Human Rights Group: Abuses Continue In El Salvador

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Abuses of human rights continue in El Salvador despite civilian rule but the United States is presenting a "false and misleading" picture of the situation, a watchdog group says.

"President (Jose Napoleon) Duarte's civilian government notwithstanding, the human rights situation in El Salvador remains terrible," said Aryeh Neier, vice chairman of Americas Watch said.

which has been monitoring human rights in El Salvador since 1982. Neier made his comments Thursday in releasing the group's eighth report on the Salvadoran rights situation.

The report sharply criticized State Department reports on human rights. It said:

"The reports prepared by the U.S. Embassy and the accompanying cables give the impression the overwhelming number of killings in El Salvador are due to violence by the left."

"This is a false and misleading picture... because the U.S. reports are based only on local Salvadoran newspaper accounts, omit violence by the armed forces, undercount death squad victims and apply inconsistent standards to the violence perpetrated by the right and the left."

Aliens Bill: Close Vote Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate sponsor of a sweeping immigration bill says he expects a close vote on the measure, but the defeat of a potentially crippling amendment was not an accurate gauge of congressional sentiment for reform.

The Senate is scheduled to continue work today on the bill, sponsored by Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., that seeks to slow the flood of illegal aliens across U.S. border by making it against the law to hire them.

The measure also would grant amnesty to millions of illegal aliens already living and working in the United States who arrived before Jan. 1, 1980.

An amendment by Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., was killed 50-48 Thursday after Simpson charged it would open the door for a massive invasion of foreign "guest workers" and take the jobs of Americans.

Wilson's amendment would have authorized a new program allowing growers to bring in thousands of foreign workers on short notice to harvest perishable crops.

Halley's Findings To Be Shared

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Once it leaves, Halley's Comet won't return for 76 years so leaders of Soviet, European, Japanese and American exploration efforts have agreed to an unprecedented exchange of findings to make the most of the famous visitor.

The space officials gathered at a three-day meeting seen as a breakthrough in scientific cooperation between East and West on a major undertaking.

"There has never been a meeting like this," said Burton Edelson, associate NASA administrator for space science, upon the meeting's conclusion Thursday.

Heading for a March rendezvous with the comet are two Soviet camera-carrying Vega spacecraft, a single Giotto photographic probe from the European Space Agency and two Japanese spacecraft.

The United States decided not to send a probe to the comet because of budget problems.

Reagan Preaching Tax Reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's tax reform gospel has not aroused much enthusiasm among congressional leaders but he is preaching it to voters as economic salvation for all groups — the old, the young, the entrepreneur.

On the third road trip of his fall campaign for enactment of tax reform this year, Reagan told 2,500 elderly citizens of Tampa, "Every group in America will be better off — and anybody who tells you otherwise doesn't understand."

He was referring to Democratic New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who has charged that Reagan's reform proposal would hurt the middle class most, among other things by removing the deduction for state and local taxes.

Denmark Says KGB Defector Was Longtime Double Agent

LONDON (UPI) — The Danish Justice Minister said the chief of the Soviet KGB operation in London who defected to the West was a longtime double agent and a vital source of information on Soviet intelligence matters.

"I would say he has been the West's most important source of information," Erik Nigg Hansen said in a television interview in Copenhagen Thursday, hours after Britain announced the defection of the KGB chief, Oleg Gordievski.

His defection and the exposure of the Soviet espionage operation in Britain prompted the government to order the expulsion of 25 Soviet diplomats, officials and journalists.

Hansen said the defection of Gordievski, who served as a diplomat in Denmark for 10 years, would eliminate a valuable source of Western intelligence.

New Zealand Invites U.S. Ship

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (UPI) — Prime Minister David Lange said Thursday he will amend his anti-nuclear policy in hopes of reviving the ANZUS defense pact between New Zealand, the United States and Australia.

Lange said he has instructed Deputy Prime Minister Geoffrey Palmer to invite a U.S. warship to New Zealand as a demonstration that the pact remains in effect.

No U.S. warships have visited New Zealand since election of the Lange government, which has a policy of banning nuclear ship visits.

The policy prompted New Zealand's ANZUS partners to cut it off from military exercises and the sharing of intelligence.

