press secretary Jim Brady, shot in the brain during an assassination attempt on the president, is making "extraordinary" progress and is expected to survive, doctors said today.

Early assessments gave Brady little chance to survive without brain damage. But after 412 hours of surgery Monday, doctors were more optimistic — and they upgraded their prognosis more markedly this morning.

"We believe he is going to live," Dennis O'Leary, George Washington University's dean of clinical affairs, told a White House medical briefing today.

"Mr. Brady is much improved over his initial prognosis," O'Leary said. "He is responsive and is moving the right side of his body in response to command. We are guarded as to prognosis but his progress so far has been extraordinary.'

O'Leary said the right hemisphere of Brady's brain — not the dominant side suffered "fairly extensive damage" in the spatter of gunfire that also wounded the president and two lawmen.

The left side of Brady's brain, which controls his speech and motion, has "some minimal amount of damage,"

O'Leary said. "He is clearly receptive to commands," O'Leary said. "His eyes are open and his pupils are small and

Brady's surgeon, Dr. Arthur Kobrine, professor of neurosurgery, told Nofziger that he "feels there may be some impairment, but he doesn't know how much at this time nor will he be able to know for quite some time."

O'Leary said President Reagan had not been told about Brady's condition, and apparently had not asked about others wounded in the attack.

Lyn Nofziger, President Reagan's political director, told reporters about 8:15 p.m. EST Monday — six hours after the shooting - that Brady's vital signs were stable and "his pupillary reflexes the reflexes of his pupils in his eyes — are normal."

Pupillary reflexes are an indication of brain activity. Nofziger said, "The prognosis is certainly better at this moment than it was earlier this af-

More seriously wounded than Reagan were Secret Service agent Timothy J. McCarthy, 22, 'and Metropolitan policeman Thomas K. Delahanty, 45, who were caught in between Reagan and the gunman.

Reagan was not told of Brady's condition and did not know anyone else had been shot, he said.

The doctor said when Reagan walked into the hospital after the shooting he did not realize he was wounded, but thought he had bruised or cracked a rib when he was shoved into his limousine by Secret Service agents.

Without Bond At Quantico

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The stocky, blond college drop-out and drifter charged with trying to kill President Reagan is from a wealthy, conservative Republican family and has a history of psychiatric care.

John W. "Jack" Hinckley Jr., 25, the son of an Evergreen, Colo., oilman, has spent most of his life in Texas and was described by acquaintances there as a quiet, friendly young man who became a loner in college.

Authorities disclosed Hinckley, who has been wandering around the country for the past several months, was arrested last fall for trying to board an airliner with three handguns in Nashville, Tenn., when President Carter was in town.

And the leader of a neo-Nazi group in Chicago described Hinckley as an exmember who was expelled because "he wanted to shoot people and blow things

Charged with attempting to assassinate a president and assaulting a federal agent with a pistol, Hinckley today was in FBI custody at the Quantico Marine Base, where he will undergo psychiatric exam, FBI Director William Webster said.

Dressed in a navy blue shirt and trousers, Hinckley appeared Monday night at a preliminary examination in federal court, where the two felony charges against him were read and he was asked if he understood them.

Sanford Police Plan Daily 'Geriatric Guard'

By BRITT SMITH Herald Staff Writer

Martha sits at an upper window of her two-story Magnolia Avenue home, rocking slowly in a high-backed cane chair as she stares silently out at the rain making gray puddles in the dirt yard

The interior of the house is cold and still. There is no sound save the strained creaking of aging floorboards as the chair rocks back and forth.

Such is life when you're old and alone. Martha wil be 83 on April 12. There will be no one to help her blow out the candles on her cake. She never had children. The few friends she made during her six years in Sanford have all preceeded her 58 years, died last year of a stroke.

Sad as it is, Martha's case is not unique. There are a lot of people just like her; men and women, singly and in pairs, list of our older residents who live by how many? In other places, you read about them all the time — the infirm old woman who lies helplessly in bed staring down at the body of her dead husband who perhaps keeled over from a heart attack until she too simply starves to death. A neighbor or the postman may find them days later. No one knew they were there. Maybe no one cared.

But Police Chief Ben Butler cares. And he is determined that something like that won't happen in Sanford. He is organizing his men into a sort of geriatric guard, checking on old folks who live alone and who, at this point in their lives and health, may need constant watching, or who could just use a smile to the grave. And Roger, her husband of and a "Have A Nice Day" from a familiar face in the morning.

"It's not something real complicated," Butler said. "What we plan to do is get a who have no one. In Sanford, who knows themselves, and then everyday we'll either call them at home to make sure they're all right or go by and see them personally."

First, however, "we have to find out how many people there are like that in the community," Butler said. "So, what we would like them to do is call us at 322-4082 to let us know they would like to be a part of the program."

A police representative will be sent to the caller's home to determine if the person actually needs a geriatric guard and, if so, to collect certain information like the name and address of their closest relative, any medication they may be taking, and general habits.

After a master list has been compiled, "we'll call them in the morning, or send a car out at the beginning of the day shift," Butler said. "Each officer probably won't have that many in his patrol zone so it shouldn't take much time. We'll call most of them. One of our complaint clerks can probably do that in 15-30 minutes," he said. Butler warned, however, that "we're not going to get in a situation where we're running little old ladies to the post office or over to a friend's house. This is going to be on a strictly need basis." The spark for Butler's plan came in the form of a memo from City Manager W. E. "Pete" Knowles regarding a frail, elderly woman who lived alone in a big house and wanted to be checked on periodically.

"It got me thinking that if we could do it for her, we could do it for all the others like her," Butler said. "I feel it's a needed service that we can provide."

It's not a new idea. The Seminole County Sheriff's Office has been operating two similar programs -Project Concern and Lifeline - for several years.

He'd Rather Be In Philadelphia

WASHINGTON (UP1) - The situation was deadly serious but President Reagan couldn't resist a joke or two.

Shot in the chest, Reagan was being wheeled into surgery at George Washington University Hospital Monday when he called to his worried wife. 'Honey, I forgot to duck."

Doctors acknowledged the president might have been a little light-headed as he entered the operation room. "I hope you're all Republicans," Reagan said to the assembled surgeons. When Reagan emerged from the anesthesia, he could not speak because of tubes in his mouth. So he gave attendants a handwritten note that contained the same words the late humorist W.C.

Solidarity Suspends Strike After Reaching Compromise

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) - Poland's independent Solidarity union suspended a general strike threatened for today and won a government apology for a police attack on union members in Bydgoszcz to settle the nation's worst crisis since the summer strikes.

After seven hours of intense negotiations Monday, Solidarity and Government representatives reached a clock-stopping compromise, hailed by union leader Lech Walesa as a great achievement."

