition, and one worth investigating.

The tires are still left with 94 per cent air and Mr. Reid claims that 5,000 miles has been made on tires without an additional pumping. There are no "blowouts," he would have you to understand, and that the life of tires is generally lengthened.

The demonstrators left late in the afternoon from Kissimmee where they will talk the new automobile tire medicine.—Reporter-Star.

Save the Quail

Five hundred and sixty-eight mosquitoes, one hundred and nine potato beetles, two thousand, three hundred and twenty-six plant lice, one hundred cinch bugs, thirty-nine grasshoppers, twelve squash bugs, twelve cut worms. And eight white twelve cut worms, twelve army worms and eight white bugs all these, says the state game warden of Tennessee, have been found in the stomach of a common quail. "What would that bird and its mate be worth to you?" he asks, "If they had reared their little brood on your farm?"

The interesting and truly appalling menu shows that birds protect not only crops and orchards, but also the health of men and animals. Many of the insects they destroy are carriers of disease. A bull bat, we are told, will devour a thousand mosquitoes in one twilight; given due safety and encouragement, a family of bull bats should suffice to free any neighborhood of mosquitoes and prevent many cases of illness as well as incalculable discomfort.

Commenting upon the Tennessee game warden's statement, the Courier Journal well observes that too many farmers look upon birds "either with indifference or with enmity." A bird which now or then grabs a grain of corn or wheat, a berry or a cherry, is regarded as a chronic marauder, whereas he pays in service many times over for all that he gets. In fact he is a reliable everyday farm hand, working seven days in the week, rain or shine, and taking no half holidays. The birds are busy with the break of dawn, and sometimes they work far into the night. They deserve protection for the good they do. There are thousands of farmers who need to look at the bird question from a new viewpoint.

In Georgia, as in most southern states, the last few years have witnessed a popular awakening to the value of insect destroying birds, and the importance of protecting them. The means to this end that are already in force should be upheld and encouraged by every one, particularly by the farmers, who are so closely indebted to birds.—Atlanta Journal.

HOW GERMANS IDENTIFY DEAD

Metal Tag With Number Worn by Each Soldier.

COUNTED BY BASKETFULS.

After Each Battle Collars of Blain Men Are Opened and Tag Sent to Headquarters — Officers and Privates Buried in the Same Trench at Liege in Contradiction to Custom.

In a dispatch from Liege a correspondent describes how the Germans identify those who are killed in battle. Extracts from his story follow:

Here where the tide of German advance for a time dashed on the rock and steel of Belgian forts I saw something which affected me far more than any of the sorrows of war I have yet encountered. It was a good sized basketful of metal tags under careful guard at military headquarters.

"They are all that is left of unbraved brave boys who fell in and around Liege—their identification marks," said the officer. "I asked permission to examine one. It was a small tin tag with two holes for the string or ribbon. A large number was stamped on it and, below, the number of the regiment. The comparison is grotesque and much out of place, but the tag was much like some dog license tags I have seen."

"I saw the 'rest' of this tag and many others like it—rather the place where that 'rest' or remainder of that tag was. Between the forts Barchou and Evreux it was in the trenches where the Belgians received the Germans with a murderous fire, when they stormed those two forts—the first that fell—thereby getting an entrance into the city. It was here that these men went down like grass before the scythe.

Nothing Could Stop Them. "The Germans had come on, and nothing could stop them—they seemed to go to their death gladly, as one Belgian remarked to me. The Belgian trenches now are filled and leveled. I could hardly find them even with a guide. They were filled with the fallen. One grave was about sixty feet long. Another was eighty or ninety feet.

Here is where the metal tags were gathered. Each man and officer wears one around his neck. That of the private is usually a tag with a number corresponding with the number opposite his name on his company and regimental rolls.

"Many also have the number of their regiment on the tag. The tags of the officers usually are of aluminum and besides the number have the name and rank, sometimes also the home address. Some of the privates also have substituted the tin tag with an aluminum one purchased by themselves, upon which are stamped the name and address and regiment, besides the required number.

"After the battle, when the Germans find their dead, the collar on each shirt is opened, the string cut and the tag taken and sent to headquarters for identification. There the books are opened and 'fallen,' together with the place of fight or battle is written opposite the name and number of the dead soldier.

Death Great Leveler. "At Liege, probably for the first time in German wars, death obliterated distinction in rank. For the first time, so far as I can learn, German officers and common soldiers were buried in the same trench.

"It has always been the rule—a sort of unwritten law—that every fallen officer should have a separate grave and not be buried in the common trench. To a large extent this is still done, especially with officers of higher rank than captain. But the unprecedented mobility and rapid advance of the German army into Belgium and France made this extremely difficult.

"The fallen of the enemy are not buried in the same trench, but are placed together in a separate trench.

"The uniforms are taken from the bodies of the enemy's fallen and laid on top of the grave as a means of identification to friends—if they wear tags they are removed."

HOTELS' NEUTRAL MENUS.

French, German and Russian Names of Dishes Eliminated in Chicago.

The leading hotels and restaurants of Chicago in order to observe strict neutrality have eliminated from menus French, German and Russian names of popular dishes. The Germans have been boycotting French and Russian dishes, while "soufflé" and "wiener schnitzel" found no favor with English, French and Russian guests.

Under the new rules of civilized eating as applied to peaceable Chicago restaurants where "canape russe" led off for luncheon, caviar on toast is the new appetizer. "Wiener schnitzel, Hol stein," has been given its passport and real cutlets with fried egg and vegetables rushed into its place. "Filet mignon" is no more; it is plain tenderloin steak. Chicken broth "au gelée" is just plain chicken broth in jelly. "Ris de veau aux petits pois" is nothing more nor less than sweetbread with new peas. Chicken "sous cloche" is the same bird "under glass."

BEST STORIES OF ITS HORRORS

One Man's Thoughts and Feelings on Eve of Expected Execution.

AMONG the most thrilling stories of the war is one told by Laurence S. Stevens, formerly of Grand Rapids, Mich., but temporarily residing in Brussels, who, while riding within the German lines in an automobile engaged by a correspondent of the Chicago News, was arrested and sentenced to death and was suffered a night of horrors at Manange, Belgium.

Stevens has described how he felt while awaiting his fate, which he believed would be death. His story is told in the Chicago News.

"I asked for strength to hold out before the German guns like a man and show them that I was not frightened," he said.

"When the guard looked at me I said in broken German, 'Morgen schliesen?' ('Shoot tomorrow?') He shrugged his shoulders and picked up an old curtain, rolled it into a bundle and placed it under my head. I fell asleep. At 4:30 a. m. I awoke when two sappers entered the room. One had a spade and a lantern and the other carried an acetylene searchlight. They played the light over the room and left the door ajar as they left.

"I saw them go across the courtyard to the wall, where one of them took the pick and started taking up stones, the second man using the spade in turning the earth. I could not keep my eyes off them. They fascinated me, for I was sure they were digging my own grave.

Planned How He'd Die.

"To make my death less ignominious I decided to keep my hands loosely in the rage until I faced the firing squad, when I would throw my hands out unfettered.