Lange said the fact that a ship has systems capable of delivering nuclear weapons would not disqualify it from entering New Zealand ports. "We would establish whether it actually carried weapons by the collective assessment, advice and intelligence that we acquire, and I can assure you that if we are not satisfied that it does not carry nuclear weapons, then it will not come," Lange said.

Just Scrapes

Apparently believing driver Edward Lewis Berry, 31, was critically injured in an early morning accident on State Road 46 west of Sanford, rescue workers load him on an air ambulance for trip to Orlando Regional Medical Center. Berry, however, was released from the hospital at 6:44 a.m. today with just scrapes and a bump on the head, a spokesman said. It is possible to believe a person is more injured than they really are if alcohol is influencing the person's vital signs, he said. The investigating FHP trooper said Berry, an Orlando resident, had been drinking. There were no witnesses to the accident just before 2 a.m. Charges are pending an investigation. Berry's 1978 Oldsmobile, inset, may have hit a pole. FHP reports say the car flipped over before coming to rest upright.

Bush: 'No More Mr. Nice Guy' In Trade Battles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House plunged into the brewing international trade war and leading the way was Vice President George Bush, who warned foreign trading partners: "We're not kidding — no more Mr. Nice Guy."

With tougher words on the trade crisis, the administration elevated the issue to the top of the legislative agenda. But Bush, addressing the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco Wednesday, made a distinction between endorsing limited trade legislation and protectionism.

"Supporters of protectionist legislation are, some of them, going for narrow and immediate political gain — at a cost of untold economic pain for everyone in our country," he said.

Meanwhile, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., predicted protectionist trade legislation will "whiz through Congress" but Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker warned any such measure would hurt the economy.

Volcker told the Senate Banking Committee Wednesday that any correction in the trade imbalance should be phased in because the U.S. economy could not handle substantial losses of foreign goods and capital.

"You can't do away with the trade deficit and capital inflows (of foreign investors) without causing serious problems," he said. "Jump on it with protectionist measures and you're going to get more trouble than you bargained for."

Bush conceded the problem the administration faces in maintaining its revised free trade stance against hundreds of protectionist bills now in Congress.

"I've been in public life for almost a quarter century and I have never seen such protectionist fever on Capitol Hill," Bush said. "We had better think long and hard before we pass even one of them."

Referring to Reagan's recent action against alleged unfair restrictions on American exports to Japan, Korea, Brazil and the European Community, Bush said: "We're moving forward on them and we have made it clear that we are not kidding — no more Mr. Nice Guy."

At a White House meeting with President Reagan, Republican congressional leaders outlined their goals for a trade bill that would include easing restrictions on small businesses to obtain export licenses and set up export companies, improving "intellectual property rights" for American technology and patents and boosting government export promotion efforts.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes confirmed the administration will go along with a trade bill but only if it resists quotas and tariffs and instead eases laws to allow the president to take quicker retaliatory action against unfair trade practices.

In Tokyo, Labor Minister Toshio Yamaguchi warned that U.S. import restrictions on Japanese goods would amount to "dropping another bomb" on Japan and would cost 1 million workers their jobs.

Yamaguchi said Japan is considering several measures to reduce the trade imbalance with the United States and head off protectionist legislation.

Man Faces Jail Term For Probation Violations

Ignoring several probation requirements landed a former Sanford man in jail and prompted the scheduling of a Sept. 26 hearing with a Circuit judge who could put the man behind bars for 18 months.

Charged with three violations of probation is Jeffrey Harry Bjorkman, 21, formerly of 1717 Park Ave. He was sentenced to 18 months probation by Seminole Circuit Judge S. Joseph Davis Jr. in October for obstructing an officer with violence and disorderly intoxication, court records show.

Bjorkman was arrested in Orlando Sept. 2 on a warrant from Seminole County.

Probation and parole officials charge Bjorkman moved from Sanford to Orlando without telling his probation officer. They also claim he did not report to his probation officer and did not file monthly written reports of his activities as required.

The hearing is scheduled before Circuit Judge Kenneth M. Lefler.

Initially, Bjorkman was arrested for creating a disturbance in the emergency room of Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford.

Bjorkman refused to calm down when ordered to do so by officers at the hospital on May 2, 1984, records show. He then hit an officer in the chest and ran out of the hospital. Later Bjorkman struggled with the officer in a parking lot and knocked him down. Bjorkman was captured and arrested in nearby woods.