Solidarity said its national commission would meet in Gdanak today to "decide on the general strike's fate" and whether it should be postponed or canceled in light of the

As part of the compromise, the government admitted that a March 19 police assault on union activists occupying the city council building in the northwest town of Bydgoszcz "was clearly against the rule of solving all conflicts through political means."

The police beatings pitted the independent labor movement against the government in the worst labor confrontation since the Gdansk strikes last August. reviving fears in the West that Warsaw Pact troop maneuvers were a prelude to invasion.

Solidarity also accepted part of the blame for the Bydgoszcz incident, saying it may have been avoided if tensions had not surrounded a union-supported farmers sitin and a union propaganda campaign.

Phones Overloaded After Shooting

Both Southern Bell and Winter Park Telephone Co. circuits were overloaded for awhile Monday afternoon when it appeared most of their Seminole County customers were on the phone at once trying to pass along news of the Presidential assassination attempt.

Brad Johnson, spokesman for Winter Park Telephone Co. in Altamonte Springs, said all the circuits were busy and due to the high volume of calls in the area, customers had trouble completing calls. The rush which last for 11/2 to 2 hours, subsided about 4:30 p.m., Johnson said.

The firm serves customers in South Seminole, North Orange and the Orange City-Deltona-Lake Helen area. The southwest Volusia County customers did not experience problems during Monday afternoon's rush.

Woody Wilson, manager of Southern Bell's Sanford office. said the 32 Central Office here was "locked up momentarily when all available trunk lines and equipment were tied up." He said customers received a slow dial tone for about a half hour after the announcement of the shooting and then things calmed down.

PLO Claims Israelis Repelled

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Sea-borne Israeli commandos struck Palestinian targets along the Lebanese coast north of Tyre in an overnight raid, attacking guerrillas and destroying several vehicles, the military command announced today.

But in Beirut, Lebanon, the PLO said its guerrillas repelled the Israeli commandos as they tried to land troops on Lebanese shores Monday night, killing and wounding several of them in seven hours of artillery exchange.

The Israeli military command said all its forces returned safely but a Palestinian military spokesman said one Palestinian was killed and about five others were wounded in the artillery barrages between the guerrillas and Israeli gunboais and dinghies.

The Palestinian spokesman said the Israeli troops supported by two gunboats and eight dinghles "made several attempts" to land enemy troops near the port of Tyre.

"Our gunners chased them away foiling their schemes, killing and wounding several of their men." He said the duels began at 11 p.m. Monday and continued until 6 a.m. The state-run Beirut radio placed the casualties among the guerrillas at only four injured. The Israeli military command said: "A number of vehicles were destroyed and several terrorists hit, north of Tyre, 12.6 miles north of the Israeli-Lebanese border, the Israeli military command

Builder Asks Court Allow Casselberry High Rises

Herald Staff Writer

Seminole-Brevard Circuit Judge Robert McGregor was asked Monday to resolve a confrontation between the Bonaire Development Co. which wants to build several 10- and 11-story residential buildings in Casselberry, and the city, which likes its skyline just as it is.

In a lawsuit filed Monday against the city and three of its councilmen, Bonaire asks the court to order the city to approve the development plan for the proposed Carmel-By-The-Lake high-rise condominium project, and refrain from imposing any further limitations on the 44-acre planned development on Lake Howell.

Named as defendants in the suit are the city of Casselberry and three councilmen - Frank Schutte, Thomas Embree, and John Leighty - who on March 16 voted against the Bonaire

The plan, defeated by a narrow 3-2 vote, called for the construction of 13 buildings of 10-11 stories each containing 715 living units. A modified plan for 528 units with buildings of the same height was also defeated.

In the suit, Bonaire officials contend that they complied with all provision of the city zoning code which allows buildings of up to 100-feet high. They claim their condominium project was approved by the city's planning and zoning commission, the city planner, engineer, building inspector, and police and fire chiefs, before being rejected by the council.

An additional count of committing a lewd and lascivious act on a child was filed Monday by the Sheriff's office against C. Lonnie Earnest, bringing to six the number of such charges pending against the former minister of music at a Baptist Church in Sanford.

The latest charge stems from an incident which reportedly occurred between October and December last year on the church bus when Earnest allegedly put his hand up the dress of a six-year-old girl and fondled the child, according to the complaint filed by the child's parents.

Guardian Angels To Patrol Miami

MIAMI (UPI) - Miami, a city with no subways but much crime, will get a hand from the Alliance of Guardian Angels a band of T-shirted, beret-wearing self-appointed crimefighters who began patrolling the subways of New York and now search for crime in five cities.

"There is plenty of crime here, and there is also a youth population which needs a positive focus for its energy," said Lisa Evers, second in command of the youth group, which makes citizens arrests and claims to be a "psychological deterrent" to crime.

Lawyer Ired Over FP&L Rate Hike

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) - Public Counsel Jack Shreve is upset enough about a $148 million interim rate increase given Florida Power & Light Co. to consider appealing to the state Supreme Court.

The Public Service Commission voted 4-0 for the rate hike Monday, which will take effect with May's bills and mean an increase of $3.43 cents for the average residential customer.

"I think what they did is way out of line," said Shreve, who represents consumers in rate cases before the PSC.

FP&L, serving 1.5 million customers in south Florida and along the east coast, asked for an interim increase of up to $220 million while the PSC acted on its petition for a $476 million permanent

The purpose of interim hikes is to bring a utility up to the minimum profit level allowed in its last rate increase. Only $51 million would be necessary in the FP&L case, Shreve said.

The Supreme Court generally refuses to hear an appeal on an interim increase because it doesn't become final until the decision on the full case is

"We'll certainly look at this thing closely to see if there is any basis for a Supreme Court appeal now." Shreve said.

A decision on the full rate case will come this fall after the PSC holds public hearings around the state and studies the company's financial situation in FP&L customers will get refunds plus interest if the permanent rate hike is less than the interim amount.

The Miami-based utility's average residential bill would have been $64.32, based on a higher fuel adjustment charge approved by the commission last week. It now will be $67.75, a $10.66 boost over the current bill.

Voting for the rate hike were PSC Chairman Joe Cresse and Commissioners Gerald Gunter, John Marks and Susan Leisner. Commissioner Katie Nichols did not participate in Monday's meeting. Earlier Monday, commissioners rejected Shreve's petition for a full-fledged hearing on the interim proposal.

PSC staff had recommended a $75.1 million interim rate hike, saying they thought the commission had to use as a starting point FP&L's average investments and expenses over 1980 instead of end-of-the-year figures as requested by the

If the PSC did go with a socalled "year-end" rate base, a $161.3 million increase would be proper; the Commissioners concluded they had the authority for the year-end rate base, but made a couple of adjustments resulting in a slighly lower amount than the $161 million.

