Student Enrollment Expected To Overtake Projection

By Richard Whittaker
Herald Staff Writer

When Seminole County schools open next Monday for the 1987-1988 school year more than 43,000 students are expected to be enrolled. That exceeds projections the school district has made for student enrollment over the past several years. That's because the county's population is growing at a faster pace than anticipated.

The school district had projected there would be 42,946 students enrolled for the 1987-1988 school year, but that figure was surpassed in May of 1987, the end of the last school year, when the district officially recorded 42,968 students in the system, according to Karen Coleman, school district spokesman.

The school bus schedule for Seminole County schools will be published in its entirety in Thursday's Herald.

Today, Coleman is predicting 43,747 students will be enrolled in the new school year. Coleman, coordinator of community relations and public information for Seminole County schools, said she feels the school district can handle the extra student enrollment that will come with a larger growth in the county's population than officials have estimated.

"I feel if our building projects are completed on time we'll be ready to handle the influx of students," Coleman said.

Don Hastings, a planning information specialist with the Seminole County planning office, said the county is experiencing a population growth rate of about 5.6 percent for this year. That's about what was projected, but the student numbers coming from that increase are greater than anticipated.

On April 1, 1986 there were 241,293 people living in Seminole County, Hastings said the

Waller Seeks Longwood Truce Urges Pledge Of Harmony

By Jane Caselberry
Herald Staff Writer

Longwood City Administrator Ron Waller is calling for a truce in wrangling and sniping that has marked the relationships of city commissioners with each other and the city staff for the past seven and a half months.

In an Aug. 13 memo Waller has appealed to the city commissioners to "stop airing our linen" at public meetings and work together with him and the city employees as a total team.

He has placed on the agenda for tonight's commission meeting a resolution "for the benefit of Longwood" in which the commissioners would pledge to work in harmony. The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. at city hall, 175 W. Warren Ave.

Waller stated in his memo: "I know that each of you are aware of the many problems facing the city and I also know that you share my concern that they be solved quickly and correctly. My efforts and the efforts of the staff have been diluted by the dissension existing within the city commission which needs no further comment.

"The purpose of this memo is to solicit your support and cooperation in resolving any individual differences and that we all pledge, here and now, to place the needs of the city and citizens as our primary focus.

"I am convinced that each member of the commission is dedicated to the best interests of the city and it is this strong belief that makes me confident that our problems can be resolved and that the city can move ahead to correct whatever problems remain.

Waller cited evidence of progress: a budget that will provide necessary services at the lowest possible costs; the paving of seven streets now under way; a garbage franchise system that resulted in a reduction in fees for many of the residents and will result in a cleaner city; hardworking and dedicated employees who have been complimented for their excellent work by the public.

"I believe that Longwood is not as unique as some suggest," Waller stated. "Our sister cities all have or have had very similar problems. Perhaps the only difference has been in the manner in which we attempt to correct them. I believe we should stop 'airing our linen' at public meetings.

"If any commissioner has a problem, I urge you to communicate that problem with me privately and give me an opportunity to correct it. If an employee's performance needs improvement, I can be much more successful in correcting the problem and motivating the employee if I have an opportunity to do it privately rather than attempting to correct a problem once it has been discussed in a public meeting and discussed in the media."

Waller said he will request another commission/staff conference similar to the one held in January which he said was successful in promoting unity among the commission and staff.

"I believe another conference will prove helpful in developing goals and priorities for the

U.S. Carrier Heads For Mine Sweeping Duty

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — The amphibious assault carrier USS Guadalcanal weighed anchor today in the Persian Gulf and headed southwest toward Bahrain instead of sailing north to Kuwait, witnesses said.

A British Independent Television news crew in a rented boat saw the 11,000 ton warship weigh anchor at about 11:30 a.m. from its overnight stopping point 30 miles northeast of the central Gulf Island.

Diplomatic sources said the Guadalcanal may anchor close to Bahrain to serve as a fixed base for its deckload of eight Sea Stallion mine-sweeping helicopters and helicopter gunships that can be refueled in midair by twin-rotor Chinook transport choppers.

The Guadalcanal moved without close escort, but three other U.S. Navy warships from the Middle East Task Force were visible on the horizon.

During the night, the Guadalcanal was blacked out and radio operators issued warnings to shipping to stay at least 1 mile away. The Guadalcanal, the largest U.S. Navy ship to enter the Persian Gulf since the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war began, identified itself on radio only as "Warship Seven."

Small boats circled the Guadalcanal through the night to guard against saboteurs fixing limpet mines to the hull, the ITN crew said.

The Guadalcanal slipped through the Strait of Hormuz under cover of bad weather Saturday. Shipping sources had expected it to head north toward Kuwait to meet other warships escorting the re-flagged supertanker Bridgeton.

The Bridgeton hit a mine and was seriously damaged July 24 some 18 miles off Farsi Island, where Iranian Revolutionary Guards have a naval base for hit-and-run attacks on shipping.

Hundreds of Marines are believed on board the Guadalcanal, marking the largest Marine presence in the Persian Gulf to date.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Bahrain said he had no information on the movements of the vessel.

Besides the U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf, the aircraft carrier USS Constellation is in the Gulf of Oman, east of the Strait of Hormuz, to provide air cover for convoys of the 11 re-flagged Kuwaiti tankers expected to receive American protection. Another battle group led by the battleship USS Missouri is steaming toward the gulf.

In Washington Sunday, National Security Adviser Frank Carlucci said the beefed up U.S. military presence in the gulf region "is not an open-ended commitment. If the danger recedes, the escorting can stop."

Iran said its navy intercepted foreign ships in the gulf and "reconnoitered" the French destroyer George Le Goz.

The Islamic Republic News Agency, IRNA, said the "Iranian navy intercepted six foreign cargo ships and tankers, but allowed them to proceed their voyage since they had no Iraq-bound cargo aboard."

IRNA said Iranian naval units See CARRIER, page 10A

Utility Delays Permit Request For Chuluota Plants

By Ted Carter
Herald Staff Writer

Southern State Utilities has decided to delay further attempts to persuade Seminole County to let it build sewer and water plants in the rural community of Chuluota. The utility company still hopes to put the plants in Chuluota but is looking for new sites, according to Ginny Markley, county zoning coordinator.

County staff members, meeting as the development review committee (DRC) last week, decided there were too many questions and too few answers about the plants, especially about what steps the utility can take to handle emergency discharges of treated sewage and whether the supply of potable groundwater is sufficient to accommodate two new wells. It also wants to know whether the wells' operations would adversely effect groundwater and surface water.

When the answers didn't come at Wednesday's DRC meeting, the committee voted to ask the board of adjustment to delay consideration of Southern States' request for zoning exceptions to allow the sewer plant on land zoned under an A-1 agriculture classification and the water plant and two wells on land zoned under a R-1A residential classification.

The DRC, comprised of representatives from several county departments, is responsible for reviewing land development plans that require variances or special exceptions. It serves as an advisory panel to the board of adjustment.

Rick Johnson, a consulting engineer for the utility company, had said Wednesday answers sought by county staff about the plants would be presented to the county's board of adjustment tonight. Those plans changed later in the week with the company's withdrawal of its zoning exception requests.

The company, which serves about 110 customers in the community east of Oviedo, is under pressure from the state Department of Environmental Regulation to either replace or upgrade the present plants. The state environmental agency is especially concerned about the utility's disposal of effluent.

"DER will fine us if we don't get adequate disposal," said Johnson. He explained the present plant site is not large enough to contain the necessary pre-treatment ponds.

The utility company initially submitted plans for a sewer plant with capacity to serve 4,000 homes. It has since scaled back those plans to a plant with capacity for about 400 homes.

Opponents of the sewer plant are still concerned, however. They say once the utility receives a zoning exception for a 100,000-gallon-a-day plant to serve 400 homes, there would be few obstacles to expanding the plant to serve the 4,000 dwell-

FBI Probing Possibility Of Bomb

Detroit Plane Crash Claims At Least 153

ROMULUS, Mich. (UPI) — The FBI and the National Transportation Safety Board today investigated a control tower report that an engine on a Northwest Airlines DC-9 exploded in flames just before the jetliner crashed, apparently killing all 153 on board.

"We are investigating the possibility that there was a bomb on board," FBI Special Agent John Anthony said. "It is only speculation, but we are investigating it. There were several eyewitness accounts saying the plane was on fire before it crashed."

The airplane punched through the roof of a car-rental agency at Detroit Metropolitan Airport at 8:47 p.m. Sunday shortly after takeoff, burst into flames and plowed through a parking lot, then skidded along a street and smashed into an Interstate 94 overpass.

Northwest Flight 255 carried 144 passengers, a crew of six and three non-working airline employees flying for free, all believed killed in the crash. If the death toll is confirmed at 153, it would be the third-deadliest domestic air disaster ever.

A police source at the scene said two people in a vehicle were killed on the ground but Wayne County authorities said they had no information on those deaths. If those deaths are confirmed, the crash would be the second worst in U.S. history.

Flight 255 was a version of the DC-9 known as an MD-80, a twin-engine jet built for short- to medium-length flights, said Donald Hanson, a spokesman for McDonnell Douglas Corp., the maker of the plane.

"It's had a very good record all along," Hanson said. "There have been cases of engine problems where the blade has been thrown from the engine, but no injuries were caused." Authorities and hospitals reported at least six people on the ground injured. Two, including a young girl, remained hospitalized today, both in critical condition.

Sheriff's deputies said they found the plane's black box, which carries the flight recordings, and investigators with specially trained dogs moved through the wreckage in a search for bodies and clues to the cause of the wreck.

The Detroit control tower had instructed the pilot to make a right See CRASH, page 10A

POLICE

IN BRIEF

Orlando Charged In Assault, Armed Burglary Of Ex-Girlfriend

An Orlando man was arrested on charges of armed burglary and aggravated assault after reportedly breaking into an ex-girlfriend's home and threatening her with a knife.

Nancy Clark said she returned home around 2:30 a.m. Saturday to find her ex-boyfriend there with a couple of friends. He followed her inside when she opened the door, according to a report. She said she gave him some of his clothes but he also wanted the furniture. The incident occurred at 316 Hidden Pine Cir., Casselberry.

She said she thought he had been drinking and asked him to come back the next day. He disagreed and apparently armed himself with a kitchen knife. She said his friends struggled with him, trying to get him out of the house, and in the process he threw some items out the front door: two tables, a chair and a television set.

Clark said she ran outside, called the police from her neighbor's phone, then returned. Her former boyfriend was outside with his friends. She said she went inside the home and dead-bolted the door. The ex-boyfriend then reportedly broke down the door. She then ran outside to find that the two friends had left.

She said her former boyfriend started yelling and told her he could kill her with the knife.

She said he began running towards her and she screamed while backing up. She said he threw the knife on the ground and started to chase her. At that point the police arrived, according to a report.

The man then ran into the woods. Police set up a perimeter and brought in a tracking dog. The man came out of the woods, however, and was arrested.

Arrested and charged with armed burglary and aggravated assault was Jeffery Lyman Morris, 28. Bond was set at $8,000.

Two Face Drug Charges

Two men were arrested on drug charges after the vehicle they were in was stopped for traveling carelessly.

An officer reported that when he stopped the vehicle on State Road 434 around 2 p.m. he thought he smelled alcohol on the driver's breath. The officer said there were several open beer cans and two open vodka bottles in the vehicle. He also reported seeing what appeared to be marijuana on the floorboard of the passenger's side of the vehicle. The incident occurred around 1:50 a.m.

Arrested and charged with DUI and possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia was William P. Dwyer, 26, of 695 Pasadena Ave., Longwood.

Bond was set at $500.

Also arrested and charged was Jose Anthony Echeyarria, 24, of Orlando. He was charged with possession of marijuana.

Robbers Assail Man At Midnight

Kelly R. Woodell, 200 Maple St., told police two men robbed him outside his home shortly after midnight Friday. He said two men approached him about 12:05 Saturday morning, threw him to the ground, and took his wallet, containing about $300, from his pocket. The men then fled on foot.

Sanford Burglaries, Thefts

A 25-inch color television set was removed from the Helen R. Williams residence, 1221 W. 15th St., between 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. Saturday. Entry was by removing a screen and opening a window.

A .25 caliber semi-automatic pistol was reported stolen from the bedroom dresser of Debra Blair, 511 Pine Ave., sometime in the last month.

Police Probe 2 Rapes

Police are investigating two sexual assaults that occurred early Saturday within two hours of each other.

Police reports said in both instances, a man entered the bedroom windows of the residences, and assaulted the women. One assault took place in Lake Monroe Terrace about 4:20 a.m., and the other in Castle Brewer Court about 5:55 a.m.

One victim was 37 years old and the other was 40.

After one assault, the man took $20 from the victim's purse and fled out the door, and in the other, the victim's keys were stolen before the assailant fled out the door.

Police Chief Steve Harriett said police have not yet determined if there is any connection between the two assaults.

Cemetery Owner Seeking To Sell Lottery Tickets

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — The list of businesses wanting to sell lottery tickets includes a Miami cemetery, whose owner wants to hawk tickets to people visiting their dead relatives and friends.

"We think ours would be an unusually good location," Jose Abascal wrote the Lottery Department.

Abascal is one of 9,000 merchants and business people interested in selling lottery tickets when the wagering begins Jan. 15.

