panel queried. Rep. Richard Ichord D-Mo., read portions of several letters that charged soldiers were kept from giving the House probers true information about the controversial rifle.

"If this information is accu rate, and there is some basis for belief in the information,' Ichord said as the subcommittee reopened hearings Tuesday "it stands as a shocking example of muzzling by our military leaders on a subject that can mean life or death to our combat soldiers." Ichord said his panel's June visit to Vietnam uncovered few