Shreve said he doesn't believe a year-end base is allowable in an interim rate case.

FP&L argued initially the commission had the option of granting either $220 million or $211 million in interim relief, depending on whether its "test year" for calculation purposes was "historical" the 12 months of 1980 — or projected — revenue and expenses as they are estimated to be for all of 1981.

It dropped this argument earlier this month and agreed to go with the historical test year. It claimed to be entitled to $211 million in interim increases under this approach.

The PSC also rejected a motion by Shreve that it reconsider its recent decision to give Tampa Electric Co. a rate increase.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The four children of President Reagan gathered at the White House today with first lady Nancy Reagan to visit the hospital where their father was recovering from an assassination attempt.

Michael and Maureen Reagan and Patti Davis flew during the night from Los Angeles International Airport to Andrews AFB aboard an Air Force C-141. Their motorcade arrived at the White House southwest gate before dawn and they went inside the mansion to visit Mrs. Reagan.

The presidnt's younger son, Ronald Prescott Reagan, was at the White House with Mrs. Pangan during the night.

Ron, 23, was to have danced Monday night with the Joffrey II ballet company at the University of Nebraska. He and his wife, Dora. flew to Washington on a chartered flight to join Mrs. Reagan Monday at George Washington University Hospital.

BUILDER ROCKWELL INTERNATIONAL, IT 15 THE MOST COMPLEX -1" FLYING MACHINE EVER April 10 Launch Date New Boost For Shuttle

By AL ROSSITER JR. UPI Science Editor

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) - The Kennedy Space Center manager for the space shuttle project said he would recommend today that April 10 be officially set as the blast-off date for the Columbia's oft-delayed maiden test flight.

Robert H. Gray said a review Monday showed the winged spaceship, the ground launch equipment, and solid rocket booster retrieval operation were ready for the 5412hour voyage of John W. Young and Robert L. Crippen 36 times around the Earth.

"We are prepared and ready to commence a launch countdown this weekend." said Gray, who spent last Friday helping search for survivors in the rubble of a collapsed condominium in nearby Cocoa Reach.

Gray's recommendation goes to acting space agency administrator Alan Lovelace for consideration at a today's meeting of shuttle officials. They plan to review the state of readiness of all aspects of the Columbia's preparations, including the worldwide tracking network and Houston's mission control center. The project is already 212 years behind schedule.

Launch director George Page said technicians began working Sunday toward the April 10 launch date.

At the oceanside launch pad, technicians wearing protective suits were to complete hazardous hydrazine fuel-loading operations today. Work fell several hours behind Monday because of a variety of minor difficulties.

The corrosive liquid, which gives off poisonous fumes, is used to drive turbines, which in turn power hydraulic system pumps in the Columbia itself and in its twin solid-propellant booster rockets.

Because the Columbia is part airplane as well as part rocket, it uses hydraulic power ! to operate the control surfaces that it requires for lighing hir the atmosphere. A separate hydraulic system steers the nozzles on the shuttle's twin rockets.

Young and Crippen were in Houston Monday for still another rehearsal in a computer-controlled spacecraft trainer. —

Report On The 'Welfare Industry'

An expert on welfare reform has observed that it would be technically possible to reduce the cost of welfare programs by 25 percent and still accomplish their purpose. But whether this is politically possible, he adds, is another question.

The reason for doubt is the power of the welfare industry" — government agencies administering welfare programs, and organizations representing their clients.

Charles J. Hobbs, a former welfare official in California and author of many studies of potential reforms, describes the problem in a paper published by Heritage Foundation earlier this year. It explains what is happening in Washington

At the first indication of the smallest reduction in the least defensible program, special interest groups created and supported by the welfare industry will descend on Congress to protest. They will appear either as helpless victims of a vindictive cutback, or as a political power group whose welfare rights' have been violated."

It was predictable, then, that the Reagan adminstration would be accused of being heartless in proposing cutbacks in Food Stamps, Medicaid, Aid to Families with Dependent Children and other programs for the poor. Nor is it unusual to hear eligibility for these programs defended as some kind of constitutional right.

What is new is that the old subject of welfare reform is back before Congress with more steam behind it than it has ever had before. Even congressional Democrats are growing resistant to the pleas of the welfare industry. The need to put a rein on welfare entitlements" can no longer be debated solely in terms of social policy. It is an issue of economic necessity.

The White House finds it necessary to reconcile its budget policies with a social policy that recognizes the government's obligation to the truly needy." This should not be difficult. A Congressional Study several years ago provided a classic example of how income security programs have piled up to distort the purpose of the welfare

The study demonstrated that a mother with four children qualifying for aid to Families with Dependent Children was also entitled to benefits from 14 other programs. She theoretically is eligible for cash payments and in-kind benefits equivalent in value to three times the median income for a working woman.

The AFDC program and all 14 of the others could be defended as meeting a need," but it is hardly defensible for the government to be providing a non-working mother with a living standard considerably higher than that which a working mother can provide for her children. This does not result from fraud or abuse, but from the success of the welfare industry in preventing reform and consolidation of programs with overlapping aims.

As Health and Human Services Secretary Richard Schweicker was explaining to Congress recently, the number of families that would lose AFDC benefits under the Reagan budget is a deceptive measure of its impact. Most of the affected families, he said, have other income that has been ignored in calculating their eligibility for AFDC or the amount of their AFDC benefits.

Ever since welfare reform went on the congressional agenda a decade ago, there has been no lack of understanding of what was technically possible to achieve. The fate of the Reagan budget may reveal whether reform is politically possible as well.

SCIENCE WORLD Watching Coal Burn

burn from the inside out. Now the most intimate secrets of a commonplace energy combustion process are being observed and filmed with an X-ray analytical technique developed by scientists from General Electric's Schenectady, N.Y., research center.

With the new method, researchers hope to learn things about coal that will lead to cleaner combustion and more efficient ways to convert America's most abundant energy resource into synthetic gas and liquid fuels.

The technique, still in its infancy, has already won rave reviews from coal experts with the British National Coal Board and its West German research equivalent, Bergbau Forschung, But practical applications, which could also be important for the extraction of oil from shale and depleted oil fields, still lie

"Our research into this previously unexplored area constitutes part of a growing scientific foundation from which environmentally cleaner and more efficient coal conversion systems could evolve," said Dr. Roland W. Schmitt, the GE vice president for corporate research.

To peer inside a burning lump of coal, GE researchers designed and built a special furnace about the size of a bread box, but capable of reaching temperatures as high as 1,000 degrees Centigrade.

The furnace, equipped with thermocouples for mapping temperatures in the coal and surrounding areas, was then inserted in a CT (for committed tomography) X-ray scanner, the device that has revolutionized medical diagnoses of the human body since it was introduced at hospitals in the early 1970s.

