BIBLE VERSE TODAY
That is a solemn satisfaction, but it is only a negative one. We should be creative and not only the goal. There is no wrong in my hands. (Isaiah 64:6)

Drew Pearson uses a "news blackout" on General Eisenhower's proposed trip to Korea in the interest of the General's safety. Look who's talking!

Society note: Among those already spending their vacation in Florida this winter are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nixon, of California and Washington, who are visiting in Miami Beach.

Governor-elect Dan McCarly warns professional gamblers that they can expect no quarter in Florida this coming winter, that they had better keep their investments in anticipation of the winter season to a minimum. They can't say he didn't warn them.

It is about as bad as it can be to run over a small boy on the highway, but that could be an accident. It is no accident to run off and leave him lying there by the side of the road, bleeding to death when a little timely aid might save his life. There is something peculiarly terrifying about the hit-and-run driver like the assassin who steps in the back.

We did not make a mistake in this column occasionally, we would not be sure that anyone reads it. But when we do, as when we said the other night that Benedict Arnold was hung as a traitor, we are sure to hear from it. He was of course not hung, but he should have been. And perhaps while we are on the subject, we should have said "hanged".

Some very good suggestions are incorporated in the City's traffic committee's report on how to facilitate traffic within the city of Sanford. When you can't build more streets, the best thing to do is to make better use of the streets you have. Curb parking on First Street will in effect add several feet to the width of the street. Doing away with parking altogether would add several more feet. And in the meantime plans for providing off-street parking are becoming more and more important.

There is much talk these days about the possibility of a two party system in the South as a result of last Tuesday's election. We heard the same sort of talk 24 years ago after Hoover's amazing upset in this section. However, it did not materialize. Most southerners agree that a real two party system would be the salvation of the South, the best thing that could possibly happen to the political field. However, they see little chance of it becoming a reality as long as the other party is the Republican party. If two new national parties were formed as between liberals and conservatives, or federalists and states-rightsers, there is little doubt that both would find their followers down here.

One would think sometimes that the paving of some particular road is of more importance than the construction of a well integrated carefully planned road system for the entire county, judging from all the fuss and fury generated at some of our County Commission meetings. It would be well, as Commissioner H. B. Pope pointed out the other night, if the Chamber of Commerce road committee would make a ten year road program and then get the road building authority to stick to it throughout coming years so that by the time time we would have a road system that is not a hodge-podge of one road running from here to nowhere but by some reason here or there get a little better than as with the current roads. We should try to

Great Writer For Boys

Many middle-aged and older folk will have difficulty believing that George A. Henty has been dead for 50 years. It's true. The semi-centennial of his death will occur on Nov. 16.

Henty was for many years the most popular writer for boys, and for many of their sisters also, though some readers may dispute this by offering other candidates. Every year he turned out three or four historical novels, covering all periods of history, emphasizing English; for Henty was a very patriotic Englishman. "Wulf the Saxon," "Berke the Briton," "The Lion of St. Mark" were only a few titles which will stir memories in those who loved them when they came out. They were worth-while books, giving plenty of adventure and historical events truthfully depicted. Many owe their chief knowledge of history to the regular Christmas gifts of the new Henty books.

Henty came naturally by his taste for history. He was a war correspondent who followed campaigns in Italy, Ethiopia, India, the Balkans and the Franco-Prussian war. His adventures strengthened his already firm belief that England was the greatest of all nations. It was fortunate for him that he did not live to see England's loss of Egypt, India and Burma.

Though in general books for the young have improved in the last 50 years, no writer has taken Henty's place as a rouger of interest in history.

Filipino Friends

American military officials are considering a proposal to increase the United States is giving to the Philippines. There are two reasons for increasing this aid. The Philippines must maintain internal security against Communism, and, in the event of Communist aggression anywhere in Asia, a trained Filipino army would be a valuable asset since such forces could reach the danger spot much more quickly than troops from continental United States.

The Filipinos have proved their dedication to the cause of liberty and their loyalty to the United States. Despite a large army of occupation the Japanese were never able to break the spirit of the Filipino people and when our forces returned Filipinos fought bravely on their side.

