Convicted Abortinist Expects Appeal Decision

BOSTON (AP) — It was in February 1975 that Dr. Kenneth C. Edelin was convicted and sentenced to one year's probation for manslaughter after performing an abortion at Boston City Hospital.

The 37-year-old Edelin has yet to start that probation, pending his appeal in court. He says he expects the Massachusetts Supreme Court to rule this month or next on his appeal.

The debts for his legal defense finally have been paid, about $60,000 each for his trial and his appeal to the Massachusetts high court. "A small part" of the money came from his own pocket, he said.

Edelin, associate director of obstetrics-gynecology at Boston City Hospital, was convicted in connection with a legal abortion performed on a 17-year-old in 1973. Much of the testimony concerned whether the 20-to-24-week-old fetus was sufficiently developed to live apart from the mother.

Ancient Chants Eliminated

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Episcopal representatives have eliminated from a proposed new rendering of the church's historic Book of Common Prayer some ancient chants considered offensive to Jews. It was the first time in four centuries that the old masterpiece of ritual and scripture reading had undergone extensive revision.

The deletions came as the church's governing convention neared final action today on the revised version.

Rescuers Search For Bodies Of 155 Plane Crash Victims

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Rescue workers set to the grim task today of separating the remains of 155 bodies from the wreckage of a Turkish jetliner that crashed and burned on a mountainside in central Turkey Sunday night.

Police said there were no survivors among the 147 passengers and eight crew members on board. Police and airline sources said the passengers included 85 Italians and 18 West Germans bound for vacations on the southwest coast of Turkey and 22 Turks.

The nationalities of the other passengers were not known yet.

The wreckage of the three-jet Boeing 727 and the bodies were spread over a large area, local police said.

Moderates Lose In Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A coalition of three moderate parties ended 44 years of Socialist government in Sweden today with a national election victory whose greatest consequence may be to set back leftist parties elsewhere in Western Europe.

With only 50,000 to 60,000 postal ballots still to be counted, the moderates had 50.7 per cent of the 5,359,921 ballots counted and 180 seats in the 349-seat parliament. The Social Democrats and their Communist supporters had 47.6 per cent and 169 seats. The new prime minister will be Thorbjorn Falldin, 50-year-old head of the Center party.

Although the victorious coalition is likely to improve relations with the United States after the seven prickly years in which Olof Palme was prime minister, all three parties are committed to Sweden's traditional neutral foreign policy and to the welfare state that Palme's Social Democratic party built up.

Woman Arrested After Gun Fails To Fire

Sanford police stormed a house and arrested a 52-year-old woman Sunday night after she pointed a revolver at two officers and pulled the trigger twice, police said.

Eva Mae Dixon, 160 Bethune Circle, Sanford, was being held in lieu of $20,000 bond today in county jail on two attempted murder charges plus use of a firearm in commission of a felony and resisting arrest with violence.

Police said they had earlier answered a disturbance call at the Dixon residence area where called back to the scene where they attempted to quiet Ms. Dixon.

Lt. Mike Rotundo and Patrolman John Moore were standing on the front porch talking to the woman when she produced a .38-caliber revolver, pointed it at the officers and pulled the trigger twice, officers reported.

The weapon failed to fire and the woman ran inside the house as the officers took evasive action. Officers said a shot was then fired inside the house. Police quickly surrounded the modest brick home in the Academy Manor subdivision and officers said they had broken in a side door and a bedroom door to take Ms. Dixon into custody.

No injuries were reported and the suspect was handcuffed and transported screaming to jail.

Hush Puppies, Meat Target Of Burglars

Sheriff's deputies today were looking for burglary suspects who may be planning a big bar-b-que.

Over the weekend yeggs scaled a rear fence to loot a freezer at the Red Bull Bar-B-Q, U.S. 17-92, Fern Park, of meats and hush puppies valued at $152, Deputy R. S. Morton reported.

Deputies said the yeggs apparently used three garbage cans to haul away 90 pounds of spare ribs, three boxes of catfish, two cases of hush puppies and a case of chickens.