At a March presentation to the American Physical Society in Phoenix, GE chemical physicist Donald Maylotte showed X-ray photographs and time-lapse movies the scanner made of coal combustion.

The films, for the first time, showed clearly how a lump of coal is transformed from a relatively dense solid to a highly porous foam as it starts to break down chemically when

The density change results from "cracking," a term that describes the breakup of a complex compound of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen like coal or crude oil.

"We could see inside the coal and made a movie," said GE thermal and fuel science manager James Comly. "That's never been done before."

Comly said the film showed how the coal first loses humidity and begins pyrolysis with tars vaporized and heavy hydrocarbon compounds breaking up.

At about 400 degrees Centigrade, chemical bonds weaken and fail, releasing an assortment of gases like hydrogen, methane, carbon monoxide and hydrogen sulfide and other hydrocarbons. The gases were piped from the sealed, nitrogen-filled furnace into a mass spectrometer for measurement and analysis.

The researchers monitored the burning of the coal lump with a special television camera and computer-reconstructed color images of the CT X-ray coal scans.

GE, which has acquired the coal mining concern Utah International, concedes that it still knows very little about coal. But experts in the steel, oil and coal industries have already glimpsed vast possibilities.

OUR READERS WRITE

He Returned Gauntlet

The suit which I filed in U.S. District Court in Orlando on March 19 seeking damages for violation of my right to due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, probably would have been avoided if the commissioners of Seminole County had not flatly refused to hear my complaint almost a year ago concerning the high-handed attitude of the county's animal control officials.

At that time two of my Nubian milk goats were seized near my front gate by an animal control officer. I was at home at the time, not more than a hundred yards away, but this man made no attempt to call me or inform me that my animals had escaped from my pasture. A neighbor phoned me and told me what was happening, and it was only because this neighbor shamed the animal control official into releasing my animals that they were not hauled

I wrote letters to all five county commissioners asking to be allowed to present my complaint, and suggestions for a remedy, to the commission. A week later I was told that none of the commissioners was "interested" in hearing my complaint. I could not sue because I had not actually been damaged.

On March 13, two of my milk goats were seized and carted off to animal control facilities about 3 miles from my farm. When I went to claim them, I was told I must pay a $100.00 fine to secure their release. If the fine was not paid, the animal control people could kill or otherwise dispose of my goats. I was told there is no provision in the county ordinance to allow me to have a trial before paying the fine.

I paid. Then I sued!

I realized that any attempt to get a hearing to present my grievances to the county commissioners would be little more than an exercise in futility, since these elected men and women appear to take the position that "We are the law," and citizens have no right to complain.

Well. I have news for them! This time I will be heard! A U.S. District Judge will preside at that hearing. If I am successful in having this county ordinance struck down as unconstitutional, Seminole County may be faced with the task of refunding all fines collected by the animal control department during the past several years, as well as paying any damages the U.S. District Court decides is just.

Under the protection of the "due process" clause of the 14th Amendment, every citizen who is accused of any offense is entitled to confront his accuser and to be tried by a court of proper jurisdiction before he can be assessed a fine or other punishment.

Under the terms of the animal control ordinance, the accuser becomes the judge, the jury and the executioner! It is too late now for any arbitration.

The commissioners of Seminole County seem determined to ignore the fact that laws are supposed to be made to protect the people, not to harass them. A year ago, when they refused to hear my legitimate complaint, they "flung the gauntlet." Now I have flung it back! Rev. Dr. Merle E. Parker, D.D.

DON GRAFF

Of The Oxes And The Perks

More than a few oxes are being gored these days in the process of trimming the federal budget, as you've probably heard.

Repeatedly. Most of the attention is being directed at the heavyweights in the herd - welfare programs, mass transit, state and local government grants and the like. One of the smaller fellows, however, is in line for what might be taken as one of the unkindest cuts.

Considering that an actor emeritus is in the White House, arts and letters might expect in other times and circumstances to be in a favored situation rather than on a hit list. But those are not the circumstances of these times and the arts, as represented in the budget by the National Endowment for the Humanities, stand to lose in the 1982 budget half of their federal funding, dropping from $169 million of $85 million.

But now an encouraging word from a potential sponsor. The reduction need not have a withering effect on music, literature and the rest of the humanities, according to Ian Rolland, president of the Indiana-based Lincoln National Corp., because the private sector can be expected to pick up much or most of the slack.

Some changes are, however, to be expected. Private donors, both corporate and individual, can be expected to be more critical of the nature and effectiveness of assisted programs than government bureaucracy is inclined to be.

"Inevitably, some causes and projects of marginal worth are going to be squeezed out by others that seem more pressing," Rolland recently informed an Indiana conference on the humanities. "Those that are to survive will have to present a strong case in a manner that is clear and understandable."

-Further, the "ethical-and philosophicalquestions" that have been raised by government's use of public moneys for the benefit of certain groups must also be considered by corporations planning to dispense funds belonging to their stockholders.

Well, yes, fine. OK. But whatever became of art for the sake of art? In the new businesslike order, are there to be any openings for the avant grade, that noncongormism of today that in retrospect so often turns out to have set the new standards for tomorrow?

That's a question for time to answer. As to whether corporate America actually will pick up the funding slack in the arts, there is no question that Rolland, head of one the nation's largest insurance firms, is perfectly situated to practice what he is preaching.

Corporate America may be required to do some fiscal adjusting itself early on in the new administration. Involved is a possible revision of tax policy under such privileges of the executive suite would no longer be exempt. Such corporate status perks as company-supplied cars for personal use, company-paid club memberships, low-interest loans and more, much more, that compensate for the high tax rates on high incomes would be treated as income. It is not a new concept. The Internal Revenue Service has considered it a revenuraising possibility for some time but it has also been the subject of some controversy there and elsewhere, most notably Congress. The latter barred the IRS for a time from taking action, a moratorium that expires this June 1. Unless Congress repeats itself before then, or the administration takes a negative position, the IRS could begin cutting itself in on executive perks.

Army Fights Chance To Buy Cheaper

WASHINGTON — Loeb Julie is a 60-yearold inventor and businessman, the son of Polish immigrants. His given name means "lion," and right now he is roaring with outrage at the U.S. Army.

The thorn in Loeb Julie's paw is the Army's stubborn refusal to purchase the hightechnology, low-cost calibrators his company makes, sticking instead to more expensive, less efficient calibrators — including even outmoded manually operated models.

Calibrators, it should be explained, are vital to the efficient operation of military equipment. Even your neighborhood grocer's scales must be calibrated regularly to ensure honest measure for your money.