"Just before 6 o'clock a bugle sound ed and everybody rose. The guards put on their cartridge belts and they waited five minutes, which seemed to me like half an hour. Then the order came to fall in. I wondered if my knees trembled, but they were as firm as ever. I wondered how the news of my death could reach my friend, Lewis Richards, in Brussels, formerly pianist in a Detroit music school."

Stevens recounts his further harrowing experiences until finally after four days of agonizing suspense he realized his life was safe.

"Greatest of Follies."

There has been given out officially information concerning incidents of the fighting and personal experiences, which had been furnished by German prisoners or obtained from documents seized by French troops. It relates particularly to the fighting around Rheims between the 11th and the 10th of September.

A German artillery officer wrote: "Modern war is the greatest of follies. Companies of 250 men in the Tenth army corps have been reduced to seventy men, and there are companies of the guard commanded by volunteers of a year, all the officers having disappeared."

A Frenchman who comes from Montmarre found a Luxembourgish boy lying within a yard of him whom he had known as chasseur in a hotel in Paris. The young German went to see his old acquaintance.

"It is stupid," he said, "this war. You and I were happy when we were good friends in Paris. Why should we have been made to fight with each other?" He died with his arms round the neck of the French soldier, who told the story, unghamed of his tears.

A Semisubterranean Town.

A correspondent describes the German trenches on the Aisne as a whole semisubterranean town, with main thoroughfares, side streets and telephone wires running all along. Here hundreds of thousands of men ate, lived, slept, yet were so well concealed that from a little way down the hill in front one would see nothing to tell of its existence, unless it were the hardly noticeable little bank of earth raised slightly above the surface of the ground.

Acts of Dauntless Courage.

M. Verlin, a French lieutenant, with fifty men, held at bay from a clump of woods 5,000 Germans, who were afraid it was a trap and fought from a distance. The little French detachment fired volley after volley until only thirteen remained alive.

Corporal Massell, awarded a medal by France, occupied an outlook post in a tree for three days, not coming down until he was wounded.

This feat was described by a British cavalry officer in a letter home: "A young lancer, not more than twenty, stripped of tunic and shirt, charged a German, pierced him to the heart, seized his horse as he fell and exchanged it for his own, which was hurt. Then his sword sheathed like lightning, he swung around and shot a German through the head."

Mile In Air, Saw Battle.

A letter from an officer of the British royal flying corps, describing a view from an aeroplane of the battle eastward of Paris, says: "From a height of 5,000 feet I saw a sight which I hope it will never be my lot to see again. The woods and hills were literally cut to ribbons all along the south of Laon. It was marvelous watching hundreds of shells bursting below one to the right and to the left for miles and then to see the German guns replying."

THE BIG WAR; VIVIDLY DEPICTED

Horses Shout "Goodbye!"

Thirty gunners of a British field battery, knowing that they were going to almost certain death, called out, "Goodbye, fellows," to their comrades in the reserve line. Two minutes later every man was out of action.

Thirty more went to the front, with the same farewell greeting. The German shells were falling thickly behind the battery and killed or wounded every man serving the guns.

Diaries Recite Hardships.

More interesting statements gathered from the diaries of wounded Germans and prisoners have been published at Bordeaux. An army doctor writes:

"Sept. 9.—Terrible hunger; not a morsel of bread in eight days."

An officer of the Brunswick regiment made this record:

"Sept. 17.—In the region of Epernay. For five days we have fed ourselves on stolen beet roots and sugar, with not a morsel of bread. The losses are enormous."

A soldier of the Eighteenth corps has written:

"Bread once in eight days. Have neither washed nor slept. It will be a miracle if we see Germany again."

A reservist wrote:

"Sept. 17.—Nothing to eat for three days. No bread, great losses."

A Hessian soldier inscribed this:

"In five weeks we have had bread three times. This evening we had potatoes, cooked—what a feast!"

The Germans prepared a trap for Belgian cavalry by excavating the highway to a great depth and planting 200 barrels without tops and covered with branches and earth.

Novel Use of Church Clock.

German officers and soldiers in plain clothes or in French or British uniforms have remained in localities occupied by the Germans in order to furnish them with intelligence.

One spy of this kind was found hidden in a church tower. His presence was only discovered through the erratic movements of the hands of the church clock, which he was using to signal to his friends by means of an improvised semaphore code. Had this man not been seized it is probable he would have signaled to the German artillery at the time of their arrival the exact location of the enemy's headquarters and staff.

Flower Bed Hid Telephone.

"Looking out of the windows of a German military train when it stopped at Charleroi," says a correspondent, "I saw a German soldier bending over a flower bed on the grounds of the railway station. He seemed to be attentively examining the flowers. As he knelt there he frequently moved his hands gently among the blossoms as if he were caressing them.

"See," I said to one of my companions, "there is that beautiful German love of flowers again. With the ruins of whole streets of this town still smoking this private soldier finds time to admire a flower bed that has escaped destruction."

"We grew quite sentimental about the matter. Suddenly the man rose from his knees and with him there came from the flower bed a telephone receiver and two or three yards of telephone wire. Straightening himself, he put the receiver to his ear and spoke rapidly. We could hear some of the words. They appeared to be a repetition or verification of certain orders."

Soldier Rescued by a Dog.

Wounded three in the battle of the Marne, a soldier lay in a faint on a heap of corpses, when Tom, the regimental pet, revived him by licking his face.

The animal had been trained to carry caps, and the soldier, having lost his cap, tried to persuade the dog to take his knapsack to the encampment.

After awhile Tom seemed to realize what was wanted. He ran to the camp, seized the coat of the nearest man and tried to drag him to the battlefield. When a party finally followed the dog they found their wounded comrade and rescued him.

Air Men Hold Up Ships.

The London Standard gives a unique incident in warfare reported at Grimsby by the captain of the Dutch trawler Martha, who said seven German hydroplanes stopped the Swedish steamer Bodal and made the Swedish captain alter his course to Helgoland.

The Dutch captain says the hydroplanes first approached his boat, but after satisfying themselves as to his nationality flew away. Six hydroplanes escorted the Swedish vessel on its way to Helgoland, apparently as a prisoner.

FROM THE NATION'S CAPITAL

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON BY THE SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT OF THE HERALD

Washington, Oct. 5. (Special)—Interest in the forthcoming convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress is increasing by leaps and bounds, the recent unjustified attacks on the River and Harbor Appropriation bill having crystallized sentiment in its behalf, and which will undoubtedly be voiced when the delegates to the eleventh annual convention meet in this city on December 9, 10, 11 next.

Realizing that a crisis is at hand, and that the desires of the American people as to the improvement of the country's waterways must be ascertained once and for all, the entire membership of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress will be called upon to attend the coming convention for the purpose of taking high ground on a subject which vitally affects both producer and consumer as it relates to transportation.

A distinguished delegation from the Senate and House, members of the Committee on Commerce of the former body, and of the River and Harbor Committee of the House, called upon President Wilson on Wednesday to extend to the chief executive an invitation to address the convention during one of its sessions, but preferably to welcome the delegates to Washington.

President Wilson told the delegation that he was vitally interested in the question, that he could not then say whether he would be present but would take the matter under advisement. In view of his late bereavement, it may be said that the President will refrain from making any public addresses except those he will make to the Federal Congress from time to time overment to improve the rivers and harbors of the country goes without saying.