In other court action:

—Henry Lee Christopher, 65, Altamonte Springs, arrested May 17 after a bouncer at an Altamonte Springs bar reported Christopher was packing a pistol, pleaded guilty Wednesday to carrying a concealed weapon. He could receive up to a year in the county jail when sentenced by Lefler Oct. 25.

—Royce Lamar Wells, 47, of Daytona Beach, arrested May 31 after a traffic stop in Sanford, pleaded guilty to DUI and carrying a concealed weapon. A loaded semi-automatic handgun was found at the time in the pocket of a jacket in the car. He could receive up to a year in the county jail when sentenced Oct. 25.

—Anthony Blain Hall, 20, of 2851 W. Lake Brantley Court, Longwood, arrested April 2 following the burglary of several rooms at an Altamonte Springs motel, pleaded guilty to the lesser offense of trespassing. He could receive up to a year in the county jail when sentenced Oct. 17 by Circuit Judge Robert McGregor.

Gardening

It's True, More Plants Die From Drowning Than From Drought

Many shallow-rooted and newly set plants can suffer from water stress during our hot days. Wilted, followed by browning of leaf tips and edges are signs of water stress in plants. Some areas, believe it or not, have not had enough rainfall to supply the amounts of water needed by most plants. Showers have been spotty around the country. Watering by some gardeners has been necessary. But, proper watering is generally not practiced by most people. Many either under or over water.

The person who under waters his plants and lawn does so thinking he has supplied the plant with enough moisture through light, daily sprinklings. It is almost useless, and costly, to lightly sprinkle plants everyday. Frequent, light sprinklings only wet the soil to a depth of less than one inch. Most plant roots are much deeper in the soil than one inch. Such light sprinklings only settles the dust and does little to quench the thirst of a plant growing in a hot, dry soil.

Instead of daily light waterings, give the plants a weekly soaking. When watering, allow the soil to become wet to a depth of several inches. This kind of watering allows the moisture to soak into the soil area where the roots can readily absorb it. A soil which has been wet to a depth of six to eight inches retains moisture for several days, while one wet only an inch or so deep is dry within a day. For the good of your plants, give them a thorough watering at least once a week during hot, dry weather.

On the other hand, there are those who water so often and heavily that they drown their plants. The symptoms of too much water are the same as for too little water. The leaves turn brown at the tips and edges, then brown all over and drop from the plant.

Too much water in the soil causes death of the root system as a result of oxygen loss. Plant roots need to breathe and receive oxygen, just as the tops do, to live. Dead roots do not absorb water, even when there is an abundant supply present in the soil. When the roots die and no longer absorb water, the leaves begin to show signs of lack of water. Many people believe this is a sign of water shortage but instead of slacking up on watering, they add more. More often than not, the plants quickly die.

One way to help conserve moisture in your planting beds is to use mulches. Not only do they conserve water, but greatly reduce the time spent mowing and weeding. A mulch consists of any kind of material applied to the soil surface around plants. This material may be organic, such as compost, bark, leaves, grass clippings or similar material; or inert materials, such as gravel, pebbles, or polyethylene film.

A mulch can add to the beauty of your landscape by providing a cover of uniform color and interesting texture to an otherwise drab surface. When applying a mulch to newly set vegetables or ornamental plants, do so after they are put into place and thoroughly watered.

For best results, apply organic mulches at least two to four inches deep over the whole area. Avoid covering the crowns of low-growing ornamental plants. Keeping the layer deep enough to do the job is important. This means more mulching material should be added to the older layers to get the maximum benefits.

Many organic materials, such as straw, wood chips, and sawdust, are rich in carbohydrates and low in nitrogen. Usually, you will find it beneficial to add nitrogen fertilizer to the material before applying it as a mulch. One or two cups of fertilizer high in nitrogen for each bushel of organic material will supply the needed nitrogen.

When using plastic film as a mulch, you must apply the fertilizer before placing the mulch on top of the soil. Broadcast a complete fertilizer at the rate of two pounds per 100 square feet of garden area, thoroughly tilling it into the top two or three inches of soil. Plastic mulches reduce the leaching of fertilizer from the area where the roots will develop, thus larger amounts of fertilizer are not needed.