In the military, improper calibration is far more costly than an ounce or two of pastrami or cheese. Poorly calibrated torque wrenches used to tighten bolts in Army helicopters, for example, were a cause of crashes in the Vietnam War.

What has infurated Julie is that the Army deliberately rejected his improved calibration equipment in favor of inferior machines, and then justified its decision with a runaround that reds like a combination of Franz Kafka and "Catch-22."

As part of my continuing series on waste in the Pentagon, here's Loeb Julie's story: Julie grew up in The Bronx, where his father owned a small bakery. He earned an engineering degree, turned to inventing and sank the family's entire savings — $19,000 into starting his own technology firm, Julie Research Laboratories.

His super-calibration unit is easily portable, does better work than the Army's present models and could save $200 million over a 10-year period, Julie claims.

Julie is not the only one who's impressed with his brainchild. One of the government's top intelligence experts told my associates Indy Badhwar and Charles Bermant: "The Julie equipment is a technological breakthrough."

Private purchasers like Grumman Aircraft have used Julie's calibrator and have praised it. Officials of the Army's own Harry Diamond Laboratory and the White Sands

Missile Range have attested to the Julie system's greater competence. A months-long investigation by the General Accounting Office turned up not a single error in Julie's

And the Russians want Julie's calibrator. While he was running into bureaucratic brick walls at the Pentagon, Soviet representatives invited him to Moscow, where in 1977 he met with several high-level scientists. The Russians placed an order. But when he got home. Julie decided he didn't want to sell his marvelous machine to the Kremlin, and tore up the order.

"The Julie technology would help the Russians improve the accuracy of Soviet missiles by 10 percent to 15 percent, which is enough to knock out our land-based Minuteman missiles," an intelligence source

Only the Pentagon generals remained unimpressed. They juggled cost figures and test results to prove that Julie's equipment couldn't possibly be as good as claimed. At one point, he says, they arbitrarily tripled his offering price to make their current calibrators look better. In desperation, Julie turned to a secret weapon: ridicule. He hired a cartoonist, Dick Hafer, to produce a comic book telling the JRL story. It is factual, funny - and devastating in its caricatures of Pentagon

The comic book may have hardened the Army generals' hearts, but it succeeded in catching the attention of several influential members of Congress, including Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., and Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y. Their investigators are now looking into Julie's charges of Army waste and miscon-

Last week, Julie acknowledged ruefully that maybe all his troubles with the Pentagon can be traced to the name of his calibrator.

It's called "LOCOST." Footnote: A government spokesman insisted the Army's calibration system "is the best anyone has going today ... We just didn't have a requirement for what Julie offered."

Tax Hike Probable, But Will It Be Gas Or Sales?

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) -Legislative leaders appear willing to raise taxes this session, but they're bickering over what would cause them the least trouble in next year's elections - raising the gas tax or the sales tax.

The House leadership and Gov. Bob Graham are insisting on the gas tax route. Senate leaders, generally opposed to new taxes and adamant that government spending be kept to a minimum, are pushing for a penny sales tax plan that would raise twice as much money.

The last time the Legislature raised taxes - in 1977 - it fought through the 60day regular session and wound up extending one month.

The House and Senate seem to be just as divided this year, so legislators might be unwise to make any vacation plans for early June.

As part of his $10 billion proposed budget for 1981-82, Graham recommended the state start collecting the sales tax on gas - a move adding six cents to the eight-cent-a gallon present gas levy. The gas sales tax would increase as the price of fuel rises.

Graham did toss a "sweetner" into his complicated tax package, which also includes higher license tag fees for big trucks, a boost in the documentary stamp tax and repeal of some corporate profits tax exemptions.

Under Graham's plan, Floridians no longer have to renew the tag on their car or small truck every year. They would buy a tag or renewal sticker at the current price beginning in July of 1982 and it would be valid as long as they owned the vehicle.

House Speaker Ralph Haben has been advocating a repeal of the gasoline sales tax exemption for months, so he quickly endorsed the governor's plan.

But Senate President W.D. Childers surprised Haben and House leaders when he said the Senate wouldn't pass a gas tax increase of any sort, but probably would approve a penny sales tax in-

"The people don't buy the argument that the sales tax is regressive. They think it's the fairest tax known to man," Childers said last week. "They're not asking for any taxes, but if they must have one, they would prefer it to be the sales tax."

Graham first proposed a gas tax increase a year ago, saying the current levy wasn't raising enough revenues and there is a critical need for more money for interstate construction, resurfacing of state roads and mass transit systems.

The Department of Transportation needs another $300 million a year, about the net gain to the state from Graham's "take, but give some of it back" package. A penny boost in the four cent per dollar sales tax would generate $710 million.

That $710 million, Childers says, would meet transportation needs, provide more money for education, law enforcement and economic development, which along with transportation are generally viewed as state government's top priorities, and enable the Legislature to continue some of the programs to be cut as President Reagan and Congress balance the national budget.

And, the Senate president notes gleefully, there would be money for property tax relief "which the people are literally crying for."

Childers has a "sweetner" for his proposal too. He said Floridians aren't really burdened by the sales tax because food, medicine and other necessities are exempted. They'll be willing to pay a growth in their tax rolls. penny more in sales tax if their property taxes go down, he argues.

skeptical about the Childers proposal, of state coffers, they ask.

but they say they'll give it a close look if it actually clears the Senate.

House leaders say they might go along with a sales tax increase, but not a whole penny increase. A half-a-cent hike would be enough for everything on the Childers' list except property tax relief.

Florida's property taxes already were among the lowest in the country, but they went down twice in the last year because of increases in the homestead exemption.

Property tax relief in conjunction with a penny sales tax increase would be false relief, says House Appropriations Chairman Herb Morgan of Tallahassee.

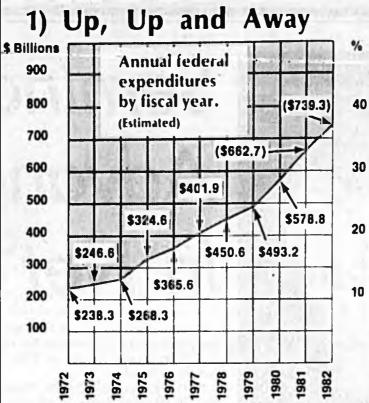

The state may find itself in another financial bind in a few years. Another sales tax increase would be out of the question, so the Legislature will raise property taxes to provide adequate funding for the public schools as it did in the mid-1970's.

"We ought to save that half a penny," Morgan says.

Graham also has recommended property tax relief, but not with state dollars. His tax relief plan would be subsidized by school districts, which would be giving up $200 million in revenues they would normally get from

If he's really in favor of property tax relief, why is he opposed to the penny House leaders and Graham remain sales tax increase which would fund it out

Researchers Find Religious Current Sweeping The U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) - Americans are experiencing a widespread religiousness that is spontaneous and diffuse and has no connection with the "Moral Majority," a wide-ranging new public opinion poll finds.