The terrible cataclysm of war has been happily relieved by the suggestion of a young woman of Washington that all the people of the United States go shopping the same week in October, and that all buy cotton goods. This suggestion was made by Miss Genevieve Clark, daughter of the Speaker of the House of Representatives. While it was done half playfully, for Miss Clark has a refreshing sense of humor, she had no conception of the nation-wide interest her playful suggestion would arouse among the business men of the country.

At first the idea was ridiculed as being unsound economically. The more it was investigated, however, the more sensible did the suggestion appear, and now the newspapers of the country are taking it up as a wonderfully happy inspiration.

As a focus for the cotton sale week a national cotton fashion show is being held at the leading hotel of this city, with the official society leaders of the capital standing as sponsors for the movement. A number of the young women have made gowns to be exhibited, the moving picture man has displayed Miss Clark and her girl associates, Miss Callie Hoke Smith, daughter of Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, and Miss Lucy Burleson, daughter of the Postmaster General, the prime movers in the cotton goods sale, to millions of theater goers, and thus the chance remark of a society bud becomes the serious business of a whole nation.

by the Department of Agriculture, which indicate that farm women in various sections of the country have come to believe that the government is about to assist them with grants of money to individuals. This unfortunate mistake, which it is feared will be the cause of considerable disappointment, appears to have arisen through a misunderstanding of the Smith-Lever act recently passed by Congress. Under this act fund contributed both by the Federal and State governments are made available for practical demonstration work in agriculture and home economics. Ex-

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIUMPH

Any policy is entitled to be judged by its results; and by that test the President's Mexican policy is splendidly vindicated. A vagrant war item records that one Victoriano Huerta is marooned in London, presumably awaiting a chance to get into Spain. Little noticed amid bigger distractions, the Constitutionals took peaceful possession of the Mexican capital.

The future, perhaps, is anybody's guess; but Huerta is out, and a Government that has some show to restore settled conditions is in and only a few American lives have been lost. The President and the Secretary of state were rather lonesome in adhering to the policy that has issued in this bloodless fashion; but when they look across at Europe they are entitled to deep satisfaction.

This country is horrified by the European slaughter. Everybody is horrified by war after it begins; yet only a few months ago we heard a great deal about the merits of taking a strong stand with Mexico, asserting our national dignity and the rest of the rigmarole that meant rows of American youths dead or wounded in a trivial cause.—Saturday Evening Post.

The newspapers all over the state are these days filled with accounts of the opening of the schools, and without exception, so far as they have come to our notice, it is stated that the attendance on the first day is largely in excess of that for the corresponding day of last term. The Sanford Herald that is before us gives an excellent account of the opening of the schools in the city of Sanford and the county of Seminole, accompanied with illustrations and statistics. There are eleven white schools with an aggregate attendance of 892 pupils. Three of these, including the high school, are in the city of Sanford. Thirty-five white teachers are employed, and they receive salaries in amount from $40 to $225 per month. There are eight Negro schools in the county, with an aggregate attendance of 586 pupils. They employ 17 teachers, who receive salaries ranging from $30 to $90 per month.—Tampa Times.

While the other places in Florida are advertising lavishly to get the new people to invest Sanford is getting them with but very little effort. The Sanford farms can show results and are now selling themselves. Many other sections are only in the embryo stage as far as results in winter vegetable growing and must necessarily spend money to draw the crowds. Sanford is advertising the many resources of the city this season and letting the farms take care of themselves.

A PUBLICITY TAX

It was not to be expected that the proposal of a law for the collection of a publicity fund by taxation would be met by unanimous approval, but it is endorsed by those who have been bearing all the burden of publicity and by a great many who have heretofore paid nothing.

It is almost inconceivable that any person can think that all the benefits of building up a business community go to the real estate men and a few others. Not only is every business activity stimulated by the incoming of new money and new settlers but every individual shares in the comforts and advantages that community prosperity creates. Large communities have better churches, better schools, better houses to live in, better theaters with better attractions and cheaper prices, better music, free libraries and too many advantages to mention over rural communities. This accounts for the trend cityward. It is simply because life is made more attractive by the pooling of many resources, providing individual comfort, advantages and entertainment at a minimum expense to the individuals.

There is no one who will argue that it is right for a few men in a town to bear all the expenses of building up a large, prosperous, refined and moral community, when all alike share the benefits. When a few have to do it all it becomes burdensome to that few; when the tax payers of an entire community divide the expense it is infinitesimal to each and no feels it.—Reporter-Star.

Many letters are being received stating that he is not a candidate for the U. S. Senatorship. That leaves only 97 candidates.—Clearwater Sun. Evidently your mathematical education was neglected, Bro. Powell. If there were 98 candidates and Bob withdrew it would leave but one—Ex-Gov. Gilchrist. Bob was the 97 other candidates himself.—Zolfo Truth.

The Commercial Club will have their regular meeting next Friday night and many matters of importance taken up and passed. The fall season is on us and there is much work for the Commercial Club to do. Are you helping in this great work or do you lag along behind and let the other fellow do your share?

The Sanford Herald says the fishing in Florida is the finest in the United States. Sure. Come to Apalachicola and get some of it.—Apalachicola Times. Thanks. Send on that barrel of oysters, if you expect a crate of eelers.—Houston Post.

Rollins College Notes
Whoever returns to the Rollins campus after a summer's absence is always impressed afresh with its unique beauty. It is perhaps not too much to say that no college campus in the country—not Cornell or Wisconsin, has a more charming situation. Bordering Lake Virginia, one of a chain of four lakes of various shapes, connected together by navigable streams, it slopes southward nearly forty feet to the water's edge. The porches and windows of the men's and women's dormitories command a view of the lake, and of the woods on the opposite bank, and of the sunset. The campus itself is grassed, shaded with large water-oaks, and decorated with numerous shrubs and plants. At the edge of the lake are the large college boat house, and two swimming and diving docks, one for men and one for women, and the dormitories are flanked by three clayed tennis courts for the use of teachers and students.

How to Send Fruit

The Department of Agriculture makes the following suggestions: In order to avoid disappointment, those sending fruits to the department for identification should observe the following points:

In all cases the local name of each variety should be given, together with an account of the age, size and habit of growth of the tree or vine, and any other points of interest regarding it. Each specimen should be well wrapped with paper and carefully packed in the mailing package.

All fruits sent should be ripe. This is especially desired because green uncolored specimens cannot be correctly identified. Decayed or over-ripe fruit should not be sent, as it is of no value for this purpose and is likely to leak and injure the mails. Each variety should be numbered and the sender's name should be on either the inside or the outside of each package. The department sends suitable mailing boxes and postal franka upon request, so that specimens for identification may be forwarded without payment of postage.

The Citrus Canker

At the meeting of growers held at Gainesville last week, the matter of financing a campaign to eradicate the Citrus Canker was thoroughly discussed. The growers present voted to tax themselves 50 cents per acre of trees five years of age and under and $1 per acre of trees over five years of age. A per centage of this was to be made available at once and the remainder on demand. Growers throughout the state will be called on to do likewise. Many men in the audience who have no groves asked to be taxed the same as if they owned 50 to 100 acres of bearing trees.

