Four teens die from fumes

MARIBEL, Wis. — Four teenagers participating in an ice fishing contest were killed by carbon monoxide Sunday while sleeping overnight in a poorly ventilated shanty, authorities said.

The four were sleeping in the wood shanty 35 feet from the shore on frozen Harp's Lake near Maribel in eastern Wisconsin, the Manitowoc County sheriff's department said. They were taking part in a "fishing derby" sponsored by the Larrabee Sportsman's Club, a sheriff's department report said.

There were two space heaters and a hot plate in the 8 1/2-foot by 7 1/4-foot shanty, which only had two 1-inch ventilation holes, the report said.

Avalanche victim dies

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. — One of three young boys buried in up to 10 feet of snow when an avalanche thundered down a Colorado mountain Sunday has died, authorities said Monday.

A nursing supervisor at St. Mary's Hospital said Taylor Huddleston, 6, of Fort Worth, Texas, died about 11:30 p.m. Sunday after doctors spent several hours struggling to stabilize his condition.

Blue Devils burn Notre Dame

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Danny Ferry scored 28 points Sunday, including a 4-point play that sparked a second half run, to lead No. 10 Duke to a 102-80 victory over Notre Dame.

Ferry's 4-point play sparked a 20-2 run that put the Blue Devils up 78-56. Duke's largest lead of the game, with 9:30 left, Ferry capped that spurt with a 12-foot jumper.

Alaa Abdalnaby scored 15 points and Phil Henderson added 14 for the Blue Devils, 15-4, who entered the game having lost four of their past five starts.

Joe Fredrick led Notre Dame, 12-4, with 21 points, and Jamere Jackson was the only other Irish player in double figures with 20. Notre Dame had a five-game winning streak snapped. In other games of interest:

Porsche team wins at Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH — The most unusual running of the 24 Hours of Daytona finished with a familiar scene in victory lane.

Derek Bell, Bob Wollek and John Andretti won the closest 24 Hours in history Sunday in a Porsche 982, finishing 86.5 seconds in front of the Castrol Jaguar team of Price Cobb, John Nielsen, Andy Wallace and Jan Lammers. Wollek took the lead with five hours left and the Jim Busby Racing Team never relinquished the top spot.

Previously, the closest margin of victory in the 24 Hours of Daytona was 1:49.

The sight of Bell and Porsche in the winner's circle after an endurance race is almost expected. In his last 15 24-hour races, Bell has seven victories, six seconds, a third and a seventh.

CFRH plans heart unit

Surgery facility will require two-story addition; cost estimated at $8 million

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Central Florida Regional Hospital (CFRH) has received preliminary state approval to establish a 12-bed open heart surgery program.

The program will necessitate a new, two-story addition to the hospital's main building on Lake Monroe, remodeling of some existing areas, and the addition of 16 support personnel, including a cardiovascular surgeon.

Hospital officials estimate that the cost of the building and equipment will exceed $8 million.

An estimated 500 surgeries a year would be done in the new facility, according to the officials.

The Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services published on Friday its "notice of intent" to issue a certificate of need for the program. Challenges to that intent can be filed within 21 days. If no challenges are filed within that time period, approval of the certificate of need will be final.

States are required to issue certificates of need for hospital expansion of services or facilities in an effort to reduce duplication of services. Challenges to such certificates are most often filed by other hospitals which dispute the state's determination of the need for additional services.

Other area hospitals which have open heart surgery programs are Florida Hospital and Orlando Regional Medical Center, both in Orlando.

No date for beginning construction of the addition, or recruitment of personnel, will be set until the hospital learns whether challenges to the plans are filed, according to Kay Bartholomew, the hospital's marketing director.

James Tesar, hospital administrator, said the open-heart surgery program would serve Seminole County as well as parts of West Volusia. See Hospital, Page 2A

Astronauts ready for mock countdown

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — The crew of the shuttle Discovery flew to balm Florida Sunday for a practice countdown Tuesday amid tedious work to remove the first of three suspect engine turbopumps that must be replaced before a delayed blastoff in March.

The five astronauts, strapped into three sleek T-38 jet trainers, swooped over launch pad 39B shortly after 3 p.m. EST after a flight from the Johnson Space Center in Houston to get a closeup view of their spaceship.

Down below, engineers working in Discovery's cramped engine compartment were disconnecting the first of three high-pressure liquid oxygen turbopumps from the shuttle's three main engines, work that forced NASA managers last week to delay the launch of the 28th shuttle flight from Feb. 23 to mid March.

Engine No. 1's "LOX" pump was to be removed overnight and all three are scheduled to be out of the orbiter by the end of the week.

While a firm launch date has not been determined, sources say March 10 is the earliest possible target based on a "success oriented" processing schedule that calls for around-the-clock work at the launch pad without any contingency time for unexpected problems.

For that reason, most agency officials say mid to late March is a more realistic target and one that must be met if NASA is to avoid delays for a high-priority mission in April to launch a science probe to Venus.

Discovery's crew — commander Michael Coats, 43, co-pilot John Blaha, 46, James Baglan, 36, Robert Springer, 46 and James Buchli, 43 — flew to the Florida spaceport to participate in a traditional dress-rehearsal countdown scheduled to end Tuesday with a simulated engine ignition at 11 a.m.

"It's a pleasure being down here where it's nice and sunny today," Coats said, referring to the 30-degree weather the crew left behind in Houston.

"We'd like to take this opportunity to express our appreciation to everybody ... doing heroic work trying to get the turbopumps built and replaced so we can get off sometime in the middle of March. We certainly appreciate all the work that's being done."

Discovery's launch processing has proceeded in fits and starts with numerous glitches and technical problems causing repeated delays.

Running five days behind schedule, Discovery was hauled to launch pad 39B Friday but its $100 million payload, a NASA Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, was not installed in the ship's 60-foot cargo bay Saturday as planned.

NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said interference between the satellite and another payload already in the cargo bay forced engineers to put off the installation until today.

In the meantime, workers in the shuttle's engine room continued the pump removal procedure.

All three pumps are being replaced because of concern about cracks found in a bearing assembly inside an oxygen turbopump used by the shuttle Atlantis in December.

The cracks are thought to have been caused by water trapped inside a bearing "race," or housing, during pump assembly when temperature conditions can lead to condensation. The resulting "stress corrosion" caused several small cracks in two bearing races.

Work begins on Sanford senior center

SANFORD — After three years of planning, the city has begun work on the first center for seniors activities here.

Renovation of the seniors wing in the Sanford Civic Center began late last month. The city of Sanford has budgeted nearly $100,000 to refurbish the wing, where seniors will gather for meetings and recreation.

The seniors wing, which formerly served as the youth recreation center, will house an all-purpose meeting room, game rooms, a kitchenette, and offices.

The seniors committee of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce last month approved plans to help pay for the project through a paper recycling project. Through recycling, the committee has raised more than $700 in five months, chairperson Joan Madison Hanmon said.

Lake Mary approves street sweeping bid

By SANDRA BOUCHANINE
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — City Commissioners have approved a bid for street sweeping submitted by Industrial Waste Service Inc., of Longwood, at $26.50 per curb mile.

During the 1988-89 budget hearings, $11,240 was budgeted to sweep the city's 16 miles of paved streets. Public Works Director Rod Stroupe said that although that amount was budgeted, it will only cost $6,800 to sweep the streets on an eight-month trial basis.

Commissioners last week asked Stroupe what has been done about keeping the streets clean.

Stroupe told the commissioners that limited cleaning had been done and he brought the matter up at this time because such things as the development of Timacuan and the Hills of Lake Mary made it necessary.

"Probably up to three years ago, there was no need for it," Stroupe said.

Daytime sweeping will be between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. and at night between 7 p.m. and 6 a.m. in order to interfere as little as possible with traffic and to minimize noise.

Street sweeping will begin within the next few months.

Construction numbers jump during January

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Construction of single family homes here last month was up more than 30 percent over the first month of 1988.

The city issued 22 building permits for single family homes last month. The total value of construction for those homes is $712,216. In January 1988, the city issued only five permits for a total of $215,000.

Last month the city issued one permit for an eight-unit multi-family residence valued at $182,000.

Construction of commercial and industrial structures is up over last year by $240,000. Last month two permits were issued for a value of $325,000 in construction, compared to one permit in January 1988 with a value of $85,000.

Power plan lawsuit settled

LAKELAND — Lakeland officials have approved a $7.3 million out-of-court settlement in connection with the construction of a $225 million coal-fired power plant.

The agreement, approved Saturday, involves the cities of Lakeland and Orlando, co-plaintiffs in a $64 million countersuit filed in 1984, and Charles T. Main Inc., of Boston, one of nearly a dozen defendants named in the suit.

The agreement calls for the settlement to be divided among the cities and the attorneys that handled the case. Attorneys for Main said the settlement does not constitute an admission of wrongdoing on the part Main.

The battle over Lakeland Power & water's 364-megawatt McIntosh power plant, owned by Orlando and Lakeland, began in 1983 when Lakeland city officials withheld a final payment of more than $82,000 from the builder of the coal-fire plant's cooling tower.

Ecodine Corp. of Santa Rosa, the cooling tower contractor, filed suit and the cities countersued.

City officials said the power plant was designed poorly and did not operate properly. But a federal court jury held last fall the cities did not operate the plant properly after it went on line and tossed out one claim by the cities for $12 million in damages.

The cities appealed that ruling.

Services held for Regina Armstrong

ORLANDO — Bob and Donna Armstrong, their marriage shattered by the disappearance and death of their 6-year-old daughter, say they have closed the final chapter in the girl's brief life.

But Orlando police say the book remains open and will stay that way until the killer of Regina Mae Armstrong is found.

In a simple Episcopal service Saturday, the Armstrongs — who say their divorce two years ago was a result of the stress of their daughter's June 1985 abduction from an apartment complex — bid farewell to the youngster who triggered the largest manhunt in the history of the Orlando Police Department.

But the small coffin contained only a skull — and even that has not been positively identified as part of Regina's remains.

When the skull and a tattered blue-and-green dress were found at a construction site near Oviedo in September 1987, local police were not sure what they had.