Most of the Floridians seeking lottery franchises run convenience stores, restaurants, video clubs, bars, beauty shops and other establishments where lottery tickets wouldn't seem out of place, lottery officials said in a report published Sunday in The Tampa Tribune.

Abascal operates Graceland Memorial Park Cemetery and Mausoleum on Calle Ocho — Eighth Street — in Miami's Little Havana district. About 15,000 people have been buried in the cemetery, which includes a two-story mausoleum. Hundreds of people visit daily.

Lottery spokesman Bill Hunter told the Tribune he is not enthusiastic about the prospect of a lottery franchise for a cemetery.

"The lottery is entertainment," Hunter said. "I don't associate funerals with entertainment or visiting dead relatives."

"We are right in the middle of Little Havana. People come here all the time," Abascal told the Tribune. "They don't come here in a bad mood. After church, people drop in like you wouldn't believe. It's a custom or something."

Abascal's isn't the only unusual request for a lottery franchise. Applications have come in from a synagogue, a chicken farmer and a group of dentists.

The lottery department expects to start out with 10,000 to 12,000 marketers, selling instant winner tickets like those used for promotions in hamburger restaurants.

Latest Freeway Gunplay: Toy Pistol

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Southern California's rash of freeway gunplay took a new turn over the weekend as a motorist whipped out a toy pistol and aimed it at an off-duty policeman after tailgating his vehicle.

On Sunday, the crime-fighting Guardian Angels organized a caravan to the state capitol in Sacramento to deliver petitions they said contained 100,000 signatures demanding tougher legislation.

Already there are a half-dozen proposed bills, expected to be introduced today, that would make violent roadway encounters punishable by life in prison.

In the unnerving-but-legal toy-gun incident, off-duty Los Angeles Police Officer Delbert Baker, 41, said Sunday he was driving with his wife Friday night along the Pacific Coast Highway in Malibu when he saw in his rear-view mirror a man in a black Nissan pickup truck tailgating his car in the fast lane.

Baker, at first unable to change lanes due to heavy traffic, moved over as soon as he could. When the pickup pulled alongside, Baker saw the driver aim what appeared to be a .45-caliber pistol at him, causing Baker to slow abruptly, sheriff's Sgt. John Andrews said.

Baker noted the pickup's license number, which he turned over to deputies at the Malibu sheriff's station.

The suspect was stopped by Oxnard police a short time later, sheriff's Deputy Fidel Gonzales said, but when the "gun" turned out to be a toy he was released.

The driver, Andrews said, was only "counseled" because there is no law prohibiting the brandishing of toy weapons.

Dawn Of 'New Age' Attracts Thousands

By United Press International
For the thousands of believers who gathered at far-flung "power points" around the world to hold hands, hum, dance, chant, beat drums and blow conch shells, it was the Harmonic Convergence — the dawn of a new age.

For skeptics, it was simply thousands of well-meaning but misguided people who traveled to "sacred sites" — from Stonehenge in England and the Great Pyramids in Egypt to New York's Central Park and California's Mount Shasta — to mark an unusual astronomical alignment that didn't occur.

The free-form event Sunday was billed as a way for humans to boost the world into an age of peace and prosperity and as the beginning of the last 25 years of a 5,000-year cycle on the ancient Mayan calendar, marked by special combinations of astronomical alignments.

Scientists, however, said those who picked August 16 for the convergence misread their Mayan calendar and astronomical charts. None of the planets or stars were apparently lined up as organizers planned.

"This has nothing whatsoever to do with rationality," John Carlson, an astronomer and expert on the Mayan calendar who runs the Center for Archaeo-astronomy in Maryland, told The Washington Post. "It has to do with fun. Somebody will be making money; there will be a lot of parties, a lot of genetic material exchanged."

Such arguments did nothing to dim the enthusiasm of believers who gathered at dawn on mountaintops, in parks and at burial grounds and ancient pyramids.

Many were followers of art historian and author Jose Arguelles, of Boulder, Colo., who described the Harmonic Convergence in his book, "The Mayan Factor." Celebrants say the event was also predicted by cultures including the Incas, Aztecs, Tibetans and the Hopi, Navajo and Cherokee Indians.

COUNTY

IN BRIEF

County Welcomes New Client; Raises Rates For New And Old

Lake Mary officially became Seminole County's newest wholesale sewer service customer Tuesday, a move that came just in time for the city to get in on the county's wholesale rate increase in five years. The increase of 8 cents per 1,000 gallons applies to wholesale and retail customers. The increase means retail customers will be paying a sewer fee of $1.81 per 1,000 gallons of water used. Retail sewer customers last saw an increase in February. Wholesale customers will be paying $1.58 per 1,000 gallons of sewer flow.

A 12 percent wholesale rate increase by the city of Orlando, whose Iron Bridge sewer plant treats about 1.6 million gallons a day of sewage from south central Seminole, caused the need for the increase, according to Jim Bible, the county's environmental services director. Also contributing to the rate hike, said Bible, was a rate increase by Sanlando Utilities, which treats sewage from about 100 customers in the southwest corner of the county.

Meanwhile, the county this week signed up a couple of residential developments for nearly 200,000 gallons of treated sewage daily. County commissioners agreed to provide the Hidden Village development with 44,000 of effluent and Sunlake Apartments with 116,250 gallons a day. The county calls the effluent "reclaimed water."

Speed Limits Raised

Speed limits are going up on a number of roads in the county. Commissioners approved a speed limit increase for the portion of County Club Road between County Road 427 and Rantoul Lane. The limit on County Club Road went from 25 to 30 mph from Williams Drive to Grand Bend Avenue; and from 35 to 45 mph from Grand Bend Avenue to Rantoul Lane. County traffic engineers say speed zone studies of County Club Road indicated the posted limits between CR 427 and Rantoul Lane are obsolete given the speed motorists travel on the road and the road's conditions.

The speed limit on County Road 426 from County Road 419 to Reed Road was increased from 30 to 40 mph, for the same reasons the County Club Road limits were increased.

Stonebridge Drive, which has not had a speed limit posted, will have a limit of 30 mph, commissioners agreed.

While new speed limits were placed on some roads, commissioners agreed to close two other roads. The governing body agreed to close Logenberry Road in Tuskawilla Point after receiving complaints from residents that motorists frequently used Logenberry Road as a way to cut through the development and avoid the intersection at Red Bug Lake Road and Tuskawilla Road. The actual closing will include building a cul-de-sac on Logenberry Road, at a cost of about $5,000 and the use of county work crews.

Commissioners also agreed to close sections of Lake Drive and Avenue C in Chuluota, near the southwest boundary of Lake Catherine. Residents have complained of late-night parties at the lake, which often result in reckless driving in that residential area. The closing will require "creative landscaping" as well as some fencing, said Steve Decker, traffic engineer.

Bridge Projects Approved

The county made progress on several bridge projects this week. Commissioners agreed to let the state Department of Transportation handle utility relocation contracts and design for work on a new bridge where State Road 434 crosses the Little Econ. An engineering design contract for the Upsala Road bridge at Lockhart-Smith Canal was awarded to Stottler, Stagg & Associates. Greiner Engineering received a contract for engineering design of phase one of the Longwood Hills Road Stream crossing. Also, HDR Infrastructure Inc. received a contract for the design of the Wekiva Springs Road and Sweetwater Creek crossing.

School Drive Made Safer

Getting in and out of Oviedo High School may soon become much easier and safer. Commissioners this week released $160,000 in school impact fees collected from developers to complete improvements at the school. The work includes connecting the school drive to State Road 426, providing turn lanes, storage lanes and passing lanes.

Courthouse Grounded

The courthouse mechanical room also may be much safer now that commissioners have agreed to have asbestos removed from the upper story room at the south end of the courthouse. Commissioners also approved spending about $2,000 to ground the courthouse computer system, which has been the victim of extensive damage by lightning strikes.

Lake Mary Endorses Option Sales Tax

By Richard Whittaker
Herald Staff Writer

The Lake Mary City Commission, at a special meeting Thursday night, unanimously voted to endorse putting the penny local option sales tax proposed by Seminole County on the ballot for a Nov. 3, special election.

The $19 million in projected revenue generated by the tax, if it passes the county-wide special election, will be shared between the county and seven cities located within its boundaries. Lake Mary could receive 1.3 percent of that money if the state formula for splitting the revenue is used. However, the county and cities can use any formula they can all agree upon in sharing the money.

The Seminole County Commission voted on July 28 to inform the supervisor of elections that it intends to place the referendum question tax on the ballot this fall. Even if an individual city rejects the tax, it will still go into effect if it receives enough votes countywide.

Once passed, the County Commission may choose to levy the full one-cent of the tax or collect it in one-quarter increments if it wants to. The commission also has the option of collecting the option tax for a period of 15 years.

Lake Mary, like the other cities to be effected by the tax, has turned into the county a "wish list" of three public projects the city wants to complete using money generated by the proposed tax should it become a reality. The list is composed of three projects in order of priority that will appear in the referendum question on the ballot.

Lake Mary City Manager Bob Norris submitted the list that has the building of the proposed city hall complex as the city's first priority for use of its share of the revenue.

Both Commissioners John Percy and Paul Tremel said the endorsement of putting the referendum question on the ballot by the city commission was only a formality. The commissioners agreed the county would have gone ahead ahead with putting the referendum on the ballot even if they hadn't endorsed it.

"I think the tax is a standard way to raise revenue," Percy said. "I like the idea of putting it on the ballot and letting the voters decide."

Tremel said the tax was an unavoidable thing if the county and cities are going to provide services demanded by its rapid growth. "Short of the state adopting an income tax, which probably scares the hell out of every politician, this one-penny tax is one of the ways the infrastructure can catch up with growth," Tremel said.

According to Tremel, the tax would have people just passing through the county and using its services help to pay for them along with its residents. Tremel compared the concept to the tourists at the Disney complex helping to pay for the services they use while they're there.

"The county has passed impact fees to ensure that future growth pays for itself," Tremel said. "but this tax is one of the only ways to ensure providing services for past growth without raising ad valorem taxes."

Commissioner Charlie Webster said he didn't want to raise the city's ad valorem taxes either. He added that he is in favor of people who used city services when they were just passing through helping to pay for them.

Webster, Percy and Tremel all agreed using the money generated by the tax to help pay for the city's new city hall complex is good idea. "In general I think that's a good way to use the money," Percy said.

"I think the city hall is the most important need of the city at this time." If you go in there on some afternoon see how crowded it is in there," Tremel said. He added that people in the present city hall "just can't work in those conditions."

"I think if it's used to help build the city hall like it's been suggested," Webster said, "the tax will be good."

Post Office Massacre One Year Later

By Beth Powell

EDMOND, Okla. (UPI) — For Judy Morey the anniversary of the Edmond post office massacre marks the day the man of her dreams was shot to death while she stood outside and listened.

For Judy Walker, it marks a year of virtual confinement in her home, disabled by gunshot wounds and fear.

Morey, Walker and other survivors dread the anniversary, but the horror of Aug. 20, 1986, is with them every day.

A "Gunsmoke" rerun, a car backfiring, or anyone resembling the stocky, balding part-time mailman who stalked and shot 20 co-workers and then killed himself bring back the memories.

"A car backfires, and I just sit glued to my chair until my kids go to the window and say, 'It's just an old truck backfiring,'" said Walker, 41, one of six postal employees who survived bullet wounds inflicted by Patrick Henry Sherrill. "It's just going to take a long time I guess."

Walker was shot in the back while she lay in a work area with five co-workers who were told to "hit the ground" when the shooting began at 7 a.m. Frozen in fear and pain, she listened to gunfire, the first news of the tragedy on a radio at her ear and the moans of the dying.

Walker and other survivors said the approaching anniversary has made them uncomfortable.

Flashbacks, unexplained crying, insomnia and an inability to concentrate are common among survivors of murder, especially as the anniversary approaches, said Marlene Young, director of the National Organization for Victims Assistance.

"The date itself is such a reminder," Young said. "It puts them back in that circumstance. The control over their life is taken away from them."

Letter carrier Ron Blackwell said the anniversary is a reminder that progress has been slow.

"I think this year's hurdle has been in everyone's mind, and we're trying to get past it," said Blackwell, who as Edmond shop steward for the National Association of Letter Carriers hears the complaints and troubles of many workers.

In the past year, those most closely touched by the tragedy have dealt with sudden outpourings of tears, anger and fear, and have struggled to attach meaning to the deaths of Sherrill and his 14 victims.

Also in that year, the U.S. Postal Service, which completed a voluminous report on the shootings, has been criticized by survivors and Congress for responding with insensitivity and for failing to prevent the tragedy.

Each person has coped in a personal way — some turning to God, others to friends or counselors. Some do not know where to turn.

Low-Income Housing Grant Awarded

Seminole Self-Reliant Housing of Sanford has received a $450,000 state grant to acquire and develop land for 55 units of low-income housing in Oviedo.

The grant was awarded by the Florida Department of Community Development and was the largest of eight grants awarded in this round of awards.

The grant is for acquisition and development of lots in Oviedo in conjunction with the organization's Farmers Home Administration self-help housing program.

Seminole Self-Reliant Housing, Inc., is a self-help housing program headed by A. A. McLanahan of Sanford.

The state grant comes from the Farmworker Housing Assistance Trust, which provides low interest loans up to $400,000 for site acquisition and related fees, and grants up to $100,000 for pre-development costs.