The late L.H. Bailey, one of the most famous horticulturists, once said, "more plants die from drowning than from drought." This is still true. Don't let either drowning or drought kill your plants. Remember, soak the soil at each watering and then allow the soil to become slightly dry before applying any more. A good mulch will go a long way in helping to maintain an even moisture level in the soil, reduce the amount of cultivating and weeding, and increase your chances of growing healthy and vigorous plants.

Happy gardening!

Happy Couple Bridges Gap Several Generations Wide

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you three years ago, telling you that a couple can be happily married even if there is a big gap in their ages because that is what happened to us. I was 14 and Jack was 61 when we married 10 years ago. We still love each other dearly, and he treats me like a queen.

We now have a son named Andrew Jackson. When I found out I was pregnant, we were so surprised we could hardly believe it. And yes, Jack is Andrew's father. I have been faithful to my husband all these years and will continue to be.

So you see, Abby, two people can be happy together regardless of their ages. I am enclosing a picture of Jack, the baby and me.

JANE McCARTNEY, DENISON, TEXAS

DEAR JANE: Thank you for the progress report. The baby is beautiful, and you and Jack radiate happiness.

Not every 14-year-old bride can live happily ever after with a husband 47 years her senior.

Congratulations to your Jack who treats you like queen, and is able to deal you a full house.

DEAR ABBY: To "In Love in W.Va.": I've been married for 22 years, and whenever I see something we received as a wedding gift, I think of the giver. I cherish the rolling pin from a young cousin, and a rotary egg beater my late grandmother gave us. You can't put a price tag on memories. My husband's brother took movies during the ceremony, and in front of the church where family and friends gathered afterward. What a priceless gift! If my life depended on it, I couldn't name the people who gave us money.

My grandmother made fruit-cake, and my mother baked our wedding cake, which a neighbor decorated. Family and close friends prepared the refreshments. We didn't have a band. We played taped music on a loudspeaker.

If you are determined to have a church wedding, you can do it. I don't believe churches make a church social halls.

I'd rather accept a wedding invitation that was handwritten on a postcard than buy a ticket to a farce.

Final Word On Tanning Salons Is Not Yet In

DEAR DR. GOTT - Within the last six months, there have been at least six tanning salons established in this small town of 23,000. We hear so much about the dangers of the sun, but what about the dangers of tanning salons?

DEAR READER - Tanning salons use a slightly different wavelength than that found in natural sunshine. Although tanning-salon operators claim the process is safe, the final word is not yet in. Many dermatologists are waiting to see if artificially tanned people will develop skin cancers and dermal deterioration at the same rate as naturally tanned people.

am not aware that Alaskan babies are significantly larger than their continental counterparts, nor, as far as I know, are Alaskan adults bigger than the rest of us in the "Lower 48." You must remember that we are dealing with averages here. There are more small people in the continental United States than in Alaska; there are more people in the continental United States than in Alaska; there are more people, period. So there may be some statistical hanky-panky going on. Now if you'd asked about Texas babies...

DEAR DR. GOTT - Since having open-heart surgery and receiving an artificial aorta valve three years ago, my father has been taking the blood thinner Coumadin. His health's been generally good since the operation and the medication is monitored by his doctor, but he bruises very easily now. Is this normal?

DEAR READER - Yes. Coumadin interferes with the body's natural coagulation system. For this reason it is often prescribed for patients who have a high risk of developing blood clots, such as might form on the walls of an artificial aorta.

Coumadin is safe as long as periodic blood tests show that a person is not taking too much. Since the ideal level of Coumadin causes the blood to clot at about twice the normal speed, patients on the drug will have a tendency to bruise more easily.

DEAR DR. GOTT - I have heard that babies born in Alaska are bigger. Is this correct? Is there any explanation?

DEAR READER - Large babies may be born to large parents or to diabetic mothers. I

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

When you spend a weekend playing 105 deals against 35 of the world's top bridge partnerships, you'd better be ready for some high-level bridge. South was unlucky that the West defender who doubled him in four spades was Mike Passell, Bermuda Bowl World Champion in 1979.

The double was for takeout. Passell felt that he could find a spot to play even if his partner took out to five clubs. When East passed the double, Mike still felt safe. After all, he had a singleton ace to lead and perhaps could find a way to get his partner on lead.

He tried the ace of clubs. When he saw the dummy, he was tempted to cash the diamond ace and then switch to the king of hearts. But with that play, declarer would almost surely have made his contract. It would cost him nothing with that defense to simply take a spade finesse. With the king dropping, that would be 10 tricks. Instead, at trick two Mike switched to the four of hearts. Put yourself in declarer's shoes.