A new police chief found the skull and dress 10 months later and reported the discovery to Orlando detectives. A medical examination could not positively identify the skull as Regina's, but her mother said the tattered dress definitely belonged to the girl.

Women lured into cocaine buys

MIAMI — A sweet-talking informant charmed five girlfriends into buying cocaine for him in federal stings, then jilted them and collected payments from the Drug Enforcement Administration.

None of the women had prior criminal records. Now, four have cocaine convictions and one is awaiting trial, according to a report in the Miami Herald.

The informant, Mario Rodolfo Portell, 34, had three convictions on bad check charges in New Jersey when he became a DEA informant in 1987. The agency helped Portell, a Mariel refugee, with his immigration papers and worked out a deal under which Texas would drop another bad-check charge and let him make restitution of $4,977.97 from his informant earnings.

Court records show he earned $79,000 in two years as an informant in New Jersey and Miami.

"Every day, I wake up in prison and I say, 'God damn, Mario Portell, you should be here and I should be home with my two children,'" said Mirtha Valdivia Sanad, 28, of Hialeah, now serving seven years at a federal prison in Marianna.

DEA agents arrested her June 23, after she arranged for him to buy one kilogram of cocaine through her sister's boyfriend.

Doctor loses license over hot tub birth

FORT LAUDERDALE — A doctor who videotaped an underwater birth that resulted in a brain-dead baby being born in a hot tub has had his Florida license revoked for "degrading" medical practices.

"I just can't believe in this country that a patient could be ... treated in this manner," Dr. Emilio Echevarria, a member of the Florida Board of Medicine, said Saturday after watching a videotape of the birth.

The board voted unanimously to revoke the medical license of Dr. Albert Snejf, a native of Syria who practiced medicine in Miami and promoted the "underwater birth" process, even though he had no special training in obstetrics.

The board's decision was a result of the November 1980 death of the infant daughter of Marlene and Manuel Alonso, also of Miami, whose daughter was pronounced brain dead after she was born in a hot tub in Snejf's office.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Martinez to push for more prisons

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Bob Martinez is expected to recommend this week that the state expand its prison space by about 8,500 beds, the largest single-year expansion in Florida history.

The state now has room for about 35,500 prisoners. Martinez is expected to seek an 8,500-bed increase this year and a similar increase the following year.

In addition to the expansion, House Speaker Tom Gustafson and Senate corrections leaders are considering proposals to give local authorities control over minimum-security prisons.

The plan would allow regional authorities to build and operate new prisons. The regional and local facilities would concentrate on reforming non-violent criminals, who would be kept closer to their families and communities.

"Those people are going to be back on the streets, they're going to re-enter society," Gustafson said. "We've got to prepare them to be valuable members of society."

The plan would reserve the state prison system for violent criminals who would be kept for at least 10 years and would get no time off because of crowding.

"That keeps those people behind bars until they're old and gray enough not to cause us any more problems," Gustafson said.

Florida's prisons are under a federal court order to avoid overcrowding and are forced to release tens of thousands of inmates early because there isn't room for them.

The problem gained urgency last year when a recently released man was charged with killing two Metro-Dade police officers. Charles Street had gained a reprieve off his sentence because of prison crowding.

The outcry following Street's arrest prompted Martinez to broaden his prison expansion plan for the upcoming budget year. Initially, Martinez planned to ask for new prisons to accommodate about 4,600 more inmates.

State Rep. Charles Canady, D-Lakeland, chairs the budget subcommittee that will allocate money for prisons this year and acknowledges the expected $150 million price tag for 8,500 new spaces may be too much.

and Lake counties.

"This program will provide quick access to such a program by residents in outlying areas who do not currently have that access," Tesar said. "Reduced travel and the trauma of that travel, as well as the savings of the cost of transfers are benefits of the program," he continued.

"We thought we had a strong proposal and we are delighted that the state also felt that way."

CFRH opened a cardiac catheterization lab last April as the first step in providing a full service program, Tesar said, and 306 catheterizations have been performed at the hospital since then.

The open heart surgery program is intended as the final phase of the existing cardiac program at CFRH, and will permit a full range of services, including angioplasty procedures (the balloon method of unclogging arteries).

At a minimum, the program could provide repair and replacement of heart valves, cardiac revascularization, repair and reconstruction of intrathoracic vessels, and treatment of cardiac trauma, Tesar said.

He said the new program would give CFRH the capability of performing 500 open heart operations a year.

If given final approval, the program will necessitate the expenditure of nearly $8.5 million for construction and new equipment, Tesar said.

Construction of a two-story addition on the east side of the hospital is estimated to cost $4,322,702. Another $2,616,856 is expected to be spent on construction-related work, including remodeling of an adjacent area, and $1,499,793 is earmarked for new equipment.

Tesar said the addition will house an open heart operating room and a shelved-in space for a future operating room to be located adjacent to the existing operating room suite on the first floor of the building.

Post-operative patients will be monitored in a four-bed area and, once stabilized, will be transported to a second floor open heart surgical intensive care unit.

Construction for this part of the program would involve 7,965 square feet, Tesar said.

The 12-bed intensive care unit will have access through the second floor medical-surgical east wing, which will displace eight existing private rooms. This will involve 7,526 square feet of new construction plus 1,957 square feet of remodeled space.

The project will not change the number of beds in the hospital — 226.

Tesar said physician and staff personnel required for the new unit include a cardiovascular surgeon who is certified or eligible for certification by the American Board of Thoracic Surgery, an assistant to the operating surgeon, and a board-certified anesthesiologist who is trained in open heart surgery.

Support staff needed include a registered nurse or a certified operating room technician specially trained in cardiac procedures. Total needed support staff numbers 18, a number of whom are already on staff, Tesar said.

CFRH is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Hospital Corporation of America.

No winner; Lotto prize is $18 million

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — No one picked all six winning numbers in this week's Lotto drawing, so Florida's grand prize jackpot climbed to an estimated $18 million for next week, Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said Sunday.

February has yet to produce a winner, but Paul declared January "a remarkable month."

"We celebrated our one-year anniversary, and crowned an even dozen millionaires," Paul said. "The Lottery awarded more than $70 million in Lotto grand prizes and $1 million in the Instant game. And that was in less than 30 days to 12 lucky Lottery players," Paul said.

Five multi-million-dollar winners split a $31.5 million New Year's jackpot.

International have broken ground this year. During 1988, 14 commercial and seven industrial permits were issued.

The city issued a total of 189 building permits last month, representing $1.9 million in construction. That figure is up over January 1988 by 71 permits and nearly $1 million in construction.

Last month the city authorized demolition of two single family homes.

The bearings allow the turbine shaft to spin at some 28,000 rpm and cracks could lead to a catastrophic pump failure that could destroy a shuttle. Microscopic inspection of the interior of Discovery's pumps turned up no obvious signs of damage.

But all three pumps were assembled and tested the same way as the one that suffered cracks and NASA was unable to prove that water had never been present at some point. For that reason, the decision was made to replace the pumps with three that were put together in a way that makes them immune to such cracking.

NASA is under pressure to get Discovery off the launch pad in time to avoid delaying the launch of the Magellan Venus radar mapper aboard the shuttle Atlantis on April 28.

Because of the positions of Earth and Venus, Atlantis must get off the pad by May 23 or its payload will face a two-year delay.

Money raised through the drive will be used for "something to enhance the place," Hanson said. The committee has considered purchase of a microwave oven for the center's kitchen.

When renovation nears completion in late May, the committee will hold a work day at the center. Members will paint, clean windows and add other last-minute touches to their new home.

Gainesville recycling plan a model

United Press International

GAINESVILLE — Gainesville plans to expand its trash recycling program to all 35,000 homes in the area in April, becoming the first such program in Florida to blanket an entire city.

The state Legislature decreed last year that each county in the state must initiate a recycling program by July 1, and that each county must be recycling at least 30 percent of its garbage by 1994.

At least 60 local governments in Florida already have fledgling recycling programs or are setting them up, said Margaret Elliget, supervisor of a recycling grant program for the DER.

Gainesville's program is expected to become a model for other local governments experimenting with what is called "curbside recycling." It began two years ago with 1,000 homes and has expanded to 6,500 homes in 10 neighborhoods.

Once a week, participants put out three orange buckets — one with the week's worth of newspapers, another with aluminum cans and a third with glass bottles. The rest of their trash, such as plastic wrappers and leftover food, goes into a regular garbage can and ultimately to a landfill.

The trash in the 5-gallon buckets goes to a recycling facility, where it is shredded, baled and sold as material for new products.

Beginning in April, the orange buckets will be seen in front of 35,000 homes in the city and its surrounding urban area, said Philip Smith, who manages the program.

Also in April, the city will begin recycling other wastes such as limbs and leaves from yards, which will be used for mulch, and plastic from milk jugs and soft-drink bottles, Smith said.

For the next year, recycling in Gainesville will remain voluntary. If the participation rate doesn't rise to about 70 percent of the households, city officials may make it mandatory, although they have not worked out enforcement details, Smith said.

Deputy reports he was clubbed

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A man who was confronted by Seminole County sheriff's deputies as he carried a wooden club behind a deputy in rural Altamonte Springs, was arrested after he allegedly hit another deputy on the wrist.

Roosevelt Smith, 31, who refused to give an address, was charged with battery on a policeman at 1:07 a.m. Sunday on Central Street.

A deputy reported ordering Smith several times to drop his club, but he refused until after the deputy drew his service revolver. After the club was dropped and the deputy reholstered his gun, deputies said, Smith advanced on the deputy and hit his left wrist, breaking his watchband. Bond is $1,000.

- James Milton Wheeler, 32, of Titusville, at 4:15 a.m. Sunday at 1000 Lockwood Road, Oviedo, after a policeman recognized him and knew he was driving with a suspended license.
- Benjamin Cecil Ogle, 58, of 398 Tulane Drive, Altamonte Springs, Sunday on Interstate-4 after another motorist alerted a state trooper to a possible drunk driver.