Orlando Man Jailed
An Orlando man was jailed by Altona Springs police on charges of attempted burglary, possession of burglary tools and possession of controlled substance.

Bond for Norris Brinson, 25, Orlando, was set at $15,000, according to county jail records.

Radio, Clothing Missing
In weekend burglary and theft reports, Carol J. Koester, 200 Pearl Lake Causeway, Forest City, told sheriff's deputies that a radio and clothing valued at $490 were missing after a burglary at her residence.

Commission Eyes Hikes For County Executives

By ED PRICKEIT
Herald Staff Writer

Minimal pay hikes for about eight top-level county administrators, the county's in-house legal department and a rift between port and county officials are on tap Tuesday when commissioners are scheduled to approve fiscal 1976-77's $18.3-million budget.

Exec. Asst. Roger Neiswander said today he will ask commissioners to approve pay increases of from two to three per cent for about eight county officials at or near the director level.

"It's one area the board needs to take a look at," Neiswander declared. The commission already approved 1.6 per cent increases for most of the individuals on the executive assistant's list, but the executive assistant says studies show county salaries out of line with what executives at the same level earn in the private sector.

County Commissioner Sid Vihlen Jr., said he will ask Neiswander and the Office of WINTER SPRINGS — Four public hearings will head the agenda when the City Council meets tonight at 7:30 in city hall. To be considered are a proposal for a referendum, two amendments to the city charter: to change the date for the city election from December to coincide with the November general election and to require a deputy mayor taking over a vacancy in the mayor's office to stand for election at the next regular election rather than fill out the term as is now the case.

Public hearings will also be held on ordinances on the $458,367.15 budget for fiscal 1976-77 and authorizing the municipal court or the county court to assess a $1.00 cost for the city's law enforcement education fund.

Forest Drive, Sanford, reported a citizens band radio, 10 stereo tapes and three mens suits, total value $695, were taken when someone broke into an auto at his residence, deputies said.

Bicycle, Chain Stolen
Larry J. Cowart, 501 Lake Marlon Drive, Altamonte Springs, reported burglars entered a garage at his residence and made off with a bicycle and a set of golf clubs valued at $75.

Appliances Missing
Lynn T. Hazlett, Lake Monroe, reported a hot water heater and a refrigerator, valued at $350, were taken from a house on E. School Road, off SR-15, Lake Monroe. Deputy R. A. Alexander reported the thieves are believed to have hauled away the appliances in a pickup truck.

Held on $5,100 Bond
Sanford police jailed Walter Knight, 35, Winter Park, in lieu of $5,100 bond on charges of trespassing and resisting arrest with violence.

Patrolman Mike Tindel reported he responded to a report of a disturbance at the residence of Alberta June, 908 E. Eighth St., and during a scuffle with Knight the officers portable radio was knocked to the ground.

Tindel said the speaker-control head of the radio unit was destroyed when it was apparently crushed by a vehicle at the disturbance scene.

Later he planned to stop at Ford-Dole headquarters in Jacksonville and visit state party leaders.

Dole began his Florida visit Sunday evening at Panama City in Northwest Florida.

Sanford police reported a $10,000 1975 Cadillac convertible was hot-wired and stolen from the display lot of Joe Creamons Inc., 3700 S. Orlando Drive (U. S. 17-92) early Saturday.

The auto was later recovered at Orlando by Orange County sheriff's deputies. Police said the vehicle had hood and fender damage when found unoccupied.

Hubert Dykema reported burglars took items valued at $192 in a weekend break in at Bill and Jan's Bar, 201 Park Drive, Sanford. Police reports listed lost taken by the yeggs as $20 in change, a portable television and 12 cases of beer.

Commissioners agreed last Tuesday to leave $140,000 in the budget for legal services next year. The final county budget came in about $18.3-million.

Property owners will pay $5.37 for each $1,000 of assessed valuation. The fiscal 1976-77 millage is the same as last year's — 5.37 mills. Some $21.6-million in requests were initially submitted to commissioners by department chiefs.