It is not a new-time relgion. It is a spiritual renaissance built on the morality on which this nation was founded, but which ran into rough times in the 1960s and '70s, years of disillusionment which social scientist John Crothers Pollock said were "rarely witnessed in American history."

Dr. Pollock, a former professor at Rutgers University, headed the research team that compiled the nine-month study released Tuesday, called "American Values in the '80s: the Impact of Belief." The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co., founded in 1846, underwrote the 337-page report done by Research & Forecasts, New York. Seventy-four percent of all Americans consider themselves religious, 75 percent frequently feel that God loves them, and approximately one half engage in prayer and attend religious services, the study showed. In addition, 26 percent of the population - about 45 million people - consider themselves highly religious.

"I never expect again as a social scientist to see anything as powerful in explaining so much of what Americans do," said Pollock, in an interview. "People are judging things in moral terms ... they are using religion privately and in the public sphere."

Pollock, in an interview, said most of the study was done before Ronald Reagan became president. He believes that America's deeply religious sense never faltered, but disillusionment began from the Bay of Pigs on, when as the survey states, people found that "presidents could lie to us on matters of supreme importance to our survival.

"President Johnson's subsequent justification for the deployment of U.S. Marines to the Dominican Republic in 1965 was challenged in our own press, an unusual event. The Tet Offensive in Vietnam in 1968, the publication of the Pentagon Papers, Watergate, and the impeachment proceedings against former President Nixon, produced a level of distillusionment rarely witnessed in American history."

Said Pollock, "We found that the American people admire morality over competence. Leaders liked least (in the study) were Richard Nixon (because of what respondents called dishonesty) and Jimmy Carter (called lacking in effectiveness)."

Most admired were John F. Kennedy and Abraham Lincoln," said Pollock. "Of course Kennedy and Lincoln were martyrs. Martin Luther King, Jr., was among the most admired ... he too was a martyr. Only one general was mentioned, Dwight D. Eisenhower."

Connecticut Mutual underwrote the research project because it wanted to find the influences and directions in American thinking and behavior as we moved into the 1980s. The focus on religion and morality developed as the study went

Among the general public, there were 2,019, hour-long telephone interviews including blacks, senior citizens and the young aged 14 to 20. In addition, a questionnaire went to leaders in business, law and justice, education, government, military, news media, religion, science and voluntary assocations.

All told, researchers gathered 3,362 replies.

Researchers did not go by denomination or church attendance in defining religion but asked eight questions on "how frequently do you do each of the following:"

-Feel that God loves you, engage in prayer, attend regular religious services, read the Bible, have something you call a religious experience, participate in church social activity, encourage others to turn to religion or listen to religious

Although the most religous tended to be older than the general population as a whole, the survey found that those in their teens, 20s, 30s and 40s were particularly likely to say that religion would become much more important to them if they had only six months to live.

Pollock said this "religous current sweeping" the United States today does not appear to be a conscious organization movement ... but rather a gradual cultural shift, an impulse throughout the country in small towns and cities at grassroots level, happening to majorities of peoples of varying cultural

He doubts if such visible and politically active organizations as the Moral Majority have anything to do with the resurgence. "The Moral Majority is just riding a wave," said the research scientist. "This is a more profound wave, lying at the very heart of American culture ... helping people who are dissatisfied to express concerns in a deeper way ..." The traumas of the '60s and '70s are not past us, he said, "but this is an effort to reconcile, to get back to what we have in common. America is the most religious industrialized country in the world ...

"We have almost too many choices today in consumer goods, marriage options ... we have to return to something we all believe in, the common basis for existence of our society." The survey made these other points:

-Among leaders, the two groups coming closest to those the public believes in are the clergy and businessmen.

-The public looks first for honesty in its leaders, followed (and not closely) by intelligence, with competence way down

-Leaders place both intelligence and leadership ability ahead of honesty.

-People still believe in the American dream, 80 percent seeing America as offering opportunity for financial security to all those willing to work hard.

-Americans attach tremendous importance to their personal relationships. "Going out of your way to help a friend" is given much more importance than either "being with friends" or "making new friends."

-Sixty-three percent say they derive much more satisfaction from their relationships with their spouses or intimate companions than from any other aspect of life. -Most Americans (56 percent) say, however, if unhappily married, they would be prepared to seek divorce rather than "reconciling problems at all costs." -Some 85 percent judge adultery morally wrong, with women's disfavor running only six percent ahead of men's (89 to 83 percent). Similarly, homosexuality and lesbianism are condemned about equally by more than seven of every 10 men

-Men and women agree on far more issues than disagree. And when the sexes do answer differently, they generally are only about 10 or fewer percentage points apart.

The pressure Monday night to call off the NCAA finals was great. The Academy Awards had been postponed and the New York Stock Exchange closed early.

As the president remained in surgery, rumors of the game's postponement persisted as the meeting between NCAA tournament officials and officials from Indiana and North

"Based upon the reports we have obtained in the past couple of minutes, we have decided to proceed as planned with the championship game," said Wayne Duke, chairman of the NCAA Division I basketball committee.

"Following consultation with all officials, the tournament committee decided to proceed in that manner. The coaches of the competing teams were consulted separately concerning the matter."

In reality, the NCAA tournament committee didn't have much choice. The Philadelphia 76ers had reserved the Spectrum court for an NBA playoff game tonight. Most of the spectators in the sellout crowd of 18,276 were from out of town and had made travel plans

"It was not until after the doors of the Spectrum were opened before the first game that the report relative to the President being injured as a result of the gunshot was made available to us." Duke said.

A prayer was offered before the game by Dr. Donald Fulton, vice chancellor of student affairs at North Carolina, followed by a moment of silence and the national anthem. Normally, the national anthem is played when the players are in the locker room and without the attention of national television cameras.

MVP Isiah Paces Indiana 63-50 Victory

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) - When they give out the Academy Awards in Hollywood tonight, high on the list of of "The Philadelphia Story."

The Hoosiers, returning to the site of their last championship in 1976, captured the NCAA crown Monday night with a powerful performance in a 63-50 victory over North Caroli.

"I've never seen a group of kids stay with a goal or work harder toward an end they had set for themselves," said Indiana coach Bobby Knight, "Never losing sight of the fact that they had to improve."

Indiana, which began the year in disarray with a 7-5 record, regrouped in astonishing fashion. The Hoosiers went on to win the Big Ten title before burying Maryland, Alabama-Birmingham, St. Joseph's and Louisiana State en route to the title game. In all, their average margin of victory during the five tournament games was nearly 23 points.