Marina fees below projections

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Six months after the city began charging marina launching fees, profits are far below anticipated figures, the parks and recreation director has told the city commission.

The city commission will review the marina fees at a workshop today at 4 p.m.

Parks and Recreation Director Jim Jernigan has proposed to the commission seven-day collection of fees to increase net revenue by more than $25,000 annually. Under the current ordinance, collection of marina fees is done only on weekends and holidays.

Jernigan has proposed that net income could be increased from under $6,000 to nearly $29,500.

Jernigan said the initial $60,000 estimate for expected annual income from the fees was unrealistic.

At the workshop, commissioners were to review a proposed interlocal agreement with Lake Mary and Seminole County. The agreement outlines shared responsibilities for widening and landscaping Lake Mary Boulevard.

Costs to Sanford under the agreement would be $925,100. Seminole County would fund $1.74 million and Lake Mary would pay $1.09 million.

In addition, the commission was to discuss advertising contracts for the cultural arts center renovation. The city received Division of Historical Resources approval to begin advertising late last month. Renovation of the Fifth Street structure is being financed in part by a grant from the division.

And, the commissioners will discuss a request by Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriet to require occupational licenses for arcades.

Weight Loss Pill Approved for U.S. Gov't. Patent

'Lazy Way' to Lose Weight Already Sweeping U.S.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (Special)— An amazing new weight loss pill called "fat-magnet" has recently been developed and perfected by two prominent doctors at a world famous hospital in Los Angeles that reportedly "guarantees" you steady fat loss and calorie reduction by simply taking their tested and proven new pill.

The U.S. government has just approved the doctors' claims for a hard-to-get patent that confirms "there has never been anything like their fat-bonding pill process before." It is a totally new major scientific breakthrough and is revolutionizing the weight loss industry.

You Can "Eat Normally" Best of all, "you can continue to eat your favorite foods and you don't have to change your normal eating habits. You can start losing fat and reduce calories from the very first day, until you achieve the ideal weight you desire without exercising."

The new pill is appropriately called the "fat-magnet" pill because it breaks into thousands of particles, each acting like a tiny magnet, "attracting" and trapping many times its size in undigested fat particles. Then, all the trapped fat and calories are naturally "flushed" right out of your body because they cannot be absorbed.

Within 2 days you should notice a change in the color of your stool, caused by the fat particles being eliminated.

"Automatically" Lose Fat According to one of the inventors, Dr. William Shell, heart specialist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA medical school, "the new fat-bonding process is a 'lazy way' to lose weight because the pills alone "automatically" reduce calories by eliminating dietary fat. It is 100% safe and not a drug."

The fat-magnet pills are already sweeping the country with glowing reports of weight loss from formerly overweight people in all walks of life who are now slimmer, trimmer and more attractive again.

Now Available to the Public If you are trying to lose 20, 50, 100 pounds or more, you can order your supply of these "no-risk" highly successful fat-magnet pills directly from the doctors' exclusive manufacturer only (includes optional calorie-reduction plan for even better results). Send $20 for a 90 pill supply (+$3 handling), or $35 for a 180 pill supply (+$3 handling), to: Fat-Magnet, 9016 Wilshire Blvd., Dept. W246, Beverly Hills, CA 90211. Bush faces first test

Perhaps the first major test of George Bush's presidency is his looming struggle over a tax increase vs. spending cuts to reduce the federal deficit. Despite the prevailing view, the new President's hand is stronger than it appears.

For starters, an overwhelming 72 percent of voters oppose any tax increase to lower the deficit, according to a recent Yankelovich survey. Many Americans, it appears, share the view that giving lawmakers more money will merely prompt them to spend more, not less.

Mr. Bush's no-new-taxes pledge was also bolstered by Ronald Reagan's final budget proposal, which slashed next year's projected $127 billion deficit to $92 billion — without a tax hike. This is well below the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit target for 1990 of $100 billion, the reduction would be achieved by spending restraint combined with economic growth, which supposedly will boost government revenues.

In the meantime, some leading economists have begun to wonder out loud whether the deficit requires such drastic medicine as a broad tax increase, which they fear may stifle what they see as the present expansion and plunge the economy into recession. The economists are more cognizant than the politicians that the deficit already has been cut from 6.3 percent of gross national product in 1983 to 3 percent today.

Even more significant politically, Congress is discovering that opposition to specific tax increases can be fierce — much fiercer than opposition to spending cuts.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski has proposed a 15-cent increase in the federal gasoline levy, now pegged at 9.1 cent per gallon. Others on Capitol Hill have suggested a hike of as much as 50 cent per gallon. (Motorists already pay an average of 24 cent per gallon in federal and state taxes.) At present, the fuel tax is used to build highways and bridges. But Rep. Rostenkowski would spend the increase on deficit reduction rather than concrete and steel, thus establishing the dangerous fiscal precedent of dumping traditional user fees into the bottomless pit of general expenditures.

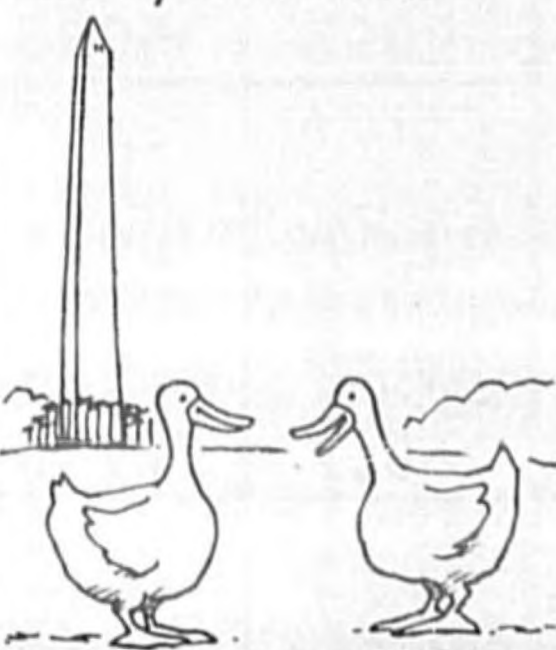

Moreover, the steep boost in the federal tax would rob governors and legislatures of their capacity to raise the state portion of the fuel tax to build and repair roads.

Resistance to the Rostenkowski gas tax is understandably stiffest in the West, where motorists would shoulder a much larger share of the increase than Easterners, who generally commute shorter distances and rely more on mass transit. The American Automobile Association estimates that a 50-cent hike would cost the typical Wyoming motorist $412 a year, compared with $198 for drivers in Washington, D.C.

Taken together, these formidable drawbacks are likely to kill the Rostenkowski tax plan sooner rather than later, in spite of its momentary popularity inside the Washington beltway. They also make spending restraint appear far more politically palatable by contrast.

In the approach contest of wills between President Bush and the Congress, the fate of Chairman Rostenkowski's proposal may demonstrate that high taxes are not, after all, inevitable.

On pay, Founding Fathers knew best

WASHINGTON — Members of the Congress would not be again snarled in controversy over increased compensation for themselves if they recognized and accepted the wisdom of the nation's founders.

In the earliest years of the republic, those who drafted the Constitution and Bill of Rights established a fundamental principle: Politicians should not benefit from pay raises they vote for themselves until after the next congressional election.

At the urging of James Madison, that principle was incorporated into the original Bill of Rights. When submitted to the states for ratification, that document contained 12 articles, including one that said:

"No law varying the compensation for the services of the senators and representatives shall take effect until an election of representatives shall have intervened."

That article and one other failed to gain the approval of the requisite two-thirds of the states. Today, it is a technically pending amendment, having been ratified by 19 of the required 34 states.

The principle was successfully applied, however, to the president's salary. Article II, Section 1, Clause 6 of the Constitution says: "The president shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected."

Although granting the electorate the right to indirectly participate in the pay raise procedure is hardly revolutionary, Rep. Thomas J. Tauke, R-Iowa, has antagonized his fellow legislators by proposing to incorporate it into federal law this year.

That, of course, means that if Congress wished to change its own pay scales, it would be required to follow the procedures used in conducting all of its other business — holding hearings, publicly debating the issue and openly voting on it.

Finally, most legislators (all of the House and one-third of the Senate) would have to be re-elected before they received the raise. Their bid for another term could become a plebiscite on their pay increase vote.

The lawmakers, of course, are terrified of anything resembling the democratic process when their salaries are at stake. Instead, they enacted the Federal Salary Act of 1967, which requires the empanelling of a supposedly independent commission every four years to propose higher compensation levels.

Members of Congress and other senior federal officials already are more generously compensated than 98 percent of the nation's work force. The legislators have received 10 pay increases in the past 15 years and their salary even without the proposed increase is almost four times higher than it was in 1964.

They receive an assortment of extravagant perquisites, including an exceptionally generous pension plan, federally funded domestic and foreign travel, life insurance, comprehensive health care wholly financed by the government and a host of other benefits.

The requirement that lawmakers divide their time between Washington and their home districts imposes extraordinary personal and professional pressures on them — but they already are well compensated for those responsibilities.

That article and one other failed.

Spelling Gadhafi: A war of words

WASHINGTON — Once again Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi is in the headlines and, as has been the case since he came to power, most major newspapers and publications spell his name differently.

Generally speaking, translating from languages employing non-Latin alphabets is difficult. Sometimes governments publish an official translation, as the government of China does. In other situations, nations with non-Latin alphabets have established semi-official Latin alphabet versions of their languages simply through usage. Japan is an example of this.

But there is no official or even generally accepted semi-official translation of Arabic characters into the Latin alphabet. Worse still, experts on the subject disagree sharply over how Arabic should be written in the Latin alphabet.

This has left people attempting to translate Arabic names with trying phonetic spellings — trying to spell a name the way it sounds. Given the rather exotic sounds of the Arabic language to the Western ear, this can be difficult indeed. Many countries and Middle Eastern figures have made the problem somewhat simpler by stating a preference as to how a name should be spelled in English. But Libya's leader never has, and in his own country he is known simply as "The Leader."