Fiscal budget adoption is set for a 7 p.m. public hearing. Commissioners also are scheduled to consider a squabble between the county and the Seminole Port Authority which may lead to a lawsuit.

The dispute involves a $15,000 payment on the county's 1974 agreement to repay a $139,000 loan for building a fuel oil tank farm at the port on the St. Johns River.

Management Analysis and Evaluation (OMAE) to begin study of an orderly phaseout of services of County Atty. Tom Freeman and labor attorneys Alley Alley & Blue to make way for an in-house legal department.

Last Tuesday, individual commissioners expressed a desire for an in-house legal staff but the commission stopped short of an official vote. A vote is required before a legal department can be created.

Both Freeman and Neiswander have urged commissioners to act on the issue. In addition, Freeman says he will not be available for the new position when and if a new staff is hired. Envisioned are two attorneys and a secretarial staff at a cost of from $100,000 to $115,000. Last year, county taxpayers shelled out about $200,000 for legal services.

Chimp Case Airing Tuesday

ORLANDO (AP) — A county court judge will air a case Tuesday about five chimpanzees owned by Rudolf Alexander of Geneva.

Assistant State Atty. Randy Kramer is asking that the chimps, declared "neglected" by the county animal control board, be seized and given to the Central Florida Zoo if Alexander doesn't dispose of the animals within 30 days.

The animal control board ruling came after two years of complaints of the chimps running at large, frightening neighbors and motorists.

Alexander, an animal trainer, is fighting the efforts to take away his "family" and says he has completed new cages for the chimps at a cost of $5,000 to replace cages termed "substandard" and not meeting requirements.

Water Unit Move Gets New Push

By JACQUELINE DOWD
Herald Staff Writer

A somewhat overlooked section of a state law has improved Sanford's chances of being the new home of the St. Johns Water Management District headquarters.

The Environmental Reorganization Act of 1975 says the water district headquarters — now in Palatka — should be located close to the Department of Environmental Regulation (DER) regional office, now in Orlando and committed to the Central Florida area.

An idea now being pushed by State Rep. Bob Hattaway of Altamonte Springs proposes moving both the water district headquarters and DER to the Seminole area — either to the port industrial park west of Sanford, to the Sanford-Central Florida Airport or to a commercial office complex in the area.

Meeting both agencies here could mean 300 to 400 new jobs to Seminole, Hattaway said.

"And putting it all in the same building would provide better service to the people," he said. "People wouldn't have to run all over Florida to get their permits."

But the proposal may complicate a decision already overburdened with political implications because the water district board would have to agree with DER Secretary William J. Page Jr. on a location and the board members have been squabbling over the proposed move since early this year.

A committee of board members studying the proposed move was scheduled for mid-September — until Board Chairman Tommy Gray upset the committee's pro-move balance by replacing Jasper Jones of Gainesville with newly-appointed board member J. R. McGraw of Ocala.

Committee member Jack Christmas of Apopka, who has been a strong supporter of moving the district headquarters to the Orlando area, said today he has no idea when the committee will meet.

"I've got a good idea he was put in there to cool off the idea of moving out of Palatka," Christmas said.

Hattaway's proposal — which he hopes will break the political logjam — includes locating water district regional offices in Palatka and Brevard County. The St. Johns District currently manages water resources in parts of 14 counties, including Seminole, and will expand Jan. 1 to include all or part of 19 counties from the Indian River to the Georgia line.

The proposal has won support from DER officials in Orlando as well as the Orange County Council of 200, but water district officials question whether the law puts the responsibility for nearby offices on them. In two other Florida districts DER has moved in with the water management staff.

At the Sept. 13 meeting, the council voted 5-1 to provide a 35-day grace period for signs to become subject to the effective date of the existing sign ordinance and directed the mayor to give 30 days extension to all persons who have erected signs since the effective date. The council gave itself until Nov. 8 to finalize any revision in the ordinance.

At last week's meeting the council turned down a request for a variance in the sign ordinance by Steve Buchschild, representing a real estate agency, who had been cited by Mayor James Lormann for violation, as the ordinance does not allow any exceptions. The council then agreed to review the ordinance and consider changes.