Backed by All-America Isiah Thomas the tournament's Most Valuable Player - with 23 points and Randy Wittman with 16, the Hoosiers thwarted North Carolina's bid to at last win an NCAA title for Coach Dean Smith.

Indiana led 27-26 at the half on a buzzer shot by Wittman from the corner. Then came the charge of the Knight brigade.

The Hoosiers opened the second half with a fury. They went on a 12-4 burst with Thomas hitting four baskets and making two steals. That brought the nominees should be Indiana's remake __score to 39-30 and the Tar Heels were all but through.

Thomas, who made 7-of-10 shots from the floor in the second half after going 1of-7 in the first half, did not think his performance after intermission was the

"I thought the most important play of the game was Randy at the end of the half," he said. "It gave us momentum and we went up one point and we reasserted ourselves. He did a hell of a job when he hit that shot at the end of the half. I think that was the single most important play."

Wittman said the Hoosiers adjusted to the news of the assassination attempt on President Reagan in Washington earlier in the day.

"It was a tragic thing," he said. "We felt for him and the other people that were shot but we had a national championship on the line and we had to go out and play."

Reagan Shot Heard 'Round Tournament

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) - They played a basketball game for the national collegiate championship Monday night while the minds of many were elsewhere.__

The fact that President Reagan was the target of a would-be assassin's bullet earlier Monday was just beginning to sink in as the sellout crowd began pouring into the Spectrum. Many people asked reporters for the latest updates on the president's condition in Washington.

Yet they came to see a basketball game, and the NCAA decided to go on with its showcase contest despite pressures to postpone it.

And in the end, it turned into Indiana's showcase. The Hoosiers, combining a 23-point performance by tournament MVP Isiah Thomas with their customary vise-like defense, repeated history with a 63-50 victory over North Carolina.

It was the second national title for Indiana, 26-9, in the past six seasons. Its last crown came on the same Spectrum plans to leave the city today. After meeting with NCAA officials and officials of both schools, Wayne Duke, chairman of the NCAA basketball committee, announced the game would be played some 30 minutes before the scheduled tipoff "based upon reports we have obtained in the past several minutes."

The Tar Heels, in their third title game under Smith and in search of their first national championship since 1957, eventually succumbed to the brilliant all-around play of Thomas. The sophomore All-America shot 7-for-

10 in the second half for 19 points. But it was Thomas' ballhawking ability that turned the game around. Thomas stole the ball four times in the second half, two of them early in the period when the Big Ten champions went on a 10-2 spurt to take a 39-30 lead on a Thomas layup with 15:33

North Carolina, 29-8, never came closer than 7 points after that.

CASSELBERRY - There seems to be only one flaw so far in construction of the new kennel compound which will house the sleek greyhounds racing this summer at Seminole Greyhound Park everyone in the neighborhood thinks a string of new condominniums is springing up.

"Construction workers have to keep explaining to people that they are not condominiums," said Seminole General Manager Carroll Toler recently. "Everyone wants to know who to contact about moving in. They are shocked when they learn it is a dog compound." No small wonder for the confusion, because the nearly-completed structures do resemble modern living quarters for people. And they are even more appealing when one checks out the private, concrete-walled "back-

Toler describes the kennel compound as the most modern in the nation, one which far exceeds state specifications.

"There is a telling factor in the fact there are only 20 kennels being built," Tolar went on. "We only plan to run 20 kennels at the track. We want our kennel owners to be assured of a profitable operation."

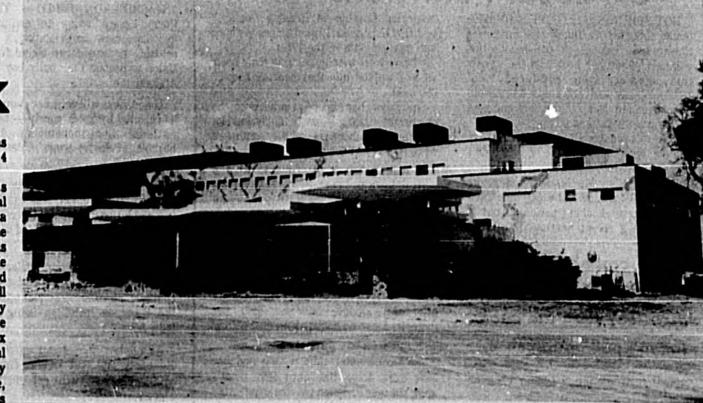

The kennel compound is located about three miles from the track. Construction is 90 percent complete, with an April 1 target date for com-"It is virtually unheard of to have central air conditioning in a kennel compound, but that's what we have," added Toler. "Each unit has 10 tons of

The Seminole Greyhound Park construction is 90 percent complete according to General Manage Carroll Toler. Opening day is scheduled for May 4.

Knicks 'Bull' Into Playoffs

By United Press International

The New York Knicks won 50 games this season but they find another number just as intriguing — the eight straight victories with which Chicago closed its season.

"If we don't put pressure on their backcourt we're in for a hell of a night," Knick assistant coach Butch Beard said Monday in describing the challenge New York will face in its best-of-three NBA playoff mini-series beginning tonight against Chicago in Madison Square Garden.

The series will continue Friday in Chicago and return to New York, if necessary, on Sunday. In the other Eastern Conference playoff game, Indiana is at Philadelphia tonight. The Western Conference series open Wednesday night with Houston at Los Angeles and Kansas City at

New York had not won 50 games in a season since 1972-73, the year the Knicks won their last title. To even dream of repeating, they must get past the Bulls and their bruising height and strength.

The Bulls' front consists of 7-foot-2 center Artis Gilmore and forwards Dwight Jones, 6-10, and David Greenwood, 6-

At Philadelphia, the 76ers must rebound from a 98-94 loss to Boston on Sunday that cost them a first-round bye and set up their meeting with the Pacers. Indiana, which also lost its season finale, finished third in the Central Division and sixth overall in the East with a 44-

Philadelphia, which went to the NBA finals last season, defeated the Pacers six consecutive times this year. Los Angeles took three of five games from Houston during the regular season but the Rockets won the last meeting, in Los Angeles, with Moses Malone outplaying Kareem AbdulJabbar. Portland lost the season series to Kansas City but could have an edge since the Kings just survived a grueling race with Houston and Golden State for the final two berths.

Reynolds Appoints Pats' Gibson Lake Mary Track Coach

Gibson has been named by Lake Mary specializes in geometry, was a member cross country coach for the new school team in 1966 when he was a sophornore at the Evening Herald learned Monday.

Gibson has been a highly successful coach and promoter for the Patriot school since its beginning.

He organized the Brantley Relays, which are the oldest girl relays in Lake Brantley track Coach Mike Gibson, who teaches math and Principal Don Reynolds as the track and of Seminole's state championship track the school.