Making the whole question even more confusing is the fact that official and semi-official Libyan sources can't agree on a Latin spelling when they use it. JANA, the official Libyan news agency, uses Al-Gadhafi. The Libyan U.N. Mission uses Muammar Gadhafi. The official Libyan English language magazine "Jamahiriya Review" uses Qadhafi.

A couple of years ago it appeared the problem might be solved. In a series of letters to American school children and American clergy the Libyan leader signed his name in Arabic script over the typed name: "Colonel Moammar El-Gadhafi."

So relying on these letters as the first "official" statement as to how he wants his name spelled, both Associated Press and United Press International have changed their official stylebooks to make the spelling "Moammar Gadhafi" (the "el" was dropped because it is an honorific not used with other Arab leaders' names).

It was hoped that with the wire services in agreement the other print media would fall into line. But it hasn't happened. The New York Times and The Washington Post use Qaddafi. Newsweek, which is owned by the Post, uses Kaddafi. Time uses Gaddafi, while U.S. News & World Report uses Qadhafi. The Wall Street Journal uses Qadhafi. In London both the Times and the Economist use Gadhafi.

The U.S. government uses still another version: Muammar Qaddafi. They adopted this spelling after asking the Library of Congress to research the matter and come up with a version. But there is even some disagreement among the library's experts.

Some in the library's Arabic section say the classical way to translate the name from Arabic into English is "Qadhafi" but the double "dh" looked so strange in English that it was decided to simply use a single "dd" instead.

Other Arabic scholars insist the way the name sounds depends on who is speaking because the language is accented very differently from region to region. In Libya, they say, an accurate phonetic spelling would be something like "Gazaly," but in other parts of the Arab world it would be much closer to "Azzaly."

This could prove difficult.

DAVID S. BRODER

The 'service for money' idea

WASHINGTON — The forces that shape history are people and ideas. Journalism focuses on the former, believing that "names make news." But often it is the ideas whose consequences are more significant.

In all the excitement over President Bush and his aides moving into the White House, an idea last week took root in Washington which could shape this society long after the men and women now taking up their new jobs have passed the burden to their successors.

The idea, in narrow legislative form, is voluntary national service for young people. Underlying it is the broad concept of mutual obligation between citizens and the nation.

It is not a new idea, there being precious few of those. But there are political cycles, and the embrace of this idea could well mark a turn as important as the tax-cutting fever which swept out of California in 1978 with the passage of Proposition 13. That idea has dominated the politics of the past decade.

Today, the idea that cutting taxes can be an effective way to stimulate economic activity is a commonplace around the world. But it had been out of fashion for a long time before 1978. Once the California voters had lit the bonfire, it took little time for the idea to gain recognition and acquiescence in Washington. In 1978, to the surprise of the Carter administration, a Democratic Congress (prompted by the late Rep. William Steiger, a Wisconsin Republican), passed a deep cut in capital-gains rates. In 1981, President Reagan pushed through an across-the-board reduction in individual rates. And in 1986, with bipartisan sponsorship, those rates were cut again.

The root idea of that decade was an appeal to self-interest or, some would say, selfishness: Cut tax rates; let people keep more of what they and their capital earn; and they will work harder, risk more — and thereby expand economic opportunity and growth.

The new idea is quite different. It's the idea of asking people to put something back in the common pool of society in return for the individual benefits they extract.

The earlier idea may not have been wrong. But a decade's emphasis on self-aggrandizement may require a counter appeal to altruism. The social contract needs to be renewed.

The turn came, once again, from the states. As far back as 1986, the National Governors' Association, through men like Bill Clinton of Arkansas, a Democrat, and Michael N. Castle of Delaware, a Republican, began promoting a "welfare prevention" initiative. It was based on the concept of a "contract" between family aid recipients and the states.

Two years later, that principle was embodied in a major welfare overhaul passed by a Democratic Congress and signed by President Reagan. It guaranteed income support, child-care assistance and other family services in return for the welfare mother's accepting the obligation to use the training opportunities that will lead to self-supporting work.

Now the same concept has been applied to young people by Sen. Sam Nunn (D-Ga.) and other legislators affiliated with the Democratic Leadership Council in what they call the "Citizenship and National Service Act of 1989." In essence, it would offer young people who sign up for two years of community or military service stipends of $20,000 to $24,000 they could use to finance their education, training or home purchases. Over time, most existing college-loan programs would be phased out, under this plan, and what is now an entitlement would become a federal benefit earned by the recipient through service to the society.

The draft plan has lots of holes in it and many questionable assumptions. But the concept is compellingly correct: Where education is increasingly the ticket to "the good life," those who are helped by society to achieve an education owe that society some substantial service in return. The obligation can be fulfilled either in defending the nation or addressing the unmet social needs — in schools, hospitals, slums and damaged environments — which dwarf government's ability to hire and pay for increasingly scarce manpower.

The notion has gained strength with the new leaders of both parties. President Bush, in his Inaugural Address, sharply rebuked those "enthralled with material things."

That kind of language has not been heard here since John F. Kennedy's day. Its reappearance now is a development far more important than the confirmation of John Tower or the details of the Bush budget revision. By reviving the concept of the social contract, the President, leaders of Congress and governors have embraced an idea powerful enough — and right enough — to give shape to the coming decade and build a better nation.

The draft plan has lots of holes in it.

Doctor accused of cocaine dosing

NEW YORK — A Park Avenue doctor with a star-studded patient list has been giving them $25 doses of cocaine to reduce their pain, but state health officials said Sunday they may soon bring a halt to the practice.

Dr. Milton Reder, 89 — who has given cocaine treatments to celebrity clients including comedian David Brenner, entertainer Sonny Bono and divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson — could face charges ranging from professional misconduct to felony drug possession, said Thomas Coffey, director of the state Department of Health's Bureau of Controlled Substances.

"Baloney," said the elderly doctor when told of the state investigation that found he was one of two or three doctors defying a New York County Medical Society ruling discounting the effectiveness of cocaine for blocking muscle and skeletal pain by placing it on swabs pressed to a nerve in the nose.

Reder's patients pay $25 a visit for him to insert cotton swab doused with a 10 to 15 percent liquid cocaine solution up their nose. The swabs are placed against a central nerve center, the sphenopalatine ganglion, in the rear of the nasal passages and connected to nerves throughout the body.

Coffey said the medical society stood firm in its belief that there was no scientific evidence that the practice, known as Sphenopalatine Ganglion Block, was effective in reducing pain.

Wage discrimination trial begins

SAN FRANCISCO — California's reputation as a progressive state with an equal pay law dating back to 1913 will be put to the test when a federal trial begins Tuesday in the largest sex-based wage discrimination suit in the nation.

As many as 100,000 of the state's current and former civil service workers stand to gain cash compensation if their employer union can prove the state intentionally discriminated as far back as the 1930s, channelling women into low paid jobs considered "women's work."

When the trial opens Tuesday, after four years of legal wrangling, the California State Employees' Association must go back to the 1930s to show state officials began discriminating then by setting up an unequal civil service wage system then maintained it through the years.

Deputy Attorney General Richard Tullis, who is defending the state, called the charges "completely unfounded."

The 1984 suit, filed by 10 women and the CSEA, originally began as a comparable worth claim — the theory that certain jobs requiring equal skills or education should be paid comparable salaries.

The CSEA argued at the outset that the state shunted women into clerical, nursing or other posts classically considered for women-only then paid them less than predominantly male jobs requiring the same skills, such as groundskeeper or pharmacist.

CSEA was forced to change its tack when a federal appeals court ruled in a separate case that employers need not adopt "comparable worth" wage formulas.

Now civil service workers must prove the state intentionally discriminated, according to both sides.

Captain claims he's a scapegoat

United Press International

WASHINGTON — A captain who left Vietnamese refugees stranded at sea, forcing them to resort to cannibalism, described their plight as a "tragedy of errors" and blamed the Navy for making him a scapegoat. CBS News reported Sunday.

Capt. Alex Ballan, a 25-year veteran, faces a court-martial for leaving the Vietnamese adrift last May after the transport USS Dubuque encountered their crippled boat in the South China Sea. He gave the refugees food and water, but decided against taking them aboard his ship.

"I feel bad that people were lost, you know, and I'm really, you know, it hurts that this occurred," Ballan told CBS's "60 Minutes."

"But it hurts worse that I'm being blamed for it. And even worse than that is how the Navy hangs you out to dry when you get in trouble," said Ballan, who was decorated for service during the Vietnam War.

In May, 110 Vietnamese refugees embarked in a small boat bound for Malaysia. They expected a seven-day journey, but on the third day their engine quit.

The boat people rigged a crude sail, and the winds carried them east. Five days later they were almost without food or water.

Passengers began to die. Drinkable water ran low. To worsen matters, a former South Vietnamese soldier named Minh

"But it hurts worse that I'm being blamed for it,"

-Capt. Alex Ballan

took control of the junk and seized what food and rain water remained, CBS said.

On their 17th day at sea, the refugees came across the Dubuque.

The Navy can pick up refugees if their craft is not seaworthy, Ballan had rescued refugees twice. But a series of mistakes proved fatal to many aboard this boat.

"It's a tragedy of errors," Ballan recalled on "60 Minutes." As the Dubuque approached, the refugee boat appeared in a state of chaos, he said. A survivor disputed the captain's statement, saying the boat people only stood up and waved to the U.S. ship.

Altering his usual procedure, Ballan sent his executive officer and a Vietnamese sailor from the Dubuque to the junk, but the sailors were instructed not to board the boat, CBS said.

The Vietnamese sailor, serving as a translator, misunderstood the refugees when they said their engine was broken. He thought the boat people had no engine aboard, so Ballan believed they had been sailing all along and could reach their destination in a week.

Three of the refugees swam to the Dubuque. They were tossed life rings, but Ballan ordered his men not to let them on board. He doubted the need for plucking the swimmers out of the water and taking them back to the junk.

"I think that would indicate false hope, an improper action," Ballan said. "They were not in any trouble at all. They were not in a life-threatening situation. They had life rings. They were being watched by my officers and my crew right there on the boat station."

But one swimmer drowned, and the captain did not receive the report from the Dubuque's lookout.