Contributions can be sent to the Florida Growers and Shippers League, Orlando, Fla. Every owner of a grove should support this work. The Canker is the most dangerous disease that has yet gotten into the state. Mr. Tenny, manager of the League is meeting with great success in his fight to get rid of it.

How Indians Sleep Warm.

The Indian, according to a writer about camp life, resorts to two methods to keep warm while asleep. If it is not unduly cold, he lights a rather large fire and warms the earth, then rakes away the coals, lies down and pulls his blanket over him. In colder weather, besides this, he heats a big boulder, covers it lightly with earth, and curls himself around it. He never wraps himself in the blanket, but uses it exclusively as a covering.

Passing of the Epitaph.

A monument dealer says but few people now have epitaphs on the monuments of their loved ones. It is getting so in many cases that you can't guess a fellow's final destination by the way the marble ticket routes him.—Houston Post.

Wise Precaution.

A certain politician desired a diplomatic appointment, says the Washington Star. A friend, in surprise, said to him: "But you don't even speak the language of the country?" "Well," replied the determined applicant, "a man isn't nearly so likely to make indiscreet remarks, if he has to get a lexicon and look up the meaning of every word he utters."

Church Advertising

Advertising in the newspapers is one of the most effective means of promoting interest in the affairs of churches in the opinion of Rev. Carlton D. Harris, editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, an official organ of that denomination.

In a recent issue of the magazine Rev. Mr. Harris gave considerable space to an explanation of his views on the subject, his arguments being ones that must appeal to every preacher who is not utterly divorced from the activities of business and social life.

He argues that as every success-advantages of publicity and the power of printers' ink, there is no weighty reason why ministers of all denominations should not use it judiciously in the advertising of their church services and of the religious organizations that are such important adjuncts to successful work these days.

Many people, Dr. Harris thinks, seldom if ever go into a church simply because they know nothing of its attractions and the fields it offers for usefulness and happy living. He cited one instance of a young man who was induced to attend a meeting of a Southern Methodist church in Baltimore by an advertisement in one of the daily papers. Now, Dr. Harris says, this young man is one of the leading men in that church, and there are many other cases that could be pointed out where a good church advertisement has done a great amount of good.

In Philadelphia the churches have been doing extensive newspaper advertising for a number of months and report excellent results. The fact is that this is essentially an advertising age. The people of Miami go to the beach on Sunday in far greater numbers than they would otherwise, because they are "reminded" to go by attractive advertisements.

We may argue that surely no one should have to be induced in this way to worship God, but that is not the point. People nowadays have an idea that out in the sunshine, maybe over on the beach, or out in the country, they can worship the Creator as sincerely and as helpfully as in a church. The time has come and it is well for church workers to realize it when the church must offer attractions that will equal those which take people from church services to other pastimes, and perhaps it will take good advertising to make the people know that this has been attained. Miami Metropolis.

Florida Farmers Move Frequently

Washington, D. C., Oct. 6. In compiling data for the last Federal Census, the enumerator asked every farmer in Florida this question: "How long have you lived on the farm you now occupy?" This question was answered by 43,792 of the 50,000 farm operators in this state. More than 2,000 stated that they had occupied their farms only one year or less. 10,858 from 2 to 4 years, 8,001 from 5 to 9 years and 14,718 10 years and over. The most restless class of people in this state is the tenant who operates his farm on the share basis. These are 4,517 of these farmers in this state. 4,209 of them made answer to the question and their replies indicated that 2,000 or about 20 per cent of them moved every year.

NOT HER OWN BAKING

MRS. NEWLYWED HAD TAKEN NO CHANCES.

Biscuits That Pleas'd Hubby So Much Were Not the Production of His Adored One, as He Had Supposed.

The newly married man was at home at last. It was a cozy flat, not a mere kitchenette cut off by a screen or curtains and interfering with the ostensible purpose of the room. Still, it must be written in truth that the kitchen was not large. Two persons might occupy it at once, unless they were engaged in a conversation that required Delsartian gesture.

The newly married man had telephoned repeatedly since 3:00 p. m. correcting the time he would arrive to a minute, as nearly as he could calculate it, allowing so many minutes for the movement of the train between the given points. He lived near the elevated and knew he could make the distance from the station to the flat in 54 seconds by his watch, as he was a sprinter.

He found his bride blushing happy, with a pretty apron covering her elaborate house gown and just a hint of perspiration on her brow. Running to the telephone now and then while preparing dinner had conspired with her natural enthusiasm over her first real meal at home to induce perspiration, even though the weather outside was not warm. In addition to the calls from the bridegroom she had insinuated several to this tradesman and that for edible things forgotten in her busy though dreamy marketing.

The bridegroom, after the ardent and prolonged greeting usual in such cases ever since primitive man brought home his grub on his back or in one hand, while the other carried his rude weapon, inspected the dinner table with something that resembled hunger superficial as hunger commonly is in the honeymoon. The table was bright with new silver and enticing with fresh napery—loot saved from a multitude of wedding gifts, many of which redundant or lacking utility, had been piled away in one of the tiny closets of the place.

Hunger was forgotten for the moment while he again took her in his arms and told her how happy he was that he had won such a prize.

As he sat down he noted with no mistaking various dishes which in substance and garnishing spelled the word "delicateness" almost as plainly as it was spelled on the windows on the avenue. But he loved his bride and was proud of her and knew she would be equal to any domestic emergency that the future might hold.

His love was spurred as he picked up a warm biscuit and, parting it, spread golden butter between the sections. "Darling," he cried, as he tasted the biscuit, "this is even better than the biscuits mother used to make!"

"In it, dearest?" the bride happily exclaimed. "I'm so glad! I got them at the baker's!" Judge.

Poetry in Business.

The craze for giving fantastic names to de luxe articles designed for the rich lady shopper is spreading. For nearly it was only costly bottles of perfume which received titles supposed to express their contents, such as "Loko You," "Temptress," "Seduction" and "Eastern Mystery." Now the great dressmaking houses are naming every model which leaves their ateliers "Well of Love" is the name of a filmy evening dress, very delicate and in present of even the suspicion of a sleeve, which would not be approved by critics of the slit skirt, although it is a most beautiful example of the dressmaker's art. "Daphne," "Esca-pade," "Caprice," "Modesty," "Fricolity," "Imprudence" and even "Nightmare" are some of the titles of the latest imported dressmakers' models.

The mode is spreading to other objects of a personal quality. For example, a platinum and gold vanity bag is called "Accomplice," and a desk set in tooled morocco is "May He Answer."

Types of Hats for Present Wear

TYPES of hats for present wear, as set forth in the picture shown here, demonstrate the popularity of feathers in August millinery. The small close-fitting turban, made of white feathers with tall upstanding quills, is the most fashionable of late summer models. Hats similar in shape, and even more close fitting, made of white satin, crepe de chine, and black velvet, are trimmed with broad bands of white feathers and finished in nearly every instance with a tall fancy feathers mounted at the front. These turbans in white are the forerunners of feather turbans, in colors, for early fall.