Mining Crisis Goes Very Deep

Territorial waters are dry subjects for discussion, but it is not an exaggeration to say that the fifth annual United Nations Law of the Sea conference was one of mankind's most important contemporary negotiations.

The seabeds of the world are mankind's last depository of natural resources and wealth. As dry land resources are depleted, economics will force man to turn to the incredible wealth of the oceans.

From what little we know, the wealth is staggering — thousands of billion of dollars worth of manganese, copper, natural gas, oil, nickel and other minerals.

The first four laws of the sea conferences have agreed upon about four-fifths of the original agenda. The fifth bogged down because it arrived at the central questions: Who controls the ocean wealth and how shall everybody share in it?

The United States has accepted the Third World's proposition that the deep ocean floor is the common heritage of mankind, but insists that a mix of private concerns and an international agency should be allowed to mine the resources.

Trouble is, the old man had different ideas. Thus when he was sent to a home for the aging, he would not stay. And when he was shuffled from shelter to shelter, program to program, he showed little interest and no cooperation.

It should be apparent to the under-developed countries that the United States has backed up all it can.

Even before the current law of the sea conference met, political reaction in the United States produced a bill signed by President Ford last April which extends the U.S. fishing territorial waters to 200 miles in March.

But it can and should establish as soon as possible broad guidelines acceptable to all nations so that the rules of the game are understood and infractions can be adjudicated.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was entirely right when he told a conference that it would be a mistake for the conference to await a possible change of U.S. leadership in hopes for a better deal.

Not too many years ago, the basics taught in our school boiled down to the three R's — Readin, Ritin and Rithmatic.

The Clock

The best speller in the class had the front seat — just for that particular class — thank goodness — and everyone was out to knock that front-runner down, 'cause when you missed the correct spelling of a word you moved to the very last seat and had to turn your way back up to the front.

Tom Tiede Surviving An Assault Of Charity

FAIRFAX, Va. — (NEA) — The social agencies in this community are having a devil of a time trying to be good to Charles Perkins. He is an 89-year-old retired biochemist who the benevolent officers have decided is incapable of taking care of himself. He disagrees. And herein is a story with a lesson for all.

The service bureau discovered Perkins a few months ago. He had become estranged from his wife; he had been evicted from his apartment; also, he had this bizarre tendency to simply follow his own lead — even if that meant walking alone a highway at 2 a.m. Ergo, the benevolent officers concluded that he needed help.

Trouble is, the old man had different ideas. Thus when he was sent to a home for the aging, he would not stay. And when he was shuffled from shelter to shelter, program to program, he showed little interest and no cooperation.

It should be apparent to the under-developed countries that the United States has backed up all it can.

Even before the current law of the sea conference met, political reaction in the United States produced a bill signed by President Ford last April which extends the U.S. fishing territorial waters to 200 miles in March.

But it can and should establish as soon as possible broad guidelines acceptable to all nations so that the rules of the game are understood and infractions can be adjudicated.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was entirely right when he told a conference that it would be a mistake for the conference to await a possible change of U.S. leadership in hopes for a better deal.

"I have always believed that the constitutional right of equality must be protected by the courts of the land and by all other public officials. On the other hand, I do not believe that court-ordered, forced busing to achieve racial balance is the right way to get quality education.

"I do not support mandatory busing. I do support voluntary transfers. I do see a need, which I would honor, for the President to support the federal courts. If the courts should rule differently from my own personal beliefs, of course I would support them. I do not favor a constitutional amendment to prohibit busing."

Prisoners On Death Row 'Waiting To Be Buried'

EDITOR'S NOTE — "We are already dead on Death Row, you just haven't buried us yet." — James Burns, 22, awaiting execution in Texas' electric chair for murder.

By MIKE SILVERMAN, Associated Press Writer
"The waiting is what kills a man," says Carl Isaacs, who may be one of the first to die if capital punishment resumes in the United States.

Isaacs and 30 other men wait on Death Row in Georgia — one of three states which still have death penalty laws were specifically upheld in a landmark U.S. Supreme Court ruling on July 2.