Ballan gave the refugees enough food and water for the seven days he calculated they needed to sail to land. He also gave them charts and maps showing the way to the Philippines.

Ballan had decided the junk was seaworthy and could sail on. Navy rules do not require crews to pick up refugees if the captain deems their craft sound and navigable. Ballan told CBS he is an officer who adheres strictly to the rules.

"I follow my instructions and my guidance. What I want to do isn't always what I can do," Ballan said. Mistakenly, the Vietnamese interpreter told the refugees another boat would pick them up in a couple of days. No boat came.

Waiting for that boat, the refugees remained in place and ate all their food. Two and a half weeks passed before the 52 survivors were finally rescued by a Filipino fisherman.

Meanwhile, the soldiers who controlled the boat began looking for someone near death to kill for food. In all, four passengers were killed and eaten. All 52 survivors had to resort to cannibalism, one survivor told CBS.

Ballan is charged with violating Navy regulations and dereliction of duty for failing to adequately assist the refugees and for leaving an unseaworthy boat 280 miles from land. He was relieved of command.

Ballan said he is a scapegoat. He noted that the Navy appointed a prior captain of the Dubuque to lead the investigation, an officer Ballan earlier criticized.

Rejecting the less severe judicial procedure of an administrative hearing, Ballan chose instead to undergo a court-martial, which he hopes will clear his name.

Among the people supporting him are the boat's survivors. They wrote the U.S. ambassador in the Philippines, asking that Ballan not be punished because of them.

Philippine vice president urges Marcos' return

United Press International

MANILA, Philippines — Vice President Salvador Laurel warned Monday of a violent upheaval if President Corason Aquino remained "stubborn" and refused to allow ailing former president Ferdinand Marcos to die in his homeland.

But Aquino told reporters Monday she would hold fast to her decision banning the return of her predecessor.

"I'm still sticking by my original position that it is not in the interest of the nation that he be allowed to return at this time," Aquino said.

Laurel returned to Manila Saturday after traveling to Honolulu to receive a secret message the hospitalized Marcos asked him to deliver to Aquino.

The vice president, who split with Aquino a year ago over disagreements in her handling of the nation's 20-year communist insurgency, said he agreed with medical findings that Marcos was nearing death and should be allowed to return to his homeland after three years of exile in Hawaii.

"The prognosis is that he has less than 50 percent chance to survive and may die anytime, possibly by reason of a sudden heart attack," Laurel said. "He has less than 10 percent chance of survival within the year."

He warned of new unrest in the Philippines if Marcos died abroad.

"If Mrs. Aquino remains stubborn and refuses to allow Mr. Marcos to return, and he dies there and his body is not permitted to be returned, I am afraid this will be the fuse that will ignite violence here," Laurel said in an interview over radio station DZRH.

"This is no longer the time for vengeance or vindictiveness," said Laurel, who added he will exhaust all means to meet with Aquino and deliver to her the message Marcos entrusted to him during his 19-hour visit to Honolulu.

Aquino has refused to see

Laurel, stressing her vice president had broken away from her and had gone to see Marcos as leader of the opposition. She said Sunday there should be "nothing secret" in what Marcos has to say to her. She also said if Laurel believed that Marcos' message was of "paramount importance" it should be made public.

"Nothing should be held confidential when it involves national security," said Aquino's chief aide, Executive Secretary Catalino Macaraig.

But Laurel said the secret message from Marcos was "entrusted to me in confidence. I cannot just make it public without authorization from the former president himself."

NEW YORK — Prices opened lower Monday in light trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which gained 8.39 last week, was down 5.89 to 2325.36 shortly after the market opened.

Declines led advances 434-370 among the 1,301 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Early turnover amounted to about 9,914,900 shares.

Stock prices ended mixed Friday in active trading. Buying activity was dampened by profit taking that followed the release of a government report showing the economy added 408,000 non-payroll jobs in January, significantly above market expectations. Unemployment in January rose fractionally to 5.4 percent.

Gail Dudack, a market analyst with S.G. Warburg & Co., called the sharp rise in non-farm payrolls a "disappointment." She said the employment data and Thursday's strong sales reports by major retailers reflected a surging U.S. economy.

The reports heightened concern among investors that the Federal Reserve would further tighten credit conditions to counter inflationary pressures.

Dollar moves higher

United Press International

The dollar was higher Monday in moderate trading on major foreign currency markets. Gold was sharply lower in New York.

In Tokyo, the dollar rallied against the Japanese yen, closing at 129.70 yen, up 0.43 from 129.27 yen last Friday.

Currency traders in Japan said the outcome of the Group of Seven Western industrial powers meeting in Washington had no significant impact on the market. The U.S. unemployment report Friday, however, helped to support the dollar, they said.

Dealers said they were concerned over possible dollar-selling intervention by the central banks causing uncertainty over the market's direction.

Murayama told a news conference in Tokyo Japan would take concerted action with other G-7 members to support the mark if necessary.

Detroit firing on all pistons

A week before the All-Star game, the Detroit Pistons have already reached playoff form against the Chicago Bulls.

Vinnie Johnson scored 27 points and Isiah Thomas made two key baskets down the stretch Sunday to help Detroit turn back a late Chicago rally and register a 113-102 victory over the Bulls.

Detroit is 4-0 against Chicago this year and has won eight of the last nine times the two teams have met, including last year's playoffs. Michael Jordan, who suffered a bloody nose in the first period Sunday, scored 28 points, below his average of 34.7.

Elsewhere on Sunday, Cleveland crushed Charlotte 110-91, Seattle flipped by Boston 89-87, Miami stopped Sacramento 102-98, Houston handed Denver 124-112, and the Los Angeles Lakers lashed New Jersey 134-116.

COLLEGE HOOPS

Illini miss shot to retake No. 1

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Ed Horton scored 26 points and pulled down 17 rebounds Sunday to lead No. 13 Iowa to an 86-82 Big Ten victory over second-ranked Illinois, the Illini's third loss in four games.

Iowa, which trailed by 8 early in the contest, used a 17-2 run midway through the first half to take a 33-26 lead. The Hawkeyes never relinquished the lead again. They led 44-38 at the half behind Horton's 12 points and 11 rebounds.

B.J. Armstrong had 24 points and Roy Marble added 18 for the Hawkeyes, 17-4 overall and 5-3 in the Big Ten. The pair accounted for 21 of Iowa's last 23 points.

Illinois, 18-3 and 5-3, was led by Nick Anderson with 25 points, including 17 in the second half. The loss was Illinois' third in four conference games after opening the season with 17 consecutive wins.

GOLF

Gator grabs Los Angeles Open

LOS ANGELES — Mark Calcavecchia registered his second triumph in three weeks, playing 4-under-par over 27 holes Sunday to hold off Sandy Lyle and Hale Irwin and capture the 63rd annual Los Angeles Open by a stroke.

Calcavecchia chipped in from about 25 feet on No. 12 for a birdie to tie Lyle for the lead at 12-under, then moved ahead to stay when a putt by the 1988 Masters champion slipped out on No. 14 for bogey.

The former University of Florida star, who lost a duel with Lyle at Augusta last April, parred the final six holes for a 3-under 68 on the final round. Lyle shot a 71 and finished 11-under, and Irwin had a 68 to stand another stroke back in the rain-plagued tournament.

HOCKEY

Patrick race a near dead heat

Except for three Devils and Islanders almost certain to miss the playoffs this spring, those chosen to play Tuesday night in Edmonton should look forward to leaving the All-Star Game.

Playoff spots are up for grabs in three divisions, as only the Patrick's New Jersey Devils and New York Islanders have almost no postseason chance.

The division's race for first place, however, is another story as the Patrick offers the most fascinating battle at the top.

The Pittsburgh Penguins returned to first place in the Patrick Sunday with a 5-2 triumph over the Boston Bruins. The formerly co-leading New York Rangers and Washington Capitals both lost to enter the three-day break with 64 points each, one behind the Penguins.

Rams hope to end 4A-9 trend

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald sports editor

Parity has come to boys soccer in 4A-District 9 — again.

For the past five or six years, the top-seeded team in the district has failed to survive the tournament, being upset somewhere along the line. Larry McCorkle, coach this year's top seed, the Lake Mary Rams, is hoping it doesn't happen again.

"The level of soccer in this area has gotten to the point where you just never know," McCorkle said. "On any given night, one team can beat another. Now, it's more true than ever."

"It's been a long time since anyone has won the Seminole Athletic Conference and the district. The last five or six years, the top-seeded team has not been the district champ. Last year, Lyman was the top seed and we won the district."

Making this tournament difficult to handicap is the presence of outstanding 'keepers any every Seminole County team in the tournament.

4A-DISTRICT 9

Monday's games
Lake Brantley at DeLand, 7 p.m.
Spruce Creek at Lake Howell, 7 p.m.
Mainland at Lyman, 7 p.m.

Starting with last year's All State selection, Kelly Walden of Lyman, the talent in goal is impressive.

Lake Mary has Steve Sharp. Kirk Klaffer minds the nets for Lake Brantley. And Lake Howell has the luxury of two strong 'keepers, Steve Munnell and Didier Menard, although Menard has been bothered by an injury lately. Any of this impressive group is capable of getting hot and making a champion out of an underdog.

With teams this close playing in a single-elimination format, injuries become a major factor. For example, the Rams will be without seniors Manny Roldan and Jimmy Abbott.

Roldan, sidelined with a hip pointer, could play next week if Lake Mary makes it that far. Abbott, out with a knee injury suffered against Oviedo last week, is gone for the season.

"Losing both in the midfield hurts us," McCorkle said. "Manny went on a tear this time last year. He scored nine goals in our last four games."

"We're probably going to put a little added emphasis on defense. You have to do a little more at district time to become a defensive team. That's what wins you a championship."

Anchoring Lake Mary's defense, along with Sharp, are three more seniors — Eric Ravndal, James Noble and Jim Spicher.