Loans or grants are made to nonprofit organizations, housing authorities, local governments and Indian tribes.

The current round of grants is expected to assist in providing 161 units of farmworker housing and 183 units of low income housing.

Air Safety Action Must Be Taken

The declining margin of safety in the skies and the growing public discontent with commercial air travel have forged a rare alliance of U.S. aviation groups generally known for their facetiousness. Six air transportation organizations, representing the broad spectrum of civil aviation, have presented a strategy that, if adopted, could alleviate much of the anxiety concerning the increasingly crowded skies.

The coalition, brought together several months ago by J. Lynn Helms, former director of the Federal Aviation Administration, calls for a comprehensive program to modernize the air-traffic control system and to increase the nation's airport capacity.

Specifically, the plan would strengthen the traffic-control system by requiring the prompt installation of automatic altitude-reporting equipment in all aircraft operating around the nation's busiest airports. It would accelerate the research for advanced collision-avoidance devices. It also recommends that the air-traffic controller work force be augmented immediately by rehiring recently retired controllers and bringing in part-time controllers from the military. Moreover, it urges stepped-up controller training by contracting but for such service and to expand the instruction through the increased use of simulation.

Of course, it's difficult to control traffic in the air when so many of the ground facilities are inadequate. Thus the coalition calls for a crash program to expand some existing airports and to build new ones. The money to help pay for this long-overdue construction currently is locked up in the Federal Aviation Trust Fund. Unfortunately, Congress and the Reagan administration are reluctant to spend any of the $6 billion in that fund, preferring to use it to make the federal deficit look smaller. This despite the sheer volume of air traffic that has overwhelmed many airports since the airline industry was deregulated in 1979.

To be sure, there is nothing revolutionary about the coalition's twin objectives of enhancing the air-traffic control system and expanding some of the nation's airports. What is noteworthy, however, is the consensus among the aviation industry that prompt action is necessary to restore public confidence in commercial air travel. If such action is not forthcoming in the near future from the Transportation Department, then Congress should required these improvements.

Childish Action

Upset about an NBC documentary that unfavorably portrayed Israeli treatment of Arabs, Israel's top leaders have announced that they will not grant any interviews to NBC reporters. Such a policy is both immature and nonsensical.

The documentary, "Six Days Plus 20 years: A Dream Is Dying," was aired this summer and examined the lives of residents of the West Bank and Jerusalem. It included shots of Israeli troops beating Arabs and painted a generally uncomplimentary picture of Israeli rule.

The Israeli government called the show "violently anti-Israeli" and "one of the most blatantly distorted and tendentious programs ever broadcast on the Middle East." It also complained that no officials were interviewed, thus ignoring the government's viewpoint. So, in revenge, Israeli leaders will not talk to NBC.

Perhaps the documentary did not go far enough in showing the positive aspects of Israeli rule. But the problems shown do exist and provide an alternative view to the official government line.

If Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and other Israeli leaders truly believe that NBC has misrepresented the Arab situation, they should speak out. They should point out the inaccuracies — on NBC, where the original documentary was shown — to give viewers the truth as they see it.

It's Truly A Dangerous World Out There

By Arnold Sawlsak
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — We were told a number of times during the Iran-Contra hearings that covert operations are necessary because we live in "a dangerous world."

That assertion got practically no argument from the 26 senators and representatives who listened to three months of testimony about secret deals and undercover operations that reached from the sands of Iran to the jungles of Nicaragua.

Some members of the committees — as well as some members of President Reagan's Cabinet — thought the Iranian caper was a dumb (as opposed to "neat") idea, and some thought the scheme to pipe its profits to the Contras was flat, out illegal.

The reason that was volunteered for keeping both projects secret was that "it's a dangerous world" in which governments had to keep their citizens in the dark to avoid tipping off their enemies or embarrassing erstwhile allies.

About the only reservation the lawmakers had about the secrecy was that John Poindexter and Ollie North hoodwinked them along with the American public while they confided the government's secret operations to a mixed bag of American and Middle Eastern fixers, go-betweens and arms merchants.

But no one bothered to directly address or even to define the issue of whether the United States government, which is required to conduct most of its domestic operations in the open, ought to be engaging in secret foreign policy activities.

From a pragmatic viewpoint, the advantages of secrecy are easy to see. It is unlikely, for example, that Richard Nixon and Henry Kissinger could have ended decades of U.S.-Chinese hostility and isolation without the benefit of secret negotiations.

A deal like that is considered a diplomatic coup if the public and its elected representatives approve or don't care. If it offends public or congressional opinion, there usually is an opportunity to reject the deal in the Senate.

which must ratify treaties.

But there is far more to covert operations than secret diplomatic negotiations. They also can include selling missiles to countries that in recent memories have kidnapped and held our diplomats hostage, mining the harbors of countries you are not at war with, subsidizing rebellions against governments you don't like and a whole menu of other under-the-counter tactics.

These activities are kept secret for several reasons, not the least of which is that some of them involve activities that would be called terrorism, subversion or worse if practiced against us or our friends.

What this really boils down to is the question, "Is it proper for the United States to do anything it feels is necessary to protect its own security or to advance the political principles we believe are the best hope of freedom elsewhere in the world?"

We know the answer Poindexter and North gave to that question. The rest of us never were asked.

DICK WEST

Blame Goths & Visigoths

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When something untoward happens in this country — the toppling of an electric tower in California being a recent case in point — it is common practice to put the blame on vandals.

A transmission line carrying a million volts of power from the Pacific Northwest to Southern California hit the ground near Independence after wires supporting the 120-foot tower were cut.

I am wondering whether the blame-throwers aren't giving vandalism a bad name.

History tells that Vandals, as the capitalized term applies to Germanic tribes that invaded the Roman Empire in the fourth century, probably were no more destructive than any other barbarians.

Yet the word in decapitalized form has come to mean persons who damage valuable property belonging to others.

The key word may be "barbarians."

If you think of barbarians as evil people who maliciously devastated valuable property for the fun of it, the term vandals may well be applied and the utility pole probably was vandalized.

But if you think of barbarians as peace-loving people who moved their civilization westward to escape the Huns, then you can see Vandals left us a different sort of legacy.

I mean, didn't the Huns beat the Vandals, and not in the 1920 Rose Bowl, and weren't they responsible for much of the pillage in the world until they themselves were vanquished by the Visigoths around 450 A.D.?

Of course they were. And did. But you rarely hear of California pole-pushing being blamed on huns. Nor are such deliberate acts of wanton destruction often called visigothic. It's almost always vandals who did it.

There is no doubt the invasion by the Vandals and other barbarians more than a millennium ago helped bring about the decline, if not the fall, of the Roman Empire.

You didn't have to visit Rome, as Gibbon did circa 1760, to sense the Empire was in decline. You don't even have to write six best-selling history books about it.

I could tell the moment I first set foot in the Italian capital that the Roman Empire had declined rather badly. It probably would have eventually fallen of its own weight, with or without a push from the Vandals. And I never wrote a history book in my life.

Japanese Firm Took Secrets For Years

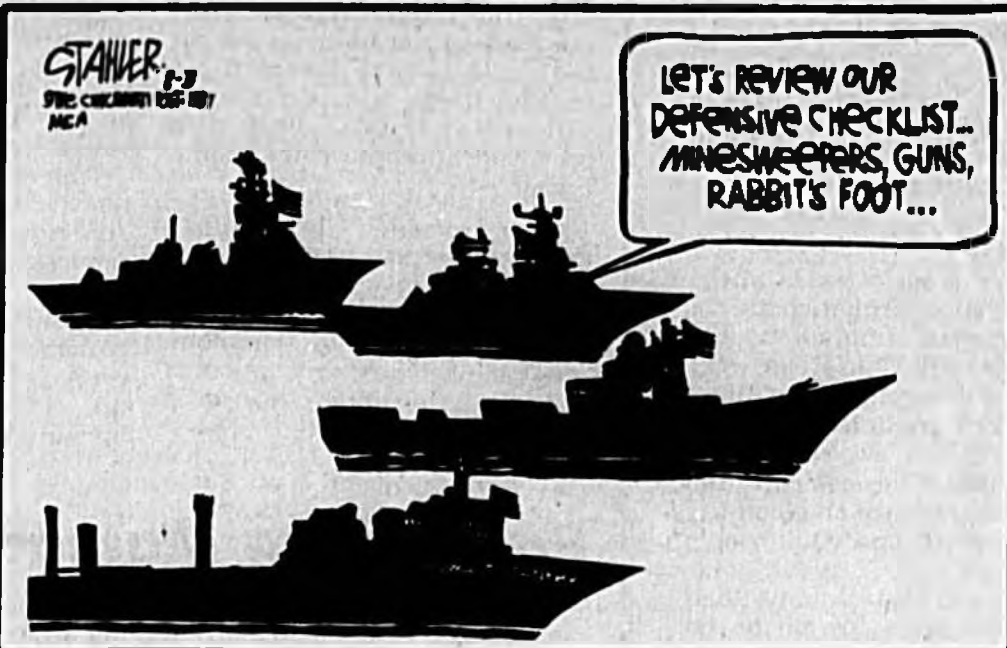

By Jack Anderson
And Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — A principal culprit in the sale of Toshiba propeller-milling equipment to the Soviet Navy — C. Itoh & Co. — has a history of leaking Western military technology to Moscow.

A spokesman for C. Itoh, one of Japan's biggest international trading companies, insists that it didn't realize the Toshiba transaction was illegal until Japanese investigators contacted the company. Evidence we have gathered from the Japanese press and other sources raises serious doubts about this claim.

We reported, for example, that C. Itoh had been identified three years ago in a secret CIA report as one of five Japanese firms suspected of illegal sales of high-technology items to the Soviets. The CIA said C. Itoh and the other four should be monitored closely for such illicit but highly profitable deals.

Japanese authorities have publicly identified C. Itoh as Toshiba's intermediary in the $17

WILLIAM RUSHER

Include Congress

Now that the Iran/Contra hearings are over, attention is shifting to the question of who, if anybody, ought to be prosecuted.

It is widely expected that special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh will go after Adm. John Poindexter, Lt. Col. Oliver North, Gen. Richard Secord, and a couple of lesser fry on various charges. But there are those who believe that this would be a grossly one-sided way to dispense "justice."

Every thoughtful person recognizes that this affair was basically just one episode in the ongoing battle between a Republican president and Democratic Congress for control of U.S. foreign policy.

In recent years, Congress has enacted a whole series of laws compelling the president to bring Congress closer to the decision-making process in the foreign policy field. Among other things, it has required him to disclose to various key members of Congress any covert operations in which certain intelligence agencies of the executive branch are involved.

The trouble is that certain members of Congress can't resist disclosing such operations to the media — either because they oppose them, or simply for the publicity. It was this notorious practice on the part of Congress that persuaded President Reagan to delay as long as possible notifying Congress of his covert approach, through his National Security Council staff, to friendly contacts in the Iranian government.

Sen. Joseph Biden, for example, is known to have bragged to one reporter last summer that, while a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, he forced the abandonment of two proposed covert actions (of which he disapproved) by threatening to expose them. But since he only threatened to do so, he may not actually have committed a crime, whatever one thinks of his tactics.

Sens. Dave Durenberger and Patrick Leahy, chairman and vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee until January, are believed to have been behind the leak, in 1985, of a covert operation against Libya which effectively killed it, according to Bill Gertz of the Washington Times. But Durenberger and Leahy have declined to comment, and an FBI investigation is stalled.

There is, however, no question whatever that Leahy showed up at 5 a.m. on Oct. 11, 1985 at CIA headquarters in Langley, Va. and demanded to be briefed on the hijacking of the Achille Lauro. Following the briefing, Leahy dashed to the "CBS Morning News" program, on which he dramatically disclosed that we had known Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak was lying when he declared that the hijackers had left Egypt. This, of course, tipped off the Egyptians to tighten their internal communications (which we had been intercepting).

What is particularly chilling about Leahy's damaging disclosure is its motive. He wasn't against intercepting Egyptian communications — on the contrary, he hailed the result as "a major triumph for the United States." But he was up for reelection to the Senate just one year later, and he evidently figured he could use the publicity.

Section 798 of Chapter 37, Title 18, U.S. Code, provides in relevant part:

"Whoever knowingly and willfully... uses in any manner prejudicial to the safety or interest of the United States... any classified information... obtained by the processes of communication intelligence from the communications of any foreign government, knowing the same to have been obtained by such processes — Shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both."

Has the FBI probed Leahy's sickening performance? Will the Justice Department prosecute him? And will his fellow Democrats in Congress, who are thirsting for Ollie North's blood, insist on Leahy's too?

Comet Mission Proposed

By William Harwood
UPI Science Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Plunging sunward in orbit around an icy comet, a robot spacecraft receives a radio command from Earth and a spinning probe shaped like a giant golf tee drops away from the mothership.

The 5-foot probe is aimed straight at Comet Tempel-2 when a small rocket motor flashes to life, driving the craft toward the heart of the ancient snowball at 90 mph.

Moments later, it slams into the comet, burying itself in the snowy crust. In a long-awaited moment, elated scientists on distant Earth begin receiving priceless data expected to provide a quantum leap in knowledge about the origin of the solar system an unimaginable 4.6 billion years ago.