After the feather turban, all white hats of felt or frames covered with fabric and trimmed with wings have made for themselves the strongest place in popular demand. Wings of all kinds, so long as they are fairly soft, one sees mounted in a great variety of ways as there is variety in the wings themselves. A white felt hat with a broad band of white moire ribbon is shown in the picture, with a very effective mounting of two long, soft, white wings. These wings are known as "made" wings. That is they are manufactured and are not taken from the body of a bird. The majority of designs in feather trimmings are in fact, the result of clever handling of ordinary plumage from domestic fowls. Therefore, one's conscience is easy when wearing them.

Next to the all-white hat the black-and-white is liked for present wear. In many cases the crown only is black, and black velvet is the material chosen for making it. A hat of this character is shown in the picture with a tall crown made of a puff of black velvet. It is a turban shape with a wide coronet of white felt. This coronet might be of satin or of moire or any of the popular millinery fabrics. Small white wings are mounted against the crown along the left side of the hat. There is a bow of black velvet on the coronet at the right side. It is merely two flat loops placed toward the back of the hat.

Hats with black velvet crowns and transparent brims made of black or white maline or of silver net are among the prettiest of fashion's fancies. The crowns are soft and the brims are flat and rather narrow, a small sailor. JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

The Warrior

Primeval man was all untaught
And crude of manners as of speech.
He made himself a club and fought
The foe that strayed within his reach.
He fought for shelter or for food;
He fought to conquer or to die.
He loved his own, though fierce his mood,
And when he fought he well knew why.

As time has marched the bugle note
Resounds instead of nature's growl.
Resplendent banners proudly float
Where wild men once were wont to prawl.
The battle is a fearful show,
Primeval man was rude and grim,
But when he met and slew a foe
He knew just why he hated him.
—Washington Star.

WHEN SOLDIERS ARE AFRAID AND BRAVEST.

Fear Greater While Awaiting Order to Charge Than in Midst of Fighting.

Some psychological studies as to the sensations of the soldier who faces a shower of bullets, which were written by Colonel Margarotti of the Italian army, are published as timely in the Bohemia, a newspaper in Prague.

The question as to how a soldier feels at the height of battle was put to about 2,000 men who had seen service in Tripoli. Almost to a man they agreed that the sensation experienced in battle itself was not as strong as the fear before the battle. The most excitable moment was that in which the first shots were fired. The worst experience of most of the soldiers was having to stand still in line of battle. It was the greatest relief imaginable to be ordered to run forward. Some said their sensations in battle included trembling, tears, hair standing on end, hoarseness and even yawning.

All of the replies indicated that the soldiers were largely influenced by the conduct of their immediate superiors. Asked whether it was patriotism, oath of fidelity or the thoughts of penalties to which they were liable that led men forward to their duty, almost all of the men replied, "I went forward because my lieutenant went forward." The officers above-mentioned were rarely mentioned, for the men did not come much in contact with them.

It has been claimed by many historians that such valiant soldiers as Henry IV. and Frederick the Great were trembling during battles.

HOW TO WIN BACK A WIFE.
Tact, Diplomacy and Much "Sugar" Recipe of a Supreme Court Justice.

Analyzing the matrimonial conditions of today, Justice Morschauser of the New York supreme court in Brooklyn said recently:

"In the olden days as soon as a woman married a man she was absorbed by his family, but now when a woman marries a man she takes his name and then absorbs him."

Justice Morschauser was trying to find a way out of the difficulties of Joseph Maxwell and Mrs. Carrie Maxwell. Maxwell's aversion to his "people-in-law" hopelessly upset every scheme suggested by Justice Morschauser. Finally he declared:

"You are forever waving the red flag. You must learn to discard the use of vinegar and employ plenty of sugar when you see signs of an approaching marital storm. That's the only way for a married couple to get along."

"Tact is an absolute necessity for a happy marriage. You should never have been married. I know what a married man should do, for I am married, and if my wife and I had a disagreement it would take just two seconds to straighten things out."

"If you want to win back your wife you've got to go about it in the same way you did when you got her to marry you. Go and get her a box of candy; bring her a few flowers once in a while; then sit down and talk this thing over with her."

NEW HOME FOR PRESIDENTS.

Summer Capital on Colorado Mountain Peak Ready Next Year.

The announcement that President Wilson has consented to lay the cornerstone of a proposed castle of granite upon the summit of Mount Falcon, in Colorado, places an official stamp upon the plan to dedicate the structure as the "summer capital" of the United States—as the residence of the president and his staff during the hot months. The castle is to cost $50,000 and its approaches $200,000 more. It is expected that the main part of the building will be completed in time for the president to spend there the summer of 1915.

The new summer capital will be upon the peak of a mountain which is several hundred feet more than a mile higher than the level of Washington. The foundations of the building are already in place. The site is upon land donated by John Brisben Walker. The plan of the summer capital was Mr. Walker's idea, which he has urged for several years.

Queer Things That Turn Up In the News

Benjie G. Cosgriff found a clump of four leaf clovers in Burlington, Vt., recently, which contained ninety-seven plants.

Charles B. Crowther, arrested for begging in Lakerville, N. Y., had $916, but needed $1,000 to get in the Old Men's home.

In accordance with his last wish, two cigars of his favorite brand were buried with the body of William Seizer of Evansville, Ind.

A novel feature of ships which are being built for a navigation company of Greece is a little church, which will be fitted on board each vessel.

EXTRA! FOREIGN NAVAL BATTLE IN OUR WATERS!

No, the Movies Don't Figure in the Story—Schoolboys the Heroes.

The general public will be surprised to know that England and Germany have engaged in an heroic and desperate naval engagement in American waters. The vessels of the rival fleets included a number of the newest type of super-Dreadnought, several cruisers, a number of torpedo boats and destroyers, two sailing schooners and a raft.

The Brits won, for they avenged in masterly style the recent destruction of three cruisers in the North sea by a German submarine. And in this case it was the lowly raft that took the heart out of the German fleet. Manned by a devoted crew, all volunteers and picked for conspicuous bravery in the past, the raft had on board vast quantities of high explosives.

With fuse lighted, the raft put out from the southern shore, where it had been concealed in the shadow of a laurel bush.

Drifting on a favorable current, it bore down directly to the spot where the power and main strength of the Teutonic war fleet lay, with clockwork engine stopped.

Hoarse commands as well as electric bell signals sounded as an endeavor was made to get under way. But it was too late. Current and fuse had been timed perfectly, and the charge, bearing death and destruction, exploded just as the raft brushed the side of the awe-inspiring German Leviathan Schoengartenhaus. The steel of her armor plate withstood the explosion well in that it was not pierced, but the force of the explosion was so tremendous that she turned turtle and sank. A number of seamen and marines went to a watery grave, but others were enabled to float until humanely picked up either by their own ships or those of the enemy.

And the raft—what of her? Every one of her bluejacketed, white helmeted Royal Marine Light Infantrymen went down unflinchingly with her blackened remnants.

The two sailing schooners, one on each side, did yeoman service in the battle, which now, it is stated, became almost a rout on the part of the Germans. Loaded with infantrymen and hurriedly equipped with field guns on carriages, they paired off, and participants in the engagement report that they furnished a fine example of good old fashioned "yardarm to yardarm" sea fight, with boarding parties, scuppers running blood and all the rest of it.