Play in the district tournament gets underway this evening with three first round matches, all at 7 p.m. The No. 2-seed Lyman Bulldogs host No. 7 Daytona Beach/Mainland, the No. 3 Lake Howell Silver Hawks host No. 6 Port Orange/Spruce Creek and the No. 5 Lake Brantley Patriots are at No. 4 DeLand.

After a day, action picks up with the semifinal games on Wednesday night. Lake Mary, recipients of a first-round bye, will host the winner of the Lake Brantley/DeLand game at 7 p.m. The winners of the Lyman/Mainland and Lake Howell/Spruce Creek games will meet at 7 p.m. at the highest-seeded remaining team.

The championship game is scheduled to be played on Friday, starting at 7 p.m., at the highest-seeded surviving school.

Snell shines at Hi-Y meet

From staff reports

Early season meets like Saturday's Hi-Y Games at Winter Park's Schowalter Field are supposed to be a chance to get out and slowly acclimate the athletes to competing again.

Then you get someone like Lake Mary's Allison Snell who comes along and gives a mid-season performance.

Twice on Saturday, Snell set school records while winning her events. Her time of 42.8 in the 330-yard sprint is a new Lady Ram best while her mark of 1:39.8 in the 660-yard dash may be even better than that.

"I've never seen a girl run faster than a 1:40 in the 660 in this state," said Mike Gibson, the Lake Mary coach. "Nobody's run a faster time that I know of. It's an odd event (not one run during the season or at the state meet), but it's a very fast time."

Snell also cleared 4-4 in the high jump, good for fifth place.

The Hi-Y games, sponsored by the Central Florida YMCA, is an open meet with no scoring. However, the top six in each of the 10 running events and six field events (five for the girls) receive ribbons.

Senior Jennifer Caputo was the only other Lake Mary competitor to win her event, jumping 4-10 to win the high jump. She missed on her three attempts at 5-3, which would have been a school record.

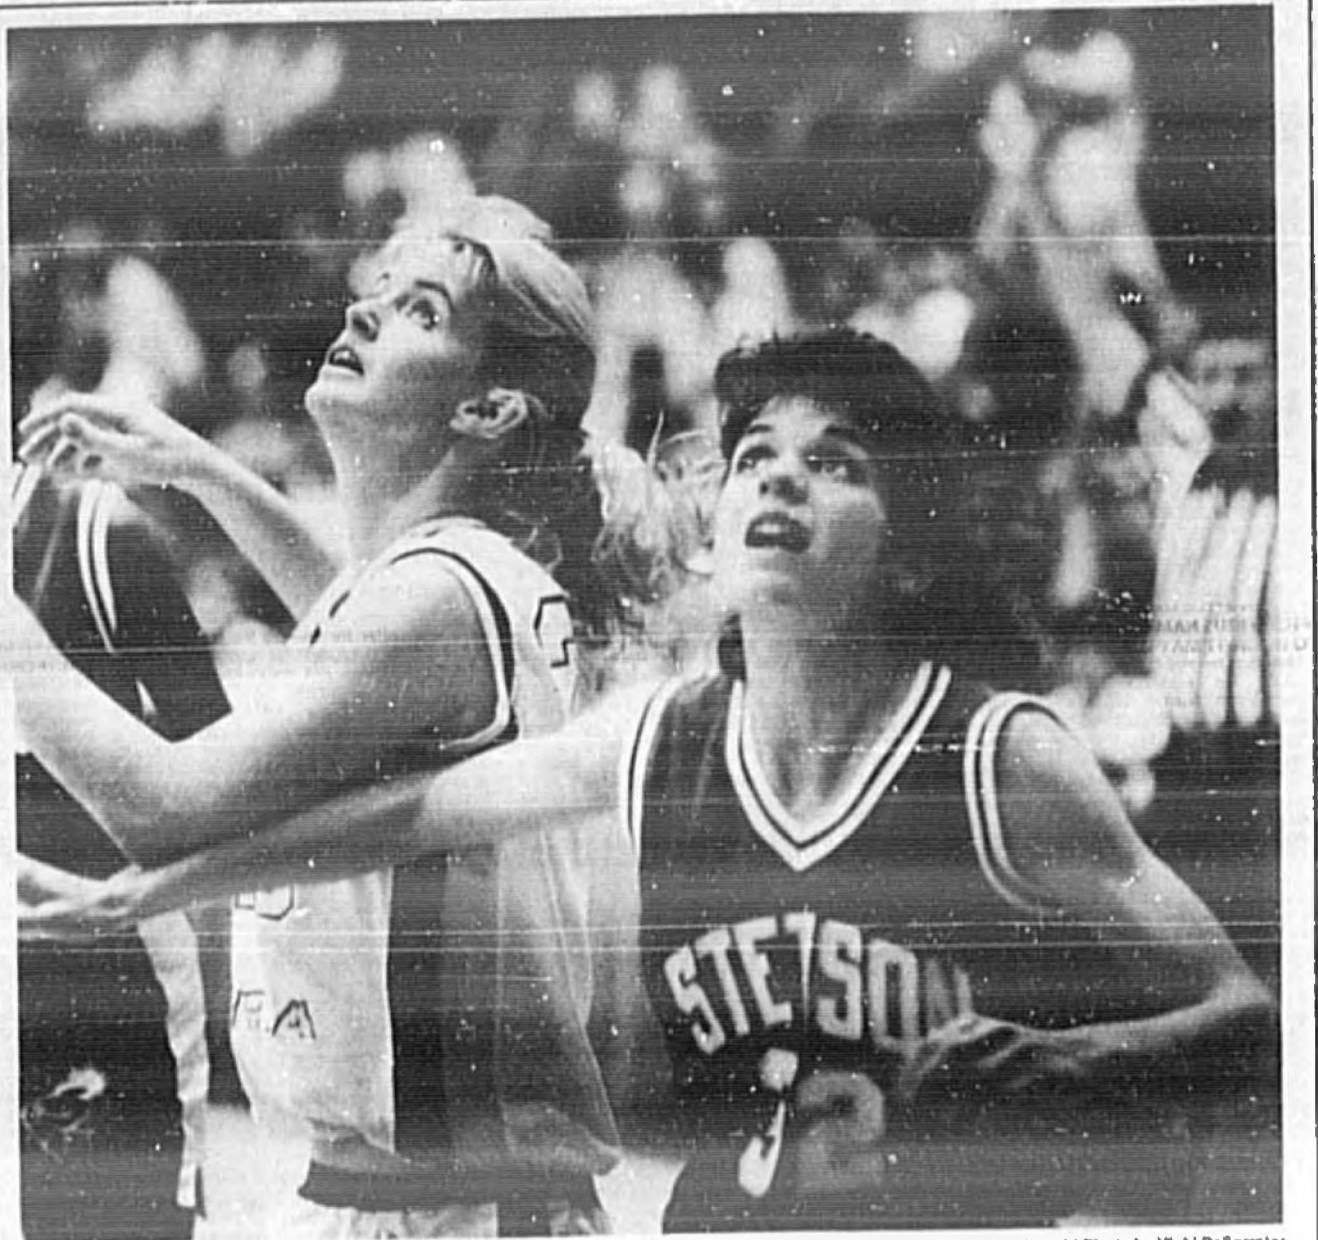

Other Lady Rams who finished in the top six of their events were Tabitha Newsome (fifth in the 330 low hurdles) and Vivian Jones (fifth in the four-kilo shot put).

Lake Mary's boys were led by Rob Robertson, whose second place time of 1:29.9 in the 660-yard run is a new school sophomore record.

Tyrone Gibson (no relation) had a good day, finishing fourth in both the long and triple jumps and seventh in the 330 dash for the Rams. Carlos Smith was third in the discus throw and 10th in the shot.

Lake Brantley sent over a representative boys squad that took a pair of firsts. Andy Ogilvie ran a 1:28.5 in the 660 run to beat Robertson and his teammates clocked a mark of 8:29.9 to capture the two-mile relay.

In her four years at Stetson University, Longwood's Courtney Hall (No. 32) has gone from little-used freshman to senior stalwart. On Saturday, Hall scored 11 points in the Lady Hatters' 30-point win over the UCF Lady Knights.

Journey nears end for Hall

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald sports editor

It's been an interesting four-year's journey for Longwood's Courtney Hall.

A 1985 graduate of Lake Mary High School, Hall is now a senior at Stetson University majoring in Business Management. She's also one of the tri-captains for the Lady Hatter basketball team.

"She only played seven games as a freshman," said Stetson coach Nancy Nichols. "Last year, she started all 29 games and she's started all the games this year except for the three games she missed with an injury and tonight (against the University of Central Florida on Jan. 12)."

"Courtney has worked hard and developed over her four years here. As a freshman, she accepted the situation and knew that if she worked hard enough, there was a light at the end of the tunnel."

That light's getting brighter and it isn't an on-coming train. According to the Stetson media guide, Hall earned the Coach's award and was named Most Improved Player after her sophomore year. Her 220 rebounds last year was a team high and seventh-best season total in SU history.

"It was very tough to stay with it," said Hall of her bench-sitting years. "I had to have a good attitude and work hard. It's paid off in the end."

Except that now, almost at the end of her college career, Hall has found herself back in the position of having to work hard to get better. Only now, her

Bell, Porsche win closest 24 Hours of Daytona

United Press International

DAYTONA BEACH — The most unusual running of the 24 Hours of Daytona finished with a familiar scene in victory lane.

Derek Bell, Bob Wollek and John Andretti won the closest 24 Hours in history Sunday in a Porsche 962, finishing 86.5 seconds in front of the Castrol Jaguar team of Price Cobb, John Nielsen, Andy Wallace and Jan Lammers. Wollek took the lead with five hours left and the Jim Busby Racing Team never relinquished the top spot.

Previously, the closest margin of victory in the 24 Hours of Daytona was 1-49.

The sight of Bell and Porsche in the winner's circle after an endurance race is almost expected. In his last 15 24-hour races, Bell has seven victories, six seconds, a third and a seventh.

Sunday marked his third triumph in the Daytona 24 Hours, and the former world endurance champion has won the 24 Hours of LeMans five times. For Porsche, the victory was its 12th in the last 13 Daytona endurance races and helped ease the disappointments of defeats to Jaguar at Daytona and LeMans last year.