Doesn't it look as if West has four hearts to an honor? If you duck the heart, East will win a potential singleton, get partner back in with the ace of diamonds and then get a heart ruff.

Declarer went up with the ace of hearts and played the club king to get rid of his diamond. Passell ruffed, cashed the K-Q of hearts, and then played the diamond ace. South ruffed but had no way to get to dummy to take the spade finesse. Down two. Tough luck, but tougher defense.

Bridge score table with North-South and East-West scores, vulnerable status, and opening lead information.

Today's Shooters Are Home On The Range

Stepping out into the back yard to draw down on a tin can with your trusty pistol or rifle is, for the most part, a pleasure of the past.

Urban sprawl has left today's gunmen — those who aren't hunters of animals or other humans — with little opportunity to open fire in the open space, so many are turning to indoor shooting ranges.

"You can't go out and shoot unless you own your own property. You can't just go out the backdoor and start cracking off," said Scott Saunders who oversees an Apopka shooting gallery.

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

"It's hard to find a good place to shoot outdoors," Sanford gun dealer Bert Nelson agreed. "Most people prefer to shoot outdoors. I know I do."

But about once a month Nelson takes to the shooting range at Apopka's Shoot Straight, because "it's convenient as far as time goes and it's very safe."

Gunplay, Nelson said, "is part of our heritage and the greatest thing is it's just plain fun." Target shooting is a game, much like any other in the respect that "the objective is to try to score as high as you can. You can never have a perfect score. You can just give it a heck of a try."

Marksmanship is a skill that can be acquired and honed either alone or as a family affair.

Nelson said. At Shoot Straight and Casselberry's Crossroads shooting range, men, women, boys, girls, doctors, lawyers, mechanics, people from all walks of life test their shooting skills. And at Shoot Straight they sometimes participate in contests.

That's not for Nelson. He said he only competes against himself and the 10-cent paper targets he peppers with gunfire. Although he has other firearms, he shoots only his .22- or .44-caliber pistols on the indoor range.

Some, however, like to bring out the big guns. At Shoot Straight, shotguns and high-powered rifles are permitted. That's not the case at Crossroads, however, where Dave Laufman said he caters solely to handgun shooters and those

'Death Of A Salesman'

Lines Are The Same But Willy Loman Has Changed

By Joan Hanauer
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — It is hard to believe that barely a line has been changed in Dustin Hoffman's interpretation of "Death of a Salesman."

The new television version of Arthur Miller's 1949 Pulitzer Prize winning tragedy seems very different than the remembered original, but a rereading of the play shows the CBS version — to air Sunday, 8-11 p.m. — is just about line-for-line faithful to Miller's manuscript.

The big difference is the passage of years and the vast gulf between the Willy Loman created by Lee J. Cobb and the defeated salesman recreated by Hoffman, first for a Broadway revival and now for the small screen.

The opening scene is the same. Enter Willy Loman, wearily dropping two heavy sample cases on the floor of his Brooklyn home, the house where he and his wife brought up their two sons and watched themselves being crowded in by apartment buildings, the elm trees they loved chopped down in the name of progress.

Something similar is happening to Loman. Cobb's Loman was a big man who was cut down by age, disillusion and a lifetime of pursuing a false vision of success. Hoffman's Willy, like Hoffman himself, was never very big.

While the 1949 Willy Loman was betrayed by a false dream, Hoffman's Loman is a man betrayed as much by his life-long habit of self-deception as by the cruelty of outside economic factors.

Hoffman as Loman seems to shrug and gesture with a slightly Jewish inflection, and he shuffles around like a man much older than his 63 years, particularly in the early scenes.

But as the power of Hoffman's performance builds, these distractions fade into insignificance.

When the Miller play opened on Broadway and took the critics by storm, Loman was considered by some a poor man's King Lear, a truly tragic if not regal common man contending with ungrateful sons instead of daughters. Hoffman's Loman is sadly disappointed in his sons, but his major despair stems from his own failure and his exhausting battle to hide his mediocrity from himself.

Hoffman mumbles, shouts, shuffles and contends with the ghosts of his past, all dramatizing the conflict between the man he wants to be — well-liked, funny, successful and, pathetically, tall — and the man he fears he is, not liked, laughed at, passed by, a failure.