Where did this great battle take place? Why, in peaceful Rock Creek, Washington—after school was out!

A bulletin issued by the Germans some hours after the battle scoffs at the idea of any serious losses. "The Schoengartenhaus," it reads, "was, though large, an old and obsolete vessel, manned by a small crew purchased in toy stores a number of years ago. The main strength of our navy is still intact."

[N. B.—The high explosives were moderate sized cannon crackers.]

CURBSTONE GLEANINGS

BUDGET OF OPINION "JUST BETWEEN YOU AND ME."

EVEN THE GATE POST NOT IN IT

A CHIEF IS AMONG YE TAKING NOTES AND FAITH. "HE'LL PRENT 'EM"---SO SAYS SAUNTERER.

Advertisement in state paper reads, "Salesman wanted to sell church people on commission." When these salesmen get started I would like to put in my order for a nice soft shelled Baptist.

It is nothing to me which side wins in this international unpleasantness but unless the allies hurry up and take the Germans on the flank (whatever that means) and stop their clock it is a lead pipe cinder that is going to be put in my eye this advisedly and from a careful scanning of all the war news that comes to us filtered by the sanitary inspectors of all the armies. The Germans are showing the world what a well equipped army of men can do and they are making a much better showing than any of the allied armies all reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

The first of October is here and the time for the Supreme Court to settle the little differences about the brick roads has arrived, and while I think of it, don't you all agree with me that the time for petty grievances and bickerings has passed and it is high time that all of us were together on the great question of going ahead and making brick roads and more of them. We surely spend an awful lot of time talking and fooling around when we should be up and doing.

From all reports this will be the greatest winter season for tourists that Florida has ever experienced and how fine it would be if Sanford had that new hotel to accommodate the people who are already flocking here for accommodations. Several new hotels and apartment houses here would be the best paying propositions that men of means could own and just why they are not started is a mystery to me. We hear rumors of one here and there but rumors are not providing a place for the people. It is my candid opinion that a hotel will never be built in Sanford unless Sanford people build it themselves.

"Why don't you advertise?" asked the editor of the home paper. "Don't you believe in advertising?" "I'm ag'in advertising," replied the proprietor of the Haysville Racket store. "But why are you against it?" asked the editor. "It keeps a feller too awful busy," replied the proprietor. "I advertised in a newspaper one time about ten years ago, and I never even got time to go fishing."

A friend of mine who happened to be at the opening of the schools the other day remarked afterward that he deplored the useless additions to school curriculums these days, all of which reminds us that while getting shaved the other day the barber getting on the same line of talk remarked: "Hub, there wasn't no physical geography in my days when I went to school. Teachers didn't know what paddin' was then."

You never miss the water until the well runs dry and by the same token you never miss a good citizen until several weeks after he is dead and as the different questions come up in array—questions that usually needed his advice and assistance his absence at the meeting places is made more noticeable as time passes. I was immeasurably shocked at the telegram announcing the death of George Fernald. Being accustomed to seeing him each day for a number of years and numbered among his friends there were but few matters of state that were not discussed with him and his absence is the more noticeable now. His unflinching good humor, optimistic nature and manner of going into each and every proposition for the benefit of the city and county made him a valuable addition to the city, the board of trade and civic interests of Sanford. He even found time to devote to the Sanford Band and promote its interests and, I am glad to learn that on Thursday night of this week the band will render a Fernald Memorial. Concert, sacred to his memory and his favorite pieces will be rendered in the First Park in the band stand where for so many years his presence was always noted at the different concerts.

No more beautiful tribute could be paid to the memory of George Fernald than to have the band play his favorite selections as a memorial concert and every citizen of Sanford should attend the concert as a mark of respect.

To me the Jew is the one particularly pathetic figure in the European war. He is to be found in great numbers in every army engaged in the conflict. He is loyal and brave and patient and goes forth to kill the men of his blood who are opposed to the government under which he is serving, but there certainly must be lacking the incentive which actuates the men of other nationalities, and that is all the more reason why the Jew is entitled to credit for the part he plays. The Belgian, the German, the Frenchman, the Russian, the Englishman, all have the pride of their individual nations as a spur to activity and they are not fighting, as a rule, the men of their own blood. They are actuated by different ideals, different ambitions, different customs, they speak a different language; but this is not so of the Jews. He is the pawn of circumstances and goes forth to battle against his fellows in the interest of another race. He does his duty with the full knowledge that the ultimate outcome does not mean anything in particular to the Jewish race and when the war is over he must again take up the individual struggle for existence without the reflected greatness of a nation to cheer him. To me his position is indeed pathetic.

There is no end of shame and cant about interlocking directorates in banks. It is about as dangerous to society as for the same man to have an interest in more than one newspaper or any other kind of business.

A Chicago building corporation boasts because it built two stories in 48 hours. Which is a mighty small achievement to those of us who have been accustomed to building at least six stories every night.

During these strenuous days of war when the disciples of Mars are doing all they may to annihilate one another in several parts of the world the life of the newspaper worker is not all beer and skittles by any manner of means. With the strict censorship which has been established in Europe it is difficult for the various press associations to get authentic information and day after day there is a sameness about the press report that drives the telegraph editor almost to despair in an effort to find a paragraph that throws a new light on the situation, and when it comes to writing heads for the stories it taxes his ability to the uttermost to avoid sameness and repetition.

A peculiar idea is more or less prevalent to the effect that the newspaper of the United States purposely print reports unfavorable to the German empire. This is so far from the truth that it would be unworthy of comment were it not for the fact that the majority of the persons who held this view are sincere in their belief. The majority of the newspapers in the larger cities of the country are served by the Associated Press than which there is no more conservative or reliable organization in existence. The Sanford Herald has been receiving daily bulletins from the Publishers' Exchange and the news has been more reliable than that of the big papers.

The attitude of a newspaper in such matters must be judged by its editorial utterances and not by its news dispatches. The present European war is the most difficult to handle, from a newspaper standpoint, of any that has ever occurred. It is practically impossible for a correspondent to get anywhere near the real scene of action and the battle front is a day's journey by fast express in length. If the correspondent should, by some good fortune, secure a story it must pass the censorship of half a dozen individuals before it is transmitted and there is but little left of the original dispatch. The ultimate consumer gets it in the form of a salad minus the mayonnaise.

With the German cable cut it is but natural that most of the news comes from sources controlled by the allies and the reader of every newspaper must necessarily take his news with a grain of salt until he further confirms its statements. There isn't a newspaper in this country but that wants to publish the real news about the war and if it were permitted they would have hundreds of correspondents in the field. Selling newspapers is a business just the same as selling groceries or dry goods and whatever the personal feelings of a publisher may be you can rest assured that he is printing every scrap of news that comes to hand, regardless of whom it favors.

DISPOSED OF FAMILY "PET"

Mr. Bildo Bore Much With Fortitude, but There Came a Time When Patience Failed.

"Did you ever have a dog in the family?" asked Bildo. "We did recently. How that dog got into the family, I don't know. Each member of the household went around saying 'I am sorry they got that dog' by the time we had had him a week.