Called the "Comet Rendezvous and Asteroid Flyby" — CRAF — such a mission would have been the stuff of science fiction a few years ago but it is a strong candidate for a "new start" in NASA's fiscal 1989 budget to be sent to Congress in January.

If the project wins approval in the coming weeks — money is tight and there is still competition from a proposed astrophysics mission — CRAF would blast off aboard a Titan-4 rocket in 1993 for a rendezvous with Tempel-2 in November 1996 at the comet's farthest point from the sun.

Flying in formation with the comet as it falls toward the inner solar system, CRAF would conduct unprecedented, close-up studies for 3 1/2 years before the mission's formal end on the last day of the century.

"I'd really like to see it go," said deputy project scientist Paul Weissman in a telephone interview from the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif. "It's a fantastic mission and it's very much an exploratory mission, which is what NASA really should be doing."

The spacecraft would cost $669 million to build and launch and another $192 million would be required to cover operations during the seven-year flight.

Comets, dirty snowballs formed in the depths of space, are key targets for study because they are thought to be relics left over from the original cloud of dust and debris that collapsed to form Earth and the rest of the solar system.

"One of the really exciting things we're going to actually land instruments on the comet using a penetrator experiment," Weissman said. "We actually shoot this in-million propeller-milling equipment sale, which has enabled Soviet submarines to run so quietly that they are extremely difficult to detect. Overcoming this technological advantage could cost U.S. taxpayers billions of dollars.

While Toshiba has drawn severe punishment from the U.S. and Japanese governments, C. Itoh has escaped with nothing more than a three-month ban on sales to the Soviet bloc. But it is becoming clear that alarm signals were ringing in Japan for nearly three decades about C. Itoh. But recently, Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., got wind of them.

An internal memo in Dixon's office, reviewed by our reporter Gary Clouser, reveals that a confidential source of the senator's reported that "the Soviet Union has had a long history" of working with the Japanese trading firm to obtain Western secrets. Additional information, primarily from Japanese press accounts, was provided to Dixon. It includes the following allegations:

— In 1959, a 30-page classified document describing a Boeing ground-to-air missile was taken from the Japanese Air Staff Office. The Pentagon had sent the document to U.S. allies to promote sale of the missile.

An official Japanese investigation resulted in an admission by C. Itoh that one of its top executives had "privately borrowed" the document and made three copies at the company's headquarters. The Soviets subsequently obtained a copy of the classified document, though C. Itoh never admitted responsibility for that.

Two Air Staff officers were forced to resign as a result of the incident — and both were hired by C. Itoh or a subsidiary. One of them was an Imperial Army Military Academy classmate of Ryuzo Sejima, the C. Itoh managing director in charge of military sales at the time. In fact, a memo written for Dixon identifies Sejima as the executive who "borrowed" the classified missile document.

— In March 1968, a Japanese military officer was charged with giving C. Itoh a classified document dealing with electronic communications, and was suspected of delivering other classified military information to the company.

— Sejima himself, though a "very close friend" of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone "and a member of his kitchen cabinet," according to the Dixon memo, has come under intense scrutiny for alleged ties to the Soviet Union.

In fact, one story on Sejima. In the Japanese monthly Bungei Shinju, implies that he may have collaborated with the Soviets when he became a prisoner of war at the close of World War II.

Dixon's investigation of C. Itoh has led him to sponsor legislation that would indirectly penalize C. Itoh or any foreign firm that sells restricted technology to the Soviet bloc.

Neighborhood Handyman Jailed In Seven Philadelphia Murders

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A neighborhood handyman who surrendered to police at the urging of his mother was charged after questioning with murdering seven people whose corpses were found last week in his garbage-strewn "Death House."

Police found a weary, hungry and unshaven Harrison "Marty" Graham sitting on a curbside Sunday with his mother, 10 blocks from his apartment in a row house neighbors described as a "shooting gallery" used by drug addicts.

Graham, an illiterate man known to frequent soup kitchens, was arrested without incident after he contacted his mother and she told police of his whereabouts and his willingness to surrender after a week on the run.

After hours of questioning, Graham, described by police as either 28 and 30, was arraigned Sunday night on seven counts each of murder and corpse abuse.

Pentagon Plans Supercomputer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some officials are worried whether a new $1 billion supercomputer facility to test the feasibility of a "Star Wars" missile defense system will be free from Pentagon bias, a published report says.

Because the results could be critical to future funding of the controversial defense system, "the SDI Organization recognizes that credibility is an important issue," the former director of the National Test Facility, Air Force Col. Richard Paul, said in a New York Times dispatch Sunday.

The National Test Facility, being built under heavy security near Colorado Springs, Colo., will simulate attacks by Soviet missiles and assess the ability of the proposed Strategic Defense Initiative to defend the country from space, the Times said.

Some 2,300 military and computer experts will be employed at the facility, which will be the size of a football field, and analyze new data as well as information already compiled by the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization, the newspaper said.

Habib's Departure Downplayed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration is downplaying any disarray in the White House stemming from the resignation of special Central American envoy Philip Habib, but a top House Democrat says Habib's departure is causing concern on Capitol Hill. Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, however, said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" that the resignation has caused concern on Capitol Hill. "Why do you take one of your heavy hitters out of the line-up just as you're going into the crucial innings?" he asked.

He said Congress will view the resignation as "a step back from negotiations."

Both White House chief of staff Howard Baker and national security adviser Frank Carlucci used the Sunday talk shows to defend administration policy toward Nicaragua, dismissing Habib's abrupt departure last week as of little significance.

Mine Strike Enters Second Week; Black Workers Defy Ultimatum

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — The largest strike in South African history entered its second week today, with militant black mineworkers vowing to defy a back-to-work ultimatum that could trigger mine closings.

But officials of the National Union of Mineworkers agreed to meet negotiators of Anglo American Corp., the industry's biggest employer, to seek an end to violent clashes that marred the first seven days of the stoppage.

Mine operators have said the first in a series of shutdowns may start this week if some 330,000 strikers defy today's deadline to begin reporting for work.

The strike, called to protest a deadlock over wages, has idled or slowed more than 50 gold and coal mines, and major mining houses have lost some $45 million in potential gold profits, researchers said Sunday.

Police Search JAL Offices

TOKYO (UPI) — Dozens of police investigators today searched offices of Japan Air Lines for evidence of criminal negligence in the 1985 crash of a jumbo jet that killed 520 people in the worst single-plane accident in history.

A group of 62 investigators searched JAL's head office in downtown Tokyo and its maintenance center at Haneda International Airport for evidence to support criminal charges against the airline and its personnel, police said.

A police spokesman said more than 34,000 items were confiscated, including repair contracts and inspection documents, from the two locations, enough to fill 45 cardboard boxes. The spokesman said investigators will search more offices Tuesday at Haneda airport.

The search came two months after a government-appointed panel blamed faulty repairs by the aircraft's U.S. manufacturer, Boeing Co., and JAL's failure to find them, for the accident.

Lange Zaps U.S. Relations Hopes

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (UPI) — Prime Minister David Lange, whose Labor Party swept to a second three-year term on a platform of keeping New Zealand nuclear free, says strained relations with the United States are unlikely to improve.

Lange, at a news conference Sunday, said New Zealand's relationship with the United States is "about as warm as it is going to get" because of the policy that bars port calls by nuclear-armed and nuclear-powered warships.

In response to the policy, which Lange began shortly after coming to power in 1984, the United States last year dropped New Zealand from the 36-year-old ANZUS security alliance, cutting Wellington out of defense intelligence briefings and joint military maneuvers.

Lange, the first Labor leader to win a second term since 1935, said New Zealand still maintains a "practical working relationship with the United States."

Shuttle Emergency Strip Opens

EASTER ISLAND, Chile (UPI) — U.S. and Chilean officials inaugurated a runway extension on remote Easter Island that will enable its airport to serve as an emergency landing field for future space shuttle missions.

Located in the mid-Pacific some 2,350 miles off the Chilean coast, Easter Island is best known for its archaeological mysteries — mysterious giant heads carved out of volcanic rock by stone-age Polynesian natives.

Sri Lankans Back Peace Accord

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (UPI) — "The president did the right thing," said Cyril Perera, street vendor in the capital's teeming old business district. "It doesn't matter to me that the Tamils get the north."

Two weeks after an Indian-backed peace accord, President Junius R. Jayewardene appears to have the crucial backing of the nation's majority Sinhalese to end four years of war with ethnic Tamil guerrillas.

"People have gotten used to opening their newspapers and not finding reports of killings, bombings and massacres," said a Colombo attorney. "This is the first time in a long time this has happened."

"What the people want is peace," declared Perera, a Sinhalese. "All this fighting has kept away the tourists. We need the tourists but they won't come until there is peace."

Jayewardene's surprise announcement July 29 that he and Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi had agreed on a peace plan at first triggered rioting in the capital and in the Sinhalese south. A strict curfew, press censorship and increased military presence in troubled areas quickly halted the anti-government protests.

The strong measures did not end objections to the plan, which features local rule for minority Tamils in the heavily Tamil-populated north and east and an increased role for India in Sri Lanka, but they clamped a lid on a volatile situation and provided a cooling-off period.

The cease-fire that went into effect 48 hours after the signing of the accord Colombo has held and no major violence has been reported.

"Despite many reservations about the plan, mostly by the Sinhalese, people don't want to go back to the old violence and I think most people are willing to compromise to keep this from happening," the lawyer said.

Tamils, who make up about 15 percent of the nation's 16 million people, say they have been systematically discriminated against by Sinhalese since shortly after independence from Britain in 1948.

Militant Tamils launched an armed campaign for a separate state in 1983 that led to more than 6,000 deaths and massive destruction in northern and eastern provinces, estimated by the government at $515 million.

As expected by most observers, the surrender of arms by the dominant Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam and other rebel groups did not meet the 72-hour timetable in the accord and many believe it will stretch on for weeks.

Maj. Gen. Harkirat Singh, commander of the 6,500-man Indian peacekeeping force in Sri Lanka, has set a new arms surrender deadline of Aug. 18, the same day the all-Sinhalese Parliament is scheduled to reconvene.

But most observers believe that the latest timetable also will be put back.

"You must understand that the Tamil militants are extremely suspicious and wary of the intentions of the Sri Lankan government," said a diplomat closely involved in the negotiations that led to the peace accord.

The slowness of the arms turnover does not mean the accord is a failure, he said, but reflects a natural caution on the part of the Tamils.

"Until the government and the Indian peacekeeping force convince the Tamils that they are safe and secure without their arms, they are going to be extremely reluctant to hand over all of their weapons," he said.

He said once the Tamils give up all their arms, they will be wiped out by government security forces or smaller Tamil groups.

"The Tigers didn't get to be the major Tamil group only through fighting government troops, you know," he said. "They killed off a lot of their Tamil opponents as well."

He said he doubted the rebels will ever surrender all their weapons.

"They feel they must be prepared if this agreement breaks down," he said. "There are hundreds or thousands of years of animosity and distrust between the races and that won't go away overnight."

The animosity between the races on the teardrop-shaped island at the southern tip of India dates back about 20 centuries. The history of Serendib, as Sri Lanka was known by ancient Arab mariners, has been marked by the ebb and flow of Tamil and Sinhalese dominance.

Despite objections by some ministers of Jayewardene's United National Party, the Cabinet has not publicly split over the peace accord. But he claims Parliament will approve Tamil-dominated provincial councils in the north and east as a first step toward local rule.

Jayewardene said he expected Parliament to begin consideration of the measure in late September or early October. Under the accord, provincial council elections must be held by the end of the year.

Jayewardene, 80, known by the nickname J.R., is viewed as a master politician in a nation where politics comes second only to religion and whose twists and turns are as closely followed as cricket scores.

"When it comes to a vote, J.R. generally knows the score before he gets into it," said a long-time observer of Sri Lankan politics.

Scandal Questions Remain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is hoping the Iran-Contra scandal is behind him, but some of the constitutional questions raised in the affair are likely to linger with no clear-cut answers in sight.

One of those issues, the appropriate roles of the president and the Congress in conducting foreign policy, was a highlight last week as Reagan and lawmakers called for a new spirit of cooperation between the White House and Capitol Hill to spring from the wreckage of the scandal.

Finding a solution, however, may be easier said than done because, according to some legal scholars, that area of debate has always been, and will likely remain, murky.

"There is no judicial answer to some of these (questions) ... especially those touching in foreign affairs," said A.E. Dick Howard, a law professor at the University of Virginia.

"Who, under the Constitution, is meant to control foreign policy? That is a question to which we will not have a neat answer," Howard added, theorizing that the founding fathers probably intended to create the situation as part of the checks and balances of government.

"What looks very messy and unresolved is, in my judgment, part of the initial plan," Howard said. "Part of the compromise was to give a cut of the action to more than one branch."

The scandal's other major constitutional question cited by Howard and others was accountability, the fact that officials in the executive branch of government took actions without proper authority and without fulfilling the legal requirements of notifying Congress.

Several lawmakers and scholars noted that the problem was not that there were no laws to guide the process, but that the existing laws were ignored or bypassed because of a lack of trust between the White House and Congress.

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, touched on the constitutional issues in the Democratic response to Reagan's Iran-Contra speech last week, noting that the men who wrote the Constitution sought to divide authority in government because they "recognized the immense strength of freedom," but also "understood the corrupting capacity of political power."

"The Iran-Contra scandal is about the rule of law," said the former federal judge, adding that "in America, every person is equal before the law, no person is so high as to be above the law, and no end, however noble, justifies illegal means."