He is supported by a fine cast, with John Malkovich as sensitive Biff, destroyed by his father's hypocrisy but trying to find the truth about himself and trying to make his father face his own reality.

Stephen Lang plays Biff's younger brother, Happy, a phlandering scoundrel who will follow in his father's self-deceiving footsteps. Kate Reid is a paragon of self-sacrifice as the loving desperate wife on whom Willy practices little cruelty, when he is up and depends upon for mothering when he is down. Charles Durning is Loman's long-suffering neighbor and friend-enemy.

"Death of a Salesman" was made into a 1951 movie starring Fredric March, and an abbreviated version of the play starring Lee J. Cobb also appeared on television, but it is wonderful to have a faithful and fascinating performance of an American theater classic put on the record.

"Death of a Salesman" proves that American television can bring American classic to the screen with the same artistry that British television devotes to the shows it sells to PBS.

Dustin Hoffman re-creates his Broadway role of Willy Loman in the small-screen version of Arthur Miller's 'Death of a Salesman' airing Sunday on CBS, channel 6.

whose weapon of choice is a .22-caliber rifle. "No high-powered rifles are allowed here," he said.

Among the pistol packers at Shoot Straight, .357-magnums and .22- and .38-caliber sidearms are the favorites, Saunders said.

Gunmen and women have to bring their own weapon or borrow one from a friend, Laufman said, they're not for hire at the ranges.

While they have to bring their own weapons, shooters can buy targets and ammo at the ranges.

It all adds up to a big bang ... and a lot of them. Because of the acoustics of a confined space, indoor shooting range users must shield their ears from the shattering sounds as they blast away. They are issued headsets that muffle the noise.

Another must: "Load only on the firing line and only point down range," Laufman said. No clowning around allowed.

The Crossroads' range is 50 feet long; the Shoot Straight range is 75 feet long. Both ranges charge $4 per hour per shooter.

It's a family affair, Laufman said, and most shoot for about half an hour. "You'd be amazed at the number of women involved in this," Saunders said.

The ranges draw shooters throughout the day, with Crossroads usually closing at 7 p.m. and Shoot Straight shutting down two hours later.

If you're not yet a dead-eye marksman but would like to develop skill with a gun Shoot Straight offers a basic gunhandling course for $10 which is held at 6:30 p.m. on Fridays.

Crossroads isn't a training ground for beginners, except for those who want to figure it out on their own, Laufman said. Seminole Community College offers a two-session course on handgun use once a year, usually in March.

SCC's Marvin Jones said the $15 course is open to anyone who owns a gun. It's half classroom training and the rest of the time is spent on the college outdoor shooting range, which is used primarily for law enforcement training.

For some, shooting is addictive, Nelson said. And on an indoor range you can show off your gunslinger moves rain or shine.

Indoor shooting galleries seem to be the answer for the Wyatt Earps and Annie Oakleys of today who have lost the prairies on which to practice their quick draws.

At left is everything the range shooter needs — a firearm and a fistful of bullets. At right is the result of some rapid-fire target practice.

Hudson Writing Autobiography: Proceeds Go To AIDS Research

NEW YORK (UPI) — Actor Rock Hudson is writing a book about his life — including his battle with AIDS — and proceeds of the autobiography will go toward fighting the deadly disease, his publisher says. A spokeswoman for William Morrow and Co., which is publishing the book, said the autobiography will be called "My Story." Hudson will dictate his story from his bedside to writer Sara Davidson, the spokeswoman said. Avon Books has the paperback rights to Hudson's autobiography, she said. There was no word when the book would be published. She said she did not know when the deal with Hudson had been made and would not disclose how much of an advance the 59-year-old actor was given. The spokeswoman did say Hudson plans to donate the proceeds of the book to research against acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Hudson stunned the world in July when he announced through a spokeswoman that he suffered from AIDS.

Christopher, Andrew Rubin (left), suddenly develops paternal instincts when he meets Jamie, Peter Brendon, the child who may be his, when 'Hometown' moves to Tuesdays on Sept. 24 at 8 p.m. on CBS, channel 6.

'Hometown' A Strained Ripoff Of 'The Big Chill'

By David Handler
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.
'Hometown' is a very strained attempt at a sincere hour comedy-drama for baby-boomers.