"There was never any way of telling who was responsible for his presence with us. No one claimed the credit of it.

"We disposed of him because he took a piece out of a man's trousers. It was a peddler's trousers. It is a bad thing to let a dog bite a peddler.

"a day or so after the event and informed me that he had been in the hospital a week, and that I must pay his hospital expenses; also his doctor's bill; also for the time he had lost from his vocation; also for the pants which my dog had ruined.

"When I asked to see his receipts from the hospital and doctor he offered to compromise on my paying $5 for the damage done his trousers. I offered to pay the five, but insisted on immediate delivery of the garment.

"He was unable to deliver the goods, so it cost me nothing. Still, it was a narrow escape, and I decided that I had better either acquire a lawyer or get rid of the dog.

"While I was pondering a man went by all dressed up in a beetle-tailed coat, with white gloves on like a pall-bearer ready to dance the tango, and the dog fell for him. The apples in the Garden of Eden didn't look near as good to Adam as that man did to my dog, and he got a chunk out of the black legs of that man.

"The tango dancer had a fiery disposition and what he proposed was not to sue, but to lick the owner of the dog immediately. This made me very uncomfortable, indeed. I hid in the cellar until the storm blew over.

"We got a muzzle for the dog after that, and then he scratched up the neighbor's geraniums. We consoled ourselves that he was a good watch dog, anyway, but one night a burglar got into the house and stepped on him, and that scared the creature so badly that we had to let him sleep in the bed with us after that.

"We tried keeping him in the shed, but he dug out in the night and after announcing his presence by licking us on the face, he crawled in with us, fleas and muddy feet, and all.

"So we had to get rid of him."

The Camera in War.

Reporting wars with cameras is like hunting big game with a photographic outfit. It gives us something we never had before.

If Gettysburg were fought today the camera would be on Cemetery ridge. Perhaps the talking machine would also be on hand to reproduce for the world the terrible grumble and rattle and rattle of a battle.

There would be a moving picture worth looking at—films reeling off Pickett's charge and the talking machine records unrolling the crackle of 10,000 rifles!

I wonder if our Victor friends could reproduce a sound as great as the combined roar of Leo's and Meade's 300 and more cannon?

But even with the daring scouts high in air taking photographs of the enemy's positions, and with cameras and phonographs reproducing battles for fireside consumption, war finally comes down to the same old game—men behind the guns shooting the other fellows.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Who Laughs Last.

It was in old Pohick church down in Fairfax county, Virginia, that Washington used to worship, and the ancient town of Alexandria stood much as it stands now on the south bank of the Potomac before the city of Washington had begun to be on the north bank. Pohick also still exists, as the following story proves:

"Washington folks laughs at the Alexandria slow-pokes," mused the Potomac river flatboatman, "and the Alexandria feller laughs at the Fairfax hayseeds, and the Fairfax guys, they laughs at the one-galussed yaps down in Pohick."

"And Pohick?" queried a curious stranger.

"Oh, none of 'em ain't nuthin' on them Pohick natives," returned the ancient mariner confidently. "Them hill-billies laughs at the po' devils in Washington what has ter wear their sto' clo'es an' a clean shirt every single week-day an' has ter come plum' down ter Pohick for their coon-huntin'. They laughs at 'em, but, mostly, they pities 'em!"

Society Women's Plan

New York, Oct. 2.—A movement to aid southern planters by popularizing cotton goods for evening gowns was started here today, when Miss Florence Guernsey, president of New York City Federation of Women's Clubs issued an appeal to 100,000 members of the federation to purchase such a gown and wear it at

during the week of Oct. 5th. Miss Guernsey announced she would offer resolutions at the convention of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, which meets at Binghamton Oct. 9th, and at the New York City Federation which meets Oct. 30th, urging all women to join in the movement.

Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs endorsed Miss Guernsey's plan, saying it was in line with her appeal sent out to 1,500,000 club women of the federation, not only to comply with President Wilson's request to attend the peace services next Sunday, but to purchase as generously as possible of American cotton materials.

Bridge Luncheon

Mrs. D. L. Thrasher entertained with a delightful bridge luncheon Friday afternoon in honor of Mrs. W. E. Watson, one of the season's popular brides.

An elegant simplicity characterized the decorations which were effectively carried out in red. In the reception hall red roses featured the decorations, while the drawing room was charmingly pretty with its red dahlias and calladium leaves.

In all of the rooms the mantels were banked with cut flowers and ferns.

Carnations were used for decoration in the dining room. From the chandelier over the table ribbons of red reached to the corners and were caught in place with sprays of fern, a lovely combination of colors upon the white cover. Upon the center of the table a tall vase held a shower of red carnations and ferns, from which radiated glass chains, connecting four smaller vases of carnations, with its dainty appointments and favors of small white satin slippers filled with candies.

The table was artistically pretty. A tempting six course luncheon was served.

HOMESEEKERS ARE COMING

Jacksonville, Oct. 9. — Approximately 500 western and northern homeseekers have arrived in Florida, to be nearer accurate 493, the majority reaching here yesterday and the others to arrive today.

These all arrived on trains on the Southern Railway, from the western gateways, being brought in on fourteen extra cars attached to the Royal Palm, which was run in two sections yesterday, and will arrive in two sections this morning.

In addition to these homeseekers, the passenger travel from the west and north west was so heavy that the Royal Palm is being operated in two sections to accommodate the traffic. Both sections of the train yesterday were crowded with people coming to Florida, many of them for the purpose of remaining until spring.

From every source comes information of heavy travel. Knoxville declares Florida will have its greatest year; Chicago sends word that the travel through that gateway will be the heaviest known, while from St. Louis comes every indication of a bounteous harvest of tourists.

ANTWERP, NEXT BELGIAN CITY TO SUFFER HORRORS OF WAR

A BRIEF SUMMARY OF EVENTS IN THE GREAT EUROPEAN SLAUGHTER—DECISIVE RESULTS EXPECTED BY BOTH SIDES SOON

London, Friday, 11 a. m. Reuter dispatch from Antwerp says: "Bergerhauf, Antwerp, suburb, burning. Bombardments been terrible, according to Ostend dispatch dated last night. Germans reported throwing incendiary bombs. Many parts of city burning."

Official statement by German General Staff at Berlin, dated last night, says nothing definite decisive on western front. Fort Breendonk, before Antwerp been taken. Attack on inner fortifications begun. Bombardment city behind fort opened when Commander assumed responsibility. Hostile aviator damaged hall at Dusseldorf, destroyed airship cover.

Antwerp besieged cannot long withstand heavy guns of Germans and will be forced to capitulate. Inhabitants fleeing to Holland and Germany.

Little doing in the eastern and western theater of war. Success claimed by allies and Germans at both places. Von Kluck still holds out, and no marking movement has turned the German army yet. Zeppelins have attacked city of Antwerp and dropped bombs on inhabitants, killing numbers, and terrorizing the populace.

Both armies in west depending on flanking movements and troops are completely worn out with long fighting.

Bulgaria reported as entering war and will be an ally of Germany, having already attacked Serbia.

Capital has been removed from Antwerp to Ostend to avoid the German army that will soon enter Antwerp.