New CIA Director William Webster noted that what was essential in the aftermath of the scandal was "a trustworthy system of oversight and accountability that builds, rather than erodes, trust between those who have the intelligence collection responsibility and those who act as surrogates for the American people."

Classroom Camaraderie: Boon Or Bane?

Friendly Smiles And Friendships Replace 'Teacher's Dirty Looks' Of Old

By Kathy Terry
Herald Staff Writer
Friendships in the classroom are a boon or a bane, depending on how you look at it. In a classroom, it's not just the teacher's dirty looks that are gone, but the teacher's stern expression, too. Now, students are smiling and laughing, and the teacher is smiling back. It's a new atmosphere in the classroom, one that is more relaxed and friendly. The students are more comfortable and confident, and the teacher is more relaxed and approachable. This is a positive change, and it is one that is being embraced by both students and teachers alike.

Several cities in the state are set to oppose impact fees, which are charges levied on new construction to help pay for the cost of infrastructure. The cities argue that impact fees are unfair and that they should be eliminated. They say that the fees are a burden on homeowners and businesses, and that they do not provide any real benefit. They are calling on the state to repeal the fees, and they are planning to hold protests and rallies to show their opposition.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

State Cap On Medical Awards Would Follow 28 Others

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Florida would not be the first state to limit damage awards as a way to bring down skyhigh medical malpractice insurance rates. Twenty-eight states have used that approach already.

Florida, however, will still get a lot of national attention as its trial lawyers and doctors clash, and legislators wrestle with the problem of decreasing the highest malpractice insurance rates in the country.

Gov. Bob Martinez is asking legislators to propose a constitutional amendment getting around objections raised by the Florida Supreme Court when it struck down a $450,000 cap on non-economic damages earlier this year.

The amendment, which would go before Florida voters next spring, would leave the Legislature free to enact a cap that would stick, and other "tort reforms" during the 1988 session if it decided to do so.

Murderer Says He'll Starve

STARKE (UPI) — The prison system's premier protestor, Michael Costello, says he is serious about starving to death and will fight attempts by the state to force feed him.

Costello, serving a life sentence for murder at Florida State Prison, has been a headache for Department of Corrections officials for years.

He complained about slow mail delivery, cold food and noise in cellblocks.

His most famous and most significant complaint resulted in a class action lawsuit bearing his name and court orders requiring the state to end prison overcrowding and improve medical care for prisoners.

Costello plans a fast now, not to protest a prison policy, but, he says, to take his life.

He insists he is serious about starving to death and that he expects a petition he filed with Bradford County Circuit Court for an order preventing FSP from force-feeding him to be litigated.

Turnpike, I-95 Compete For Cars

MIAMI (UPI) — Florida Turnpike officials, worried about a loss of revenue when Interstate 95's "missing link" is completed between Palm Beach and Martin counties, are planning an advertising campaign touting the toll road's congestion-free lanes.

I-95 and Florida's Turnpike are the two major north-south highways in the state. The roads are parallel in south Florida and separate at Fort Pierce, with the turnpike shooting off northwest toward Orlando and the interstate following the East Coast into Maine.

Turnpike director Sam Rodenberry frets about the completion of I-95's so-called missing link, a 30-mile section of road between PGA Boulevard in Palm Beach County and State Road 714 in Martin County, which is to be finished Dec. 19.

The gap now forces thousands of motorists to change from I-95 to the turnpike. Many stay on the turnpike even when the interstate reappears in north Palm Beach County.

Pot-Stuffed Sailboat Found

KEY WEST (UPI) — The Coast Guard escorted a 29-foot sailboat and its two crew members to port Thursday after finding 400 pounds of marijuana stuffed into plastic tubing attached to the vessel's bottom, authorities said.

Arrested on drug smuggling charges were Freddy Garcia of Key West and Kathryn James of Indianapolis. Coast Guard Petty Officer Sheila Galloway said.

Coast Guard crew members from the Tamaroa, which was on patrol exercises in the Caribbean, boarded the sailboat Blue Runner Saturday in the Yucatan Channel between Mexico and Cuba, she said.

Wage Pressures Worry Bond Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Price inflation concerns were only one reason the Treasury's refunding brought higher yields this quarter. Bond market participants are worried about emerging pressure for higher wages.

"The July unemployment figures underscored the much stronger than expected wage pressures that have been building up," said David M. Jones, economist at Aubrey G. Lanson & Co.

"We've pushed civilian unemployment down to 6 percent, and many observers feel that 5 percent to 6 percent is full employment in today's economy," Jones said. "That could mean labor shortages in some sectors and upward pressure on wages."

Indeed, Bureau of Labor Statistics figures show that in major metropolitan areas, where the booming service sectors tend to be located, unemployment has fallen below 4 percent, the traditional full-employment level.

Jones cites a study in the Federal Reserve Bank of New York Winter Quarterly Review that shows the labor market is tightening for women, who have filled a majority of lower-paid service jobs.

The study showed that 55 percent of adult women were in the workforce in 1985, up from 37 percent in 1960. At the same time, the number of adult men in the labor force has fallen to 78 percent in 1985 from 85 percent in 1960.

The idled men won't be available to take up the slack, the study points out. Jobs typically held by males pay 16 percent more than typical service-sector jobs. Most observers do not believe unemployed steel workers, for one example, will be willing to fill the service-sector gap.

"Statistics only tell part of the story," said Elizabeth Reiners, economist at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "We like what we call the anecdotal jobs index — that is, every fast-food store and boutique has help-wanted signs in the window but these jobs are low-paid or part-time." Reiners also pointed out that the household survey part of the Commerce Department's employment figures, which includes part-timers, showed civilian jobs rose by 470,000 in June. New non-farm payrolls were up 304,000 in the month.

"Many of the part-timers just couldn't find full-time work," she said.

Small businesses, where many of these lower-paid jobs are found, will resist filling them by offering higher wages, the latest survey by the 500,000-member National Federation of Independent Business shows.

"Only 17 percent of our members plan to raise salaries in the coming months, the lowest we've seen in four years," said William Dunkelberg, dean of the business school at Temple University and the NFIB's chief economist.

Even that 17 percent don't plan lavish increases, he said. The majority plan wage hikes in the neighborhood of 5 percent.

John Heckman, senior economist at Claremont Economics Institute in California, said although wage gains have been moderate so far, demands for higher pay could accelerate as prices begin to rise more rapidly.

"We also are concerned about signs of strength in the economy," Heckman said, and not because it would mean a return to double-digit inflation.

"Monetary authorities will not allow us to go back to the old pattern of higher inflation," Heckman said. "The Fed will become restrictive and there's a possibility of overkill that could push the economy into a recession."

Dunkelberg believes a little inflation is not a bad thing, and in fact necessary to maintain growth. "Prices were too low, in many cases below marginal production costs," he said.

"But higher commodity prices, especially for oil, will create problems," he said. "It will reduce the standard of living of Americans and put upward pressure on wages."

Lawmakers Push Added Benefits For Foster Care

FORT LAUDERDALE (UPI) — Two south Florida legislators are promising to push for better benefits for foster care parents during the upcoming special session.

Rep. Jack Tobin, D-Margate, and Rep. Elaine Bloom, D-Miami Beach, are trying to avert a strike threatened by many foster care parents under contract with the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Tobin and Bloom unveiled a plan Friday giving the parents the liability protection available for state employees if, in fact, they do not already have it.

They said they will push their proposal during a special session on medical malpractice now scheduled tentatively for October, although Gov. Bob Martinez wants to wait until the 1988 regular session next April.

"We are here to pledge our support for a comprehensive set of solutions and to commit our efforts at the earliest possible time to resolve the liability insurance problem," Tobin and Bloom said at a news conference. "We are pleased that we have strong bipartisan support pledged for this and we expect to begin the solution at a special session in early autumn."

Many foster care parents have threatened to stop taking children from HRS unless they get liability protection and additional pay. The president of the state foster parents association said earlier this week the strike is off because of guarantees of assistance from Martinez and key legislators.

However, officials of the Foster Parents Association in Broward County, where the strike idea originated, say it is still on — until they get a firm commitment of action this year.

Martinez and some legislators believe the parents may already have liability protection as agents of the state. They have asked Attorney General Robert Butterworth for an advisory opinion on the matter. If Butterworth says foster parents are not yet covered, Bloom and Tobin said, the Legislature will be asked to pass a law correcting the problem.

As agents of the state, the parents would be covered by Florida's Risk Management Trust Fund for up to $100,000 per person and $200,000 per incident.

Tobin is chairman of the House Committee on Health and Rehabilitative Services. Bloom is chairwoman of the HRS subcommittee responsible for the foster care system.

Expos Ride Raines' Cycle To Within 4 Games Of Cards

MONTREAL (UPI) — Tim Raines says hitting for the cycle is just his way of contributing to the team. Raines Sunday afternoon got five hits on the way to becoming the first Expo to hit for the cycle since 1978 and helping lift Montreal to a 10-7 win over Pittsburgh and a four-game sweep against the Pirates. "The way our team keeps fighting back to win you feel you have to do your share so hitting for the cycle was the way I did it best," said

Raines only the third Expo to hit for the cycle in 19 seasons. "It's a great feeling to know that you can trail in a game like this and still come back and win. And every day, somebody else is doing the job. Today was Tom Foley's turn." The win boosted the second place Expos within four games of the first-place St. Louis Cardinals in the National League West. The Expos trailed the 7-4 heading into the seventh when Raines led off with his fourth hit and second double of the game. Mitch Webster drove him in with a single to make the score 7-5. After reliever John Smiley, who had taken over for Rick Reuschel, left the game by walking Herman Winningham. Brett Gideon, 12-4, struck out Tim Wallach. But second baseman Johnny Ray couldn't hold onto Andres Galarraga's grounder and Webster scored, making the margin just 7-6. Foley followed with his second homer in two games to right field for a 9-7 lead. "I don't hit many homers and when I do they are usually down the line and not to center field," Foley said. "I only wanted a sacrifice fly but I hit it hard." Raines added a homer to complete his cycle in the eighth making the score 10-5 and giving him five hits and four runs. R J Reynolds hit a two run double for Pittsburgh in the third making the score 4-2 and Bobby Bonilla's two run bases loaded single in the sixth increased the lead to 7-4. Jeff Parrett pitched three innings of relief for the win to even his record at 4-4. Floyd Youmans lasted only 3 1-3 innings, giving up eight hits. Joe Hesketh pitched 2 2-3 innings, making his first major league appearance in over a year. ...Boxscore on 9A

Bucs' QB Duel May Be History

By Ira Kaufman
UPI Sports Writer

TAMPA — No. 14 just became No. 1. Unofficially. Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde, the first player selected in the NFL draft, was supposed to be brought along slowly by Tampa Bay Coach Ray Perkins. Veteran quarterback Steve DeBerg started Saturday night's exhibition opener against Cincinnati, but it was Testaverde who was around for the frantic finish. After just 60 minutes of football, Tampa Bay's quarterback duel appears finished.

"There is a tremendous quarterback over there," said Cincinnati Coach Sam Wyche after the Bengals survived three fourth-quarter touchdown passes by Testaverde in a 31-30 triumph. "He is a legitimate star who doesn't have to have everything go right for him to make big plays. Tampa Bay is on its way with Testaverde ... they've got their centerpiece." Testaverde played the final half and completed 16 of 29 passes for 233 yards and three TDs. The former University of Miami All-America was intercepted twice, including a 10-yard return by linebacker Emanuel King that put the Bengals ahead 31-10 with 11:07 remaining.

The crowd of 52,747 began to file out of Tampa Stadium, but Testaverde shredded Cincinnati's second-string defense and only a botched extra-point attempt prevented overtime.

"I think that fourth quarter showed a lot of guts," said Testaverde, who hit rookie tight end Ron Hall for a 10-yard score, Phil Freeman from 28 yards out and rookie free agent Bobby Bankston with a 40-yard TD bomb. Donald Igwebulke's kick following the Freeman score was blocked by Bengal tackle Brian Blados.

"I'm glad to get this first one under my belt and actually play in an NFL game," said Testaverde.

Igwebulke added a 28-yard field goal and fourth-round pick Bruce Hill caught a 24-yard scoring pass from 12th-round choice Mike Shula for the Buccaneers, who trailed 17-0 before registering their initial first down in the final minute of the half.

Second-year quarterback Doug Gaynor and Boomer Esiason both played well for the Bengals, who held Tampa Bay to one yard rushing in the first two periods.