After all, with two exceptions, these characters still see each other every day.
Mary and Ben (Jane Kaczmarek and Franc Luz) are the couple who are getting married. The twist is they've already been living together for 13 years and even have children.
'It seems,' says Jane of the big day, 'like the end of an era.' Ben owns a bookstore and does the dishes without having to be asked. Mary used to be a dancer, and still carries a bit of a torch for Christopher (Andrew Rubin), a former sweetie who's now a famous but unfulfilled rock star.
Christopher is someone the gang hasn't seen in a while. So is Barbara (Margaret Whitton), a vampy boozier who married for money and is now getting a divorce.
The rest of the gang seem to drop by all of the time. There's Joey (Daniel Stern), a cook and single parent whose son is named Dylan.
Peter (John Bedford-Lloyd) is a professor who can't settle down. 'I need a woman who will totally worship me,' he says.
Jane (Christine Estabrook) is a homely presidential adviser who longs for a husband and kids. 'How did I end up with half a life?' she asks.

Going Ape Over Tarzan Trivia

Dear Dick — I hope you can help us solve a family feud. We have tried to name all the actors who played Tarzan in the movies. We are especially interested in whether Buster Crabbe or Johnny Weissmuller was the earliest. — Mrs. I.K., Payson, Utah.

There have been so many Tarzans, I just don't have room to name them all. Elmo Lincoln was the first, in 1918. Weissmuller's first was in '32 (he made more than anybody) and Crabbe's first was a year later, '33. The list goes on and on. And is still growing.

Dear Dick — I watch a lot of television and I have seen many a movie with black and white couples, either married to one another or dating each other. But I have, as of yet, not seen a black person make a commercial with a white person. With all the love scene commercials and other commercials, why don't they mix with each other like they do in movies? — S.Y., Houston, Texas.

Simply because sponsors are afraid. There are still many people in this country who frown on any romantic relationship between white and black people. And the sponsors are afraid that if they show that on a commercial, these people would boycott their product. You will see commercials — beer commercials, as a prime example — where white and black men are shown together, working or playing or drinking in a bar. But sponsors don't think we're ready for commercials showing a mixed couple.

Dear Dick — I watched a 1944 movie on PBS, "The Minstrel Man," starring Benny Fields. I am almost positive that Benny Fields is the man we know as Henny Youngman. Am I right? — D.L.C., Saginaw, Mich.

Dear Dick — Please settle this. I watch reruns of "The Waltons" and "Family." I believe that Rose (Peggy Somebody) on "The Waltons" is the very same lady as Kate (who calls herself Sada Thompson) on "Family." Am I right? — L.F., Houston, Texas.

Dear Dick — I may be totally off base, but it is possible that Tyne Daly of "Cagney & Lacey" had another name earlier in her career? Didn't she play Angelina in "Splendor in the Grass" under the name of Zohra Lampert? — T.T., Galveston, Texas.

Dear Dick — While watching the movie, "Policewoman Centerfold," my father and I placed a bet. He says the actress Melody Anderson, who starred in that, is the same as Melissa Sue Anderson on "Little House on the Prairie." — H.S., Knoxville, Tenn.

A bunch of wrongos here. Henny Youngman has always been Henny Youngman and Benny Fields was a famous vaudevillian in his day. (Actually, his life and that of his partner/wife, Blossom Seeley, was the basis of the 1952 movie, "Somebody Loves Me," with Betty Hutton and Ralph Meeker). Next, Peggy Rea is Peggy Rea and Sada Thompson is Sada Thompson. Tyne Daly has always been Tyne Daly and Zohra Lampert, a distinguished actress, is still acting as Zohra Lampert. And Melissa Sue and Melody are two entirely separate and distinct Andersons.

Dear Dick — Some time ago, I saw a movie called "The Girl Down the Lane," with a girl in the lead who resembled Jodie Foster. I am told that it is an old movie. Did Jodie Foster act in this movie or am I just imagining it? — R.M., Reading, Pa.

Yes, that was our Jodie. It was actually called "The Little Girl Who Lives Down the Lane," and Jodie made it, in 1976, when she was 14.

Dear Dick — If Howard Cosell doesn't mind, how old is he? — Mrs. L.B.Y., Henderson, Texas. Even if he does mind, he's 65.