Death Rowers in the two other states, Florida and Texas, house an additional 116 men and one woman. Hundreds more are under death sentences in states whose laws are being tested in lower courts.

For many of these prisoners, the question uppermost in their minds is the one asked by Charles Proffitt, condemned in Florida: "Who's going to be the first to go?"

Prison officials don't yet know who or when, but these men are waiting for the executioner to come.

Most states then wrote new laws. The court struck down statutes in North Carolina and Texas that made the death penalty mandatory for certain crimes.

Isaacs said he has "a feeling of being the first they'll put in this place, but added, "I'm not saying I'm just going to walk up there and sit down. No, I'm going to fight like a tiger all the way. Ain't no way they can execute me enough to sit down in that chair on my own."

He said he would not ask his family to come to the prison on the day of his execution. "No, I've thought about that," he said, "and I believe I've made them suffer enough as it is."

While they wait for the court to reconvene, the prisoners on death row suffer in their cells, some resigned, some still hopeful.

with the 7-2 majority in reimposing capital punishment, issued a temporary stay so the full court could decide whether to reconsider its ruling.

"I try real hard to get it out of my mind and sometimes can," said Mark Morton Moore, 24, who waits on Death Row in Texas. He was sentenced to die for raping and killing a woman.

"I thought about it all the time, it would run me crazy," Moore said in an interview. "It has been nine years since the death penalty was carried out in this country. Between 1930, when reliable records were first kept, and 1967, 3,859 persons were executed."

The Supreme Court ruled in 1972 that existing death penalty laws gave too much discretion to judges and juries to be equally applied.

Most states then wrote new laws. The court struck down statutes in North Carolina and Texas that made the death penalty mandatory for certain crimes.

Isaacs said he has "a feeling of being the first they'll put in this place, but added, "I'm not saying I'm just going to walk up there and sit down. No, I'm going to fight like a tiger all the way. Ain't no way they can execute me enough to sit down in that chair on my own."

He said he would not ask his family to come to the prison on the day of his execution. "No, I've thought about that," he said, "and I believe I've made them suffer enough as it is."

One of his biggest worries about that last day, he said, is, "I'm afraid I'm going to dirty myself when they come get me."

he said, "I went right on drawing that picture." Child's death penalty law was found to meet the Supreme Court's standards in an Aug. 10 ruling by a state court of appeals.

The ruling can be appealed to higher state courts and federal courts. In a nearby cell, Carl Osborne, 22, said he "felt kind of weak for a second, to be honest with you," when he heard the court's ruling.

Osborne, his mother and another man were convicted in separate trials of killing Hermelie Ross. Osborne maintains he is innocent.

"I can't believe I'm going to the electric chair," he said. "I can't see dying for something I didn't do."

George's Isaacs said he, too, has become interested in religion. A woman sent him a Bible, and he said he'd read it through twice.

"I believe there's a God, yes. I've even got down on my knees and prayed to that God..." Isaacs said. "I've got a whole lot of Bible stuff from correspondence courses. I believe if there is a God, I don't know whether I'll be on his list or not."

But for Wayne K. Patterson, of Denver, it will mean relief at shedding the mantle of being the last man to perform an execution.

Patterson, who opposes capital punishment, "Your mind is so clouded during something like that that you just carry out the law."

At the murder scene, in shambles because of a fight, police said they found part of Starr's dental bridge. Starr claimed that Ginger must have had it in her purse to have repaired. He said it broke weeks before when he coughed and it fell. A forensic odontologist said that was impossible because the bridge was made of chrome cobalt steel, the Herald reported.

Old Flame Sparked At Reunion

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: Last June, when my husband went back to his hometown for his 50th high school reunion, he started up with an old sweetheart, Ernie, who hadn't seen since graduation. Ernie is 68 and retired, and she's a 67-year-old widow with 11 grandchildren!

Ernie took 60 Polaroid pictures at the reunion, and this woman is in 50 of them. She's skinny, has orange hair and wore a light knit dress with a plunging neckline.