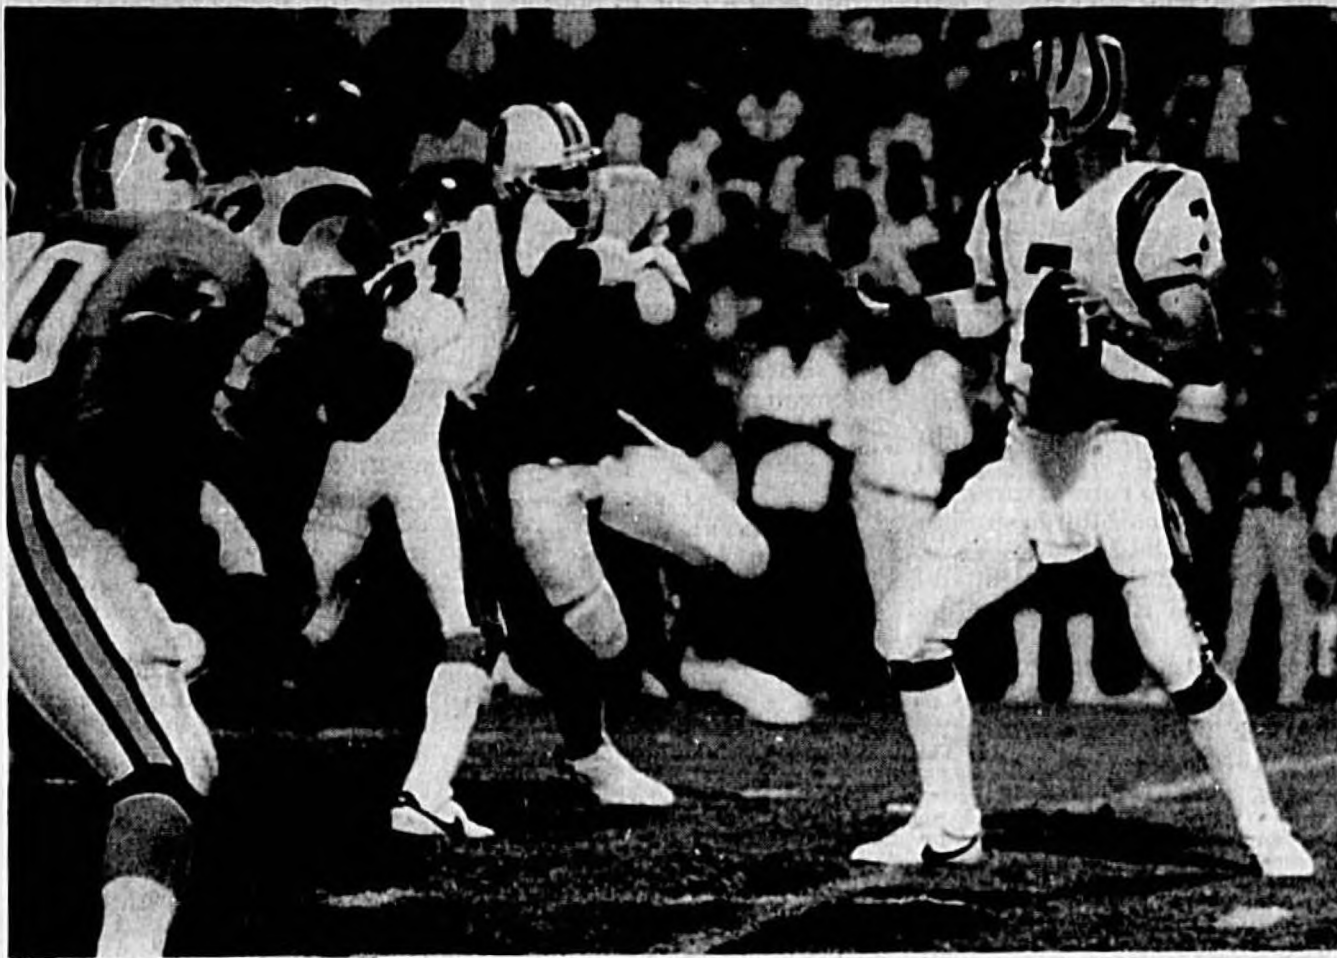

"We played a sub-par game and made some bonehead mistakes I hope we won't do again," said Wyche, whose club led the NFL in total offense last year while finishing 10-6. "We were not at the top of our game, but I like to see our team win when we're not playing well."

Gaynor completed 14 of 17 passes for 118 yards, but was sacked three times and intercepted twice.

Esiason played sparingly but utilized his mobility in hitting on 10 of 15 passes for 131 yards. He deftly guided the Bengals 66 yards in eight plays late in the opening half, spotting Ira Hillary for a 12-yard TD. Esiason scrambled left and then right early in the final quarter before hitting Cris Collinsworth for a 15-yard score.

Collinsworth caught seven passes for 79 yards and James Brooks rushed for 61 yards in just six carries. Stanford Jennings added a 1-yard TD run for Cincinnati and Jim Breech opened the scoring with a 21-yard field goal.

"Nobody has more talent than the Cincinnati Bengals," said Perkins, who returned to the NFL after four years as head coach at Alabama. "From where I sit, they're going to go a long way."

Boomer Esiason, above, sets up and looks for a receiver. The Cincinnati bomber tossed two touchdowns to help the Bengals slip past the Bucs, 31-30, Saturday night. Esiason's all-pro wide receiver, Chris Collinsworth, at right, caught a 15-yard touchdown pass, one of seven catches for 79 yards. Collinsworth, a former Florida standout, was more impressed with Tampa's Vinny Testaverde, though. The Bucs' No. 1 draft choice led a spirited comeback with three TD passes in the final 6:18.

Miami Loses Game, Marino, Offerdahl

Football

MIAMI (UPI) — The Miami Dolphins went into the exhibition season with the goal of building a defense around Pro Bowl linebacker John Offerdahl and improving an offense that centers on quarterback Dan Marino.

After Sunday night's 10-3 loss to Chicago, Miami is without the services of both players. Offerdahl is out for at least 10 weeks with a torn bicep muscle and Marino dislocated the ring finger on his right hand, an injury that could keep him out up to four weeks.

The Bears used a 65-yard touchdown pass from No. 1 draft choice Jim Harbaugh to second-round pick Ron Morris in the fourth quarter to win the game. The play with 10:49 remaining found Morris, from Southern Methodist, behind Miami defensive backs Don McNeal and Liffort Hobbey on the right sideline.

Miami's only points came on a 37-yard field goal by Fuad Reveziz in the second quarter, while Kevin Butler added a 36-yard field goal for the Bears.

The game marked the debut of Joe Robbie Stadium, a $102 million, 75,000-seat facility on the Dade-Broward county line. It also was the first game telecast on cable channel ESPN.

The injuries and overall performance of his team upset Miami coach Don Shula, who now has only two healthy quarterbacks — veteran backup Don Strock and utility man Jim Jensen. Rookie quarterback Jim Karsatos strained his left knee.

"I'm obviously disappointed with what took place tonight," Shula said.

Giants.....19
Patriots.....17

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The New York Giants, finding themselves in the unusual position of being the team to beat, say they are glad to be back on the field.

"We have been through a lot during the off-season," said Jim Burt, New York's starting nose tackle, after the 1987 Super Bowl Champions defeated the New England Patriots 19-17 in the preseason opener for both teams on Sunday.

Phil Simms, last year's Super Bowl Most Valuable Player, replaced Jeff Hostetler at quarterback midway through the second quarter and engineered three scoring drives.

Simms, who completed 10 of 16 passes for 103 yards in just over a quarter of work, threw a 14-yard touchdown strike.

Bristol Bounces Back, Earns World Series' Berth

By Chris Flister
Herald Sports Writer

ALTA MONTE SPRINGS — Bristol, Tenn. manager Brian Jessee promised that his team would rebound Saturday after committing 10 errors in a 12-9 loss to San Antonio Northwest the night before.

Bristol not only bounced back, but dominated every phase of the game Saturday morning as the Tennessee State Champions received a well-deserved ticket to the Little League Baseball Junior World Series with a convincing 10-1 victory over San Antonio Northwest in the Junior Southern Region Tournament final at Eastmonte Park.

"This is the way we are capable of playing all the time," a jubilant Jessee said after Saturday's triumph. "Pitching and defense were again our keys and we got the bats going well. I hope we can carry this kind of play with us to the World Series."

Bristol left Altamonte Springs Sunday morning for Taylor, Mich. and the Junior World Series. Play in the World Series begins Tuesday.

"We're proud of Tennessee and feel they will represent the South well at the World Series," Florida District 14 commissioner Don Crawford said. "They are not only representing Tennessee now, but the entire Southeastern United States."

Brandon Ware, who tossed a six-hitter in an earlier victory over San Antonio, mastered the Texans again Saturday as he allowed just three hits, struck out two and walked three. Ware needed only 89 pitches to get through the game. He threw 88 pitches in the earlier win over San Antonio.

"Brandon (Ware) has pitched three excellent ballgames in a row," Jessee said. "He doesn't overpower anybody but he pitches smart. He moves the ball around and changes speeds well."

While pitching his second superb game of the Southern Region Tournament, Ware was also backed by an impressive defensive effort. Bristol committed just two errors in the game and the defense also rose to the occasion in San Antonio's only threat of the game.

In the bottom of the first inning, San Antonio loaded the bases with no outs but Ware

Where Are They Going?

Testaverde Comeback May End Tampa's Orange Stream

TAMPA — "There was about eight minutes left, I looked up and everyone was leaving," Vinny Testaverde said Saturday night. "I thought to myself, 'Where are all those people going?'"

Better than any owner, coach, player or sports writer, Vinny Testaverde put the 1987 Tampa Bay Buccaneers into perspective Saturday night. With Testaverde at the controls, no longer will the legions of orange stream from Tampa Stadium with the Bucs trailing by several touchdowns.

There were 52,747 hopefuls who filed into Tampa Stadium Saturday night for the Bucs' preseason opener against the explosive Cincinnati Bengals. They did not come to see the Bucs win. They came to see Tampa Bay's new messiah at quarterback.

They came to see Vinny Testaverde, Heisman Trophy winner and No. 1 draft pick from Miami University, led the orange faithful from a wilderness which has spanned two years. Two years of four victories and 28 losses.

QB Messiah or not, thousands of hopefuls still lost hope. With eight minutes left and the Bucs facing a familiar predicament — 21 points down — the orange stream plodded toward the exits. The stream wandered aimlessly down Himes Avenue toward the parking lots.

Undaunted, Vinny Testaverde uttered those six prophetic words and tightened his chin strap. There was work to do, and he was going to get it done. Three touchdowns in just 6:18 almost did the job. Tampa Bay's newest millionaire finished his comeback effort with 16 completions in 29 attempts for 233 yards.

No, he did not extract victory from the jaws of defeat. That storybook ending must wait another weekend. Tampa Bay came away a 31-30 loser to the Bengals, with a blocked extra point following Testaverde's second score keeping the Bucs from overtime.

Hope, however, returned to Tampa Stadium in the form of a powerful right arm, better-than-average mobility and a dose of leadership that has been missing much too long.

One can only imagine what was going through the minds of the orange stream as it reacted to the thunderous outbursts to each touchdown from inside Tampa Stadium. Better yet, how about the orange stream tuned into its ear radio, listening through disbelieving ears?

"I'll tell you what, that cat is a player." Cincinnati All-pro wide receiver Cris Collinsworth said about Testaverde. "I think they sold some season's tickets tonight. That guy is a talent."

Sam Cook
HERALD SPORTS EDITOR

"I remember watching him on his first play, thinking he looked like he had been in this league forever. He stands in the pocket like the Rock of Gibraltar and it's gonna be a lot of fun watching this guy over the years ... I'm just glad he's in the NFC."

Testaverde played the final two quarters. He hit TD passes of 10 yards to rookie tight end Ron Hall, 28 yards to Phil Freeman and 40 yards to rookie Bobby Bankston. Bankston's grab may have gained him another week in the Bucs' camp.

Donald Igwebulke missed the extra-point attempt following Freeman's TD with 61 seconds remaining, but the Buccaneers recovered an onside kick and Testaverde hit Bankston for the score with seven seconds left.

"I think Tampa Bay's got a franchise player in Testaverde," Cincinnati coach Sam Wyche said. "He's an unusual player and we couldn't contain him."

"There is a tremendous quarterback over there," he continued. "He is a legitimate star who doesn't have to have everything go right for him to make big plays. Tampa Bay is on its way with Testaverde ... they've got their centerpiece."

Testaverde, nevertheless, did not do everything asked of a messiah. He was intercepted twice, the second one — a 10-yard return for a touchdown by Emanuel King — put Tampa Bay in its 21-point hole.

"I made some mistakes, but I'm glad to get this first one under my belt and actually play in an NFL game," Testaverde said. "I must have played it 10 or 12 times in my mind this week."

Mistakes or not, the messiah did enough to impress first-year coach Ray Perkins — a tough, terse taskmaster when it comes to handing out compliments. "Vinny did a good job for his first game," Perkins said. "He made some mistakes, but he brought us back."

And with it renewed hope and the demise of the orange stream.

throughout the tournament.

In the top of the second, Chris Phipps reached on an error to start the inning and, with one out, Ware singled to left. Brad Johnson, who was 0 for 6 in the three previous games, then blasted an 0-1 pitch from Brett Altman well over the fence in left center to give Bristol a 3-0 lead. It was the first homer of the entire season for Johnson and the three-run jack turned out to be the game-winning hit as Ware shut down San Antonio the rest of the way.

"He (Altman) threw me a fastball right down the middle of the plate," Johnson said. "At first I wasn't sure if it would be out but I was as happy as ever when it went over. Our home field is 300 feet so I never hit one out there and I really haven't hit

Strawberry's 5 RBI Pound Cubs, 23-10

United Press International: Darryl Strawberry, who has been criticized for not playing hurt, nearly hit for the cycle with a sore hip.

Strawberry drove in five runs with four hits and scored five times to lead the New York Mets to a 23-10 trouncing of the Chicago Cubs.

Ron Darling, 10-7, won his sixth consecutive start while Greg Maddux, 6-11, lost his first start since being recalled from Triple-A Saturday.