A Reunion Of Two Classic Comedians

By Vernon Scott

UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Jackie Gleason and Art Carney enjoy a reunion later this month playing a pair of Prohibition Era speakeasy raiders in "Izzy and Moe," a two-hour TV movie.

In the 35-year history of primetime network TV, Gleason and Carney emerge as the best of all comedy sketch teams. They were the Laurel and Hardy of TV, a superbly matched pair of zanies.

Their greatest triumph was "The Honeymooners" on the old "Jackie Gleason Show" with Gleason starring as terrible tempered bus driver Ralph Kramden and Carney as Ed Norton, the nervous wreck sewer worker.

They also shone in Reggie Van Gleason III sketches with Gleason as the wastrel boozier and Carney playing his lunatic father. In the Loud Mouth sketches Carney was brilliant as the lunch-counter victim of Gleason's outrageous bullying.

Almost certainly there will be vestiges of Kramden and Norton in "Izzy and Moe," which airs Sept. 23 as CBS-TV's opening movie of the season. At least their director, Jackie Cooper, thinks so.

"Viewers won't see Kramden and Norton per se because the relationship between Izzy and Moe is altogether different," Cooper said. "The characters don't yell at one another.

"But Jackie and Art are no different from other actors, whether it be Olivier or Brando. Actors can submerge only about 10 percent of themselves in characterization. The other 90 percent is the actor's personality coming through.

"Jackie and Art liked the property and knew they would not be playing Kramden and Norton. Of course, they're still New Yorkers with New York accents because 'Izzy and Moe' is based on a couple of real guys."

"Izzy and Moe" deals with Isadore Einstein and Morris Smith, an unsuccessful vaudeville comedy team who hired on with the Treasury Department to raid speakeasies selling illegal booze in the 1920s during Prohibition.

As cops, the pair were spectacularly successful, partly because they didn't look like members of the constabulary and partly because of their wacko tactics.

Because CBS has shied away from docudramas, following last year's legal battles over "The Atlanta Child Murders" film, "Izzy and Moe" carries a disclaimer that it is fictional. Cooper says the script sticks to the facts.

"What makes this movie so special is all three of us have our roots in vaudeville," Cooper said. "When I was a kid movie star I worked as a specialty act in the waning days of vaudeville. My mother played the piano for Edith Clifford, billed as Singer of Risque Songs in some Chicago theaters owned by Al Capone."

"Both Jackie, who is 70 now, and Art, who is 68, worked some of the same flea bag theaters as comedians. So they are perfectly cast as Izzy and Moe. Their timing was absolutely unchanged.

"All vaudevillians share a common bond of humor. They all knew the same sketches and punch lines. Gleason and Carney are a part of that tradition.

"It worked for all of us because they didn't have to teach me anything like they would have if I'd been some fancy New York intellectual director. And I didn't have to educate them in the ways of vaudevillians."

Cooper said his stars had not seen each other for 15 years when they reported to work on the picture last June. Neither man made a big deal of the reunion.

"Jackie lives in Florida and Art lives in Connecticut and neither one of them likes to get more than a few miles from home," he said.

"When they said hello on the set it was as if they'd seen each other the day before. But they kept me and the crew laughing with their ad libs and vaudeville turns at the end of almost every scene.

"The cameraman kept the camera rolling after I said, 'Cut.' I had to let them get it out of their systems. We have the greatest dirty comic reel ever made.

"But they didn't improvise a single line when we were shooting. They stuck to the script. I insisted we shoot exactly what was on paper before we began the picture. The three of us contributed ideas beforehand.

"Izzy and Moe' isn't all comedy by any means. There is some violence and gunplay. The drama gets pretty heavy at times. In my opinion, Gleason and Carney were absolutely terrific."

... 'Hometown'

People talk that way all the time in this show. It's built on clunky platitudes, not dialogue.

They can't take a stroll without saying "It wasn't so long ago we were walking these streets carrying peace signs."

They can't talk about the present without saying "Nothing turned out the way I thought it would."

The stories are obvious. Mary, of course, almost has a fling with Christopher before her wedding. I found it hard to care what she did. How could I? The show offers so little warmth or genuine feeling or depth.

Fault can be found with its mix of comedy and drama. "Hometown" is bumpy. But that's not the real problem. What sinks "Hometown" is that its people aren't people and not a word they say rings true.