Reported that allies line has been broken by attacks of German cavalry in the French territory and on the western wing of the army.

In the east the Russians are battering away at Przemysl and will effect the capture of that city. All efforts of Austrians to relieve the city have been repulsed by the Russians.

THE GREAT WORLD SERIES STARTS TODAY

Messrs. Gibson and Hurt have arranged for the Great World's Series and the score board at the Imperial is the best that has ever been arranged in Florida. The electrical equipment is par excellence and the plays will be shown just as they are made on the field of action at Boston and New York. The ball fans of Sanford and vicinity will enjoy the games as never before and with the same excitement as if they were watching them in New York. The game will be called each day at one o'clock and from that time until they push the electrical switch board right from the wires will chronicle each and every play. It is a most fascinating pastime even if you are not a ball fan and the people of Sanford should patronize the games each day. The admission will be 35 cents.

Methodist Sunday School Honored

The pastor of the First Methodist Church of this city attended the Sunday School Institute which was held in Jacksonville on Monday and Tuesday of this week. The reports from the school here proved to be the best organized Methodist school reporting from this section of the state. A beautiful silk and gold banner was awarded to this school. The banner will be exhibited next Sunday. Every member of the school will rejoice, as each one has made possible the result.

Plans are being perfected whereby a much larger attendance and better work will be done before another report will be made, so that the school will hold first place in the state.

EXPRESS RATES ARE NOT EXORBITANT

OSCEOLA GROWERS SATISFIED THAT COMPANY IS TRYING TO SERVE

Kissimmee, Oct. 7.—There was a well attended meeting of the Osceola Growers Association here today. The principal topic of discussion was express rates. Lloyd S. Tenny, secretary and manager of the Florida Growers and Shippers League, W. K. Haile, superintendent of the man of the express company and many of the merchants attended.

It was shown to the growers that the Southern Express Company was in no way responsible for the rates of which the growers had been complaining and that voluntarily that company had petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission to allow it to decrease the rate.

The meeting at Ocala at which the existing rates were put into effect, was a meeting at which the Interstate Commerce Commission fixed the commodity rates and paid no particular attention to the vegetable rates and then issued an order that the vegetable rates would be seventy-five per cent of the first class rate, and the result was an increase in rate.

Sork for Better Rates

It was further shown that it had taken a great deal of work and effort on the part of the company to get the reduction as far as it is, because the Southern Express Company had to first get the consent of the other express companies of the country, something with it and then had to get the consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission which it was petitioning for and was hopeful of getting in effect November 1.

The lessons in express rates which were given the growers were interesting and gave them an insight into the many questions entering rates. These rates which are to go into effect not only apply to Florida but Louisiana and wherever the Southern Express Company reaches, and effects the connecting express companies as well.

Growers Convinced

Many of the growers who came with blood in their eyes and with the conviction that the express company was a robber went away as deeply convinced that the company was trying to do the right thing by the growers and that the application of the Interstate Commerce Commission at the grower were initial.

A resolution was unanimously passed as follows: "Moved that it is the sense of this meeting that we approve as a general proposition the proposed new rates, but that we recommend that the express officials here present be asked to confer with the express companies in an effort to get a further reduction of the proposed rate on eggplant."

Company Doing Its Best

Mr. Haile speaking of the meeting afterwards said: "I am glad indeed that these growers were satisfied that we are trying to do what is right, and that we have satisfied them that this is as near right as human beings can figure it out, and they are going to withdraw any complaint to it for it would mean that we must, against our will, keep in effect the present high rates, and that would mean an undue burden on the grower, and to such an extent would that burden be that we would not get any shipments worth while."

"I can appreciate that these men have quite an average in eggplant, and on the heavier vegetables like eggplant our rate we are asking for is sixty per cent of the first class rate, while on beans, peas and the lighter vegetables it will be sixty-five per cent."

To Serve the Public

"We have adopted and are living up to the motto 'Serve the Public.' Signs of that kind are in all our offices, and it is a pleasure to me to attend such meetings, and explain matters in full detail, and leave it to the fair minded if we are not keeping to the straight and narrow path."

Bought Hancock Place

Mr. David Taylor of Asbury Park, N. J., has purchased through the Connolly Real Estate Agency the L. J. Hancock place on Golden Lake. Mr. Taylor is here and will take possession at once, intending to make Sanford his future home. We welcome these new people to Sanford. He is accompanied by L. G. Egbert and son, who will spend the winter at the Taylor home.

BULKHEAD WORK IS PROGRESSING RAPIDLY AT THE PRESENT TIME

THE CONCRETE PILINGS ARE BEING PLACED AND DREDGE ALMOST READY

The bulkheading is progressing, slowly perhaps and yet as fast as could be expected when one takes into consideration all the difficulties that these men who have the work in charge have surmounted. The work of dredging has been delayed on account of the bad pair encountered at the very outset. This was necessary to overcome by the use of specially constructed machinery that could only be built in certain shops and larger engines and other equipment were found to be absolutely essential.

While the workmen were waiting for the new equipment the work has not lagged, but the bulkhead is being constructed every day as the concrete pilings were being constructed all the time they were waiting for the machinery.

Few Sanford people realize what a fine piece of concrete work these pilings are going to be and a trip to the lake front is a revelation to the visitors. The pilings are probably the best that have been manufactured in the state for similar purposes and consist of concrete posts tied and reinforced by iron and steel and they will last a century. The pilings are placed in position by water pressure and the wall that was finished part of the way a few weeks ago has been furnished with the concrete caps and makes a handsome appearance. The walls are doubly reinforced and tied by concrete posts that are fastened to dead men as the foundations in the ground are called and these will absolutely prevent the walls from giving way to high seas or heavy pressure from the wind and water. The walls are very substantial and the work of filling in will start in about one week from date as the cutter heads will arrive by that time. The dredge boat and engines and all the appliances of the very latest make are now installed and the real work will start in a matter of days and be finished on record time.

Congregational Church

Next Sunday morning, a sermon on the Psalms will be presented, seeking to give practical suggestions for more appreciative use of that portion of the Bible.

In the evening at 7:30 the service will be short and uplifting, good music especially prepared, and a short talk by the pastor on "Gamael and his let-it-alone policy." A cordial welcome is extended to all.

Our Sunday school is being recruited and yet there is room for more. Our school is graded, using the Graded Series of lesson helps. We hope all the old scholars and many new ones will be found with us next Sunday.

Don't forget the Get Together social tonight (Friday). A pleasant time is promised all who come, a church fellowship evening, music and light refreshments. Come and bring a neighbor with you.

SANFORD 27; ORLANDO 20

Sanford Basket Ball team beat the Orlando Military Co. team last Friday night on the home floor. It was a fast game from start to finish. This is the team that beat Sanford on the Orlando floor by a score of 29 to 26 but Sanford turned the tables on them in good form. The team work of the Sanford boys, which is considered as good as any in the state fooled the Orlando players who were much larger men. A large crowd witnessed the game and were satisfied in seeing the home team win.

Sanford plays Orlando tonight on the Orlando floor, a tight game is expected and Sanford boys hope to put another victory in their column.