The Mets, who avoided a four-game series sweep, remained in third place in the NL East, 4 1/2 games behind the St. Louis Cardinals.

Strawberry, who smacked a three-run homer, a two-run triple and two doubles as part of a 21-hit attack, missed hitting for the cycle when he doubled to left instead of singling in his last at-bat.

First base coach Bill Robinson discreetly signaled Strawberry to stop at first but Strawberry went on to second.

"That is a double all the way," said Strawberry, who turned down manager Davey Johnson's offer to sit because of a sore hip.

David Martinez, who doubled twice and drilled his eighth homer in a Cubs' victory Saturday, singled twice in five at-bats.

Elsewhere, Montreal outslugged Pittsburgh 10-7; Houston defeated Atlanta 6-2; Philadelphia edged St. Louis 4-3; Cincinnati blanked San Diego 2-0; and San Francisco nipped Los Angeles 1-0.

Aaron Rejected Brewers' Offer

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Major-league baseball's all-time home-run leader Henry Aaron rejected an offer to manage the Milwaukee Brewers in 1975.

Aaron, vice president and director of player development for the Atlanta Braves, received the offer in the first year he returned to Milwaukee as a player with the Brewers.

Aaron began his major-league career in 1954 with the Milwaukee Braves, who later moved to Atlanta.

"I don't recall the exact circumstances and I can't get down to specifics, but, yes, (then-General Manager) Jim Baum and (Brewers President) Bud Selig offered me the job," said Aaron.

There are no black managers nor general managers in the majors currently, with Aaron holding the highest position by a black. The situation has gained increased attention this year after former Los Angeles Dodger executive Al Campanis' comment early in the season that blacks "lack the necessities" for managing.

The Brewers made the offer to Aaron in late June that year because of disenchantment with then-Manager Del Crandall, a former Braves teammate of Aaron who was fired on the last day of the 1975 season, the Journal reported Sunday.

Broward Romps

FORT LAUDERDALE (UPI) — Broward County first baseman Chris Gould scored a solo home run in the second inning to contribute to Broward's 22-2 rout of Spain in the opening game of the 1987 Big League World Series at Floyd Hull Stadium Saturday.

Lewis, Louganis, Johnson Lead Rush To 27 Golds

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — On land, water — even in the air — American athletes make a show of force at the Pan American Games.

Olympians Carl Lewis, Greg Louganis and Scott Johnson led the way Sunday as the United States began the second week of competition by collecting 27 gold medals. It boosted the U.S. gold-medal total for the Games to 151 and 327 medals overall.

Lewis, a quadruple gold medalist at the 1984 Olympics, won two golds — the long jump with a Pan Am-record leap of 28 feet, 8 1/4 inches and the anchor leg on the 4 x 100 men's relay team.

Louganis, a double gold medalist at Los Angeles, won his third straight Pan Am double by claiming the men's platform dive with a Pan Am-record 694.68 points.

Johnson, a member of the 1984 Olympic gymnastics team, emerged the day's biggest winner with six medals, including golds in still rings and parallel bars. He captured the all-around title Saturday.

But perhaps the biggest hero of the day was gymnast Tim Daggett of Los Angeles. Told six months ago he probably would never compete again, the Olympic gold medalist won the pommel horse event.

The United States also won five gold medals in rowing, captured the men's and women's team competition in archery and picked up a gold in table tennis.

The United States celebrated the final day of track and field by winning seven of 10 events to finish the meet with 26 gold medals, 15 silver and 15 bronze.

Lewis came to Indianapolis aiming to break the long jump record of 29-2 1/4, set by Bob Beamon in 1968. With wind playing a big factor, the best he could do was 28-8 1/4, the sixth-best long jump unaided by wind.

That was good enough to give Lewis his 51st consecutive victory in the event. He interrupted that competition to anchor the winning 400-meter relay team. Lewis holds 18 of the 20 best long jumps.

Other U.S. victories in track and field came from Johnny Gray of Inglewood, Calif. In the 800 meters (1:48.79), Mary Knisely of Dallas in the 3,000 meters (9:06.75) and the men's and women's 4 x 100 and 4 x 400-meter relay teams. Both 4 x 400 relay teams set Pan Am records, the men winning in 2:59.54 and the women in 3:23.35.

Louganis captured his sixth Pan Am diving title in as many attempts, dating to 1979. Sunday's platform title came six days after he won the springboard. He received three scores of 10, two on his ninth dive, and was so far ahead he would have won even if he passed up his final dive.

Johnson, 26, of Colorado Springs, Colo., emerged the individual gymnastics star. Baldea winning the still rings and parallel bars, he finished second in four other events.

Daggett, 25, won the pommel horse by compiling 19,500 points to beat out Johnson with 19,200. Johnson also earned the silver in the floor exercise, vault and horizontal bars.

In other events, the U.S. men's basketball team routed Uruguay 105-81 and world amateur featherweight champion Kellie Banks of Chicago was knocked down in the first round but recovered to beat Arnaldo Mesa of Cuba by a 3-2 decision and advance to the semifinals. It was the first boxing loss suffered by the Cubans.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Spectacular Cook Knocks Off Steady Green At International

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (UPI) — John Cook shot a spectacular 69 Sunday and Ken Green had a steady 68. At the International, however, the spectacular will beat the steady every time and that meant Cook — even though he needed one shot more than Green — was the winner of the PGA tour's most unique event.

"Thank heaven for the scoring system," Cook said. "This win couldn't have come at a better time."

Cook won the $180,000 top prize and the third tour event of his nine-year career thanks to an eagle at the par-5 17th of the Castle Pines Country Club course. Eagles are worth five points at the International and Cook's eagle allowed him to finish with 11 points.

Green, who appeared ready to capture the event for the second straight year, scored nine points in a round of five birdies and one bogey.

"I'm at a loss for words," Green said, "and that's unusual for me. I guess it was a perfect way to end it with John making an eagle. Everyone liked it but me."

Phoenix Center Among Dead

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Phoenix Suns backup center Nick Vanos was on board the Northwest Airlines jetliner that crashed on takeoff from Detroit, the Suns' general manager Jerry Colangelo said today.

Colangelo, coached in San Jose, Calif., said he had been told that Vanos had boarded Flight 255 shortly before it crashed, killing all of the people on board.

Vanos, who was returning to Phoenix after visiting his girlfriend in Detroit, was a second-round draft choice of the Suns in 1985. He had played sparingly in his two years with the Suns although he saw more action under interim coach Dick Van Arsdale at the end of last season.

Vanos, 24, also was considered a candidate for the starting center's job this season.

Skinner Posts First Victory

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — Val Skinner insisted through the first two rounds of the MasterCard International her swing needed work. Despite proving that again in the final round, she hit the ball well enough to post her first victory of the year.

Skinner led the tournament through the first two rounds, taking a two-shot lead over Shelley Hamlin into the final round. She opened Sunday with a birdie, but then went bogey, double-bogey, bogey, bogey over the next four holes to hand the lead to Hamlin.

Park Wins MWGA International

The Mayfair Women's Golf Association staged its own version of the International last Wednesday with Kathryn Park coming away with top honors at the Sanford country club.

The tournament rewarded its players with eight points for an eagle, four points for a birdie and one point for a par. The players lost one point for a bogey and two points for a double bogey.

Ada O'Neil and Bea Taylor tied for second.

Seminole Booster Day Is Friday

The Seminole High School Booster Club will be soliciting donations for the 1987-88 sports year Friday. Seminole Athletic Director Jerry Posey said the booster goal is $1,500.

Seminole athletes will canvass Sanford businesses and residences Friday morning. Posey said the booster memberships would sell for $10, but more money would be appreciated.

Moody Birdies Way To Triumph

RANCHO MURIETA, Calif. (UPI) — Orville Moody birdied two of his final four holes Sunday to hold off a charge by Butch Baird and win the Senior Gold Rush Tournament, pushing his career earnings past $1 million.

Moody shot a 3-under-par 69 at Rancho Murieta Country Club to wind up with a 205 total. The triumph was worth $45,000.

Allison Assumes 8-Pin Edge

CANTON, Ohio (UPI) — Defending champion Glenn Allison of Whittier, Calif., took an eight-pin lead Sunday night after two rounds of the $115,000 Ebonite Professional Bowlers Association Senior Championship.

Stocks Active, Open Higher

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened higher Monday in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which gained 93.43 last week, was up 10.68 to 2698.11 shortly after the market opened.

Gainers led losers 749-333 among the 1,569 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 16,593,500 shares.

The stock market surprised even the most enthusiastic bulls last week with the Dow Jones industrial average soaring 93.43 points in a dizzy performance that withstood end-of-week pressures to take profits.

The Dow industrial average set a new closing high — 2691.49 — Thursday and made two forays through 2700 on Thursday and Friday, before slipping back to close the week at 2685.43. It cracked the 2600 mark for the first time on Monday. The Dow first closed above 2500 on July 17.

Hugh Johnson, head of the investment policy committee at First Albany Corp., said the market was "given a real knock-out punch in the form of the trade data, but this fighter got up from the canvas and was ready to go again."

turn just after takeoff, said Mort Edelstein, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Chicago.

Edelstein said one avenue of investigation was an air traffic controller's report of an explosion in the craft's left engine shortly after takeoff.

"The controller saw (the pilot) bank left and, sort of in a rolling fashion, bank right, and then saw an explosion in the left engine, followed by flames," Edelstein said. But he emphasized that this report was preliminary and unconfirmed.

Edelstein said the plane's left wing hit the ground about 2,000 feet past the end of the runway at I-94 and Middlebelt Road.

He refused further comment early today, saying the NTSB had taken over the investigation. But he said NTSB investigators would be looking into the report of the explosion and fire in the left engine.

FBI agents also were sent to investigate the crash.

Nick Vanos, 24 backup center for the Phoenix Suns of the National Basketball Association, apparently was among the passengers on the flight, Suns General Manager Jerry Colangelo said today. Colangelo, reached in San Jose, Calif., said he was told Vanos had a boarding pass for Flight 255 and checked in at the gate for the flight.

Japanese Loan World Bank Millions

TOKYO (UPI) — The World Bank said Monday it has borrowed about $100 million from a group of 49 Japanese regional banks to finance projects in developing nations.

It said a loan agreement was signed in Tokyo Monday by representatives of the World Bank and the Japanese syndicate led by Yokohama Bank.

It is the bank's first borrowing from Japanese regional banking institutions in about three years.

The loan will be repayable in seven years with an annual interest rate of 5.2 percent.

It is part of about $2.87 billion the bank plans to raise in Japan during the bank's fiscal year which began in July, World Bank officials said.

The bank borrowed $133 million from a group of 12 Japanese commercial banks earlier this month.

The new loan brought to $500 million the total fund raised in Japan by the bank since the beginning of its fiscal year.

Japan has pledged to provide $20 billion for aid to developing nations over the next three years in a move to reduce its huge trade surplus and ease friction with its trading partners.

found beneath a car seat, a Wayne County sheriff's deputy said, adding that "it was a miracle" she survived.

The child suffered burns and multiple fractures. She and a 30-year-old man were taken to the University of Michigan Medical Center in Ann Arbor, where they were listed in critical condition.

Witnesses said the crash set off a huge fireball and smoke could be seen at least a mile away. Debris was scattered throughout the area.

At least six people were arrested for looting at the crash site, Wayne County officials said.

"For half a mile up the road there is nothing but bodies and pieces of plane," said one of the first rescue workers at the scene. "The closest person I found even intact was the pilot. I found 70 bodies, and not one live body."

"There was nothing but a total ball of fire underneath the bridge," witness Joel Taylor told Cable News Network. "Flames were coming up from both sides as I drove over top the bridge. I was afraid it might blow up on me."

"But I went over top of it,"

Taylor said. "I stopped my car. I got out. There was a big propeller lying by my car. I looked over, I could see flames. I heard people screaming."

Jim Fontana, 25, operations manager for an Avis car-rental agency, said the plane struck his building before it hit the ground and plowed through a parking lot, destroying 30 to 40 cars.

The plane punched a 4- by 5-foot hole in the roof of the Avis office.

"It hit 20 feet above my head," Fontana said. "I was coming out. I saw the fireball ... I felt the heat. It was like an atomic explosion. It was like a blast furnace. It shattered almost all the windows in the building."

Fontana said about 20 employees were in the building at the time, but none was hurt. A 20-foot section of wing was left in front of the building.

"There was a big noise," said witness Tony Atkins, 26, of Ecorse, Mich., who was driving on Middlebelt Road at the time of the crash. "It hit the viaduct and went boom. There were bits and pieces flying everywhere, a lot of car accidents. It was raining parts, clothes, luggage, parts of bodies, everything."

ings previously envisioned. "Once you have the exception, expansion is much easier," said Nancy Roth, a member of a citizens coalition opposed to the water and sewer plants. She questioned why the utility asked to use 40 acres on the 50-acre plant site for percolation ponds if it did not plan to increase capacity later on.

Before the company withdrew its request for the zoning exceptions, Roth said she other members of the coalition were concerned about the potential for environmental damage from the plants and whether the facilities would be compatible with surrounding land uses.

County staff had not seen compatibility as a problem, according to comments from development review committee members. The planning department had no objection to the plants. Also, zoning coordinator Markley said her compatibility concerns could have been taken care of by landscaping and other methods of buffering.