He was also a student of Reynolds. "You won't find a whole lot of people who weren't a student of Mr. Reynolds," laughed Gibson Saturday.

Gibson joins Rams' football coach Roger Beathard as two of the coaches Reynolds has named thus far.

Virdon No Outfielder Stranger

COCOA, Fla. (UPI) - Bill Virdon is no stranger in the outfield. He played it more than 15 years, his biggest trouble being he was a center fielder in the New York Yankees' chain right around the time a kid named Mickey Mantle was playing it for them.

Once in awhile, the Houston Astros' manager who did such a magnificent job last year getting them so close to the World Series, likes to walk out to the outfield before a ball game and talk with some of his players while they're shagging flies.

He did that one day this spring with his left-handed relief ace, Joe Sambito, who had agreed to a nice new five-year seven-figure contract a short time

Bill Virdon had something on his mind. Typically, he used the soft key approach although he didn't beat around the bush.

"You're in a good position financially," he said to Sambito. "You don't have to worry about having a blockbuster year or about piling up big numbers. I think you're a very good pitcher with the stuff you have. I also think now is the time to start thinking about five years from now. You're not gonna have that good hard fast ball all the time. You have to learn to develop your off speed pitch. I want you to work on it. Don't be afraid to take your lumps now and then."

And that's what Joe Sambito is doing this spring. Working on his change-up, and if he gets it down pat, look out. Virdon wants him to have another pitch. Especially to those righthanded hitters so they won't be able to sit on his fast ball.

Sambito hever has had any arm trouble and is always ready to pitch. He is durable, dependable and consistent. He never has gotten that much publicity, but for sheer ability supported by hard, cold statistics, there aren't too many more effective pitchers in the game.

Would you believe Sambito's lifetime earned run average of 2.50 is better than those of either Steve Carlton or Tom Seaver, a couple of three-time Cy Young Award winners? It is. Or that it's lower than that of Sandy Koufax, who wound up his career at 2,76? Only one pitcher now in the majors among those with at least 20 decisions owns a better lifetime ERA than the Astros' classy 28year-old southpaw and that's Bruce Sambito helped the Astros plenty last year with his 17 saves, 2.20 ERA and 84 record. Maybe you remember how he helped them to the western division title and in their five-game playoff with the Phillies.

The playoff between the Astros and Phillies easily was one of the most dramatic in history providing a different thrill every two minutes.

Looking back at those playoffs now, Sambito concedes the defeat by the Phillies was hard to take but it was not really the low point of his five years with the Astros.

"The most disappointing loss I ever had personally, the one that stands out most, was a game in St. Louis in 1978," he says. "We had a three-run lead with two out and I had a full count on Roger Freed with the bases full. I came in with a high fast ball. Home run. Goodbye."

Heeding the advice of Virdon and pitching coach Mel Wright, Sambito is experimenting with his change-up whenever he can find the right situation. He also plans to use it occasionally once the season starts but in a jam, he figures to do with his fast ball.

"I'd hate to have to cost the team one game," he says. "We saw what it meant last season."

HOROSCOPE _

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Wednesday, April 1, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY April 1, 1981

Your material prospects for the coming year look encouraging, provided you don't go off on tangents. Don't involve yourself in enterprises whose future is uncertain.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Take nothing for granted in financial matters today, especially if friends are involved. Situations which are running smoothly could take unexpected turns. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your judgment in career matters today may not be up to par, so be wary about making impulsive decisions. They could prove to be counterproductive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is not a good day to experiment with new methods or shortcuts where critical tasks are concerned. Your ideas may be bummers. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't give up something good going for you if you suddenly meet someone you find very attractive. His or her razzledazzle may quickly fade. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Even though you may realize you've made a poor bargain or agreement it's best you live up to its terms and conditions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you are very adept at detail work, but today your concentration could drift a bit. Unless you are careful you might make mistakes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't take chances today on things which could affect your finances or security. They may look like they're worth a gamble, but further study is SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

There is a possibility that you may have to contend with domestic frustrations today. Unfortunately, you may be the catalyst to get the pot SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-

Dec. 21) Most of the time you're very good at sizing up situations quickly, but this may not be one of those days. Don't jump to conclusions. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan.

19) Exercise strict discipline in handling your purse strings today, or you may do a real number on your budget. Spend only for necessities. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb.

19) Your chances for achieving will be greatly lessened today if you fail to believe in your abilities to do so. Don't misuse your imagination.

PISCES (Feb. March 20) Important Junations today shound not be predicated upon your emotions and feelings. A failure to be logical could cause unnecessary problems.

Open Prescription For Tagamet? No!

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am an air traffic controller, male, age 53. I've had duodenal ulcers for 25 years (spring and fall type). Neither Proganthine with Maslox, nor a strict bland diet seemed to help. I experienced severe pain and nausea, plus loss of sleep due to pain in the middle of the night. Surgery was suggested and I refused.

Along came Tagamet. One tablet four times a day for 30 days and I became a new person. No pain, no nausea, solid sleep and naturally, a great change in personality. A few months after I stopped Tagamet, the symptoms returned. My doctor put me back on Tagamet and I was normal again. When I quit Tagamet the symptoms returned. I asked for an open prescription for Tagamet and my doctor was reluctant but finally gave me one for a year. I took one pill before going to bed and one before work and I felt great. Now my prescription has expired and again he is reluctant to give me an open prescription. He'd like to help but he is wary.

In view of my history, would you cooperate with a patient like me and allow an open prescription?

DEAR READER - No. Your doctor is concerned because at this date the studies of using Tagamet on a long-term basis for more than eight weeks have not been reported. We don't yet know what the long-term effects are. However, your doctor might be more willing to put you on a low dosage maintenance level if you agree to regular check-ups to be sure you don't develop significant complications, such as a low white blood cell count. He might also agree to a longer term treatment if you agree to gastroscopic studies to see if your ulcer is healed or not.

Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, selfaddressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Careful attention to lifestyle and diet plus the judicious use of antacids and other mediciens may mean you won't need to stay on Tagamet to avoid ulcer symptoms.

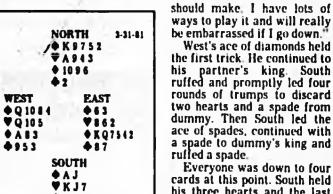

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am a 20-year-old male and have varicose veins in the sack of my left testicle. I've had this ever since the age of 15. I would like to know if this is unusual or if you have ever heard about anything like this. I have seen two doctors about it but they said it was nothing to worry about. Can this affect my sex life? What do you suggest I do?

DEAR READER - It is quite common. Some are mild or small and others are quite large. Sometimes they can cause aching discomfort upon standing a long time. The viens to the testicle are important in controlling the local temperature. When the temperature gets too high the