Ernie's told our children all about her, and they've been teasing me. He says it's all in fun, but I'm not sure. Maybe I'm handling it all wrong, but I told Ernie he could have his freedom if he'll give me 50 per cent of everything he has.

I need some expert advice. JEALOUS ATTS
DEAR JEALOUS: Don't make Ernie any offers you may not intend to honor. He just may call your bluff. DEAR ABBY: I would like to pose an ethical problem faced by many doctors. Here's the scenario: A husband phones to say he has picked up a case of gonorrhea and fears he has infected his wife. Since the wife is coming in for a routine checkup and wants you to tell her what she has, should you? Should the doctor: A. Refuse subterfuge and insist that the guy level with his wife? B. Agree to test for gonorrhea, and if the test is positive, tell the wife the whole story? C. Go all out and even lie a little to keep the philtering husband out of trouble? DEAR M.D.: Under no circumstances would an ethical doctor treat a patient for a venereal disease without telling her what she has (she could conceivably infect others). And in the interest of public health, instruct the V.D. source to tell his wife — or you will.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column signed J.M. just floored me! It was from a woman who had given birth to twins 34 years ago, and was told by her doctor that one twin had died, but never saw a birth certificate or a death certificate for the "dead" baby. Abby, I had a similar experience. My doctor told me I was carrying twins, and I was thrilled.

I entered the hospital on June 19, 1941, and was examined by several interns and nurses, who told me that I would deliver twins. I had a long difficult labor, so when only one baby girl was presented to me, I was so relieved to have it over with I didn't fuss because I didn't get the twins I had expected.

Well, 34 years later while standing in the checkout line at the supermarket, I nearly fainted when I noticed that the woman ahead of me was the image of my daughter who lives in California! She could have been her identical twin sister. A sick feeling came over me, but I was so numb and speechless, I couldn't bring myself to speak to her.

That incident has haunted me for several months. I have no idea how to start searching for this woman, but if I ever see her again, you can bet I'll think of something to say to her. WONDERRING IN PHOENIX

Few Make It In Fashion

By LILLIE GROSSMAN
NEW YORK — What's it like to break into the garment industry fresh out of fashion school?

What, in fact, has happened to two young graduates of Parsons School of Design who were introduced to the press last spring after they won designing awards in a competition held by the Corduroy Council of America?

In the case of one, the answer is everything; in the other, nothing. Oddly enough, in both instances the awards have had no effect.

Eleanor London, 20, a native New Yorker, won the most innovative design in corduroy award with a graceful, two-piece dress. She graduated from New York's Parsons School of Design in June and now, at this writing, several weeks later, she's still looking for an assistant designer's job.

"I'm doing freelance illustrations in the meantime, but you need more than just a good eye to survive. It's not very lucrative. But it's pretty easy for me because I live with my parents and I don't have to pay room and board."

When she does land that placement for New York's Fashion Institute of Technology, another prestigious fashion school, "If you do get a job with a top house right out of school, it will almost never be a designing job. And the chances of working for the big names who constitute probably only one per cent of the industry are slim."

Design competition winner Michelle Hollingsworth (left) poses with a model wearing her hooded duffie coat in yellow pinwale with patch pockets, snap closure and drawstring hood over white corduroy pants.

Michelle Hollingsworth, 22, from Altus, Okla., graduated from Parsons in January. Before she was the Corduroy Council award for best nautical design with a hooded duffie coat, she'd been hired as an assistant to the head designer at Mollie Paris, a Seventh Avenue firm.

"He called the school and asked for someone and I went on the interview. I began working there in March. Probably 45 kids graduated with me and I'd say two-thirds are working now."

"My job includes designing dresses and evening dresses. We do sort of a sportswear look and that's really my love. Michelle seems to fit a week which is fair for Seventh Avenue. The salaries are a little bit lower than the Broadway houses (where the moderate price apparel that clothes most of the country originates). You don't get to work with the quality fabrics on

County Pulls Switch On Lighting District

Seminole County Commission today turned down a street lighting taxing district for Sweetwater Oaks after about 50 homeowners who claimed to be part of an action committee showed up in protest.