But the county staff did have other concerns, including:

- The impact an emergency discharge of effluent into Lake Mills would have on the lake.

- Under what circumstances could an emergency discharge of effluent occur?

- How much effluent would drain off the site?

The county's environmental services department also wanted a status report on problems Southern States Utilities is having with its present sewer plant. The department noted the utility's DER permit expired in 1984 and a new one has not been issued, though the company has applied for it.

The department also wanted to know more about what the company is doing to repair a faulty lift station that last year caused a spill.

Markley said that any new sites selected by the utility company would still need zoning exceptions because no zoning exists in Chulutoa and Chulavista that permits sewer and water plants.

...Enrollment

population has grown to 254,837 as of April 1, 1987.

Of the number of people now living in the county, Hastings said 16.9 percent will be enrolled in Seminole schools.

The enrollment projected for Seminole schools in August last year was 42,946 students. On May 29 of this year student enrollment was already up to 42,968. That gave the school district 22 students more than its projected enrollment for that period.

"Those projections were made a couple of years ago," Coleman said. She added the figures were felt to be somewhat conservative at the time they were made.

Coleman said the second phase of a $113 million comprehensive building project — expanding some schools' capacity to accommodate more students — which the school district has been working on this year — should help in providing space needed for new and existing students. There are three phases in the building project, which Coleman said is being financed mostly by a school bond issue.

Phase two of the project includes the remodeling, renovation and additions to Casselberry, Lake Mary, Sterling Park, Red Bug, Geneva, Midway, Wilson, Woodlands and Goldsboro Elementary Schools.

The phase two building also includes a $14 million expansion and renovation project for Oviedo High School and $7.3 million project for Lake Howell High School.

The total cost of the construction and related work involved in phase two projects is approximately $41 million, Coleman said. She added that additions to Lake Brantley High School and Crooms School of Choice were also being completed with the phase two funds.

Work on improving Seminole High School's facilities under the phase three portions of the building program will begin this year, according to Coleman.

Seminole Schools will have a total of 4,469 employees ready to serve its students on the first day of school, Coleman said 2,434 of those employees are teachers.

Other ways Coleman said the school district had prepared for the new school year were in the area of school curriculum.

"Hundreds of teachers have participated in workshops and in-service training programs to update their skills and knowledge," she said.

A recent example of the workshops being attended by Seminole teachers is one in which it was suggested that students be encouraged to write, illustrate, and design their own books. Coleman said the workshop suggested students try to publish their own books.

According to Coleman, AIDS education is going to be implemented into the seventh grade science curriculum at some point during this school year. "The education will be part of a unit on sexually transmitted diseases," she said.

Parents, teachers and administrators have been working on the AIDS program over the past two years, Coleman said. It's hoped the program will be in place and running sometime at the middle of the year.

Students on the secondary levels will be encouraged to take classes in which they can earn college credit, she said. This has been done by the school system for a number of years, she added.

One of the major points in being able to handle the growth Seminole schools have experienced in past years has been the participation of parents and interested citizens in its programs, according to Coleman.

"We've been nationally recognized in the area of citizen participation," Coleman said. She stressed the School Board will continue to invite anyone interested to become active in school activities.

Coleman said anyone wishing more information on questions concerning Seminole County Schools should call the school board at 322-1252. She said it may be easier for anyone with a question about a particular school to place the call directly to the school.

future," he said.

Waller said he thinks Longwood will have one of the best programs in the state celebrating the 200th anniversary of the signing of the United States Constitution and in conjunction with this suggested the commission follow the example of the founding fathers and adopt a modified version of the Preamble to the Constitution.

His suggested version would be as follows: "We the City Commissioners of the City of Longwood, do hereby resolve to support and protect all the citizens of Longwood by promoting the public health, public welfare and public safety of the city. We pledge to support and endorse the policies and ordinances of the city in a direct and straight forward manner. We pledge to use our office of City Commissioners only for the benefit of the City. We pledge to work in harmony because we believe that public office is a public trust."

Also Monday night, Mayor Ed Myers is scheduled to proclaim the general election for Nov. 3 with the voters voting on commission races in Districts 1, 2, and 4 and four proposed charter amendments. Qualifying for candidates will be set for Sept. 4 to Sept. 11.

Other items on the agenda include:

- Public hearing on revision of requirements for parking and screening for commercial vehicles, boats, buses, trailers and trucks in residential and planned unit development districts.

- Public hearing and final vote on the annexation of the Allied Tire property at 1298 N. Highway 17-92; preliminary vote and first public hearing on assigning the Future Land Use Plan designation of general commercial to the property and an ordinance designating it C-3 General Commercial in the Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance.

- Public hearing revising the ordinance on fireworks displays.

- Site plan for Interlock Ceiling and Tile, Lots 30 and 34, Baywood Industrial Park. Applicant Ron Hubbard.

- Request for approval of attendance by Deputy Mayor June Lormann and Waller at the Florida League of Cities' Conference Oct. 14-17; and attendance at the International City Managers Association conference by Waller Oct. 24-29.

"The boldness of the Iranian navy personnel astonished the French," it boasted.

Reporters in helicopters over the Gulf of Oman spotted the French aircraft carrier Clemenceau sailing off the United Arab Emirates port of Fujairah. The Clemenceau is at the head of a battle group equipped with Exocet missiles.

Coast guard cutters and helicopters from the United Arab Emirates searched waters off Fujairah for a second day Sunday, but found no sign of five seamen, including British Capt. Gerry Blackburn, missing and presumed drowned after their supply vessel, the Anita, hit a mine Saturday and sank.

One other seaman died in the hospital Saturday after being pulled from the sea. The casualties were the first in the Gulf of Oman since the start of the gulf war.

Port officials at Fujairah are warning all vessels to stay clear of a 50-square-mile exclusion zone just north of the port "until further notice."

In Tehran, Parliament Speaker Ali Akbar Rafsanjani warned Sunday that "mining the Persian Gulf is like sowing seeds."

Outcry Over Rape Case Changes California Law

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter in your column from "Outraged in California," concerning Lawrence Singleton, who was found guilty of raping a teen-age girl, chopping off her arms with an ax and leaving her for dead in a ditch.

He was sentenced to 14 years in prison, served eight years, and then, because of a "flawed law," was released for "good behavior." You rightly suggested that the "flawed law" be changed.

I want you and your readers to know that the Singleton case contributed to the passage of subsequent legislation that imposed full consecutive sentences for violent sex offenders. If Singleton were sentenced today, he would receive a sentence of 31 years, plus a life term!

MIKE ROOS, SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE, CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE

DEAR SPEAKER ROOS: Thank you for setting the record straight. I understand that Singleton is presently living in a trailer on the grounds of San Quentin Prison, protected by two parole officers at the cost of $1,350 a day to ensure his safety. My readers are irate that their tax money is being spent to protect this man. And frankly, so am I. Read on for a sample of reader mail:

DEAR ABBY: "Outraged" wrote that California officials are paying $1,350 a day of taxpayers' money to protect Singleton, the rapist; $1,350 times 365 days equals $492,750! That's a cool half-million dollars a year! Who authorized this tremendous expenditure, and on what legal grounds? Is there a law that authorizes this protection? And if so, why aren't the same amenities provided for all prisoners released? Many of them face a hostile and unfriendly reception from the community after release, too.

Personally, I think the ideal place for Singleton is in the same culvert where he left that poor girl — minus his arms — but, of course, our system of "justice" doesn't provide for anything as inhumane as that. Instead they spend a half-million dollars a year to house, feed, clothe and protect him!

I will never be able to understand that kind of justice!

OUTRAGED, TOO, IN NYC

DEAR ABBY: Since this is the peak of the international travel season, I thought your readers might enjoy some travel tips. Armed with these, I guarantee they will get more than their money's worth:

THE ART OF TRAVELING

1. Travel lightly. Remember, you are not traveling for people to see you. Take only what you need, and leave your fancy clothes at home.

2. Travel expectantly. Every place you visit is a surprise package waiting to be opened. Untie the strings with an expectation of high adventure.

3. Travel hopefully. "To travel hopefully," wrote Robert Louis Stevenson, "is better than to arrive."

4. Travel humbly. Visit people and places with respect for their traditions and ways of life, as different as they may be from your own.

5. Travel courteously. Consideration for your fellow travelers and for all you meet along the way will enhance your pleasure.

6. Travel gratefully. Show appreciation for the many things done by others for your enjoyment and comfort.

7. Travel with an open mind. Leave all your prejudices at home.

8. Travel with curiosity. It's not how far you go, but how deeply you go that mines the gold of the experience.

9. Travel patiently. Take the time to understand people in other countries — especially when there are language barriers. Learn a few words, if only to say "hello" and "goodbye." The "natives" will love you for it.

10. Travel with the spirit of a world citizen. You'll discover people are basically much the same the world over. Appoint yourself an Ambassador of Good Will wherever you go.

JOSEPH C. GRYZMOWSKI, FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA.

DEAR MR. GRYZMOWSKI: Thank you for your helpful tips for those traveling abroad. They could be adapted for everyday living as we go through life — not just through customs.

Surgery May Help End Hand Problem

DEAR DR. GOTT — The middle finger of my right hand has pulled down into the palm. One doctor said it was carpal tunnel syndrome. Another doctor said it was Dupuytren's contracture. Who is right? What is the appropriate treatment?

DEAR READER — I believe that you have Dupuytren's contracture. This is a disorder of unknown cause in which tissue contracts around the finger-flexing tendons of the hand. As the contractions progress, the tendons themselves become foreshortened, causing the fingers to flex on the palm. The fourth and fifth fingers are most commonly affected, the third less often, the index finger and thumb never.

Dupuytren's contracture is a harmless but bothersome condition. If the finger flexion advances, a standard operation to release the tendons can be performed.

Carpal tunnel syndrome, the presence of a constricting band which pinches nerves at the wrist, almost always causes pain and tingling in the hand. To prevent muscle weakness from nerve malfunction, surgeons usually advise patients to have the wristband severed. This, too, is a fairly standard operation.

In your case, the simple flexing of one finger is most likely due to Dupuytren's, so you can elect to have it repaired at a time convenient for you and your doctor.

DEAR DR. GOTT — My son, 10, helps my husband and me feed our 400 calves. Pitching hay isn't so hard, but he also fills about 20 five-gallon buckets of cracked corn from the back of the pickup and lifts them out of the truck bed. Will this hurt his back? He loves to help and is as cheerful as can be.

DEAR READER — I do not believe that the amount of hard work and lifting your son performs is dangerous or unhealthy. If he is accustomed to doing his chores, willingly pitches in and does not complain of back pain, he is not going to do himself any harm; in fact, he probably is improving his own physical fitness while contributing valuable services to the family. You must be proud of him.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
Today's greedy declarer counted nine winners: seven club tricks, the diamond ace and a heart trick. If he tried the diamond finesse and it lost, the defenders could take no more than the A-K of spades and the heart ace, for a total of four tricks. So, not wanting to sacrifice a possible overtrick, South cheerfully played the queen of diamonds. East won the king and — surprise — led back a club. Declarer won and began running all his club tricks. Can you look ahead far enough to see what happened?

On the first five club tricks, declarer discarded a diamond, a heart and two small spades from dummy. What could declarer do on the sixth club? He could not safely throw a heart honor away, and letting a spade go would make the A-K-6 of spades in West's hand all winners. He had to pitch the diamond jack. Now what? He could play the last club, but that would squeeze dummy out of an outright winner or a stopper. And if he played one of dummy's suits without cashing the last club, he would not have enough tricks to make his game.

The mistake was made at trick one. If declarer takes the ace of diamonds and immediately leads the king of hearts, the defenders are helpless. They cannot stop South from making nine tricks. It was shortsighted of declarer to assume that East would tamely lead back a diamond if he won the king. Instead, South should have anticipated the possibility of the devastating club return by East and should have forsaken the diamond finesse at trick one.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...
 By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY AUGUST 18, 1987
 The aspects indicate that you'll be more enterprising in the year ahead than you have in the past. Of the numerous involvements that you'll experience, two appear to be big winners.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Members of the opposite sex are apt to find you more appealing than usual today. If there is someone in that category you'd like to impress, fire your best shot. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Two secret admirers have some nice things to say about you to others today. These people are interested in helping you improve your lot in life.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Lady Luck tends to favor you today where your newest interest is concerned. It's an exciting enterprise in which you've just gotten involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Material motives will furnish the incentive you need today to be an achiever. If you feel the stakes are worthy, success is almost a foregone conclusion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your judgment is keen today, and you won't be afraid to make snap decisions. In fact, your first assumptions will be remarkably accurate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try to be helpful to others today. Your kind gestures will make an indelible impression that will be long remembered after you've forgotten them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You may be Cupid's special assignment today. If so, he'll do whatever he can to make things pleasant for you and the one closest to your heart.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

Your creative juices will be flowing today, especially when doing things to beautify your surroundings. It's a good day to plant flowers, trim shrubs or cut the lawn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something in which you are involved with several friends today is in need of reorganization so that it can function better. You are the person with the know-how.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't leave situations that are of importance to you hanging financially today. You're on a lucky roll now, so capitalize on it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Matters of extreme personal importance can be advanced to your satisfaction today, especially if you take control of your own destiny.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Conditions for material accumulation look very promising for you today. Your gains could be derived in unorthodox ways from unusual sources.