There are limits to the economic and military aid we can supply to our allies. But the valuable strategic position of the Philippines and the record of friendship they have established with the United States entitles them to top consideration.

Marine Birthday

This year November 10th marks the 177th anniversary of the founding of the United States Marine Corps. A writer during World War II said of the Marines that "a U. S. Marine looks like a soldier, talks like a sailor, fights like a wildcat and thinks like a princess of the royal blood."

In every battle the nation has engaged in since the Corps was founded Marines have played an important part. In World War I they earned the nickname "Devil Dogs" from the Germans who came to respect their courage and tenacity. In the Pacific during the last War they achieved new glory at Guadalcanal, Tarawa, the Marshall Islands, Iwo Jima and Okinawa. In Korea they are adding to the lustre of their record.

No serviceman is ever prouder of the uniform he wears than is a Marine. It is a pride that every American can share.

THE WORLD TODAY

By ARTHUR EDSON
(For James Marlow)

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the presidential campaign moved into its final weeks, the Republicans made the Korean War their No. 1 issue.

Democratic blundering, the Republicans said, led to — and prolonged — the war. Dwight D. Eisenhower said, "I will be early and honorable end to the fighting. Who was right and who was wrong isn't so important now. What is important is this: The No. 1 issue now turns into the No. 1 problem for the new administration."

And the battle lines in Korea, and the political battle lines in the United States, are so drawn that neither side seems in position to geore a convincing break-through. The diplomatic stalemate has been illustrated again this week in arguments before the United Nations.

The dispute now is over the 121,000 prisoners of war held by the U. N. forces, should these prisoners of war be turned over to the North Koreans even if they don't want to go?

It would be remembered that even if this problem is settled there's no guarantee that another won't pop up immediately to take its place.

Andre Y. Vishinsky, Soviet foreign minister, gave his country's oft-stated view Monday. It was, yes, they must be turned back. Russia, he said, will not hedge on this issue.

Yesterday Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, gave his country's oft-stated view. It was no, the prisoners of war should have a choice. "After an armistice," Eden said, "a prisoner of war may not be either forcibly detained or forcibly repatriated."

Prime Minister Wensin Churchill, speaking in London, came up with a more vivid picture.

"It would be dishonouring to turn over to the U. N. But since Churchill said, 'to send thousands of helpless prisoners of war back to the hands of the Chinese government, which boasts it has actually rid itself of two millions of its own people.'"

The U. N. stalemate was emphasized further by the resignation of Trygve Lie, its secretary general. Lie long had been in the Soviet dishonour because he called the North Korean invasion a Communist aggression.

He said he hoped his resignation would help the U. N. But since Churchill said, 'to send thousands of helpless prisoners of war back to the hands of the Chinese government, which boasts it has actually rid itself of two millions of its own people.'"

Whether Eisenhower will pick up anything in Korea that may lead to a solution of his No. 1 problem remains to be seen. But the man on the spot, Gen. James A. Van Fleet, commander of the Eighth Army in Korea, has

Chance For Turnpike Answers

Miami Daily News

Orlando, on Nov. 10, will be the scene of a meeting of immense importance to all of Florida. On that date a public meeting will be held for the purpose of clarifying factors regarding the much-discussed Florida super-highway.

This is not just a meeting aimed at arguing over the desirability of feasibility of the turnpike. It is not intended to be a referendum on the merits of the project. It is intended to be a gathering of authority to answer questions which have arisen during the many discussions of the turnpike.

In order that the answers may have the ring of authority top-flight speakers have been engaged to present information on what has happened elsewhere in the country. The chairman of the New Jersey Turnpike Authority, Paul L. Trost, will be present to recount his experiences. The president of the bond house which underwrote all of the Ohio turnpike bond issue and one of the bond issues for the Pennsylvania turnpike will be in attendance to answer questions on the financing of the proposed Florida project.

George H. Earle, who was governor of Pennsylvania when the Pennsylvania Turnpike Authority was created will discuss that state's problems in building such a ambitious project.

The outcome of this meeting should be a solidified thinking on the complex aspects of building a Florida turnpike. It should provide information of a technical nature which has thus far been lacking.