Wollek, who drove the same car to a second-place finish last year, won at Daytona for the third time, while Andretti, the nephew of Mario Andretti, earned his first win in an endurance race. The victory was the 50th for the Porsche 962, which was introduced at Daytona in 1984.

"They won last year, we won this year," Wollek said. "It's just revenge."

The race got off to an inauspicious start when a ceremonial lap taken by Bob Holbert, father of the late Al Holbert, ended with a wheel falling off an Al Holbert car that will be placed in an auto racing museum in Indianapolis.

With the race in its 11th hour, a thick fog settled over Daytona International Speedway, forcing International Motor Sports Association officials to stop the race at 1:50 a.m. EST. It was the third time the race has been stopped, but the delay of 3 hours, 56 minutes was the longest in the event's history.

"You almost couldn't see the taillights of the cars in front of you," Wallace said. "You almost had to do it by feel. They made the right decision to do what they did."

When racing resumed at 5:46 a.m., the pole-winning Nissan team of Geoff Brabham, Aris Luyendyk, Michael Roe and Chip Robinson held a one-lap lead on the Jaguar and a two-lap lead over the eventual winners.

Warm weather means hot fishing

FISHING

JIM SHUPE

Salt water anglers can look forward to an "early" season this year, thanks to the unusually warm weather. Water temperatures have not dipped to the customary winter lows, and fish will be reacting to the warmer water temperatures instead of the monthly calendar.

Redfish are already roaming the flats of the Banana and Indian Rivers near Cocoa Beach. Guide Troy Perez has been having a field day with reds in the 6-12 pound range. Troy reports that some trout are also starting to show up in the skinny water.

Cobia chasers can expect for cobia to make a good run as early as mid-February, barring any unforeseen chilly weather. Bait pods and manta rays have already been spotted on the coast. A few lucky anglers who happened to be in the right place at the right time have already snagged a few cobia. In fact, Troy has caught 38 so far this year! Most of Troy's cobia have come from offshore wrecks.

Offshore anglers can look forward to a good year with dolphin, wahoo, king mackerel, sailfin and a few marlin. Two wahoo over 80 pounds were caught two weeks ago just east of Pelican Flats.

Good numbers of grouper and snapper will be found on wrecks and reefs in 100-140 feet of water until March. Around March of each year, the larger bottomfish make their annual migration back into deeper waters such as the 28 fathom drop and the "steeples." Start spooling up your reels with new line and get your equipment in working order. You have already missed some great salt water fishing and you need to be prepared for the next nice weekend.

Shupe's Scoop Fish cannot resort to calendars, but must depend upon water temperatures to "tell" them what season it is. The warm water temperatures are fooling fish into believing that it is already spring.

Fishing Forecast Lemon Bluff Fish Camp reports that the specks are hitting in Lake Harney, Lake Jessup, and in the river. Bass fishing is slow due to the high water.

Steve Gurd at Osteen Bridge Fish Camp said that the specks are strong in the old river channel. Stringers to 70 have been reported recently. Shad are providing plenty of action for anglers who troll jugs and spoons just off the bottom. The high water has bass scattered. Snook are rated good at Sebastian, but the season is closed through February. Trout, bluefish and flounder are giving anglers steady action in the daylight hours.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports good offshore fishing. Trollers are catching good numbers of wahoo, dolphin and sailfin in 100-180 feet of water. Fantastic catches of grouper and snapper have been made on inshore reefs and wrecks. The buoy line is very slow due to dirty water, but flounder and bluefish are hitting inside the Port. Reds are good in the Banana and Indian Rivers, and trout are starting to move up on the flats with the warm weather.

Action is very good around the New Smyrna jetties with sheepshead, drum, redfish, and flounder. Finger mullet and live shrimp are the two best baits, while dead shrimp will also catch all species.

In the two-mile relay, the foursome of Tricia Frost, Sheryl Palumbo, Sally Morris and Stacy Johnson finished in 10:15, good for second place behind Winter Park (10:14.4). Individually, Johnson finished second one second behind Snell in the 330 dash. Micki Palumbo was fifth in the 1,500-meter run with a time of 5:42 while Shelby Shaffer's time of 14:21 was good for sixth in the 3,000-meter run. Team winners in Saturday's relay events were the Seminole girls mile relay team (4:15.3), Apopka's girls 440 relay squad (53.8) and the West Orange boys (45.8) and mile relay teams (winning in 43.5 and 3:33.3, respectively).

Hall

Continued from 1B enemy isn't inexperienced. "Courtney suffered a contusion to her knee," explained Nichols in January. "There's so much swelling, but there's a torn cartilage or ligaments. When she took the blow, it was so severe that it caught the nerve and her leg went numb." "She's been rehabilitating her knee" two, three times a day. And she's been doing a great job with her diet. She's lost four or five pounds since the injury.

On Jan. 12, when the Lady Hatters visited the University of Central Florida for a New South Women's Athletic Conference contest, Hall wasn't in the starting lineup. She did come off the bench to score three points and pull down three rebounds. When the Lady Knights visited Stetson this past Saturday for the second game of this year's home-and-home series with the Lady Hatters, Hall contributed 11 points in a 92-62 Stetson win. "It's to her benefit that she is so quick," Nichols said. "She's able to be a step slow and still be competitive." But at this point, Hall isn't concerned with the statistical aspects of her game as she is the emotional side. "I wasn't expecting a lot (when she started her collegiate hoop career)," she said. "But we're really close. The three seniors (Hall, Michelle Michael and Anita Mathur, who are featured on the cover of the Lady Hatter media guide) have stuck together. We're like a family. It's been a really good experience. I wouldn't trade it for anything."

Teen worried about little girl's crush

DEAR ABBY: I've been helping a friend do some carpentry work at his house lately, and I've noticed that his 8-year-old daughter has a crush on me. I'm 18, so the most attention I paid to her was to let her help me with some small jobs and engage in some man-to-kid conversations during the breaks.

Today, while I was bent down tying my shoelaces, she grabbed me around the neck and tried to kiss me! I quickly pulled away by standing up and getting out of her reach and went right back to work.

Other girls have had crushes on me and got rather aggressive, but I've never had a girl this young come on to me the way this girl did. Now I worry that one day she might do this to the wrong guy, and, for want of a better word, get herself raped.

I think nature is sending this little girl mixed signals, and I don't know whether to tell her parents or to tell her myself. I don't want to get her in trouble with her parents, but I'm not sure it's my place to tell her what could happen to her if she tries to kiss the wrong guy. What is your advice?

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: First tell her that you think she's a nice girl, and you were quite upset when she tried to kiss you because she could get into a lot of trouble with that kind of behavior. Tell her that you don't have time to explain the danger of that kind of conduct, but you are going to ask her parents to have a talk with her. Then tell her parents.

This child doesn't need punishment—she needs to be warned. Please take my advice. If she were your child, I'm sure you'd want her to know.

DEAR ABBY: As I read about saving unwanted or duplicate wedding gifts to be given to other newlyweds, I recalled the time, 34 years ago, when I was on the receiving end of such a maneuver.

My fiancé and I were at the home of his parents opening our wedding gifts, when I unwrapped a box to find a silver serving dish that was totally black with tarnish! Obviously, it had been in someone's closet waiting to be given to some other bridal couple when the occasion presented itself.

After a few moments of stunned silence, my future mother-in-law said to me, "Oy, gevalt! I hope it's from someone on your side!"

Heat pump cools, warms better

Bad air out, good air in is principle

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald correspondent

It's known as a heat pump, but the name is a bit misleading.

Judging only by what it's called, you might be inclined to think that such a system would be the last thing we need in Florida's heat. Think again.

"Heat pumps were designed for the hotter climates, like Florida," said Paula Simpson at Sanford Heating and Air Conditioning.

In simple terms, a heat pump is a refrigerated air conditioning system that extracts heat and moisture from the air in the room, cools and dehumidifies it, and returns the air to the room. Only with a heat pump, the air flow is instantly reversible.

During the warmer weather, the pump draws the hot air from inside the house, cools it and then transfers the heat outside. When the outside temperatures drop, the flow is reversed.

Once the heat pump's internal thermometer is set at the desired temperature, the heat pump will automatically heat and cool your home as required.

"A heat pump will save you about 50 percent over conventional air conditioning," Simpson estimated.

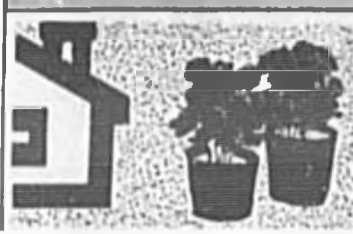

Aileen Jonson of Florida Power and Light's energy marketing department concurred with that figure.

"That would be an average," Jonson said. "Some people will save less, some more. It all depends on the SEER rating."

The SEER rating is an energy-efficiency rating scale imposed by the federal government. The scale ranges from 8.5 to 13.

Instead of using energy to heat or cool your home, the heat pump saves one money by using electricity only to relocate the heat that already exists inside and outside the home.

According to FP&L, a system with a rating of 9 or more is considered "energy efficient." Jonson said that designation simply implies that the system used fewer units of energy to cool or heat a certain area than a conventional system.

There are three graduated designations of heat pumps: regular, medium and super high. Each level reflects a greater SEER rating.