Stanley Milbrun, a homeowner, presented a petition he was signed by 200 homeowners who were "not properly notified" about the district.

"We're totally opposed to this," he said. Sweetwater Oaks developer Everett Huskey claimed economic condition mandated the institution of a street lighting district or else the lights will be turned off.

Paul Henry, Kent County GOP chairman, confirmed a report in today's Wall Street Journal that prosecutor Charles Ruff has subpoenaed records of two Republican committees in Kent County.

"We have no idea what they are looking for. But we hope to get it over quickly and get a clean bill of health," Henry said.

"We are cooperating in any way we can and our relationship (with Ruff's staff) is very cordial. He made every attempt to comply," he said.

The Michigan Republican State Central Committee knew nothing of the investigation until informed by a reporter today, said Jerry Roe, state GOP executive secretary.

Matter Of 'Trust' ...

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Carter's wife says his statements that he has "looked on a lot of women with lust" and "committed adultery in my heart" have caused her no anxiety about his fidelity.

Rosalynn Carter said Monday that although her husband's candid remarks to a Playboy magazine interviewer came as a surprise, "I trust him completely; I've never had to worry about that at all."

"I've looked on a lot of women with lust. I've committed adultery in my heart many times. This is something that God recognizes I will do — and I have done it — and God forgives me for it. But that doesn't mean that I condemn someone who not only looks on a woman with lust, but who leaves his wife and shacks up with somebody out of wedlock."

"Christ says don't consider yourself better than someone else because one guy screws a whole bunch of women while the other guy is loyal to his wife. The guy who's loyal to his wife ought not to be condemning or proud because of the relative degree of sinfulness."

Mrs. Carter, in New York Monday to tape a television interview, said her husband was attempting to explain the Christian religion, "that God doesn't expect everyone to be perfect."

She said that after 23 years of marriage "we have a very, very close relationship, and we always have had, and I think it's because we have a mutual respect for each other."

Mrs. Carter said her biggest complaint about her husband was that "he wakes up in the morning wide awake and I don't."

..And Status

What problems are facing women in Seminole County? That was the theme of a Monday night meeting of the Central Florida Commission on the Status of Women at the Courthouse.

Both Hattaway and Commissioner Sid Vihlen Jr. voted against Williams' motion. Vihlen said he did not favor the street lighting district, however, he said, the government had spent funds to notify citizens by direct mail.

One homeowner said the street lighting district may be the best thing that ever happened to us. "But the matter needs study," he said.

Lake Orienta Clean-Up Taking Shape As County Eyes Effort With Altamonte

Seminole County Commissioners today agreed to consider a joint program with the city of Altamonte Springs to clean up Lake Orienta.

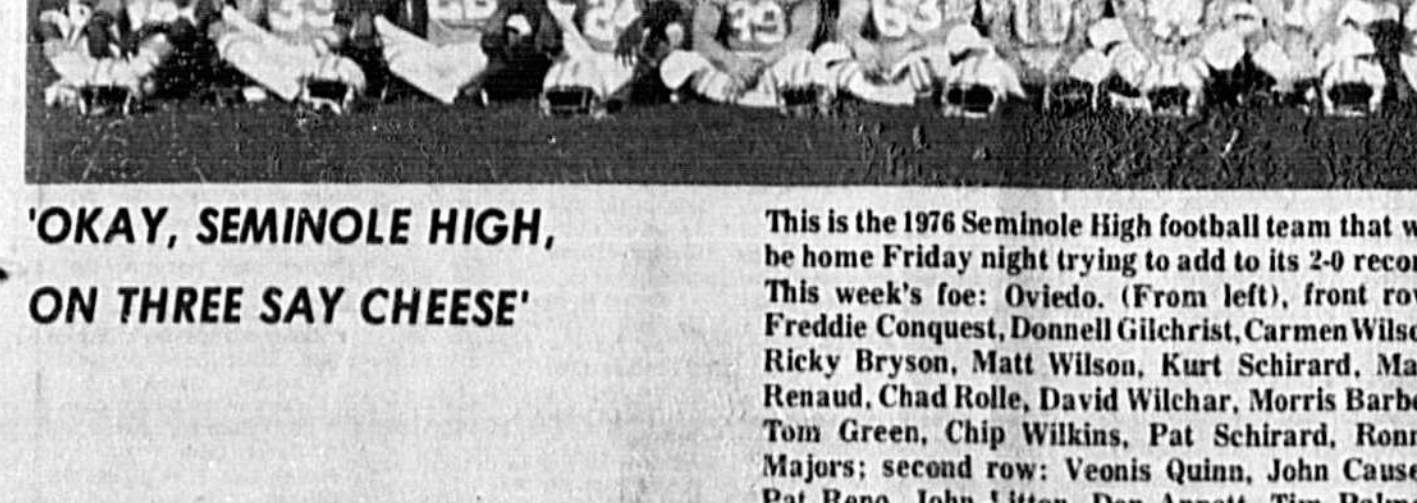

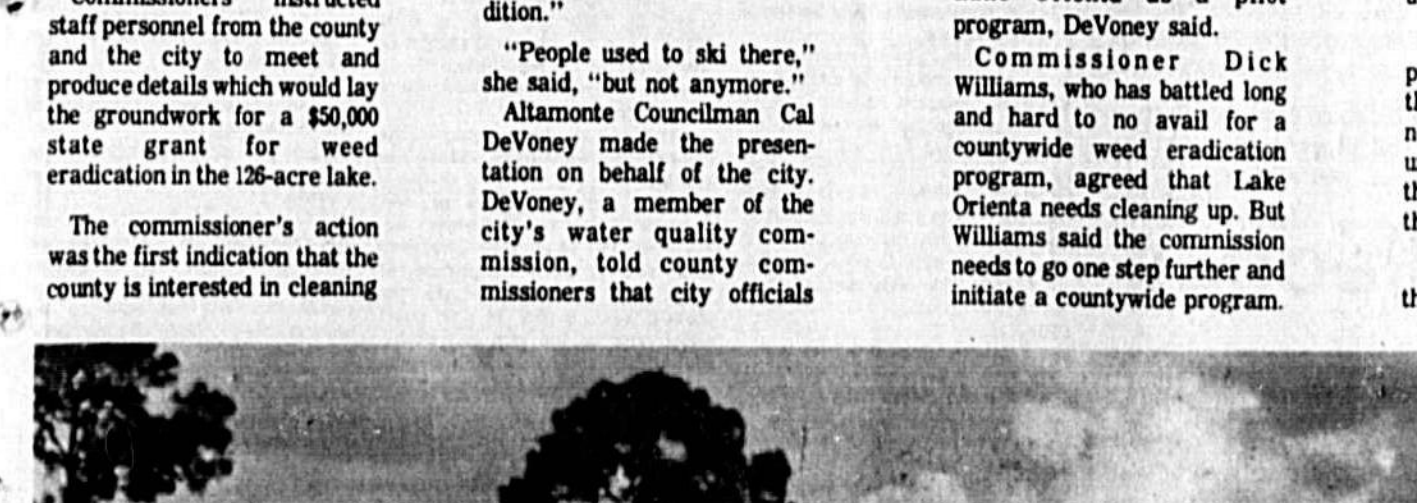

Commissioners instructed staff personnel from the county and the city to meet and produce details which would be the groundwork for a $50,000 state grant for weed eradication in the 126-acre lake.

"People used to call there," she said, "but not anymore." Altamonte Councilman Sandra Glenn, said Lake Orienta is in "very bad condition."

Opposition to Williams' proposal centers on the fact that citizens who don't live on lakes would be required to pay for any countywide lake clean-up program.

DeVosy asked the county to provide "in-kind" services for their portion of the $50,000 needed to get the program under way. The remainder of the cash would be supplied by the city and the state.

Mrs. Glenn also pointed out that city officials plan to build a park site on four acres of land donated to the city. She said the park's success depends on the clean-up program.