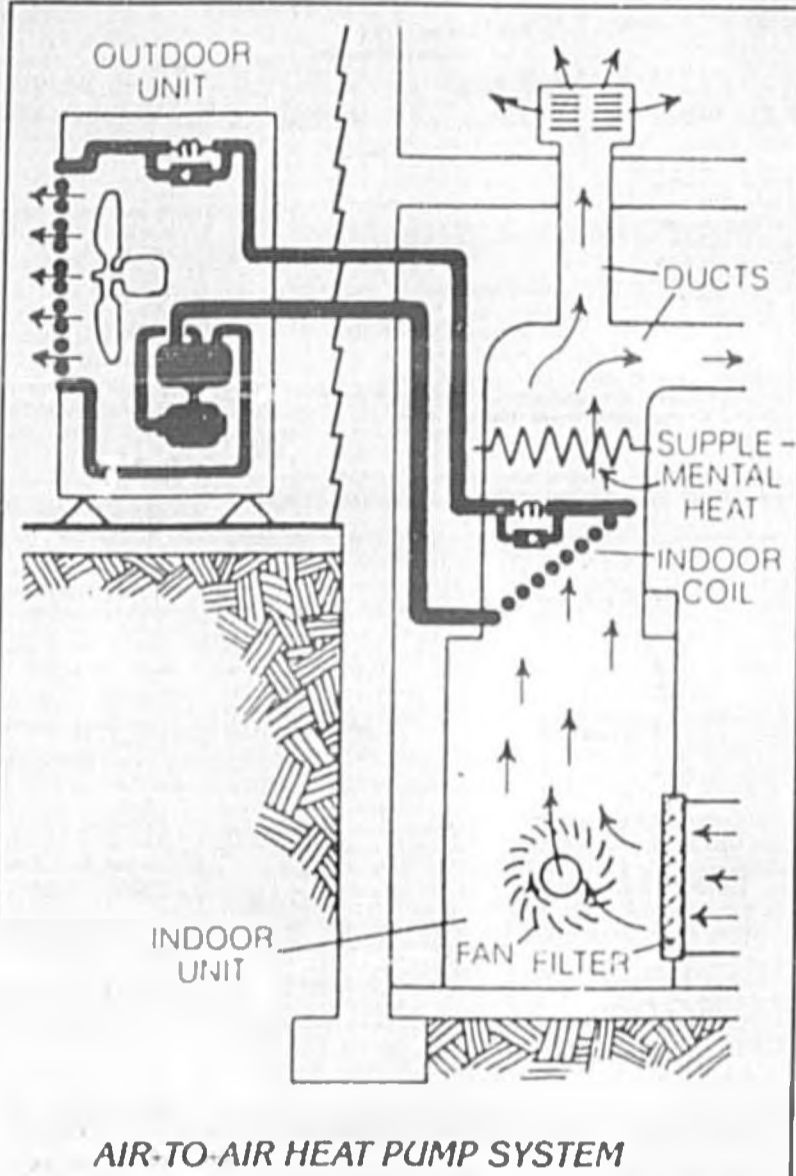

While there are no longer rebates and tax incentives available from the federal government for the purchase of a heat pump system, the Seminole County tax appraisers office does offer a small tax break for those who purchase a super-high efficiency unit.

To heat and cool properly, the heat pump must work in conjunction with a conventional refrigerated air conditioner. The pump does not replace the air conditioner, it merely enhances its efficiency.

Simpson said that the average heat pump will cost about $1,895.

"That's the low end. And it's going on the assumption that the home already has a good air-conditioning system. If that needs to be installed or replaced, the bill could be as high as $5,000," she said.

Each brand and even different models of a particular brand offers certain advantages or disadvantages to your specific home environment. Some are window units that operate with the same principal of heat trans-ference, ideal for smaller dwellings.

Simpson estimated that a heat pump will pay for itself, through electric bill savings, in one year. She said that one customer cooled his home with a 5-ton unit and spent a little more than $100 per month. Jonson agreed that such substantial savings are not uncommon.

Although heat pumps have been available on the market for nearly three decades, they did not come into wide spread use until the early 1980s. Almost all contractors include a heat pump in their home designs.

Adding a heat pump to an existing air conditioning and heating system puts one in complete control of his home environment. The economic advantages also cannot be denied.

If you have questions about adding a heat pump to an existing system or installing a new system, call a local air conditioning specialist or Florida Power and Light for answers about your specific case.

Planting own trees can be a breeze

Trees are an indispensable part of the landscape. They give a home, street or commercial site individuality, beauty and tranquility.

Because of their long life, trees give the surroundings a sense of permanence and stability. Further, trees beautify our gardens, streets and parks pleasing our senses with interesting shapes, patterns, colors and scents.

Mike Martin, the Seminole County Urban Forester, met us in Sanford's Park on Park, to discuss the new and existing trees there.

"Tree selection is mainly a question of personal preference, although species should be chosen for adaptability to the site," Martin said.

GARDENING

CELESTE WHITE

"Make sure that you plant the right tree in the right site," he said. "Examine your area and choose a tree that will best adapt to your area. Be careful not to plant a tree that will eventually grow too large or too close to your home."

A number of trees do well in Central Florida, so the choice is not always simple. While Martin welcomes phone calls about selection, a fact sheet (OH 28, Ornamental Trees for Central Florida) is available at the Agricultural Center.

After you have made your selection, purchase your tree from a reliable nursery or garden center. These trees are easier to transplant and grow more successfully because they have a better developed and more compact root system. Container-grown trees can be planted at any time of the year, provided that proper moisture levels can be maintained.

Here are some guidelines for planting container-grown trees in your landscape:

—Make the hole about twice as wide and slightly deeper than the size of the container that the tree is in. Mix the soil that was dug from the hole with organic amendments such as peat, compost or muck. (Amendments should not exceed 1/3 the volume of soil.)

—Backfill the hole with the amended soil so that the tree will set at the same level as it was growing in the container. Gently firm soil to prevent settling.

Mike Martin (right), Seminole County Urban Forester, and Benton Ellis, Seminole County Master Gardener, check out a newly planted oak at Sanford's Park on Park.

—Place the tree straight in the hole and fill in around the root mass with the amended soil. Watering during planting will help prevent air pockets. Do not mound soil around the trunk of the tree. Form a saucer-like basin 1 foot or so away from the trunk of the tree to help retain the water.

—Mulch the area to conserve moisture, reduce soil temperature and add organic matter.

If needed, support the tree by using two stakes. Tie the trunk of the tree between the stakes and wire. The wire should be run through pieces of rubber hose to prevent damage to the tree trunk. The wire should be attached to the trunk no higher than 1/3 the height of the tree.

After your tree is successfully planted, watering is the most crucial factor to ensure success. Martin said that newly planted trees need two good soakings a week, thoroughly filling the water well that is created when planting.

"We are talking about an inch plus of water a week for the first month and after that you can reduce it," Martin said. "Generally, for the first six months of the tree's life in your landscape, it should never suffer for lack of water."

Newly planted trees can be fertilized about four weeks after planting, or when new growth appears. For more information about selection and establishment of trees and shrubs, call the Agriculture Center at 323-2500, ext. 181, and ask for Circular 471.

Symptoms may be related to polio

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had polio more than 30 years ago. Now I am experiencing fatigue, joint and muscle pain, and weakness. Is this post-polio syndrome?

DEAR READER: As we age, our muscles become weaker and more easily tired. The same holds true for polio victims. However, since polio itself causes muscle weakness, fatigue and loss of strength are more prominent in such patients grow older. Many experts believe that post-polio syndrome is actually an enhanced weakness that is age-related. Therefore, you are probably experiencing this syndrome. Ask your doctor's opinion about this.

You may obtain further information from the Polio Information Center, 610 Main Street, Suite A446, Roosevelt Island, N.Y. 10046.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A recent EKG showed a bundle branch block. I'm middle-aged and have been told not to worry. What could have caused this condition?

DEAR READER: The tiny electrical impulses that cause heart muscle to contract are carried from the heart's natural pacemaker to cardiac muscle through two major electrical systems: the right and left bundles. These bundles are collections of nerves, similar to electric cables.

Under certain circumstances, short-circuiting or slowing of electrical charges will occur in the bundles. This is called bundle branch block.

Right bundle branch block, or RBBB, is a common and harmless abnormality that is often present in normal people, frequently from birth. It requires no treatment and is not associated with heart disease or symptoms. RBBB is usually periodically monitored by physicians but, unless it is associated with other problems, such as heart strain, it can be disregarded.

On the other hand, left bundle branch block, or LBBB, can indicate developing arteriosclerotic heart disease. It is always considered abnormal until proven otherwise. Patients who develop LBBB need further cardiac investigation to determine if the block is due to heart damage or insufficient oxygen supply to cardiac muscle.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

One of the more unusual recent bridge books is Allan Falk's "Spingold Challenge" (Granovetter Books, 18 Village View Bluff, Ballston Lake, NY 12019, $11.95 postpaid). It is a fictional account of a team match played in the finals of the prestigious summer North American Championships. This week we will look at some of the interesting problems depicted.

Against four spades, West leads the king of hearts, and defender East needs to convey to West that the best defense is a diamond switch at trick two. When East eventually wins the ace of spades, he will get West back on lead with another heart and get a diamond ruff. Obviously it would not be enough to simply play the deuce of hearts on the opening lead, since West

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
February 7, 1989

Financial prospects look extremely encouraging for the year ahead and your material wants should be gratified, however, there are also warnings regarding your extravagance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Although you might not have direct control over things which affect you personally both today and tomorrow, the trends will be flowing in your favor and should sweep you along with them. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Conditions in general look hopeful for you now, especially where important interests are concerned. Think positive and proceed boldly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In career situations today you will be more effective if you keep your objectives and intentions to yourself. Focus on doing things well, not playing to an audience.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today you are likely to find productive uses for recently acquired knowledge. Don't be afraid to blend new techniques with old methods. It's a combination that could give you an edge.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your present mode of behavior is winning you the respect of your contemporaries, although this may not become apparent to you for a while yet.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Partnership arrangements could work out extremely well for you today, especially if you are involved with a person who has experience you lack.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Both today and tomorrow your greatest gains are likely to come from unusual sources of income. Be ready to move effectively if a new channel opens.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Things you've been unable to accomplish on your own can be achieved now if you seek assistance from friends who are in positions to help. They won't feel you're imposing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You could be extremely lucky in this period where your material interests are concerned. This is a day to tie down arrangements that have profitable potential.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In matters where you have to deal with others on a one-to-one basis, things should work out to be mutually beneficial for all parties concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your financial patterns look very promising at this time, and there should be days when you'll have more opportunities than usual. This could be one of those days.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you apply yourself properly today, you should be able to accomplish almost anything to which you set your mind, especially if you're trying to advance personal interests.
